

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

3 3433 06933734 7

1

2000

THE WORKS

OF

THOMAS CARLYLE

FREDERICK THE GREAT—VOLS. VII. AND VIII.

NEW YORK
JOHN B. ALDEN, PUBLISHER

1885

c. &

Not on Rd
11/27/11

HISTORY
OF FRIEDRICH THE SECOND
CALLED FREDERICK THE GREAT

BY THOMAS CARLYLE

IN EIGHT VOLUMES
VOL VII

NEW YORK:
JOHN B. ALDEN, PUBLISHER,

1885.

c.k.

NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

GROW'S
PRINTING AND BOOKBINDING COMPANY,
NEW YORK.

FREDERICK THE GREAT.

BOOK XIX.

FRIEDRICH LIKE TO BE OVERWHELMED IN THE SEVEN-YEARS WAR.

1759-1760.

CHAPTER I

PRELIMINARIES TO A FOURTH CAMPAIGN.

THE posting of the Five Armies this Winter,—Five of them in Germany, not counting the Russians, who have vanished to Cimmeria over the horizon, for their months of rest,—is something wonderful, and strikes the picturesque imagination. Such a Chain of Posts, for length, if for nothing else! From the centre of Bohemia eastward, Daun's Austrians are spread all round the western Silesian Border and the south-eastern Saxon; waited on by Prussians, in more or less proximity. Next are the Reichsfolk; scattered over Thüringen and the Franconian Countries; fronting partly into Hessen and Duke Ferdinand's outskirts:—the main body of Duke Ferdinand is far to westward, in Münster Country, vigilant upon Contades, with the Rhine between. Contades and Soubise,—adjoining on the Reichsfolk are these Two French Armies: Soubise's, some 25,000, in Frankfurt-Ems Country, between the Mayn and the Lahn, with its back to the Rhine; then Contades, onward to Maes River and the Dutch Border, with his face to the Rhine,—and Duke Ferdinand observant of him on the other side. That is the "Cordon of Posts" or winter-quarters, this Year. "From the Giant Mountains and the Metal Mountains, to the Ocean ;—to the mouth of Rhine," may we not say ; "and back again to the Swiss Alps or springs of Rhine, that Upper-Rhine Country being all either French or Austrian, and a basis for Soubise ?"¹ Not to speak of Ocean itself, and its winged War-Fleets, lonesomely hovering and patrolling ; or of the Americas and Indies beyond !

"This is such a Chain of mutually vigilant Winter-quarters," says Archenholtz, "as was never drawn in Germany, or in Europe, before." Chain of about 300,000 fighting men, poured out in that lengthy manner. Taking their winter siesta there, asleep with one eye open, till reinforced for new business of death and destruction against Spring. Pathetic surely, as well as picturesque. "Three Campaigns there have already been," sighs the peaceable observer : "Three Campaigns, surely furious enough ; Eleven Battles in them," a Prag, a Kolin, Leuthen, Rossbach ;—must there still be others, then, to the misery of poor mankind ?" thus sigh many peaceful persons. Not considering what are, and have been, the rages, the iniquities, the loud and silent deliriums, the mad blindnesses and sins of mankind ; and what amount of calcining these may reasonably take. Not calcinable in three Campaigns at all, it would appear ! Four more Campaigns are needed : then there will be innocuous ashes in quantity ; and a result unexpected, and worth marking in World-History.

It is notably one of Friedrich's fond hopes,—of which he keeps up several, as bright cloud-hangings in the haggard inner world he now has,—that Peace is just at hand ; one right struggle more, and Peace must come ! And on the part of Britannic George and him, repeated attempts were made,—one in the end of this Year 1759 :—but one and all of them proved futile, and, unless for accidental reasons, need not be mentioned here. Many men, in all nations, long for Peace ; but there are Three Women at the top of the world who do not ; their wrath, various in quality, is great in quantity, and disasters do the reverse of appeasing it.

¹ Archenholtz, i. 306.

² Stenzel, v. 185. This, I suppose, would be his enumeration : Lobositz (1756) ; Prag, Kolin, Hastenbeck, Gross-Jägersdorf, Rossbach, Breslau, Leuthen (1757) ; Crefeld, Zorndorf, Hochkirk (1758) : "eleven hitherto in all."

The French people, as is natural, are weary of a War which yields them mere losses and disgraces ; “ War carried on for Austrian whims, which likewise seem to be impracticable ! ” think they. And their Bernis himself, Minister of Foreign Affairs, who began this sad French-Austrian Adventure, has already been remonstrating with Kaunitz, and grumbling anxiously, “ Could not the Swedes, or somebody, be got to mediate ? Such a War is too ruinous ! ” Hearing which, the Pompadour is shocked at the favourite creature of her hands ; hastens to dismiss him (“ Be Cardinal, then, you ingrate of a Bernis ; disappear under that Red Hat ! ”)—and appoints, in his stead, one Choiseul (known hitherto as Stainville, Comte de Stainville, French Excellency at Vienna, but now made Duke on this promotion), Duc de Choiseul ;¹ who is a Lorrainer, or Semi-Austrian, by very birth ; and probably much fitter for the place. A swift, impetuous kind of man, this Choiseul, who is still rather young than otherwise ; plenty of proud spirit in him, of shifts, talent of the reckless sort ; who proved very notable in France for the next twenty years.

French trade being ruined withal, money is running dreadfully low : but they appoint a new Controller-General ; a M. de Silhouette, who is thought to have an extraordinary creative genius in Finance. Had he but a Fortunatus-Purse, how lucky were it ! With Fortunatus Silhouette as purseholder, with a fiery young Choiseul on this hand, and a fiery old Belleisle on that, Pompadour meditates great things this Year,—Invasions of England ; stronger German Armies ; better German Plans, and slashings home upon Hanover itself, or the vital point ;—and flatters herself, and her poor Louis, that there is on the anvil, for 1759, such a French Campaign as will perhaps astonish Pitt and another insolent King. Very fixed, fell, and feminine is the Pompadour’s humour in this matter. Nor is the Czarina's less so ; but more, if possible ; unappeasable except by death. Imperial Maria Theresa has masculine reasons withal ; great hopes, too, of late. Of the War's ending till flat impossibility stop it, there is no likelihood.

¹ Minister of Foreign Affairs, “ 11th November 1758 ” (Barbier, iv. 294).

To Pitt this Campaign 1759, in spite of bad omens at the outset, proved altogether splendid : but greatly the reverse on Friedrich's side ; to whom it was the most disastrous and unfortunate he had yet made, or did ever make. Pitt at his zenith, in public reputation ; Friedrich never so low before, nothing seemingly but extinction near ahead, when this Year ended. The truth is, apart from his specific pieces of ill-luck, there had now begun for Friedrich a new rule of procedure, which much altered his appearance in the world. Thrice over had he tried by the aggressive or invasive method ; thrice over made a plunge at the enemy's heart, hoping so to disarm or lame him : but that, with resources spent to such a degree, is what he cannot do a fourth time ; he is too weak henceforth to think of that.

Prussia has always its King, and his unrivalled talent ; but that is pretty much the only fixed item. Prussia versus France, Austria, Russia, Sweden and the German Reich, what is it as a field of supplies for war ! Except its King, these are failing, year by year ; and at a rate fatally swift in comparison. Friedrich cannot now do Leuthens, Rossbachs ; far-shining feats of victory, which astonish all the world. His fine Prussian veterans have mostly perished ; and have been replaced by new levies and recruits ; who are inferior both in discipline and in native quality ;—though they have still, people say, a noteworthy taste of the old Prussian sort in them ; and do, in fact, fight well to the last. But "it is observable," says Retzow somewhere, and indeed it follows from the nature of the case, "that while the Prussian Army presents always its best kind of soldiers at the beginning of a war, Austria, such are its resources in population, always improves in that particular, and its best troops appear in the last campaigns." In a word, Friedrich stands on the defensive henceforth ; dis-

CONTENTS OF VOL. VII.

BOOK XIX.

FRIEDRICH LIKE TO BE OVERWHELMED IN THE SEVEN-YEARS WAR.
1759-1760.

CHAPTER	PAGE
I. PRELIMINARIES TO A FOURTH CAMPAIGN.....	7
Of the Small-War in Spring 1759. There are Five Disruptions of that grand Cordon (February—April); and Ferdinand of Brunswick fights his Battle of Bergen (April 13th), p. 19.
II. GENERAL DOHNA; Dictator WEDELL: BATTLE OF ZÜLLICHAU.....	39
Dictator Wedell fights his Battle (Monday, 23d July 1759), without Success, p. 45.
III. FRIEDRICH IN PERSON ATTEMPTS THE RUSSIAN PROBLEM; NOT WITH SUCCESS.....	50
IV. BATTLE OF KUNERSDORF.....	67
V. SAXONY WITHOUT DEFENCE: SCHMETTAU SURRENDERS DRESDEN.....	95
The "Reichs Army" so-called has entered Saxony, under fine Omens; does some Feats of Sieging (August 7th-23d),—with an Eye on Dresden as the crowning one, p. 106.
Austrian-Reichs Army does its crowning Feat (August 26th—September 4th): Diary of what is called the "Siege" of Dresden, 118.
VI. PRINCE HENRI MAKES A MARCH OF FIFTY HOURS; THE RUSSIANS CANNOT FIND LODGING IN SILESIA.....	130
Daun, Soltikof and Company again have a Colloquy (Bautzen, September 15th); after which Everybody starts on his special Course of Action, p. 137.

CHAPTER	PAGE
Four Letters of Friedrich's (10th-24th September), 139.
Friedrich manages (September 24th—October 24th) to get the Russians sent home; and Himself falls lamed with Gout, 147.
VII. FRIEDRICH REAPPEARS ON THE FIELD, AND IN SEVEN DAYS AFTER COMES THE CATASTROPHE OF MAXEN....	161
VIII. MISCELLANEA IN WINTER-QUARTERS, 1759-60.....	176
Serene Highness of Würtemberg, at Fulda (November 30th, 1759), is just about "firing Victoria," and giving a Ball to Beauty and Fashion, in Honour of a certain Event;—but is unpleasantly interrupted, p. 177.
What is Perpetual President Maupertuis doing all this While? Is he still in Berlin; or where in the Universe is he? Alas, poor Maupertuis! 181.
Grand French Invasion-Scheme comes entirely to Wreck (Quiberon Bay, 20th November 1759): of Controller-General Silhouette, and the Outlooks of France, financial and other, 183.
Friedrich, strange to say, publishes (March—June 1760) an Edition of his Poems. Question, "Who wrote Matinées du Roi de Prusse ?"—for the second, and positively the last Time, 190.
Peace-Negotiations hopeful to Friedrich, all through Winter; but the French won't. Voltaire, and his Style of Corresponding, 195.
Friedrich has sent Lord Marischal to Spain; other fond Hopes of Friedrich's, 213.
IX. PRELIMINARIES TO A FIFTH CAMPAIGN.....	216

BOOK XX.

FRIEDRICH IS NOT TO BE OVERWHELMED: THE SEVEN-YEARS
WAR GRADUALLY ENDS.

25th April 1760—15th February 1763.

I. FIFTH CAMPAIGN OPENS.....	228
------------------------------	-----

CHAPTER	PAGE
II. FRIEDRICH BESIEGES DRESDEN.....	247
Capture of Glatz (26th July 1760), p. 254.
Dialogue of Friedrich and Henri (from their Private Correspondence: June 7th—July 29th, 1760), 258.
Duke Ferdinand's Battle of Warburg (31st July 1760), 261.
III. BATTLE OF LIEGNITZ.....	265
London is trying a Stroke-of-Hand on Breslau, in the Glatz Fashion, in the Interim (July 30th—August 8d), p. 266.
Friedrich on March, for the Third Time, to rescue Silesia (August 1st—15th), 270.
Battle, in the Neighbourhood of Liegnitz, does ensue (Friday morning, 15th August 1760), 277.
IV. DAUN IN WRESTLE WITH FRIEDRICH IN THE SILESIAN HILLS	299
The Russians make a Raid on Berlin, for Relief of Daun, and their own Behoof (October 8d—12th, 1760), p. 299.
V. BATTLE OF TORGAU.....	310
Fight of Kloster Kampen (Night of October 15th—16th); Wesel not to be had by Duke Ferdinand, p. 339.
VI. WINTER-QUARTERS 1760-61.....	343
King Friedrich in the Apel House at Leipzig (8th December 1760—17th March 1761), p. 349.
Interview with Herr Professor Gellert (Thursday, 18th December 1760), 350.
Dialogue with General Saldern (in the Apel House, Leipzig, 21st January 1761), 358.
There are some War-movements during Winter; general financiering Difficulties. Choiseul proposes Peace, 361.
VII. SIXTH CAMPAIGN OPENS: CAMP OF BUNZELWITZ.....	374
Of Ferdinand's Battle of Vellinghausen (15th—16th July); and the Campaign 1761, p. 391.
Third Siege of Colberg, 399.
VIII. LONDON POUNCES UPON SCHWEIDNITZ, ONE NIGHT (LAST OF SEPTEMBER 1761).....	404
IX. TRAITOR WARKOTSCH.....	411

CHAPTER

PAGE

X. FRIEDRICH IN BRESLAU ; HAS NEWS FROM PETERSBURG. 422

The Pitt Catastrophe : how the Peace-Negotiation went off by Explosion ; how Pitt withdrew (8d October 1761), and there came a Spanish War nevertheless, p. 423.

Tiff of Quarrel between King and Henri (March—April 1762), 434.

Bright News from Petersburg (certain, January 19th) ; which grow ever brighter ; and become a Star-of-day for Friedrich, 438.

What Colonel Hordt and the Others saw at Petersburg (January—July 1762), 450.

"The Hoarded Prussian Moneys, or 'Treasures'" (two of them, Kleine Schatz, Grosse Schatz, which are rigidly saved in Peace years, for incidence of War), "being nearly run out, there had come the English Subsidy: this, with Saxony, and the Home revenues and remnants of Schatz, had sufficed for 1758; but will no longer suffice. Next to Saxony, the English Subsidy (670,000*l.* due the second time this year) was always Friedrich's principal resource: and in the latter years of the War, I observe, it was nearly twice the amount of what all his Prussian Countries together, in their ravaged and worn-out state, could yield him. In and after 1759, besides Home Income, which is gradually diminishing, and English Subsidy, which is a steady quantity, Friedrich's resources of revenue are mainly Two.

"First, there is that of wringing money from your Enemies, from those that have deserved ill of you,—such of them as you can come at. Enemies, open or secret, even Ill-wishers, we are not particular, provided only they lie within arm's-length. Under this head fall principally three Countries (and their three poor Populations, in lieu of their Governments): Saxony, Mecklenburg (or the main part of it, Mecklenburg-Schwerin), and Anhalt; from these three there is a continual forced supply of money and furnishings. Their demerits to Friedrich differ much in intensity; nor is his wringing of them,—which in the cases of Mecklenburg and Saxony increases year by year to the nearly intolerable pitch,—quite in the simple ratio of their demerits; but in a compound ratio, of that and of his indignation and of his wants.

"Saxony, as Prime Author of this War, was from the first laid hold of, collared tightly: 'Pay the shot, then, what you can' (in the end it was almost what you cannot)! As to Mecklenburg-Schwerin, the grudge against Prussia was of very old standing, some generations now; and the present Duke, not a very wise Sovereign more than his Ancestors, had always been ill with Friedrich; willing to spite and hurt him when possible: in Reichs Diet he, of all German Princes, was the first that voted for Friedrich's being put to Ban of the Reich,—he; and his poor People know since whether that was a wise step! The little Anhalt Princes too, all the Anhalts, Dessau, Bernburg, Cöthen, Zerbst" (perhaps the latter partially excepted, for a certain Russian Lady's sake), "had voted, or at least had ambiguously half-voted, in favour of the Ban, and done other unfriendly things; and had now to pay dear for their bits of enmities. Poor souls, they had but One Vote among them all Four;—and they only half gave it, tremulously pulling it back again. I should guess it was their terrors mainly, and over-readiness to reckon Friedrich a sinking ship: and to leap from the deck of him, —with a spurn which he took for insolent! The Anhalt-Des-sauers particularly, who were once of his very Army, half Prussians for generations back, he reckoned to have used him scandalously ill.

“This Year the requisition on the Four Anhalts,—which they submit to patiently, as people who have leapt into the wrong ship,—is, in precise tale: of money, 330,000 thalers (about 50,000*l.*); recruits, 2,200; horses, 1,800. In Saxony, besides the fixed Taxes, strict confiscation of Meissen Pot-teries and every Royalty, there were exacted heavy ‘Contributions,’ more and more heavy, from the few opulent Towns, chiefly from Leipzig; which were wrung out, latterly, under great severities,—‘chief merchants of Leipzig all clapt in prison, kept on bread and water till they yielded,’—as great severities as would suffice, but not greater: which also was noted. Unfortunate chief merchants of Leipzig,—with Brühl and Polish Majesty little likely to indemnify them! Unfortunate Country altogether. An intelligent Saxon, who is vouched for as impartial, bears witness as follows: ‘And this I know, that the oppressions and plunderings of the Austrians and Reichsfolk, in Saxony, turned all hearts away from them; and it was publicly said, We had rather bear the steady burden of the Prussians than such help as these our pretended Deliverers bring.’” Whereby, on the whole, the poor Country got its back broken, and could never look up in the world since. Resource First was abundantly severe.

“Resource Second is strangest of all:—and has given rise to criticism enough! It is no other than that of issuing base money; mixing your gold and silver coin with copper,—this, one grieves to say, is the Second and extreme resource. ‘A rude method,—would we had a better,—of suspending Cash-payments, and paying by bank-notes instead!’ thinks Friedrich, I suppose. From his Prussian Mints, from his Saxon” (which are his for the present), “and from the little Anhalt-Bernburg Mint” (of which he expressly purchased the sad privilege,—for we are not a Coiner, we are a King reduced to suspend Cash-payments, for the time being), “Friedrich poured out over all Germany, in all manner of kinds, huge quantities of bad Coin. This, so long as it would last, is more and more a copious fountain of supply. This, for the first time, has had to appear as an item in War-Budget 1759; and it fails in no following, but expands more and more. It was done through Ephraim, the not lovely Berlin Jew, whom we used to hear of in Voltaire's time;—through Ephraim and two others, Ephraim as President: in return for a net Sum, these shall have privilege to coin such and such amounts, so and so alloyed: shall pay to General Tauentzien, Army Treasurer, at fixed terms, the Sums specified: 'Go, and do it; our Mint-Officers sharply watching you; Mint-Officers, and General Tauentzien' (with a young Herr Lessing as his Chief Clerk, of whom the King knows nothing): 'Go, ye unlovely!' And Ephraim and Company are making a great deal of money by the unlovely job. Ephraim is the pair of tongs; the hand, and the unlovely job, are a royal man's. Alas, yes. And none of us knows better than King Friedrich, perhaps few of us as well, how little lovely a job it was; how shockingly unkingly it was,—though a practice not unknown to German Kings and Kinglets before his time, and since down almost to ours.' In fact, these are all unkingly practices; and the English Subsidy itself is distasteful to a proud Friedrich: but what, in those circumstances, can any Friedrich do?

¹ Stenzel (citing from Kriegskanzlei, which I have not), v. 137 n.

"The first coinages of Ephraim had, it seems, in them about 3-7ths of copper; something less than the half, and more than the third,"—your gold sovereign grown to be worth 28s. 6d. "But yearly it grew worse; and in 1762" (English subsidy having failed) "matters had got inverted; and there was three times as much copper as silver. Commerce, as was natural, went rocking and tossing, as on a sea under earthquakes; but there was always ready money among Friedrich's soldiers, as among no other: nor did the common people, or retail purchasers, suffer by it. 'Hah, an Ephraimite!' they would say, grinning not ill-humouredly at sight of one of these pieces; some of which they had more specifically named 'Blue-gowns'" (owing to a tint of blue perceivable, in spite of the industrious plating in real silver, or at least "boiling in some solution" of it); "these they would salute with this rhyme, then current:

" ' Von aussen schön, von innen schlimm; Outside noble, inside slim:
Von aussen Friedrich, von innen Eph- Outside Friedrich, inside Eph-raim. ' raim.

¹ In Stenzel (v. 141), enumeration of eight or nine unhappy Potentates, who were busy with it in those same years.

"By this time, whatever of money, from any source, can be scraped together in Friedrich's world, flows wholly into the Army-Chest, as the real citadel of life. In these latter years of the War, beginning, I could guess, from 1759, all Civil expenditures, and wages of Officials, cease to be paid in money; nobody of that kind sees the colour even of bad coin; but is paid only in 'Paper Assignments,' in Promises to Pay 'after the Peace.' These Paper Documents made no pretence to the rank of Currency: such holders of them as had money, or friends, and could wait, got punctual payment when the term did arrive; but those that could not, suffered greatly; having to negotiate their debentures on ruinous terms,—sometimes at an expense of three-fourths.—I will add Friedrich's practical Schedule of Amounts from all these various Sources; and what Friedrich's own view of the Sources was, when he could survey them from the safe distance.

"Schedule of Amounts" say for 1761. "To make up the Twenty-five Million thalers necessary for the Army, there are:

"From our Prussian Countries, ruined, harried as they have been.....	Thalers. 4 millions only.
From Saxony and the other Wringings.....	7 millions.
English Subsidy (4 of good gold; be coppered into double).....	8 "
From Ephraim and his Farm of the Mint (Münz-Patent).....	7 "

"In sum Twenty-six Millions; leaving you one Million of margin,—and always a plenty of cash in hand for incidental sundries."

"Friedrich's own view of these sad matters, as he closes his History of the Seven-Years War" (at "Berlin, 17th December 1763"), is in these words: "'May Heaven grant,—if Heaven deign to look down on the paltry concerns of men,—that the unalterable and flourishing destiny of this Country preserve the Sovereigns who shall govern it from the scourges and calamities which Prussia has suffered in these times of trouble and subversion; that they may never again be forced to recur to the violent and fatal remedies which we (l'on) have been obliged to employ in maintenance of the State against the ambitious hatred of the Sovereigns of Europe, who wished to annihilate the House of Brandenburg, and exterminate from the world whatever bore the Prussian name!'"² putting his ground inch by inch : and is reduced, more and more, to battle obscurely with a hydra-coil of enemies and impediments ; and to do heroisms which make no noise in the Gazettes. And, alas, which cannot figure in History either,—what is more a sorrow to me here !

¹ Preuss, ii. 388.

² Œuvres de Frédéric v. 234.

Friedrich, say all judges of soldiership and human character who have studied Friedrich sufficiently, “is greater than ever,” in these four Years now coming.¹ And this, I have found more and more to be a true thing ; verifiable and demonstrable in time and place,—though, unluckily for us, hardly in this time or this place at all ! A thing which cannot, by any method, be made manifest to the general reader ; who delights in shining summary feats, and is impatient of tedious preliminaries and investigations,—especially of maps, which are the indispensablest requisite of all. A thing, in short, that belongs peculiarly to soldier-students ; who can undergo the dull preliminaries, most dull but most inexorably needed ; and can follow out, with watchful intelligence, and with a patience not to be wearied, the multifarious topographies, details of movements and manœuverings, year after year, on such a Theatre of War. What is to be done with it here ! If we could, by significant strokes, indicate, under features true so far as they went, the great wide fireflood that was raging round the world ; if we could, carefully omitting very many things, omit of the things intelligible and decipherable that concern Friedrich himself, nothing that had meaning : if indeed— ! But it is idle preluding. Forward again, brave reader, under such conditions as there are !

Friedrich's Winter in Breslau was of secluded, silent, sombre character, this time ; nothing of stir in it but from work only : in marked contrast with the last, and its kindly visitors and gaieties. A Friedrich given up to his manifold businesses, to his silent sorrows. “I have passed my winter like a Carthusian monk,” he writes to D'Argens : “I dine alone ; I spend my life in reading and writing ; and I do not sup. When one is sad, it becomes at last too burdensome to hide one's grief continually ; and it is better to give way to it by oneself, than to carry one's gloom into society. Nothing solaces me but the vigorous application required in steady and continuous labour. This distraction does force one to put away painful ideas, while it lasts : but, alas, no sooner is the work done, than these fatal companions present themselves again, as if livelier than ever. Maupertuis was right : the sum of evil does certainly surpass that of good :—but to me it is all one ; I have almost nothing more to lose ; and my few remaining days, what matters it much of what complexion they be ?”¹

¹ Berenhorst, Kriegskunst ; Retzow ; &c.

The loss of his Wilhelmina, had there been no other grief, has darkened all his life to Friedrich. Readers are not prepared for the details of grief we could give, and the settled gloom of mind they indicate. A loss irreparable and immeasurable ; the light of life, the one loved heart that loved him, gone. His passionate appeals to Voltaire to celebrate for him in verse his lost treasure, and at least make her virtues immortal, are perhaps known to readers :² alas, this is a very feeble kind of immortality, and Friedrich too well feels it such. All Winter he dwells internally on the sad matter, though soon falling silent on it to others.

The War is ever more dark and dismal to him ; a wearing, harassing, nearly disgusting task ; on which, however, depends life or death. This Year, he “ expects to have 300,000 enemies upon him ;” and “ is, with his utmost effort, getting up 150,000 to set against them.” Of business, in its many kinds, there can be no lack ! In the intervals he also wrote considerably : one of his Pieces is a Sermon on The last Judgment ; handed to Reader De Catt, one evening :—to De Catt's surprise, and to ours ; the Voiceless in a dark Friedrich trying to give itself some voice in this way !¹ Another Piece, altogether practical, and done with excellent insight, brevity, modesty, is On Tactics ;²—properly it might be called, “ Serious very Private Thoughts,” thrown on paper, and communicated only to two or three, “ On the new kind of Tactics necessary with those Austrians and their Allies,” who are in such overwhelming strength. “ To whose continual sluggishness, and strange want of concert, to whose incoherency of movements, languor of execution, and other enormous faults, we have owed, with some excuse for our own faults, our escaping of destruction hitherto,”—but had better not trust that way any longer ! Fouquet is one of the highly select, to whom he communicates this Piece ; adding along with it, in Fouquet’s case, an affectionate little Note, and, in spite of poverty, some New-year’s Gift, as usual,—the “ Widow’s Mite ” (300*l.*, we find) ; “ receive it with the same heart with which it was set apart for you : a small help, which you may well have need of, in these calamitous times.”³ Fouquet much admires the new Tactical Suggestions ;—seems to think, however, that the certainly practicable one is, in particular, the last, That of “ improving our Artillery to some equality with theirs.” For which, as may appear, the King has already been taking thought, in more ways than one.

¹ “Breslau, 1st March 1759,” To D'Argens (Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 56).

² Ode sur la mort de S. A. S. Madame la Princesse de Barceith (in Œuvres de Voltaire, xviii. 79–86) : see Friedrich's Letter to him (6th November 1758) ; with Voltaire's Verses in Answer (next month) ; Friedrich's new Letter (Breslau, 23d January 1759), demanding something more,—followed by the Ode just cited (Ib. lxxii. 402 ; lxxviii. 82, 92 ; or Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiii. 20–24 ; &c.).

Finance is naturally a heavy part of Friedrich’s Problem ; the part which looks especially impossible, from our point of vision ! In Friedrich’s Country, the War Budget does not differ from the Peace one. Neither is any borrowing possible ; that sublime Art, of rolling over on you know not whom the expenditure, needful or needless, of your heavy-laden self, had not yet,—though England is busy at it,—been invented among Nations. Once, or perhaps twice, from the Stände of some willing Province, Friedrich negotiated some small Loan ; which was punctually repaid when Peace came, and was always gratefully remembered. But these are as nothing, in face of such expenses ; and the thought how he did contrive on the Finance side, is and was not a little wonderful. An ingenious Predecessor, whom I sometimes quote, has expressed himself in these words :

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xv. 1–10 (see Preuss’s Preface there ; Formey, Souvenirs, i. 37 ; &c. &c.).

² Réflexions sur la Tactique : in Œuvres de Frédéric, xxviii. 153–166.

³ “ Breslau, 23d December 1758 ; ” with Fouquet’s Answer, 2d January 1759 : in Œuvres de Frédéric, xx. 114–117.

“ Such modicum of Subsidy ” (he is speaking of the English Subsidy in 1758), “ how useful will it prove in a Country bred everywhere to Spartan thrift, accustomed to regard waste as sin, and which will lay out no penny except to purpose ! I guess the Prussian Exchequer is, by this time, much on the ebb ; idle precious metals tending everywhere towards the melting-pot. At what precise date the Friedrich-Wilhelm balustrades, and enormous silver furnitures, were first gone into, Dryasdust has not informed me : but we know they all went ; as they well might. To me nothing is so wonderful as Friedrich’s Budget during this War. One day it will be carefully investigated, elucidated and made conceivable and certain to mankind : but that as yet is far from being the case. We walk about in it with astonishment ; almost, were it possible, with incredulity. Expenditure on this side, work done on that : human nature, especially British human nature, refuses to conceive it. Never in this world, before or since, was the like. The Friedrich miracles in War are great ; but those in Finance are almost greater. Let Dryasdust bethink him ; and gird his flabby loins to this Enterprise ; which is very behoveful in these Californian times ! ”—

The general Secret of Prussian Thrift, I do fear, is lost from the world. And how an Army of about 200,000, in field and garrison, could be kept on foot, and in some ability to front combined Europe, on about Three Million Sterling annually (“ 25 million thalers ”=3,150,000*l.*, that is the steady War-Budget of those years), remains to us inconceivable enough ;—mournfully miraculous, as it were ; and growing ever more so in the Nugget-generations that now run. Meanwhile, here are what hints I could find, on the Origins of that modest Sum, which also are a wonder :¹

¹ Preuss, ii. 388-392 ; Stenzel, v. 137-141.

Of the Small-War in Spring 1759. There are Five Disruptions of that grand Cordon (February—April) ; and Ferdinand of Brunswick fights his Battle of Bergen (April 13th).

Friedrich, being denied an aggressive course this Year, by no means sits idly expectant and defensive in the interim ; but, all the more vigorously, as is observable, from February onwards, strikes out from him on every side : endeavouring to spoil the Enemy's Magazines, and cripple his operations in that way. So that there was, all winter through, a good deal of Small-War (some of it not Small), of more importance than usual,—chiefly of Friedrich's originating, with the above view, or of Ferdinand his Ally's, on a still more pressing score. And, on the whole, that immense Austrian French Cordon, which goes from the Carpathians to the Ocean, had by no means a quiet time ; but was broken into, and violently hurled back, in different parts : some four, or even five, attacks upon it in all ; three of them by Prince Henri,—in two of which Duke Ferdinand's people coöperated ; the business being for mutual behoof. These latter Three were famous in the world, that Winter ; and indeed are still recognisable as brilliant procedures of their kind ; though, except dates and results, we can afford almost nothing of them here. These Three, intended chiefly against Reichs people and their Posts and Magazines, fell out on the western and middle part of the Cordon. Another attack was in the extreme eastward, and was for Friedrich's own behoof ; under Fouquet's management ;—intended against the Austrian-Moravian Magazines and Preparations, but had little success. Still another assault or invasive outroad, northward against the Russian Magazines, there also was ; of which by and by. Besides all which, and more memorable than all, Duke Ferdinand, for vital reasons of his own, fought a Battle this Spring, considerable Battle, and did not gain it ; which made great noise in the world.

It is not necessary the reader should load his memory with details of all these preliminary things ; on the contrary, it is necessary that he keep his memory clear for the far more important things that lie ahead of these, and entertain these in a summary way, as a kind of foreground to what is coming. Perhaps the following Fractions of Note, which put matters in something of Chronological or Synoptical form, will suffice him, or more than suffice. He is to understand that the grand tug of War, this Year, gradually turns out not to be hereabouts, nor with Daun and his adjacencies at all, but with the Russians, who arrive from the opposite Northern quarter ; and that all else will prove to be merely prefatory and nugatory in comparison.

January 2d, 1759 : Frankfurt-on-Mayn, though it is a Reichstadt, finds itself suddenly become French. "Prince de Soubise lies between Mayn and Lahn, with his 25,000 ; beautifully safe and convenient,—though ill off for a place-of-arms in those parts. Opulent Frankfurt, on his right ; how handy would that be, were not Reichs Law so express ! Marburg, Giessen are outposts of his ; on which side one of Ferdinand's people, Prince von Ysenburg, watches with an 8 or 10,000, capable of mischief in that quarter.

"On the eve of Newyear's day, or on the auspicious Day itself, Soubise requests, of the Frankfurt Authorities, permission for a regiment of his to march through that Imperial City. To which, by law and theory, the Imperial City can say Yes or No ; but practically cannot, without grave inconvenience, say other than Yes, though most Frankfurters wish it could. 'Yes,' answer the Frankfurt Magnates ; Yes, surely, under the known conditions. Tuesday, January 2d, about 5 in the morning, while all is still dark in Frankfurt, regiment Nassau appears, accordingly, at the Sachsenhausen-Gate, Townguard people all ready to receive it and escort it through ; and is admitted as usual. Quite as usual : but instead of being escorted through, it orders, in calm peremptory voice, the Townguard, To ground arms ; with calm rapidity, proceeds to admit ten other regiments or battalions, six of them German ; seizes the artillery on the Walls, seizes all the other Gates :—and poor Frankfurt finds itself tied hand and foot, almost before it is out of bed ! Done with great exactitude, with the minimum of confusion, and without a hurt skin to anybody. The Inhabitants stood silent, gazing ; the Townguard laid down their arms, and went home. Totally against law ; but cleverly done ; perhaps Soubise's chief exploit in the world ; certainly the one real success the French have yet had.

"Soubise made haste to summon the Magistrates: 'Law of Necessity alone, most honoured Sirs! Reichs Law is clear against me. But all the more shall private liberties, religions, properties, in this Imperial Free-Town, be sacred to us. Defence against any aggression; and the strictest of discipline observed. Depend on me, I bid you!'—And kept his word to an honourable degree, they say; or in absence, made it be kept, during the Four Years that follow. Most Frankfurters are, at heart, Anti-French: but Soubise's affability was perfect; and he gave evening parties of a sublime character; the Magistrates all appearing there, in their square perukes and long gowns, with a mournful joy."¹ Soubise soon went home, to assist in important businesses, —Invasion of England, no less; let England look to itself this Summer!—and Broglio succeeded him, as Army-Captain in the Frankfurt parts; with laurels accruing, more or less. Soubise, like Broglio, began with Rossbach; Soubise ends with Frankfurt, for the present; where Broglio also gains his chief laurels, as will shortly be seen. Frankfurt is a great gain to France, though an illicit one. It puts a bar on Duke Ferdinand in that quarter; secures a starting-point for attacks on Hessen, Hanover; for coopération with Contades and the Lower Rhine. It is the one success France has yet had in this War, or pretty much that it ever had in it. Due to Prince de Soubise, in that illegal fashion.—A highly remarkable little Boy, now in his tenth year, Johann Wolfgang Goethe, has his wondering eyes on these things: and, short while hence, meets daily, on the stairs and lobbies at home, a pleasant French Official Gentleman who is quartered there: between whom and Papa occur rubs,—as readers may remember, and shall hear in April coming.

Grand Cordon Disrupted: Erfurt Country, 16th February—2d March. "About six weeks after this Frankfurt achievement, certain Reichsfolk and Austrian Auxiliaries are observed to be cutting down endless timber, '18,800 palisades, 6,000 trees of 60 feet,' and other huge furnishings, from the poor Duke of Gotha's woods; evidently meaning to fortify themselves in Erfurt. Upon which Prince Henri detaches a General Knobloch thitherward, Duke Ferdinand contributing 4,000 to meet him there; which combined expedition, after some sharp knocking and shoving, entirely disrooted the Austrians and Reichsfolk, and sent them packing. Had them quite torn out by the end of the month ; and had planned 'to attack them on two sides at once' (March 2d), with a view of swallowing them whole,—when they (these Reichs Volscians, in such a state of flutter) privately hastened off, one and all of them, the day before."¹

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 7-8; Stenzel, v. 198-200.

This was Breakage First of the Grand Cordon ; an explosive hurling of it back out of those Erfurt parts. Done by Prince Henri's people, in concert with Duke Ferdinand's,—who were mutually interested in the thing.

Breakage Second: Erfurt-Fulda Country, 31st March—8th April. "About the end of March, these intrusive Austrian Reichsfolk made some attempt to come back into those Countries ; but again got nothing but hard knocks ; and gave up the Erfurt project. For, close following on this First, there was a Second still deeper and rougher Breakage, in those same regions ; the Hereditary Prince of Brunswick dashing through, on a special Errand of Ferdinand's own " (of which presently), "with an 8 or 10,000, in his usual fiery manner ; home into the very bowels of the Reich (April 3d, and for a week onward) ; and returning with 'above 2,000 prisoners' in hand ; especially with a Reich well frightened behind him ;—still in time for Duke Ferdinand's Adventure " (in fact, for his Battle of Bergen, of which we are to hear). "Had been well assisted by Prince Henri, who 'made dangerous demonstrations in the distance,' and was extremely diligent,—though the interest was chiefly Ferdinand's, this time."²—Contemporary with that First Erfurt Business, there went on, 300 miles away from it, in the quite opposite direction, another of the same ;—too curious to be omitted.

Across the Polish Frontier : February 24th—March 4th. "In the end of February, General Wobersnow, an active man, was detached from Glogau, over into Poland, Posen way, To overturn the Russian provision-operations thereabouts ; in particular, to look into a certain high-flying Polack, a Prince Sulkowski of those parts ; who with all diligence is gathering food, in expectation of the Russian advent ; and indeed has formally 'declared War against the King of Prussia ;' having the right, he says, as a Polish Magnate, subject only to his own high thought in such affairs. The Russians and their wars are dear to Sulkowski. He fell prisoner in their cause, at Zorndorf, last Autumn ; was stuck, like all the others, Soltikof himself among them, into the vaulted parts of Cüstrin Garrison : 'I am sorry I have no Siberia for you,' said Friedrich, looking, not in a benign way, on the captive Dignitaries, that hot afternoon ; 'go to Cüstrin, and see what you have provided for yourselves !' Which they had to do ; nothing, for certain days, but cellarage to lodge in ; King inexorable, deaf to remonstrance. Which possibly may have contributed to kindle Sulkowski into these extremely high proceedings.

¹ Narrative, in Helden-Geschichte, v. 1022 et seq.

² Tempelhof, iii. 19–22.

"At any rate, Wobersnow punctually looks in upon him : seizes his considerable stock of Russian proviants ; his belligerent force, his high person itself ; and in one luckless hour, snuffs him out from the list of potentates. His belligerent force, about 1,000 Polacks, were all compelled, 'by the cudgel,' say my authorities, to take Prussian service" (in garrison regiments, and well scattered about, I suppose) ; "his own high person found itself sitting locked in Glogau, left to its reflexions. Sat thus 'till the War ended,' say some ; certainly till the Sulkowski War had been sufficiently exploded by the laughter of mankind." Here are, succinctly, the dates of this small memorability :

"End of February, Wobersnow gathers, at Glogau, a force of about 8,000 horse and foot. Marched 24th February, over Oder Bridge, straight into Poland ; that same night, to the neighbourhood of Lissa and Reisen (Sulkowski's dominion), about thirty miles north-east of Glogau. Sulkowski done next day ;—part of the capture is 'fifteen small guns.' Wobersnow goes, next, for Posen ; arrives, 28th February ; destroys Russian Magazine, ransoms Jews. Shoots out other detachments on the Magazine Enterprise ;—detaches Platen along the Wartha, where are picked up various items, among others 'eighty tuns of brandy,'—but himself proceeds no farther than Posen. March 4th, sets out again from Posen, homewards." We shall hear again of Wobersnow, in a much more important way, before long.

To the Polish Republic so-called, Friedrich explained politely, not apologetically : "Since you allow the Russians to march through you in attack of me, it is evident to your just minds that the attacked party must have similar privilege." "Truly !" answered they, in their just minds, generally ; and made no complaint about Sulkowski (though Polish Majesty and Primate endeavoured to be loud about "Invasion" and the like) :—and indeed Polish Republic was lying, for a long while past, as if broken-backed, on the public highway ; a Nation anarchic every fibre of it, and under the feet and hoofs of travelling Neighbours, especially of Russian Neighbours ; and is not now capable of saying much for itself in such cases, or of doing any thing at all.

¹ Nachricht von der Unternehmung des General-Majors von Wobersnow in Polen, im Feb. und März 1759 : in Seyfarth, Beylagen, ii. 526-529. Helden-Geschichte, v. 829.

Frankfurt Country, April 13th : Duke Ferdinand's Battle of Bergen. "Duke Ferdinand, fully aware what a stroke that seizure of Frankfurt was to him, resolved to risk a long march at this bad season, and attempt to drive the French out. Contades was absent in Paris,—no fear of an attack from Contades's Army ; Broglio's in Frankfurt, grown now to about 35,000, can perhaps be beaten if vigorously attacked. Ferdinand appoints a rendezvous at Fulda, of various Corps, Prince Ysenburg's and others, that lie nearest, Hessians many of them, Hanoverians others ; proceeds, himself, to Fulda, with a few attendants" (a drive of about 200 miles) :—"having left Lord George Sackville" (mark the sad name of him !) "—Sackville, head of the English, and General Spörken a Hanoverian,—to take charge in Münster Country during his absence. It was from Fulda that he shot out the Hereditary Prince on that important Errand we lately spoke of, under the head of 'Breakage Second,'—namely, to clear his right flank, and scare the Reich well off him, while he should be marching on Frankfurt. All which, Henri assisting from the distance, the Hereditary Prince performed to perfection,—and was back (April 8th), in excellent time for the Battle.

"Ferdinand stayed hardly a day in Fulda, ranking himself and getting on the road. Did his long march of above 100 miles, without accident or loss of time ;—of course, scaring home the Broglio Outposts in haste enough, and awakening Broglio's attention in a high degree ;—and arrives, Thursday, April 12th, at Windecken, a Village about fifteen miles north-east of Frankfurt ; where he passes the night under arms ; intending Battle on the morrow. Broglio is all assembled, 35,000 strong ; his Assailant, with the Hereditary Prince come in, counts rather under 30,000. Broglio is posted in, and on both sides of, Bergen, a high-lying Village, directly on Ferdinand's road to Frankfurt. Windecken is about fifteen miles from Frankfurt ; Bergen about six :—idle Tourists of our time, on their return from Homburg to that City, leave Bergen a little on their left. The ground is mere hills, woody dales, marshy brooks ; Broglio's position, with its Village, and Hill, and ravines, and advantages, is the choicest of the region ; and Broglio's methods, procedures and arrangements in it, are applauded by all judges.

" Friday, 13th April, 1759, Ferdinand is astir by daybreak ; comes on, along one of those woody valleys, pickeering, reconnoitering ;—in the end, directly up the Hill of Bergen ; straight upon the key-point. It is about 10 a.m., when the batteries and musketries awaken there ; very loud indeed, for perhaps two hours or more. Prince von Ysenburg is leader of Ferdinand's attacking party. Their attack is hot and fierce, and they stick to it steadily ; though garden-hedges, orchards and impediments are many, and Broglio, with much cannon helping, makes vigorous defence. These Ysenburgers fought till their cartridges were nearly spent, and Ysenburg himself lay killed ; but could not take Bergen. Nor could the Hereditary Prince ; who, in aid of them, tried it in flank, with his own usual impetuosity rekindling theirs, and at first with some success : but was himself taken in flank by Broglio's Reserve, and obliged to desist. No getting of Bergen by that method.

" Military critics say coolly, ' You should have smashed it well with cannon, first ' (which Ferdinand had not in stock here) ; ' and especially have flung grenades into it, till it was well in flame : impossible otherwise ! ' ' The Ysenburgers and Hereditary Prince withdraw. No pursuit of them ; or almost less than none ; for the one or two French regiments that tried it (against order), nearly got cut up. Broglio, like a very Daun at Kolin, had strictly forbidden all such attempts : ' On no temptation quit your ground ! ' "

" The Battle, after this, lay quiet all afternoon ; Ferdinand still in sight ; motioning much, to tempt French valour into chasing of him. But all in vain : Broglio, though his subalterns kept urging, remonstrating, was peremptory not to stir. Whereupon, towards evening, across certain woody Heights, perhaps still with some hope of drawing him out, Ferdinand made some languid attempt on Broglio's wing, or wings ;—and this also failing, had to give up the affair. He continued cannonading till deep in the night ; withdrew to Windecken : and about two next morning, marched for home,—still with little or no pursuit : but without hope of Frankfurt henceforth. And in fact, has a painful Summer ahead.

"Ferdinand had lost 5 cannon, and of killed and wounded 2,500; the French counted their loss at about 1,900.' The joy of France over this immense victory was extraordinary. Broglio was made Prince of the Reich, Maréchal de France; would have been raised to the stars, had one been able,—for the time being. 'And your immense victory,' so sneered the bystanders, 'consists in not being beaten, under those excellent conditions;—perhaps victory is a rarity just now!'"

This is the Battle which our Boy-Friend Johann Wolfgang watched with such interest, from his garret-window, hour after hour; all Frankfurt simmering round him, in such a whirlpool of self-contradictory emotions; till towards evening, when, in long rows of carts, poor wounded Hessians and Hanoverians came jolting in, and melted every heart into pity, into wailing sorrow, and eagerness to help. A little later, Papa Goethe, stepping down stairs, came across the Official French Gentleman; who said radiantly: "Doubtless you congratulate yourself and us on this victory to his Majesty's arms." "Not a whit (Keineswegs)," answered Papa Goethe, a stiff kind of man, nowise in the mood of congratulating: "on the contrary, I wish they had chased you to the Devil, though I had to go too!" Which was a great relief to his feelings, though a dangerous one in the circumstances.'

Breakage Third: Over the Metal Mountains into Böhmen (April 14th-20th). "Ferdinand's Battle was hardly ending, when Prince Henri poured across the Mountains,—in two columns, Hülsen leading the inferior or rightmost one,—into Leitmeritz-Eger Country; and made a most successful business of the Austrian Magazines he found there. Magazines all filled; Enemy all galloping for Prag:—Daun himself, who is sitting vigilant, far in the interior, at Jaromirtz this month past, was thrown into huge flurry, for some days! Speedy Henri (almost on the one condition of being speedy) had his own will of the Magazines: burnt, Hülsen and he, 'about 600,000*l.* worth' of Austrian provender in those parts, 'what would have kept 50,000 men five months in bread' (not to mention hay at all); gave the Enemy sore slaps (caught about 3,000 of him, not yet got on gallop for Prag); burnt his 200 boats on the Elbe:—forced him to begin anew at the beginning; and did, in effect, considerably lame and retard certain of his operations through the Summer. Speedy Henri marched for home, April 20th ; and was all across the Mountains, April 23d : a profitable swift nine days."—And on the sixth day hence, he will have something similar, and still more important, on foot. A swift man, when he must !

¹ Mauvillon, ii. 10-19; Tempelhof, iii. 26-31.

² Goethe's Werke (Stuttgart und Tübingen, 1829), xxiv. (Dichtung und Wahrheit, i.) 153-157.

Breakage Fourth : Into Mähren (April 16th—21st). "This is Fouquet's attempt, alluded to above ; of which,—as every reader must be satisfied with Small-War,—we will give only the dates. Fouquet, ranking at Leobschütz, in Neisse Country, did break through into Mähren, pushing the Austrians before him ; but found the Magazines either emptied, or too inaccessible for any worth they had ;—could do nothing on the Magazines ; and returned without result ; home at Leobschütz again on the fifth day." This, however, had a sequel for Fouquet ; which, as it brought the King himself into those neighbourhoods, we shall have to mention, farther on.

Breakage Fifth : Into Franken (May 5th—June 1st). "This was Prince Henri's Invasion of the Bamberg-Nürnberg Countries ; a much sharper thing than in any former Year. Much the most famous, and," luckily for us, "the last of the Small-War affairs for the present. Started,—from Tschopau region, Bamberg way,—April 29th—May 5th. In three Columns : Finck leftmost, and foremost (Finck had marched, April 29th, pretending to mean for Bohemia) ; after whom Knobloch ; and (May 5th) the Prince himself. Who has an eye to the Reichs Magazines and Preparations, as usual ;—nay, an eye to their Camp of Rendezvous, and to a fight with their miscellaneous Selves and Auxiliaries, if they will stand fight. 'You will have to leave Saxony, and help us with the Russians, soon : beat those Reichs people first !' urged the King ; 'well-beaten, they will not trouble Saxony for a while.' If they will stand fight ? But they would not at all. They struck their tents everywhere ; burnt their own Magazines, in some cases ; and only went mazing hither and thither,—gravitating all upon Nürnberg, and an impregnable Camp which they have in that neighbourhood. Supreme Zweibrück was himself with them ; many Croats, Austrians, led by Maguire and others ; all marching, whirling at a mighty rate ; with a countenance sometimes of vigour, but always with Nürnberg Camp in rear. There was swift marching, really beautiful manoeuvring here and there ; sharp bits of fighting, too, almost in the battle-form :—

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 47-53 ; Helden-Geschichte, v. 963-966.

² Helden-Geschichte, v. 958-963 ; Tempelhof, iii. 44-47.

Maguire tried, or was for trying, a stroke with Finck ; but made off hastily, glad to get away.¹ May 11th, at Himmelskron in Baireuth, one Riedesel of theirs had fairly to ground arms, self and 2,500, and become prisoners of war." Much of this manœuvring and scuffling was in Baireuth Territory. Twice, or even thrice, Prince Henri was in Baireuth Town : 'marched through Baireuth,' say the careless Old Books. Through Baireuth :—No Wilhelmina now there, with her tremulous melodies of welcome ! Wilhelmina's loves, and terrors for her loved, are now all still. Perhaps her poor Daughter of Würtemberg, wandering unjustly disgraced, is there ; Papa, the widower Margraf, is for marrying again : "—march on, Prince Henri !

"In Bamberg," says a Note from Archenholtz, "the Reichs troops burnt their Magazine ; and made for Nürnberg, as usual ; but left some thousand or two of Croats, who would not yet. Knobloch and his Prussians appeared shortly after ; summoned Bamberg, which agreed to receive them ; and were for taking possession ; but found the Croats determined otherwise. Fight ensued ; fight in the streets ; which, in hideousness of noises, if in nothing else, was beyond parallel. The inhabitants sat all quaking in their cellars ; not an inhabitant was to be seen : a City dead,—and given up to the demons, in this manner. Not for some hours were the Croats got entirely trampled out. Bamberg, as usual, became a Prussian place-of-arms ; was charged to pay ransom of 40,000*l.* ; —'cannot possibly !'—did pay some 14,000*l.*, and gave bills for the remainder."² Which bills, let us mark withal, the Kaiser in Reichs Diet decreed to be invalid : "Don't pay them !" A thing not forgotten by Friedrich ;—though it is understood the Bambergers, lest worse might happen, privately paid their bills. "The Expedition lasted, in whole, not quite four weeks : June 1st, Prince Henri was at the Saxon frontier again ; the German world all ringing loud,—in jubilation, counter-jubilation, and a great variety of tones,—with the noise of what he had done. A sharp swift man ; and, sure enough, has fluttered the Reichs Volscians in their Corioli to an unexpected degree."³

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 64.

² Married, 20th September 1759 (a Brunswick Princess, Sister's daughter of his late Wife) ; died within four years.

³ Archenholtz, i. 371–3.

⁴ Seyfarth, Beylagen, ii. 537–563 ; Bericht von der Unternehmung des Prinzen Heinrich in Franken, im Jahr 1759 ; Holden-Geschichte, v. 1033–1039 ; Tempelhof, iii. 58 et seq.

A Colonel Wunsch (Lieutenant-Colonel of the Free-Corps Wunsch) distinguished himself in this Expedition ; the beginning of notably great things to him in the few following months. Wunsch is a Würtemburger by birth ; has been in many services, always in subaltern posts, and, this year, will testify strangely how worthy he was of the higher. What a Year, this of 1759, to stout old Wunsch ! In the Spring, here has he just seen his poor son, Lieutenant Wunsch, perish in one of these scuffles ; in Autumn, he will see himself a General, shining suddenly bright, to his King and to all the world ; before Winter, he will be Prisoner to Austria, and eclipsed for the rest of this War !—Kleist, of the Green Hussars, also made a figure here ; and onwards rapidly ever higher ; to the top of renown in his business :—fallen heir to Mayer's place, as it were. A Note says : " Poor Mayer of the Free Corps does not ride with the Prince on this occasion. Mayer, dangerously worn down with the hard services of last Year, and himself a man of too sleepless temper, caught a fever in the New-year time ; and died within few days : burnt away before his time ; much regretted by his Brethren of the Army, and some few others. Gone in this way ; with a high career just opening on him at the long last ! Mayer was of Austrian, of half Spanish birth : a musical, really melodious, affectionate, but indignant, wildly stormful mortal ; and had had adventures without end. Something of pathos, of tragedy, in the wild Life of him.' A man of considerable genius, military and other :—genius in the sleepless kind, which is not the best kind ; sometimes a very bad kind. The fame of Friedrich invites such people from all sides of the world ; and this was no doubt a sensible help to him."—But enough of all this.

Here, surely, is abundance of preliminary Small-War, on the part of a Friedrich reduced to the defensive !—Fouquet's Sequel, hinted at above, was to this effect. On Fouquet's failing to get hold of the Moravian Magazines, and returning to his Post at Leobschütz, a certain rash General Deville, who is Austrian chief in those parts, hastily rushed through the Jägerndorf Hills, and invaded Fouquet. Only for a few days ; and had very bad success, in that bit of retaliation. The King, who is in Landshut, in the middle of his main cantonments, hastened over to Leobschütz with reinforcement to Fouquet; in the thought that a finishing stroke might be done on this Deville;—and would have done it, had not the rash man plunged off again (May 1st, or the night before); homewards, at full speed. So that Friedrich, likewise at full speed, could catch nothing of him; but merely cannonade him in the Passes of Zuckmantel, and cut off his rearguard of Croats. Poor forlorn of Croats, whom he had left in some bushy Chasm; to gain him a little time, and then to perish if they must! as Tempelhof remarks.¹ Upon which Friedrich returned to Landshut; and Fouquet had peace again.

¹ Still worth reading : in Pauli (our old watery Brandenburg-History Friend), Leben grosser Helden (Halle, 1759-1764, 9 voll.), iii. 142-188 ;—much the best Piece in that still rather watery (or windy) Collection, which, however, is authentic, and has some tolerable Portraits.

It was from this Landshut region, where his main cantonments are, that Friedrich had witnessed all these Inroads, or all except the very earliest of them; the first Erfurt one, and the Wobersnow-Sulkowski. He had quitted Breslau in the end of March, and gone to his cantonments; quickened thither, probably, by a stroke that had befallen him at Griefenberg, on his Silesian side of the Cordon. At Griefenberg stood the Battalion Düringshofen, with its Colonel of the same name,—grenadier people of good quality, perhaps near 1,000 in whole. Which Battalion, General Beck, after long preliminary study of it, from his Bohemian side,—marching stealthily on it, one night (March 25th–26th), by two or more roads, with 8,000 men, and much preliminary Croat-work,—contrived to envelope wholly, and carry off with him, before help could come up. This, I suppose, had quickened Friedrich's arrival. He has been in that region ever since,—in Landshut for the last week or two; and returns thither after the Deville affair.

And at Landshut,—which is the main Pass into Bohemia or from it, and is the grand observatory point at present,—he will have to remain till the first days of July; almost three months. Watching, and waiting on the tedious Daun, who has the lifting of the curtain this Year! Daun had come to Jaromirtz, to his cantonments, “March 24th” (almost simultaneously with Friedrich to his); expecting Friedrich's Invasion, as usual. Long days sat Daun, expecting the King in Bohemia:—"There goes he, at last!" thought Daun, on Prince Henri's late flamy appearance there (Breakage Third we labelled it);—and Daun had hastily pushed a Division thitherward, double-quick, to secure Prag; but found it was only the Magazines. "Above four-millions worth" (600,000*l.*, counting the thalers into sterling), above four-millions worth of bread and forage gone to ashes, and the very boats burnt? Well; the poor Reichsfolk, or our poor Auxiliaries to them, will have empty haversacks:—but it is not Prag!" thinks Daun.

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 56.

At what exact point of time Daun came to see that Friedrich was not intending Invasion, and would, on the contrary, require to be invaded, I do not know. But it must have been an interesting discovery to Daun, if he foreshadowed to himself what results it would have on him: "Taking the defensive, then? And what is to become of one's Cunctatorship in that case?" Yes, truly. Cunctatorship is now the trade needed; there is nothing to be made of playing Fabius-Cunctator:—and Daun's fame henceforth is a diminishing quantity. The Books say he "wasted above five weeks in corresponding with the Russian Generals." In fact, he had now weeks enough on hand; being articulately resolved (and even commanded by Kriegshofrath) to do nothing till the Russians came up;—and also (inarticulately and by command of Nature) to do as little as possible after! This Year, and indeed all years following, the Russians are to be Daun's best card.

Waiting for three months here till the curtain rose, it was Friedrich that had to play Cunctator. A wearisome task to him, we need not doubt. But he did it with anxious vigilance; ever thinking Daun would try something, either on Prince Henri or on him, and that the Play would begin. But the Play did not. There was endless scuffling and bickering of Outposts; much hitching and counter-hitching, along that Bohemian-Silesian Frontier,—Daun gradually hitching up, leftwards, northwards, to be nearer his Russians; Friedrich counter-hitching, and, in the end, detaching against the Russians, as they approached in actuality. The details of all which would break the toughest patience. Not till July came had both parties got into the Lausitz; Daun into an impregnable Camp near Mark-Lissa (in Görlitz Country); Friedrich, opposite and eastward of him, into another at Schmöttseifen:—still after which, as the Russians still were not come, the hitching (if we could concern ourselves with it), the maze of strategic shuffling and counter-dancing, as the Russians get nearer, will become more intricate than ever.

Except that of General Beck on Battalion Düringshofen,—if that was meant as retaliatory, and was not rather an originality of Beck's, who is expert at such strokes,—Daun, in return for all these injurious Assaults and Breakages, tried little or no retaliation; and got absolutely none. Deville attempted once, as we saw; Loudon once, as perhaps we shall see: but both proved futile. For the present absolutely none. Next Year indeed, Loudon, on Fouquet at Landshut—But let us not anticipate! Just before quitting Landshut for Schmöttseifen, Friedrich himself rode into Bohemia, to look more narrowly; and held Trautenau, at the bottom of the Pass, for a day or two—But the reader has had enough of Small-War! Of the present Loudon attempt, Friedrich, writing to Brother Henri, who is just home from his Franconian Invasion (Breakage Fifth), has a casual word, which we will quote. "Reich-Hennersdorf" is below Landshut, farther down the Pass; "Liebau" still farther down,—and its "Gallows," doubtless, is on some knoll in the environs!

Reich-Hennersdorf, 9th June. "My congratulations on the excellent success you have had" (out in Frankenland yonder)! "Your prisoners, we hear, are 3,000; the desertion and confusion in the Reichs Army are affirmed to be enormous:—I gave those Reichs fellows two good months" (scarcely took so long) "to be in a condition to show face again. As for ourselves, I can send you nothing but contemptibilities. We have never yet had the beatific vision of Him with the Hat and Consecrated Sword" (Papal Daun, that is); "they amuse us with the Sieur Loudon instead;—who, three days ago" (7th July, two days), "did us the honour of a visit, at the Gallows of Liebau. He was conducted out again, with all the politeness imaginable, on to near Schatzlar," well over the Bohemian Border; "where we flung a score of cannon volleys into the"—into the "derrière of him, and everybody returned home."¹

Perhaps the only points now noticeable in this tedious Landshut interim, are Two, hardly noticed then at all by an expectant world. The first is: That in the King's little inroad down to Trautenau, just mentioned, four cannon drawn by horses were part of the King's fighting gear,—the first appearance of Horse Artillery in the world. "A very great invention," says the military mind: "guns and carriages are light, and made of the best material for strength; the gunners all mounted as postillions to them. Can scour along, over hill and dale, wherever horse can; and burst out, on the sudden, where nobody was expecting artillery. Devised in 1758; ready this Year, four light six-pounders; tried first in the King's raid down to Trautenau" (June 29th-30th). "Only four pieces as yet. But these did so well, there were yearly more. Imitated by the Austrians, and gradually by all the world."²

The second fact is: That Herr Guichard (Author of that fine Book on the War-methods of the Greeks and Romans) is still about Friedrich, as he has been for above a year past, if readers remember; and, during those tedious weeks, is admitted to a great deal of conversation with the King. Readers will consent to this note on Guichard; and this shall be our ultimatum on the wearisome Three Months at Landshut.

Major Quintus Icilius. "Guichard is by birth a Magdeburger, age now thirty-four; a solid, staid man, with a good deal of hard faculty in him, and of culture unusual for a soldier. A handy, sagacious, learned and intelligent man; whom Friedrich, in the course of a year's experience, has grown to see willingly about him. There is something of positive in Guichard, of stiff and, as it were, gritty, which might have offended a weaker taste ; but Friedrich likes the rugged sense of the man ; his real knowledge on certain interesting heads ; and the precision with which the known and the not rightly known are divided from one another, in Guichard.

¹ In Schöningh, ii. 65: "9th June 1759."

² Seyfarth, ii. 543.

“Guichard’s business about the King has been miscellaneous, not worth mention hitherto ; but to appearance well done. Of talk they are beginning to have more and more : especially at Landshut here, in these days of waiting ; a great deal of talk on the Wars of the Ancients, Guichard’s Book naturally leading to that subject. One night, dateable accidentally about the end of May, the topic happened to be Pharsalia, and the excellent conduct of a certain Centurion of the Tenth Legion, who, seeing Pompey’s people about to take him in flank, suddenly flung himself into oblique order” (schräge Stellung, as we did at Leuthen), “thereby outflanking Pompey’s people, and ruining their manœuvre and them. ‘A dexterous man, that Quintus Icilius the Centurion !’ observed Friedrich. ‘Ah, yes : but, excuse me, your Majesty, his name was Quintus Cæcilius,’ said Guichard. ‘No, it was Icilius,’ said the King, positive to his opinion on that small point ; which Guichard had not the art to let drop ; though, except assertion and counter-assertion, what could be made of it there ? Or of what use was it anywhere ?

“Next day, Guichard came with the Book” (what “Book” nobody would ever yet tell me), “and putting his finger on the passage, ‘See, your Majesty : Quintus Cæcilius !’ extinguished his royal opponent. ‘Hm,’ answered Friedrich, ‘so ? —Well, you shall be Quintus Icilius, at any rate !’ and straightway had him entered on the Army-Books as ‘Major Quintus Icilius ;’ his Majorship is to be dated, ‘10th April 1758’ (to give him seniority) ; and from and after this ‘26th May, 1759,’ he is to command the late Du Verger’s Free-Battalion. All which was done ;—the War-Offices somewhat astonished at such advent of an antique Roman among them ; but writing as bidden, the hand being plain, and the man an undeniable article. Onward from which time there is always a ‘Battalion Quintus’ on their Books, instead of Battalion Du Verger ; by degrees two Battalions Quintus, and at length three, and Quintus become a Colonel :—at which point the War ended ; and the three Free-Battalions Quintus, like all others of the same type, were discharged.” This is the authentic origin of the new name Quintus, which Guichard got, to extinction of the old : substantially this, as derived from Quintus himself,—though in the precise details of it there are obscurities, never yet solved by the learned. Nicolai, for example, though he had the story from Quintus in person, who was his familiar acquaintance, and often came to see him at Berlin, does not, with his usual punctuality, say, nor even confess that he has forgotten, what Book it was that Quintus brought with him to confute the King on their Icilius-Cæcilius controversy; Nicolai only says, that he, for his part, in the fields of Roman Literature and History, knows only three Quintus-Iciliuses, not one of whom is of the least likelihood; and in fact, in the above summary, I have had to invert my Nicolai on one point, to make the story stick together.¹

"Quintus had been bred for the clerical profession; carefully, at various Universities, Leyden last of all; and had even preached, as candidate for license,—I hope with moderate orthodoxy;—though he soon renounced that career. Exchanged it for learned and vigorous general study, with an eye to some College Professorship instead. He was still hardly twenty-three, when, in 1747, the new Stattholder," Prince of Orange, whom we used to know, "who had his eye upon him as a youth of merit, graciously undertook to get him placed at Utrecht, in a vacancy which had just occurred there,—whither the Prince was just bound, on some ceremonial visit of a high nature. The glad Quintus, at that time Guichard and little thinking of such an alias, hastened to set off in the Prince's train; but could get no conveyance, such was the press of people all for Utrecht. And did not arrive till next day,—and found quarter, with difficulty, in the garret of some overflowing Inn.

"In the lower stories of his Inn, solitary Guichard, when night fell, heard a specific gaudeamus going on; and inquired what it was. 'A company of Professors, handselling a newly-appointed Professor;'—appointed, as the next question taught, to the very Chair poor Quintus had come for! Serene Highness could not help himself: the Utrechters were so bent on the thing. Quintus lay awake, all night, in his truckle-bed; and gloomily resolved to have done with Professorships, and become a soldier. 'If your Serene Highness do still favour me,' said Quintus, next day, 'I solicit, as the one help for me, an ensign's commission!'—And persisted rigorously, in spite of all counsellings, promises and outlooks on the professorial side of things. So that Serene Highness had to grant him his commission; and Quintus was a soldier thenceforth. Fought, more or less, in the sad remainder of that Cumberland-Saxe War ; and, after the Peace of 1748, continued in the Dutch service. Where, loth to be idle, he got his learned Books out again, and took to studying thoroughly the Ancient Art of War. After years of this, it had grown so hopeful that he proceeded to a Book upon it ; and, by degrees, determined that he must get to certain Libraries in England, before finishing. In 1754, on furlough, graciously allowed and continued, he came to London accordingly ; finished his manuscript there (printed at the Hague, 1757¹) : and new War having now begun, went over (probably with English introductions) as volunteer to Duke Ferdinand. By Duke Ferdinand he was recommended to Friedrich, the goal of all his efforts, as of every vagrant soldier's in those times :—and here at last, as Quintus Icilius, he has found permanent billet, a Battalion and gradually three Battalions, and will not need to roam any farther.

¹ Nicolai, Anekdoten, vi. 129-145.

"They say, what is very credible, that Quintus proved an active, stout and effectual soldier, in his kind ; and perhaps we may hear of some of his small-war adventures by and by : that he was a studious, hard-headed, well-informed man, and had written an excellent Book on his subject, is still abundantly clear. Readers may look in the famous Gibbon's Autobiography, or still better in the Guichard Book itself, if they want evidence. The famous Gibbon was drilling and wheeling, very peaceably indeed, in the Hampshire Militia, in those wild years of European War. Hampshire Militia served as key, or glossary in a sort, to this new Book of Guichard's, which Gibbon eagerly bought and studied ; and it was Guichard, alias Quintus Icilius, who taught Gibbon all he ever knew of Ancient War, at least all the teaching he ever had of it, for his renowned Decline and Fall."²

It was in the last days of June that Daun, after many hitchings, got into more decisive general movement northward ;

¹ Mémoires Militaires sur les dcs. (à La Haye, 1757: 2 voll. 4to);—was in the 5th edition, when I last heard of it.

² See Gibbon's Works (4to, London, 1796: Memoirs of my Life and Writings), i. 97 ; and (Extraits de mes Lectures) ii. 52-54, of dates, May 14th-26th, 1762,—during which days Gibbon is engaged in actual reading of the Mémoires Militaires ; and already knows the Author by his alias of Quintus Icilius, "a man of eminent sagacity and insight, who was in the Dutch, and is now, I believe, in the Prussian service."

and slowly but steadily planted himself at Mark-Lissa in the Lausitz : upon which, after some survey of the phenomenon, Friedrich got to Schmöttseifen, opposite him, July 10th. Friedrich, on noticing such stir, had ridden down to Trautenau (June 29th-30th), new Horse-Artillery attending, to look closer into Daun's affairs ; and, seeing what they were, had thereupon followed. Above a month before this, Friedrich had detached a considerable force against the Russians, —General Dohna, of whom in next Chapter :—and both Daun and he again sit waiting, till they see farther. Rapid Friedrich is obliged to wait ; watching Daun and the Dohna-Russian adventure : slow Daun will continue to wait and watch there, long weeks and months, after that is settled, that and much else, fully to his mind ! Each is in his impregnable Camp ; and each, Daun especially, has his Divisions and Detachments hovering round him, near or far, on different strategic errands ; each Main-Camp like a planet with various moons—Mark-Lissa especially, a kind of sun with planets and comets and planetary moons :—of whose intricate motions and counter-motions, mostly unimportant to us, we promised to take no notice, in face of such a crisis just at hand.

By the 6th of July, slow Daun had got hitched into his Camp of Mark-Lissa ; and four days after, Friedrich attending him, was in Schmöttseifen : where again was pause ; and there passed nothing mentionable, even on Friedrich's score ; and till July was just ending, the curtain did not fairly rise. Pause of above two weeks on Friedrich's part, and of almost three months on Daun's. Mark-Lissa, an impregnable Camp, is on the Lausitz Border ; with Saxony, Silesia, Bohemia all converging hereabouts, and Brandenburg itself in the vicinity, —there is not a better place for waiting on events. Here, accordingly, till well on in September, Daun sat immovable ; not even hitching now,—only shooting out Detachments, planetary, cometary, at a great rate, chiefly on his various Russian errands.

Daun, as we said, had been uncomfortably surprised to find, by degrees, that Invasion was not Friedrich's plan this Year ; that the dramatic parts are redistributed, and that the playing of Fabius-Cunctator will not now serve one's turn. Daun, who may well be loth to believe such a thing, clings to his old part, and seems very lazy to rise and try another. In fact, he does not rise, properly speaking, or take up his new part at all. This Year, and all the following, he waits carefully till the Russian Lion come ; will then endeavour to assist,—or even do jackal, which will be safer still. The Russians he intends shall act lion ; he himself modestly playing the subaltern but much safer part ! Diligent to flatter the lion ; will provide him guidances, and fractional sustenances, in view of the coming hunt ; will eat the lion's leavings, once the prey is slaughtered. This really was, in some sort, Daun's yearly game, so long as it would last !—

July ending, and the curtain fairly risen, we shall have to look at Friedrich with our best eyesight. Preparatory to which, there is, on Friedrich's part, ever since the middle of June, this Anti-Russian Dohna adventure going on :—of which, at first, and till about the time of getting to Schmöttsseifen, he had great hopes : great, though of late rapidly sinking again :—into which we must first throw a glance, as properly the opening scene.

Fouquet has been left at Landshut, should the Daun remnants still in Bohemia think of invading. Fouquet is about rooting himself rather firmly into that important Post ; fortifying various select Hills round Landshut, with redoubts, curtains, communications ; so as to keep ward there, inexpugnable to a much stronger force. There for about a year, with occasional short sallies, on errands that arise, Fouquet sat successfully vigilant ; resisting the Devilles, Becks, Harsches : protecting Glatz and the Passes of Silesia ; in about a year we shall hear of his fortunes worsening, and of a great catastrophe to him in that Landshut Post.

Friedrich allowed the Reichsfolk “two good months,” after all that flurrying and havoc done on them, “before they could show face in Saxony.” They did take about that time ; and would have taken more, had not Prince Henri been called away by other pressing occasions in Friedrich's own neighbourhood ; and Saxony, for a good while (end of June to beginning of September), been left almost bare of Prussian troops. Which encourages the Reichs Army to hurry afield in very unprepared condition,—still rather within the two months. End of July, Light people of them push across to Halberstadt or Halle Country ; and are raising Contributions, and plundering diligently, if nothing else. Of which we can take no notice farther : if the reader can recollect it, well ; if not, also well. The poor Reichs Army nominally makes a figure this Year, but nominally only ; the effective part of it, now and henceforth, being Austrian Auxiliaries, and the Reichs part as flaccid and insignificant as ever.

Prince Henri's call to quit Saxony was this. Daun, among the numerous Detachments he was making, of which we can take no notice, had shot out Two (rather of cometary type, to use our old figure),—which every reader must try to keep in mind. Two Detachments, very considerable : Haddick (who grew at last to 20,000), and Loudon (16,000) ; who are hovering about mysteriously over the Lausitz ;—intending what ? Their intention, Friedrich thinks, especially Haddick's intention, may be towards Brandenburg, and even Berlin : wherefore he has summoned Henri to look after it. Henri, resting in cantonments about Tschopau and Dresden, after the late fatigues, and idle for the moment, hastens to obey ; and is in Bautzen neighbourhood, from about the end of June and onward. Sufficiently attentive to Haddick and Loudon : who make no attempt on Brandenburg ; having indeed, as Friedrich gradually sees, and as all of us shall soon see, a very different object in view !—

CHAPTER II.

GENERAL DOHNA ; DICTATOR WEDEL : BATTLE OF ZÜLLICHAU.

THE Russian Lion, urged by Vienna and Versailles, made his entry, this Year, earlier than usual,—coming now within wind of Mark-Lissa, as we see ;—and has stirred Daun into motion, Daun and everybody. From the beginning of April, the Russians, hybernating in the interior parts of Poland, were awake, and getting slowly under weigh. April 24th, the Vanguard of 10,000 quitted Thorn ; June 1st, Vanguard is in Posen ; followed by a First Division and a Second, each of 30,000. They called it "Soltikof crossing the Weichsel with 100,000 men ;" but, exclusive of the Cossack swarms, there were not above 75,000 regulars : nor was Soltikof their Captain just at first ; our old friend Fermor was, and continued to be till Soltikof, in a private capacity, reached Posen (June 29th), and produced his new commission. At Fermor's own request, as Fermor pretended,—who was skilled in Petersburg politics, and with a cheerful face served thenceforth as Soltikof's second.

At Posen, as on the road thither, they find Sulkowski's and the other burnt provenders abundantly replaced : it is evident they intend, in concert with Daun, to enclose Friedrich between two fires, and do something considerable. Whether on Brandenburg or Silesia, is not yet known, to Friedrich. Friedrich, since the time they crossed Weichsel, has given them his best attention ; and more than once has had schemes on their Magazines and them,—once a new and bigger Scheme actually afoot, under Wobersnow again, our Anti-Sulkowski friend ; but was obliged to turn the force elsewhither, on alarms that rose. He himself cannot quit the centre of the work ; his task being to watch Daun, and especially, should Daun attempt nothing else, to prevent junction of Soltikof and him.

Daun still lies torpid, or merely hitching about ; but now when the Russians are approaching Posen, and the case becomes pressing, Friedrich, as is usual to him, draws upon the Anti-Swedish, resources, upon the Force he has in Pommern. That is to say, orders General Dohna, who has the Swedes well driven in at present, to quit Stralsund Country, to leave the ineffectual Swedes with some very small attendance ; and to march,—with certain reinforcements that are arriving (Wobersnow already, Hülßen with 10,000 out of Saxony in a few days),—direct against the Russians ; and at once go in upon them. Try to burn their Magazines, again ; or, equally good, to fall vigorously on some of their separate Divisions, and cut them off in the vagrant state ;—above all, to be vigorous, be rapid, sharp, and do something effectual in that quarter. These were Dohna's Instructions. Dohna has 18,000 ; Hülsen with his 10,000 is industriously striding forward, from the farther side of Saxony, Wobersnow with at least his own fine head is already there. Friedrich, watching in the Anti-Junction position, ready for the least chance that may turn up.

Dohna marched accordingly ; but was nothing like rapid enough : an old man, often in ill health too ; and no doubt plenty of impediments about him. He consumed some time rallying at Stargard ; twelve days more at Landsberg, on the Warta, settling his provision-matters : in fine, did not get to Posen neighbourhood till June 23d, three weeks after the Russian Vanguard of 10,000 had fixed itself there, and other Russian parties were daily dropping in. Dohna was 18,000, a Wobersnow with him : had he gone at once on Posen, as Wobersnow urged, it is thought he might perhaps have ruined this Vanguard and the Russian Magazine ; which would have been of signal service for the remaining Campaign. But he preferred waiting for Hülsen and the 10,000, who did not arrive for seven or eight days more ; by which time Soltikof and most of the Russian Divisions had got in ;—and the work was become as good as hopeless, on those languid terms. Dohna did try upon the Magazine, said to be ill-guarded in some Suburbs of Posen ; crossed the Warta with that view, found no Magazine ; recrossed the Warta ; and went manœuvring about, unable to do the least good on Soltikof or his Magazines or operations. Friedrich was still in Landshut region, just about quitting it,—just starting on that little Trautenau Expedition, with his Four Pieces of Horse-Artillery (June 29th), when the first ill-news of Dohna came in ; which greatly disappointed Friedrich, and were followed by worse, instead of better.

The end was, Soltikof, being now all ready, winded himself out of Posen one day, veiled by Cossacks ; and, to Dohna's horror, had got, or was in the act of getting, between Dohna and Brandenburg; which necessitated new difficult manoeuvres from Dohna. Soltikof too can manoeuvre a little: Soltikof edges steadily forward; making for Crossen on Oder, where he expects to find Austrians (Haddick and Loudon, if Friedrich could yet guess it), with 30,000 odd, especially with provisions, which is wearing scarce with him. Twice or so there was still a pretty opportunity for Dohna on him; but Dohna never could resolve about it in time. Back and ever back goes Dohna; facing Soltikof; but always hitching back; latterly in Brandenburg ground, the Russians and he;—having no provisions, he either. In fine, July 17th (one week after Friedrich had got to Schmöttseifen), Dohna finds himself at the little Town of Züllichau (barely in time to snatch it before Soltikof could), within thirty miles of Crossen; and nothing but futility behind and before.¹

We can imagine Friedrich's daily survey of all this; his gloomy calculations what it will soon amount to if it last. He has now no Winterfeld, Schwerin, no Keith, Retzow, Moritz:—whom has he? His noblest Captains are all gone; he must put up with the less noble. One Wedell, Lieutenant-General, had lately recommended himself to the royal mind by actions of a prompt daring. The royal mind, disgusted with these Dohna haggings, and in absolute necessity of finding somebody that had resolution, and at least ordinary Prussian skill, hoped Wedell was the man. And determined, the crisis being so urgent, to send Wedell in the character of Alter-Ego, or “with the powers of a Roman Dictator,” as the Order expressed it.² Dictator Wedell is to supersede Dohna; shall go, at his own swift pace, fettered by nobody;—and, at all hazards, shall attack Soltikof straightway, and try to beat him. “You are grown too old for that intricate hard work; go home a little, and recover your health,” the King writes to Dohna. And to the Dohna Army, “Obey this man, all and sundry of you, as you would myself;” the man's private Order being, “Go in upon Soltikof; attack him straightway; let us have done with this wriggling and haggling.” Date of this Order is, "Camp at Schmöttseifen, 20th July, 1759." The purpose of such highflown Title, and solemnity of nomination, was mainly, it appears, to hush down any hesitation or surprise among the Dohna Generals, which, as Wedell was "the youngest Lieutenant-General of the Army," might otherwise have been possible.

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 78–88; Holden-Geschichte, v. 885–847.

² Given in Preuss, ii. 207, 208; in Stenzel, v. 212, other particulars.

Wedell, furnished with some small escort and these Documents, arrives in Camp, Sunday evening 22d July:—poor Dohna has not the least word or look of criticism; and every General, suppressing whatever thoughts there may be, prepares to yield loyal obedience to Dictator Wedell. "Wobersnow was the far better soldier of the two!" murmured the Opposition party, then and long afterwards,—all the more, as Wobersnow's behaviour under it was beautiful, and his end tragical, as will be seen. Wobersnow I perceive to have been a valiant sharp-striking man, with multifarious resources in his head; who had faithfully helped in these operations, and I believe been urgent to quicken them. But what I remember best of him is his hasty admirable contrivance for field-bakery in pressing circumstances,—the substance of which shall not be hidden from a mechanical age:

"You construct six slight square iron frames, each hinged to the other; each, say, two feet square, or the breadth of two common tiles, and shaped on the edges so as to take in tiles;—tiles are to be found on every human cottage. This iron frame, when you hook it together, becomes the ghost of a cubic box, and by the help of twelve tiles becomes a compact field-oven; and you can bake with it, if you have flour and water, and a few sticks. The succinctest oven ever heard of; for your operation done, and your tiles flung out again, it is capable of all folding flat like a book." Never till now had Wobersnow's oven been at fault; but in these Polish Villages, all of mere thatched hovels, there was not a tile to be found; and the Bakery, with astonishment, saw itself unable to proceed.

Wedell arrived, Sunday evening 22d July; had crossed Oder at Tschischerzig,—some say by Crossen Bridge; no matter which. Dohna's Camp is some thirty miles west of Crossen ; in and near the small Town called Züllichau, where his headquarter is. In those dull peaty Countries, on the right, which is thereabouts the northern (not eastern) bank of Oder ; between the Oder and the Warta ; some seventy miles south-by-east of Landsberg, and perhaps as far south-west of Posen : thither has Dohna now got with his futile manœuverings. Soltikof, drawn up amid scrubby woods and sluggish intricate brooks, is about a mile to east of him.

¹ Retzow, &c.

² Id. ii. 82 n.

Poor Dohna demits at once ; and, I could conjecture, vanishes that very night ; glad to be out of such a thing. Painfully has Dohna manœuvered for weeks past ; falling back daily ; only anxious latterly that Soltikof, who daily tries it, do not get to westward of him on the Frankfurt road, and so end this sad shuffle. Soltikof as yet has not managed that ultimate fatality ; Dohna, by shuffling back, does at least contrive to keep between Frankfurt and him ;—will not try attacking him, much as Wobersnow urges it. Has agreed twice or oftener, on Wobersnow's urgency : "Yes, yes ; we have a chance," Dohna would answer ; "only let us rest till tomorrow, and be fresh !" by which time the opportunity was always gone again.

Wedell had arrived with a grenadier battalion and some horse for escort ; had picked up 150 Russian prisoners by the way. Retzow has understood he came in with a kind of state ; and seemed more or less inflated ; conscious of representing the King's person, and being a Roman Dictator,—though it is a perilously difficult office too, and requires more than a Letter of Instructions to qualify you for it ! This is not Leonidas Wedell, whom readers once knew ; poor Leonidas is dead long since, fell in the Battle of Sohr, soon after that heroic feat of Ziethen's and his at Elbe-Teinitz (Defence of Elbe against an Army) ;—this is Leonidas's elder Brother. Friedrich had observed his fiery ways on the day of Leuthen : "Hah, a new Winterfeld perhaps ?" thought Friedrich, "All the Winterfeld I now have !"—which proved a fond hope. Wedell's Dictatorship began this Sunday towards sunset ; and lasted—in practical fact, it lasted one day.

Dictator Wedell fights his Battle (Monday, 23d July 1759), without Success.

Monday morning early, Wedell is on the heights, reconnoitering Soltikof; cannot see much of him, the ground being so woody; does see what he takes to be Soltikof's left wing; and judges that Soltikof will lie quiet for this day. Which was far from a right reading of Soltikof; the fact being that Soltikof, in long columns and divisions, beginning with his right wing, was all on march since daybreak; what Wedell took for Soltikof's "left wing" being Soltikof's rearguard and baggage, waiting till the roads cleared. Wedell, having settled everything on the above footing, returns to Züllichau about 10 o'clock; and about 11, Soltikof, miles long, disengaged from the bushy hollows, makes his appearance on the open grounds of Palzig: he, sure enough (though Wedell can hardly believe it),—five or six miles to north-east yonder; tramping diligently along, making for Crossen and the Oder Bridge;—and is actually got ahead of us, at last!

This is what Wedell cannot suffer, cost what it may. Wedell's orders were, in such case, Attack the Russians. Wedell instantly took his measures; not unskilfully, say judges,—though the result proved disappointing; and Wobersnow himself earnestly dissuaded: "Too questionable, I should doubt! Soltikof is 70,000, and has no end of Artillery; we are 26,000 and know not if we can bring a single gun to where Soltikof is!"¹

Wedell's people have already, of their own accord, got to arms again; stand waiting his orders on this new emergency. No delay in Wedell or in them. "May not it be another Rossbach (if we are lucky)?" thinks Wedell: "Cannot we burst-in on their flank, as they march yonder, those awkward fellows; and tumble them into heaps?" The differences were several fold: First, that Friedrich and Seidlitz are not here. Many brave men we have, and skilful; but not a master and man like these Two. Secondly, that there is no

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 182-184. .

Janus-Hill to screen our intentions ; but that the Russians have us in full view, while we make ready. Thirdly, and still more important, that we do not know the ground, and what hidden inaccessibilities lie ahead. This last is judged to have been the killing circumstance. Between the Russians and us there is a paltry little Brook, or line of quagmire ; scarcely noticeable here, but passable nowhere except at the Village-Mill of Kay, by one poor Bridge there. And then, farther inwards, as shelter of the Russians, there is another quaggy Brook, branch of the above, which is without bridge altogether. Hours will be required to get 26,000 people marched up there, not to speak of heavy guns at all.

The 26,000 march with their usual mathematical dispatch : Manteuffel and the Vanguard strike-in with their sharpest edge, foot and horse, direct on the Head of the Russian Column, Manteuffel leading on, so soon as his few battalions and squadrons are across. Head means brain (or life) to this Russian Column ; and these Manteuffel people go at it with extraordinary energy. The Russian head gives way ; infantry and cavalry :—their cavalry was driven quite to rear, and never came insight again after this of Manteuffel. But the Russians have abundance of Reserves ; also of room to manœuvre in,—no lack of ground open, and ground defensible (Palzig Village and Churchyard, for example) ;—above all, they have abundance of heavy guns.

Well in recoil from Manteuffel and his furies, the beaten Russians succeed in forming “a long Line behind Palzig Village,” with that Second, slighter or Branch Quagmire between them and us ; they get the Village beset, and have the Churchyard of it lined with batteries,—say seventy guns. Manteuffel, unsupported, has to fall back ;—unwillingly, and not chased or in disorder,—towards Kay-Mill again ; where many are by this time across. Hülsen, with the Centre, attacks now, as the Vanguard had done ; with a will, he too : Wobersnow, all manner of people attack ; time after time, for about four hours coming : and it proves all in vain, on that Churchyard and new Line. Without cannon, we are repulsed, torn away by those Russian volcano-batteries ; never enough of us at once !

Hülsen, Wobersnow, everybody in detail is repulsed, or finds his success unavailing. Poor Wobersnow did wonders ; but he fell, killed. Gone he ; and has left so few of his like : a man that could ill be spared at present !—Day is sinking ; we find we have lost, in killed, wounded and prisoners, some 6,000 men. “About sunset,”—flaming July sun going down among the moorlands on such a scene,—Wedell gives it up ; retires slowly towards Kay Bridge. Slowly ; not chased, or molested ; Soltikof too glad to be rid of him. Soltikof's one aim is, and was, towards Crossen ; towards Austrian Junction, and something to live upon. Soltikof's loss of men is reckoned to be heavier even than Wedell's : but he could far better afford it. He has gained his point ; and the price is small in comparison. Next day he enters Crossen on triumphant terms.

Poor Wedell had returned over Kay-Mill Bridge, in the night-time after his Defeat. On the morrow (Tuesday 24th, day of Soltikof's glad entry), Wedell crosses Oder ; at Tschischerzig, the old place of Sunday evening last,—in how different a humour, this time !—and in a day more, posts himself opposite to Crossen Bridge, five or six miles south ; and again sits watchful of Soltikof there. At Crossen, triumphant Soltikof has found no Austrian Junction, nor anything additional to live upon. A very disappointing circumstance to Soltikof : “Austrian Junction still a problem, then ; a thing in the air ? And perhaps the King of Prussia taking charge of it now !” Soltikof, more and more impatient, after waiting some days, decided Not to cross Oder by that Bridge ;—“shy of crossing anywhere” (think the French Gentlemen, Montazet, Montalembert), “to the King of Prussia's side !”¹ Which is not unlikely, though the King is above 100 miles off him, and has Daun on his hands. Certain enough, keeping the River between him and any operations of the King, Soltikof set out for Frankfurt, forty or fifty miles farther down. In the hope probably of finding something of human provender withal? July 30th, one week after his Battle, the vanguard of him is there.

¹ Stenzel, iv. 215 (indistinct, and giving a wrong citation of “Montalembert, ii. 87”).

Thus, in two days, or even in one, has Wedell's Dictatorship ended. Easy to say scoffingly, "Would it had never begun!" Friedrich knows that, and Wedell knows it;—after the event everybody knows it! Friedrich said nothing of reproachful; the reverse rather,—“I dreaded something of the kind; it is not your fault;”—ordered Wedell to watch diligently at Crossen Bridge, and be ready on farther signal. The Wedell Problem, in such ruined condition, has now fallen to Friedrich himself.

This is the Battle of Züllichau (afternoon of 23d July 1759); the beginning of immense disasters in this Campaign. Battle called also of Kay and of Palzig, those also being main localities in it. It was lost, not by fault of Wedell's people, who spent themselves nobly upon it, nor perhaps by fault of Wedell himself, but principally, if not solely, by those two paltry Brooks, or threads of Quagmire, one of which turns Kay-Mill: memorable Brooks in this Campaign, 1759.*

• Close in the same neighbourhood, there is another equally contemptible Brook, making towards Oder, and turning the so-called Krebsmühle, which became still more famous to the whole European Public, twenty years hence. Krebsmühle (Crab-Mill), as yet quite undistinguished among Mills; belonging to a dusty individual called Miller Arnold, with a dusty Son of his own for Miller's Lad: was it at work this day? Or had the terrible sound from Palzig quenched its clacking?—

Some three weeks ago (4th–6th July), there occurred a sudden sharp thing at Havre-de-Grace on the French Coast, worth a word from us in this place. The Montazets, Montalemberts, watching, messaging about, in the Austrian-Russian

* To Wedell, from the King, "Schmöttseifen, July 24th, 1759" (in Shöning, ii. 118).

* Tempelhof, iii. 125–131.

Courts and Camps, assiduously keeping their Soltikofs in tune, we can observe how busy they are. Soubise with his Invasion of England, all the French are very busy ; they have conquered Hessen from Duke Ferdinand, and promise themselves a glorious Campaign, the Seizure of Frankfurt. Soubise, intent on his new Enterprise, is really making ardent preparations : at Vannes in the Morbihan, such rendezvousing and equipping ;—especially at Havre, no end of flat-bottomed boats getting built ; and much bluster and agitation among the weaker sorts, in both Nations. Whereupon,

“July 1st” (just in the days while Friedrich was first trying Horse Artillery), “Rear-Admiral Rodney sails from Portsmouth with a few Frigates, and Six Bomb-ketches” (Firedrake, Basilisk, Blast, and such nomenclatures) : “and in the afternoon of Tuesday 3d, arrives in the frith or bay of Havre. Steers himself properly into the Channel of Honfleur” before dark ; and therefrom, with his Firedrake, Basilisk and Company, begins such a bombardment of Havre and the flat-bottomed manufactories, as was quite surprising. Fifty-two incessant hours of it, before he thought poor Havre had enough. Poor Havre had been on fire six times ; the flat manufactory (unquenchable), I know not how many ; all the inhabitants off in despair ; and the Garrison building this battery to no purpose, then that ; no salvation for them but in Rodney’s ‘mortars getting too hot.’ He had fired of shells 1900, of carcasses 1150 : from Wednesday about sunrise till Friday about 8 A.M.—about time for breakfast ; which I hope everybody had, after such a stretch of work. ‘No damage to speak of,’ said the French Gazetteers ; ‘we will soon refit everything!’ But they never did ; and nothing came of Havre henceforth. Vannes was always, and is now still more, to be the main place ; only that Hawke,—most unexpectedly, for one fancied all their ships employed in distant parts,—rides there with a Channel Fleet of formidable nature ; and the previous question always is : ‘Cannot we beat Hawke ? Can we ! Or will not he perhaps go, of himself, when the rough weather comes ?’ ”

¹ List of him, in Beatson, Naval and Military Memoirs (London, 1804), ii. 241 ; his Despatch (excellently brief), ib. ii. 323.

CHAPTER III.

FRIEDRICH IN PERSON ATTEMPTS THE RUSSIAN PROBLEM ; NOT WITH SUCCESS.

BEFORE Wedell's catastrophe, the Affair of those Haddick-Loudon Detachments had become a little plainer to Friedrich. The intention, he begins to suspect, is not for Berlin at all ; but for junction with Soltikof,—at Crossen or wherever it may be. This is in fact their real purpose ; and this, beyond almost Berlin itself, it is in the highest degree important to prevent. Important ; and now as if become impossible !

Prince Henri had come to Bautzen with his Army, specially to look after Loudon and Haddick ; and he has, all this while, had Finck with some 10,000 diligently patrolling to westward of them, guarding Berlin ; he himself watching from the southern side,—where, as on the western, there was no danger from them. Some time before Wedell's affair, Friedrich had pushed out Eugen of Württemberg to watch these people on the eastern side ;—suspicious that thitherward lay their real errand. Eugen had but 6,000 ; and, except in conjunction with Finck and Henri, could do nothing,—nor can, now when Friedrich's suspicion turns out to be fatally true. Friedrich had always the angry feeling that Finck and Prince Henri were the blameworthy parties in what now ensued ; that they, who were near, ought to have divined these people's secret, and spoiled it in time ; not have left it to him, who was far off, and so busy otherwise. To the last, that was his fixed private opinion ; by no means useful to utter,—especially at present, while attempting the now very doubtful enterprise himself, and needing all about him to be swift and zealous. This is one of Friedrich's famous labours, this of the Haddick-Loudon junction with Soltikof ; strenuous short spasm of effort, of about a week's continuance ; full of fiery insight, velocity, energy ; still admired by judges, though it was unsuccessful, or only had half success. Difficult to bring home, in any measure, to the mind of modern readers, so remote from it.

Friedrich got the news of Züllichau next day, July 24th ;—and instantly made ready. The case is critical ; especially this Haddick-Loudon part of it : add 30 or 36,000 Austrians to Soltikof, how is he then to be dealt with ? A case stringently pressing :—and the resources for it few and scattered. For several days past, Haddick, and Loudon under him, whose motions were long enigmatic, have been marching steadily eastward through the Lausitz,—with the evident purpose of joining Soltikof ; unless Wedell could forbid. Wedell ahead was the grand opposition ;—Finck, Henri, Würtemberg, as good as useless ;—and Wedell being now struck down, these Austrians will go, especially Loudon will, at a winged rate. They are understood to be approaching Sagan Country ; happily, as yet, well to westward of it, and from Sagan Town well north-westward ;—but all accounts of them are vague, dim : they are an obscure entity to Friedrich, but a vitally important one. Sagan Town may be about 70 miles northward of where Friedrich now is : from Sagan, were they once in the meridian of Sagan, their road is free eastward and northward ;—to Crossen is about 60 miles north-by-east from Sagan, to Frankfurt near 100 north. Sagan is on the Bober ; Bober, in every event, is between the Austrians and their aim.

Friedrich feels that, however dangerous to quit Daun's neighbourhood, he must, he in person, go at once. And who, in the interim, will watch Daun and his enterprises ? Friedrich's reflexions are : " Well, in the crisis of the moment, Saxony,—though there already are marauding Bodies of Reichsfolk in it,—must still be left to itself for a time ; or, cannot Finck and his 10,000 look to it ? Henri, with his Army, now useless at Bautzen, shall instantly rendezvous at Sagan ; his Army to go with me, against the Russians and their Haddick-Loudons ; Henri to Schmöttseifen, instead of me, and attend to Daun ; Henri, I have no other left ? Finck and his 10,000 must take charge of Saxony, such charge as he can :—how lucky those Spring Forays, which destroyed the Reichs Magazines ! Whereby there is no Reichs Army yet got into Saxony (nothing but preliminary pulses and splashings of it); none yet, nor like to be quite at once." That is Friedrich's swift plan.

Henri rose on the instant, as did everybody concerned: July 29th, Henri and Army were at Sagan; Army waiting for the King; Henri so far on his road to Schmöttseifen. He had come to Sagan "by almost the rapidest marches ever heard of,"—or ever till some others of Henri's own, which he made in that neighbourhood soon. Punctual, he, to his day; as are Eugen of Würtemberg's people, and all Detachments and Divisions: Friedrich himself arrives at Sagan that same 29th, "about midnight,"—and finds plenty of work waiting: no sleep these two nights past; and none coming just yet! A most swift rendezvous. The speed of everybody has been, and needs still to be, intense.

This rendezvous at Sagan,—intersection of Henri and Friedrich, bound different roads (the Brothers, I think, did not personally meet, Henri having driven off for Schmöttseifen by a shorter road),—was, Sunday, July 29th. Following which, are six days of such a hunt for those Austrian reynards as seldom or never was! Most vehement, breathless, baffling hunt; half of it spent in painfully beating cover, in mere finding and losing. Not rightly successful, after all. So that, on the eighth day hence, August 6th, at Müllrose, near Frankfurt, 80 miles from Sagan, there is a second rendezvous,—rendezvous of Wedell and Friedrich, who do not now "intersect," but meet after the hunt is done;—and in the interim, there has been a wonderful performance, though an unsuccessful. Friedrich never could rightly get hold of his Austrians. Once only, at Sommerfeld, a long march north-west of Sagan, he came upon some outskirts of them. And in general, in those latter eight days, especially in the first six of them, there is, in that Kotbus-Sagan Country, such an intersecting, checking, pushing, and multifarious simmering of marches, on the part of half a dozen Strategic Entities, Friedrich the centre of them, as—as, I think, nobody but an express soldier-student, well furnished with admiration for this particular Soldier, would consent to have explained to him. One of the maziest, most unintelligible whirls of marching; inextricable Sword-Dance, or Dance of the Furies,—five of them (that is the correct number: Haddick, Loudon, Friedrich, Würtemberg, Wedell);—and it is flung down for us, all in a huddle, in these inhuman Books (which have several errors of the press, too): let no man rashly insist with himself on understanding it, unless he have need! Humanly pulled straight, not inhumanly flung down at random, here the essentials of it are,—in very brief state:

“Sagan, Monday, 30th July. Friedrich is at Sagan, since midnight last, busier and busier;” beating over, as we termed it, and getting his hounds (his new Henri-Army) in leash; “endeavouring, especially, to get tidings of those Austrian people; who are very enigmatic,—Loudon a dexterous man, —and have hung up such a curtain of Pandours between Friedrich and them as is nearly impenetrable. In the course of this Monday, Friedrich ascertains that they are verily on the road; coming eastward, for Sommerfeld,—‘thence for Crossen!’ he needs no ghost to tell him. Wherefore, “Tuesday, Sagan to Naumburg. Tuesday before daybreak, Friedrich too is on the road: north-westward; in full march towards Naumburg on Bober, meaning to catch the Bridge from them there. March of the swiftest; he himself is ahead, as usual, with the Vanguard of Horse. He reaches Naumburg (northward, a march of 20 miles); finds, not Haddick or Loudon, but a Detachment of theirs: which he at once oversets with his Cavalry, and chases,—marking withal that ‘westward is the way they run.’ Westward; and that we are still ahead, thank Heaven!

“Before his Infantry are all up, or are well rested in Naumburg, Friedrich ascertains, on more precise tidings, That the Austrians are in Sommerfeld, to westward (again a 20 miles); and judges That, no doubt, they will bear off more to leftward, by Guben probably, and try to avoid him,—unless he can still catch them in Sommerfeld. About nightfall, he marches for Sommerfeld, at his swiftest; arrives, Wednesday early; finds —alas!—

“Sommerfeld, Wednesday morning, August 1st, Friedrich finds that Loudon was there last night,—preterite tense, alas; the question now being, Where is he?” In fact, Loudon had written yesterday to Daun (Letter still extant, “Sommerfeld, July 31st”), That “being swift and light,” consisting of horse for most part, "he may probably effect Junction this very night;"—but has altered his mind very much, on sight of these fugitives from Naumburg, since! And has borne off more to leftward. Straight north now, and at a very brisk pace; being now all of horse; and has an important conference with Haddick at Guben, when they arrive there. "Not in Sommerfeld?" thinks Friedrich (earnestly surveying, through this slit he has made in the Pandour veil): "Gone to Guben, most likely, bearing off from us to leftward?"—Which was the fact; though not the whole fact. And indeed the chase is now again fallen uncertain, and there has to be some beating of covers. For one thing, he learns today (August 1st) that the Russians are gone to Frankfurt: "Follow them, you Wedell,"—cries Friedrich: them we shall have to go into,—however this hunt end!—

"To Markersdorf, Thursday, August 2d. Friedrich takes the road for Guben: reaches Markersdorf (twenty miles march, still seven or eight from Guben); falls upon—What phenomenon is this? The Austrian heavy Train; meal-wagons not a few, and a regiment of foot in charge of it;—but going the wrong way, not towards the Russians, but from them! What on earth can this be? This is Haddick,—if Friedrich could yet clearly know it,—Haddick and Train, who for his own part has given up the junction enterprise. At Guben, some hours ago, he had conference with Loudon; and this was the conclusion arrived at: 'Impossible, with that King so near! You, Herr Loudon, push on, without heavy baggage, and with the Cavalry altogether; you can get in, almost 20,000 strong; I, with the Infantry, with the meal and heavy guns, will turn, and make for the Lausitz again!'

"This mysterious Austrian train, going the wrong way, Friedrich attacks, whatever it be (hoping, I suppose, it might be the Austrians altogether); chases it vigorously; snatches all the meal-wagons, and about 1,000 prisoners. Uncertain still what it is,—if not the Austrians altogether? To his sorrow, he finds, on pushing farther into it, that it is only Haddick and the Infantry: that Loudon, with the 20,000 Horse, will have gone off for Frankfurt;—irretrievably ahead, the swift Loudon,—ever careering northward all this while, since that afternoon at Sommerfeld, when the fugitives altered his opinion: a now unattainable Loudon. In the course of Thursday night, Friedrich has satisfied himself that the Loudon junction is a thing as good as done:—in effect, Loudon did get to Frankfurt, morning of August 3d, and joined the Russians there ; and about the same time, or only a few hours sooner, Friedrich, by symptoms, has divined that his hunt is ended, in this rather unsuccessful way ; and that chasing of Haddick is not the road to go.”¹

Not Haddick now ; with or without their Austrians, it shall be the Russians now ! Two days ago (Wednesday, as was mentioned), before sight of those enigmatic meal-wagons, Friedrich had learned that the Russians were to be in Frankfurt again ; and has ordered Wedell to march thitherward, at any rate. Which Wedell is doing, all this Thursday and the four following days. As does likewise, from and after “ Friday, August 3d, 1 A.M.” (hunt then over) Friedrich himself,—renouncing Haddick and the hunt. Straight towards Frankfurt thenceforth ; headquarters Beeskow that night ; next night, Müllrose, whither Wedell is appointed, within twelve miles of Frankfurt. This is the end of Friedrich’s sore Chase and March ; burnt deeply into his own weary brain, if ours still refuse it admittance ! Here, of utterly fatigued tone, is a note of his, chiefly on business, to Minister Finckenstein. Indeed there are, within the next ten days, Three successive Notes to Finckenstein, which will be worth reading in their due places. This is the First of them :

The King to Graf von Finckenstein (at Berlin).

Beeskow, 3d August 1759.

“ I am just arrived here, after cruel and frightful marchings (Checks himself, however). “ There is nothing desperate in all that ; and I believe the noise and disquietude this hurlyburly has caused will be the worst of it. Show this Letter to everybody, that it may be known the State is not undefended. I have made above 1,000 prisoners from Haddick. All his meal-wagons have been taken. Finck, I believe, will keep an eye on him,” and secure Berlin from attempts of his. “ This is all I can say.

“ Tomorrow I march to within two leagues of Frankfurt ” (to Müllrose, namely). “ Katte ” (the Minister who has charge of such things) “ must send me instantly Two Hundred Wispels ” (say tons) “ of Meal, and Bakers one Hundred, to Fürstenwalde. I shall encamp at Wulkow. I am very tired. For six nights I have not closed an eye. Farewell.—F.”

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 185-139.

During the above intricate War-Dance of Five,—the day while Friedrich was at Sommerfeld, the day before he came in sight of Haddick’s meal-wagons going the wrong road,—there went on, at Minden on the Weser, three hundred miles away, a beautiful feat of War, in the highest degree salutary to Duke Ferdinand and Brittanic Majesty’s Ministry ; feat which requires a word from us here. A really splendid Victory, this of Minden, August 1st : French driven headlong through the Passes there ; their “ Conquest of Hanover and Weser Country ” quite exploded and flung over the horizon ; and Duke Ferdinand relieved from all his distresses, and lord of the ascendant again in those parts. Highly interesting to Friedrich ;—especially to Prince Henri ; whose apprehensions about Ferdinand and the old Richelieu Hastenbeck-Halberstadt time returning on us, have been very great ; and who now, at Schmöttseifen, fires feu-de-joie for it with all his heart. This is a Battle still of some interest to English readers. But can English readers consent to halt in this hot pinch of the Friedrich crisis ; and read the briefest thing which is foreign to it ? Alas, I fear they can ;—and will insert the Note here :

Battle of Minden : Wednesday August 1st, 1759.—“ Ever since Bergen, things have gone awry with Ferdinand, and in spite of skilful management, of hard struggles, and bright sparkles of success, he has had a bad Campaign of it. The French, it would seem, are really got into better fighting order ; Belleisle’s exertions as War-Minister have been almost wonderful,—in some respects, too wonderful, as we shall hear !—and Broglio and Contades, in comparison with Clermont and Soubise, have real soldier qualities. Contades across Rhine again, in those Weser Countries, who is skilful in his way, and is pricked on by emulation of Broglio, has been spreading himself out steadily progressive there ; while Broglio, pushing along from Frankfurt-on-Mayn, has conquered Hessen ; is into Hanover ; on the edge of conquering Hanover, —which how is Ferdinand to hinder ? Ferdinand has got two, if not three Armies to deal with, and in number is not much superior to one. If he run to save Hanover from Bro-glio, he loses Westphalia : Osnabrück (his Magazine), Münster, Lippstadt,—Contades, if left to himself, will take these, after short siege ; and will nestle himself there, and then advance, not like a transitory fever-fit, but like visible death, on Hanover. Ferdinand, rapid yet wary, manœvered his very best among those interests of his, on the left bank of Weser ; but after the surprisal of Minden from him (brilliantly done by Broglio, and the aid of a treacherous peasant), especially after the capture of Osnabrück, his outlooks are gloomy to a degree : and at Versailles, and at Minden where Contades has established himself, ‘the Conquest of Hanover’ (beautiful counterweight to all one’s losses in America or elsewhere) is regarded as a certainty of this Year.

“For the last ten days of July, about Minden, the manœvering, especially on Ferdinand’s part, had been intense ; a great idea in the head of Ferdinand, more or less unintelligible to Contades. Contades, with some 30,000, which is the better half of his force, has taken one of the unassailablest positions. He lies looking northward, his right wing on the Weser with posts to Minden (Minden perhaps a mile north-westward there), on his left impassable peatbogs and quagmires ; in front a quaggy River or impassable black Brook, called the Bastau, coming from the westward, which disembogues at Minden ;¹—there lies Contades, as if in a rabbit-hole, say military men ; for defence, if that were the sole object, no post can be stronger. Contades has in person say 30,000 ; and round him, on both sides of the Weser, are Broglio with 20,000 ; besides other Divisions, I know not how many, besieging Münster, capturing Osnabrück (our hay magazine), attempting Lippstadt by surprise (to no purpose), and diligently working forward, day by day, to Ferdinand’s ruin in those Minden regions. Three or four Divisions busy in that manner ;—and above all, we say, he has Broglio with a 20,000 on the right or east bank of the Weser,—who, if Ferdinand quit him even for a day, seems to have Hanover at discretion, and can march any day upon Hanover City, where his light troops have already been more than once. Why doesn’t Ferdinand cross Weser, re-cross Weser ; coerce Broglio back ; and save Hanover ? cry the Gazetteers and a Public of weak judgment. Pitt’s Public is inclined to murmur about Ferdinand ; Pitt himself never. Ferdinand persists in sticking by Minden neighbourhood ; and, in a scarcely accountable way, manœvering there, shooting out therefrom what mischief he can upon the various Contades people in their sieges and the like.

¹ Sketch of Plan, p. 62

"On Contades himself he can pretend to do nothing,—except hoodwink him, entice him out, and try to get a chance on him. But for his own subsistence and otherwise, he is very lively ;—snatches, by a sudden stroke, Bremen City : 'Yes truly, Bremen is a Reichstadt ; nor shall you snatch it, as you did Frankfurt ; but I will, instead : and my English proviant-ships shall have a sure haven henceforth !' Snatches Bremen by one sudden stroke ; re-snatches Osnabrück by another ('our magazine considerably increased since you have had it, many thanks !') ; does lose Münster, to his sorrow ; but nevertheless sticks by his ground here ;—nay detaches his swift-cutting Nephew, the Hereditary Prince, who is growing famous for such things, to cut out Contades's strong post to southward (Gohfeld, ten miles up the Weser), which guards his meal-wagons, after their long journey from the south. That is Contades's one weak point, in this posture of things : his meal is at Cassell, seventy miles off. Broglio and he see clearly, 'Till we can get a new magazine much nearer Hanover, or at lowest, can clear out these people from infesting us here, there is no moving northward !' To both Contades and Broglio that is an evident thing : the corollary to which is, They must fight Ferdinand ; must watch lynx-like till a chance turn up of beating him in fight. That is their outlook ; and Ferdinand knows it is,—and manœuvres accordingly. Military men admire much, not his movements only, but his clear insight into Contades's and Broglio's temper of mind, and by what methods they were to be handled, they and his own affairs together, and brought whither he wanted them.'

"This attempt on Gohfeld was a serious mischief to Contades, if it succeeded. But the detaching of the Prince of Brunswick on it, and weakening one's too weak Army, 'What a rashness, what an oversight !' thinks Contades (as Ferdinand wished him to do) : 'Is our skilful enemy, in this extreme embarrassment, losing head, then ? Look at his left wing yonder.'—(General Wangenheim, sitting behind batteries, in his Village of Todtenhausen, looking into Minden from the north) :—'Wangenheim's left leans on the Weser, yes ; but Wangenheim's right, observe, has no support within three miles of it : tear Wangenheim out, Ferdinand's flank is bare !'

¹ In Mauvillon (ii. 41-44) minute account of all that.

These things seemed to Contades the very chance he had been waiting for ; and brought him triumphantly out of his rabbit-hole, into the Heath of Minden, as Ferdinand hoped they would do.

"And so, Tuesday Evening, July 31st, things being now all ripe, upwards of 50,000 French are industriously in motion. Contades has nineteen bridges ready on the Bastau Brook, in front of him ; tattoo this night, in Contades's Camp, is to mean general-march. 'March, all of you, across these nineteen Bridges, to your stations on the Plain or Heath of Minden yonder,—and be punctual, like the clock !' Broglio crosses Weser by the Town Bridge, ranks himself opposite Todtenhausen ; and through the livelong night there is, on the part of the 50,000 French, a very great marching and deploying. Contades and Broglio together are 51,400 foot and horse. Ferdinand's entire force will be near 46,000 ; but on the day of Battle he is only 36,000,—having detached the Hereditary Prince on Gohfeld, in what view we know.—The Battle of Minden, called also of Tonhausen (meaning Todtenhausen), which hereupon fell out, has still its fame in the world ; and, I perceive, is well worth study by the soldier mind : though nothing but the rough outline of it is possible here.

"Ferdinand's posts extend from the Weser river and Todtenhausen round by Stemmer, Holzhausen, to Hartum and the Bog of Bastau (the chief part of him towards Bastau),—in various Villages, and woody patches and favourable spots ; all looking in upon Minden, from a distance of five or seven miles ; forming a kind of arc, with Minden for centre. He will march up in eight Columns ; of course, with wide intervals between them,—wide, but continually narrowing as he advances ; which will indeed be ruinous gaps, if Ferdinand wait to be attacked ; but which will coalesce close enough, if he be speedy upon Contades. For Contades's line is also of arc-like or almost semicircular form, behind it Minden as centre ; Minden, which is at the intersection of Weser and the Brook ; his right flank is on Weser, Broglio versus Wangenheim the extreme-right ; his left, with infantry and artillery, rests on that black Brook of Bastau with its nineteen Bridges. As the ground on both wings is rough, not so fit for Cavalry, Contades puts his Cavalry wholly in the centre : they are the flower of the French Army, about 10,000 horse in all ; firm open ground ahead of them there, with strong batteries, masses of infantry to support on each flank ; batteries to ply with cross-fire any assailant that may come on.

Broglio, we said, is right wing; strong in artillery and infantry. Broglio is to root out Wangenheim: after which,—or even before which, if Wangenheim is kept busy and we are nimble,—what becomes of Ferdinand's left flank, with a gap of three miles between Wangenheim and him, and 10,000 chosen horse to take advantage of it! Had the French been of Prussian dexterity and nimbleness in marching, it is very possible something might have come of this latter circumstance: but Ferdinand knows they are not; and intends to take good care of his flank.

“Contades and his people were of willing mind; but had no skill ‘in marching up:’ and, once got across the Bastau by their nineteen Bridges, they wasted many hours:—‘Too far, am I? not far enough? Too close; not close enough?’—and broiled about, in much hurry and confusion, all night. Fight was to have begun at 5 in the morning. Broglio was in his place, silently looking into Wangenheim, by 5 o'clock; but unfortunately did nothing upon Wangenheim (‘Not ready you, I see!’), except cannonade a little;—and, indeed, all through, did nothing (‘Still not ready you others!’); which surely was questionable conduct, though not reckoned so at Versailles, when the case came to be argued there. As to the Contades people, across those nineteen Bridges, they had a baffling confused night; and were by no means correctly on their ground at sunrise, nor at 7 o'clock, nor at 8; and were still mending themselves when the shock came, and time was done.

“The morning is very misty; but Ferdinand has himself been out examining since the earliest daybreak: his orders last night were, ‘Cavalry be saddled at 1 in the morning,’—having a guess that there would be work, as he now finds there will. From 5 A.M. Ferdinand is issuing from his Camp, flowing down eastward, beautifully concentric, closing on Contades; horse not in centre, but English Infantry in centre (Six Battalions, or Six Regiments by English reckoning); right opposite those 10,000 Horse of Contades's, the sight of whom seems to be very animating to them. The English Cavalry stand on the right wing, at the Village of Hartum: Lord George Sackville had not been very punctual in saddling at 1 o'clock; but he is there, ranked on the ground, at 8,—in what humour nobody knows; sulky and flabby, I should rather guess. English Tourists, idle otherwise, may take a look at Hartum on the south side, as the spot where a very ugly thing occurred that day.

"Soon after 8, the Fight begins: attack, by certain Hessians, on Hahlen and its batteries; attempt to drive the French out of Hahlen, as the first thing,—which does not succeed at once (indeed took three attacks in all); and perhaps looks rather tedious to those Six English Battalions. Ferdinand's order to them was, 'You shall march up to attack, you Six, on sound of drum;' but, it seems, they read it, 'by sound of drum:' 'Beating our own drums; yes, of course!'—and, being weary of this Hahlen work, or fancying they had no concern with it, strode on, double-quick, without waiting for Hahlen at all! To the horror of their Hanoverian comrades, who nevertheless determined to follow as second line. The Contades cross-fire of artillery, battery of 30 guns on one flank, of 36 on the other, does its best upon this forward-minded Infantry, but they seem to heed it little; walk right forward; and, to the astonishment of those French Horse and of all the world, entirely break and ruin the charge made on them, and tramp forward in chase of the same. The 10,000 Horse feel astonished, insulted; and rush out again, furiously charging; the English halt and serry themselves: 'No fire till they are within forty paces;' and then such pouring torrents of it as no horse or man can endure. Rally after rally there is, on the part of those 10,000; mass after mass of them indignantly plunges on,—again, ever again, about six charges in all;—but do not break the English lines: one of them (regiment Mestre-de-Camp, raised to a paroxysm) does once get through, across the first line, but is blown back in dreadful circumstances by the second. After which they give it up, as a thing that cannot be done. And rush rearward, hither, thither, the whole seventy-five squadrons of them; and 'between their two wings of infantry, are seen boiling in complete disorder.'

"This has lasted about an hour: this is essentially the soul of the Fight,—though there wanted not other activities, to right of it and to left, on both sides; artilleries going at a mighty rate on both wings; and counter-artilleries (superlative practice 'by Captain Phillips' on our right wing); Broglio cannonading Wangenheim very loudly, but with little harm done or suffered, on their right wing. Wangenheim is watchful of that gap between Ferdinand and him, till it close itself sufficiently. Their right wing Infantry did once make some attempt there; but the Prussian Horse—(always a small body of Prussians serve in this Allied Army)—shot out, and in a brilliant manner swept them home again. Artillery, and that pretty charge of Prussian Horse, are all one remembers, except this of the English and Hanover Foot in the centre : 'an unsurpassable thing,' says Tempelhof (though it so easily might have been a fatal!)—which has set Contades's centre boiling, and reduced Contades altogether to water, as it were. Contades said bitterly : 'I have seen what I never thought to be possible,—a single line of infantry break through three lines of cavalry, ranked in order of battle, and tumble them to ruin!'

"This was the feat, this hour's work in the centre, the essential soul of the Fight:—and had Lord George Sackville, General of the Horse, come on when galloped for and bidden, here had been such a ruin, say all judges, as seldom came upon an Army. Lord George,—everlasting disgrace and sorrow on the name

- a a. Contades's Camp. b b. Broglio's Camp, c c. Ferdinand's position, night of July 31st.
d d. Wangenheim's position, night of July 31st.
e e. Ferdinand's Line of Battle.
f f. French Line of Battle.
g. French Cavalry. A. English Infantry,
i. English and Hanoverian Cavalry, under Sackville.

of him,—could not see his way to coming on; delayed, haggled; would not even let Granby, his lieutenant, come; not for a second Adjutant, not for a third; never came on at all; but rode to the Prince, asking, 'How am I to come on?' Who, with a politeness I can never enough admire, did not instantly kill him, but answered, in mild tone, 'Milord, the opportunity is now past!' Whereby Contades escaped ruin, and was only beaten. By about 10 in the morning, all was over. When a man's centre is gone to water, no part of him is far from the fluid state. Contades retreated into his rabbit-hole by those nineteen bridges,—well tormented, they say, by Captain Phillip's artillery, till he got beyond the knolls again. Broglio, who had never been in musket-fire at all, but had merely barked on Wangenheim all morning, instead of biting, covered the retreat, and withdrew into Minden. And we are a beaten Army,—thanks to Lord George, not an annihilated one. Our loss being only 7,086 (with heavy guns, colours, cavalry flags and the like); theirs being 2,822,—full half of it falling on those rash Six Battalions.¹

“And what is this one hears from Gohfeld in the evening? The Hereditary Prince, busy there on us during the very hours of Minden, has blown our rearguard division to the winds there;—and we must move southward, one and all of us, without a moment’s delay! Out of this rabbit-hole the retreat by rearward is through a difficult country, the Westphalian Gates so-called: fatal to Varus’s Legions long ago. Contades got under way that very night; lost most of his baggage, all his conquest, that shadow-conquest, of Hanover, and more than all his glories (Versailles shrieking on him, ‘Resign you; let Broglie be chief’);—and, on the whole, jumbled homeward hither and thither, gravitating towards the Rhine, nothing but Wesel to depend on in those parts, as heretofore. Broglie retreated Frankfurt-way, also as usual, though not quite so far; and at Versailles had clearly the victory. Zealous Belleisle could not protect his Contades; it it not known whether he privately blamed Contades or blamed Broglie for loss of Minden. Zealous old man, what a loss to himself withal had Minden been! That shadow-conquest of Hanover is quite vanished: and worse, in Ferdinand’s spoil were certain Letters from Belleisle to Contades, inculcating strange things:—for example, ‘Il faut faire un désert du Pays’ (all Hessen, I think, lest Ferdinand advance on you) ‘devant l’Armée,’ and the like. Which Ferdinand saw good to publish, and which resounded rather hideously through the general mind.”²

Ignominious Sackville was tried by Court-martial; cash-

¹ Mauvillon, ii. 44–60; Tempelhof, iii. 154–179, &c. &c.: and Proceedings of a Court-Martial, held at the Horse-Guards, 7th–24th March, and 25th March—5th April 1760, in Trial of Lord George Sackville (London, 1760). In Knessebeck, Ferdinand während des Sieben-jährigen Krieges (i. 395), Ferdinand’s Letter to Friedrich of “July 31st;” and (ib. 398–418 and ii. 33–36) many special details about Sackville, and “August 1st.”

² Were taken at Detmold (Tempelhof, iii. 223); Old Newspapers full of Excerpts from them, in the weeks following.

iered, declared incapable of again serving his Majesty "in any military capacity :"—perhaps a mild way of signifying that he wanted the common courage of a soldier? Zealous Majesty, always particular in soldier matters, proclaimed it officially to be "a sentence worse than death ;" and furthermore, with his own royal hand, taking the pen himself, struck out Sackville from the list of Privy Councillors. Proper surely, and indispensable ;—and should have been persisted in, like Fate ; which, in a new Reign, it was not ! For the rest, there was always, and is, something of enigma in Sackville's palpably bad case. It is difficult to think that a Sackville wanted common courage. This Sackville fought duels with propriety ; in private life, he was a surly, domineering kind of fellow, and had no appearance of wanting spirit. It is known, he did not love Duke Ferdinand ; far from it ! May not he have been of peculiarly sour humour, that morning, the luckless fool ; sulky against Ferdinand, and his "saddling at one o'clock ;" sulky against himself, against the world and mankind ; and flabbily disinclined to heroic practices for the moment ? And the moment came ; and the man was not there, except in that foggy flabby and forever ruinous condition ! Archenholtz, alone of Writers, judges that he expressly wanted to spoil the Battle of Minden and Ferdinand's reputation, and to get appointed Commander in his stead. Wonderful ; but may have some vestige of basis, too ! True, this Sackville was as fit to lead the courses of the stars as to lead armies. But such a Sackville has ambition, and, what is fatally more peculiar to him, a chance of unfolding it ;—any blockhead has an ambition capable, if you encourage it sufficiently, of running to the infinite. Enough of this particular blockhead ; and may it be long before we see his like again !—

The English Cavalry was in a rage with Sackville. Of the English Infantry, Historians say, what is not now much heard of in this Country, "That these unsurpassable Six" (in industrious valour unsurpassable, though they mistook orders, and might have fared badly !) "are ever since called the Minden Regiments ; that they are the 12th, 20th, 23d, 25th, 37th and 51st of the British line ; and carry 'Minden' on their colours,"¹—with silent profit, I hope !

Fancy how Pitt's public, lately gloomy and dubious, blazed aloft into joyful certainty again ! Pitt's outlooks have been really gloomy all this season ; nor are the difficulties yet ended, though we hope they will end. Let us add this other bit of Synchronism, which is still of adverse aspect, over Seas ; and will be pungently interesting to Pitt and England, when they come to hear of it.

¹ Kausler, Schlachten, &c. p. 587.

“ Before Quebec, July 31st, 1759. This same Evening, at Quebec, on the other side of the Atlantic,—evening at Quebec, 9 or 10 at night for Contades and his nineteen Bridges,—there is a difficult affair going on. Above and below the Falls of Montmorenci, and their outflow into the St. Lawrence : attempt on General Wolfe’s part to penetrate through upon the French, under Marquis de Montcalm, French Commander-in-chief, and to get a stroke at Quebec and him. From the south side of the St. Lawrence, nothing can be done upon Quebec, such the distance over. From Isle d’Orléans and the north side, it is also impossible hitherto. Easy enough to batter the Lower Town, from your ships and redoubts : but the High Town towers aloft on its sheer pinnacles, inaccessible even to cannon ; looks down on the skilfullest British Admiral and Fleet, as if with an air of indifference,—trying him on dark nights with fire-ships, fire-rafts, the cunningest kinds of pyrotechny, which he skilfully tows aside.

“ A strenuous thing, this of Wolfe’s ; though an unsuccessful. Towards evening, the end of it ; all Quebec assembled on the southern ramparts, witnessing with intense interest ; the sublime Falls of Montmorenci gushing on, totally indifferent. For about a month past, General Wolfe, with the proper equipments, and about 10,000 men, naval and military, who was expressly selected by Pitt to besiege Quebec, and is dying to succeed, has been trying every scheme to get into contact with it :—to no purpose, so lofty, chasmy, rocky is the ground, cut by mountainous precipices and torrent streams, branches of the grand St. Lawrence River ; so skilfully taken advantage of by Montcalm and his people, who are at home here, and in regulars nearly equal Wolfe, not to speak of Savages and Canadians. Wolfe’s plan of the 31st was not ill laid ; and the execution has been zealous, seamen and landmen alike of willing mind ;—but it met with accidents. Accidents in boating ; then a still worse accident on landing ; the regiment of grenadiers, which crossed below the Falls, having, so soon as landed, rushed off on the redoubt there on their own score, without waiting for the two brigades that were to cross and coöperate above the Falls! Which cut Wolfe to the heart; and induced him, especially as the tide was making again, to give up the enterprise altogether, and recal everybody, while it was yet time.' Wolfe is strict in discipline; loves the willing mind, none more, and can kindle it among those about him; but he loves discipline withal, and knows how fatal the too willing may be. For six weeks more, there is toil on the back of toil everywhere for poor Wolfe. He falls into fevers, into miseries, almost into broken heart;—nothing sure to him but that of doing his own poor utmost to the very death. After six weeks, we shall perhaps hear of him again. Gliding swiftly towards death; but also towards victory and the goal of all his wishes."

And now, after this flight half round the world, it is time we return to Oder Country, and a Friedrich on the edge of formidable things there. Next day after Beeskow, where we left him, he duly arrived at Müllrose; was joined by Wedell there, August 6th; and is now at Wulkow,—“encamped between Lebus and Wulkow,” as we hear elsewhere;—quite in the environs of Frankfurt, and of great events.

Friedrich to Graf von Finckenstein (Second Note).

Wulkow, 8th August 1759.

“If you hear of firing tomorrow, don't be surprised; it is our rejoicing for the Battle of Minden. I believe I shall have to keep you in suspense some days yet. I have many arrangements to make; I find great difficulties to surmount,—and it is required to save our Country, not to lose it: I ought both to be more prudent and more enterprising than ever. In a word, I will do and undertake whatever I find feasible and possible. With all that, I see myself in the necessity of making haste, to check the designs Haddick may have on Berlin. Adieu, mon cher. In a little, you will have either a De Profundis or a Te Deum.—F.”

¹ Gentleman's Magazine for 1759, pp. 470–3; Thackeray, i. 438.

² Œuvres de Frédéric, xxv. 305, 306.

CHAPTER IV.

BATTLE OF KUNERSDORF.

SUNDAY July 29th, at Frankfurt-on-Oder divine worship was broken in upon, and the poor City thrown into consternation, by actual advent, or as good as advent, of the Russians: "On the Crossen road, close by; coming, come!" And they did undeniably appear, next morning, in force; on the opposite, eastern or Kunersdorf side of the River, on the top of the Oder-Dam there; and demanded instant admission, under penalty of general death by fire.

Within the Town stood Major Arnim, a Veteran of those parts, with 400 militia; these, with their muskets and with two cannon, are the only defence of Frankfurt. The Town has Gates; but its walls, I doubt, are mainly garden-walls and house-walls. On the eastern side, the River, especially if you have cannon on the Bridge, gives it something of protection; but on the western and all other sides, it is overhung by heights. This Frankfurt, like its bigger Namesake on the Mayn, is known as a busy trading place, its Fairs much frequented in those Eastern parts; and is believed by the Russians to be far richer than it is. The reader, as there happens to be ocular testimony extant,¹ may like to see a little how they behaved there:

"Arnim, taking survey of the Russian party, values it, or what he can see of it, at 1,000" (they really were 6,000); "keeps his Drawbridge up; and answers stoutly enough, 'No.' Upon which, from the Oder-Dam, there flies off one fiery grenado: one and no more,—which alighted in the house of 'Mrs. Thielicke, a Baker's Widow, who was standing at the door;'—killed poor Mrs. Thielicke, blew the house considerably to wreck, but did not set fire to it. Arnim, all the

¹ Johann Ludwig Kriele, Schlacht bei Kunersdorf, mit &c. (Berlin, 1801) Kriele was subsequent Pastor in the Parish, an excellent intelligent man: has compiled in brief form, with an elaborate Chart too, a clear account of everything, in the Battle and before and after it.

Magistrates intreating him for the love of Heaven to leave them, is secretly shoving off his two cannon to the Northern Gate; and in fact, is making his packages with full speed: 'Push for Cüstrin,' thinks Arnim, 'and save selves and cannon, since no good is to be done here!'

"It was about 11 A.M. when the Thielicke grenado fell: obstinate Arnim would by no means go; only packed all the faster. A second summons came: still, No. For the third and last time the Russians then summon: 'Grenadoes, a hundred more of them lie ready, unless—!' 'We will, we will; O merciful servant of Czarish Majesty!' passionately signify the Magistrates. But Arnim is still negative, still keeps the Bridge up. One of the hundred does go, by way of foretaste: this lighted 'near the Ober-Kirche, in the chimney of the Town-Musikus;' brought the chimney crashing down on him" (fancy a man with some fineness of ear); "tore the house a good deal to pieces, but again did not set it on fire. 'Your obstinate Town can be bombarded, then,—cannot it?' observes the Russian Messenger.—'Give us Free Withdrawal!' proposes Arnim. 'No; you to be Prisoners of War; Town at Czarish Majesty's discretion.' 'Never!' answers Arnim (to the outward ear).—'Go; oh, for the love of Heaven, go!' cry all Official people.

"Arnim, deaf to clamour, but steadily diligent in getting ready, does at last go; through the Lebus Suburb, quick march; steady, yet at his best step;—taking the Town-keys in his pocket, and leaving the Drawbridge up. One is sorry for poor Arnim and his 400 militia; whose conduct was perfect, under difficulties and alarms; but proved unsuccessful. The terrified Magistrates, finding their Keys gone, and the conflagrative Russians at their gates, got blacksmiths on the instant; smote down, by chisel and mallet, the locked Drawbridge, smote open the Gates: 'Enter, O gracious Sirs; and may Czarish Majesty have mercy on us!' So that Arnim had small start for marchers on foot; and was overtaken about half-way. Would not yield still, though the odds were overwhelming; drew himself out on the best ground discoverable; made hot resistance; hot and skilful; but in vain. About six in the evening, Arnim and Party were brought back, Prisoners, to Frankfurt again,—self, surviving men, cannons and all (self in a wounded state);—and 'were locked in various Brewhouses;' little of careful surgery, I should fear. Poor Arnim; man could do no more; and he has been unfortunate."

It is by no means our intention to describe the Iliad of miseries, the agitations, terrors and disquietudes, the tribulation and utter harrowing to despair, which poor Frankfurt underwent, incessantly from that day forward, for about five weeks to come. "The furnishings of victual" (Russian stock quite out) "were to an inconceivable amount; surrender of arms, of linens, cloths, of everything useful to a hungry Army; above all things, of horses, so that at last there were but four horses left in all Frankfurt; and"—But we must not go into details.

"On the second day, besides all this," what will be significant of it all, "there was exacted 'ransom of 600,000 thalers (90,000*l.*), or you shall be delivered to the Cossacks!' Frankfurt has not above 12,000 inhabitants within its bounds; here is a sudden poll-tax of 7*l.* 10*s.* per head. Frankfurt has not such a sum; the most rigorous collection did not yield above the tenth part of it. And more than once those sanguinary vagabonds were openly drawn out, pitch-link in hand: 'The 90,000*l.* or—!' Civic-Presidency Office in Frankfurt was not a bed of roses. The poor Magistrates rushed distractedly about; wrung out moneys to the last drop; moneys, and in the end plate from those that had it; went in tearful deputation to General Soltikof,—a severe proud kind of man, capable perhaps of being flattered,—who usually locked them up instead. Magistrates were locked in Russian ward, at one time, for almost a week; sat in the blazing sun; if you try for the shade of a tree, the sentry handles arms upon you;—and were like to die. To me, Kriele, it is a miracle how the most of us lived; nay we never really wanted food, so kind was Providence, so generous our poor neighbours out of all the Towns round. The utmost of money that could be raised was 6,000*l.*; nothing but some little of plate, and our Bill for the remainder. Soltikof, a high kind of gentleman, saw at last how it stood; let the Magistrates out of ward; sent back the plate—'Nothing of that!'—nay Czarish Majesty was herself generous; and forgave the Bill, on our petition, next Year. Cossacks, indeed, were a plunderous wild crew; but the Russians kept them mostly without the gates. The regular Russians were civil and orderly, officers and men,—greatly beyond the Austrians in behaviour."¹ By these few traits conceive Frankfurt : this, now forgotten in most books, is a background on which things were transacted still memorable to everybody.

¹ Kriele, Schlacht bei Kunersdorf, pp. 1-15 (in compressed state).

"Friday, August 3d, General Loudon came to hand : arrived early, in the Guben " (or Western) "Suburb, his 18,000 and he. In high spirits, naturally, and somewhat exultant to have evaded Friedrich ; but found a reception that surprised him. The Russians had been living in the hope of junction ; but still more vividly in that of meal. 'Auxiliaries ; humph, —only 18,000 of them ; how much welcomer had been as many hundredweights of meal !' Loudon had pushed his baggage direct into Frankfurt ; and likewise a requisition of such and such proviants, weights of meal and the like, in exuberant amount, to be furnished straightway by the City : neither of which procedures would the Russians hear of for a moment. 'Out with you !' said they roughly to the baggage-people : 'quarter in the Guben Suburb, or where you like ; not here !' And with regard to the requisition of proviant, they answered in a scornful angry key, 'Proviand ? You too without it ? You have not brought us meal, according to covenant ; instead of meal, you bring us 18,000 new eaters, most of them on horseback, —Satan thank you ! From Frankfurt be very certain you can get no ounce of meal ; Frankfurt is our own poor meal-bag, dreadfully scanty : stay outside, and feed where and how you can !'

"All this, Loudon, though of hot temper, easily capable of rising to the fierce point, had to endure in silence, for the common interest. Loudon's own table is furnished from Frankfurt : no other Austrian man's : all others have to shift how they can. Sad requisitioning needed, and sad plunder to supplement it : the Austrian behaviour was very bad, say the Frankfurters ; 'in particular, they had burnt gradually all the corn-mills in the country ; within many miles not one mill standing when they left us, —and four horses all the conveyance-power we had. Soltikof lodges in great pomp, much soldiery and cannon parading before his doors ; not an undignified man, or an inhuman or essentially foolish, but very high in his ways, and distasteful to Austrian dignitaries."

The Russian Army lies mainly across Oder ; encamped on the Judenberg, and eastward there, along the Heights, near three miles, to Kunersdorf, and beyond. They expect Friedrich at the gates of Frankfurt shortly ; know well that they cannot defend Frankfurt. They calculate that Friedrich will attack them in their Judenberg Encampment, but hope they are nearly ready for him there. Loudon, from the Guben Suburb, will hasten across, at any moment;—welcome on such fighting occasion, though ill seen when the question is of eating! The Russians have their Wagenburg on an Island southward, farther up the River; they have three Pontoon Bridges leading thither, a free retreat should they be beaten. And in the mean while are entrenching themselves, as only Daun would,—cannon and redoubts all round those Heights;—and except it be screwing Frankfurt to do its impossible duty, and carting provender with all the horses except four, have not much farther to do but wait till the King come. Which will be speedily, it is probable!—

Wednesday August 8th, Russian and Austrian Generals, a cheerful party of them, had rendezvoused at Fischers Mühle; a Mill not yet burnt, and a pleasant Tavern as well; in one of the prettiest valleys in the Western Environs;—intending to dine there, and have a pleasant day. But the Miller's Boy runs in upon them, wide-eyed, "Himmel und Erde, Prussian Hussars!" It was in verity Prussian Hussars; the King of Prussia with them in person. He is come out reconnoitering,—the day after his arrival in those parts. The pleasuring Generals, Russian and Austrian, sprang to horseback, at their swiftest,—hope of dinner gone futile, except to the intervening Prussian Hussars;—and would have all been captured, but for that Miller's Boy; whose Mill too was burnt before long. This gallop home of the undined Generals into Frankfurt was the first news we poor Frankfurters had of the King's arrival.

The King has been punctual to his reckoning: he picked up Wedell at Müllrose,—not too cordial to Wedell's people: "None of you speak to those beaten wretches," ordered he; "till perhaps they wipe off their Züllichau 'stain!'" On the 7th, Friedrich advanced to Frankfurt neighbourhood; took Camp between Wulkow and Lebus;—and has just been out reconnoitering. And has raised, fancy what emotion in poor Frankfurt lying under its nightmare! "Next day, August 9th, from Wulkow-Lebus hand, we" of Frankfurt "heard a great firing ; cannon-salvoes, musket-volleys : ‘Nothing of fight,’ the Russian Officers told us ; ‘it is the King of Prussia doing joy-fire for Minden,’ of which we till now knew nothing.”

Friedrich, on survey of this Russian-Austrian Army, some 90,000 in number, with such posts, artilleries, advantages, judges that he, counting only 40,000, is not strong enough. And indeed had so anticipated, and already judged ; and, accordingly, has Finck on march hitherward again,—Berlin must take its risk, Saxony must shift for itself in the interim. Finck is due in two days,—not here at Lebus precisely, but at another place appointed ; Finck will raise him to 50,000 ; and then business can begin ! Contrary to Russian expectation, Friedrich does not attack Frankfurt ; seems quite quiet in his cantonments ;—he is quietly (if one knew it) making preparations farther down the River. About Reitwein, between this and Cüstrin, there arrangements are proceeding, by no means of a showy sort.

The Russian-Austrian Army quits Frankfurt, leaving only some hundreds of garrison : Loudon moves across, Soltikof across ; to the Oder-Dam and farther ; and lie, powerfully entrenched, on those Kunersdorf Heights, and sandy Moorlands, which go eastward at right-angles to Oder-Dam. One of the strongest Camps imaginable. All round there, to beyond Kunersdorf and back again, near three miles each way, they have a ring of redoubts, and artillery without end. And lie there, in order of battle, or nearly so ; ready for Friedrich, when he shall attack, through Frankfurt or otherwise. They face to the North (Reitwein way, as it happens) ; to their rear, and indeed to their front, only not so close, are woods and intricate wilds. Loudon has the left flank ; that is to say, Loudon’s left-hand is towards the Oder-Dam and Frankfurt ; he lies at the Rothe Vorwerk, (“Red Grange,” a Farmstead much mentioned just now) ; rather to north-westward of the Jew Hill and Jew Churchyard (Judenberg and Judenkirchhof, likewise much mentioned) ; and in advance of the general Mass. Soltikof’s headquarter, I rather understand, is on the right wing ; probably in Kunersdorf itself, or beyond that Village ; there, at least, our highly important Russian right-wing is ; there, elaborately fortified ; and, half a mile farther, ends,—on the edge of steep dells ; the Russian brink of which is strongly fringed with cannon, while beyond, on the farther brink, they have built an abatis ; so making assurance doubly sure. Looking to the northward, all these 90,000 ; their left rather southward of Frankfurt Bridge, over which Friedrich will probably arrive. Leftward, somewhat to rearward, they have bridges of their own ; should anything sinister befall ; three bridges which lead into that Oder Island, and the Russian Wagenburg there.

August 10th, Finck, punctual to time, arrives in the neighbourhood of Reitwein (which is some ten miles down-stream from Lebus, from Frankfurt perhaps fifteen) ; Friedrich, the same day, is there before him ; eager to complete the Bridges, and get to business. One Bridge is of pontoons ; one of “Oder-boats, floated up from Cüstrin.” Bridges are not begun till nightfall, lest eyes be abroad ; are ready in the minimum of time. And so, during the same night of the 10th, all the Infantry, with their artilleries and battle-furnitures, pour over in two columns ; the Cavalry, at the due point of time, riding by a ford, short way to the right. And at four, in the gray of the August morning (Saturday 11th August 1759), all persons and things find themselves correctly across : ranked there, in those barren, much indented “Pasture-grounds of Göritz” or of Oetscher ; intending towards Kunersdorf ; ready for unfolding into order of battle there. They leave their heavy baggage at Göritz, Wunsch to guard the Bridges and it ; and, in succinct condition, are all under way. At one in the afternoon, we are got to Leissow and Bischofsee ; scrubby hamlets (as the rest all are), not above two miles from Kunersdorf. The August day is windless, shiny, sultry ; man and horses are weary with the labours, and with the want of sleep : we decide to bivouack here, and rest on the scrubby surface, heather or whatever it is, till tomorrow.

Finck is Vanguard, ahead short way, and with his left on a bit of lake or bog ; the Army is in two lines, with its right on Leissow, and has Cavalry in the kind of wood which there is to rear. Friedrich, having settled the positions, rides out reconnoitering; hither thither, over the Heights of Trettin. "The day being still hot, he suffers considerably from thirst" (it is our one Anecdote), "in that arid tract: at last a Peasant does bring him, direct from the fountain, a jug of pure cold water; whom, lucky man, the King rewarded with a thaler; and not only so, but, the man being intelligent of the localities, took with him to answer questions." Readers too may desire to gain some knowledge of the important ground now under survey.

"Frankfurt, a very ancient Town, not a very beautiful," says my Note, "stands on an alluvium which has been ground down from certain clay Hills on the left bank of Oder. It counted about 12,000 inhabitants in Friedrich's time; has now perhaps about 20,000; not half the bulk of its namesake on the Mayn; but with Three great Fairs annually, and much trade of the rough kind. On this left or west bank of Oder, the country is arable, moderately grassy and umbrageous, the prospect round you not unpleasant; but eastward, over the River, nothing can be more in contrast. Oder is of swift current, of turbid colour, as it rolls under Frankfurt Bridge,—Wooden-Bridge, with Dam Suburbs at the end;—a River treeless, desolate, as you look up and down: which has, evidently, often changed its course, since grinding down that alluvium as site for Frankfurt; and which, though now holding mainly to northward, is still given to be erratic, and destructive on the eastern low grounds,—had not the Frankfurters built an 'Oder Dam' on that side; a broad strong Earth-mound, running for many miles, and confining its floods. Beyond the Dam, there are traces of 'Old Oder (Alte Oder);' and, in fact, Oder, in primeval and in recent time, has gone along, many-streamed; indenting, quarrying, leaving lakelets, quagmires, miscellaneous sandy tumult, at a great rate, on that eastern shore. Making of it one of the unloveliest scenes of chaotic desolation anywhere to be met with;—fallen unlovelier than ever in our own more recent times.

"What we call the Heights of Kunersdorf is a broad Chain of Knolls; coming out, at right angles, or as a kind of spur, from the eastern high grounds; direct towards Oder and Frankfurt. Mill-Hill (Mühlberg) is the root or easternmost part of this spur. From the Mühlberg, over Kunersdorf, to Oder Dam, which is the whole length of the spur, or Chain of Knolls, will be little short of four miles; the breadth of the Chain is nowhere one mile,—which is its grand defect as a Camp: ‘too narrow for manœuvring in.’ Here, atop and on the three sides of this Block of Knolls, was fought the furious Battle of Kunersdorf” (to be fought tomorrow), “one of the most furious ever known. A Block of Knolls memorable ever since.

“To all appearance, it was once some big Island or chain of Islands in the Oder deluges: it is still cut with sudden hollows,—Kuhgrund (Cow-Hollow) Tiefe Weg (Deep Way), and westernmost of all, and most important for us here, Hohle Grund (Big Hollow, let us call it; ‘Loudon’s Hollow’ people subsequently called it);—and is everywhere strangely tumbled up into knolls blunt or sharp, the work of primeval Oder in his rages. In its highest knolls,—of which let readers note specially the Spitzberg, the Mühlberg, the Judenberg,—it rises nowhere to 150 feet; perhaps the general height of it may be about 100. On each side of it, especially on the north, the Country is of most intricate character: bushy, scraggy, with brooklets or muddy oozeings wandering about, especially with a thing called the Hünerfliess (Hen-Floss), which springs in the eastern woods, and has inconceivable difficulty to get into Oder,—if it get at all! This was a sore Floss to Friedrich tomorrow. Hen-Floss struggles, painfully meandering and oozing, along the northern side (sometimes close, sometimes not) of our Chain of Knolls: along the south side of it (in our time, through the middle of it), goes the Highway to Reppen” (“From that Highway will his attack come!” thought the Russians, always till today): “on the north, to Leissow, to Trettin,” where Friedrich is now on survey, “go various wheel-tracks, but no firm road. A most intricate unlovely Country. Withered bent-grasses, heath, perhaps gorse, and on both sides a great deal of straggling Forest-wood, reaching eastward, and especially southward, for many miles.

“For the rest,” to our ill-luck in this place, “the Battlefield of Kunersdorf has had a peculiar fate in the world; that of being blown away by the winds! The then scene of things exists no longer; the descriptions in the Old Books are gone hopelessly irrecongnisable. In our time, there is not anywhere a tract more purely of tumbled sand, than all this between Kunersdorf and Dam Vorstadt; and you judge, without aid of record or tradition, that it is greatly altered for the worse since Friedrich's time,—some rabbit-colony, or other the like insignificance, eating out the roots, till all vegetation died, and the wind got hold and set it dancing;—and that, in 1759, when Russian human beings took it for a Camp, it must have been at least coherent, more or less; covered, held together by some film of scrubby vegetation; not blowing about in every wind as now! Kunersdorf stands with its northern end pushed into that Kuhgrund (Cow-Hollow); which must have then been a grassy place. Eastward of Kunersdorf the ground has still some skin of peat, and sticks together: but westward, all that three miles, it is a mere tumult of sandhills, tumbled about in every direction (so diligent have the conies been, and then the winds); no gullet, or definite cut or hollow, now traceable anywhere, but only an endless imbroglio of twisted sand-heaps and sand-hollows, which continually alter in the wind-storms. Sand wholly, and,—except the strong paved Highway that now runs through it (to Reppen, Meseritz, and the Polish Frontier, and is strongly paved till it get through Kunersdorf),—chaotic wholly; a scene of heaped barrenness and horror, not to be matched but in Sahara; the features of the Battle quite blown away, and indecipherable in our time.

"A hundred years ago, it would have some tattered skin,—of peat, of heather and dwarf whins, with the sand cropping out only here and there. So one has to figure it in Soltikof's day,—before the conies ruined it. Which was not till within the last sixty years, as appears. Kriele's Book (in 1801) still gives no hint of change: the Kuhgrund, which now has nothing but dry sand for the most industrious ruminant, is still a place of succulence and herbage in Kriele's time; 'Deep Way,' where 'at one point two carts could not pass,' was not yet blown out of existence, but has still 'a Well in it' for Kriele; Hohle Grund (since called Loudon's Hollow), with the Jew Hill and Jew Churchyard beyond, seem tolerable enough places to Kriele. Probably not unlike what the surrounding Country still is. A Country of poor villages, and of wild ground, flat generally, and but tolerably green; with lakelets, bushes, scrubs, and intricate meandering little runlets and oozelets; and in general with more of Forest so-called than now is:—this is Kunersdorf Chain of Knolls; Soltikof's Entrenched Camp at present; destined to become very famous in the world, after lying so long obscure under Oder and its rages."

¹ Tourist's Note (Autumn 1852).

From the Knolls of Trettin, that Saturday afternoon, Friedrich takes view of the Russian Camp. All lying bright enough there; from Mülhberg to Judenberg, convenient to our glass; between us and the evening Sun. Batteries most abundant, difficulties great: Soltikof just ahead here, 72,000: Loudon at the Red Grange yonder, on their extreme left, with 18,000 more. An uncommonly strong position for 90,000 against 50,000. One thing strikes Friedrich: On front in this northern side, close by the base of the Russian Camp, runs,—for the present, away from Oder, but intending to join it elsewhere,—a paltry little Brook, “Hen-Floss” so-called, with at least two successive Mills on it (Kleine Mühle, Grosse Mahle); and on the northern shore of it, spilling itself out into a wet waste called Elsbruch (Alder Waste), which is especially notable to Friedrich. Alder Waste? Watery, scrubby; no passage there, thinks Friedrich; which his peasant with the water-jug confirms. “Tell me, however,” inquires Friedrich, with strictness, “From the Red Grange yonder, where General Loudon is, if you wished to get over to the Hohle Grund, or to the Judenberg, would you cross that Hen-Floss?” “It is not crossable, your Majesty; one has to go round quite westward, by the Dam.” “What, from Rothe Vorwerk to Big Hollow, no passage, say you; no crossing?” “None, your Majesty,” insists the Peasant;—who is not aware that the Russians have made one of firm trestles and logs, and use it daily for highway there; an error of some interest to Friedrich within the next twenty-four hours!

Friedrich himself does not know this bit of ground; but there is with him, besides the Peasant, a Major Linden, whose Regiment used to lie in Frankfurt, of whom Friedrich makes minute questioning. Linden answers confidently; has been over all this tract a hundred times; “but knows it only as a hunter,” says Tempelhof,¹ “not as a soldier,” which he ought to have done. His answers are supposed to have misled Friedrich on various points, and done him essential damage.

Friedrich’s view of the case, that evening, is by no means so despondent as might be imagined: he regards the thing as difficult, not as impossible,—and one of his anxieties is, that he be not balked of trying it straightway. Retiring to his hut in Bischofsee, he makes two Dispositions, of admirable clearness, brevity, and calculated for two contingencies: 'That of the enemy retaining his now posture; and That of the enemy making off for Reppen;—which latter does not at all concern us, as matters turned! Of the former the course will unfold itself to us, in practice, shortly. At 2 A.M. Friedrich will be on foot again, at 3 on march again.—The last phenomenon, at Bischofsee this night, is some sudden glare of disastrous light rising over the woods:—"Russians burning Kunersdorf!" as neighbours are sorry to hear. That is the finale of much Russian rearranging and tumbling, this day; that barbarous burning of Kunersdorf, before going to bed. Tomorrow various other poor Villages got burnt by them, which they had better have left standing.

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 186.

The Russians, on hearing that Friedrich was across at Göritz, and coming on them from the north side, not from Frankfurt by the Reppen Highway, were in great agitation. Not thrown into terror, but into manifold haste, knowing what hasty adversary there was. Endless readjustments they have to make; a day of tumultuous business with the Russians, this Saturday 11th, when the news reached them. "They inverted their front" (say all the Books but Friedrich's own): "Not coming by the Reppen Highway, then!" think they. And thereupon changed rear to front, as at Zorndorf, but more elaborately;—which I should not mention, were it not that hereby their late "left wing on the Mühlberg" has, in strict speech, become their "right," and there is ambiguity and discrepancy in some of the Books, should any poor reader take to studying them on this matter. Changed their front; which involves much interior changing; readjusting of batteries and the like. That of burning Kunersdorf was the barbaric winding-up of all this: barbaric, and, in the military sense, absurd; poor Kunersdorf could have been burnt at any moment, if needful; and to the Russians the keeping of it standing was the profitable thing, as an impediment to Friedrich in his advance there. They have laid it flat and permeable: ashes all of it,—except the Church only, which is of stone; not so combustible, and may have uses withal. Has perhaps served as temporary lock-up, prison for the night, to some of those Frankfurt Deputations and their troublesome wailings; and may serve as temporary hospital tomorrow, who knows?

¹ Given in Tempelhof, iii. 182, 183.

Readjustments in the Russian Camp were manifold: but these are as nothing, in the tumultuous business of the day. Carting of their baggage, every article of value, to that safe Wagenburg in the River; driving of cattle,—the very driving of cattle through Frankfurt, endless herds of them, gathered by the Cossacks from far and wide, “lasted for four-and-twenty hours.” Oxen in Frankfurt that day were at the rate of ten shillings per head. Often enough you were offered a full-grown young steer for a loaf of bread; nay the Cossacks, when there was absolutely no bidder, would slaughter down the animal, leave its carcass in the streets, and sell the hide for a tympf,—fivepence (very bad silver at present). Never before or since was seen in Frankfurt such a Saturday, for bellowing and braying, and raging and tumulting, all through the day and through the night; ushering in such a Sunday too!

Sunday about 3 in the morning, Friedrich is on march again,—Russians still in their place; and Disposition First, not Second at all, to be our rule of action! Friedrich, in Two Columns, marches off, eastward through the woods, as if for Reppen quite away from the Russians and their Mühlberg; but intending to circle round at the due point, and come down upon their right flank there (left flank, as he persists to call it), out of the woods, and clasp it in his arms in an impressive, unexpected way. In Two Columns; which are meant, as usual, to be the Two Lines of Battle: Seidlitz, with chosen Cavalry, is at the head of Column First, and will be Left Wing, were we on the ground; Eugen of Würtemberg, closing the rear of Column First, will, he, or Finck and he together, be Right Wing. That is the order of march;—order of battle, we shall find, had to alter itself somewhat, for reasons extremely valid!

Finck with his 12,000 is to keep his present ground ; to have two good batteries got ready, each on its knoll ahead, which shall wait silent in the interim : Finck to ride out reconnoitering, with many General Officers, and to make motions and ostentations ; in a word, to persuade the Russians that here is the Main Army coming on from the north. All which Finck does ; avoiding, as his orders were, any firing, or serious commencement of business, till the King reappear out of the woods. The Russians give Finck and his General Officers a cannon salvo, here and there, without effect, and get no answer. "The King does not see his way, then, after all ?" think the Russians. Their Cossacks go scouring about ; on the southern side, "burn Schwetig and Reipzig," without the least advantage to themselves : most of the Cavalry, and a regiment or two of excellent Austrian Grenadiers, are with Loudon, near the Red Grange, in front of the Russian extreme left ;—but will have stepped over into Big Hollow, at a moment of crisis !

The King's march, through the Forest of Reppen, was nothing like so expeditious as had been expected. There are thickets, intricacies, runlets, boggy oozes ; indifferent to one man well mounted, but vitally important to 30,000 with heavy cannon to bring on. Boggy oozings especially,—there is one dirty stream or floss (Hünerfliess, Hen-Floss) which wanders dismally through those recesses, issuing from the far south, with dirty daughters dismally wandering into it, and others that cannot get into it (being of the lake kind) ; these, in their weary, circling, recircling, course towards Oder,—Faule Laacke (Foul Lake, Lüther-mere, as it were), Foul Bridge, Swine's Nook (Schweinebucht), and many others,—occasion endless difficulty. Whether Major Linden was shot that day, or what became of him after, I do not know : but it was pity he had not studied the ground with a soldier's eye instead of a hunter's ! Plumping suddenly, at last, upon Hen-Floss itself, Friedrich has to turn angularly ; angularly, which occasions great delay : the heavy cannon (wall-guns brought from Cüstrin) have twelve horses each, and cannot turn among the trees, but have to be unyoked, re-yoked, turned round by hand :—in short, it was eight in the morning before Friedrich arrived at the edge of the wood, on the Klosterberg, Walckberg, and other woody Bergs or knolls, within reach of Mühlberg, and behind the preliminary abatis there (abatis which was rather of service to him than otherwise) ; —and began privately building his batteries.

At eight o'clock he, with Column First, which is now becoming Line First (centre of Line First, if we reckon Finck as right-wing), is there ; busy in that manner : Column Second, which was to have been Rear Line, is still a pretty way behind ; and has many difficulties before it gets into Kunersdorf neighbourhood, or can (having wriggled itself into a kind of left-wing) coöperate on the Russian Position from the south side. On the north side, Finck has been ready these five hours.—Friedrich speeds the building of his batteries : “Silent, too ; the Russians have not yet noticed us !” By degrees the Russians do notice something ; shoot out Cossacks to reconnoitre. Cossacks in quantity ; who are so insolent, and venture so very near, our gunners on the north battery give them a blast of satisfactory grape-shot : one and then another, four blasts in all, satisfactory to the gunner mind,—till the King's self, with a look, with a voice, came galloping : “Silence, will you !” The Russians took no offence ; still considering Finck to be the main thing, and Friedrich some scout party,—till at last,

Half-past eleven, everything being ready on the Walck Hill, Friedrich's batteries opened there, in a sudden and volcanic way. Volcanically answered by the Russians, as soon as possible ; who have 72 guns on this Mühlberg, and are nothing loth. Upon whom Finck's battery is opening from the north, withal : Friedrich has 60 cannon hereabouts ; on the Walckberg, on the Little Spitzberg (called Seidlitz Hill ever since) ; all playing diligently on the head and south shoulder of this Mühlberg : while Finck's battery opens on the north shoulder (could he but get near enough). Volcanic to a degree, all these ; nor are the Russians wanting, though they get more and more astonished : Tempelhof, who was in it, says he never, except at Torgau next Year, heard a louder cannonade. Loud exceedingly ; and more or less appalling to the Russian imagination : but not destructive in proportion ; the distance being too considerable,—“1,950 paces at the nearest,” as Tempelhof has since ascertained by measuring. Friedrich’s two batteries, however, as they took the Russians in the flank or by enfilade, did good execution. “The Russian guns were ill-pointed ; the Russian batteries wrong built ; batteries so built as did not allow them sight of the Hollow they were meant to defend.”¹

After above half an hour of this, Friedrich orders storm of the Mühlberg : Forward on it, with what of enfilading it has had ! Eight grenadier Battalions, a chosen vanguard appointed for the work (names of Battalions all given, and deathless in the Prussian War-Annals), tramp forth on this service : cross the abatis, which the Russian grenadoes have mostly burnt ; down into the Hollow. Steady as planets ; “with a precision and coherency,” says Tempelhof, “which even on the parade-ground would have deserved praises. Once well in the Hollow, they suffer nothing ; though the blind Russian fire, going all over their heads, rages threefold :” suffered nothing in the Hollow ; nor till they reached almost the brow of the Mühlberg, and were within a hundred steps of the Russian guns. These were the critical steps, these final ones ; such torrents of grape-shot and musket-shot and sheer death bursting out, here at last, upon the Eight Battalions, as they come above ground. Who advanced, unwavering, all the faster,—speed one’s only safety. They poured, into the Russian gunners and musketry battalions, one volley of choicest quality, which had a shaking effect ; then, with level bayonets, plunge on the batteries : which are all empty before we can leap into them ; artillery-men, musketeer battalions, all on wing ; general whirlpool spreading. And so, in ten minutes, the Mühlberg and its guns are ours. Ever since Zorndorf, an idea had got abroad, says Tempelhof, that the Russians would die instead of yielding ; but it proved far otherwise here. Down as far as Kunersdorf, which may be about a mile westward, the Russians are all in a whirl ; at best hanging in tatters and clumps, their Officers struggling against the flight ; "mixed groups you would see huddled together a hundred men deep." The Russian left wing is beaten : had we our cannon up here, our cavalry up here, the Russian Army were in a bad way !

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 186, 187.

This is a glorious beginning ; completed, I think, as far almost as Kunersdorf by one o'clock : and could the iron continue to be struck while it is at white heat as now, the result were as good as certain. That was Friedrich's calculation : but circumstances which he had not counted on, some which he could not count on, sadly retarded the matter. His Left Wing (Rear Line, which should now have been Left Wing) from southward, his Right Wing from northward, and Finck farther west, were now on the instant to have simultaneously closed upon the beaten Russians, and crushed them altogether. The Right Wing, conquerors of the Muhlberg, are here : but neither Finck nor the Left can be simultaneous with them. Finck and his artillery are much retarded with the Flosses and poor single Bridges ; and of the Left Wing, there are only some Vanguard Regiments capable of helping ("who drove out the Russians from Kunersdorf Churchyard," as their first feat),—no Main Body yet for a long while. Such impediments, such intricacies of bog and bush ! The entire Wing does at last get to the south-east of Kunersdorf, free of the wood ; but finds (contrary to Linden with his hunter eye) an intricate meshwork of meres and straggling lakes, two of them in the burnt Village itself ; no passing of these except on narrow isthmuses, which necessitate change of rank and rechange ; and our Left Wing cannot, with all its industry, "march up," that is, arrive at the enemy in fighting line, without the painfullest delays.

And then the getting forward of our cannon ! On the Muhlberg itself the seventy-two Russian guns, "owing to difference of calibre," or artillery-men know what, cannot be used by us : a few light guns, Tempelhof to one of them, a poor four in all, with perhaps 100 shot to each, did, by the King's order, hasten to the top of the Muhlberg ; and never did Tempelhof see a finer chance for artillery than there. Soft sloping ground, with Russians simmering ahead of you, all the way down to Kunersdorf, a mile long : by horizontal pointing, you had such reboundings (ricochets) ; and carried beautiful execution ! Tempelhof soon spent his hundred shots : but it was not at once that any of our sixty heavy guns could be got up thither. Twelve horses to each : fancy it, and what baffling delays here and elsewhere :—and how the Russian whirlpool was settling more and more, in the interim ! And had, in part, settled ; in part, got through to the rear, and been replaced by fresh troops !

Friedrich's activities, and suppressed and insuppressible impatiences in this interval, are also conceivable, though not on record for us. The swiftest of men ; tied down, in this manner, with the blaze of perfect victory ahead, were the moments not running out ! Slower or faster, he thinks (I suppose), the victory is his ; and that he must possess his soul till things do arrive. It was in one and more of those embargoed intervals that he wrote to Berlin¹ (which is waiting, as if for life or death, the issue of this scene, sixty miles distant) : “ Russians beaten ; rejoice with me ! ” Four successive couriers, I believe, with messages to that effect ; and at last, a Fifth with dolefully contrary news !—

In proportion as the cannon and other necessities gradually got in, the Fight flamed up from its embers more and more : and there ensued,—the Russians being now ranked again (fronting eastward now) “ in many lines,” and very fierce,—a second still deadlier bout ; Friedrich furiously diligent on their front and right flank ; Finck, from the Alder Waste, battering and charging (uphill, and under difficulties from those Flosses and single Bridges) on their left flank. This too, after long deadly efforts on the Prussian part, ended again clearly in their favour ; their enemies broken a second time, and driven not only out of Kunersdorf and the Kuhgrund, but some say almost to the foot of the Judenberg,—what can only be very partially true. Broken portions of the Russian left flank,—some of Finck's people, in their victorious wrath, may have chased these very far : but it is certain the general Russian mass rallied again a long way short of the Judenberg ;—though, the ground being all obliterated by the rabbits and the winds, nobody can now know with exactitude where.

¹ Prenae, ii. 212 n.

And indeed the Battle, from this point onwards, becomes blurred and confused to us, only its grosser features visible henceforth. Where the “Big Spitzberg” was (so terribly important soon), nobody can now tell me, except from maps. Loudon’s motions too are obscure, though important. I believe his grenadiers had not yet been in the fire ; but am certain they are now come out of Big Hollow ; fresh for the rescue ; and have taken front rank in this Second Rally that is made. Loudon’s Cavalry, Loudon himself has in hand, and waits with them in a fit place. He has 18,000 fresh men ; and an eye like few others on a field of war. Loudon’s 18,000 are fresh : of the Prussians that can by no means be said. I should judge it must be three of the afternoon. The day is windless, blazing ; one of the hottest August days ; and “nobody, for twelve hours past, could command a drink of water :” very fresh the poor Prussians cannot be ! They have done two bouts of excellent fighting ; tumbled the Russians well back, stormed many batteries ; and taken in all 180 cannon.

At this stage, it appears, Finck and many Generals, Seidlitz among the others, were of opinion that, in present circumstances, with troops so tired, and the enemy nearly certain to draw off, if permitted, here had been enough for one day, and that there ought to be pause till tomorrow. Friedrich knew well the need of rest ; but Friedrich, impatient of things half-done, especially of Russians half-beaten, would not listen to this proposal ; which was reckoned upon him as a grave and tragic fault, all the rest of his life ; though favourable judges, who were on the ground, Tempelhof for one,¹ are willing to prove that pausing here,—at the point we had really got to, a little beyond the Kuhgrund, namely ; and not a couple of miles westward, at the foot of the Jew Hill, where vague rumour puts us,—was not feasible or reasonable. Friedrich which a universal feeling shivers through the Prussian heart, "Hope ended, then!"—and their solid ranks rustle everywhere; and melt into one wild deluge, ebbing from the place as fast as it can.

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 194.

It is towards six o'clock; the sweltering Sun is now fallen low and veiled; gray evening sinking over those wastes "N'y a-t-il donc pas un bougre de boulet qui puisse m'atteindre (Is there not one b— of a ball that can reach me, then)?" exclaimed Friedrich, in his despair. Such a day he had never thought to see. The pillar of the State, the Prussian Army itself, gone to chaos in this manner. Friedrich still passionately struggles, exhorts, commands, entreats even with tears, "Children, don't forsake me, in this pinch (Kinder, verlasset heute mich, euren König, euren Vater, nicht!)!"¹—but all ears are deaf. On the Mühlberg, one regiment still stood by their guns, covering the retreat. But the retreat is more and more a flight; "no Prussian Army was ever seen in such a state." At the Bridges of that Hen-Floss, there was such a crowding, all our guns got jammed; and had to be left, 165 of them of various calibre, and the whole of the Russian 180 that were once in our hands. Had the chase been vigorous, this Prussian Army had been heard of no more. But beyond the Mühlberg, there was little or no pursuit; through the wood the Army, all in chaos, but without molestation otherwise, made for its Oder Bridges by the way it had come.²

Friedrich was among the last to quit the ground. He seemed stupefied by the excess of his emotions; in no haste to go; uncertain whether he would go at all. His Adjutants were about him, and a small party of Zeithen Hussars under Captain Prittwitz. Wild swarms of Cossacks approached the place. "Prittwitz, ich bin verloren (Prittwitz, I am lost)!" remarked he. "Nein, Ihre Majestät!" answered Prittwitz with enthusiasm; charged fiercely, he and his few, into the swarms of Cossacks ; cut them about, held them at bay, or sent them elsewhere, while the Adjutants seized Friedrich's bridle, and galloped off with him. At Oetscher and the Bridges, Friedrich found of his late Army not quite 3,000 men. Even Wunsch is not there till next morning. Wunsch with his Party had, early in the afternoon, laid hold of Frankfurt, as ordered ; made the garrison prisoners, blocked the Oder Bridge ; poor Frankfurt tremulously thanking Heaven for him, and for such an omen. In spite of their Wagenburg and these Pontoon-Bridges, it appears, there would have been no retreat for the Russians except into Wunsch's cannon : Wagenburg way, latish in the afternoon, there was such a scramble of runaways and retreating baggage, all was jammed into impassability ; scarcely could a single man get through. In case of defeat, the Russian Army would have had no chance but surrender or extermination.' At dark, however, Wunsch had summons, so truculent in style, he knew what it meant ; and answering in words peremptorily, "No," with a like emphasis, privately got ready again, and at midnight disappeared. Got to Reitwein without accident.

¹ Kriele, p. 169.

² Tempelhof, iii. 179-200; Retzow, ii. 80-115: in Seyfarth, Dezlagen, ii. 589-598, Bericht von der am 12 August 1759 bey Kunersdorf vorgefallenen Schlacht (Official); and Id. 598-603, Beschreibung der etc. (by a Private Hand): lucidly accurate both.

Friedrich found at Oetscher nothing but huts full of poor wounded men, and their miseries and surgeries ;—he took shelter, himself, in a hut "which had been plundered by Cossacks" (in the past days), but which had fewer wounded than others, and could be furnished with some bundles of dry straw. Kriele has a pretty Anecdote, with names and particulars, of two poor Lieutenants, who were lying on the floor, as he entered this hut. They had lain there for many hours ; the Surgeons thinking them desperate ; which Friedrich did not. "Ach Kinder, Alas, children, you are badly wounded, then ?" "Ja, your Majesty : but how goes the Battle ?" (Answer, evasive on this point) : "Are you bandaged, though ? Have you been let blood ?" "Nein, Euer Majestät, kein Teufel will uns verbinden (Not a devil of them would bandage us) !" Upon which there is a Surgeon instantly brought ; reprimanded for neglect : " Desperate, say you ? These are young fellows ; feel that hand, and that ; no fever there : Nature in such cases does wonders ! " Upon which the leech had to perform his function ; and the poor young fellows were saved,—and did new fighting, and got new wounds, and had Pensions when the War ended.¹ This appears to have been Friedrich's first work in that hut at Oetscher. Here next is a Third Autograph to Finckenstein, written in that hut, probably the first of several Official things there :

' Tempelhof, iii. 194 : in Retzow (ii. 110) is some dubious traditionary stuff on the matter.

The King to Graf von Finckenstein (at Berlin) : Third Note.

Oetscher, " 12th August," 1759.

" I attacked the Enemy this morning about eleven ; we beat him back to the Judenkirchhof (Jew Churchyard,"—a mistake, but now of no moment), " near Frankfurt. All my troops came into action, and have done wonders. I reassembled them three times ; at length, I was myself nearly taken prisoner ; and we had to quit the Field. My coat is riddled with bullets, two horses were killed under me ;—my misfortune is that I am still alive. Our loss is very considerable. Of an Army of 48,000 men, I have, at this moment while I write, not more than 3,000 together ; and am no longer master of my forces. In Berlin you will do well to think of your safety. It is a great calamity ; and I will not survive it : the consequences of this Battle will be worse than the Battle itself. I have no resources more ; and, to confess the truth, I hold all for lost. I will not survive the destruction of my Country. Farewell forever (Adieu pour jamais).—F."²

Another thing, of the same tragic character, is that of handing over this Army to Finck's charge. Order there is to Finck of that tenor : and along with it the following notable Autograph,—a Friedrich taking leave both of Kingship and of life. The Autograph exists ; but has no date,—date of the Order would probably be still Oetscher, 12th August ; date of the Autograph, Reitwein (across the River), next day.

¹ Kriele, pp. 169, 170 ; and in all the Anecdote-Books.

² In orig. " ce 12," no other date (Œuvres de Frédéric, xxv. 306).

Friedrich to Lieutenant-General Finck (at Oetscher or Reitwein).

"General Finck gets a difficult commission ; the unlucky Army which I give up to him is no longer in condition to make head against the Russians. Haddick will now start for Berlin, perhaps Loudon too ; if General Finck go after these, the Russians will fall on his rear ; if he continue on the Oder, he gets Haddick on his flank (so krigt er den Hadek diss Seit) :—however, I believe, should Loudon go for Berlin, he might attack Loudon, and try to beat him : this, if it succeeded, would be a stand against misfortune, and hold matters up. Time gained is much, in these desperate circumstances. The news from Torgau and Dresden, Cöper my Secretary" (Cöper mein Segreter, kind of lieutenant to Eichel') "will send him. You (Er) must inform my Brother" (Prince Henri) "of everything ; whom I have declared Generalissimo of the Army. To repair this bad luck altogether, is not possible : but what my Brother shall command, must be done :—the Army swears to my Nephew" (King henceforth).

"This is all the advice, in these unhappy circumstances, I am in a condition to give. Had I still had resources, I would have stayed by them (so wehre ich darbei geblieben).—FRIEDRICH."

All this done, the wearied Friedrich flung himself into his truss of dry straw ; and was seen sound asleep there, a single sentry at the door, by some high Generals that ventured to look in. On the morrow he crossed to Reitwein ; by tomorrow night, there had 23,000 of his fugitives come in to him ;—but this is now to be Finck's affair, not his ! That day, too (for the Paper seems to be misdated), he signed, and despatched to Schmettau, Commandant in Dresden, a Missive, which proved more fatal than either of the others ; and brought, or helped to bring, very bitter fruits for him, before long.

To Lieutenant-General von Schmellau (at Dresden).

"Reitwein, 14th" (probably 13th) "August 1759.

"You will perhaps have heard of the Check" (l'Echec, Kunersdorf to wit!) "I have met with him from the Russian ¹ See Preuss, i. 340, iii. 442.

² Exact Copy, two exact Copies, in Preuss (i. 450, and again, ii. 215).

Army on the 13th" (12th, if you had the Almanac at hand) "of this month. Though at bottom our affairs in regard to the Enemy here are not desperate, I find I shall not now be able to make any detachment for your assistance. Should the Austrians attempt anything against Dresden, therefore, you will see if there are means of maintaining yourself; failing which, it will behove you to try and obtain a favourable Capitulation,—to wit, Liberty to withdraw, with the whole Garrison, Moneys, Magazines, Hospital and all that we have at Dresden, either to Berlin or elsewhere, so as to join some Corps of my Troops.

"As a fit of illness" (maladie, alas!) "has come on me,—which I do not think will have dangerous results,—I have for the present left the command of my Troops to Lieutenant-General von Finck; whose Orders you are to execute as if coming to you directly from myself. On this I pray God to have you in his holy and worthy keeping.—F."¹

* At Berlin, on this 13th,—with the Five Couriers coming in successively (and not in the order of their despatch, but the fatal Fifth arriving some time ahead of the Fourth, who still spoke of progress and victory),—there was such a day as Sulzer (ach mein lieber Sulzer!) had never seen in the world. "Above 50,000 human beings on the Palace Esplanade and streets about; swaying hither and thither, in agony of expectation, in alternate paroxysm of joy and of terror and woe; often enough the opposite paroxysms simultaneous in the different groups, and men crushed down in despair met by men leaping into the air for very gladness:" Sulzer (whose sympathy is of very æsthetic type) "would not, for any consideration, have missed such a scene." The "scene" is much obliged to you, mein Lieber!—

Practically we find, in Rödenbeck, or straggling elsewhere, this Note: "On the Day after Kunersdorf, Queen and Court fly to Magdeburg: this is their second flight. Their first was on Haddick's Visit, October 1757; but after Rossbach they soon returned, and Berlin and the Court were then extremely gay: different gentlemen, French and others of every Nation, fallen prisoners, made the Queen's soirees the finest in the world for splendour and variety, at that time."¹

¹ Preuss, ii. Urkundenbuch, p. 43.

² Briefe der Schmeitzer Bodmer, Sulzer, Gessner; aus Gleim's literarischen Nachlasse: herausgegeben von Wilhelm Korte (Zürich, 1804), pp. 316-319.

One other Note we save, for the sake of poor Major Kleist, "Poet of the Spring," as he was then called. A valiant, punctual Soldier, and with a turn for Literature as well; who wrote really pleasant fine things, new at that time and rapturously welcome, though too much in the sentimental vein for the times which have followed. Major Kleist,—there is a General Kleist, a Colonel Kleist of the Green Hussars (called Grüne Kleist, a terrible cutting fellow):—this is not Grüne Kleist; this is the Poet of The Spring; whose fate at Kunersdorf made a tragic impression in all intelligent circles of Teutschland. Here is Kriele's Note (abridged):

"Christian Ewald von Kleist, 'Poet of the Spring'" (a Pommern gentleman, now in his forty-fourth year), "was of Finck's Division; had come on, after those Eight Battalions took the first Russian battery" (that is Mühlberg); "and had been assisting, with zeal, at the taking of three other batteries, regardless of twelve contusions, which he gradually got. At the third battery, he was farther badly hurt on the left arm and the right. Took his Colonel's place nevertheless, whom he now saw fall; led the regiment mutig forward on the fourth battery. A case-shot smashed his right leg to pieces; he fell from his horse" (hour not given, shall we say 3 P.M.); "sank, exclaiming, 'Kinder, My children, don't forsake your King!' and fainted there. Was carried to rear and leftward; laid down on some dry spot in the Elsbruch, not far from the Kuhgrund, and a Surgeon brought. The Surgeon, while examining, was torn away by case-shot: Kleist lay bleeding without help. A friend of his, Pfau" (who told Kriele), "one of Finck's Generals, came riding that way: Kleist called to him; asked how the Battle went; uncommonly glad to hear we are still progressive. Pfau undertook, and tried his utmost, for a carriage to Kleist; did send one of Finck's own carriages; but after such delays that the Prussians were now yielding: poor Kleist's had become Russian ground, and the carriage could not get in.

"Kleist lay helpless; no luck worse than his. In the evening, Cossacks came round him; stript him stark naked; threw him, face foremost, into the nearest swampy place, and went their way. One of these devils had something so absurd and Teniers-like in the face of him, that Kleist, in his pains, could not help laughing at remembrance of it. In the night some Russian Hussars, human and not Cossack, found Kleist in this situation; took him to a dry place; put a cloak over him, kindled a watch-fire for themselves, and gave him water and bread. Towards morning they hastened away, throwing an 8 groshen stück" (nine-penny piece, shilling, say half-crown) "on his cloak,—with human farewell. But Cossacks again came; again stript him naked and bare. Towards noon on the 13th, Kleist contrived to attract some Russian Cavalry troop passing that way, and got speech of the Captain (one Fackelberg, a German); who at once set about helping him;—and had him actually sent into Frankfurt, in a carriage, that evening. To the House of a Professor Nikolai; where was plenty of surgery and watchful affection. After near thirty hours of such a lair, his wounds seemed still curable; there was hope for ten days. In the tenth night (22d-23d August), the shivered pieces of bone disunited themselves; cut an artery,—which, after many trials, could not be tied. August 24th, at 2 in the morning, he died.—Great sorrow. August 26th, there was soldier's funeral; poor Kleist's coffin borne by twelve Russian grenadiers; very many Russian Officers attending, who had come from the Camp for that end; one Russian Staff-Officer of them unbuckling his own sword to lay on the bier, as there was want of one. King Friedrich had Kleist's Portrait hung in the Garnison Kirche. Freemason Lodge, in 1788, set up a monument to him,"¹—which stands on the Frankfurt pavement, and is now in sadly ruinous state.

¹ Rödénbeck, i. 390; &c. &c.

The Prussian loss, in this Battle, was, besides all the cannon and field-equipages: 6,000 killed, 13,000 wounded (of which latter 2,000 badly, who fell to the Russians as prisoners); in all, about 19,000 men. Nor was the Russian loss much lighter; of Russians and Austrians together, near 18,000, as Tempelhof counts: "which will not surprise your Majesty," reports Soltikof to his Czarina; "who are aware that the King of Prussia sells his defeats at a dear rate." And privately Soltikof was heard to say, "Let me fight but another such Victory, and I may go to Petersburg with the news of it myself, with the staff in my hand." The joy at Petersburg, striving not to be braggart or immodest, was solemn, steady and superlative ; a great feat indeed for Russia, this Victory over such a King,—though a kind of grudge, that it was due to Loudon, dwelt, in spite of Loudon's politic silence on that point, unpleasantly in the background. The chase they had shamefully neglected. It is said, certain Russian Officers, who had charge of that business, stepped into a peasant's cottage to consult on it ; contrived somehow to find tolerable liquor there ; and sat drinking instead.¹

¹ Kriele, pp. 39-43.

CHAPTER V.

SAXONY WITHOUT DEFENCE : SCHMETTAU SURRENDERS DRESDEN.

FRIEDRICH's despair did not last quite four days. On the fourth day,—day after leaving Reitwein,—there is this little Document, which still exists, of more comfortable tenor : "My dear Major-General von Wunsch,—Your letter of the 16th to Lieutenant-General von Finck punctually arrived here : and for the future, as I am now recovered from my illness, you have to address your Reports directly to Myself.—F." Finding that, except Tottleben, warily reconnoitering with a few Cossacks, no Russians showed themselves at Reitwein ; that the Russians were encamping and entrenching on the Wine-Hills south of Frankfurt, not meaning anything immediate,—he took heart again ; ranked his 23,000 ; sent for General Kleist from Pommern with his anti-Swedish handful (leave the Swedes alone, as usual in time of crisis) ; considered that artilleries and furnishings could come to him from Berlin, which is but 50 miles ; that there still lay possibility ahead, and that, though only a miracle could save him, he would try it to the very last.

A great relief, this of coming to oneself again ! "Till death, then ;—rage on, ye elements, and black savageries !” Friedrich’s humour is not despondent, now or afterwards ; though, at this time, it is very sad, very angry, and, as it were, scorning even to hope : but he is, at all times, of beautifully practical turn ; and has, in his very despair, a sobriety of eyesight, and a fixed steadiness of holding to his purpose, which are of rare quality. His utterances to D’Argens, about this time and onward,—brief hints, spontaneous, almost unconscious,—give curious testimony of his glooms and moody humours. Of which the reader shall see something. For the present, he is in deep indignation with his poor Troops, among other miseries. “ Actual running away ! ” he will have it to be ; and takes no account of thirst, hunger, heat, utter weariness and physical impossibility ! This lasts for some weeks. But in general there is nothing of this injustice to those about him. In general, nothing even of gloom is manifested ; on the contrary, cheerfulness, brisk hope, a strangely continual succession of hopes (mostly illusory) ;—though within there is traceable very great sorrow, weariness and misery. A fixed darkness, as of Erebus, is grown habitual to him ; but is strictly shut up, little of it shown to others, or even, in a sense, to himself. He is as a traveller overtaken by the Night and its tempests and rain-deluges, but refusing to pause ; who is wetted to the bone, and does not care farther for rain. A traveller grown familiar with the howling solitudes ; aware that the Storm-winds do not pity, that darkness is the dead Earth’s Shadow :—a most lone soul of man ; but continually toiling forward, as if the brightest goal and heaven were near and in view.

¹ Preuss, ii. 217.

² "Madlitz," on the road to Fürstenwalde, "17th August:" in Preuss, Friedrich der Grosse ; eine historische Portrait-Skizze (kind of Lecture, so let us call it, if again citing it ; Lecture delivered, on Friedrich's Birthday, to Majesty and Staff-Officers as Audience, Berlin, 24th January 1855), p. 18.

Once more the world was certain of Friedrich’s ruin ;—Friedrich himself we have seen certain of it, for some few desperate hours :—but the world and he, as had been repeatedly the world’s case, were both disappointed. Intrinsically there could be little doubt but Friedrich’s enemies might now have ruined him, had they been diligent about it. Now again, and now more than ever, they have the winning-post in sight. At small distance is the goal and purpose of all these four-years battlings and marchings, and ten-years subterranean plottings and intrigues. He himself says deliberately, "They had only to give him the finishing stroke (coup-de-grâce)."¹ But they never gave him that stroke; could not do it, though heartily desirous. Which was, and is, matter of surprise to an observant public.

The cause of failure may be considered to have been, in good part, Daun and his cunctations. Daun's zeal was unquestionable; ardent and continual is Daun's desire to succeed: but to try it at his own risk was beyond his power. He expected always to succeed by help of others: and to show them an example, and go vigorously to work himself, was what he never could resolve on. Could play old Fabius Cunctator, it would seem; and never was that part less wanted than now! Under such a Chief Figure, the "incoherency of action," instead of diminishing, as Friedrich had feared, rose daily towards its maximum; and latterly became extreme. The old Lernean Hydra had many heads; but they belonged all to one body. The many heads of this Anti-Friedrich Hydra had withal each its own body, and separate set of notions and advantages. Friedrich was at least a unity; his whole strength going one way, and at all moments, under his own sole command. The value of this circumstance is incalculable; this is the saving-clause of Pitt and his England (Pitt also a despotic sovereign, though a temporary one); this, second only to Friedrich's great gifts from Nature, and the noble use he makes of them, is above all others the circumstance that saved him in such a duel with the Hydras.

On the back of Kunersdorf, accordingly, there was not only no finishing stroke upon Friedrich, but, for two months, no stroke or serious attempt whatever in those neighbourhoods where Friedrich is. There are four Armies hereabouts: The Grand Russian, hanging by Frankfurt; Friedrich at Fürstenwalde (whitherward he marched from Reitwein, August 16th), at Fürstenwalde, or farther south, guarding Berlin ;—then, unhurt yet by battle of any kind, there are the Grand Daunish or Mark-Lissa Army, and Prince Henri's of Schmöttseifen. Of which latter Two the hitchings and manœuverings from time to time become vivid, and never altogether cease ; but in no case come to anything. Above two-months scientific flourishing of weapons, strategic counter-dancing ; but no stroke struck, or result achieved, except on Daun's part irreparable waste of time :—all readers would feel it inhuman to be burdened with any notice of such things. One march of Prince Henri's, which was of a famous and decisive character, we will attend to, when it comes, that is, were the end of September at hand : the rest must be imagined as a general strategic dance in those frontier parts,—Silesia to rearward on one side, the Lausitz and Frankfurt on the other,—and must go on, silently for most part, in the background of the reader's fancy. Indeed, Saxony is the scene of action ; Friedrich, Henri, Soltikof, Daun, comparatively inactive, for the next six weeks and more.

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, v. 20.

Some days before Kunersdorf, Daun personally, with I will forget how many thousands, had made a move to northward from Mark-Lissa, 60 miles or so, through Sagan Country ; and lies about Priebus, waiting there ever since. Priebus is some 40 miles north of Görlitz, about 60 west of Glogau, south of Frankfurt 80. This is where the Master-Smith, having various irons in the fire, may be handiest for clutching them out, and forging at them, as they become successively hot. Daun, as Master-Smith, has at least three objects in view. The first is, as always, Reconquest of Silesia : this is obstructed by Prince Henri, who sits, watchful on the threshold, at Schmöttseifen yonder. The second is, as last year, Capture of Dresden : which is much the more feasible at present,—there being, except the Garrisons, no Prussian force whatever in Saxony ; and a Reichs Army now actually there at last, after its long haggling about its Magazines ; and above all, a Friedrich with his hands full elsewhere. To keep Friedrich's hands full,—in other words, to keep the Russians sticking to him,—that is the third object : or indeed we may call it the first, second and third ; for Daun is well aware that unless Soltikof can manage to keep Friedrich busy, Silesia, Saxony and all else becomes impossible.

Ever since the fortunate junction of Loudon with Soltikof, Daun has sat, and still sits, expectant; elaborately calculative, gathering Magazines in different parts, planting out-parties, this way, that way, with an eye to these three objects, all or each,—especially to the third object, which he discerns to be all and each. Daun was elaborately calculative with these views: but to try any military action, upon Prince Henri for example, or bestir himself otherwise than in driving provender forward, and marching detachments hither and thither to the potentially fit and fittest posts, was not in Daun's way,—so much the worse for Daun, in his present course of enterprise.

Prince Henri had lain quiet at Schmöttseifen, waiting his Brother's adventure; did not hear the least tidings of him till six days after Kunersdorf, and then only by rumour; hideous, and though still dubious, too much of it probable! On the very day of Kunersdorf, Henri had begun effecting some improvements on his right flank,—always a sharply strategic, most expert creature,—and made a great many motions, which would be unintelligible here.¹ Henri feels now that upon him lies a world of duties; and foremost of all, the instant duty of endeavouring to open communication with his Brother. Many marches, in consequence; much intricate marching and manœuvring between Daun and him: of which, when we come to Henri's great march (of 25th September), there may be again some hint.

For the present, let readers take their Map, and endeavour to fix the following dates and localities in their mind. Here, in summary, are the King's various marches, and Two successive Encampments, two only, during those Six Weeks of forced inaction, while he is obliged to stand watching the Russians, and to witness so many complicacies and disasters in the distance; which he struggles much and fruitlessly to hinder or help:

¹ Detailed, every fibre of them (as is the soul-confusing custom there), in Tempelhof, iii. 228 et seq.

"Encampment First (Fürstenwalde, August 18th-30th). Friedrich left Reitwein, August 16th; 17th, he is at Madlitz" (Note to Wunsch written there, which we read); "18th, to Fürstenwalde, and encamp. Fürstenwalde is on the Spree, straight between Frankfurt and Berlin; 25 miles from the former, 35 from the latter. Here for near a fortnight. At first, much in alarm about the Russians and Berlin; but gradually ascertaining that the Russians intend nothing.

"In effect, all this while Soltikof lay at Lossow, 10 miles south of Frankfurt, with his right on Oder; totally motionless, inactive, except listening, often rather gloomily, to Daun's and Montalembert's suasive eloquences and advices,—and once, August 22d, in the little Town of Guben, holding Conference with Daun" (of which by and by). "In consequence of which, August 28th, Soltikof and his Russians and Austrians got under weigh again; southward, but only a few marches: first to Müllrose, then Lieberose:—whom, the instant he heard of their movements, Friedrich, August 30th, hastened to follow; but had not to follow very far. Whereupon ensues

"Encampment Second (Waldau, till September 15th). August 30th, Friedrich, we say, rose from Fürstenwalde; hastened to follow this Russian movement, and keep within wind of it: up the valley of the Spree; first to Müllrose neighbourhood" (where the Russians, loitering some time, spoiled the canal locks of the Friedrich-Wilhelm Canal, if nothing more),—"thence to Lieberose neighbourhood; Waldau, the King's new place of encampment,—Waldau, with Spree Forest to rear of it: silent both parties till September 15th, when Soltikof did fairly march, not towards Berlin, but quite in the opposite direction."

By the middle of September, when the Russians did get on foot, and moved eastward; especially on and after September 25th, when Henri made his famous March westward; then it will behove us to return to Friedrich and these localities. For the present, we must turn to Saxony, where, and not here, the scene of action is. Take, farther, only the following bits of Note, which will now be readable. First, these Utterances to D'Argens; direct glimpses into the heavy-laden, indeed haggard and nearly desperate inner man of Friedrich, during the first three weeks after his defeat at Kunersdorf:

The King to Marquis D'Argens (at Berlin): Six Notes.

1°. "Madlitz" (road from Reitwein to Fürstenwalde), "16th August 1759. We have been unfortunate, my dear Marquis; but not by my fault. The victory was ours, and would even have been a complete one, when our infantry lost patience, and at the wrong moment abandoned the field of battle. The enemy today is on march to Müllrose, to unite with Haddick" (not to Müllrose for ten days yet; Haddick had already got united with them). "The Russian infantry is almost totally destroyed. Of my own wrecks, all that I have been able to assemble amounts to 32,000 men; with these I am pushing on to throw myself across the enemy's road, and either perish or save the Capital. That is not what you" (you Berliners) "will call a deficiency of resolution.

"For the event I cannot answer. If I had more lives than one, I would sacrifice them all to my Country. But if this stroke fail, I think I am clear-scores with her, and that it will be permissible to look a little to myself. There are limits to everything. I support my misfortune; courage not abated by it: but I am well resolved, after this stroke if it fail, to open an outgate for myself" (that small glass-tube which never quits me), "and no longer be the sport of any chance."

2°. Fürstenwalde, 20th August. * * "Remain at Berlin, or retire to Potsdam; in a little while there will come some catastrophe; it is not fit that you suffer by it. If things take a good turn, you can be back to Berlin" (from Potsdam) "in four hours. If ill-luck still pursue us, go to Hanover or to Zelle, where you can provide for your safety.

"I protest to you that, in this late Action, I did what was humanly possible to conquer; but my people"—Oh, your Majesty!

3°. Fürstenwalde, 21st August. * * "The enemy is intrenching himself near Frankfurt; a sign he intends no attempt. If you will do me the pleasure to come out hither, you can in all safety. Bring your bed with you; bring my Cook Noël; and I will have you a little chamber ready. You will be my consolation and my hope."

This day,—let readers mark the circumstance,—Friedrich, in better spirits, detaches Wunsch with some poor 6,000, to try if he can be of help in Saxony; where the Reichs Army, now arrived in force, and with nothing whatever in the field against them, is taking all the Northward Garrison-Towns, and otherwise proceeding at a high rate. Too possibly with an eye towards Dresden itself! Wunsch sets out, August 21st.¹ And we shall hear of him in those Saxon Countries before long.

4°. Fürstenwalde, 22d August. "Yesterday I wrote to you to come; but today I forbid it. Daun is at Kotbus; he is marching on Lüben and Berlin" (nothing like so rash!).—"Fly these unhappy Countries!—This news obliges me again to attack the Russians between here and Frankfurt. You may imagine if this is a desperate resolution. It is the sole hope that remains to me, of not being cut off from Berlin on the one side or the other. I will give the discouraged troops some brandy"—alas!—"but I promise myself nothing of success. My one consolation is that I shall die sword in hand."

5°. Same place and day (after a Letter from D'Argens). "You make the panegyric, mon cher, of any Army that does not deserve any. The soldiers had good limbs to run with, none to attack the enemy." (Alas, your Majesty; after fifteen hours of such marching and fighting!)

"For certain I will fight; but don't flatter yourself about the event. A happy chance alone can help us. Go, in God's name, to Tangermünde" (since the Royal Family went, D'Argens and many Berliners are thinking of flight), "to Tangermünde, where you will be well; and wait there how Destiny shall have disposed of us. I will go to reconnoitre the enemy tomorrow. Next day, if there is anything to do, we will try it. But if the enemy still holds to the Wine-Hills of Frankfurt, I shall never dare to attack him.

"No, the torment of Tantalus, the pains of Prometheus, the doom of Sisyphus, were nothing like what I suffer for the last ten days" (from Kunersdorf till now, when destruction has to be warded off again, and the force wanting.) "Death is sweet in comparison to such a life. Have compassion on me and it: and believe that I still keep to myself a great many evil things, not wishing to afflict or disquiet anybody with them; and that I would not counsel you to fly these unlucky Countries, if I had any ray of hope. Adieu, mon cher."

Four days after, August 25th, from this same Fürstenwalde, the Russians still continuing stagnant, Friedrich despatches, to Schmettau, Commandant of Dresden (by some industrious hand, for the roads are all blocked), a Second Letter, "That Dresden is of the highest moment: that in case of Siege there, relief" (Wunsch, namely, and perhaps more that may follow) "is on the road; and that Schmettau must defend himself to the utmost." Let us hope this Second Missive may counteract the too despondent First, which we read above, should that have produced discouragement in Schmettau!—D'Argens does run to Wolfenbüttel: stays there till September 9th. Nothing more from Friedrich till 4th September, when matters are well cooled again.

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 211.

6°. Waldau, 4th September. "I think Berlin is now in safety; you may return thither. The Barbarians" (Russians) "are in the Lausitz; I keep by the side of them, between them and Berlin, so that there is nothing to fear for the Capital. The imminency of danger is past; but there will still be many bad moments to get through, before reaching the end of the Campaign. These, however, only regard myself; never mind these. My martyrdom will last two months yet; then the snows and the ices will end it."¹

Thus at Fürstenwalde, then at Waldau, keeping guard, forlorn but resolute, against the intrusive Russian-Austrian deluges, Friedrich stands painfully vigilant and expectant,—still for about a fortnight more. With bad news coming to him latterly, as we shall hear. He is in those old moorland Wusterhausen Countries, once so well known under far other circumstances. Thirty years ago, in fine afternoons, we used to gallop with poor Duhan de Jandun, after school-tasks done, towards Mittenwalde, Fürstenwalde and the furzy environs, far and wide; at home, our Sister and Mother waiting with many troubles and many loves, and Papa sleeping, Pan-like, under the shadow of his big tree:—Thirty years ago, ah me, gone like a dream is all that; and there is solitude and desolation and the Russian-Austrian death-deluges instead! These, I suppose, were Friedrich's occasional remembrances; silent always, in this locality and time. The Sorrows of Werter, of the Giaour, of the Dyspeptic Tailor in multifarious forms, are recorded in a copious heart-rending manner, and have had their meed of weeping from a sympathetic Public: but there are still a good few Sorrows which lie wrapt in silence, and have never applied there for an idle tear!—Let us look now into Daun's side of things.

¹ Second Letter is given in Schmettau's Leben, pp. 436, 7.

² Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 78, 82, 83, 85, 86.

Daun, after Negotiation, has an Interview with Soltikof (at Guben, August 22d).—"Daun, who had moved to Priebus, with a view to be nearer Soltikof, had scarcely got his tent pitched there (August 13th), when a breathless horseman rode in, with a Note from Loudon, dated the night before: "King of Prussia beaten, to the very bone, beyond mistake this time,—utterly ruined, if one may judge!" What a vision of the Promised Land! Delighted Daun moves forward, one march, to Triebel on the morrow: to be one march nearer the scene of glory, and endeavour to forge this biggest of the hot irons to advantage.

"At Triebel Soltikof's own account, elucidated by oral messengers, eye-witnesses, and, in short, complete conspectus of this ever-memorable Victory, await the delighted Daun. Who despatches messengers, one and another; Lacy, the first, not succeeding quite: To congratulate with enthusiasm the most illustrious of Generals; who has beaten King Friedrich as none else ever did or could; beaten to the edge of extinction;—especially to urge him upon trampling out this nearly extinct King, before he gleam up again. Soltikof understands the congratulations very well; but as to that of trampling out, snorts an indignant negative: "Nay, you, why don't you try it? Surely it is more your business than my Imperial Mistress's or mine. We have wrenched two victories from him this season. Kay and Kunersdorf have killed near the half of us: go you in, and wrench something!" This is Soltikof's logic; which no messenger of Daun's, Lacy or another, aided by never such melodies and suasions from Montalembert and Loudon, who are permanently diligent that way, can shake.

"And truly it is irrefragable. How can Daun, if himself merely speculative, calculative, hope that Soltikof will continue acting? Men who have come to help you in a heavy job of work, need example. If you wish me to weep, be grieved yourself first of all. Soltikof angrily wipes his countenance at this point, and insists on a few tears from Daun. Without metaphor, Soltikof has shot away all his present ammunition, his staff of bread is quite precarious in these parts; and Soltikof thinks always, 'Is it my business, then, or is it yours?'

"Soltikof has entrenched himself on the Wine-Hills at Losow, comfortably out of Friedrich's way, and contiguous to Oder and the provision-routes; sits there, angrily deaf to the voice of the charmer; nothing to be charmed out of him, but gusts of indignation, instead of consent. A proud, high-going, indignant kind of man, with a will of his own. And sees well enough what is what, in all this symphony of the Lacys, the Montalemberts, and surrounding adorers. Montalembert, who is here this season, our French best man (unprofitable Swedes must put up with an inferior hand), is extremely persuasive, tries all the arts of French rhetoric, but effects nothing. 'To let the Austrians come in for the finishing stroke, —Excellence, it will be to let them gain, in History, a glory which is of your earning. Daun and Austria, not Soltikof and Russia, will be said to have extinguished this pestilent King ; whom History will have to remember !' 'With all my heart,' answers Soltikof ; 'I make the Austrians and History perfectly welcome ! Monsieur, my ammunition is in Posen ; my bread is fallen scarce ; in Frankfurt can you find me one horse more ?' Indignant Soltikof is not to be taken by chaff ; growls now and then, if you stir him to the bottom : 'Why should we, who are volunteer assistants, take all the burden of the work ? I will fall back to Posen, and home to Poland and East Prussen, if this last much longer.'

"Austria has a good deal disgusted these Soltikofs and Russian Chief Officers ;—who are not so stupid as Austria supposes. Austria's steady wish is, 'Let them do their function of cat's-paw for us ; we are here to eat the chestnuts ; not, if we can help it, to burn our own poor fingers for them !' After every Campaign hitherto, Austria has been in use to raise eager accusations at Petersburg ; and get the Apraxins, Fermors into trouble : this is not the way to conciliate Russian General Officers. Austria, taught probably by Daun, now tries the other tack : heaps Soltikof with eulogies, flatteries, magnificent presents. All which Soltikof accepts, but with a full sense of what they mean. An unmanageable Soltikof : his answer always,—'Your turn now to fight a victory ! I will go my ways to Posen again, if you don't.' And, in these current weeks, in Soltikof's audience-room, if anybody were curious about it, we could present a very lively solicitation going on, with answers very gruff and negatory. No suasion of Montalembert, Lacy, and Daun-Embassies, backed by diamond-hilted swords, and splendour of gifts from Vienna itself, able to prevail on the barbarous people.

¹ Choiseul's Letter (not Duc de Choiseul, but Comte, now Minister at Vienna) to Montalembert, "Vienna, 16th August ;" and Montalembert's Answer, "Lieberhansen" (means Lieberose), "31st August 1759 :"
in Montalembert, Correspondance, ii. 58-65.

"Daun at length resolves to go in person ; solicits an Interview with the distinguished Russian Conqueror ; gets it, meets Soltikof at Guben, half-way house between Frankfurt and Triebel ; select suite attending both Excellencies (August 22d) ; and exerts whatever rhetoric is in him on the barbarous man. The barbarous man is stiff as brass ; but Daun comes into all his conditions ; 'Saxony, Silesia,—Excellenz, we have them both within clutch ; such our exquisite angling and manœuvring, in concert with your immortal victory, which truly gives the life-breath to everything. Oh, suffer us to clutch them : keep that King away from us ; and see if they are not ours, Saxony first, Silesia next ! Provisions of meal ? I will myself undertake to furnish bread for you' (though I have to cart it from Bohemia all the way, and am myself terribly off ; but fixed to do the impossible) ; 'ration of bread shall fail no Russian man, while you escort us as protective friend. Towards Saxony first, where the Reichs Army is, and not a Prussian in the field ; the very Garrisons mostly gone by this time. Dresden is to be besieged, within a week ; Dresden itself is ours, if only you please ! Come into the Lausitz with us, Magazines are there, loaves in abundance : Saxony done, Dresden ours, cannot we turn to Silesia together ; besiege Glogau together (I am myself about trying Neisse, by Harsch again) ; capture Glogau as well as Neisse ; and crown the successfullest campaign that ever was ? Oh, Excellenz—!'"—

In a word, Excellenz, strictly fixing that condition of the loaves, consents. Will get ready to leave those Frankfurt Wine-Hills in about a week. "But the loaves, you recollect ; no Bread, no Russian !" Daun returns to Triebel a victorious man,—though with an onerous condition incumbent. Tempelhof, minutely computing, finds that to cart from Bohemia such a cipher of human rations daily into these parts, will surpass all the vehiculatary power of Daun.¹

The "Reichs Army" so-called has entered Saxony, under fine Omens ; does some Feats of Sieging (August 7th-23d),—with an Eye on Dresden as the crowning one.

The Reichs Army, though it had been so tumbled about, in Spring, with such havoc on its magazines and preparations, could not wait to refit itself, except superficially ; and showed face over the Mountains almost earlier than usual. The chance was so unique : a Saxony left to its mere Garrisons,—as it continued to be, for near two months this Year. On such golden opportunity the Reichs Army,—first, in light mischievous precursor parties, who roamed as far as Halle or even as Halberstadt ; then the Army itself, well or ill appointed, under Generalissimo the Prince von Zweibrück,—did come on, winding through Thüringen towards the North-western Towns ; various Austrian Auxiliary-Corps making appearance on the Dresden side. Eight Austrian regiments, as a permanency, are in the Reichs Army itself. Commander, or part Commander, of the eight is (what alone I find noteworthy in them) “Herr General Thomas von Blonquet :” Irish by nation, says a footnote ;¹—sure enough some adventurous “Thomas Plunket,” visible this once, soldiering, in those circumstances ; never heard of by a sympathetic reader before or after. It was while the King was hunting the Haddick-Loudon people in Sagan Country in such vehement fashion, that Zweibrück came trumpeting into Saxony,—King, Prince Henri, and everybody, well occupied otherwise, far away !

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 225.

The Reichs Army has a camp at Naumburg (Rossbach neighbourhood) : and has light troops out in Halle neighbourhood ; which have seized Halle ; are very severe upon Halle, and other places thereabouts, till chased away. August 7th, the Reichs Army begirt Leipzig ; summoned the weak garrison there. It is a Town capable of ruin, but not of defence : “Free-withdrawal,” proposes the Reichs Army,—and upon these terms gets hold of Leipzig, for the time being. Leipzig, Torgau, Wittenberg ; in a fortnight or less, all the Prussian posts in those parts fall to the Reichs Army. Its marchings and siegings, among those North-western places, not one of them capable of standing above a few days’ siege, are worth no mention, except to Parish History : enough that, by little after the middle of August, Zweibrück had got all these places, “Free-withdrawal” the terms for all ; and that, except it be the following feature in their Siege of Torgau, feature mainly Biographic, and belonging to a certain Colonel Wolfersdorf concerned, there is not one of those Sieges now worth a moment's attention from almost any mortal. This is the Torgau feature,—feature of human nature, soldiering under difficulties :

¹ Seyfarth, li. 831 n.

Colonel von Wolfersdorf beautifully defends himself in Torgau (August 9th-14th). Two days after Leipzig was had, there appeared at Torgau a Body of Pandours, 2,000 and more ; who attempted some kind of scalade on Torgau and its small Garrison (of 700 or so),—where are a Magazine, a Hospital and other properties : not capable, by any garrison, of standing regular siege ; but important to defend till you have proper terms offered. The multitudinous Pandours, if I remember, made a rush into the Suburbs, in their usual vociferous way ; but were met by the 700 silent Prussians,—silent except through their fire-arms and field-pieces,—in so eloquent a style as soon convinced the Pandour mind, and sent it travelling again. And in the evening of the same day (August 9th), Colonel Wolfersdorf arrives, as new Commandant, and with reinforcements, small though considerable in the circumstances.

Wolfersdorf, one dimly gathers, had marched from Wittenberg on this errand ; the whole force in Torgau is now of about 3,000, still with only field-cannon, but with a Captain over them ;—who, as is evident, sets himself in a very earnest manner to do his utmost in defence of the place. Next morning Reichs General Kleefeld ("Cloverfield"), with 6 or 8,000 Pandour and Regular, summons Wolfersdorf : "Surrender instantly ; or—!" "We will expect you!" answers Wolfersdorf. Whereupon, same morning (August 10th), general storm ; storm No. 1 : beautifully handled by Wolfersdorf ; who takes it in rear (to its astonishment), as well as in front ; and sends it off in haste. On the morrow, Saturday, a second followed ; and on Sunday a third ; both likewise beautifully handled. This third storm, readers see, was "Sunday, August 12th." a very busy stormful day at Torgau here,—and also, for some others of us, during the heats of Kunersdorf, over the horizon far away ! Wolfersdorf tumbles back all storms ; furthermore makes mischievous sallies : a destructive, skilled person : altogether prompt, fertile in expedients ; and evidently is not to be managed by Kleefeld. So that Prince von Stolberg, Second to supreme Zweibrück himself, has to take it in hand. And,

Monday 13th, at break of day, Stolberg arrives with a train of battering guns, and 6,000 new people; summons Wolfersdorf: "No," as before. Storms him, a fourth time; likewise "No," as before: attacks, thereupon, his Elbe Bridge, and his Redoubt across the River; finds a Wolfersdorf party rush destructively into his rear there. And has to withdraw, and try battering from behind the Elm Dam. Continues this, violently for about two hours; till again Wolfersdorf, whose poor fieldpieces, the only artillery he has, "cannot reach so far with leaden balls" (the iron balls are done, and the powder itself is almost done), manages, by a flank attack, to quench this also. Which produces entire silence, and considerable private reflexion, on the part of indignant Stolberg. Stolberg offers him the favourablest terms devisable: "Withdraw freely, with all your honours, all your properties; only withdraw!" Which Wolfersdorf, his powder and ball being in such a state of ebb, and no relief possible, agrees to; with stipulations very strict as to every particular.¹

Colonel von Wolfersdorf withdraws, also beautifully (August 15th). Accordingly, Wednesday August 15th, at eight in the morning, Wolfersdorf by the Elbe Gate moves out; across Elbe Bridge, and the Redoubt which is on the farther shore yonder. Near this Redoubt, Stolberg and many of his General Officers are waiting to see him go. He goes in state; flags flying, music playing. Battalion Hessen-Cassel, followed by all our Packages, Hospital convalescents, King's Artillery, and whatever is the King's or ours, marches first. Next comes, as rearguard to all this, Battalion Grollmann;—along with which is Wolfersdorf himself, knowing Grollmann for a ticklish article (Saxons mainly): followed on the heel by Battalion Hofmann, and lastly by Battalion Salmuth, trusty Prussians both of these.

Battalion Hessen-Cassel and the Baggages are through the Redoubt, Prince of Stolberg handsomely saluting as saluted. But now, on Battalion Grollmann's coming up, Stolberg's Adjutant cries out with a loud voice of proclamation, many Officers repeating and enforcing: "Whoever is a brave Saxon, whoever is true to his Kaiser, or was of the Reichs Army, let him step out: Durchlaucht will give him protection!" At sound of which Grollmann quivers as if struck by electricity ; and instantly begins dissolving ;—dissolves, in effect, nearly all, and it is in the act of vanishing like a dream ! Wolfersdorf is a prompt man ; and needs to be so. Wolfersdorf, in Olympian rage, instantly stops short : draws pistol : “ I will shoot dead every man that quits rank ! ” vociferates he ; and does, with his pistol, make instant example of one ; inviting every true Prussian to do the like : “ Jägers, Hussars, a ducat for every traitor you shoot down ! ” continues Wolfersdorf (and punctually paid it afterwards) : unable to prevent an almost total dissolution of Grollmann. For some minutes, there is a scene indescribable : storm of vociferation, menace, musket-shot, pistol-shot ; Grollmann disappearing on every side,—“ behind the Redoubt, under the Bridge, into Elbe Boats, under the cloaks of the Croats ; ”—in spite of Wolfersdorf’s Olympian rages and efforts.

¹ In Anonymous of Hamburg (iii. 350) the Capitulation, "August 14th," given in extenso.

At sight of the shooting, Prince Stolberg, a hot man, had said indignantly, “ Herr, that will be dangerous for you (das wird nicht gut gehn) ! ” Wolfersdorf not regarding him a whit ; regarding only Grollmann, and his own hot business of coercing it at a ducat per head. Grollmann gone, and Battalion Hofmann in due sequence come up, Wolfersdorf,—who has sent an Adjutant, with order, “ Hessen-Cassen, halt,”—gives Battalion Hofmann these three words of command : “ Whole Battalion, halt !—Front !—Make ready ! ” (with due simultaneous click of every firelock, on utterance of that last) ;—and turning to Prince Stolberg, with a brow, with a tone of voice : “ Durchlaucht, Article 9 of the Capitulation is express on this point ; ‘ All desertion strictly prohibited ; no deserter to be received either on the Imperial or on the Prussian side ! ’ ” (Durchlaucht silently gives, we suppose, some faint sniff.) “ Since your Durchlaucht does not keep the Capitulation, neither will I regard it farther. I will now take you and your Suite prisoners, return into the Town, and again begin defending myself. Be so good as ride directly into that Redoubt, or I will present, and give fire ! ”

A dangerous moment for the Durchlaucht of Stolberg ; Battalion Salmuth actually taking possession of the wall again ; Hofmann here with its poised firelock on the cock, “ ready ” for that fourth word, as above indicated. A General Lusinsky of Stolberg’s train, master of those Croats, and an Austrian of figure, remarks very seriously : “ Every point of the Capitulation must be kept ! ” Upon which Durchlaucht has to renounce and repent ; eagerly assists in recovering Grollmann, restores it (little the worse, little the fewer); will give Wolfersdorf "command of the Austrian escort you are to have," and every satisfaction and assurance;—wishful only to get rid of Wolfersdorf. Who thereupon marches to Wittenberg, with colours flying again, and a name mentionable ever since.¹

This Wolfersdorf was himself a Pirna Saxon; serving Polish Majesty, as Major, in that Pirna time; perhaps no admirer of "Feldmarschall Brühl" and Company?—at any rate, he took Prussian service, as then offered him; and this is his style of keeping it. A decidedly clever soldier, and comes out, henceforth, more and more as such,—unhappily not for long. Was taken at Maxen, he too, as will be seen. Rose, in after times, to be Lieutenant-General, and a man famous in the Prussian military circles; but given always, they say, to take the straight line (or shortest distance between self and object), in regard to military matters, to recruiting and the like, and thus getting himself into trouble with the Civil Officials.

Wolfersdorf, at Wittenberg or farther on, had a flattering word from the King; applauding his effective procedures at Trogau; and ordering him, should Wittenberg fall (as it did, August 23d), to join Wunsch, who is coming with a small Party to try and help in those destitute localities. Wunsch, the King had detached (21st August), as we heard already. Finck the King finds, farther, that he can detach (from Waldau Country, September 7th);² Russians being so languid, and Saxony fallen into such a perilous predicament.

"Few days after Kunersdorf," says a Note, which should be inserted here, "there had fallen out a small Naval matter, which will be consolatory to Friedrich, and go to the other side of the account, when he hears of it: Kunersdorf was Sunday, August 12th; this was Saturday and Sunday following. Besides their Grand Brest Fleet, With new flat bottoms, and world-famous land-preparations going on at Vannes, for Invasion of proud Albion, all which are at present under

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 201-204; Seyfarth, ii. 562 n., and Beylagen, ii. 587; Militair-Lexikon, iv. 288.

² Tempelhof, iii. 211, 237.

Hawke's strict keeping, the French have, ever since Spring last, a fine subsidiary Fleet at Toulon, of very exultant hopes at one time ; which now come to finis :

"Sea-Fight (properly Sea-Hunt of 200 miles), in the Cadiz Waters, August 18th-19th. The fine Toulon Fleet, which expected at one time, Pitt's ships being so scattered over the world, to be 'mistress of the Mediterranean,' has found itself, on the contrary (such were Pitt's resources and promptitudes), cooped in harbour all Summer ; Boscawen watching it in the usual strict way. No egress possible ; till, in the sultry weather (8th July—4th August), Boscawen's need of fresh provisions, fresh water, and of making some repairs, took him to Gibraltar, and gave the Toulon Fleet a transient opportunity, which it made use of.

"August 17th, at 8 in the evening, Boscawen, at Gibraltar (some of his ships still in dishabille or under repair), was hastily apprised by one of his Frigates, That the Toulon Fleet had sailed ; been seen visibly at Ceuta Point so many hours ago. 'Meaning,' as Boscawen guesses, 'to be through the Straits this very night !' By power of despatch, the dishabille ships were rapidly buttoned together (in about two hours) ; and by 10 p.m. all were under sail. And soon were in hot chase ; the game being now in view,—going at its utmost through the Straits, as anticipated. At 7 next morning (Saturday August 18th) Boscawen got clutch of the Toulon Fleet ; still well east of Cadiz, somewhere in the Trafalgar waters, I should guess. Here Boscawen fought and chased the Toulon Fleet, for 24 hours coming ; drove it finally ashore, at Lagos on the coast of Portugal, with five of its big ships burnt or taken, its crews and other ships flying by land and water, its poor Admiral mortally wounded ; and the Toulon Fleet a ruined article. The wind had been capricious, here fresh, there calm ; now favouring the hunters, now the hunted ; both Fleets had dropped in two. De la Clue, the French Admiral, complained bitterly how his Captains lagged, or shore off and forsook him. Boscawen himself, who for his own share had gone at it eagle-like, was heard grumbling, about want of speed in some people ; and said : 'It is well ; but it might have been better !'

"De la Clue,—fallen long ago from all notions of 'dominating the Mediterranean,'—had modestly intended to get through, on any terms, into the Ocean; might then, if possible, have joined the grand 'Invasion Squadron,' now lying at Brest, till Vannes and the furnishings are ready, or have tried to be troublesome in the rear of Hawke, who is blockading all that. A modest outlook in comparison;—and this is what it also has come to. As for the Grand Invasion Squadron, Admiral Conflans, commanding it, still holds up his head in Brest Harbour, and talks big. Makes little of Rodney's havoc on the Flatbottoms at Havre, 'Will soon have Flatbottoms again; and you shall see!'—if only Hawke, and wind and weather and Fortune, will permit."

¹ Beatson, ii. 813-9 ; ib. iii. 237, 8, De la Clue, the French Admiral's Despatch ;—Boscawen's Despatch, &c., in Gentleman's Magazine, xxix. 434.

Austrian Reichs Army does its crowning Feat (August 26th—September 4th): Diary of what is called the "Siege of Dresden."

Since the first weeks of August there have been Austrian detachments, Wehla's Corps, Brentano's Corps, entering Saxony from the north-east or Daun-ward side, and posting themselves in the strong points looking towards Dresden; waiting there till the Reichs Army should capture its Leipzigs, Torgaus, Wittenbergs, and roll forward from north-west. To all which it is easy to fancy what an impetus was given by Kunersdorf and August 12th; the business, after that, going on double-quick, and pointing to immediate practical industry on Dresden. The Reichs Army hastens to settle its north-western Towns, puts due garrison in each, leaves a 10 or 12,000 movable for general protection, in those parts; and, August 23d, marches for Dresden. There are only some 15,000 left of it now: almost half the Reichs Army drunk up in that manner; were not Daun now speeding forth his Maguire with a fresh 12,000; who is to command the Wehla's and Brentanos as well. And, in effect, to be Austrian Chief, and as regards practical matters, Manager of this important Enterprise,—all-important to Daun just now. Schmettau in Dresden sees clearly what mischief is at hand.

To Daun this Siege of Dresden is the alpha to whatever omegas there may be: he and his Soltikof are to sit waiting this; and can attempt nothing but eating of provender, till this be achieved. As the Siege was really important, though not quite the alpha to all omegas, and has in it curious points and physiognomic traits, we will invite readers to some transient inspection of it,—the rather as there exist ample contemporary Narratives, Diariums, and authentic records to render that possible and easy.¹

“Ever since the rumour of Kunersdorf,” says one Diarium, compiled out of many “in the last two weeks of August, Schmettau’s need of vigilance and diligence has been on the increase, his outlooks becoming grimmer and grimmer. He has a poorish garrison for number (3,700 in all²), and not of the best quality; deserters a good few of them: willing enough for strokes; fighting fellows all, and of adventurous turn, but uncertain as to loyalty in a case of pinch. He has endless stores in the place; for one item, almost a million sterling of ready money. Poor Schmettau, if he knew it, has suddenly become the Leonidas of this Campaign, Dresden its Thermopylæ; and”—But readers can conceive the situation.

“August 20th, Schmettau quits the Neustadt, or northern part of Dresden, which lies beyond the River: unimportant that, and indefensible with garrison not adequate; Schmettau will strengthen the River bank, blow up the Stone Bridge if necessary, and restrict himself to Dresden Proper. The Court is here; Schmettau does not hope that the Court can avert a Siege from him; but he fails not to try, in that way too, and may at least gain time.

“August 25th, He has a Mine put under the main arch of the Bridge: ‘mine ill-made, uncertain of effect,’ reports the Officer whom he sent to inspect it. But it was never tried, the mere rumour of it kept off attacks on that side. Same day, August 25th, Schmettau receives that unfortunate Royal Missive³ written in the dark days of Reitwein, morrow of Kunersdorf (14th or 13th August),” which we read above. “That there is another Letter on the road for him, indicating ‘Relief shall be tried,’ is unknown to Schmettau, and fatally continues unknown. While Schmettau is reading this (Au-past 25th), General Wunsch has been on the road four days : Wunsch and Wolfersdorf with about 8,000, at their quickest pace, and in a fine winged frame of mind withal, are speeding on : will cross Elbe at Meissen tomorrow night,—did Schmettau only know. People say he did, in the way of rumour, understand that Kunersdorf had not been the fatal thing it was thought ; and that efforts would be made by a King like his. In his place, one might have, at least, shot out a spy or two ? But he did not, then or afterwards.

¹ In Tempelhof (iii. 210–216–222), complete and careful Narrative; in Anonymous of Hamburg (iii. 371–377), express “Day-book” by some Eye-witness in Dresden.

² Schmettau’s Leben (by his Son), p. 408.

³ Tempelhof, iii. 208; Schmettau’s Leben (p. 421) has “August 27th.”

“Already, ever since the arrival of Wehla and Brentano in those parts, he has been labouring under many uncertainties ; too many for a Leonidas ! Hanging between Yes and No, even about that of quitting the Neustadt, for example ; carrying over portions of his goods, but never heartily the whole ; unable to resolve ; now lifting visibly the Bridge pavement, then again visibly restoring it ;—and, I think, though the contrary is asserted, he had at last to leave in the Neustadt a good deal of stores, horse-provender and other, not needful to him at present, or impossible to carry, when dubiety got ended. He has put a mine under the Bridge ; but knows it will not go off.

“Schmettau has been in many wars, but this is a case that tries his soldier qualities as none other has ever done. A case of endless intricacy,—if he be quite equal to it ; which perhaps he was not altogether. Nobody every doubted Schmettau's high qualities as a man and captain ; but here are requisite the very highest, and these Schmettau has not. The result was very tragical ; I suppose, a pain to Friedrich all his life after ; and certainly to Schmettau all his. This is Saturday night 25th August : before Wednesday week (September 4th) there will have sad things arrived, irremediable to Schmettau. Had Schmettau decided to defend himself, Dresden had not been taken. What a pity Schmettau had not been spared this Missive, calculated to produce mere doubt ! Whether he could not, and should not, after a ten days of inquiry and new discernment, have been able to read the King's true meaning, as well as the King's momentary humour, in this fatal Document, there is no deciding. Sure enough, he did not read the King's true meaning in it, but only the King's momentary humour ; did not frankly set about defending himself to the death,—or ‘seeing’ in that way ‘whether he could not defend himself,’—with a good capitulation lying in the rear, after he had.

“Sunday, August 26th, Trumpet at the gates. Messenger from Zweibrück is introduced blindfold ; brings formal Summons to Schmettau. Summons duly truculent : ' Resistance vain ; the more you resist, the worse it will be,—and there is a worst ' (that of being delivered to the Croats, and massacred every man), ' of which why should I speak ? Especially if in anything you fail of your duty to the Kur-Prinz ' (Electoral Prince and Heir-Apparent, poor crookbacked young Gentleman, who has an excellent sprightly Wife, a friend of Friedrich's, and daughter of the late Kaiser Karl VII., whom we used so beautifully), ' imagine what your fate will be ! '— To which Schmettau answers : ' Can Durchlaucht think us ignorant of the common rules of behaviour to Persons of that Rank ? For the rest, Durchlaucht knows what our duties here are, and would despise us if we did not do them ; '—and, in short, our answer again is, in polite forms, ' Pooh, pooh ; you may go your way ! ' Upon which the Messenger is blindfolded again ; and Schmettau sets himself in hot earnest to clearing out his goods from the Neustadt ; building with huge inter-twisted cross-beams and stone and earth-masses, a Battery at his own end of the Bridge, batteries on each side of it below and above ;—locks the Gates ; and is passionately busy all Sunday,—though divine service goes on as usual.

"Hardly were the Prussian guns got away, when Croat people in quantity came in, and began building a Battery at their end of the Bridge, the main defence-work being old Prussian meal-barrels, handily filled with earth. ' If you fire one cannon ball across on us,' said Schmettau, ' I will bombard the Neustadt into flame in few minutes ' (I have only to aim at our Hay Magazine yonder) : ' be warned ! ' Nor did they once fire from that side ; Electoral Highness withal and Royal Palace being quite contiguous behind the Prussian Bridge-Battery. Electoral Highness and Household are politely treated, make polite answer to everything ; intend going down into the 'Apotheke' (Kitchen suite), or vaulted part of the Palace, and will lodge there when the cannonade begins.

"This same Sunday, August 26th, Maguire arrived ; and set instantly to building his bridge at Pillnitz, a little way above Dresden : at Uebigau, a little below Dresden, the Reichsfolk have another. Reichsfolk, Zweibrück in person, come all in on Wednesday ; post themselves there, to north and west of the City. What is more important, the siege-guns, a superb stock, are steadily floating, through the Pirn regions, hitherward ; get to hand on Friday next, the fifth day hence.' Korbitz (half way out to Kesselsdorf) is Durchlaucht's headquarter :—Chief General is Durchlaucht, conspicuously he, at least in theory, and shall have all the glory ; though Maguire, glancing on these cannon, were it nothing more, has probably a good deal to say. Maguire too, I observe, takes post on that north or Kesselsdorf side ; contiguous for the Head General. Wehla and Brentano post themselves on the south or up-stream side ; it is they that hand-in the siege-guns : batteries are already everywhere marked out, 13 cannon batteries and 5 howitzer. In short, from the morrow of that truculent Summons, Monday morning to Thursday, there is hot stir of multifarious preparation on Schmettau's part ; and continual pouring in of the hostile force, who are also preparing at the utmost. Thursday, the Siege, if it can be called a Siege, begins. Gradually, and as follows—

"Thursday Morning (August 30th), Schmettau, who is, night and day, 'palisading the River,' and much else,—discloses (that is, Break of Day discloses on his part) to the Dresden public a huge Gallows, black, huge, of impressive aspect ; labelled 'For Plunderers, Mutineers and their Helpers.' The Austrian heavy guns are not yet in battery ; but multitudes of loose Croat people go swarming about everywhere, and there is plentiful firing from such artilleries as they have. This same Thursday morning, two or three battalions of them rush into the Pirna Suburb ; attack the Prussian Guard-parties there. Schmettau instantly despatches Captain Kollas and a Trumpet :—Durchlaucht, have the goodness to recal these Croat parties ; otherwise the Suburb goes into flame ! And directly on the arrival of this Messenger, may it please Durchlaucht. For we have computed the time ; and will not wait beyond what is reasonable for his return ! 'Zweibrück is mere indignation and astonishment ; 'will burn Halle,' burn Quedlinburg, Berlin itself, and utterly ruin the King of Prussia's Dominion in general :—the rejoinder to which is, burning of Pirna Suburb, as predicted ; seventy houses of it, this evening, at six o'clock.

"Onward from which time there is on both sides, especially on Schmettau's, diligent artillery practice ; cannonade kept up wherever Schmettau can see the enemy busy ; enemy responding with what artillery he has :—not much damage done, I should think, though a great deal of noise ; and for one day (Saturday September 1st), our Diarist notes, 'Not safe to walk the streets this day.' But, in effect, the Siege, as they call it,—which fell dead on the fifth day, and was never well alive,—consists mainly of menace and counter-menace, in the way of bargain-making and negotiation ;—and, so far as I can gather, that superb Park of Austrian Artillery, though built into batteries, and talked about in a bullying manner, was not fired from at all.

¹ Tempelhof, p. 210.

² Anonymous of Hamburg, iii. 373.

"Schmettau affects towards the enemy (and towards himself, I dare say) an air of iron firmness ; but internally has no such feeling,—'calls a Council of War,' and the like. Council of War, on sight of that King's Missive, confirms him with one voice : 'Surely, surely, Excellenz ; no defence possible !' Which is a prophecy and a fulfilment, both in one. Why Schmettau did not shoot forth a spy or two, to ascertain for him What, or whether Nothing whatever, was passing outside Dresden ? I never understand ! Beyond his own Walls, the world is a vacancy and blank to Schmettau, and he seems content it should be so.

"Sunday September 2d. Though Schmettau's cannonade was very loud, and had been so all night, Divine Service was held as usual, streets safe again,—Austrians, I suppose, not firing with cannon. About 4 p.m., after a great deal of powder spent, General Maguire, stepping out on Elbe Bridge, blows or beats Appeal, three times ; 'wishes a moment's conversation with his Excellency.' Granted at once ; witnesses attending on both sides. 'Defence is impossible ; in the name of humanity, consider !' urges Maguire. 'Defence to the last man of us is certain,' answers Schmettau, from the teeth outwards ;—but, in the end, engages to put on paper, in case he, by extremity of ill-luck, have at any time to accept terms, what his terms will inflexibly be. Upon which there is 'Armistice till Tomorrow : ' and Maguire, I doubt not, reports joyfully on this feeling of the enemy's pulse. Zweibrück and Maguire are very well aware of what is passing in these neighbourhoods (General Wunsch back at Wittenberg by forced marches ; blew it open in an hour) ; and are growing highly anxious that Dresden on any terms were theirs.

"Monday September 3d, The death-day of the Siege ; an uncommonly busy day,—though Armistice lasted perfect till 3 p.m., and soon came back more perfect than ever. A Siege not killed by cannon, but by medical industry. Let us note with brevity the successive symptoms and appliances. About seven in the morning, Maguire had his Messenger in Dresden, 'Your Excellency's Paper ready ?' 'Nearly ready,' answers

Schmettau ; 'we will send it by a Messenger of our own.' And about eleven of the day, Maguire does get it ;—the same Captain Kollas (whose name we recollect) handing it in ; and statue-like waiting Answer. 'Pshaw, this will never do,' ejaculates Maguire ; 'terms irrationally high !' Captain Kollas 'knows nothing of what is in the Paper ; and is charged only to bring a Written Answer from Excellenz.' Excellenz, before writing, 'will have to consult with Durchlaucht ;' can, however, as if confidentially and from feelings of friendship, 'can assure you, Sir, on my honour, That the Garrison will be delivered to the Croats, and every man of it put to the sword.' 'The Garrison will expect that (wird Das erwarten),' said Kollas, statue-like ; and withdrew, with the proper bow. Something interesting to us in these Military diplomatic passages, with their square-elbowed fashions, and politeness stiff as iron !

"Not till three of the afternoon does the Written Answer reach Schmettau : 'Such Terms never could be accepted.'—'Good,' answers Schmettau : 'To our last breath no others will be offered.' And commences cannonading again, not very violently, but with the order, 'Go on, then, night and day !'

"About 10 at night, General Guasco, a truculent kind of man, whom I have met with up and down, but not admitted to memory, beats Appeal on the Bridge : 'Inform the Commandant that there will now straightway 13 batteries of cannon, and 5 ditto of howitzers open on him, unless he bethinks himself !' Which dreadful message is taken to Schmettau. 'Wish the gentleman good evening,' orders Schmettau ; 'and say, we will answer with 100 guns.' Upon which Guasco vanishes ;—but returns in not many minutes, milder in tone ; requests 'a sight of that Written Paper of Terms again.' 'There it still is,' answers Schmettau, 'not altered, nor ever shall be.' And there is Armistice again :—and the Siege, as turns out, has fired its last shot ; and is painfully expiring in paroxysms of negotiation, which continue a good many hours. Schmettau strives to understand clearly that his terms (of the King's own suggesting, as Schmettau flatters himself) are accepted : nor does Durchlaucht take upon him to refuse in any point ; but he is strangely slow to sign, till hoping to mend matters.

"Much hithering and thithering there was, till 4 next morning (Durchlaucht has important news from Torgau, at that moment) ; till 11 next day ; till 4 in the afternoon and later, —Guasco and others coming with message after message, hasty and conciliatory : ‘Durchlaucht at such a distance, his signature not yet come ; but be patient ; all is right, upon my honour !’ Very great hurry evident on the part of Guasco and Company ; but nothing suspected by Schmettau. Till, dusk or darkness threatening now to supervene, Maguire and Schmettau with respective suites have a Conference on the Bridge,—‘rain falling very heavy.’ Durchlaucht’s signature, Maguire is astonished to say, has not yet come ; but Maguire pledges his honour ‘that all shall be kept without chicane :’ and adds (what to some of us seemed not superfluous afterwards), ‘I am incapable of acting falsely or with chicane.’ In fact, till 9 in the evening there was no signature by Durchlaucht ; but about 6, on such pledge by Maguire of his hand and his honour, the Siege entirely gave up the ghost ; and Dresden belonged to Austria. Tuesday Evening, 4th September 1759 ; Sun just setting, could anybody see him for the rain.

“Schmettau had been over-hasty ; what need had Schmettau of haste ? The terms had not yet got signature, perfection of settlement on every point ; nor were they at all well kept, when they did ! Considerable flurry, temporary blindness, needless hurry, and neglect of symptoms and precautions, must be imputed to poor Schmettau ; whose troubles began from this moment, and went on increasing. The Austrians are already besetting Elbe Bridge ; rooting up the herring-bone balks : and approaching our Blockhouse,—sooner than was expected. But that is nothing. On opening the Pirna Gate, to share it with the Austrians, Friedrich’s Spy (sooner had not been possible to the man) was waiting : who handed Schmettau that Second Letter of Friedrich’s, ‘Courage ; there is relief on the road !’ Poor Schmettau !”

What Captain Kollas and the Prussian Garrison thought of all this, they were perhaps shy of saying, and we at such distance are not informed,—except by one symptom : that of Colonel Hoffman, Schmettau’s Second, whose indignation does become tragically evident. Hoffman, a rugged Prussian veteran, is indignant at the Capitulation itself ; doubly and trebly indignant to find the Austrians on Elbe Bridge, busy raising our Balks and Battery : “How is this, Sir ?” inquires he of Captain Sydow, who is on guard at the Prussian end ; “How dared you make this change, without acquainting the Second in Command? Order out your men, and come along with me to clear the Bridge again!" Sydow hesitates, haggles; indignant Hoffman, growing loud as thunder, pulls out a pistol, fatal-looking to disobedient Sydow; who calls to his men, or whose men spring out uncalled; and shoot Hoffman down,—send two balls through him, so that he died at 8 that night. With noise enough, then and afterwards. Was drunk, said Schmettau's people. Friedrich answered, on report of it: "I think as Hoffman did. If he was 'drunk,' it is pity the Governor and all the Garrison had not been so, to have come to the same judgment as he."¹ Friedrich's unbearable feelings, of grief and indignation, in regard to all this Dresden matter,—which are not expressed except coldly in business form,—can be fancied by all readers. One of the most tragical bits of ill-luck that ever befel him. A very sore stroke, in his present condition; a signal loss and affront. And most of all, unbearable to think how narrowly it has missed being a signal triumph;—missed actually by a single hair's-breadth, which is as good as by a mile, or by a thousand miles!

Soon after 9 o'clock that evening, Durchlaucht in person came rolling through our battery and the herringbone balks, to visit Electoral Highness,—which was not quite the legal time either. Durchlaucht had not been half an hour with Electoral Highness, when a breathless Courier came in: "General Wunsch within ten miles" (took Torgau in no-time, as Durchlaucht well knows, for a week past); "and will be here, before we sleep!" Durchlaucht plunged out, over the herringbone balks again (which many carpenters are busy lifting; and the Electoral Highnesses, in like manner, hurry off to Töplitz that same night, about an hour after. What a Tuesday night! Poor Hoffman is dead at 8 o'clock; the Saxon Royalties, since 11, are galloping for Pirna, for Töplitz; Durchlaucht of Zweibrück we saw hurry off an hour before them,—Capitulation signature not yet dry, and terms of it beginning to be broken ; and Wunsch reported to be within ten miles !

¹ P.S. in Autograph of Letter to Schmettau, "Waldau, 11th September 1759" (Preuss. ii.: Urkundenbuch, p. 45).

The Wunsch report is perfectly correct. Wunsch is at Grossenhayn, this evening ; all in a fiery mood of swiftness, his people and he ;—and indeed it is, by chance, one of Wolfersdorf's impetuosities that has sent the news so fast. Wunsch had been as swift with Torgau as he was with Wittenberg : he blew out the poor Reichs Garrison there, by instant storm, and packed it off to Leipzig, under charge of "an Officer and Trumpet :"—he had, greatly against his will, to rest two days there for a few indispensable cannon from Magdeburg. Cannon once come, Wunsch, burning for deliverance of Dresden, had again started at his swiftest, "Monday 3d September" (death-day of the Siege), "very early."

"He is under 8,000 ; but he is determined to do it ;—and would have done it, think judges, half-thinks Zweibrück himself : such a fire in that Wunsch and his Corps as is very dangerous indeed. At 4 this morning, Zweibrück heard of his being on march : 'numbers uncertain'—(numbers seemingly not the important point,—blows any number of us about our business !)—and since that moment, Zweibrück has driven the capitulation at such a pace ; though the flurried Schmettau suspected nothing.

"Afternoon of Tuesday 4th, Wunsch, approaching Grossenhayn, had detached Wolfersdorf with 100 light horse rightwards to Grödel, a boating Village on Elbe shore, To seek news of Dresden ; also to see if boats are procurable for carrying our artillery up thither. At Grödel, Wolfersdorf finds no boats that will avail : but certain boat-people, new from Dresden, report that no capitulation had been published when they left, but that it was understood to be going on. New spur to Wolfersdorf and Wunsch. Wolfersdorf hears farther in this Village, That there are some 30 Austrian horse in Grossenhayn :—'Possibly these may escape General Wunsch,' thinks Wolfersdorf ; and decides to have them. Takes 30 men of his own ; orders the other 70 to hold rightward, gather what intelligence is going, and follow more leisurely ; and breaks off for the Grossenhayn-Dresden Highway, to intercept those fellows.

"Getting to the highway, Wolfersdorf does see the fellows ; sees also, with what degree of horror I do not know, that there are at least 100 of them against his 30 ! Horror will do nothing for Wolfersdorf, nor are his other 70 now within reach. Putting a bold face on the matter, he commands, Stentor-like, as if it were all a fact : ‘ Grenadiers, march ; Dragoons, to right forwards, wheel ; Hussars, forward : MARCH ! ’—and does terrifically dash forward with the 30 Hussars, or last item of the invoice ; leaving the others to follow. The Austrians draw bridle with amazement ; fire off their carbines ; take to their heels, and do not stop for more. Wolfersdorf captures 68 of them, for behoof of Grossenhayn : and sends the remaining 32 galloping home.¹ Who bring the above news to Durchlaucht of Zweibrück : ‘ 12,000 of them, may it please your Durchlaucht ; such the accounts we had ! ’—Fancy poor Schmettau’s feelings !

“ On the morrow, Dresden was aroused from its sleep by loud firing and battle, audible on the north side of the River ; ‘ before daybreak, and all day.’ It is Wunsch impetuously busy in the woody countries there. Durchlaucht had shot out Generals and Divisions, Brentano, Wehla, this General and then that, to intercept Wunsch : these the fiery Wunsch, —almost as if they had been combustible material coming to quench fire,—repels and dashes back, in a wonderful manner, General after General of them. And is lord of the field all day :—but cannot hear the least word from Dresden ; which is a surprising circumstance.

“ In the afternoon, Wunsch summons Maguire in the Neustadt : ‘ Will answer you in two hours,’ said Maguire. Wunsch thereupon is for attacking their two Pontoon Elbe-Bridges ; still resolute for Dresden,—and orders Wolfersdorf on one of them, the Uebigau Bridge, who finds the enemy lifting it at any rate, and makes them do it faster. But night is now sinking ; from Schmettau not a word or sign. ‘ Silence over there, all day ; not a single cannon to or from,’ say Wunsch and Wolfersdorf to one another. ‘ Schmettau must have capitulated ! ’ conclude they, and withdraw in the night-time, still thunderous if molested ; bivouack at Grossenhayn, after twenty-four hours of continual march and battle, not time even for a snatch of food.²

“ Resting at Grossenhayn, express reaches Wunsch from his Commandant at Torgau : ‘ Kleefeld has come on me from

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 214.

² Bericht von der Action des General-Majors von Wunsch, bey Reichenberg, den 5 September 1759 : in Seyfarth, Bejlagen, ii. 606–608.

Leipzig, with 14,000 ; I cannot long hold out, unless relieved.' Wunsch takes the road again ; two marches, each of twenty miles. Reaches Torgau late ; takes post in the ruins of the North Suburb, finds he must fight Kleefeld. Refreshes his men 'with a keg of wine per Company,' surely a judicious step ; and sends to Wolfersdorf, who has the rearguard, 'Be here with me tomorrow at 10.' Wolfersdorf starts at 4, is here at 10 ; and Wunsch, having scanned Kleefeld and his Position " (a position strong if you are dexterous to manœuvre in it ; capable of being ruinous if you are not,—part of the Position of a bigger Battle of Torgau, which is coming),—"flies at Kleefeld and his 14,000, like a cat-o'-mountain ; takes him on the left flank :—Kleefeld and such overplus of thousands are standing, a little to west-and-south of Torgau, with the Entefang" (a desolate big reedy mere, or Place of Ducks, still offering the idle Torgauer a melancholy sport there) "as a protection to their right ; but with no evolution-talent, or none in comparison to Wunsch's ;—and accordingly are cut to pieces by Wunsch, and blown to the winds, as their fellows have all been."¹

Wunsch, absolute Fate forbidding, could not save Dresden : but he is here lord of the Northern regions again,—nothing but Leipzig now in the enemy's hand ;—and can await Finck, who is on march with a stronger party to begin business here. It is reckoned, there are few more brilliant little bits of Soldiering than this of Wunsch's. All the more, as his men, for most part, were not Prussians, but miscellaneous Foreign spirits, of uncertain fealty : roving fellows, of fighting turn, attracted by Friedrich's fame, and under a Captain who had the art of keeping them in tune. Wunsch has been soldiering, in a diligent though dim miscellaneous way, these five-and-twenty years ; fought in the old Turk Wars, under disastrous Seckendorf,—Wunsch a poor young Würtemberg ensign, visibly busy there (1737–1739), as was this same Schmettau, in the character of staff-officer, far enough apart from Wunsch, at that time !—fought afterwards, in the Bavarian service, in the Dutch, at Roucoux, at Lauffeld, again under disastrous people. Could never, under such, find anything but subaltern work, all this while ; was glad to serve, under the eye of Friedrich, as Colonel of a Free Corps ; which he has done with much diligence and growing distinction : till now, at the long last, his chance does come ; and he shows himself as a real General. Possibly a high career lying ahead ;—a man that may be very valuable to Friedrich, who has now so few such left ? Fate had again decided otherwise for Wunsch ; in what way will be seen before this Campaign ends : “an infernal Campaign,” according to Friedrich, “cette Campagne infernale.”

¹ Hofbericht von der, am 8 September 1759, bey Torgau, vorgefallenen Action : in Seyfarth, Beylagen, ii. 609, 610. Tempelhof, iii. 219–222.

Finck, whom Friedrich had just detached from Waldau (September 6th), with a new 8 or 6,000, to command in chief in those parts, and, along with Wunsch, put Dresden out of risk, as it were,—Finck does at least join Wunsch, as we shall mention in a little. And these Two, with such Wolfersdorfs and people under them, did prove capable of making front against Reichsfolk in great overplus of number. Nor are farther sieges of those Northern Garrisons, but recaptures of them, the news one hears from Saxony henceforth ;—only that Dresden is fatally gone. Irrecoverably, as turned out, and in that unbearable manner. Here is the concluding scene :

Dresden, Saturday September 8th ; Exit Schmettau. “A thousand times over, Schmettau must have asked himself, ‘Why was I in such a hurry ? Without cause for it I, only Maguire having cause !’—The Capitulation had been ended in a huddle, without signature : an unwise Capitulation ; and it was scandalously ill kept. Schmettau was not to have marched till Monday 10th,—six clear days for packing and preparing ;—but, practically, he has to make three serve him ; and to go half-packed, or not packed at all. Endless chicanes do arise, ‘upon my honour !’—not even the 800 wagons are ready for us ; ‘Can’t your baggages go in boats, then ?’ ‘No, nor shall !’ answers Schmettau, with blazing eyes, and heart ready to burst ; a Schmettau living all this while as in Purgatory, or worse. Such bullyings from truculent Guasco, who is now without muzzle. Capitulation, most imperfect in itself, is avowedly infringed : King’s artillery,—which we had haggled for, and ended by ‘hoping for,’ to Maguire that rainy evening : why were we in such a hurry, too, and blind to Maguire’s hurry !—King’s Artillery, according to Durchlaucht of Zweibrück, when he actually signed within the walls, is 'Nicht accordirt (Not granted), except the Field part.' King's regimental furnishings, all and sundry, were 'accordirt, and without visitation,'—but on second thoughts, the Austrian Officials are of opinion there must really be visitation, must be inspection. 'May not some of them belong to Polish Majesty?' In which sad process of inspection there was incredible waste, Schmettau protesting; and above half of the new uniforms were lost to us. Our 80 pontoons, which were expressly bargained for, are brazenly denied us: '20 of them are Saxon,' cry the Austrians: 'who knows if they are not almost all Saxon,'—upon my honour? At this rate, only wait a day or two, and fewer wagons than 800 will be needed! thinks Schmettau; and consents to 18 river Boats; Boats in part, then; and let us march at once. Accordingly, Saturday 8th, at 5 in the morning, Schmettau, with goods and people, does at last file out; across Elbe Bridge through the Neustadt; Prussians five deep; a double rank of Austrians, ranged on each side, in 'espalier' they call it,—espalier with gaps in it every here and there, to what purpose is soon evident. The march was so disposed (likewise for a purpose) that, all along, there were one or two Companies of Prussian Foot; and then in the interval, carriages, cannon, cavalry and hussars. Schmettau's carriage is with the rearguard, Madam Schmettau's well in the van:—in two other carriages are two Prussian War-and-Domain Ministers.¹ 'Managers of Saxon Finance,' these Two;—who will have to manage elsewhere than in Dresden henceforth. Zinnow, Borck, they sit veritably there, with their multifarious Account Papers: of whom I know absolutely nothing,—except (if anybody cared) that Zinnow, who 'died of apoplexy in July following,' is probably of puffy red-nosed type; and that Borck, for certain, has a very fine face and figure; delicacy, cheerful dignity, perfect gentlemanhood in short, written on every feature of him; as painted by Pesne, and engraved by Schmidt, for my accidental behoof.² Curious to think of that elaborate court-coat and flowing periwig, with this specific Borck, 'old as the Devil' (whom I have had much trouble to identify), forming visible part of this dismal Procession: the bright eye of Borck not smiling as usual, but clouded, though impassive! But that of Borck or his Limners is not the point.

¹ Anonymous of Hamburg, iii. 376.

² Fredericus Wilhelmus Borck (Pesne pinxit, 1782; Schmidt, sculptor Regis, sculpsit, Berolini, 1764): an excellent Print and Portrait.

"The Prussians have been divided into small sections, with a mass of baggage-wagons and cavalry between every two. And no sooner is the mass got in movement, than there rises from the Austrian part, and continues all the way, loud invitation, 'Whosoever is a brave Saxon, a brave Austrian, Reichsman, come to us! Gaps in the espalier, don't you see!' And Schmettau, in the rear, with baggage and cavalry intervening,—nobody can reach Schmettau. Here is a way of keeping your bargain! The Prussian Officers struggle stoutly; but are bellowed at, struck at, menaced by bayonet and bullet,—none of them shot, I think, but a good several of them cut and wounded;—the Austrian Officers themselves in passionate points behaving shamefully, 'Yes, shoot them down, the (were it nothing else) heretic dogs;' and being throughout evidently in a hot shivery frame of mind, forgetful of the laws. Seldom was such a Procession; spite, rage, and lawless revenge blazing out more and more. On the whole, there deserted, through those gaps of the espalier, about half of the whole Garrison. On Madam Schmettau's hammercloth, there sat, in the Schmettau livery, a hard-featured man, recognisable by keen eyes as lately a Nailer, of the Nailer Guild here; who had been a spy for Schmettau, and brought many persons into trouble: him they tear down, and trample hither and thither,—at last, into some Guardhouse near by."

Schmettau's Protest against all this is vehement, solemnly circumstantial: but, except in regard to the trampled Nailer (Zweibrück on that point, "heartily sorry for the insult to your Excellency's livery; and here the man is, with a thousand apologies"), Schmettau got no redress. Nor had Friedrich any, now or henceforth. Friedrich did at once, more to testify his disgust than for any benefit, order Schmettau: "Halt at Wittenberg, not at Magdeburg as was pretended to be bargained. Dismiss your Escort of Austrians there; bid them home at once, and out of your sight." Schmettau himself he ordered to Berlin, to idle waiting. Never again employed Schmettau: for sixteen years that they lived together, never saw his face more.

¹ The Schmettau Diarium in Anonymous of Hamburg, iii. 364-376 (corrected chiefly from Tempelhof): Protest, and Correspondence in consequence, is in Seyfarth, Bejlagen, ii. 611-621; in Helden-Geschichte, &c. &c.

Schmettau's ill-fortune was much pitied, as surely it deserved to be, by all men. About Friedrich's severity there was, and still occasionally is, controversy held. Into which we shall not enter for Yes or for No. "You are like the rest of them!" writes Friedrich to him; "when the moment comes for showing firmness, you fail in it."¹ Friedrich expects of others what all Soldiers profess,—and what is in fact the soul of all nobleness in their trade,—but what only Friedrich himself, and a select few, are in the habit of actually performing. Tried by the standard of common practice, Schmettau is clearly absolvable; a broken veteran, deserving almost tears. But that is not the standard which it will be safe for a King of men to go by. Friedrich, I should say, would be ordered by his Office, if Nature herself did not order him, to pitch his ideal very high; and to be rather Rhadamanthine in judging about it. Friedrich was never accused of over-generosity to the unfortunate among his Captains.

After the War, Schmettau, his conduct still a theme of argument, was reduced to the Invalid List: age now sixty-seven, but health and heart still very fresh, as he pleaded; complaining that he could not live on his retiring Pension of 300*l.* a year. "Be thankful you have not had your head struck off by sentence of Court-Martial," answered Friedrich. Schmettau, after some farther troubles from Court quarters, retired to Brandenburg, and there lived silent, poor but honourable, for his remaining fifteen years. Madame Schmettau came out very beautiful in those bad circumstances: cheery, thrifty, full of loyal patience; a constant sunshine to her poor man, whom she had preceded out of Dresden in the way we saw. Schmettau was very quiet, still studious of War matters;² "sent the King" once,—in 1772, while Polish Prussia, and How it could be fortified, were the interesting subject,—"a Journal," which he had elaborated for himself, "of the Marches of Karl Twelfth in West-Prussen;" which was well received: "Apparently the King not angry with me farther?"

¹ "Waldau, 10th September 1759:" in Preuss, ii., Urkunden, p. 44.

² See Leben (by his Son, "Captain Schmettau;" a modest intelligent Book), pp. 440-47.

thought Schmettan. A completely retired old man; studious, social,—the best men of the Army still his friends and familiars:—nor, in his own mind, any mutiny against his Chief; this also has its beauty in a human life, my friend. So long as Madam Schmettau lived, it was well; after her death, not well, dark rather, and growing darker: and in about three years Schmettau followed (27th October 1775), whither that good soul had gone. The elder Brother,—who was a distinguished Academician, as well as Feldmarschall and Negotiator,—had died at Berlin, in Voltaire's time, 1751. Each of those Schmettaus had a Son, in the Prussian Army, who wrote Books, or each a short Book, still worth reading.¹ But we must return.

On the very morrow, September 5th, Daun heard of the glorious success at Dresden; had not expected it till about the 10th at soonest. From Triebel, he sends the news at gallop to Lieberose and Soltikof: "Rejoice with us, Excellenz: did not I predict it? Silesia and Saxony both are ours; fruits chiefly of your noble successes. Oh, continue them a very little!" "Umph!" answers Soltikof, not with much enthusiasm: "Send us meal steadily; and gain you, Excellenz's self, some noble success!" Friedrich did not hear of it for almost a week later; not till Monday 10th,—as a certain small Anecdote would of itself indicate.

Sunday Evening, 9th September, General Finck, with his new 6,000, hastening on to join Wunsch for relief of Dresden, had got to Grossenhayn; and was putting up his tents, when the Outposts brought him in an Austrian Officer, who had come with a Trumpeter inquiring for the General. The Austrian Officer "is in quest of proper lodgings for General Schmettau and Garrison" (fancy Finck's sudden stare!);—"last night they lodged at Gross-Dobritz, tolerably to their mind: but the question for the Escort is, Where to lodge this night, if your Excellency could advise me?" "Herr, I will advise you to go back to Gross-Dobritz on the instant," answers Finck, grimly ; "I shall be obliged to make you and your Trumpet prisoners, otherwise !" Exit Austrian Officer. That same evening, too, Captain Kollas, carrying Schmettau's sad news to the King, calls on Finck in passing ; gives dismal details of the Capitulation and the Austrian way of keeping it ; filling Finck's mind with sorrowful indignation.¹

¹ Bavarian War of 1778, by the Feldmarschall's Son; and this Leben we have just been citing, by the Lieutenant-General's.

Finck,—let us add here, though in date it belongs a little elsewhere,—pushes on, not the less, to join Wunsch at Torgau ; joins Wunsch, straightway recaptures Leipzig, garrison prisoners (September 13th) ; recaptures all those north-western garrisons,—multitudinous Reichsfolk trying, once, to fight him, in an amazingly loud, but otherwise helpless way ("Action of Korbitz," they call it) ; cannonading far and wide all day, and manœuvring about, here bitten in upon, there trying to bite, over many leagues of Country ; principally under Haddick's leading ;² who saw good to draw off Dresden-ward next day, and leave Finck master in those regions. To Daun's sad astonishment,—in a moment of crisis,—as we shall hear farther on ! So that Saxony is not yet conquered to Daun ; Saxony, no, nor indeed will be :—but Dresden is. Friedrich never could recover Dresden ; though he hoped, and at intervals tried hard, for a long while to come.

CHAPTER VI

PRINCE HENRI MAKES A MARCH OF FIFTY HOURS ; THE RUSSIANS CANNOT FIND LODGING IN SILESIA.

THE eyes of all had been bent on Dresden latterly ; and there had occurred a great deal of detaching thitherward, and of marching there and thence, as we have partly seen. And the end is, Dresden, and to appearance Saxony along with it, is Daun's. Has not Daun good reason now to be proud of the cunctatory method? Never did his game stand better; and all has been gained at other people's expense. Daun has not played one trump card; it is those obliging Russians that have played all the trumps, and reduced the Enemy to nothing. Only continue that wise course;—and cart meal, with your whole strength, for the Russians!—

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 287.

² Hofbericht von der am 21 September bey Korbitz (in Meissen Country, south of Elbe ; Krögis too is a Village in this wide-spread "Action") vorgefallenen Action (Seyfarth, Beylagen, ii. 621-630). Tempelhof, iii. 248, 258.

Safe behind the pools of Lieberose, Friedrich between them and Berlin, lie those dear Russians; extending, Daun and they, like an impassable military dike, with spurs of Outposts and cunningly-devised Detachments, far and wide,—from beyond Bober or utmost Crossen on the east, to Hoyerswerda in Elbe Country on the west;—dike of eighty miles long, and, in some eastern parts, of almost eighty broad; so elaborate is Daun's detaching quality, in cases of moment. "The King's broken Army on one side of us," calculates Daun; "Prince Henri's on the other; incommunicative they; reduced to isolation, powerless either or both of them against such odds. They shall wait there, please Heaven, till Saxony be quite finished. Zweibrück, and our Detachments and Maguires, let them finish Saxony, while Soltikof keeps the King busy. Saxony finished, how will either Prince or King attempt to recover it! After which, Silesia for us;—and we shall then be near our Magazines withal, and this severe stress of carting will abate or cease." In fact, these seem sound calculations: Friedrich is 24,000; Henri, 38,000; the military dike is, of Austrians 75,000, of Russians and Austrians together 120,000. Daun may fairly calculate on succeeding beautifully, this Year: Saxony his altogether; and in Silesia some Glogau or strong Town taken, and Russians and Austrians wintering together in that Country.

If only Daun do not too much spare his trump cards! But there is such a thing as excess on that side too: and perhaps it is even the more ruinous kind,—and is certainly the more despised by good judges, though the multitude of bad may notice it less. Daun is unwearied in his vigilances, in his infinite cartings of provision for self and Soltikof,—long chains of Magazines, big and little, at Guben, at Görlitz, at Bautzen, Zittau, Friedland ;—and does, aided by French Montalembert, all that man can to keep those dear stupid Russians in tune.

Daun's problem of carting provisions, and guarding his multifarious posts, and sources of meal and defence, is not without its difficulties. Especially with a Prince Henri opposite ; who has a superlative manœuvring talent of his own, and an industry not inferior to Daun's in that way. Accordingly, ever since August 11th–13th, when Daun moved northward to Triebel, and Henri shot out detachments parallel to him, “to secure the Bober and our right flank, and try to regain communication with the King,”—still more, ever since August 22d, when Daun undertook that onerous cartage of meal for Soltikof as well as self, the manœuvring and mutual fencing and parrying, between Henri and him, has been getting livelier and livelier. Fain would Daun secure his numerous Roads and Magazines ; assiduously does Henri threaten him in these points, and try all means to regain communication with his Brother. Daun has Magazines and interests everywhere ; Henri is everywhere diligent to act on them.

Daun in person, ever since Kunersdorf time, has been at Triebel ; Henri moved to Sagan after him, but has left a lieutenant at Schmöttseifen, as Daun has at Mark-Lissa :—here are still new planets, and secondary ditto, with revolving moons. In short, it is two interpenetrating solar-systems, gyrating, osculating and colliding, over a space of several thousand square miles,—with an intricacy, with an embroiled abstruseness Ptolemean or more ! Which indeed the soldier who would know his business—(and not knowing it, is not he of all solecisms in this world the most flagrant ?)—ought to study, out of Tempelhof and the Books ; but which, except in its results, no other reader could endure. The result we will make a point of gathering : carefully riddled down, there are withal in the details five or six little passages which have some shadow of interest to us ; these let us note, and carefully omit the rest :

Of Fouquet at Landshut. “Fouquet was twice attacked at Landshut ; but made a lucky figure both times. Attack first was by Deville ; attack second by Harsch. Early in July, not long after Friedrich had left for Schmöttseifen, rash Deville (a rash creature, and then again a laggard, swift where he should be slow, and vice versa) again made trial on Landshut and Fouquet ; but was beautifully dealt with ; taken in rear, in flank, or I forget how taken, but sent galloping through the Passes again, with a loss of many Prisoners, most of his furnitures, and all his presence of mind : whom Daun thereupon summoned out of those parts, 'Hitherward to Mark-Lissa with your Corps ; leave Fouquet alone !'

"After which, Fouquet, things being altogether quiet round him, was summoned, with most part of his force, to Schmöttseifen ; left General Goltz (a man we have met before) to guard Landshut ; and was in fair hopes of proving helpful to Prince Henri,—when Harsch" (Harsch by himself this time, not Harsch and Deville as usual) "thought here was his opportunity ; and came with a great apparatus, as if to swallow Landshut whole. So that Fouquet had to hurry off reinforcements thither ; and at length to go himself, leaving Stutterheim in his stead at Schmöttseifen. Goltz, however, with his small handful, stood well to his work. And there fell out sharp fencings at Landshut :—especially one violent attack on our outposts ; the Austrians quite triumphant ; till 'a couple of cannon open on them from the next Hill,'—till some violent Werner or other charge in upon them with Prussian Hussars ;—a desperate tussle, that special one of Werner's ; not only sabres flashing furiously on both sides, but butts of pistols and blows on the face :¹ till, in short, Harsch finds he can make nothing of it, and has taken himself away, before Fouquet come." This Goltz, here playing Anti-Harsch, is the Goltz who, with Winterfeld, Schmettau and others, was in that melancholy Zittau march, of the Prince of Prussia's, in 1757 : it was Goltz by whom the King sent his finishing compliment, "You deserve, all of you, to be tried by Court-Martial, and to lose your heads !" Goltz is mainly concerned with Fouquet and Silesia, in late times ; and we shall hear of him once again. Fouquet did not return to Schmöttseifen ; nor was molested again in Landshut this year, though he soon had to detach, for the King's use, part of his Landshut force, and had other Silesian business which fell to him.

¹ Hofbericht von den Unternehmungen des Fouquetschen Corps, im Julius 1759 : in Seyfarth, Beylagen, ii. 582-586.

² Tempelhof, iii. 238 : August 31st.

Fortress of Peitz. "The poor Fortress of Peitz was taken again ;—do readers remember it, 'on the day of Zorndorf,' last year? This year, a fortnight after Kunersdorf, the same old Half-pay Gentleman with his Five-and-forty Invalids have again been set adrift, with the honours of war," poor old creatures ; lest by possibility they afflict the dear Russians and our meal-carts up yonder.' I will forget who took Peitz : perhaps Haddick, of whom we have lately heard so much? He was captor of Berlin in 1757, did the Inroad on Berlin that year,—and produced Rossbach shortly after. Peitz, if he did Peitz, was Haddick's last success in the world. Haddick has been most industrious, 'guarding the Russian flank,'—standing between the King and it, during that Soltikof march to Müllrose, to Lieberose ;—but that once done, and the King settled at Waldau, Haddick was ordered to Saxony, against Wunsch and Finck ;—and readers know already what he made of these Two in the 'Action at Korbitz, September 21st,'—and shall hear soon what befel Haddick himself in consequence."

Colonel Hordt is captured. "It was in that final marching of Soltikof to Lieberose that a distinguished Ex-Swede, Colonel Hordt, of the Free Corps Hordt, was taken prisoner. At Trebatsch ; hanging on Soltikof's right flank, on that occasion. It was not Haddick, it was a swarm of Cossacks who laid Hordt fast ; his horse having gone to the girths in a bog.¹ Hordt, an Ex-Swede of distinction,—a Royalist Exile, on whose head the Swedes had set a price (had gone into 'Brahe's Plot,' years since, Plot on behalf of the poor Swedish King, which cost Brahe his life),—Hordt now might have fared ill, had not Friedrich been emphatic, 'Touch a hair of him, retaliation follows on the instant !' He was carried to Petersburg ; 'lay twenty-six months and three days' in solitary durance there ; and we may hear a word from him again.

Ziethen almost captured. "Prince Henri, in the last days of August, marched to Sagan in person ;² Ziethen along with him ; multifariously manœuvring 'to regain communication with the King.' Of course, with no want of counter-manœuvring, of vigilant outposts, cunningly devised detachments, and assiduous small measures, on the part of Daun. Who, one day, had determined on a more considerable thing; that of cutting-out Ziethen from the Sagan neighbourhood. And would have done it, they say,—had not he been too cunctatory. September 2d, Ziethen, who is posted in the little town of Sorau, had very nearly been cut off. In Sorau, westward, Daun-ward, of Sagan a short day's march: there sat Ziethen, conscious of nothing particular,—with Daun secretly marching on him; Daun in person, from the west, and two others from the north and from the south, who are to be simultaneous on Sorau and the Zietheners. A well-laid scheme; likely to have finished Ziethen satisfactorily, who sat there aware of nothing. But it all miswent: Daun, on the road, noticed some trifling phenomenon (Prussian party of horse, or the like), which convinced his cautious mind that all was found out; that probably a whole Prussian Army, instead of a Ziethen only, was waiting at Sorau; upon which Daun turned home again, sorry that he could not turn the other two as well. The other two were stronger than Ziethen, could they have come upon him by surprise; or have caught him before he got through a certain Pass, or bit of bad ground, with his baggage. But Ziethen, by some accident, or by his own patrols, got notice; loaded his baggage instantly; and was through the Pass, or half through it, and in a condition to give stroke for stroke with interest, when his enemies came up. Nothing could be done upon Ziethen; who marched on, he and all his properties, safe to Sagan that night,—owing to Daun's overcaution, and to Ziethen's own activity and luck.”¹

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 231 : 27th August.

² Mémoires du Comte de Hordt (à Berlin, 1789), ii. 53-58 (not dated or intelligible there) : in Tempelhof (iii. 285, 6) clear account, "Trebatsch, September 4th."

³ Tempelhof, iii. 231 : 29th August.

All this was prior to the loss of Dresden. During the crisis of that, when everybody was bestirring himself, Prince Henri made extraordinary exertions: “Much depends on me; all on me!” sighed Henri. A cautious little man; but not incapable of risking, in the crisis of a game for life and death. Friedrich and he are wedged asunder by that dike of Russians and Austrians, which goes from Bober river eastward, post after post, to Hoyerswerda westward, eighty miles along the Lausitz-Brandenburg Frontier, rooting itself through the Lausitz into Bohemia, and the sources of its meal. Friedrich and he cannot communicate except by spies (“the first Jäger,” or regular express “from the King, arrived September 13th”):

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 288.

² Ib. iii. 207.

but both are of one mind ; both are on one problem, "What is to be done with that impassable dike?"—and coöperate sympathetically without communicating. What follows bears date after the loss of Dresden, but while Henri still knew only of the siege,—that Jäger of the 13th first brought him news of the loss.

"A day or two after Ziethen's adventure, Henri quits Sagan, to move southward for a stroke at the Bohemian-Lausitz magazines ; a stroke, and series of strokes. September 8th, Ziethen and (in Fouquet's absence at Landslut) Stutterheim are pushed forward into the Zittau Country ; first of all upon Friedland,—the Zittau Friedland, for there are Friedlands many ! September 9th, Stutterheim summons Friedland, gets it ; gets the bit of magazine there ; and next day, hastens on to Zittau. Is refused surrender of Zittau ; learns, however, that the magazine has been mostly set on wheels again, and is a stage forward on the road to Bohemia ; whitherward Stutterheim, quitting Zittau as too tedious, hastens after it, and next day catches it, or the unburnt remains of it. A successful Stutterheim. Nor is Ziethen idle in the mean while ; Ziethen and others ; whom no Deville or Austrian Party thinks itself strong enough to meddle with, Prince Henri being so near.

"Here is a pretty tempest in the heart of our Bohemian meal-conduit ! Continue that, and what becomes of Soltikof and me ? Daun is off from Triebel Country to this dangerous scene ; indignantly cashiers Deville, 'Why did not you attack these Ziethen people ? Had not you 10,000, Sir ?' Cashiers poor Deville for not attacking ;—does not himself attack : but carts away the important Görlitz magazine, to Bautzen, which is the still more important one ; sits down on the lid of that (according to wont) ; shoots out O'Donnell (an Irish gentleman, Deville's successor), and takes every precaution. Prince Henri, in presence of O'Donnell, coalesces again ; walks into Görlitz ; encamps there, on the Landskron and other Heights (Moys Hill one of them, poor Winterfeld's Hill !),—and watches a little how matters will turn, and whether Daun, severely vigilant from Bautzen, seated on the lid of his magazine, will not perhaps rise."

First and last, Daun in this business has tried several things ; but there was pretty much always, and emphatically there now is, only one thing that could be effectual : To attack Prince Henri, and abolish him from those countries ;—as surely might have been possible, with twice his strength at your disposal ?—This, though sometimes he seemed to be thinking of such a thing, Daun never would try : for which the subsequent Facts, and all good judges, were and are inexorably severe on Daun. Certain it is, no rashness could have better spilt Daun's game than did this extreme caution.

Daun, Soltikof and Company again have a Colloquy (Bautzen, September 15th) ; after which Everybody starts on his special Course of Action.

Soltikof's disgust at this new movement of Daun's was great and indignant. "Instead of going at the King, and getting some victory for himself, he has gone to Bautzen, and sat down on his meal-bags ! Meal ? Is it to be a mere fighting for meal ? I will march tomorrow for Poland, for Preussen, and find plenty of meal !" And would have gone, they say, had not Mercury, in the shape of Montalembert with his most zealous rhetoric, intervened ; and prevailed with difficulty. "One hour of personal interview with Excellency Daun," urges Montalembert ; "one more !" "No," answers Soltikof.—"Alas, then, send your messenger !" To which last expedient Soltikof does assent, and despatches Romanzof on the errand.

September 15th, at Bautzen, at an early hour, there is meeting accordingly ; not Romanzof, Soltikof's messenger, alone, but Zweibrück in person, Daun in person ; and most earnest counsel is held. "A noble Russian gentleman sees how my hands are bound," pleads Daun. "Will not Excellency Soltikof, who disdains idleness, go himself upon Silesia, upon Glogau for instance, and grant me a few days ?" "No," answers Romanzof ; "Excellency Soltikof by himself will not. Let Austria furnish Siege-Artillery ; daily meal I need not speak of ; 10,000 fresh Auxiliaries beyond those we have : on these terms Excellency Soltikof will perhaps try it ; on lower terms, positively not." "Well then, yes !" answers Daun, not without qualms of mind. Daun has a horror at weakening himself to that extent ; but what can he do ? "General Campitelli, with the 10,000, let him march this night, then ; join with General Loudon where you please to order : Excellency Soltikof shall see that in every point I conform." —An important meeting to us, this at Bautzen ; and breaks up the dead-lock into three or more divergent courses of activity ; which it will now behove us to follow, with the best brevity attainable. "Bautzen, Saturday 15th September, early in the morning," that is the date of the important Colloquy. And precisely eight-and-forty hours before, "on Thursday 13th, about 10 A.M.," in the western Environs of Quebec, there has fallen out an Event, quite otherwise important in the History of Mankind ! Of which readers shall have some notice, at a time more convenient.—

Romanzof returning with such answer, Soltikof straightway gathers himself, September 15th–16th, and gets on march. To Friedrich's joy ; who hopes it may be homeward ; waits two days at Waldau, for the Yes or No. On the second day, alas, it is No : "Going for Silesia, I perceive ; thither, by a wide sweep northward, which they think will be safer !" Upon which Friedrich also rises ; follows, with another kind of speed than Soltikof's ; and, by one of his swift clutchings, lays hold of Sagan, which he, if Soltikof has not, sees to be a key-point in this operation. Easy for Soltikof to have seized this key-point, key of the real road to Glogau ; easy for Loudon and the new 10,000 to have rendezvoused there : but nobody has thought of doing it. A few Croats were in the place, who could make no debate.

From Sagan Friedrich and Henri are at length in free communication ; Sagan to the Landskron at Görlitz is some fifty miles of country, now fallen vacant. From Henri, from Fouquet (the dangers of Landshut being over), Friedrich is getting what reinforcement they can spare (September 20th–24th) ; will then push forward again, industriously sticking to the flanks of Soltikof, thrusting out stumbling-blocks, making his march very uncomfortable.

Strange to say, from Sagan, while waiting two days for these reinforcements, there starts suddenly to view, suddenly for Friedrich and us, an incipient Negotiation about Peace ! Actual Proposal that way (or as good as actual, so Voltaire thinks it) on the part of Choiseul and France ; but as yet in Voltaire's name only, by a sure though a backstairs channel, of his discovering. Of which, and of the much farther corresponding that did actually follow on it, we purpose to say something elsewhere, at a better time. Meanwhile Voltaire's announcement of it to the King has just come in, through a fair and high Hand : how Friedrich receives it, what Friedrich's inner feeling is, and has been for a fortnight past—Here are some private utterances of his, throwing a straggle of light on those points :

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 247–249.

Four Letters of Friedrich's (10th–24th September).

No. 1. "To Prince Ferdinand (at Berlin)." Poor little Ferdinand, the King's Brother, fallen into bad health, has retired from the Wars, and gone to Berlin ; much an object of anxiety to the King, who diligently corresponds with the dear little man,—giving earnest medical advices, and getting Berlin news in return.

Waldau, 10th September 1759.

"Since my last Letter, Dresden has capitulated,—the very day while Wunsch was beating Maguire at The Barns" (north side of Dresden, September 5th, day after the capitulation). "Wunsch went back to Torgau, which St. André, with 14,000 Reichs-people under him, was for retaking : him too Wunsch beat, took all his tents, kettles, haversacks and utensils, 300 prisoners, six cannon, and some standards. Finck is uniting with Wunsch ; they will march on the Prince of Zweibrück, and retake Dresden" (hopes always, for a year and more, to have Dresden back very soon). "I trust before long to get all these people gathered round Dresden, and our own Country rid of them : that, I take it, will be the end of the Campaign.

"Many compliments to the Prince of Würtemberg" (wounded at Kunersdorf), "and to all our wounded Generals : I hope Seidlitz is now out danger : that bleeding fit (ébullition de sang) will cure him of the cramp in his jaw, and of his colics ; and as he is in bed, he won't take cold. I hope the viper-broth will do you infinite good : be assiduous in patching your constitution, while there is yet some fine weather left : I dread the winter for you ; take a great deal of care against cold. I have still a couple of cruel months ahead of me before ending this Campaign. Within that time, there will be, God knows what upshot."—This is "September 10th : " the day of Captain Kollas's arrival with his bad Dresden news ; Daun and Soltikof profoundly quiet for three days more.

No. 2. "To the Duchess of Sachsen-Gotha" (at Gotha). Voltaire has enclosed his Peace-Proposal to that Serene Lady, always a friend of Friedrich's and his ; to whom Friedrich, directly on receipt of it, makes answer :

"Sagan, 22d September 1759.

"Madame,—I receive on all occasions proofs of your goodness, to which I am as sensible as a chivalrous man can be. Certainly it is not through your hands, Madame, that my Correspondence with V." (with Voltaire, if one durst write it in full) "ought to be made to pass ! Nevertheless, in present circumstances, I will presume to beg that you would forward to him the Answer here enclosed, on which I put no Address. The difficulty of transmitting Letters has made me choose my Brother," Ferdinand, at Berlin, "to have this conveyed to your hand.

"If I gave bridle to my feelings, now would be the moment for developing them ; but in these critical times, I judge it better not ; and will restrict myself to simple assurances of—" F.

No. 3. "To Voltaire, at the Délices" (so her Serene Highness will address it). Here is part of the Enclosure to "V." Friedrich is all for Peace ; but keeps on his guard with such an Ambassador, and writes in a proud, light, only half-believing style :

"Sagan, 22d September 1759.

"The Duchess of Sachsen-Gotha sends me your Letter. I never received your 'packet of the 29th : ' communications all interrupted here ; with much trouble I get this passed on to you, if it is happy enough to pass.

"My position is not so desperate as my enemies give out.

I expect to finish my Campaign tolerably ; my courage is not sunk :—it appears, however, there is talk of Peace. All I can say of positive on this article is, That I have honour for ten ; and that, whatever misfortune befall me, I feel myself incapable of doing anything to wound, the least in the world, this principle,—which is so sensitive and delicate for one who thinks like a gentleman (pense en preux chevalier) ; and so little regarded by rascally politicians, who think like tradesmen.

“ I know nothing of what you have been telling me about ” (your backstairs channels, your Duc de Choiseul and his humours) : “ but for making Peace there are two conditions which I never will depart from : 1°. To make it conjointly with my faithful Allies ” (Hessen and England ; I have no other) ; “ 2°. to make it honourable and glorious. Observe you, I have still honour remaining ; I will preserve that, at the price of my blood.

“ If your people want Peace, let them propose nothing to me which contradicts the delicacy of my sentiments. I am in the convulsions of military operations : I do as the gamblers who are in ill-luck, and obstinately set themselves against Fortune. I have forced her to return to me, more than once, like a fickle mistress, when she had run away. My opponents are such foolish people, in the end I bid fair to catch some advantage over them ; but, happen whatsoever his Sacred Majesty Chance may please, I don't disturb myself about it. Up to this point, I have a clear conscience in regard to the misfortunes that have come to me. As to you, the Battle of Minden, that of Cadiz ” (Boscawen versus De la Clue ; Toulon Fleet running out, and caught by the English, as we saw), these things perhaps, “ and the loss of Canada, are arguments capable of restoring reason to the French, who had got confused by the Austrian hellebore.

“ This is my way of thinking. You do not find me made of rose-water : but Henri Quatre, Louis Quatorze,—my present enemies even, whom I could cite ” (Maria Theresa, twenty years ago, when your Belleisle set out to cut her in Four),—“ were of no softer temper either. Had I been born a private man, I would yield everything for the love of Peace ; but one has to take the tone of one's position. This is all I can tell you at present. In three or four weeks the ways of correspondence will be freer.—F.”¹

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiii. 60, 61.

No. 4. "To Prince Ferdinand." Two days later : has got on foot again,—end of his first march upon Soltikof again :

"Baunau, 24th September 1759.

"Thank you for the news you send of the wounded Officers." Würtemberg, Seidlitz and the others. "You may well suppose that in the pass things are at, I am not without cares, inquietudes, anxieties ; it is the frightfullest crisis I have had in my life. This is the moment for dying unless one conquer. Daun and my Brother Henri are marching side by side" (not exactly !). "It is possible enough all these Armies may assemble hereabouts, and that a general Battle may decide our fortune and the Peace. Take care of your health, dear Brother.—F."

Baunau is on Silesian ground, as indeed Sagan itself is ; at Baunau, Friedrich already, just on arriving, has done a fine move on Soltikof, and surprisingly flung the toll-gate in Soltikof's face. As we shall see by and by ;—and likewise that Prince Henri, who emerges tomorrow morning (September 25th), has not been "marching side by side with Daun," but at a pretty distance from that gentleman !—

Soltikof is a man of his word ; otherwise one suspects he already saw his Siege of Glogau to be impossible. Russians are not very skilful at the War-minuet : fancy what it will be dancing to such a partner ! Friedrich, finding they are for Glogau, whisks across the Oder, gets there before them : "No Glogau for you !" They stand agape for some time ; then think, "Well then, Breslau !" Friedrich again whisks across from them, farther up, and is again ahead of them when they cross : "No Breslau either !" In effect it is hopeless ; and we may leave the two manoeuvring in those waste parts, astride of Oder, or on the eastern bank of it, till a fitter opportunity ; and attend to Henri, who is now the article in risk.

Zweibrück's report of himself, on that day of the general Colloquy, was not in the way of complaint, like that of the Russians, though there did remain difficulties. "Dresden gloriously ours ; Maguire Governor there, and everything secure ; upon my honour. But in the northwest part, those Fincks and Wunsches, Excellenz ?"—And the actual truth is, Wunsch has taken Leipzig, day before yesterday (September 13th), as Daun sorrowfully knows, by news come in overnight. And six days hence (September 21st), Finck and Wunsch together will do their "Action of Korbitz," and be sending Haddick a bad road ! These things Zweibrück knows only in part ; but past experience gives him ominous presentiment, as it may well do ; and he thinks decidedly : "Excellenz, more Austrian troops are indispensable there ; in fact, your Excellenz's self, were that possible ; which one feels it is not, in the presence of these Russians !"

Russians and Reichsfolk, these are a pair of thumbscrews on both thumbs of Daun ; screwing the cunctation out of him ; painfully intimating : "Get rid of this Prince Henri ; you must, you must !" And, in the course of the next eight days, Daun has actually girt himself to this great enterprise. Goaded on, I could guess, by the "Action of Korbitz" (done on Friday, thirty hours ago) ; the news of which, and that Haddick, instead of extinguishing Finck, is retreating from him upon Dresden,—what a piece of news ! thinks Daun : "You Zweibrück, Haddick, Maguire and Company, you are 36,000 in Saxony ; Finck has not 12,000 in the field : How is this ?"—and indignantly dismisses Haddick : "Go, Sir, and attend to your health." News poignantly astonishing to Daun, as would seem ;—like an oxgoad in the lazy rear of Daun. Certain it is, Daun had marched out to Görlitz in collected form ; and, on Saturday afternoon, September 22d, is personally on the Heights (not Moys Hill, I should judge, but other points of vision), taking earnest survey of Prince Henri's position on the Landskron there. "Tomorrow morning we attack that Camp," thinks Daun ; "storm Prince Henri and it : be rid of him, at any price !"*

"Tomorrow morning," yes :—but this afternoon, and earlier, Prince Henri has formed a great resolution, his plans all

* Tempelhof, iii. 276, 258-261.

* Ibid. iii. 253-256 (for the March now ensuing) : iii. 228-234, 241-247 (for Henri's anterior movements).

laid, everything in readiness ; and it is not here you will find Prince Henri tomorrow. This is his famous March of Fifty Hours, this that we are now come to ; which deserves all our attention,—and all Daun's much more ! Prince Henri was habitually a man cautious in War ; not aggressive, like his Brother, but defensive, frugal of risks, and averse to the lion-springs usual with some people ; though capable of them, too, in the hour of need. Military men are full of wonder, at the bold scheme he now fell upon ; and at his style of executing it. Hardly was Daun gone home to his meditations on the storm of the Landskron tomorrow, and tattoo beaten in Prince Henri's Camp there, when, at 8 that Saturday evening, issuing softly, with a minimum of noise, in the proper marching columns, baggage columns, Henri altogether quitted this Camp ; and vanished like a dream. Into the Night ; men and goods, every item :—who shall say whitherward ? Leaving only a few light people to keep up the watch-fires and sentry-cries, for behoof of Daun ! Let readers here, who are in the secret, watch him a little from afar.

Straight northward goes Prince Henri, down Neisse Valley, 20 miles or so, to Rothenburg ; in columns several-fold, with much delicate arranging, which was punctually followed : and in the course of tomorrow Prince Henri is bivouacked, for a short rest of three hours,—hidden in unknown space, 20 miles from Daun, when Daun comes marching up to storm him on the Landskron ! Gone veritably ; but whitherward, Daun cannot form the least guess. Daun can only keep his men under arms there, all day ; while his scouts gallop far and wide,—bringing in this false guess and the other ; and at length returning with the eminently false one, misled by some of Henri's baggage-columns, which have to go many routes, That the Prince is on march for Glogau :—"Gone north-east ; that way went his wagons ; these we saw with our eyes." "North-east ? Yes, to Glogau possibly enough," thinks Daun : "Or may not he, cunning as he is and full of feints, intend a stroke on Bautzen, in my absence ?"—and hastens thither again, and sits down on the magazine-lid, glad to find nothing wrong there.

This is all that Daun hears of Henri for the next four days. Plenty of bad news from Saxony in these four days: the Finck-Haddick Action of Korbitz, a dismal certainty before one started,—and Haddick on his road to some Watering Place, by this time! But no trace of Henri farther; since that of the wagons wending north-east. “Gone to Glogau, to his Brother: no use in pushing him, or trying to molest him there!” thinks Daun; and waits, in stagnant humour, chewing the cud of bitter enough thoughts, till confirmation of that guess arrive:—as it never will in this world! Read an important Note:

“To northward of Bautzen forty miles, and to westward forty miles, the country is all Daun’s; only towards Glogau, with the Russians and Friedrich thereabouts, does it become disputable, or offer Prince Henri any chance. Nevertheless it is not to Glogau, it is far the reverse, that the nimble Henri has gone. Resting himself at Rothenburg ‘three hours’ (speed is of all things the vitallest), Prince Henri starts again. Sunday afternoon, straight westward this time. Marches, with his best swiftness, with his best arrangements, through many sleeping Villages, to Klitten, not a wakeful one: a march of 18 miles from Rothenburg;—direct for the Saxon side of things, instead of the Silesian, as Daun had made sure.

“At Klitten, Monday morning, bivouack again, for a few hours,—‘has no Camp, only waits three hours,’ is Archenholtz’s phrase: but I suppose the meaning is, Waits till the several Columns, by their calculated routes, have all got together; and till the latest in arriving has had ‘three hours’ of rest,—the earliest having perhaps gone on march again, in the interim? There are 20 miles farther, still straight west, to Hoyerswerda, where the utmost Austrian Division is: ‘Forward towards that; let us astonish General Wehla and his 3,000, and our March is over!’ All this too Prince Henri manages; never anything more consummate, more astonishing to Wehla and his Master.

“Wehla and Brentano, readers perhaps remember them busy, from the Pirna side, at the late Siege of Dresden. Siege gloriously done, Wehla was ordered to Hoyerswerda, on the north-west frontier; Brentano to a different point in that neighbourhood; where Bretano escaped ruin, and shall not be mentioned; but Wehla suddenly found it, and will require a word. Wehla, of all people on the War-theatre, had been the least expecting disturbance. He is on the remotest western flank ; to westward of him nothing but Torgau and the Finck-Wunsch people, from whom is small likelihood of danger : from the eastern what danger can there be ? A Letter of Daun's, some days ago, had expressly informed him that, to all appearance, there was none.

"And now suddenly, on the Tuesday morning, What is this ? Prussians reported to be visible in the Woods ! 'Impossible !' answered Wehla ;—did get ready, however, what he could ; Croat Regiments, pieces of Artillery behind the Elster River and on good points ; labouring more and more diligently, as the news proved true. But all his efforts were to no purpose. General Lentulus with his Prussians (the mute Swiss Lentulus, whom we sometimes meet), who has the Vanguard this day, comes streaming out of the woods, across the obstacles ; cannonades Wehla both on front and rear ; entirely swallows Wehla and Corps ; 600 killed ; the General himself, with 28 Field-Officers, and of subalterns and privates 1,785, falling prisoners to us ; and the remainder scattered on the winds, galloping each his own road towards covert and a new form of life. Wehla is eaten, in this manner, Tuesday September 25th :—metaphorically speaking, the March of Fifty Hours ends in a comfortable twofold meal (military-cannibal, as well as of common culinary meat), and in well-deserved rest."

The turning-point of the Campaign is reckoned to be this March of Henri's ; one of the most extraordinary on record. Prince Henri had a very fast March into these Silesian-Lausitz Countries, early in July,¹ and another very fast, from Bautzen, to intersect with Schmöttseifen, in the end of July : but these were as nothing compared with the present. Tempelhof, the excellent solid man,—but who puts all things, big and little, on the same level of detail, and has unparalleled methods of arranging (what he reckons to be "arranging"), and no vestige of index,—is distressingly obscure on this grand Incident ; but at length, on compulsion, does yield clear account.² In Archenholtz it is not dated at all ; who merely says as follows : "Most extraordinary march ever made ; went through 50 miles of Country wholly in the Enemy's possession ; lasted 56 hours, in which long period there was no camp pitched, and only twice a rest of three hours allowed the troops. During the other 50 hours the march, day and night, continually proceeded. Ended (no date) in surprise of General Wehla at Hoyerswerda, cutting up 600 of his soldiers, and taking 1,800 prisoners. Kalkreuth, since so famous, "in the Anti-Napoleon Wars, "was the Prince's Adjutant."¹

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 255, 256 ; Seyfarth, Beylagen ; &c.

² Seyfarth, ii. 545.

³ Tempelhof, iii. 253–258.

This is probably Prince Henri's cleverest feat,—though he did a great many of clever ; and his Brother used to say, glancing towards him, "There is but one of us that never committed a mistake." A highly ingenious dextrous little man in affairs of War, sharp as needles, vehement but cautious ; though of abstruse temper, thin-skinned, capricious, and giving his Brother a great deal of trouble with his jealousies and shrewish whims. By this last consummate little operation he has astonished Daun as much as anybody ever did ; shorn his elaborate tissue of cunctations into ruin and collapse at one stroke ; and in effect, as turns out, wrecked his campaign for this Year.

Daun finds there is now no hope of Saxony, unless he himself at once proceed thither. At once thither ;—and leave Glogau and the Russians to their luck,—which in such case, what is it like to be ? Probably, to Daun's own view, ominous enough ; but he has no alternative. To this pass has the March of Fifty Hours brought us. There is such a thing as being too cunctatory, is not there, your Excellency ? Every mortal, and more especially every Feldmarschall ought to strike the iron while it is hot. The remainder of this Campaign, we will hope, can be made intelligible in a more summary manner.

Friedrich manages (September 24th—October 24th) to get the Russians sent home ; and Himself falls lamed with Gout.

Friedrich's manœuvres against Soltikof,—every reader is prepared to hear that Soltikof was rendered futile by them ; and none but military readers could take delight in the details.

¹ Archenholtz, i. 426.

Two beautiful short cuts he made upon Soltikof ; pulled him up both times in mid career, as with hard check-bit. The first time was at Zöbelwitz : September 24th, Friedrich cut across from Sagan, which is string to bow of the Russian march ; posted himself on the Heights of Zöbelwitz, of Baunau, Milkau (at Baunau Friedrich will write a Letter this night, if readers bethink themselves ; Milkau is a place he may remember for rain-deluges, in the First Silesian War¹) : "Let the Russians, if they now dare, try the Pass of Neustädte! here!" A fortunate hour, when he got upon this ground. Quartermaster-General Stoffel, our old Cüstrin acquaintance, is found marking out a Camp with a view to that Pass of Neustädte! ;² is greatly astonished to find the Prussian Army emerge on him there ; and at once vanishes, with his Hussar-Cossack retinues. "September 24th," it is while Prince Henri was on the last moiety of his March of Fifty Hours. This severe twitch flung Soltikof quite out from Glogau,—was like to fling him home altogether, had it not been for Montalembert's eloquence ;—did fling him across the Oder. Where, again thanks to Montalembert, he was circling on with an eye to Breslau, when Friedrich, by the diameter, suddenly laid bridges, crossed at Köben, and again brought Soltikof to halt, as by turnpike suddenly shut : "Must pay first ; must beat us first !"

These things had raised Friedrich's spirits not a little. Getting on the Heights of Zöbelwitz, he was heard to exclaim, "This is a lucky day ; worth more to me than a battle with victory."³ Astonishing how he blazed out again, quite into his old pride and effulgence, after this, says Retzow. Had been so meek, so humbled, and even condescended to ask advice or opinion from some about him. Especially "from two Captains," says the Opposition Retzow, whose heads were nearly turned by this sunburst from on high. Captain Marquart and another,—I believe, he did employ them about Routes and marking of Camps, which Retzow calls consulting : a King fallen tragically scarce of persons to consult ; all his Winterfelds, Schwerins, Keiths, and Council of Peers now vanished, and nothing but some intelligent-looking Captain Marquart, or the like, to consult :—of which Retzow, in his splenetic Opposition humour, does not see the tragedy, but rather the comedy : how the poor Captains found their favour to be temporary, conditional, and had to collapse again. One of them wrote an “Essay on the Coup-d’œil Militaire,” over which Retzow pretends to weep. This was Friedrich’s marginal Note upon the Ms., when submitted to his gracious perusal : “You (Er) will do better to acquire the Art of marking Camps than to write upon the Military Stroke of Eye.” Beautifully written too, says Retzow ; but what, in the eyes of this King, is beautiful writing, to knowing your business well ? No friend he to writing, unless you have got something really special, and urgent to be written.

¹ Suprà, vol. iii.

² Tempelhof, iii. 293 ; Retzow, ii. 163.

³ Retzow, ii. 163.

Friedrich crossed the Oder twice. Took Soltikof on both sides of the Oder, cut him out of this fond expectation, then of that ; led him, we perceive, a bad life. Latterly the scene was on the right bank : Sophienthal, Köben, Herrnstadt and other poor places,—on that big eastern elbow, where Oder takes his final bend, or farewell of Poland. Ground, naturally, of some interest to Friedrich : ground to us unknown ; but known to Friedrich as the ground where Karl XII. gave Schulenburg his beating,¹ which produced the “beautiful retreat” of Schulenburg. The old Feldmarschall Schulenburg whom we used to hear of once,—whose Nephew, a pipeclayed little gentleman, was well known to Friedrich and us.

For the rest, I do not think he feels this outmanœuvring of the Russians very hard work. Already, from Zübelwitz Country, 25th September, day of Henri at Hoyerswerda, Friedrich had written to Fouquet : “With 21,000, your beaten and maltreated Servant has hindered an Army of 50,000 from attacking him, and compelled them to retire on ¹ “Near Guhrau” (while chasing August the Strong and him out of Poland), “13th October 1704 :” vague account of it, dateless, and as good as placeless, in Voltaire (Charles Douze, liv. iii.), (Œuvres, xxx. 142-5.

Neusatz !” Evidently much risen in hope ; and Henri’s fine news not yet come to hand. By degrees, Soltikof, rendered futile, got very angry ; especially when Daun had to go for Saxony. “Meal was becoming impossible, at any rate,” whimpers Daun : “Oh Excellency, do but consider, with the nobleness natural to you ! Our Court will cheerfully furnish money, instead of meal.”—“Money ? My people cannot eat money !” growled Soltikof, getting more and more angry ; threatening daily to march for Posen and his own meal-stores. What a time of it has Montalembert, has the melancholy London, with temper so hot !

At Sophienthal, October 10th, Friedrich falls ill of gout ;—absolutely lamed ; for three weeks, cannot stir from his room. Happily the outer problem is becoming easier and easier ; almost bringing its own solution. At Sophienthal the lame Friedrich takes to writing about Charles XII. and his Military Character,—not a very illuminative Piece, on the first perusal, but I intend to read it again ;¹—which at least helps him to pass the time. Soltikof, more and more straitened, meal itself running low, gets angrier and angrier. His treatment of the Country, Montalembert rather encouraging, is described as “horrible.” One day he takes the whim, whim or little more, of seizing Herrnstadt ; a small Town, between the Two Armies, where the Prussians have a Free-Battalion. The Prussian Battalion resists ; drives Soltikof’s people back. “Never mind,” think they : “a place of no importance to us ; and Excellency Soltikof has ridden elsewhere.” By ill-luck, in the afternoon, Excellency Soltikof happened to mention the place again. Hearing that the Prussians still have it, Soltikof mounts into a rage ; summons the place, with answer still No ; thereupon orders instant bombardment of it, fiery storms of grenadoes for it ; and has the satisfaction of utterly burning poor Herrnstadt ; the Prussian Free-Corps still continuing obstinate. It was Soltikof’s last act in those parts, and betokens a sulphurous state of humour.

Next morning (October 24th), he took the road for Posen, and marched bodily home.¹ Home verily, in spite of Montalembert and all men. "And for me, what orders has Excellency?" Loudon had anxiously inquired, on the eve of that event. "None whatever!" answered Excellency: "Do your own pleasure; go whithersoever seems good to you." And Loudon had to take a wide sweep round, by Kalish, through the western parts of Poland; and get home to the Troppau-Teschén Country, as he best could.

¹ Réflexions sur les talens militaires et sur le caractère de Charles XII. (Œuvres de Frédéric, vii. 69–88).

By Kalish, by Czenstochow, Cracow, poor Loudon had to go: a dismal march of 300 miles or more,—waited on latterly by Fouquet, with Werner, Goltz and others, on the Silesian Border; whom Friedrich had ordered thither for such end. Whom Loudon skilfully avoided to fight: having already, by desertion and by hardships, lost half his men on the road. Glad enough to get home and under roof, with his 20,000 gone to 10,000; and to make bargain with Fouquet: "Truce, then, through Winter; neither of us to meddle with the other, unless after a fortnight's warning given."² November 1st, a month before this, the King, carried on a litter by his soldiers, had quitted Sophienthal; and, crossing the River by Küben, got to Glogau.³ The greater part of his force, 13,000 under Hülse, he had immediately sent on for Saxony; he himself intending to wait recovery in Glogau, with this Silesian wing of the business happily brought to finis for the present.

On the Saxon side, too, affairs are in such a course that the King can be patient at Glogau till he get well. Everything is prosperous in Saxony since that March on Hoyerswerda; Henri, with his Fincks and Wunsches, beautifully posted in the Meissen-Torgau region; no dislodging of him, let Daun, with his big mass of forces, try as he may. Daun, through the month of October, is in various Camps, in Schilda last of all: Henri successively in two; in Strehla for some ten days; then in Torgau for about three weeks, carefully entrenched,⁴

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 299, 291-300 (general account, abundantly minute).

² Ib. iii. 328-331.

³ Rödenbeck, i. 396.

⁴ Tempelhof, iii. 276, 281, 284 (Henri in Strehla, October 4th-17th; thence to Torgau: 22d October, Daun, "quits his Camp of Belgern," for that of Schilda, which was his last in those parts).

—where traces of him will turn up (not too opportunely) next year. Daun, from whatever Camp, goes labouring on this side and on that; on every side the deft Henri is as sharp as needles; nothing to be made of him by the cunning movements and contrivances of Daun. Very fine manoeuvring it was, especially on Henri's part; a charm to the soldier mind;—given minutely in Tempelhof, and capable of being followed (if you have Maps and Patience) into the last details. Instructive really to the soldier;—but must be, almost all, omitted here. One beautiful slap to Duke d'Ahremberg (a poor old friend of Daun's and ours) we will remember: "Action of Pretsch" they call it; defeat, almost capture of poor D'Ahremberg; who had been sent to dislodge the Prince, by threatening his supplies, and had wheeled, accordingly, eastward, wide away; but, to his astonishment, found, after a march or two, Three select Prussian Corps emerging on him, by front, by rear, by flank, with Horse-artillery (quasi-miraculous) bursting out on hilltops, too,—and, in short, nothing for it but to retreat, or indeed to run, in a considerably ruinous style: poor D'Ahremberg! On the whole, Daun is reduced to a panting condition; and knows not what to do. His plans were intrinsically bad, says Tempelhof; without beating Henri in battle, which he cannot bring himself to attempt, he, in all probability, will, were it only for difficulties of the commissariat kind, have to fall back Dresdenward, and altogether take him himself away.*

After this sad slap at Pretsch, Daun paused for consideration; took to palisading himself to an extraordinary degree, slashing the Schilda Forests almost into ruin for this end; and otherwise sat absolutely quiet. Little to be done but take care of oneself. Daun knows withal of Hülse's impending advent with the Silesian 13,000;—November 2d, Hülse is actually at Muskau, and his 13,000 magnified by rumour to 20,000. Hearing of which, Daun takes the road (November

* Seyfarth (Beylagen, ii. 634-637), "Hofbericht von der am 29 October 1759 bey Meuro" (chiefly bey Pretsch) "vorgefallenen Action;" ib. ii. 543 n.

* Tempelhof, iii. 287-289.

4th) ; quits his gloriously palisaded Camp of Schilda ; feels that retreat on Dresden, or even home to Bohemia altogether, is the one course left.

And now, the important Bautzen Colloquy of Saturday September 15th, having here brought its three or more Courses of Activity to a pause,—we will glance at the far more important Thursday 13th, other side the Ocean :

Above Quebec, Night of September 12–13th, In profound silence, on the stream of the St. Lawrence far away, a notable adventure is going on. Wolfe, from two points well above Quebec (“As a last shift, we will try that way”), with about 5,000 men, is silently descending in rafts : with purpose to climb the Heights somewhere on this side the City, and be in upon it, if Fate will. An enterprise of almost sublime nature ; very great, if it can succeed. The cliffs all beset to his left hand, Montcalm in person guarding Quebec with his main strength.

Wolfe silently descends ; mind made up ; thoughts hushed quiet into one great thought ; in the ripple of the perpetual waters, under the grim cliffs and the eternal stars. Conversing with his people, he was heard to recite some passages of Gray's Elegy, lately come out to those parts ; of which, says an ear-witness, he expressed his admiration to an enthusiastic degree : “Ah, these are tones of the Eternal Melodies, are not they ? A man might thank Heaven had he such a gift ; almost as we might for succeeding here, Gentlemen !”¹ Next morning (Thursday 13th September 1759), Wolfe, with his 5,000, is found to have scrambled up by some woody Neck in the heights, which was not quite precipitous ; has trailed one cannon with him, the seamen busy bringing up another ; and by 10 of the clock, stands ranked (really somewhat in the Friedrich way, though on a small scale) ; ready at all points for Montcalm, but refusing to be over-ready.

Montcalm, on first hearing of him, had made haste : “Oui, je les vois où ils ne doivent pas être ; je vais les écraser (to smash them) !” said he, by way of keeping his people in heart. And marches up, beautifully skilful, neglecting none of his advantages. His numerous Canadian sharpshooters, preliminary Indians in the bushes, with a provoking fire: "Steady!" orders Wolfe; "from you, not one shot till they are within thirty yards!" And Montcalm, volleying and advancing, can get no response, more than from Druidic stones; till at thirty yards, the stones became vocal,—and continue so at a dreadful rate: and, in a space of seventeen minutes, have blown Montcalm's regulars, and the gallant Montcalm himself, and their second in command, and their third, into ruin and destruction. In about seven minutes more, the agony was done; "English falling on with the bayonet, Highlanders with the claymore;" fierce pursuit, route total:—and Quebec and Canada as good as finished. The thing is yet well known to every Englishman;¹ and how Wolfe himself died in it, his beautiful death.

¹ Professor Robinson, then a Navy-lieutenant, in the raft along with Wolfe, afterwards a well-known Professor of Natural Philosophy at Edinburgh, was often heard, by persons whom I have heard again, to repeat this Anecdote. See Playfair, Biographical Account of Professor Robinson,—in Transactions of Royal Society of Edinburgh, vii. 495 et seq.

Truly a bit of right soldierhood, this Wolfe. Manages his small resources in a consummate manner; invents, contrives, attempts and re-attempts, irrepressible by difficulty or discouragement. How could a Friedrich himself have managed this Quebec in a more artistic way? The small Battle itself, 5,000 to a side, and such odds of Savagery and Canadians, reminds you of one of Friedrich's: wise arrangements; exact foresight, preparation corresponding; caution with audacity; inflexible discipline, silent till its time come, and then blazing out as we see. The prettiest soldiering I have heard of among the English for several generations. Amherst, Commander-in-chief, is diligently noosing, and tying up, the French military settlements, Niagara, Ticonderago; Canada all round: but this is the heart or windpipe of it; keep this firm, and, in the circumstances, Canada is yours.

Colonel Beatson, in his recent Pamphlet, The Plains of Abraham,—which, especially on the military side, is distressingly ignorant and shallow, though not intentionally incorrect anywhere,—gives Extracts from a Letter of Montcalm's ("Quebec, 24th August 1759") which is highly worth reading, had we room. It predicts to a hairsbreadth, not only the way "M. Wolfe, if he understands his trade, will take to beat and ruin me if we meet in fight;" but also,—with a sagacity singular to look at, in the years 1775-7, and perhaps still more in the years 1860-3,—what will be the consequences to those unruly English, Colonial and other. "If he beat me here, France has lost America utterly," thinks Montcalm: "Yes;—and one's only consolation is, In ten years farther, America will be in revolt against England!" Montcalm's style of writing is not exemplary; but his power of faithful observation, his sagacity, and talent of prophecy are so considerable, we are tempted to give the ipsissima verba of his long Letter in regard to those two points,—the rather as it seems to have fallen much out of sight in our day:

¹ The military details of it seem to be very ill-known (witness Colonel Beatson's otherwise rather careful Pamphlet, The Plains of Abraham, written quite lately, which we are soon to cite farther); and they would well deserve describing, in the Seyfarth-Beylagen, or even in the Tempelhof way,—could an English Officer, on the spot as this Colonel was, be found to do it!—Details are in Beatson (quite another "Beatson"), Naval and Military History, ii. 300–308; in Gentleman's Magazine for 1759, the Despatches and particulars: see also Walpole, George the Second, iii. 217–222.

Montcalm to a Cousin in France.

"Camp before Quebec, 24th August 1759.

"Monsieur et cher Cousin,—Here I am, for more than three months last, at handgrips with M. Wolfe; who ceases not day or night to bombard Quebec, with a fury which is almost unexampled in the Siege of a Place one intends to retain after taking it." . . . "Will never take it in that way, however, by attacking from the River or south shore; only ruins us, but does not enrich himself. Not an inch nearer his object than he was three months ago; and in one month more the equinoctial storms will blow his Fleet and him away.—Quebec, then, and the preservation of the Colony, you think, must be as good as safe? Alas, the fact is far otherwise. The capture of Quebec depends on what we call a stroke-of-hand"—(But let us take to the Original now, for Prediction First):—

"La prise de Quebec dépend d'un coup de main. Les Anglais sont maîtres de la rivière: ils n'ont qu'à effectuer une descente sur la rive où cette Ville, sans fortifications et sans défense, est située. Les voilà en état de me présenter la bataille; que je ne pourrais plus refuser, et que je ne devrais pas gagner. M. Wolfe, en effet, s'il entend son métier, n'a qu'à essayer le premier feu, venir ensuite à grands pas sur mon armée, faire à bout portant sa décharge; mes Canadiens, sans discipline, sourds à la voix du tambour et des instrumens militaires, dérangés par cette escarre, ne sauront plus reprendre leurs rangs. Ils sont d'ailleurs sans baionettes pour répondre à celles de l'ennemi : il ne leur reste qu'à fuir,—et me voilà battu sans ressource." (This is a curiously exact Prediction !) "I won't survive, however ; defeat here, in this stage of our affairs, means loss of America altogether : 'il est des situations où il ne reste plus à un Général que de périr avec honneur.'"—"Mes sentimens sont français, et ils le seront jusque dans le tombeau, si dans le tombeau on est encore quelque chose.

"Je me consolerais du moins de ma défaite, et de la perte de la Colonie, par l'intime persuasion où je suis (Prediction Second, which is still more curious), "que cette défaite vaudra, un jour, à ma Patrie plus qu'une victoire ; et que le vainqueur, en s'agrandissant, trouverait (sic) un tombeau dans son agrandissement même.

"Ce que j'avance ici, mon cher Cousin, vous paraîtra un paradoxe : mais un moment de réflexion politique, un coup d'œil sur la situation des choses en Amérique, et la vérité de mon opinion brillera dans tout son jour." "Nobody will obey, unless necessity compel him : voilà les hommes ; gêne of any kind a nuisance to them ; and of all men in the world les Anglais are the most impatient of obeying anybody. 'Mais si ce sont-là les Anglais de l'Europe, c'est encore plus les Anglais d'Amérique. Une grande partie de ces Colons sont les enfans de ces hommes qui s'expatrièrent dans ces temps de trouble où l'ancienne Angleterre, en proie aux divisions, était attaquée dans ses privilèges et droits ; et allèrent chercher en Amérique une terre où ils pussent vivre et mourir libres et presque indépendants :—et ces enfans n'ont pas dégénéré des sentimens républicains de leurs pères. D'autres sont des hommes ennemis de tout frein, de tout assujétissement, que le gouvernement y a transportés pour leurs crimes. D'autres, enfin, sont un ramas de différentes nations de l'Europe, qui tiennent très-peu à l'ancienne Angleterre par le cœur et le sentiment ; tous, en général, ne se soucient guères du Roi ni du Parlement d'Angleterre.

"Je les connais bien,—non sur des rapports étrangers, mais sur des correspondances et des informations secrètes, que j'ai moi-même menagées ; et dont, un jour, si Dieu me prête vie, je pourrai faire usage à l'avantage de ma Patrie. Pour surcroît de bonheur pour eux, tous ces Colons sont parvenues, dans un état très-florissant ; ils sont nombreux et riches :—ils recueillent dans le sein de leur patrie toutes les nécessités de la vie. L'ancienne Angleterre a été assez sotte, et assez dupe, pour leur laisser établir chez eux les arts, les métiers, les manufactures :—c'est à dire, qu'elle leur a laissé briser la chaîne de besoins qui les liait, qui les attachait à elle, et qui les fait dépendants. Aussi toutes ces Colonies Anglaises auraient-elles depuis long-temps secoué le joug, chaque province aurait formé une petite république indépendante, si la crainte de voir les Français à leur porte n'avait été un frein qui les avait retenu. Maîtres pour maîtres, ils ont préféré leurs compatriotes aux étrangers; prenant cependant pour maxime de n'obéir que le moins qu'ils pourraient. Mais que le Canada vint à être conquis, et que les Canadiens et ces Colons ne fussent plus qu'une seul peuple,—et la première occasion où l'ancienne Angleterre semblerait toucher à leurs intérêts, croyez-vous, mon cher Cousin, que ces Colons obéiront? Et qu'auraient-ils à craindre en se révoltant?' * * 'Je suis si sûr de ce que j'écris, que je ne donnerais pas dix ans après la conquête du Canada pour en voir l'accomplissement.

“Voilà ce que, comme Français, me console aujourd'hui du danger imminent, que court ma Patrie, de voir cette Colonie perdue pour elle.”¹

Montcalm had been in the Belleisle Retreat from Prag (December 1742); in the terrible Exilles Business (July 1747), where the Chevalier de Belleisle and 4 or 5,000 lost their lives in about an hour. Captain Cook was at Quebec, Master in the Royal Navy; “sounding the River, and putting down buoys.” Bougainville, another famous Navigator, was Aide-de-Camp of Montcalm. There have been far-sounding Epics built together on less basis than lies ready here, in this Capture of Quebec;—which itself, as the Decision that America is to be English and not French, is surely an Epoch in World-History! Montcalm was forty-eight when he perished; Wolfe, thirty-three. Montcalm's skull is in the Ursulines Convent at Quebec,—shown to the idly curious to this day.²

It was on October 17th,—while Friedrich lay at Sophienthal, lamed of gout, and Soltikof had privately fixed for home (went that day week),—that this glorious bit of news reached

¹ In Beatson, Lieutenant-Colonel R.E., The Plains of Abraham; Notes original and selected (Gibraltar, Garrison Library Press, 1858), pp. 38 et seq. : Extract from “Lettres de M. le Marquis de Montcalm à MM. De Berryer et De la Môle : 1757-1759 (Londres, 1777),”—which is not in the British-Museum Library, on applying; and seems to be a forgotten Book.

² Lieutenant-Colonel Beatson, pp. 28, 15.

England. It was only three days after that other, bad and almost hopeless news, from the same quarter ; news of poor Wolfe's Repulse, on the other or eastern side of Quebec, July 31st, known to us already, not known in England till October 14th. Heightened by such contrast, the news filled all men with a strange mixture of emotions. "The Incidents of Dramatic Fiction," says one who was sharer in it, "could not have been conducted with more address to lead an audience from despondency to sudden exultation, than Accident had here prepared to excite the passions of a whole People. They despaired ; they triumphed ; and they wept,—for Wolfe had fallen in the hour of victory ! Joy, grief, curiosity, astonishment, were painted in every countenance : the more they inquired, the higher their admiration rose. Not an incident but was heroic and affecting." ¹ America ours ; but the noble Wolfe now not !

What Pitt himself said of these things, we do not much hear. On the meeting of his Parliament, about a month hence, his Speech, somebody having risen to congratulate and eulogise him, is still recognisably of royal quality, if we evoke it from the Walpole Notes. Very modest, very noble, true ; and with fine pieties and magnanimities delicately audible in it : "Not a week all Summer but has been a crisis, in which I have not known whether I should not be torn to pieces, instead of being commended, as now by the Honourable Member. The hand of Divine Providence ; the more a man is versed in business, the more he everywhere traces that !" . . . "Success has given us unanimity, not unanimity success. For my own poor share, I could not have dared as I have done, except in these times. Other Ministers have hoped as well, but have not been so circumstanced to dare so much." . . . "I think the stone almost rolled to the top of the hill ; but let us have a care ; it may rebound, and hideously drag us down with it again." ²

The essential truth, moreover, is, Pitt has become King of England ; so lucky has poor England, in its hour of crisis, again been. And the difference between an England guided by some kind of Friedrich (temporary Friedrich, absolute, though of insecure tenure), and by a Newcastle and the Clack of Tongues, is very great ! But for Pitt, there had been no Wolfe, no Amherst ; Duke Ferdinand had been the Royal Highness of Cumberland,—and all things going round him in St. Vitus, at their old rate. This man is a King, for the time being,—King really of the Friedrich type ;—and rules, Friedrich himself not more despotically, where need is. Pitt's War-Offices, Admiralties, were not of themselves quick-going entities ; but Pitt made them go. Slow-paced Lords in Office have remonstrated, on more than one occasion : “ Impossible, Sir ; these things cannot be got ready at the time you order ! ” “ My Lord, they indispensably must,” Pitt would answer (a man always reverend of coming facts, knowing how inexorable they are) ; and if the Negative continued obstinate in argument, he has been known to add : “ My Lord, to the King's service, it is a fixed necessity of time. Unless the time is kept, I will impeach your Lordship ! ” Your Lordship's head will come to lie at your Lordship's feet ! Figure a poor Duke of Newcastle, listening to such a thing ;—and knowing that Pitt will do it ; and that he can, such is his favour with universal England ;—and trembling and obeying. War-requisites for land and for sea are got ready with a Prussian punctuality,—at what multiple of the Prussian expense, is a smaller question for Pitt.

¹ Walpole, iii. 219.

² Walpole, iii. 225 ; Thackeray, i. 446.

It is about eighteen months ago that Pownal, Governor of New England, a kind of half-military person, not without sound sense, though sadly intricate of utterance,—of whom Pitt, just entering on Office, has, I suppose, asked an opinion on America, as men do of Learned Counsel on an impending Lawsuit of magnitude,—had answered, in his long-winded, intertwined, nearly inextricable way, to the effect, “ Sir, I incline to fear, on the whole, that the Action will not lie,—that, on the whole, the French will eat America from us in spite of our teeth.”¹ January 15th, 1758, that is the Pownal

¹ In Thackeray, ii. 421–452, Pownal's intricate Report (his “ Discourse,” or whatever he calls it, “ on the Defence of the Inland Frontiers,” his &c. &c.), of date, “ 15th January 1758.”

Opinion-of-Counsel ;—and on September 13th, 1759, this is what we have practically come to. And on September 7th, 1760, within twelve months more,—Amherst, descending the Rapids from Ticonderoga side, and two other little Armies, ascending from Quebec and Louisburg, to meet him at Montreal, have proved punctual almost to an hour ; and are in condition to extinguish, by triple pressure (or what we called noosing), the French Governor-General in Montreal, a Monsieur de Vaudreuil, and his Montreal and his Canada altogether ; and send the French bodily home out of those Continents.' Which may dispense us from speaking farther on the subject.

From the Madras region, too, from India and outrageous Lally, the news are good. Early in Spring last, poor Lally, —a man of endless talent and courage, but of dreadfully emphatic loose tongue, in fact of a blazing ungoverned Irish turn of mind,—had instantly, on sight of some small Succours from Pitt, to raise his siege of Madras, retire to Pondichery ; —and, in fact, go plunging and tumbling downhill, he and his India with him, at an ever-faster rate, till they also had got to the Abyss. "My policy is in these five words, No Englishman in this Peninsula," wrote he, a year ago, on landing in India ; and now it is to be No Frenchman, and there is one word in the five to be altered !—Of poor Lally, zealous and furious over-much, and nearly the most unfortunate and worst-used "man of genius" I ever read of, whose lion-like struggles against French Official people, and against Pitt's Captains and their sea-fights and siegings, would deserve a volume to themselves, we have said, and can here say, as good as nothing,—except that they all ended, for Lally and French India, in total surrender, 16th January 1761 ; and that Lally, some years afterwards, for toils undergone and for services done, got, when accounts came to be liquidated, death on the scaffold. Dates I give below.' "Gained Fontenoy for us,"

¹ Capitulation between Amherst and Vaudreuil ("Montreal, 8th September 1760"), in 55 Articles: in Beaton, iii. 274–283.

² 28th April 1758, Lands at Pondichery ; instantly proceeds upon Fort St. David. 2d June 1758, Takes it: meant to have gone now on said many persons ;—undoubtedly gained various things for us, fought for us Bersekir-like on all occasions ; hoped, in the end, to be Maréchal de France, and undertook a Championship of India, which issues in this way ! America and India, it is written, are both to be Pitt's. Let both, if possible, remain silent to us henceforth.

As to the Invasion-of-England Scheme, Pitt says he does not expect the French will invade us ; but if they do, he is ready.¹

CHAPTER VII.

FRIEDRICH REAPPEARS ON THE FIELD, AND IN SEVEN DAYS AFTER COMES THE CATASTROPHE OF MAXEN.

NOVEMBER 6th–8th, Daun has gone to Meissen Country : fairly ebbing homeward ; Henri following, with Hülsen joined,—not vehemently attacking the rhinoceros, but judiciously pricking him forward. Daun goes at his slowest step : in many divisions, covering a wide circuit ; sticking to all the strong posts, till his own time for quitting them : slow, sul-

Madras ; but finds he has no money ;—goes extorting money from Black Potentates about, Rajah of Travancore, &c., in a violent and extraordinary style ; and can get little. Nevertheless, 14th December 1758, Lays Siege to Madras.

16th February 1759, Is obliged to quit trenches at Madras, and retire dismally upon Pondichery,—to mere indigence, mutiny (“ten mutinies”), Official conspiracy, and chaos come again.

22d January 1760, Makes outrush on Wandewash, and the English posted there ; is beaten, driven back into Pondichery. April 1760, Is besieged in Pondichery. 16th January 1761, Is taken, Pondichery. French India, and he ;—to Madras he, lest the French Official Party kill him, as they attempt to do.

23d September 1761, Arrives, prisoner, in England ; thence, on parole, to France and Paris, 21st October. November 1762, to Bastille ; waits trial nineteen months ; trial lasts two years. 6th May 1776, To be beheaded,—9th May, was. See Beaton, ii. 369–372, 96–110, &c. ; Voltaire (Fragments sur l'Inde), in Œuvres, xxix. 183–253 ; Biographie Universelle, § Lally.

¹Speech, 4th November, supra.

lenly cautious; like a man descending dangerous precipices back foremost, and will not be hurried. So it had lasted about a week; Daun for the last four days sitting restive, obstinate, but Henri pricking into him more and more, till the rhinoceros seemed actually about lifting himself,—when Friedrich in person arrived in his Brother's Camp.¹

At the Schloss of Herschstein, a mile or two behind Lom-matsch, which is Henri's headquarter (still to westward of Meissen; Daun hanging on, seven or eight miles to south-eastward ahead; loth to go, but actually obliged),—it was there, Tuesday November 13th, that the King met his Brother again. A King free of his gout; in joyful spirits; and high of humour,—like a man risen indignant, once more got to his feet, after three-months oppressions and miseries from the unworthy. “Too high,” mourns Retzow, in a gloomy tone, as others do in perhaps a more indulgent one. Beyond doubt, Friedrich's farther procedures in this grave and weighty Daun business were more or less imprudent; of a too rapid and rash nature; and turned out bitterly unlucky to him. “Had he left the management to Henri!” sighed everybody, after the unlucky event.

Friedrich had not arrived above four-and-twenty hours, when news came in: “The Austrians in movement again; actually rolling off Dresden-ward again!” “Haha, do they smell me already!” laughed he: “Well, I will send Daun to the Devil,”—not adding, “if I can.” And instantly ordered sharp pursuit,—and sheer stabbing with the oxgoad, not soft and delicate pricking, as Henri's lately.² Friedrich, in fact, was in a fiery condition against Daun: “You trampled on me, you heavy buffalo, these three months; but that is over now!”—and took personally the vanguard in this pursuit. And had a bit of hot fighting in the Village of Korbitz (scene of that Finck-Haddick “Action,” 21st September last, and of poor Haddick's ruin, and retirement to the Waters);—where the Austrians now prove very fierce and obstinate; and will not go, till well slashed into, and torn out by sheer beating:

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 301–305.

² Retzow, ii. 168; Tempelhof, iii. 306.

—which was visibly a kind of comfort to the King's humour. "Our Prussians do still fight, then, much as formerly ! And it was all a hideous Nightmare, all that, and Daylight and Fact are come, and Friedrich is himself again !"

They say Prince Henri took the liberty of counselling him, even of entreating him : "Leave well alone ; why run risks ?" said Henri. Daun, it was pretty apparent, had no outlook at the present but that of sauntering home to Böhmen ; leaving Dresden to be an easy prey again, and his whole Campaign to fall futile, as the last had. Under Henri's gentle driving he would have gone slower ; but how salutary, if he only went ! These were Henri's views : but Friedrich was not in the slow humour ; impatient to be in Dresden ; "will be quartered there in a week," writes he, "and more at leisure than now." ¹ He is thinking of Leuthen, of Rossbach, of Campaign 1757, so gloriously restored after ruin ; and, in the fire of his soul, is hoping to do something similar a second time. That is Retzow's notion : who knows but there may be truth in it ? A proud Friedrich, got on his feet again after such usage ;—nay, who knows whether it was quite so unwise to be impressive on the slow rhinoceros, and try to fix some thorn in his snout, or say (figuratively), to hobble his hind feet ; which, I am told, would have been beautifully ruinous ; and, though riskish, was not impossible ? ² Ill it indisputably turned out ; and we have, with brevity, to say how, and leave readers to their judgment of it.

It was in the Village of Krögis, about six miles forward, on the Meissen-Freyberg road, a mile or two on from Korbitz, and directly after the fierce little tussle in that Village,—that Friedrich, his blood still up, gave the Order for Maxen, which proved so unlucky to him. Wunsch had been shot off in pursuit of the beaten Austrians ; but they ran too fast ; and Wunsch came back without farther result, still early in the day. Back as far as Krögis, where the next Head-quarter is to be ;—and finds the King still in a fulminant condition ; none the milder, it is likely, by Wunsch's returning without result. "Go straight to General Finck ; bid him march at once !" orders the King ; and rapidly gives Wunsch the Instructions Finck is to follow. Finck and his Corps are near Nossen, some ten miles ahead of Krögis, some twenty west from Dresden. There, since yesterday, stands Finck, infesting the left or western flank of the Austrians,—what was their left, and will be again, when they call halt and face round on us :—Let Finck now march at once, quite round that western flank ; by Freyberg, Dippoldiswalde, thence east to Maxen ; plant himself at Maxen (a dozen miles south of Dresden, among the rocky Hills), and stick diligently in the rear of those Austrians, cutting off, or threatening to cut off, their communications with Bohemia, and block the Pirna Country for them.

¹ "Wilsdruf, 17th November 1759," and still more "19th November," Friedrich to Voltaire, in high spirits that way (Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiii. 66).

² Tempelhof, iii. 317, &c.

Friedrich calculates that, if Daun is for retreating by Pirna Country, this will, at lowest, be a method to quicken him in that movement ; or perhaps it may prove a method to cut off such retreat altogether, and force Daun to go circling by the Lausitz Hills and Wildernesses, exposed to tribulations which may go nigh to ruin him. That is Friedrich's proud thought : "An unfortunate Campaign ; winding up, nevertheless, as 1757 did, in blazes of success !" And truly, if Friedrich could have made himself into Two ; and, while flashing and charging in Daun's front, have been in command at Maxen in Daun's rear,—Friedrich could have made a pretty thing of this Maxen Enterprise ; and might in good part have realised his proud program. But there is no getting two Friedrichs. Finck, a General of approved quality, he is the nearest approach we can make to a second Friedrich ;—and he, ill-luck too superadding itself, proves tragically inadequate. And sets all the world, and Opposition Retzow, exclaiming : "See : Pride goes before a fall !" —

At 3 in the afternoon, Friedrich, intensely surveying from the heights of Krögis the new Austrian movements and positions, is astonished, not agreeably ("What, still only here, Herr General !"), by a personal visit from Finck. Finck finds the Maxen business intricate, precarious ; wishes farther instructions, brings forward this objection and that. Friedrich at last answers : "You know I can't stand making of difficulties (Er weiss dass ich die Difficultäten nicht leiden kann ; mache dass Er fort Kommt) ; contrive to get it done !" With which poor comfort Finck has to ride back to Nossen ; and scheme out his dispositions overnight.

Next morning, Thursday 15th, Finck gets on march ; drives the Reichsfolk out of Freyberg ; reaches Dippoldiswalde :—"Freyberg is to be my Magazine," considers Finck ; "Dippoldiswalde my half-way house ; Four Battalions of my poor Eighteen shall stand there, and secure the meal-carts." Friday 16th, Finck has his Vanguard, Wunsch leading it, in possession of Maxen and the Heights ; and on Saturday gets there himself, with all his people and equipments. I should think about 12,000 men : in a most intersected, intertwisted Hill Country ; full of gulleys, dells and winding brooks ;—it is fore-court of the Pirna rocks, our celebrated Camp of Gahmig lies visible to north, Dohna and the Rothwasser bounding us to east ;—in grim November weather, some snow falling, or snow-powder, alternating with sleet and glazing frosts : by no means a beautiful enterprise to Finck. Not one of his own choosing, had one a choice in such cases.

To Daun nothing could be more unwelcome than this news of Finck, embattled there at Maxen in the inextricable Hill-country, direct on the road of Daun's meal-carts and Bohemian communications. And truly withal,—what Daun does not yet hear, but can guess,—there is gone, in supplement or as auxiliary to Finck, a fierce Hussar party, under Grüne Kleist, their fiercest Hussar since Mayer died ; who this very day, at Aussig, burns Daun's first considerable Magazine ; and has others in view for the same fate.¹ An evident thing to Daun, that Finck being there, meal has ceased.

On the instant, Daun falls back on Dresden ; Saturday 17th, takes post in the Dell of Plauen (Plauen'sche Grund) ; an impassable Chasm, with sheer steeps on both sides, stretching southward from Dresden in front of the Hill Country : thither Daun marches, there to consider what is to be done with Finck. Amply safe this position is ; none better in the world : a Village, Plauen, and a Brook, Weistritz, in the bottom of this exquisite Chasm ; sheer rock-walls on each side,—high especially on the Daun, or south side ;—head-quarters can be in Dresden itself ; room for your cavalry on the plain ground between Dresden and the Chasm. A post both safe and comfortable ; only you must not loiter in making up your mind as to Finck ; for Friedrich has followed on the instant. Friedrich's head-quarter is already Wilsdruf, which an hour or two ago was Daun's : at Kesselsdorf vigilant Ziethen is vanguard.

¹ Friedrich's second Letter to Voltaire, Wilsdruf, "19th November 1759."

So that Friedrich looks over on you from the northern brow of your Chasm ; delays are not good near such a neighbour.

Daun,—urged on by Lacy, they say,—is not long in deciding that, in this strait, the short way out will be to attack Finck in the Hills. Daun is in the Hills, as well as Finck (this Plauen Chasm is the boundary-ditch of the Hills) : Daun with 27,000 horse and foot, moving on from this western part ; 3,000 light people (one Sincere the leader of them), moving simultaneously from Dresden itself, that is, from northward or north-westward ; 12,000 Reichsfolk, horse and foot, part of them already to south-eastward of Finck, other part stealing on by the Elbe bank thitherward : here, from three different points of the compass, are 42,000. These simultaneously dashing in, from west, north, south, upon Finck, may surely give account of his 12,000 and him ! If only we can keep Friedrich dark upon it ; which surely our Pandours will contrive to do.

Finck, directly on arriving at Maxen, had reported himself to the King ; and got answer before next morning : “ Very well ; but draw in those Four Battalions you have left in Dippoldiswalde ; hit with the whole of your strength, when a chance offers.” Which order Finck, literally and not too willingly, obeys ; leaves only some light remnant in Dippoldiswalde, and reinforcement to linger within reach, till a certain Bread-convoy come to him, which will be due next morning (Monday 19th) ; and which does then safely get home, though under annoyances from cannonading in the distance.

Sunday 18th, Finck fails not to reconnoitre from the highest Hill-top ; to inquire by every method : he finds, for certain, that the enemy are coming in upon him. With his own eyes he sees Reichsfolk marching, in quantity, south-eastward by the Elbe shore : “ Intending towards Dohna, as is like ? ”—and despatched Wunsch, who, accordingly, drove them out of Dohna. Of all this Finck, at once, sent word to Friedrich. Who probably enough received the message ; but who would get no new knowledge from it,—vigilant Ziethen having, by Austrian deserters and otherwise, discovered this of the Reichsfolk ; and furthermore that Sincere with 3,000 was in motion, from the north, upon Finck. Sunday evening, Friedrich despatches Ziethen’s Report : which punctually came to Finck’s hand ; but was the last thing he received from Friedrich, or Friedrich from him. The intervening Pandours picked up all the rest. The Ziethen Report, of two or three lines, most succinct but sufficient, like a cutting of hard iron, is to be read in many Books : we may as well give the Letter and it :

Friedrich's Letter (Wilsdruf, 18th November 1759). "My dear General-Lieutenant von Finck ! I send you the enclosed Report from General Ziethen, showing what is the lie of matters as seen from this side ; and leave the whole to your disposition and necessary measures. I am your well-affectioned King,—F." The Enclosure is as follows :

General Ziethen's Report (Kesselsdorf, 18th November 1759). "To your Royal Majesty, send" (no pronoun "I" allowed) "herewith a Corporal, who has deserted from the Austrians. He says, Sincere with the Reserve did march with the Reichs Army ; but a league behind it, and turned towards Dippoldiswalde. General Brentano" (Welha's old comrade, luckier than Wehla), "as this Deserter heard last night in Daun's headquarter,—which is in the southern Suburb of Dresden, in the Countess Moschinska's Garden,—was yesterday to have been in Döhlen" (looking into our outposts from the hither side of their Plauen Dell), "but was not there any longer," as our Deserter passed, "and it was said that he had gone for Maxen at three in the afternoon."

Thus curtly is Finck authorized to judge for himself in the new circumstances. Marginally is added, in Friedrich's own hand : "Er wird entweder mit den Reichern oder mit Sinceren einen Gang haben,—Either with the Reichers or with Sincere you will have a bout, I suppose."

Finck, from his own Hill-top, on Sunday and Monday, sees all this of Ziethen, and much more. Sees the vanguard of Daun himself approaching Dippoldiswalde, cannonading his meal-carts as they issue there ; on all sides his enemies encompassing him like bees ;—and has a sphinx-riddle on his mind, such as soldier seldom had. Shall he manœuvre himself out, and march away, bread-carts, baggages and all entire ? There is still time, and perfect possibility, by Dippoldiswalde there, or by other routes and methods. But again, did not his Majesty expect, do not those words "a bout" still seem to expect, a bit of fighting with somebody or other ? Finck was an able soldier, and his skill and courage well known ; but probably another kind of courage was wanted this day, of which Finck had not enough. Finck was not king of this matter; Finck was under a King who perhaps misjudged the matter. If Finck saw no method of doing other than hurt and bad service to his King by staying here, Finck should have had the courage to come away, and front the King's unreasonable anger, expecting redress one day, or never any redress. That was Finck's duty: but everybody sees how hard it was for flesh and blood.

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 309.

Finck, truer to the letter than to the spirit, determined to remain. Did, all that Monday, his best to prepare himself; called in his outposts ("Was not I ordered?" thinks Finck, too literally); and sees his multitudes of enemies settle round him;—Daun alone has 27,000 men, who take camp at Dippoldiswalde; and in sum-total, they are as 4 to 1 of Finck:—a Finck still resolute of face, though internally his thoughts may be haggard enough. Doubtless he hopes, too, that Friedrich will do something:—unaware that none of his messages reach Friedrich. As for Daun, having seen his people safely encamped here, he returns to Dresden for the night, to see that Friedrich is quiet. Friedrich is quiet enough: Daun, at seven next morning (Tuesday 20th), appeared on the ground again: and from all sides Finck is assaulted,—from Daun's side nearest and soonest, with Daun's best vigour.

Dippoldiswalde is some seven miles from Maxen. Difficult hill-road all the way: but the steepest, straitest and worse place is at Reinhartsgrimma, the very first Hamlet after you are out of Dippoldiswalde. There is a narrow gullet there, overhung with heights all round. The roads are slippery, glazed with sleet and frost; Cavalry, unroughened, make sad sliding and sprawling; hardly the Infantry are secure on their feet: a terrible business, getting masses of artillery-wagons, horse and man, through such a Pass! It is thought, had Finck garnished this Pass of Reinhartsgrimma with the proper batteries, the proper musketries, Daun never would have got through. Finck had not a gun or a man in it: "Had not I order?" said he,—again too literally. As it was, Daun, sliding and sprawling in the narrow steeps, had difficulties almost too great; and, they say, would have given it up, had it not been that a certain Major urged, "Can be done, Excellenz, and shall!" and that the temper of his soldiers was everywhere excellent. Unfortunate Finck had no artillery to bear on Daun's transit through the Pass. Nothing but some weak body of hussars and infantry stood looking into it, from the Hill of Hausdorf: even these might have given him some slight hindrance; but these were played upon by endless Pandours, "issuing from wood near by," with musketries, and at length with cannon batteries, one and another;—and had to fall back, or to be called back, to Maxen Hill, where the main force is.

In the course of yesterday, by continual reconnoitering, by Austrian deserters, and intense comparison of symptoms, Finck had completely ascertained where the Enemy's Three Attacks were to be,—“on Maxen, from Dippoldiswalde, Trohritz, Dohna, simultaneously three attacks,” it appears:—and had with all his skill arranged himself on the Maxen summits to meet these. He stands now elaborately divided into Three groups against those Three simultaneities; forming (sadly wide apart, one would say, for such a force as Finck's) a very obtuse-angled triangle:—the obtuse vertex of which (if readers care to look on their Map) is Trohritz, the road Brentano and Sincere are coming. On the base-angles, Maxen and Dohna, Finck expects Daun and the Reich. From Trohritz to Maxen is near two miles; from Maxen to Dohna above four. At Dohna stands Wunsch against the Reich; Finck himself at Maxen, expecting Daun, as the pith of the whole affair. In this triangular way stands Finck at the topmost heights of the country,—“Maxen highest, but Hausdorf only a little lower,”—and has not thought of disputing the climb upwards. Too literal an eye to his orders: alas, he was not himself king, but only king's deputy!

The result is, about 11 A.M., as I obscurely gather, Daun has conquered the climb; Daun's musketries begin to glitter on the top of Hausdorf; and 26 or 32 heavy cannon open their throats there; and the Three Attacks break loose. Finck's Maxen batteries (scarcely higher than Daun's, and far inferior in weight) respond with all diligence, the poor regimental field-pieces helping what they can. Mutual cannonade, very loud for an hour and a half; terrific, but doing little mischief; after which Daun's musketries (the ground now sufficiently clear to Daun), which are the practical thing, begin opening, first from one point, then from another: and there ensues, for five hours coming, at Maxen and at the other two points of Finck's triangle, such a series of explosive chargings, wheelings, worryings and intricate death-wrestlings, as it would provoke every reader to attempt describing to him. Except indeed he were a soldier, bound to know the defence of posts; in which case I could fairly promise him that there are means of understanding the affair, and that he might find benefit in it.'

Daun's Grenadiers, and Infantry generally, are in triumphant spirits; confident of victory, as they may reasonably be. Finck's people, too, behave well, some of them conspicuously well, though in gloomier mood; and make stubborn fight, successful here and there, but, as a whole, not capable of succeeding. By 3 in the afternoon, the Austrians have forced the Maxen Post; they "enter Maxen with great shoutings;" extrude the obstinate Prussian remnants; and, before long, have the poor Village "on fire in every part." Finck retreating northward to Schmörsdorf, towards the obtuse angle of his triangle, if haply there may be help in that quarter for him. Daun does not push him much; has Maxen safely burning in every part.

From Schmörsdorf, Finck pushes out a Cavalry charge on Brentano. "Could we but repulse Brentano yonder," thinks he, "I might have those Four Battalions to hand, and try again!" But Brentano makes such cannonading, the Cavalry swerve to a Hollow on their right; then find they have not ground, and retire quite fruitless. Finck's Cavalry, and the Cavalry generally, with their horses all sliding on the frosty mountain-gnarls, appear to be good for little this day. Brentano, victorious over the Cavalry, comes on with such storm, he sweeps through the obtuse angle, home upon Finck; and sweeps him out of Schmörsdorf Village to Schmörsdorf Hill, there to take refuge, as the night sinks,—and to see himself, if his wild heart will permit him to be candid, a ruined man. Of the Three Attacks, Two have completely succeeded on him; only Wunsch, at Dohna, stands victorious; he has held back the Reich all day, and even chased it home to its posts on the Rothwasser (Red Water), multitudinous as it was.

Finck's mood, as the November shadows gathered on him,—the equal heart may, at least, pity poor Finck! His resolution is fixed: "Cut ourselves through, this night: Dohna is ours; other side that Red Water there are roads;—perish or get through!" And the Generals (who are rallied now "on the Heights of Falkenhain and Bloschwitz," midway between Maxen and Dohna) get that Order from him. And proceed to arrange for executing it,—though with outlook more and more desperate, as their scouts report that every pass and post, on the Red Water, is beset by Reichsfolk. "Wunsch, with the Cavalry, he at least may thread his way out, under cloud of night, by the opposite or Daun side," calculates Finck. And Wunsch sets out accordingly: a very questionable, winding, subterranean march; difficult in the extreme, —the wearied slipshod horses going at a snail's pace; and, in the difficult passes, needing to be dragged through with bridle, and even to be left altogether:—in which, withal, it will prove of no use for Wunsch to succeed! Finck's Generals, endeavouring to rank and rearrange through the night, find that their very cartridges are nearly spent, and that of men, such wounding, such deserting has there been, they have, at this time, by precise count, 2,836 rank and file. Evidently desperate.

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 307-317. Journal und Nachricht von der Gefangennahme des Finck'schen Corps bey Maxen, im Jahre 1759 (Seyfarth, Beylagen, ii. 637-654).

At daylight, Daun's cannon beginning again from the Maxen side, Finck sends to capitulate. "Absolute surrender," answers Daun: "prisoners of war, and you shall keep your private baggage. General Wunsch with the Cavalry, he too must turn back and surrender!" Finck pleaded hard, on this last score: "General Wunsch, as head of the Cavalry, is not under me; is himself chief in that department. But it was of no use; Wunsch had to return (not quite got through Daun's Lines, after such a night), and to surrender, like everybody else. Like eight other Generals; like Wolfersdorf of Torgau, and many a brave Officer and man. Wednesday morning, 21st November 1759: it is Finck's fourth day on Maxen; his last in the Prussian Service.

That same Wednesday Afternoon, there were ranked in the Grosse Garten at Dresden, of dejected Prussian Prisoners from Maxen, what exact number was never known: the Austrians said 15,000; but nobody well believed them; their last certain instalment being only, in correct numbers, 2,836. Besides the killed, wounded, and already captured, many had deserted, many had glided clear off. It is judged that Friedrich lost, by all these causes, about 12,000 men. Gone wholly,—with their equipments and appurtenances wholly, which are not worth counting in comparison. Finck and the other Generals, 8 of them, and 529 Officers,—Finck, Wunsch, Wolfersdorf, Mosel (of the Olmütz Convoy), not to mention others of known worth, this is itself a sore loss to Friedrich, and in present circumstances an irreparable.¹

¹ Seyfarth, ii. 576: in Helden-Geschichte (v. 1115), the Vienna Account.

The outburst and paroxysm of Gazetteer rumour, which arose in Europe over this, must be left to the imagination; still more the whirlwind of astonishment, grief, remorse and indignation that raged in the heart of Friedrich on first hearing of it. "The Caudine Forks;" "Scene of Pirna over again, in reverse form;" "Is not your King at last over with it?" said and sang multifariously the Gazetteers. As counter-chorus to which, in a certain Royal Heart: "That miserable purblind Finck, unequal to his task;—that over-hasty I, who drove him upon it! This disgrace, loss nigh ruinous; in fine, this infernal Campaign (cette Campagne infernale)!" The Anecdote-Books abound in details of Friedrich's behaviour at Wilsdruf, that day; mythical all, or in good part, but symbolising a case that is conceivable to everybody. Or would readers care to glance into the very fact with their own eyes? As happens to be possible:

1°. Before Maxen: Friedrich to D'Argens and others.

"To D'Argens (Krögis, 15th November," order for Maxen just given. "Yesterday I joined the Army" (day before yesterday, but took the field yesterday), "and Daun decamped. I have followed him thus far, and will continue it to the frontiers of Bohemia. Our measures are so taken" (Finck, to wit) "that he will not get out of Saxony without considerable losses. Yesterday cost him 500 men taken at Krögis here. Every movement he makes will cost him as many."¹

"To Voltaire (Wilsdruf, 17th November)." "We are verging on the end of our Campaign: and I will write to you in eight days from Dresden, with more composure and coherency than now."²

"To the same (Wilsdruf, 19th November)." "The Austrians are packing off to Bohemia,—where, in reprisal for the incendiary operations they have done in my countries, I have burnt them two big magazines. I render the beautiful Hero's retreat as difficult as possible: and I hope he will come upon some bad adventures within a few days."³

"Same day and place, to D'Argens." A volley of most rough-paced off-hand Rhyming, direct from the heart. "Ode"

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 101. ² Ibid. xxiii. 66. ³ Ibid. xxiii. 66.

(as he afterwards terms it, or irrepressible extempore Lilt) "to Fortune:"

"Marquis, quel changement, what a change! I, a poor heretic creature, never blessed by the Holy Father; indeed, little frequenting Church, nor serving either Baal or the God of Israel; held down these many months, and reported by more than one shaven scoundrel" (priest-pamphleteer at Vienna) "to be quite extinct, and gone vagabond over the world,—see how capricious Fortune, after all her hundred preferences of my rivals, lifts me with helpful hand from the deep, and packs this Hero of the Hat and Sword,—whom Popes have blessed what they could, and who has walked in Pilgrimage before now" (to Marienzell once, I believe, publicly at Vienna) —"out of Saxony; panting, harassed goes he, like a stranger dog from some kitchen where the cook had flogged him out!" * * (A very exultant Lilt, and with a good deal more of the chanticleer in it than we are used to in this King!)

"2°. After Maxen.

"To D'Argens (Wilsdruf, 22d Nov.)." "Do with that" (some small piece of business) "whatever you like, my dear Marquis. I am so stupefied (étourdi) with the misfortune which has befallen General Finck, that I cannot recover from my astonishment. It deranges all my measures; it cuts me to the quick. Ill-luck, which persecutes my old age, has followed me from the Mark" (Kunersdorf, in the Mark of Brandenburg) "to Saxony. I will still strive what I can. The little Ode I sent you, addressed To Fortune, had been written too soon! One should not sing victory till the battle is over. I am so crushed down by these incessant reverses and disasters, that I wish a thousand times I were dead; and from day to day I grow wearier of dwelling in a body worn-out and condemned to suffer. I am writing to you in the first moment of my grief. Astonishment, sorrow, indignation, scorn, all blended together, lacerate my soul. Let us get to the end, then, of this execrable Campaign; I will then write to you what is to become of me; and we will arrange the rest. Pity me;—and make no noise about me; bad news go fast enough of themselves. Adieu, dear Marquis."¹

All this, of course, under such pressing call of actualities, had very soon to transform itself into silence; into new resolution, and determinate despatch of business. But the King retained a bitter memory of it all his days. To Finck he was inexorable:—ordered him, the first thing on his return from Austrian Captivity, Trial by Court-Martial; which (Ziethen presiding, June 1763) censured Finck in various points, and gave him, in supplement to the Austrian detention, a Year's imprisonment in Spandau. No ray of pity visible for him, then or afterwards, in the Royal mind. So that the poor man had to beg his dismissal; get it, and go to Denmark for new promotion and appreciation.—“Far too severe!” grumbled the Opposition voices, with secret counter-severity. And truly it would have been more beautiful to everybody, for the moment, to have made matters soft to poor Finck,—had Friedrich ever gone on that score with his Generals and Delegates; which, though the reverse of a cruel man, he never did. And truly, as we often observe, the Laws of Fact are still severer than Friedrich was:—so that, in the long-run, perhaps it is beautifullest of all, for a King, who is just, to be radamantine in important cases.

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 103-106.

² Ibid. xix. 107.

Exulting Daun, instead of Bohemia for winter-quarters, pushes out now for the prize of Saxony itself. Daun orders Beck to attack suddenly another Outpost of Friedrich's, which stands rearward of him at Meissen, under a General Dierecke,—the same whom, as Colonel Dierecke, we saw march out of flamy Zittau, summer gone two years. Beck goes in accordingly, 3d December; attacks Dierecke, not by surprise, but with overwhelming superiority; no reinforcement possible: Dierecke is on the wrong side of the Elbe, no retreat or reinforcement for him; has to fight fiercely all day, Meissen Bridge being in a broken state; then, at night, to ship his people across in Elbe boats, which are much delayed by the floating ice, so that daylight found 1,500 of them on that northern side; all of whom, with General Dierecke himself, were made prisoners by Beck.¹ A comfortable supplement to Maxen, though not of the same magnificence.

After which, Daun himself issued minatory from the Plauen

¹ Tempelhof, iii. 221: “3d–4th December 1759.”

Chasm ; expecting, as all the world did, that Friedrich, how is 36,000 of Unfortunate against, say, 72,000 of Triumphant, will, under penalty, take himself away. But it proved otherwise. "If you beat us, Excellency Feldmarschall, yes ; but till then—!" Friedrich draws out in battalia ; Leo, in wild ragged state and temper, versus Bos in the reverse : "Come on, then !" Rhinoceros Bos, though in a high frame of mind, dare not, on cool survey ; but retires behind the Plauen Chasm again. Will at least protect Dresden from recapture ; and wait here, in the interim ; carting his provision out of Bohemia,—which is a rough business, with Elbe frozen, and the passes in such a choked wintry state. Upon whom Friedrich, too, has to wait under arms, in grim neighbourhood, for six weeks to come : such a time as poor young Archenholtz never had before or after.¹ It was well beyond Newyears-day, before Friedrich could report of himself, and then only in a sense, as will be seen : "We retired to this poor cottage" (cottage still standing, in the little Town of Freyberg) ; "Daun did the like ; and this unfortunate Campaign, as all things do, came actually to an end."

Daun holds Dresden and the Dell of Plauen ; but Saxony, to the world's amazement, he is as far as ever from holding. "Daun's front is a small arc of a circle, bending round from Dresden to Dippoldiswalde ; Friedrich is at Freyberg in a bigger concave arc, concentric to Daun, well overlapping Daun on that southward or landward side, and ready for him, should he stir out ; Kesselsdorf is his nearest post to Daun ; and the Plauen Chasm for boundary, which was not overpassed by either." In Dresden, and the patch of hill country to the south-eastward of it by Elbe side, which is instep or glacis of the Pirna rock country, 70 square miles or so, there rules Daun ; and this,—with its heights of Gahmig, valuable as a defence for Dresden against Austria, but not otherwise of considerable value,—was all that Daun this year, or pretty much in any coming year, could realise of conquest in Saxony.

Fabius Cunctator has not succeeded, as the public expected. In fact, ever since that of Hochkirch and the Papal Hat, he has been a waning man, more and more questionable to the undiscerning public. Maxen was his last gleam upwards ; a round of applause rose again on Maxen, feeble in comparison with Hochkirch, but still arguing hope,—which, after this, more and more died out ; so that, in two years more, poor Madam Daun, going to Imperial Levee, “ had her state-carriage half-filled with nightcaps, thrown into it by the Vienna people, in token of her husband’s great talent for sleep.”¹

¹ Archenholtz, ii. 11-13.

CHAPTER VIII.

MISCELLANEA IN WINTER-QUARTERS, 1759–60.

FRIEDRICH was very loth to quit the field this Winter. In spite of Maxen and ill-luck and the unfavourablest weather, it still was, for about two months, his fixed purpose to recapture Dresden first, and drive Daun home. “ Had I but a 12,000 of Auxiliaries to guard my right flank, while trying it ! ” said he. Ferdinand magnanimously sent him the Hereditary Prince with 12,000, who staid above two months ;² and Friedrich did march about, attempting that way,³—pushed forward to Maguire and Dippoldiswalde, looked passionately into Maguire on all sides ; but found him, in those frozen chasms, and rock-labyrinths choked with snow, plainly unattackable ; him and everybody, in such frost-element ;—and renounced the passionate hope.

It was not till the middle of January that Friedrich put his troops into partial cantonments, Head-quarter Freyberg ; troops still mainly in the Villages from Wilsdruf and southward, close by their old Camp there. Camp still left standing, guarded by Six Battalions ; six after six, alternating week about : one of the grimmest Camps in Nature ; the canvas roofs grown mere ice-plates, the tents mere sanctuaries of frost:—never did poor young Archenholtz see such industry in dragging wood-fuel, such boiling of biscuits in broken ice, such crowding round the embers to roast one side of you, while the other was freezing.¹ But Daun's people, on the opposite side of Platen Dell, did the like; their tents also were left standing in the frozen state, guarded by alternating battalions, no better off than their Prussian neighbours. This of the Tents, and Six frost-bitten Battalions guarding them, lasted till April. An extraordinary obstinacy on the part both of Daun and of Friedrich; alike jealous of even seeming to yield one inch more of ground.

¹ Archenholtz (Anno 1762, “ last Siege of Schweidnitz ”).

² “ Till February 15th ; ” List of the Regiments (German all), in Seyfarth, ii. 578 n.

³ Œuvres de Frédéric, v. 32. Old Newspaper rumours : in Gentleman’s Magazine, xxix. 605, “ 29th December, ’ &c.

The Hereditary Prince, with his 12,000, marched home again in February; indeed, ever after the going into cantonments, all use of the Prince and his Force here visibly ceased; and, on the whole, no result whatever followed those strenuous antagonisms, and frozen tents left standing for three months; and things remained, practically what they were. So that, as the grand "Peace Negotiations" also came to nothing, we might omit this of Winter-quarters altogether; and go forward to the opening of Campaign Fifth;—were it not that characteristic features do otherwise occur in it, curious little unveilings of the secret hopes and industries of Friedrich;—besides which, there have minor private events fallen out, not without interest to human readers. For whose behoof mainly a loose intercalary Chapter may be thrown together here.

Serene Highness of Würtemberg, at Fulda (November 30th, 1759), is just about "firing Victoria," and giving a Ball to Beauty and Fashion, in Honour of a certain Event—but is unpleasantly interrupted.

November 21st, the very day while Finck was capitulating in the Hills of Maxen, Duke Ferdinand, busy ever since his Victory at Minden, did, after a difficult Siege of Münster, Siege by Imhof, with Ferdinand protecting him, get Münster into hand again, which was reckoned a fine success to him.

¹ Archenholtz (ut supra), ii. 11-15.

Very busy has the Duke been ; industriously reaping the fruits of his Victory at Minden ; and this, the conclusive rooting-out of the French from that Westphalian region, is a very joyful thing ; and puts Ferdinand in hopes of driving them over the Mayn altogether. Which some think he would have done ; had not he, with magnanimous oblivion of self and wishes, agreed to send the Hereditary Prince and those 12,000 to assist in Friedrich's affairs, looking upon that as the vital point in these Allied Interests. Friedrich's attempts, we have said, turned out impossible ; nor would the Hereditary Prince and his 12,000, though a good deal talked about in England and elsewhere,¹ require more than mention ; were it not that on the road thither, at Fulda ("Fulda is 'half-way house to Saxony," thinks Ferdinand, "should Pitt and Britannic Majesty be pleased to consent, as I dare presume they will"), the Hereditary Prince had, in his swift way, done a thing useful for Ferdinand himself, and which caused a great emotion, chiefly of laughter, over the world, in those weeks.

"No Enemy of Friedrich's," says my Note, "is of feller humour than the Serenity of Würtemberg, Karl Eugen, Reigning Duke of that unfortunate Country ; for whom, in past days, Friedrich had been so fatherly, and really took such pains. 'Fatherly? Step-fatherly, you mean ; and for his own vile uses !' growled the Serenity of Würtemberg :—always an ominous streak of gloom in that poor man ; streak which is spread now to whole skies of boiling darkness, owing to deliriums there have been ! Enough, Karl Eugen, after divorcing his poor Wife, had distinguished himself by a zeal without knowledge, beyond almost all the enemies of Friedrich,—and still continues in that bad line of industry. His poor Wife he has made miserable in some measure ; also himself ; and, in a degree, his poor soldiers and subjects, who are with him by compulsion in this Enterprise. The Würtembergers are Protestants of old type ; and want no fighting against 'the Protestant Hero,' but much the reverse ! Serene Karl had to shoot a good few of these poor people, before they would march at all ; and his procedures were indeed, and continued to be, of a very crying nature, though his poor Populations took them silently. Always something of perverse in this Serene Highness; has it, I think, by kind.

¹ Walpole, George Second, iii. 248 (in a sour Opposition tone) ; &c. &c.

"Besides his quota to the Reich, Karl Eugen has 12,000 more on foot,—and it is of them we are treating at present. In 1757, he had lent these troops to the Empress Queen, for a consideration: it was they that stood on the Austrian left, at Lenthén; and were the first that got beaten, and had to cease standing,—as the Austrians were abundantly loud in proclaiming. To the disgust of Serene Highness: 'Which of you did stand, then? Was it their blame, led as they were?' argued he. And next year, 1758, after Crefeld, he took his 12,000 to the French ('subsidy,' or consideration, 'to be paid in salt,' it appears'); with whom they marched about, and did nothing considerable. The Serenity had pleaded, 'I must command them myself!' 'You?' said Belleisle, and would not hear of it. Next year again, however, that is 1759, the Duke was positive, 'I must;' Belleisle not less so, 'You cannot,'—till Minden fell out; and then, in the wreck of Conntades, Belleisle had to consent. Serenity of Würtemberg, at that late season, took the field accordingly; and Broglie now has him at Fulda, 'To cut off Ferdinand from Cassel;' to threaten Ferdinand's left flank and his provision-carts in that quarter. May really become unpleasant there to Ferdinand,—and ought to be cut out by the Hereditary Prince. 'To Fulda, then, and cut him out!'

"Fulda, Tuesday, 30th November 1759. Serene Highness is lying here for a week past; abundantly strong for the task on hand,—has his own 12,000, supplemented by 1,000 French Light Horse;—but is widely scattered withal, posted in a kind of triangular form, his main posts being Fulda itself, and a couple of others, each thirty miles from Fulda, and five miles from one another,—with 'patrols to connect them,' better or worse. Abundantly strong for the task, and in perfect security; and indeed intends this day to 'fire victoria' for the Catastrophe at Maxen, and in the evening will give a Ball in farther honour of so salutary an event:—when, about 9 A.M., news arrives at the gallop, 'Prussians in full march; are within an hour of the Town Bridge!' Figure to what flurry of Serene Highness; of the victoria-shooting apparatus; of busy man-milliner people, and the Beauty and Fashion of Fulda in general!

"The night before, a rumour of the French Post being driven in by somebody had reached Serene Highness ; who gave some vague order, not thinking it of consequence. Here, however, is the Fact come to hand, in a most urgent and undeniable manner ! Serene Highness gets on horse-back ; but what can that help ? One cannon (has nothing but light cannon) he does plant on the Bridge : but see, here come premonitory bombshells one and another, terrifying to the mind ;—and a single Hessian dragoon, plunging forward on the one unready cannon, and in the air making horrid circles,—the gunners leave said cannon to him, take to their heels ; and the Bridge is open. The rest of the affair can be imagined. Retreat at our swiftest, ‘running fight,’ we would fain call it, by various roads ; lost two flags, two cannon ; prisoners were above 1,200, many of them Officers. ‘A merciful Providence saved the Duke’s Serene Person from hurt,’ say the Stuttgart Gazetteers : which was true,—Serene Highness having been inspired to gallop instantly to rearward and landward, leaving an order to somebody, ‘Do the best you can !’

“So that the Ball is up ; dress-pumps and millineries getting all locked into their drawers again,—with abundance of teehee-ing (I hope, mostly in a light vein) from the fair creatures disappointed of their dance this time. Next day, Serene Highness drew farther back, and next day again farther,—towards Frankenland and home, as the surest place ;—and was no more heard of in those localities.”¹

Making his first exit, not yet quite his final, from the War-Theatre, amid such tempests of haha-ing and teehee-ing. With what thoughts in his own lofty opaque mind ;—like a crowned mule, of such pace and carriage, who had unexpectedly stepped upon galvanic wires !—

As to those poor Würtembergers, and their notion of the “Protestant Hero,” I remark farther, that there is a something of real truth in it. Friedrich’s Creed, or Theory of the Universe, differed extremely, in many important points, from that of Dr. Martin Luther : but in the vital all-essential point, what we may call the heart’s-core of all Creeds which are human, human and not simious or diabolic, the King and the Doctor were with their whole heart at one : That it is not allowable, that it is dangerous and abominable, to attempt believing what is not true. In that sense, Friedrich, by nature and position, was a Protestant, and even the chief Protestant in the world. What kind of "Hero," in this big War of his, we are gradually learning ;—in which too, if you investigate, there is not wanting something of "Protestant Heroism," even in the narrow sense. For it does appear,—Maria Theresa having a real fear of God, and poor Louis a real fear of the Devil, whom he may well feel to be getting dangerous purchase over him,—some hope-gleams of acting upon Schism, and so meriting Heaven, did mingle with their high terrestrial combinations, on this unique opportunity, more than are now supposed in careless History Books.

¹ Buchholz, ii. 332 ; Mauvillon, ii. 80 ; Helden-Geschichte, v. 1184-1193 ; Old Newspapers, in Gentleman’s Magazine, xxix. 608.

*What is Perpetual President Maupertuis doing, all this While?
Is he still in Berlin ; or where in the Universe is he ? Alas, poor Maupertuis !*

In the heat of this Campaign, "July 27th,"—some four days after the Battle of Züllichau, just while Friedrich was hurrying off for that Intersection at Sagan, and breathless Hunt of Loudon and Haddick,—poor Maupertuis had quitted this world, July 27th, 1759 ; at Basel, on the Swiss Borders, in his friend Bernouilli's house, after long months of sickness painfully spent there. And our poor Perpetual President, at rest now from all his Akakia burns, and pains and labours in flattening the Earth and otherwise, is gone.

Many beautifuller men have gone within the Year, of whom we can say nothing. But this is one whose grandly silent, and then occasionally fulminant procedures, Akakia controversies, Olympian solemnities, and flamy pirouettings under the contradiction of sinners, we once saw ; and think with a kind of human pathos that we shall see no more. From his goose of an adorer, La Beaumelle, I have riddled out the following particulars, chiefly chronological,—and offer them to susceptible readers. La Beaumelle is, in a sort, to be considered the speaker ; or La Beaumelle and this Editor in concert :

Final Pilgrimages of the Perpetual President. "Maupertuis had quitted Berlin soon after Voltaire. That threat of visiting Voltaire with pistols,—to be met by 'my syringe and vessel of dishonour' on Voltaire's part,—was his last memorability in Berlin. His last at that time; or indeed altogether, for he saw little of Berlin farther.

"End of April 1753, he got leave of absence; set out homewards, for recovery of health. Was at Paris through summer and autumn: very taciturn in society; 'preferred pretty women to any man of science;' would sententiously say a strong thing now and then, 'bitter but not without bonhomie,' shaking slightly his yellow wig. Disdainful, to how high a degree, of Akakia brabbles, and Voltaire gossip for or against! In winter, went to St. Malo; found his good Father gone; but a loving Sister still there.

"June 1754, the King wrote to him, 'Venez vite, Come quickly:' July 1754, he came accordingly, saw Berlin again; did nothing noticeable there, except get worse in health; and after eleven months, June 1756, withdrew again on leave,—never to return this time, though he well intended otherwise. But at St. Malo, when, after a month or two of Paris, he got thither (Autumn 1756), and still more, next summer, 1757, when he thought of leaving St. Malo,—what wars, and rumours of war, all over the world!

"June 1757, he went to Bordeaux, intending to take ship for 'Hamburg, and return; but the sea was full of English cruisers'" (Pitt's Descents lying in store for St. Malo itself). "No getting to Berlin by the Hamburg or sea route! 'Never mind, then,' wrote the King: 'Improve your health; go to Italy, if you can.'

"Summer 1757, Maupertuis made for Italy; got as far as Toulouse;—staid there till May following; sad, tragically stoical; saying, sparingly, and rather to women than men, strong things, admired by the worthier sort. Renounced thoughts of Italy; 'Europe bleeding, and especially France and Prussia, how go idly touring?'

"May 1758, Maupertuis left Toulouse; turned towards Berlin; slow, sad, circuitous; never to arrive. Saw Narbonne, Montpellier, Nîmes; with what meditations. At Lyons, under honours sky-high, health getting worse, stays two months; vomits clots of blood there. Thence, July 24th, to Neufchâtel and the Lord Marischal; happy there for three months. Hears there of Professor König's death (Akakia König): 'One scoundrel less in the world,' ejaculated he; 'but what is one!'—October 16th, to the road again, to Basel; stays perforce, in Bernouilli's house there, all Winter; health falling lower and lower.

"April 1759, one day he has carriage at the door ('Homeward, at all rates!'); but takes violent spasms in the carriage; can't;—can no farther in this world. Lingers here, under kind care, for above three months more: dying slowly, most painfully. With much real stoicism; not without a stiff-jointed algebraic kind of piety, almost pathetic in its sort. 'Two Capuchins from a neighbouring Convent daily gave him consolations,' not entirely satisfactory; for daily withal, 'unknown to the Capuchins, he made his Valet, who was a Protestant, read to him from the Geneva Bible;'—and finds many things hard to the human mind. July 27th, 1759, he died."

Poor Maupertuis; a man of rugged stalwart type; honest; of an ardour, an intelligence,—not to be forgotten for La Beaumelle's pulings over them. A man of good and even of high talent; unlucky in mistaking it for the highest! His poor Wife, a born Borck,—hastening from Berlin, but again and again delayed by industry of kind friends, and at last driving on in spite of everything,—met, in the last miles, his Hearse and Funeral Company. Adieu, a pitying adieu to him forever,—and even to his adoring La Beaumelle, who is rather less a blockhead than he generally seems.

This of the Two Capuchins, the last consummation of collapse in man, is what Voltaire cannot forget, but crows over with his shrillest mockery; and seldom mentions Maupertuis without that last touch to his life-drama.

Grand French Invasion-Scheme comes entirely to Wreck (Quiberon Bay, 20th November 1759): of Controller-General Silhouette, and the Outlooks of France, financial and other.

On the very day of Maxen, Tuesday November 20th, the grand French Invasion found its terminus,—not on the shores of Britain, but of Brittany, to its surprise. We saw Rodney burn the Flatbottom manufactory at Havre; Boscawen chase the Toulon Squadron, till it ended on the rocks of Lagos. From January onwards, as was then mentioned, Hawke had been keeping watch, off Brest Harbour, on Admiral Conflans, who presides there over multifarious preparations, with the last Fleet France now has. At Vannes, where Hawke likewise has ships watching, are multifarious preparations ; new Flat-bottoms, 18,000 troops,—could Conflans and they only get to sea. At the long last, they did get ;—in manner following :

¹ La Beaumelle, Vie de Maupertuis, pp. 190-216.

“ November 9th, a wild gale of wind had blown Hawke out of sight ; away home to Torbay, for the moment. ‘ Now is the time ! ’ thought Conflans, and put to sea (November 14th) ; met by Hawke, who had weighed from Torbay to his duty ; and who, of course, crowded every sail, after hearing that Conflans was out. At break of day, November 20th ” (in the very hours when poor Finck was embattling himself round Maxen, and Daun sprawling up upon him through the Passes), “ Hawke had had signal, ‘ A Fleet in sight ; ’ and soon after, ‘ Conflans in sight, ’—and the day of trial come.

“ Conflans is about the strength of Hawke, and France expects much of him ; but he is not expecting Hawke. Conflans is busy, at this moment, in the mouth of Quiberon Bay, opening the road for Vannes and the 18,000 ;—in hot chase, at the moment, of a Commodore Duff and his small Squadron, who have been keeping watch there, and are now running all they can. On a sudden, to the astonishment of Conflans, this little Squadron whirls round, every ship of it (with a sky-rending cheer, could he hear it), and commences chasing ! Conflans, taking survey, sees that it is Hawke ; he, sure enough, coming down from windward yonder, at his highest speed ; and that chasing will not now be one’s business !—

“ About 11 A.M., Hawke is here ; eight of his vanward ships are sweeping on for action. Conflans, at first, had determined to fight Hawke ; and drew up accordingly, and did try a little : but gradually thought better of it ; and decided to take shelter in the shoaly coasts and nooks thereabouts, which were unknown to Hawke, and might ruin him if he should pursue, the day being short, and the weather extremely bad. Weather itself almost to be called a storm. ‘ Shoreward, then ; eastward, every ship ! ’ became, ultimately, Conflans’s plan. On the whole, it was 2 in the afternoon before Hawke, with those vanward

Eight, could get clutch of Conflans. And truly he did then strike his claws into him, in a thunderously fervid manner, he and all hands, in spite of the roaring weather:—a man of falcon, or accipitral, nature as well as name.

“Conflans himself fought well; as did certain of the others, —all, more or less, so long as their plan continued steady:—thunderous miscellany of cannon and tempest; Conflans with his plan steady, or Conflans with his plan wavering, versus those vanward Eight, for two hours or more. But the scene was too dreadful; this ship sinking, that obliged to strike; things all going awry for Conflans. Hawke, in his own Flag-ship, bore down specially on Conflans in his,—who did wait, and exchange a couple of broadsides; but then sheered off, finding it so heavy. French Vice-Admiral next likewise gave Hawke a broadside; one only, and then sheered off, satisfied with the return. Some four others, in succession, did the like: ‘One blast, as we hurry by’ (making for the shore, mostly)! So that Hawke seemed swallowed in volcanoes (though, indeed, their firing was very bad, such a flurry among them), and his Blue Flag was invisible for some time, and various ships were hastening to help him,—till a Fifth French ship coming up with her broadside, Hawke answered her in particular (La Superbe, a Seventy-four) with all his guns together; which sent the poor ship to the bottom, in a hideously sudden manner. One other (the Thésée) had already sunk in fighting; two (the Soleil and the Héros) were already running for it,—the Héros, in a very unheroic manner! But on this terrible plunge-home of the Superbe, the rest all made for the shore;—and escaped into the rocky intricacies and the darkness. Four of Conflans’s ships were already gone,—struck, sunk, or otherwise extinct,—when darkness fell, and veiled Conflans and his distresses. ‘Country people, to the number of 10,000,’ crowded on the shore, had been seen watching the Battle; and, ‘as sad witnesses of the White Flag’s disgrace,’ disappeared into the interior.”

It was such a night as men never witnessed before. Walpole says: “The roaring of the elements was redoubled by the thunder from our ships; and both concurred in that scene of horror, to put a period to the Navy and hopes of France. Seven ships of the line got into the River Vilaine” (lay there fourteen months, under strict watching, till their backs were broken, "thumping against the shallow bottom, every tide," and only "three, with three frigates," ever got out again); "eight more escaped to different ports," into the River Charente, ultimately. "Conflans's own ship and another were run on shore, and burnt. One we took." Two, with their crews, had gone to the bottom; one under Hawke's cannon; one partly by its own mismanagement. "Two of ours were lost in the storm" (chasing that Soleil and Héros), "but the crews saved. Lord Howe, who attacked La Formidable, bore down on her with such violence, that her prow forced-in his lower tier of guns. Captain Digby, in the Dunkirk, received the fire of twelve of the enemy's ships, and lost not a man. Képpe's was full of water, and he thought it sinking: a sudden squall emptied his ship; but he was informed all his powder was wet: 'Then,' said he, 'I am sorry I am safe.' They came and told him a small quantity was undamaged; 'Very well,' said he; 'then attack again.' Not above eight of our ships were engaged in obtaining that decisive victory. The Invasion was heard of no more."

¹ Beatson, ii. 327–345; and Ib. iii. 244–250. In Gentleman’s Magazine (xxix. 557), “A Chaplain’s Letter,” &c.

Invasion had been fully intended, and even, in these final days, considerably expected. In the London Newspapers we read this notice: Monday November 19th: "To-day there came Three Expresses,"—Three Expresses, with what haste in their eyes, testifying successively of Conflans's whereabouts. But it was believed that Hawke would still manage. And, at any rate, Pitt wore such a look,—and had, in fact, made such preparation on the coasts, even in failure of Hawke,—there was no alarm anywhere. Indignation rather;—and naturally, when the news did come, what an outburst of Illumination in the windows and the hearts of men!

"Hawke continued watching the mouths of the Vilaine and Charente Rivers, for a good while after, and without interruption henceforth,—till the storms of Winter, had plainly closed them for one season. Supplies of fresh provisions had come to him from England, all Summer; but were stopped latterly by the wild weather. Upon which, in the Fleet, arose this gravely pathetic Stave of Sea-Poetry, with a wrinkle of briny humour grinning in it :

¹ Walpole, George Second, iii. 232.—Here is the List, accurately rid-dled out: 1. Formidable, struck (about 4 P.M.): 2. Thésée, sunk (by a tumble it made, while in action, under an unskillful Captain): 3. Superbe, sunk: 4. Héros, struck; could not be boarded, such weather; and recommenced next day, but had to run and strand itself, and be burnt by the English;—as did (5.) The Soleil Royal (Conflans's Flag-ship), Conflans and crew (like those of the Héros) getting out in time.

“Till Hawke did bang Monsieur Conflans’ (Congflang),
 You sent us beef and beer ;
 Now Monsieur’s beat, we’ve nought to eat,
 Since you have nought to fear.”¹

The French mode of taking this catastrophe was rather peculiar. Hear Barbier, an Eyewitness ; dating, Paris, December 1759 : “Since the first days of December, there has been cried, and sold in the streets, a Printed Detail of all that concerns the Grand Invasion projected this long while : to wit, the number of Ships of the Line, of Frigates, Galiots,—among others 500 Flatbottomed Boats, which are to carry over, and land in England, more than 54 000 men ;—with list of the Regiments, and number of the King’s Guards, that are also to go : there are announced for Generals-in-Chief, M. le Prince de Conti ” (do readers remember him since the Broglie-Maillebois time, and how King Louis prophesied in autograph that he would be “the Grand Conti” one day?)—“Prince de Conti, Prince de Soubise” (left his Conquest of Frankfurt for this greater Enterprise), and “Milord Thomont” (Irish Jacobite, whom I don’t know). “As sequel to this Detail, there is a lengthy Song on the Disembarkment in England, and the fear the English must have of it !” Calculated to astonish the practical forensic mind.

“It is inconceivable,” continues he, “how they have permitted such a Piece to be printed ; still more, to be cried, and sold price one halfpenny (deux liards). This song is indecent, in the circumstances of the actual news from our Fleet at Brest (20th of last month) ;—in regard to which bad adventure M. le Marquis de Conflans has come to Versailles, to justify himself, and throw the blame on M. le Marquis de Beaufremont ” (his Rear-admiral, now safe in the Charente, with eight of our poor ships). “Such things are the more out of place, as we are in a bad enough position,—no Flatbottoms stirring from the ports, no Troops of the Maison du Roi setting out ;—and have reason to believe that we are now to make no such attempt.”¹

¹ Beatson, ii. 342 n.

Silhouette, the Controller-General, was thought to have a creative genius in finance : but in the eighth month of his gestation, what phenomena are these ? October 26th, there came out Four Decrees of Council, setting forth, That, “as the expenses of the War exceed not only the King’s ordinary revenues, but the extraordinaries he has had to lay on his people, there is nothing for it but,” in fact, Suspension of Payment ; actual Temporary Bankruptcy :—“Cannot pay you ; part of you not for a year, others of you not till the War end ; will give you 5 per cent. interest instead.” Coupled with which, by the same creative genius, is a Declaration in the King’s name, “That the King compels nobody, but does invite all and sundry of loyal mind to send their Plate (on loan, of course, and with due receipt for it) to the Mint to be coined, lest Majesty come to have otherwise no money,”—his very valets, as is privately known, having had no wages from him for ten months past.

Whereupon the rich Princes of the Blood, Duc d’Orléans foremost, and Official persons, Pompadour, Belleisle, Choiseul, do make an effort ; and everybody that has Plate feels uneasily that he cannot use it, and that he ought to send it. And, November 5th, the King’s own Plate, packed ostentatiously in carts, went to the Mint ;—the Dauphiness, noble Saxon Lady, had already volunteered with a silver toilet-table of hers, brand-new, and of exquisite costly pattern ; but the King forbade her. On such examples, everybody had to make an effort, or uneasily try to make one. King Friedrich, eight days after Maxen, is somewhat amused at these proceedings in the distance :

“The kettles and spoons of the French seem to me a pleasant resource for carrying on War !” writes he to D’Argens.² “A bit of mummery to act on the public feeling, I suppose. The result of it will be small : but as the Belleisle

¹ Barbier, iv. 336.

² “Wilsdruf, 28th November 1759,” Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 108.

Letters" (taken in Contades's baggage, after Minden, and printed by Duke Ferdinand for public edification) "make always such an outcry about poverty, those people are trying to impose on their enemies, and persuade them that the carved and chiselled silver of the Kingdom will suffice for making a vigorous Campaign. I see nothing else that can have set them on imagining the farce they are now at. There is Münster taken from them by the English-Hanoverian people; it is affirmed that the French, on the 25th, quitted Giessen, to march on Friedberg and repass the Rhine" (might possibly have done so;—but the Hereditary Prince and his 12,000 come to be needed elsewhere!)—"Poor we are opposite our enemies here, cantoned in the Villages about; the last truss of straw, the last loaf of bread will decide which of us is to remain in Saxony. And as the Austrians are extremely squeezed together, and can get nothing out of Böhmen,"—one hopes it will not be they!

All through November, this sending of Plate, I never knew with what net result of moneys coinable, goes on in Paris; under what astonishments abroad and at home, and in the latter region under what execrations on Silhouette, may be imagined. "Tout le monde jure beaucoup contre M. de Silhouette, All the world swears much against him," says Barbier;—but I believe probably he was much to be pitied: "A creative genius, you; and this is what you come to?"

November 22d, the poor man got dismissed; France swearing at him, I know not to what depth; but howling and hissing, evidently, with all its might. The very tailors and milliners took him up,—trousers without pockets, dresses without flounce or fold, which they called à la Silhouette;—and, to this day, in France and Continental Countries, the old-fashioned Shadow-Profile (mere outline, and vacant black) is practically called a silhouette. So that the very Dictionaries have him; and, like bad Count Reinhart, or Reynard, of earlier date, he has become a Noun Appellative, and is immortalised in that way. The first of that considerable Series of Creative Financiers, Abbé Terray and the rest,—brought in successively with blessings, and dismissed with cursings and hissings,—who end in Calonne, Loménie de Brienne, and what Mirabeau Père called “the General Overturn (Culbute Générale).” Thitherward, privately, straight towards the General Overturn, is France bound;—and will arrive in about thirty years.

Friedrich, strange to say, publishes (March—June 1760) an Edition of his Poems. Question, “Who wrote Matinées du Roi de Prusse?”—for the second, and positively the last Time.

In this avalanche of impending destructions, what can be more surprising than to hear of the editing of Poems on his Majesty’s part! Actual publication of that Œuvre de Poésie, for which Voltaire, poor gentleman, suffered such tribulation seven years ago. Now coming out from choice: Reprint of it, not now to the extent of twelve copies for highly special friends, but in copious thousands, for behoof of mankind at large! The thing cost Friedrich very little meditating, and had become necessary,—and to be done with speed.

Readers recollect the Œuvre de Poésie, and satirical hits said to be in it. At Paris, about New-year’s time 1760, some helpful Hand had contrived to bring out, under the pretended date “Potsdam,” a cheap edition of that interesting Work.¹ Merely in the way of theft, as appeared to cursory readers, to D’Argens, for example: but, in deeper fact, for the purpose of apprising certain Crowned Heads, friendly and hostile,—Czarish Majesty and George II. of England the main two,—what this poetising King was pleased to think of them in his private moments. D’Argens declares himself glad of this theft, so exquisitely clever is the Book. But Friedrich knows better: “March 17th, when a Copy of it came to him,” Friedrich sees well what is meant,—and what he himself has to do in it. He instantly sets about making a few suppressions, changes of phrase; sends the thing to D’Argens: “Publish at once, with a little prefatory word.” And, at the top of his speed, D’Argens has, in three-weeks time, the suitable

¹ “Œuvres du Philosophe de Sans-Souci:” 1 vol. 12mo, “Potsdam” (Paris, in truth), “1760.”

² His Letter to the King, Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 138.

Avant-propos, or Avis au Libraire, "circulating in great quantities, especially in London and Petersburg" ("Thief Editor has omitted; and, what is far more, has malignantly interpolated: here is the poor idle Work itself, not a Counterfeit of it, if anybody care to read it"), and an Orthodox Edition ready.¹ The diligent Pirate Booksellers, at Amsterdam, at London, copiously reproduced this authorized Berlin Edition too,—or added excerpts from it to their reprints of the Paris one, by way of various-readings. And everybody read and compared, what nobody will now do; theme, and treatment of theme, being both now so heartily indifferent to us.

Who the Perpetrator of this Parisian maleficence was, remained dark;—and would not be worth inquiring into at all, except for two reasons intrinsically trifling, but not quite without interest to readers of our time. First, that Voltaire, whom some suspected (some, never much Friedrich, that I hear of), appears to have been perfectly innocent;—and indeed had been incapacitated for guilt, by Schmidt and Freytag, and their dreadful Frankfurt procedures! This is reason first; poor Voltaire mutely asking us, Not to load him with more sins than his own. Reason second is, that, by a singular opportunity, there has, in these very months,² a glimmering of light risen on it to this Editor; illustrating two other points as well, which readers here are acquainted with, some time ago, as riddles of the insignificant sort. The Demon News-writer, with his "Idea" of Friedrich, and the "Matinées du Roi de Prusse:" readers recollect both those Productions; both enigmatic as to authorship;—but both now become riddles which can more or less be read.

For the surprising circumstance (though in certain periods, when the realm of very Chaos reëmerges, fitfully, into upper sunshine now and then, nothing ought to surprise one as happening there) is, That, only a few months ago, the incomparable Matinées (known to my readers five years since) has found a new Editor and reviver. Editor illuminated "by the Secretary of the Great Napoleon," "by discovery of manuscripts," "by the Duc de Rovigo," and I know not what; animated also, it is said, by religious views. And, in short, the Matinées is again abroad upon the world,—“your London Edition twice reprinted in Germany, by the Jesuit party since” (much good may it do the Jesuit party!)—a Matinées again in comfortable circumstances, as would seem. Probably the longest-eared Platitude now walking the Earth, though there are a good many with ears long. Unconscious, seemingly, that it has been killed thrice and four times already; and that indeed, except in the realm of Nightmare, it never was alive, or needed any killing; belief in it, doubt upon it (I must grieve to inform the Duc de Rovigo and honourable persons concerned), being evidence conclusive that you have not yet the faintest preliminary shadow of correct knowledge about Friedrich or his habits or affairs, and that you ought first to try and acquire some.

¹ "Came out, April 9th" (see Mitchell, ii. 153), "and a second finer Edition in June:" in Œuvres de Frédéric, x. p. x., xix. 137 n., 138; especially in Preuss, i. 467, 468 (if you will compare him with himself on these different occasions, and patiently wind out his bit of meaning), all manner of minutest details.

² Spring 1863.

To me argument on this subject would have been too unendurable. But argument there was on it, by persons capable and willing, more than one: and in result this surprising brand-new London mooncalf of a Matinées was smitten through, and slit in pieces, for the fifth time,—as if that could have hurt it much! “Mit der Dummheit,” sings Schiller; Human stupidity is stronger than the very Gods.” However, in the course of these new inspections into matters long since obsolete, there did,—what may truly be considered as a kind of profit by this Resuscitating of the mooncalf Matinées upon afflicted mankind, and is a net outcome from it, real, though very small,—some light rise as to the origin and genesis of Matinées; some twinkles of light, and, in the utterly dark element, did disclose other monstrous extinct shapes looming to right and left of said monster; and, in a word, the authorship of Matinées, and not of Matinées only, becomes now at last faintly visible or guessable. To one of those industrious

Matadors, as we may call them, Slayers of this mooncalf for the fourth or fifth time, I owe the following Note ; which, on verifying, I can declare to be trustworthy :

"The Author of Matinées, it is nearly certain," says my Correspondent, "is actually a 'M. de Bonneville,'—contrary to what you wrote five years ago.' Not, indeed, the Bonneville who is found in Dictionaries, who is visibly impossible ; but a Bonneville of the preceding generation, who was Maréchal de Saxe's Adjutant or Secretary, old enough to have been the Uncle or the Father of that revolutionary Bonneville. Maréchal de Saxe died, November, 30th, 1750 ; this senior Bonneville, still a young man, had been with him to Potsdam on visit there. Bonneville, conscious of genius, and now out of employment, naturally went thither again ; lived a good deal there, or went between France and there : and authentic History knows of him, by direct evidence, and by reflex, the following Three Facts (the second of them itself threefold), of which I will distinguish the indubitable from the inferentially credible or as good as certain :

"1°. Indubitable, That Bonneville sold to Friedrich certain Papers, military Plans, or the like, of the late Maréchal, and was paid for them ; but by no means met the recognition his genius saw itself to merit. These things are certain, though not dated, or datable except as of the year 1750 or 1751. After which, for above twenty years, Bonneville entered upon a series of adventures, caliginous, underground, for most part ; 'soldiering in America,' 'writing anonymous Pamphlets or Books,' roaming wide over the world ; and led a busy, but obscure and uncertain life, hanging by Berlin as a kind of centre, or by Paris and Berlin as his two centres, and had a miscellaneous series of adventures, subterranean many of them, unluminous all of them, not courting the light ; which lie now in naturally a very dark condition. Dimly discernible, however, in the general dusk of Bonneville, dim and vague of outline, but definitely steady beyond what could have been expected, it does appear farther,—what alone entitles Bonneville to the least memory here, or anywhere in Nature now or henceforth,—

"2°. That, shortly after that first rebuff in Potsdam, he, not another, in 1752, was your 'Demon News-writer,' whom we gazed at, some time since, devoutly crossing ourselves, for a little while!

¹ A. D. 1858 (suprà, vol. i.).

"Likewise that, in 1759-60, after or before his American wanderings, he, the same Bonneville, as was suspected at the time,' stole and edited this surreptitious mischief-making Œuvres du Philosophe de Sans-Souci (Paris or Lyon, pretending to be 'Potsdam,' January 1760)," which we are now considering! "Encouraged, probably enough, by Choiseul himself, who, in any case, is now known to have been the promoter of this fine bit of mischief,'—and who may thereupon" (or may as probably, not "thereupon," if it were of the least consequence to gods or men) "have opened to Bonneville a new military career in America? Career which led to as good as nothing; French soldiering in America being done for, in the course of 1760. Upon which Bonneville would return to his old haunts, to his old subterranean industries in Paris and Berlin.

"And that, finally, in 1765, he, as was again suspected at the time,' he and no other, did write those Matinées, which appeared next year in print (1766), and many times since; and have just been reprinted, as a surprising new discovery, at London, in Spring 1863.

"3°. That either after or before those Editorial exploits, Bonneville had sold the Maréchal de Saxe's Plans and Papers, which were already the King's, to some second person, and been a second time paid for them. And was, in regard to this Swindling exploit, found out; and by reason of that sale, or for what reason is not known, was put into Spandau, and, one hopes, ended his life there."

¹ Nicolai, Ueber Zimmermanns Fragmente, i. 181, 182, ii. 253, 254. Sketch of what is authentically known about Bonneville: 'suspected both of Matinées, and of the Stolen Edition.'

² Choiseul's own Note, "To M. de Malesherbes, Directeur de la Librairie, 10th December 1759: " "By every method screen the King's Government from being suspected;—and get the Edition out at once." (Published in the Constitutionnel, 2d December 1850, by M. Sainte-Beuve; copied in Preuss, Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 168 n.)

³ "Nicolai, ubi supra;—and besides him, only the two following references, out of half a cartload: 1°. Bachaumont, Mémoires secrets, '7th February 1765' (see Barbier, Dictionnaire des Anonymes, § Matinées). who calls Matinées 'a development of the Idée de la Personne,' &c. (that is, of your 'Demon News-writer;' already known to Bachaumont, this 'Idée,' it seems, as well as the Matinées in Manuscript.)

Fact No. 2, which alone concerns us here,—and which, in its three successive stages, does curiously cohere with itself and with other things,—comes, therefore, not by direct light, which indeed, by the nature of the case, would be impossible. Not by direct light, but by various reflex lights, and convergence of probabilities old and new, which become the stronger the better they are examined; and may be considered as amounting to what is called a moral certainty,—“certain” enough for an inquiry of that significance. To a kind of moral certainty: kind of moral consolation too; only One individual of Adam’s Posterity, not three or more, having been needed in these multifarious acts of scoundrelism; and that One receiving payment, or part payment, so prompt and appropriate, in the shape of a permanent cannon-ball at his ankle.

This is the one profit my readers or I have yet derived from the late miraculous Resuscitation of Matinées Royales; the other items of profit in that Enterprise shall belong, not to us in the least measure, but to Bonneville, and to his well or ill disposed Coadjutors and Copartners in the Adventure. Adieu to it, and to him and to them, forever and a day!

Peace-Negotiations hopeful to Friedrich, all through Winter; but the French won't. Voltaire, and his Style of Corresponding.

This Winter, there was talk of Peace, more specifically than ever. November 15th, at the Hague, as a neutral place, there

2°. “Letter of Grimm to Duchess of Sachsen-Gotha” (our Duchess), “dated ‘Paris, 15th April 1765:’ not in printed Correspondance de Grimm, but still in the Archives of Gotha, in company with a Ms. of Matinées, probably the oldest extant (see,—in the Grenzboten Periodical, Leipzig, 1863, pp. 473—484, 500—519,—K. Samwer, who is Chief Mal-lens of this new London mooncalf, and will inform the curious of every particular).”

Matinées was first printed 1766 (no place), and seven or eight times since, in different Countries; twice or thrice over, as “an interesting new discovery:”—very wearisome to this Editor; who read Matinées (in poor London print, that too), many years ago,—with complete satisfaction as to Matinées, and sincere wish not to touch it again even with a pair of tongs;—and has since had three “priceless Mss. of it” offered him, at low rates, as a guerdon to merit.

had been, by the two Majesties, Britannic and Prussian, official Declaration, "We, for our part, deeply lament these horrors, and are ready to treat of Peace." This Declaration was presented, November 15th, 1759, by Prince Ludwig of Brunswick (Head General of the Dutch, and a Brother of Prince Ferdinand our General's, suitable for such case), to the Austrian-French Excellencies at the Hague. By whom it had been received with the due politeness, "Will give it our profoundest consideration;"—which indeed the French, for some time, privately did; though the Austrians privately had no need to do so, being already fixed for a negative response to the proposal. But hereby rose actual talk of a "Congress;" and wagging of Diplomatic wigs as to where it shall be. "In Breda," said some; "Breda a place used to Congresses." "Why not in Nanci here?" said poor old Ex-Polish Stanislaus, alive to the calls of benevolence, poor old Titular soul. Others said "Leipzig;" others "Augsburg;"—and indeed in Augsburg, according to the Gazetteers, at one time, there were "upholsterers busy getting ready the Apartments." So that, with such rumour in the Diplomatic circles, the Gazetteer and outer world was full of speculation upon Peace; and Friedrich had lively hopes of it, and had been hoping three months before, as we transiently saw, though again it came to nothing. All to nothing; and is not, in itself, worth the least attention from us here,—a poor extinct fact, loud in these months and filling the whole world, now silent and extinct to everybody,—except, indeed, that it offers physiognomic traits here and there of a certain King, and of those about him. For which reason we will dwell on it a few minutes longer.

Nobody, in that Winter 1759–60, could guess where, or from whom, this big world-interesting Peace-Negotiation had its birth; as everybody now can, when nobody now is curious on the question! At Sagan, in September last, we all saw the small private source of it, its first outspurt into daylight ; and read Friedrich's Answers to Voltaire and the noble Duchess on it :—for the sake of which Two private Correspondents, and of Friedrich's relations to them, possibly a few more Excerpts may still have a kind of interest, now when the thing corresponded on has ceased to have any. To the Duchess, a noble-minded Lady, beautifully zealous to help if she could, by whose hand these mutifarious Peace-Papers have to pass, this is always Friedrich's fine style in transmitting them. Out of many specimens, following that of Sagan which we gave, here are the Next Three :

¹ Declaration (by the two Majesties) that they are ready to treat of Peace, 15th November 1759, presented by &c. (as above); Answer from France, in stingy terms, and not till 3d April 1760: are in London Gazette; in Gentleman's Magazine, xxix. 603, xxx. 188; in &c. &c.

Friedrich to the Duchess of Sachsen-Gotha (Three other Letters on the "Peace").

1.

"Wilsdruf, 21st November 1759" (day after Maxen, surrender was this morning,—of which he has not heard).

"Madame,—Nothing but your generousities and your indulgence could justify my incongruity" (incongruité, in troubling you with the Enclosed). "You will have it, Madame, that I shall still farther abuse those bounties, which are so precious to me : at least remember that it is by your order, if I forward through your hand this Letter, which does not merit such honour.

"Chance, which so insolently mocks the projects of men, and delights to build up and then pull down, has led us about, thus far,—to the end of the Campaign" (not quite ended yet, if he knew). "The Austrians are girt-in by the Elbe on this side ; I have had two important Magazines of theirs in Bohemia destroyed" (Kleist's doing). "There have been some bits of fighting (affaires), that have turned entirely to our advantage :—so that I am in hopes of forcing M. Daun to repass the Elbe, to abandon Dresden, and to take the road for Zittau and Bohemia.

"I talk to you, Madame, of what I am surrounded with ; of what, being in your neighbourhood, may perhaps have gained your attention. I could go to much greater length, if my heart dared to explain itself on the sentiments of admiration, gratitude and esteem, with which I am,—Madame my Cousin,—Your most faithful Cousin, Friend and Servant,—F."

2.

"Freyberg, 18th December 1759.

"Madame,—You spoil me so by your indulgence, you so accustom me to have obligations to you, that I reproach myself a hundred times with this presumption. Certainly I should not continue to enclose these Letters to your care, had not I the hope that perhaps the Correspondence may be of some use to England, and even to Europe,—for without doubt Peace is the desirable, the natural and happy state for all Nations. It is to accelerate Peace, Madame, that I abuse your generousities. This motive excuses me to myself for the incongruity of my procedures.

"The goodness you have to take interest in my situation obliges me to give you some account of it. We have undergone all sorts of misfortune here" (Maxen, what not), "and at the moment we were least expecting them. Nevertheless, there remains to us courage and hope; here are Auxiliaries" (Hereditary Prince and 12,000) "on the point of arriving; there is reason to think that the end of our Campaign will be less frightful than seemed likely three weeks ago. May you, Madame, enjoy all the happiness that I wish you. May all the world become acquainted with your virtues, imitate them, and admire you as I do. May you be persuaded that . . . —F."

3.

"Freyberg, 16th February 1760.

"Madame,—It is to my great regret that I importune Your Highness so often with my Letters. Your bounties, Madame, have spoiled me;—it will teach you to be more chary of them to others. I regard you as an estimable Friend, to whose friendship I have recourse in straits. The question is still Peace, Madame: and were not the object of my importunities so beautiful, Madame, I should be inexcusable."—Goes, then into practical considerations, about "Cocceji" (King's Aide-de-Camp, once Keith's, who carries this Letter), about a "Herr von Edelsheim," a "Bailli de Froulay," and the possible "Conditions of Peace,"—not of consequence to us just now.¹

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xviii. 174, 173, 172. Correspondence on this subject lasts from 22d September 1759 to 8th May 1760: ib. pp. 170-186. In that final Letter of 8th May, is the phrase, hardly worth restoring to its real ownership, though the context considerably redeems it there,—"the prejudice I can't get rid of, that, in war, Dieu est pour les gros escadrons."

As to Voltaire again, and the new Friedrich-Voltaire Style of Correspondence, something more of detail will be requisite. Ever since the black days of 1757, when poor Wilhelmina, with Rossbach and Leuthen still hidden from her in a future gloomy as death, desperately brought Voltaire to bear upon Cardinal Tencin and this matter, without success, there has been a kind of regular corresponding between Voltaire and Friedrich; characteristic on both sides. A pair of Lovers hopelessly estranged and divorced; and yet, in a sense, unique and priceless to one another. The Past, full of heavenly radiances, which issued, alas, in flames and sooty conflagrations as of Erebus,—let us forget it, and be taught by it! The Past is painful, and has been too didactic to some of us: but here still is the Present with its Future; better than blank nothing. Pleasant to hear the sound of that divine voice of my loved one, were it only in commonplace remarks on the weather,—perhaps intermixed with secret jibings on myself:—let us hear it while we can, amid those world-wide crashing discords and piping whirlwinds of war.

Friedrich sends his new Verses or light Proses, which he is ever and anon throwing off; Voltaire sends his, mostly in print, and of more elaborate turn: they talk on matters that are passing round them, round this King, the centre of them, —Friedrich usually in a rather swaggering way (lest his Correspondent think of blabbing), and always with something of banter audible in him;—as has Voltaire too, but in a finer treble tone, being always female in this pretty duet of parted lovers. It rarely comes to any scolding between them; but there is or can be nothing of cordiality. Nothing, except in the mutual admiration, which one perceives to be sincere on both sides; and also, in the mutual practical estrangement: “Nothing more of you,—especially of you, Madam,—as a practical domestic article!”

After a long reading, with Historical views, in this final section of the Friedrich-Voltaire Correspondence, at first so barren otherwise and of little entertainment. one finds that this too, when once you can “read” it (that is to say, when the scene and its details are visible to you), becomes highly dramatic, Shakespearean-comic or more, for this is Nature's self, who far excels even Shakespeare ;—and that the inextricably dark condition of these Letters is a real loss to the ingenuous reader, and especially to the student of Friedrich. Among the frequently-recurring topics, one that oftenest turns up on Voltaire's side is that of Peace : Oh, if your Majesty would but make Peace ! Does it depend on me ? thinks Friedrich always ; and is, at last, once provoked to say so :

Friedrich to Voltaire.

“Reich-Hennersdorf, 2d July 1759” (shortly before Schmöttsseifen, while waiting Daun's slow movements).

“Asking me for Peace : there is a bitter joke !”—(In verse, this ; flings off a handful of crackers on the Bien Aimé, whose Chamberlain you are, on the Hongroise qu'il adore, on the Russian que j'abhorre ;—then continues in prose) :

“It is to him,” the Well-beloved Louis, “that you must address yourself, or to his Amboise in petticoats” (his Pompadour, acting the Cardinal-Premier on this occasion). “But these people have their heads filled with ambitious projects : these people are the difficulty ; they wish to be the sovereign arbiters of sovereigns ; and that is what persons of my way of thinking will by no means put up with. I love Peace quite as much as you could wish ; but I want it good, solid and honourable. Socrates or Plato would have thought as I do on this subject, had they found themselves placed in the accursed position which is now mine in the world.

“Think you there is any pleasure in leading this dog of a life” (chienne, she-dog) ? “In seeing and causing the butchery of people you know nothing of ; in losing daily those you do know and love ; in seeing perpetually your reputation exposed to the caprices of chance ; in passing year after year in disquietudes and apprehensions ; in risking, without end, your life and your fortune ?

“I know right well the value of tranquillity, the sweets of society, the charms of life ; and I love to be happy, as much as anybody whatever. But much as I desire these blessings, I will not purchase them by baseness and infamies. Philosophy enjoins us to do our duty ; faithfully to serve our Country, at the price of our blood, of our repose, and of every sacrifice that can be required of us. The illustrious Zadig went through a good many adventures which were not to his taste, Candide the like ; and nevertheless took their misfortune in patience. What finer example to follow than that of those heroes ?

“ Take my word, our ‘ curt jackets,’ as you call them ” (habits écourtés, peculiar to the Prussian soldier at that time), “ are as good as your red heels, as the Hungarian pelisses, and the green frocks of the Roxelans ” (Russians). “ We are actually on the heels of the latter ” (at least poor Dohna is, and poor Dictator Wedell will be, not with the effect anticipated !) — “ who by their stupidities give us fine chance. You will see that I shall get out of the scrape this Year too, and deliver myself both from the Greens and the Dirty-Whites ” (Austrian colour of coat). “ My neighbour of the Sacred Hat,—I think in spite of Holy Father’s benediction, the Holy Ghost must have inspired him the reverse way ; he seems to have a great deal of lead in his bottom. * * F.”

Voltaire in Answer.

“ The Delicée,” guessed to be some time in “ August 1759.”

“ In whatever state you are, it is very certain that you are a great man. It is not to weary your Majesty that I now write ; it is to confess myself,—on condition you will give me absolution ! I have betrayed you ; that is the fact ” — (really guilty this time, and have shown something of your writing ; as your Majesty, oh how unjustly, is often suspecting that I do, and with mischievous intention, instead of good, ah, Sire !) — “ In fact, I have received that fine ‘ Marcus-Aurelius ’ Letter ” (Letter we have just read) ; “ exquisite Piece, though with biting ‘ Juvenal ’ qualities in it, too ; and have shown it, keeping back the biting parts, to a beautiful gillflirt of the Court, minaudière ” (who seems to be a Mistress of Choiseul’s), who is here attending Tissot for her health : minaudière charmed with it ; insists on my sending it to Choiseul, “ ‘ He admires the King of Prussia, as he does all nobleness and genius ; send it ! ’ And I did so ;—and look here, what an Answer from Choiseul ” (Answer lost) : “ and may it not have a fine effect, and perhaps bring Peace—Oh, forgive me, Sire. But read that Note of the great man. ‘ Try if you can decipher his writing. One may have very honest sentiments, and a great deal of esprit, and yet write like a cat.’ —

“ Sire, there was once a lion and a mouse (rat) ; the mouse fell in love with the lion, and went to pay him court. The lion, tired of it, gave him a little scrape with his paw. The mouse withdrew into his mousehole (souricière) ; but he still loved the lion ; and seeing one day a net they were spreading out to catch the lion and kill him, he gnawed asunder one mesh of it. Sire, the mouse kisses very humbly your beautiful claws, in all submissiveness :—he will never die between two Capuchins, as at Bâle, the mastiff (dogue) of St. Malo has done" (27th July last). "He would have wished to die beside his lion. Believe that the mouse was more attached than the mastiff."—V.¹

To which we saw the Answer, pair of Answers, at Sagan, in September last. This Note from Choiseul, conveyed by Voltaire, appears to have been the trifling well-spring from which all those wide-spread waters of Negotiation flowed. Pitt, when applied to, on the strength of Friedrich's hopes from this small Document of Choiseul's was of course ready, "How welcome, every chance of a just Peace !" and agreed to the Joint Declaration at the Hague ; and took what farther trouble I know not,—probably less sanguine of success than Friedrich. Friedrich was ardently industrious in the affair ; had a great deal of devising and directing on it, a great deal of corresponding with Voltaire and the Duchess, only small fractions of which are now left. He searched out, or the Duchess of Sachsen-Gotha did it for him, a proper Secret Messenger for Paris : Secret Messenger, one Baron von Edelsheim, properly veiled, was to consult a certain Bailli de Froulay, a friend of Friedrich's in Paris ;—which loyal-hearted Bailli did accordingly endeavour there ; but made out nothing. Only much vague talking ; part of it, or most of it, subdolous on Choiseul's side. Pitt would hear of no Peace which did not include Prussia as well as England : some said this was the cause of failure ;—the real cause was that Choiseul never had any serious intention of succeeding. Light Choiseul, a clever man, but an unwise, of the sort called "dashing," had entertained the matter merely in the optative form,—and when it came nearer, wished to use it for making mischief between Pitt and Friedrich, and for worming out

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiii. 59, 60.

Edelsheim's secrets, if he had any,—for which reason he finally threw Edelsheim into the Bastille for a few days.¹

About the end of March I guess it to have been that Choiseul, by way of worming out poor Edelsheim's secrets, flung him into the Bastille for a day or two. Already in December foregoing, we have seen Choiseul's Black-Artist busy upon the Stolen Edition of Friedrich's Verses. A Choiseul full of intrigues; adroit enough, ambitious enough; restlessly industrious in making mischief, if there were nothing else to be made; who greatly disgusted Friedrich, now and afterward.

And this was what the grand Voltaire Pacification came to, though it filled the world with temporary noise, and was so interesting to Voltaire and another. What a heart-affecting generosity, humility, and dulcet pathos in that of the poor Mouse gnawing asunder a mesh of the Lion's net! There is a good deal of that, throughout, on the Voltaire side,—that is to say, while writing to Friedrich. But while writing of him, to third parties, sometimes almost simultaneously, the contrast of styles is not a little startling; and the beautiful affectionately chirping Mouse is seen suddenly to be an injured Wild-cat with its fur up. All readers of Voltaire are aware of this; and how Voltaire handles his "Luc" (mysterious nickname for King Friedrich), when Luc's back is turned. For, alas, there is no man or thing but has its wrong-side too; least of all, a Voltaire,—doing treble voice withal, if you consider it, in such a Duet of estranged Lovers! Suppose we give these few Specimens,—treble mostly, and a few of bass as well,—to illustrate the nature of this Duet, and of the noises that went on round it, in a war-convulsed world? And first of all, concerning the enigma "What is Luc?"

What the Luc in Voltaire is? Shocking explanations have been hit upon: but Wagnière (Wagner, an intelligent Swiss man), Voltaire's old Secretary, gives this plain reading of the riddle: "M. de Voltaire had, at the Délices" (near by Ferney, till the Château got built), "a big Ape, of excessively mischievous turn; who used to throw stones at the passers-by, and sometimes would attack with its teeth friend or foe alike. One day it thrice over bit M. de Voltaire's own leg. He had called it Luc (Luke); and in conversation with select friends, as also in Letters to such, he sometimes designated the King of Prussia by that nickname: 'He is like my Luc here; bites whoever caresses him!'—In 1756, M. de Voltaire, having still on his heart the Frankfurt Outrage, wrote curious Mémoires (ah, yes, Vie Privée); "and afterwards wished to burn them; but a Copy had been stolen from him in 1768,"—and they still afflict the poor world.

¹ In ibid, v. 38-41, detailed account of the Affair.

To the same effect speaks Johannes von Müller: "Voltaire had an Ape called Luc; and the spiteful man, in thus naming the King, meant to stigmatise him as the mere ape of greater men; as one without any greatness of his own."—No; Luc was mischievous, flung stones after passengers; had, according to Clogenson, "bitten Voltaire himself, while being caressed by him;" that was the analogy in Voltaire's mind. Preuss says, this Nickname first occurs, "12th December 1757." Suppose 11th December to have been the day of getting one's leg bitten thrice over; and that, in bed next morning, —stiff, smarting, fretful against the sad ape-tricks and offences of this life,—before getting up to one's Works and Correspondences, the angry similitude had shot, slightly fulgurous and consolatory, athwart the gloom of one's mood? That will account for Luc.

Many of the Voltaire-Friedrich Letters are lost; and the remainder lie in sad disorder in all the Editions, their sequence unintelligible without lengthy explanation. So that the following Snatches cannot well be arranged here in the way of Choral Strophe and Antistrophe, as would have been desirable. We shall have to group them loosely under heads; with less respect to date than to subject-matter, and to the reader's convenience for understanding them.

Voltaire on Friedrich, to different Third-Parties, during this War.

To D'Argental (Has not yet heard of Leuthen, which happened five days before). * * "I have tasted the vengeance of consoling the King of Prussia, and that is enough for me.

¹ Longchamp et Wagnière, Mémoires, i. 84; Johannes von Müller, Werke (12mo, Stuttgart, 1821), xxxi. 140 (Letters to his Brother, No. 218, "July 1796"); Clogenson's Note, in Œuvres de Voltaire, lxxvii. 108; Preuss, ii. 71.

He goes beating on the one side, and getting beaten on the other: except for another miracle" (like Roszbach), "he will be ruined. Better have really been a philosopher, as he pretended to be."

To the Reverend Comte de Bernis (outwardly still our flourishing Prime-Minister, by grace of Pompadour, but soon to be extinguished under a Red Hat. Date is six days before Zorn-dorf). * * "I cannot imagine how some people have gone into suspecting that my heart might have the weakness to lean a little towards whom you know, towards my Ingrate that was! One is bound to have politeness; but one has memory as well;—and one is attached, as warmly as superfluously, to the Good Cause, which it belongs only to you to defend. Certain it is, poor I am not like the three-fourths of the Germans in these days" (since Roszbach, above all)! "I have everywhere seen Ladies'-Fans with the Prussian Eagle painted on them, eating the Fleur-de-Lis; the Hanover Horse giving a kick to M. de Richelieu's bottom; a Courier carrying a bottle of Queen-of-Hungary Water to Madame de Pompadour. My Nieces shall certainly not have that fashion of Fans, at my poor little Délices, whither I am just returning."

To Madame D'Argental (on occasion of Minden; Kunersdorf three days ago, but not yet heard of). * * "Truly, Madame, when M. de Contades leads to the butchery all the descendants of our ancient chevaliers, and sets them to attack eighty pieces of cannon" (not in the least, if you knew it; the reverse, if you knew it),—"as Don Quixote did the windmills! This horrible day pierces my soul. I am French to excess, especially since those new favours" (not worth mentioning here), "which I owe to my divine Angels and to M. le Duc de Choiseul.

"Luc,—you know who Luc is" (as do we),—"is probably giving Battle to the Austrians and Russians" (Kunersdorf, 12th; three days ago, did it, and was beaten to your mind), "at the moment while I have the honour of writing to you; at least, he told me such was his Royal intention. If they beat him, as may happen, what a shame for us to have been beaten by the Duke of Brunswick! I wish you knew this

¹ Œuvres de Voltaire, lxxvii. 139 ("The Délices, 10th December 1757").

² Ibid., lxxvii. 35 ("Soleure, 19th August 1758").

Duke " (as I have done ; a Duke of no esprit, no gift of tongue, in fact no talent at all that I could discern), "you would be much astonished ; and would say, 'The people whom he beats must be great blockheads.' The truth of the fact is, that all these troops are better disciplined than ours :"—Yes indeed, my esteemed Voltaire ; and also, perhaps, that esprit, or gift of tongue, is not the sole gift for Battles and Campaigns ?—

To D'Argental (seventh day after Kunersdorf : "mouse upon lion's net" nearly contemporaneous). "At last, then, I think my Russians must be near Great Glogau" (might have been, one thinks, after such a Kunersdorf ; did not start for a month yet ; never could get very near at all). "Who would have thought that Barbarina" (Mackenzie's Dancer once ; sent to Glogau, Cocceji and she, when their marriage became public) "was going to be besieged by the Russians, and in Glogau : Oh Destiny !—

"I don't love Luc, far from it : I never will pardon him his infamous procedure with my Niece" (at Frankfurt that time) ; nor the face he has to write me flattering things twice a month ; without having ever repaired his wrongs. I desire much his entire humiliation, the chastisement of the sinner ; whether his eternal damnation, I don't quite know." (Hear, Hear !)—

To the same (a month after Maren : "Peace" Negotiation very lively). * * "Meanwhile, if Luc could be punished before this happy Peace ! If, by this last stroke of General Beck" (tussle with Dierecke at Meissen, 4th December, capture of Dierecke and 1,500 ; stroke not of an overwhelming nature, but let us be thankful for our mercies), "which has opened the road from the Lausitz to Berlin" (alas, not in the least), "some Haddick could pay Berlin a visit again ! You see, in Tragedy I wish always to have crime punished.

"There is talk of a great Battle fought the 6th" (not a word of truth in it) "between Luc and him of the Consecrated Hat : said to have been very murderous. I interest myself very much in this Piece" now playing under the Sun. "Whenever the Austrians have any advantage, Kaunitz says to Madame de Bentinck" (litigant wandering Lady, known to me at Berlin and elsewhere), “ ‘ Write that to our Friend Voltaire.’ Whenever Luc has the least success, he tells me, ‘ I have battered the oppressors of mankind.’ Dear Angel, in these horrors I am the only one that has room to laugh :—and yet I don’t laugh either ; owing to the Culs-noirs” (Priests, I suppose), “ to the Annuities, Lotteries, and to Pondichery,—for I am always afraid about that latter !” (Going, that, for certain ; going, gone, and your East Indies along with it !)¹

¹ Œuvres de Voltaire, lxxviii. 186, 187 ("Délices, 15th August 1759").

² Ibid. lxxviii. 195 ("19th August 1759").

To Perpetual Secretary Formey (in forwarding a “ Letter left with me.”) “ Health and peace, Monsieur ; and be Secrétaire Eternel. Your King is always a man unique, astonishing, inimitable. He makes charming verses, in times when others could not write a line of prose ; he deserves to be happy : but will he be so ? And if not, what becomes of you ? For my own part, I will not die between two Capuchins. Hardly worth while, exalting one’s soul for such a future as that. What a stupid and detestable farce is this world ! ”²

To D’Argental (“ Peace ” Negotiations still at their briskest). * * “ But, my dear Angel, you will see on Tuesday the great man who has turned my head (dont je suis fou), M. le Duc de Choiseul. The Letters he honours me with enchant me. God will bless him, don’t doubt it,”—after all ! “ We have at Pondichery a Lally, a devil of an Irish spirit,—who will cost me, sooner or later, above 20,000 livres annually” (have rents in our India Company, say 1,000*l.* a-year, as my Angels know), “ which used to be the readiest item of my Pittance. But M. le Duc de Choiseul will triumph over Luc in one way or other ; then what joy ! I suppose he shows you my impertinent reveries. Do you know, Luc is so mad, that I don’t despair of bringing him to reason” (persuading him to give up Clève, and knuckle as he should, in this Peace Affair). “ That were what I should call the true Comedy ! I should like to have your advices on the conduct of that Dramatic Piece.”³

The late “ mouse ” gnawing at its mesh of net, what a subtle and mighty hunter has it grown ! This of Clève, however, and of knuckling, would not do. Hear the stiff Answer that comes : “ ‘ Conditions of Peace,’ do you call them ? The people that propose such can have no wish to see Peace. What a logic theirs ! 'I might yield the Country of Clève, because the inhabitants are stupid.' What would your Ministers say if one required the Province of Champagne from them, because the Proverb says, 'Ninety-nine sheep and one Champagner make a Hundred head of cattle ?' " —

¹ Œuvres de Voltaire, lxxviii. 346 (“ 22d December 1759 ”).

² Ibid. lxxviii. 348 (from Souvenirs d’un Citoyen, i. 302), “ 11th January 1760.”

³ Ibid. lxxviii. 375 (“ Délices, 15th February 1760 ”).

Again to D'Argental (three or four months after ; Luc having proved obstinate, and still unsuccessful). * * "I conjure you make use of all your eloquence to tell him" (the supreme Duc de Choiseul), "that if Luc misgo, it will be no misfortune to France. That Brandenburg will always remain an Electorate ; that it is good there be no Elector in it strong enough to do without the protection of our King ; and that all the Princes of the Empire will always have resource to that august protection" (Most Christian Majesty's) "contra l'aquila grifagna,—were the Prussian Kingship but abolished. Nota bene, if Luc were discomfited this Year, we should have Peace next Winter." *

To supreme Choiseul (a year later). * * "He has been a bad man, this Luc ; and now, if one were to bet,—by the law of probability it would be 3 to 1 that Luc would go to pot (sera perdu), with his rhymings and his banterings, and his injustices and politics, all as bad as himself." *

Voltaire on surrounding Objects, chiefly on Maupertuis, and the Battles.

To D'Alembert (in the Rossbach-Leuthen interval ; on the Battle of Breslau, 22d November 1757 ; called by the Austrians "a Malplaquet," and believed by Voltaire to be a Malplaquet and more). * * "The Austrians do avenge us, and humble us" (us, and our miserable Rossbachs), "in a terrible manner. Thirteen attacks on the Prussian entrenchments, lasted six hours ; never was Victory bloodier, or more horribly beautiful" (in the brain of certain men). "We pretty French fellows, we are more expeditious, our job is done in five minutes. The King of Prussia is always writing me Verses, now like a desperado, now like a hero ; and as for me, I try to live like a philosopher in my hermitage. He has obtained what he always wished ; to beat the French, to be admired by them, to mock them ; but the Austrians are mocking him in a very serious way. Our shame of November 5th has given him glory ; and with such glory, which is but transient and dearly bought, he must content himself. He will lose his own Countries, with those he has seized, unless the French again discover" (which they will) "the secret of losing all their Armies, as they did in 1741."

¹ Friedrich to Voltaire, "Freyberg, 3d April 1760 : " Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiii. 73, 74.

² Œuvres de Voltaire, lxxix. 110 ("July 1760").

³ Ibid. lxxx. 313 ("Château de Ferney, 13th July 1761").

To Clairaut, the Mathematician (Maupertuis lately dead). "An excellent Treatise, this you have sent me, Monsieur!" "Your war with the Geometers on the subject of this Comet appears to me like a war of the gods in Olympus, while on Earth there is going on a fight of dogs and cats." * * "Would to Heaven our friend Moreau-Maupertuis had cultivated his art like you ! That he had predicted comets, instead of exalting his soul to predict the future ; of dissecting the brains of giants to know the nature of the soul ; of japanning people with pitch to cure them of every malady ; of persecuting König ; and of dying between Two Capuchins" (dead three weeks ago, on those terms, poor soul) !"

To D'Alembert (a week later). * * "What say you of Maupertuis dying between two Capuchins ! He was ill, this long while, of a repletion of pride ; but I had not reckoned him either a hypocrite or an imbecile. I don't advise you ever to go and fill his place at Berlin ; you would repent that. I am Astolpho warning Roger (Ruggiero) not to trust himself to the Enchantress Alcina ; but Roger was unadvisable."

To the same (two years later : Luc, on certain grounds, may as well be saved). "With regard to Luc, though I have my just causes of anger against him, I own to you, in my quality of Frenchman and thinking being, I am glad that a certain most Orthodox House has not swallowed Germany, and that the Jesuits are not confessing in Berlin. Over towards the Danube, superstition is very powerful." * * "The infâme" ——"You are well aware that I speak of superstition only ; for as to the Christian religion, I respect and love it, like you.

¹ Œuvres de Voltaire, lxxvii. 133, 4 ("Délices, 6th December 1757," day after Leuthen).

² Ibid. lxxviii. 191 ("Délices, 19th August 1759").

³ Ibid. lxxviii. 197 ("Délices, 25th August 1759").

Courage, Brethren ! Preach with force, and write with address : God will bless you.—Protect, you, my Brother, the Widow Calas all you can ! She is a poor weak-minded Huguenot, but her Husband was the victim of the White Penitents. It is the concern of Human Nature that the Fanatics of Toulouse be confounded." (The case of Calas, second act of it, getting on the scene : a case still memorable to everybody. Stupendous bit of French judicature ; and Voltaire's noblest outburst, into mere transcendent blaze of pity, virtuous wrath, and determination to bring rescue and help against the whole world).¹

Friedrich to Voltaire, before and during these Peace Negotiations.

At Schmöttseifen, five days before Züllichau, ten days before that Hunt of Loudon and Haddick (Voltaire, under rebuke for indiscretion, has been whimpering a little. "My discreet Niece burnt those last verses, Sire ; no danger there, at least !" Truculent Bishop Something-ac tried to attack your Majesty ; but was done for, by a certain person). "In truth you are a singular creature. When I think of scolding you, you say two words, and the reproach expires. Impossible to scold you, even when you deserve it." * *

"As to your Niece, let her burn me or roast me, I care little. Nor are you to think me so sensitive to what your Bishops in ic or in ac may say of me. I have the lot of all actors who play in public ; applauded by some, despised by others. One must prepare oneself for satires, for calumnies, for a multitude of lies, which will be sent abroad into currency against one : but need that trouble my tranquillity ? I go my road ; I do nothing against the interior voice of my conscience ; and I concern myself very little in what way my actions paint themselves in the brain of beings, not always very thinking, with two legs and without feathers."²

At Wilsdorf, just before Maren (an exultant exuberant curious Letter ; too long for insertion,—part of it given above). * * "For your Tragedy of Socrate, thanks. At Paris, they are going to burn it, the wretched fools,—not aware that absurd fanaticism is their dominant vice. Better burn the dose of medicine, however, than the useful Doctor. I, can I join myself to that set? If I bite you, as you complain, it is without my knowledge. But I am surrounded with enemies, one hitting me, another pricking me, another daubing me with mud;—patience at last yields, and one flies abroad into a general rage, too indiscriminate perhaps.

¹ Œuvres de Voltaire, lxxviii. 52, 53 ("Ferney, 28th November 1762").

² "Schmöttseifen, 18th July 1759 ;" Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiii. 55, 56.

“You talk of my Verses on Rossbach” (my Adieu to the Hoopers on finding their Bridge burnt). “This Campaign I have had no beatific vision in the style of Moses. The barbarous Cossacks and Tartars, infamous to look at on any side, have burnt and ravaged countries, and committed atrocious inhumanities. This is all I saw of them. Such melancholy spectacles don’t tend to raise one’s spirits.” (Breaks off into metre :) “La Fortune inconstante et fière, Fortune inconstant and proud Does not treat her suitors. Always in an equal manner. Those fools called heroes, who run the country, “*Ces fous nommés héros, et qui courent les champs,

Couverts de sang et de poussière,
Voltaire, n’ont pas tous les ans
La faveur de voir le derrière
De leurs ennemis insolents.*”

Can’t expect that pleasure every year! * *

“Maupertuis, say you?” “Don’t trouble the ashes of the dead; let the grave at least put an end to your unjust hatreds. Reflect that even Kings make peace after long battling; cannot you ever make it? I think you would be capable, like Orpheus, of descending to Hell, not to soften Pluto and bring back your beautiful Emilie, but to pursue into that Abode of Woe an enemy whom your wrath has only too much persecuted in the world: for shame!”²—and rebukes him, more than once elsewhere, in very serious terms.

In Winter-quarters, on Peace and the Stolen Edition. (Starts in verse, which we abridge :) “With how many laurels you have covered yourself in all the fields of Literature! One laurel yet is wanting to the brow of Voltaire. If, as the crown of so many perfect works, he could by a skilful manœuvre bring back Peace, I, and Europe with me, would think that his masterpiece!” (Takes to prose:)

“This is my thought and all Europe’s. Virgil made as fine

¹ Suprà, p. 167, vol. vi. p. 261.

² Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiii. 61–65 (“Wilsdruf, 17th November 1759”).

Verses as you ; but he never made a Peace. It will be a distinction you will have over all your brethren of Parnassus, if you succeed.

"I know not who has betrayed me, and thought of printing" (the Edition ;—not you, surely!) "a pack of rhapsodies which were good enough to amuse myself, but were never meant for publication. After all, I am so used to treacheries and bad manœuvres,"—what matters this insignificant one?

"I know not who the Bredow is ; but he has told you true. The sword and death have made frightful ravages among us. And the worst is, we are not yet at the end of the tragedy. You may judge what effect these cruel shocks make on me. I wrap myself in my stoicism, the best I can. Flesh and blood revolt against such tyrannous command ; but it must be followed. If you saw me, you would scarcely know me again : I am old, broken, grayheaded, wrinkled ; I am losing my teeth and my gaiety : if this go on, there will be nothing of me left, but the mania of making verses, and an inviolable attachment to my duties and to the few virtuous men whom I know."

In Winter-quarters, a month later (comes still on "Peace" again). * * "I will have you paid that bit of debt" (perhaps of postage or the like), "that Louis of the mill (Louis du Moulin," at Fontenoy, who got upon a windmill with his Dauphin, and caught that nickname from the common men) "may have wherewithal to make war on me. Add tenth-penny tax to your tax of twentieth-penny ; impose new capitations, make titular offices to get money ; do, in a word, whatever you like. In spite of all your efforts, you will not get a Peace signed by my hands, except on conditions honourable to my Nation. Your people, blown up with self-conceit and folly, may depend on these words. Adieu, live happy ; and while you make all your efforts to destroy Prussia, think that nobody has less deserved it than I, either of you or of your French."

Still in Winter-quarters (on "Peace" still ; but begins with "Maupertuis," which is all we will give). "What rage animates you against Maupertuis? You accuse him of having published that Furtive Edition. Know that his Copy, well sealed by him, arrived here after his death, and that he was incapable of such an indiscretion." (Breaks into verse :)

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiii. 69 ("Freyberg, 24th Feb. 1760").

² Ibid, xxiii. 72 ("Freyberg, 20th March 1760").

"Leave in peace the cold ashes of Maupertuis:
 Truth can defend him, and will,
 His soul was faithful and noble:
 He pardoned you that scandalous Akakia (ce vil libelle
Que votre fureur criminelle
Prit soin chez moi de griffonner); he did:—
 And you? Shame on such delirium as Voltaire's!
 What, this beautiful, what, this grand genius,
 Whom I admired with transport,
 Soils himself with calumny, and is ferocious on the dead?
 Flocking together, in the air uttering cries of joy,
 Vile ravens pounce down upon sepulchres,
 And make their prey of corpses: "—

Blush, repent, alas!

These Specimens will suffice. "The King of Prussia?"
 Voltaire would sometimes say: "He is as potent and as malign-nant as the Devil; but he is also as unhappy, not knowing friendship,"—having such a chance, too, with some of us!

Friedrich has sent Lord Marischal to Spain: other fond Hopes of Friedrich's.

In the beginning of this Year, 1759, Earl Marischal had been called out of his Neufchâtel stagnancy, and launched into the Diplomatic field again; sent on mission into Spain, namely. The case was this. Ferdinand VI. of Spain (he who would not pay Friedrich the old Spanish debt, but sent him merino rams, and a jar of Queen-Dowager snuff) had fallen into one of his gloomy fits, and was thought to be dying;—
 did, in fact, die, in a state nearly mad, on the 10th August following. By Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, and by all manner of Treaties, Carlos of Naples, his Half-Brother (Termagant's Baby Carlos, whom we all knew), was to succeed him in Spain; Don Philip, the next Brother now of Parma and Pia-cenza, was to follow as King in Naples,—ceding those two litigious Duchies to Austria, after all. Friedrich, vividly awake to every chance, foresaw, in case of such disjunctures in Italy, good likelihood of quarrel there. And has despatched the experienced old Marischal to be on the ground, and have his eyes open. Marischal knows Spain very well; and has often said, "He left a dear old friend there, the Sun."

Marischal was under way, about New-Year's time ; but lingered by the road, waiting how Ferdinand would turn,—and having withal an important business of his own, as he sauntered on. Did not arrive, I think, till Summer was at hand, and his dear Old Friend coming out in vigor.

August 10th, 1759, Ferdinand died ; and the same day Carlos became King of Spain. But, instead of giving Naples to Don Philip, Carlos gave it to a junior son of his own ; and left poor Philip to content himself with Parma and Piacenza, as heretofore. Clear against the rights of Austria ; Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle is perfectly explicit on that point ! Will not Austria vindicate its claim ? Politicians say, Austria might have recovered not only Parma and Piacenza, but the kingdom of Naples itself,—no France at present able to hinder it, no Spain ever able. But Austria, contrary to expectation, would not : a Country tenacious enough of its rights, real and imaginary ; greedy enough of Italy, but of Silesia much more ! The matter was deliberated in Council at Vienna ; but the result was magnanimously, No. “Finish this Friedrich first ; finish this Silesia. Nothing else till that !”

The Marischal's legationary function, therefore, proved a sinecure ; no Carlos needing Anti-Austrian assistance from Friedrich or another ; Austria magnanimously having let him alone. Doubtless a considerable disappointment to Friedrich. Industrious. Friedrich had tried, on the other side of this affair, Whether the King of Sardinia, once an adventurous fighting kind of man, could not be stirred up, having interests involved ? But no ; he too, grown old, devotional, apprehensive, held by his rosaries, and answered, No. Here is again a hope reasonable to look at, but which proves fallacious.

Marischal continued in Spain, corresponding, sending news (the Prussian Archives alone know what) ; for nearly a couple of years.¹ His Embassy had one effect, which is of interest to us here. On his way out, he had gone by London, with a view of getting legal absolution for his Jacobitism,—so far, at least, as to be able to inherit the Earldom of Kintore, which is likely to fall vacant soon. By blood it is his, were the Jacobite incapacities withdrawn. Kintore is a cadet branch of the Keiths ; " John, younger Son of William Sixth Lord Marischal," was the first Kintore. William Sixth's younger Son, yes ;—and William's Father, a man always venerable to me, had (A.D. 1593) founded Marischal College, Aberdeen,—where, for a few, in those stern Granite Countries, the Diviner Pursuits are still possible (thank God and this Keith) on frugal oat-meal. Marischal-College Keith, or Fifth Lord Marischal, was grandfather's grandfather of our Potsdam Friend, who is tenth and last.¹ Honour to the brave and noble, now fallen silent under foot not of the nobler ! In a word, the fourth Kintore was about dying childless ; and Marischal had come by London on that heritage business.

¹ Returned “April 1762” (Friedrich's Letter to him, “10th April 1762 :” in Œuvres de Frédéric, xx. 295).

He carried, naturally, the best recommendations. Britannic Majesty, Pitt, and everybody met him with welcome and furtherance ; what he wished was done, and in such a style of promptness and cordiality, Pitt pushing it through, as quite gained the heart of old Marischal. And it is not doubted, though particulars have not been published, That he sent important Spanish notices to Pitt, in these years,—and especially informed him that King Carlos and the French Bourbon had signed a Family Compact (15th August 1761), or solemn covenant, to stand by one another as brothers. Which was thenceforth, to Pitt privately, an important fact, as perhaps we shall see ; though to other men it was still only a painful rumour and dubiety. Whether the old Marischal informed him, That King Carlos hated the English ; that he never had, in his royal mind, forgiven that insult of Commodore Martin's (watch laid on the table, in the Bay of Naples, long ago), I do not know ; but that also was a fact. A diligent, indignant kind of man, this Carlos, I am told ; by no means an undeserving King of Spain, though his Portraits declare him an ugly : we will leave him in the discreet Marischal's hands, with the dear Old Friend shining equally on both.

Singular to see how, in so voracious an intellect as Friedrich's, so many fallacies of hope are constantly entertained.

¹ Douglas's Scotch Peerage, pp. 448 et seq., 387 et seq.

War in Italy, on quarrel with King Carlos ; Peace with France and the Pompadour, by help of Edelsheim and the Bailli de Froulay ; Peace with Russia and the infâme Catin, by help of English briberies (Friedrich sent an agent this winter with plenty of English guineas, but he got no farther than the Frontier, not allowed even to try) : sometimes, as again this winter, it is hope of Denmark joining him (in alarm against the Russian views on Holstein ; but that, too, comes to nothing ; above all, there is perennially, budding out yearly, the brighter after every disappointment, a hope in the Grand Turk and his adherencies. Grand Turk, or failing him, the Cham of Tartary,—for certain, some of these will be got to fasten on the heels of Austria, of Russia ; and create a favourable diversion ? Friedrich took an immense deal of trouble about this latter hope. It is almost pathetic to see with what a fond tenacity he clings to it ; and hopes it over again, every new Spring and Summer.¹

The hope that an infâme Catin might die some day (for she is now deep in chaotic ailments, deepish even in brandy), seems never to have struck him ; at least there is nowhere any articulate hint of it,—the eagle-flight of one's imagination soaring far above such a pettiness ! Hope is very beautiful ; and even fallacious hope, in such a Friedrich. The one hope that did not deceive him, was hope in his own best exertion to the very death ; and no fallacy ever for a moment slackened him in that. Stand to thyself : in the wide domain of Imagination, there is no other certainty of help. No other certainty ;—and yet who knows through what pettiness Heaven may send help !

CHAPTER IX.

PRELIMINARIES TO A FIFTH CAMPAIGN.

It was April 25th before Friedrich quitted Freyberg, and took Camp ; not till the middle of June that anything of serious Movement came. Much discouragement prevails in his ¹ Pruss, ii. 121 et seq., 292 &c. ; Schöning, ii. iii. passim.

Army, we hear : and indeed, it must be owned, the horoscope of these Campaigns grows yearly darker. Only Friedrich himself must not be discouraged ! Nor is ;—though there seldom lay ahead of any man a more dangerous-looking Year than this that is now dimly shaping itself to Friedrich. His fortune seems to have quitted him ; his enemies are more confident than ever.

This Year, it seems they have bethought them of a new device against him. "We have 90 million Population," count they ; "he has hardly 5 ; in the end, he must run out of men ! Let us cease exchanging prisoners with him." At Jägerndorf, in April 1758 (just before our march to Olmütz), there had been exchange ; not without haggles ; but this was the last on Austria's part. Cartel of the usual kind, values punctually settled : a Fieldmarshal is worth 3,000 common men, or 1,500*l.* ; Colonel worth 130 men, or 65*l.* ; common man is worth 10*s.* sterling, not a high figure.¹ The Russians haggled still more, no keeping of them to their word ; but they tried it a second time, last year (October 1759) ; and by careful urging and guiding, were got dragged through it, and the prisoners on both sides sent to their colours again. After which, it was a settled line of policy, "No more exchanging or cartelling ; we will starve him out in that article !" And had Friedrich had nothing but his own 5 millions to go upon, though these contributed liberally, he had in truth been starved out. Nor could Saxony, with Mecklenburg, Anhalt, Erfurt, and their 10,000 men a year, have supplied him,— "had not there," says Archenholtz (a man rather fond of superlatives),—

"Had not there risen a Recruiting system," or Crimping system, "the like of which for kind and degree was never seen in the Earth before. Prisoners, captive soldiers, if at all likely fellows, were by every means persuaded, and even compelled, to take Prussian service. Compelled, cudgel in hand," says Archenholtz (who is too indiscriminating, I can see,—for there were Pfalzers, Würtembergers, Reichsfolk, who had first been compelled the other way) : "not asked if they wished to serve, but dragged to the Prussian colours, obliged to swear there, and fight against their countrymen." Say at least, against their countrymen's Governors, contumacious Serene Highnesses of Württemberg, Macklenburg and the like. Württemberg, we mentioned lately, had to shoot a good few of his first levy against the Protestant Champion, before they would march at all!—I am sorry for these poor men; and wish the Reich had been what it once was, a Veracity and Practical Reality, not an Imaginary Entity and hideously contemptible Wiggery, as it now is! Contemptible, and hideous as well;—setting itself up on that fundamental mendacity; which is eternally tragical, though little regarded in these days, and which entails mendacities without end on parties concerned!—But, apart from all this, certain it is,

¹ Archenholtz, ii. 53.

"The whole German Reich was deluged with secret Prussian Enlisters. The greater part of these were not actual Officers at all, but hungry Adventurers, who had been bargained with, and who, for their own profit, allowed themselves every imaginable art to pick up men. Head and centre of them was the Prussian Colonel Colignon," one of the Free-Corps people; "a man formed by nature for this business" (what a beautiful man!)—"who gave all the others their directions, and taught them by his own example. Colignon himself," in winter-time, "travelled about in all manner of costumes and characters; persuading hundreds of people into the Prussian service. He not only promised Commissions, but gave such,—nominating loose young fellows (Laffen), students, merchants' clerks and the like, to Lieutenancies and Captaincies in the Prussian Army" (about as likely as in the Seraphim and Cherubim, had they known it); "in the Infantry, in the Cuirassiers, in the Hussars,—it is all one, you have only to choose. The renown of the Prussian arms was so universal, and combined with the notion of rich booty, that Colignon's Commission-manufactory was continually busy. No need to provide marching-money, hand-money" (shillings for earnest!); "Colignon's troops travelled mostly of will, and at their own charge. In Franken, in Schwaben, in the Rhine Countries, a dissolute son would rob his father,—as shopmen their masters' tills, and managers their cash-boxes,—and hie off to those magnanimous Prussian Officials, who gave away companies like kreutzers, and had a value for young fellows of spirit. They hastened to Magdeburg with their Commissions; where they were received as common recruits, and put by force into the regiments suitable. No use in resisting: the cudgel and the drill-sergeant,"—who doubts it?—"till complete submission. By this and other methods, Colignon and his helpers are reckoned to have raised for the King in the course of this War, about 60,000 recruits."¹

This Year, Daun, though his reputation is on the decline lately, is to have the chief command, as usual; the Grand Army, with Saxony for field of conquest, and the Reichsfolk to assist, is to be Daun's. But, what is reckoned an important improvement, Loudon is to have a separate command, and Army of his own. Loudon, hot of temper, melancholic, shy, is not a man to recommend himself to Kriegshofrath people; but no doubt Imperial Majesty has had her own wise eye on him. His merits are so undeniable; the need of some Commander not of the Cunctator type is become so very pressing. "Army of Silesia, 50,000;" that is to be Loudon's, with 40,000 Russians to coöperate and unite themselves with Loudon; and try actually for conquest of Silesia, this Year; while Daun, conquering Saxony, keeps the King busy.

At Petersburg, Versailles, Vienna, much planning there has been, and arduous consulting: first at Petersburg, in time and in importance, where Montalembert has again been very urgent in regard to those poor Swedish people, and the getting of them turned to some kind of use: "Stettin in conjunction with the Swedes; oh, listen to reason, and take Stettin!" "Would not Dantzic by ourselves be the advisable thing?" answers Soltikof: "Dantzic is an important Town, and the grand Baltic Haven; and would be so convenient for our Preussen, since we have determined to maintain that fine Conquest." So thinks Czarish Majesty, as well as Soltikof, privately, though there are difficulties as to Dantzic; and, in fine, except Colberg over again, there can be nothing attempted of sieging thereabouts. A Siege of Colberg, however, there is actually to be; Second Siege,—if perhaps it will prove luckier than the First was, two years since? Naval Armament Swedish-Russian, specific Land Armament wholly

¹ Archenholtz, ii. 53.

Russian, are to do this Second Siege, at a favourable time ; except by wishes, Soltikof will not be concerned in it ; nor, it is to be hoped, shall we,—in such pressure of haste as is probably ahead for us.

“Silesia would be the place for sieges !” say the Vienna people always ; and Imperial Majesty is very urgent ; and tries all methods,—eloquence, flatteries, bribes,—to bring Petersburg to that view. Which is at last adopted ; heartily by Czarish Majesty, ever ready for revenge on Friedrich, the more fatal and the more direct, the better. Heartily by her ; not so heartily by Soltikof and her Army people, who know the Austrian habits ; and privately decide on not picking chest-nuts from the fire, while the other party’s paws keep idle, and only his jaws are ready.

Of Small-War there is nothing or little to be said ; indeed there occurs almost none. Roving Cossack-Parties, under one Tottleben, whom we shall hear of otherwise, infest Pommern, bickering with the Prussian posts there ; not ravaging as formerly, Tottleben being a civilized kind of man. One of these called at the Castle of Schwedt, one day ; found Prince Eugen of Württemberg there (nearly recovered of his Kunersdorf wounds), who is a Son-in-law of the House, married to a Daughter of Schwedt ;—ancestor of the now Russian Czars too, had anybody then known it. Him these Cossacks carried off with them, a march or two ; then, taking his bond for a certain ransom, let him go. Bond and bond-holder being soon after captured by the Prussians, Eugen paid no ransom ; so that to us his adventure is without moment, though it then made some noise among the Gazetteers.

Two other little passages, and only two, we will mention ; which have in themselves a kind of memorability. First, that of General Czetteritz and the Manuscript he lost. Of posts across the Elbe, I find none mentionable here, and believe there is none, except only Czetteritz’s ; who stands at Cosdorf, well up towards Torgau Country, as sentry over Torgau and the Towns there. On Czetteritz there was, in February, an attempt made by the active General Beck, whom Daun had detached for that object. Extremely successful, according to the Austrian Gazetteers ; but in reality amounting to as good as nothing :—Surprisal of Czetteritz's first vedette, in the dawn of a misty February morning (February 21st, 1760) ; non-surprisal of his second, which did give fire and alarm, whereupon debate ; and Czetteritz springing into his saddle ; retreat of his people to rearward, with loss of 7 Officers, and 200 prisoners ;—but ending in re-advance, with fresh force, a few hours after ;¹ in repulse of Beck, in recovery of Cosdorf, and a general state of As-you-were in that part. A sputter of Post-War, not now worth mentioning at all,—except only for one small circumstance : That in the careering and swift ordering, such as there was, on the rearguard especially, Major-General Czetteritz's horse happened to fall ; whereby not only was the General taken prisoner, but his quarters got plundered, and in his luggage,—what is the notable circumstance, —there was found a small Manuscript, Militairische Instrukzion für die Generale, such as every Prussian General has, and is bound to keep religiously secret.² This, carried to Daun's headquarters, was duly prized, copied ; and in the course of a year came to print, in many shapes and places ; was translated into English, under the Title, Military Instructions by the King of Prussia, in 1762 (and again, hardly so well, in 1797) ; and still languidly circulates among the studios of our soldiers. Not a little admired by some of them ; and unfortunately nearly all they seem to know of this greatest of modern Soldiers.³

Next, about a month after, we have something to report of

¹ Seyfarth, ii. 655.

² Stands now in Œuvres de Frédéric, xxviii. 3 et seq. ; was finished (the revisal of it was), by the King, "2d April 1748 : " see Preuss, i. 478-480 ; and Œuvres de Frédéric, xxviii. Preface, for endless indistinct details about the translations and editions of it. London Edition, 1818, calls itself the Fifth.

³ See, for example, in Life of General Sir Charles Napier, by his Brother (London, 1857), iii. 365 and elsewhere,—one of the best judges in the world expressing his joy and admiration on discovery of Friedrich ; discovery, if you read well, which amounts to these Instructions, and no more.

Loudon from Silesia, or rather of the Enemies he meets there ; for it is not a victorious thing. But it means a starting of the Campaign by an Austrian invasion of Silesia ; long before sieging time, while all these Montalembert-Soltikof pleadings and counter-pleadings hang dubious at Petersburg, and Loudon's "Silesian Army" is still only in a nascent or theoretic state, and only Loudon himself is in a practical one.

Friedrich has always Fouquet at Landshut, in charge of the Silesian Frontier ; whose outposts, under Goltz as head of these, stretch, by Neisse, far eastward, through the Hills to utmost Mähren ; Fouquet's own headquarter being generally Landshut, the main gate of the Country. Fouquet, long since, rooted himself rather firmly into that important post ; he has a beautiful ring of fortified Hills around Landshut ; battery crossing battery, girdling it with sure destruction, under an expert Fouquet,—but would require 30,000 men to keep it, instead of 13,000, which is Fouquet's allotment. Upon whom Loudon is fully intending a stroke this Year. Fouquet, as we know, has strenuously managed to keep ward there for a twelve-month past ; in spite, often enough, of new violent invadings and attemptings (violent, miscellaneous, but intermittent) by the Devilles and others ;—and always under many difficulties of his own, and vicissitudes in his employment : a Fouquet coming and going, waxing and waning, according to the King's necessities, and to the intermittency or constancy of pressures on Landshut. Under Loudon, this Year, Fouquet will have harder times than ever ;—in the end, too hard ! But will resist, judge how, by the following small sample :

"Besides Fouquet and his 13,000," says my Note, "the Silesian Garrisons are all vigilant, are or ought to be ; and there are far eastward of him, for guarding of the Jägerndorf-Troppau Border, some 4 or 6,000, scattered about, under Lieutenant-General Goltz, in various Hill Posts,—the chief Post of which, Goltz's own, is the little Town of Neustadt, northward of Jägerndorf" (where we have billeted in the Old Silesian Wars) : "Goltz's Neustadt is the chief ; and Leobschütz, south-westward of it, under 'General Le Grand'"

(once the Major Grant of Kolin Battle, if readers remember him, "Your Majesty and I cannot take the Battery ourselves!"), "is probably the second in importance. Loudon, cantoned along the Moravian side of the Border, perceives that he can assemble 32,000 foot and horse; that the Prussians are 13,000 plus 6,000; that Silesia can be invaded with advantage, were the weather come. And that, in any kind of weather, Goltz and his straggle of posts might be swept into the interior, perhaps picked up and pocketted altogether, if Loudon were sharp enough. Swept into the interior Goltz was; by no means pocketted altogether, as he ought to have been.

"March 13th, 1760, Loudon orders general muster hereabouts for the 15th, everybody to have two-days bread and forage; and warns Goltz, as bound in honour: 'Excellenz, tomorrow is March 14th; tomorrow our pleasant time of Truce is out,—the more the pity for both of us!' 'Yea, my esteemed neighbour Excellenz!' answers Goltz, with the proper compliments; but judges that his esteemed neighbour is intending mischief almost immediately. Goltz instantly sends orders to all his posts: 'You, Herr General Grant, you at Leobschütz, and all the rest of you, make your packages; march without delay; rendezvous at Steinau, and Upper-Glogau' (far different from Great-Glogau), 'Neisse-ward; swift!' And would have himself gone on the 14th, but could not,—his poor little Bakery not being here, nor wagons for his baggages quite to be collected in a moment,—and it was Saturday 15th, 5 A.M., that Goltz appointed himself to march.

"The last time we saw General Goltz was on the Green of Bautzen, above two years ago,—when he delivered that hard Message to the King's Brother and his party, 'You deserve to be tried by Court-martial, and have your heads cut off!' He was of that sad Zittau business of the late Prince of Prussia's,—Goltz, Winterfeld, Ziethen, Schmettau and others. Winterfeld and the Prince are both dead; Schmettau is fallen into disaster; Goltz is still in good esteem with the King. A stalwart, swift, flinty kind of man, to judge by the Portraits of him; considerable obstinacy, of a tacitly intelligent kind, in that steady eye, in that droop of the eyebrows towards the strong cheek-bones; plenty of sleeping fire in Lieutenant-General Goltz.

"His principal force, on this occasion, is one Infantry Regiment; Regiment Manteuffel:—readers perhaps recollect that stout Pommern Regiment, Manteuffel of Foot, and the little Dialogue it had with the King himself, on the eve of Leuthen : ' Good night, then, Fritz ! Tomorrow all dead, or else the Enemy beaten.' Their conduct, I have heard, was very shining at Leuthen, where everybody shone ; and since then they have been plunging about through the death-element in their old rugged way,—and reëmerge here into definite view again, under Lieutenant-General Goltz, issuing from the north end of Neustadt, in the dim dawn of a cold spring morning, March 15th, 5 A.M. ; weather latterly very wet, as I learn. They intend Neisse-way, with their considerable stock of baggage-wagons ; a company of Dragoons is to help in escorting : party perhaps about 2,000 in all. Goltz will have his difficulties this day ; and has calculated on them. And, indeed, at the first issuing, here they already are.

" Loudon, with about 5,000 horse,—four Regiments drawn up here, and by and by with a fifth (happily not with the grenadiers, as he had calculated, who are detained by broken bridges, waters all in flood from the rain),—is waiting for him, at the very environs of Neustadt. Loudon, by a trumpet, politely invites him to surrender, being so outnumbered ; Goltz, politely thanking, disregards it, and marches on : Loudon escorting, in an ominous way ; till, at Buchelsdorf, the fifth Regiment (best in the Austrian service) is seen drawn out across the highway, plainly intimating, No thoroughfare to Goltz and Pommern. Loudon sends a second trumpet : ' Surrender prisoners ; honourablest terms ; keep all your baggage : refuse, and you are cut down every man.' ' You shall yourself hear the answer,' said Goltz. Goltz leads this second trumpet to the front ; and, in Pommern dialect, makes known what General Loudon's proposal is. The Pommerners answer, as one man, a No of such emphasis as I have never heard ; in terms which are intensely vernacular, it seems, and which do at this day astonish the foreign mind : ' We will for him something, Wir wollen ihm was—' But the powers of translation and even of typography fail ; and feeble paraphrase must give it : ' We will for him something ineffable concoct,' of a surprisingly contrary kind ! 'Wir wollen ihm was' (with ineffable dissyllabic verb governing it) ! growled one indignant Pommerner ; ' and it ran like file-fire along the ranks,' says Archenholtz ; everybody growling it, and bellowing it, in fierce bass chorus, as the indubitable vote of Pommern in those circumstances.

" Loudon's trumpet withdrew. Pommern formed square round its baggage ; Loudon's 5,000 came thundering in, fit to break adamant; but met such a storm of bullets from Pommern, they stopped about ten paces short, in considerable amazement, and wheeled back. Tried it again, still more amazement; the like a third time; every time in vain. After which, Pommern took the road again, with vanguard, rear-guard; and had peace for certain miles,—Loudon gloomily following, for a new chance. How many times Loudon tried again, and ever again, at good places, I forget,—say six times in all. Between Siebenhufen and Steinau, in a dirty defile, the jewel of the road for Loudon, who tried his very best there, one of our wagons broke down; the few to rear of it, eighteen wagons and some country carts, had to be left standing. Nothing more of Pommern was left there or anywhere. Near Steinau there, Loudon gave it up as desperate, and went his way. His loss, they say, was 300 killed, 500 wounded; Pommern's was 35 killed, and above 100 left wounded or prisoners. One of the stiffest day's works I have known: some twelve miles of march, in every two an attack. Pommern has really concocted something surprising, and kept its promise to Loudon! 'Thou knowest what the Pommerners can do,' said they once to their own King. An obstinate, strong-boned, heavy-browed people; not so stupid as you think. More or less of Jutish or English type; highly deficient in the graces of speech, and, I should judge, with little call to Parliamentary Eloquence."¹

Friedrich is, this Year, considered by the generality of mankind to be ruined: "Lost 60,000 men last Campaign; was beaten twice; his luck is done: what is to become of him?" say his enemies, and even the impartial Gazetteer, with joy or sorrow. Among his own people there is gloom or censure; hard commentaries on Maxen: "So self-willed, high, and deaf to counsel from Prince Henri!" Henri himself, they say, is sullen; threatening, as he often does, to resign "for want of health;" and as he quite did, for a while, in the end of this Campaign, or interval between this and next.

Friedrich has, with incredible diligence, got together his finance (copper in larger dose than ever, Jew Ephraim presiding as usual); and, as if by art-magic, has on their feet 100,000 men against his enemy's 280,000. Some higher Officers are secretly in bad spirits; but the men know nothing of discouragement. Friedrich proclaims to them at marching, "For every cannon you capture, 100 ducats; for every flag, 50; for every standard (cavalry flag), 40;"—which sums, as they fell due, were accordingly paid thenceforth.¹ But Friedrich, too, is abundantly gloomy, if that could help him; which he knows well it cannot, and strictly hides it from all but a few;—or all but D'Argens almost alone, to whom it can do no harm. Read carefully by the light of contemporary occurrences, not vaguely, in the vacant haze, as the Editors give it, his correspondence with D'Argens becomes interesting almost to a painful degree: an unaffected picture of one of the bravest human souls, weighed down with dispiriting labours and chagrins, such as were seldom laid on any man; almost beyond bearing, but incurable, and demanding to be borne. Wilhelmina is away, away; to D'Argens alone of mortals does he whisper of these things; and to him not wearisomely, or with the least prolixity, but in short sharp gusts, seldom now with any indignation, oftenest with a touch of humour in them, not soliciting any sympathy, nor expecting nearly as much as he will get from the faithful D'Argens.

¹ Preuss, ii. 241 (incorrect in some small points); Archenholts, ii. 61; Seyfarth, ii. 640, and Beylagen, ii. 657-660; Tempelhof, iv. 8-10; in Anonymous of Hamburg (iv. 68), the Austrian account.

"I am unfortunate and old, dear Marquis; that is why they persecute me: God knows what my future is to be this Year! I grieve to resemble Cassandra with my prophecies; but how augur well of the desperate situation we are in, and which goes on growing worse? I am so gloomy today, I will cut short." . . . "Write to me when you have nothing better to do; and don't forget a poor Philosopher who, perhaps to expiate his incredulity, is doomed to find his Purgatory in this world."² . . . To another Friend, in the way of speech, he more deliberately says: "The difficulties I had, last Campaign, were almost infinite: such a multitude of enemies acting against me; Pommern, Brandenburg, Saxony, Frontiers of Silesia, alike in danger, often enough all at one time. If I escaped absolute destruction, I must impute it chiefly to the misconduct of my enemies ; who gained such advantages, but had not the sense to follow them up. Experience often corrects people of their blunders : I cannot expect to profit by anything of that kind, on their part, in the course of this Campaign : " judge if it will be a light one, mon cher.¹

¹ Stenzel, v. 236, 237; ib. 243.

² Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 138, 139 ("Freyberg, 20th March 1760").

The symptoms we decipher in these Letters, and otherwise, are those of a man drenched in misery ; but used to his black element, unaffectedly defiant of it, or not at the pains to defy it ; occupied only to do his very utmost in it, with or without success, till the end come. Prometheus, chained on the Ocean-cliffs, with the New Ruling-Powers in the upper hand, and their vultures gradually eating him ; dumb Time and dumb Space looking on, apparently with small sympathy : Prometheus and other Titans, now and then, have touched the soul of some Æschylus, and drawn tones of melodious sympathy, far heard among mankind. But with this new Titan it is not so : nor, upon the whole, with the proper Titan, in this world, is it usually so ; the world being a—what shall we say?—a poorish kind of world, and its melodies and dissonances, its loves and its hatreds, worth comparatively little in the long-run. Friedrich does wonderfully, without sympathy from almost anybody ; and the indifference with which he walks along, under such a cloud of sulky stupidities, of mendacities and misconceptions, from the herd of mankind, is decidedly admirable to me.

But let us look into the Campaign itself. Perhaps,—contrary to the world's opinion, and to Friedrich's own when, in ultra-lucid moments, he gazes into it in the light of cold arithmetic, and finds the aspect of it "frightful,"—this Campaign will be a little luckier to him than the last? Unluckier it cannot well be : or if so, it will at least be final to him !

¹ To Mitchell, one evening, "Camp of Schlettau, May 23d" (Mitchell, ii. 139).

BOOK XX.

FRIEDRICH IS NOT TO BE OVERWHELMED : THE SEVEN-YEARS WAR GRADUALLY ENDS.

25th April 1760—15th February 1763.

CHAPTER I

FIFTH CAMPAIGN OPENS.

THERE were yet, to the world's surprise and regret, Three Campaigns of this War ; but the Campaign of 1760, which we are now upon, was what produced or rendered possible the other two ;—was the crisis of them, and is now the only one that can require much narrative from us here. Ill-luck, which, Friedrich complains, had followed him like his shadow, in a strange and fateful manner, from the day of Kunersdorf and earlier, does not yet cease its sad company ; but, on the contrary, for long months to come, is more constant than ever, baffling every effort of his own, and from the distance sending him news of mere disaster and discomfiture. It is in this Campaign, though not till far on in it, that the long lane does prove to have a turning, and the Fortune of War recovers its old impartial form. After which, things visibly languish : and the hope of ruining such a Friedrich becomes problematic, the effort to do it slackens also ; the very will abating, on the Austrian part, year by year, as of course the strength of their resources is still more steadily doing. To the last, Friedrich, the weaker in material resources, needs all his talent,—all his luck too. But, as the strength, on both sides, is fast abating,—hard to say on which side faster (Friedrich's talent being always a fixed quantity, while all else is fluctuating and vanishing),—what remains of the once terrible Affair, through Campaigns Sixth and Seventh, is like a race between spent horses, little to be said of it in comparison. Campaign 1760 is the last of any outward eminence or greatness of event. Let us diligently follow that, and be compendious with the remainder.

Friedrich was always famed for his Marches; but, this Year, they exceeded all calculation and example; and are still the admiration of military men. Can there be no method be some distant notion afforded of them to the general reader? They were the one resource Friedrich had left, against such overwhelming superiority in numbers; and they came out like surprises in a theatre,—unpleasantly surprising to Daun. Done with such dexterity, rapidity, and inexhaustible contrivance and ingenuity, as overset the schemes of his enemies again and again, and made his one army equivalent in effect to their three.

Evening of April 25th, Friedrich rose from his Freyberg cantonments; moved back, that is, northward, a good march; then encamped himself between Elbe and the Hill-Country; with freer prospect and more elbow-room for work coming. His left is on Meissen and the Elbe; his right, at a Village called the Katzenhäuser, an uncommonly strong camp, of which one often hears afterwards; his centre camp is at Schlettau, which also is strong, though not to such a degree. This line extends from Meissen southward about 10 miles, commanding the Reich-wart Passes of the Metal Mountains, and is defensive of Leipzig, Torgau and the Towns thereabouts.¹ Katzenhäuser is but a mile or two from Krögis—that unfortunate Village where Finck got his Maxen Order: "Er weiss,—You know I can't stand having difficulties raised; manage to do it."

Friedrich's task, this Year, is to defend Saxony; Prince Henri having undertaken the Russians,—Prince Henri and Fouquet, the Russians and Silesia. Clearly on very uphill terms, both of them : so that Friedrich finds he will have a great many things to assist in, besides defending Saxony. He lies here expectant till the middle of June, above seven weeks ; Daun also, for the last two weeks, having taken the field in a sort. In a sort ;—but comes no nearer ; merely posting himself astride of the Elbe, half in Dresden, half on the opposite or northern bank of the River, with Lacy thrown out ahead in good force on that vacant side ; and so waiting the course of other people's enterprises.

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 16 et seq.

Well to eastward and rearward of Daun, where we have seen Loudon about to be very busy, Prince Henri and Fouquet have spun themselves out into a long chain of posts, in length 300 miles or more “ from Landshut, along the Bober, along the Queiss and Oder, through the Neumark, abutting on Stettin and Colberg, to the Baltic Sea.”¹ On that side, in aid of Loudon or otherwise, Daun can attempt nothing ; still less on the Katzenhäuser-Schlettau side can he dream of an attempt : only towards Brandenburg and Berlin,—the Country on that side, 50 or 60 miles of it, to eastward of Meissen, being vacant of troops,—is Daun's road open, were he enterprising, as Friedrich hopes he is not. For some two weeks, Friedrich,—not ready otherwise, it being difficult to cross the River, if Lacy with his 30,000 should think of interference,—had to leave the cunctatory Feldmarschall this chance or unlikely possibility. At the end of the second week (“ June 14th,” as we shall mark by and by), the chance was withdrawn.

Daun and his Lacy are but one, and that by no means the most harassing, of the many cares and anxieties which Friedrich has upon him in those Seven Weeks, while waiting at Schlettau, reading the omens. Never hitherto was the augury of any Campaign more indecipherable to him, or so continually fluctuating with wild hopes, which proved visionary, and with huge practical fears, of what he knew to be the real likelihood. “ Peace coming ? ” It is strange how long Friedrich clings to that fond hope : “ My Edelsheim is in the Bastille, or packed home in disgrace : but will not the English and Choiseul make Peace? It is Choiseul's one rational course; bankrupt as he is, and reduced to spoons and kettles. In which case, what a beautiful effect might Duke Ferdinand produce, if he marched to Eger, say to Eger, with his 50,000 Germans (Britannic Majesty and Pitt so gracious), and twitched Daun by the skirt, whirling Daun home to Bohemia in a hurry!" Then the Turks; the Danes,—“ Might not the Danes send us a trifle of Fleet to Colberg (since the English never will), and keep our Russians at bay? ”—“ At lowest these hopes are consolatory,” says he once, suspecting them all (as, no doubt, he often enough does), “ and give us courage to look calmly for the opening of this Campaign, the very idea of which has made me shudder! ”’

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 21-24.

Meanwhile, by the end of May, the Russians are come across the Weichsel again, lie in four camps on the hither side; start about June 1st;—Henri waiting for them, in Sagan Country his headquarter; and on both hands of that, Fouquet and he spread out, since the Middle of May, in their long thin Chain of Posts, from Landshut to Colberg again, like a thin wall of 300 miles. To Friedrich the Russian movements are, and have been, full of enigma: “ Going upon Colberg? Going upon Glogau; upon Breslau? ” That is a heavy-footed certainty, audibly trampling forward on us, amid these fond visions of the air! Certain too, and visible to a duller eye than Friedrich's; Loudon in Silesia is meditating mischief. “ The inevitable Russians, the inevitable Loudon; and nothing but Fouquet and Henri on guard there, with their long thin chain of posts, infinitely too thin to do any execution! ” thinks the King. To whom their modes of operating are but little satisfactory, as seen at Schlettau from the distance. “ Condense yourself,” urges he always on Henri; “ go forward on the Russians; attack sharply this Corps, that Corps, while they are still separate and on march! ” Henri did condense himself, “ took post between Sagan and Sprottau; post at Frankfurt,”—poor Frankfurt, is it to have a Kunersdorf or Zorndorf every year, then? No; the cautious Henri never could see his way into these adventures ; and did not attack any Corps of the Russians. Took post at Landsberg ultimately,—the Russians, as usual, having Posen as place-of-arms,—and vigilantly watched the Russians, without coming to strokes at all. A spectacle growing gradually intolerable to the King, though he tries to veil his feelings.

¹ To Prince Henri: ” in Schönning, II. 246 (3d April 1760); ib. 263 (of the Danish outlook); &c. &c.

Neither was Fouquet's plan of procedure well seen by Friedrich in the distance. Ever since that of Regiment Mantuffel, which was a bit of disappointment, Loudon has been quietly industrious on a bigger scale. Privately he cherishes the hope, being a swift vehement enterprising kind of man, to oust Fouquet ; and perhaps to have Glatz Fortress taken, before his Russians come ! In the very end of May, Loudon, privately aiming for Glatz, breaks in upon Silesia again,—a long way to eastward of Fouquet, and as if regardless of Glatz. Upon which, Fouquet, in dread for Schweidnitz and perhaps Breslau itself, hastened down into the Plain Country, to manœuvre upon Loudon ; but found no Loudon moving that way ; and, in a day or two, learned that Landshut, so weakly guarded, had been picked up by a big corps of Austrians ; and in another day or two, that Loudon (June 7th) had blocked Glatz,—Loudon's real intention now clear to Fouquet. As it was to Friedrich from the first ; whose anger and astonishment at this loss of Landshut were great, when he heard of it in his Camp of Schlettau. "Back to Landshut," orders he (11th June, three days before leaving Schlettau) ; "neither Schweidnitz nor Breslau are in danger : it is Glatz the Austrians mean" (as Fouquet and all the world now see they do !) ; "watch Glatz ; retake me Landshut instantly !"

The tone of Friedrich, which is usually all friendliness to Fouquet, had on this occasion something in it which offended the punctual, and rather peremptory Spartan mind. Fouquet would not have neglected Glatz ; pity he had not been left to his own methods with Landshut and it. Deeply hurt, he read this Order (16th June) ; and vowing to obey it, and nothing but it, used these words, which were remembered afterwards, to his assembled Generals : "Meine Herren, it appears, then, we must take Landshut again. Loudon, as the next thing, will come on us then with his mass of force ; and we must then, like Prussians, hold out as long as possible, think of no surrender on open field, but if even beaten, defend ourselves to the last man. In case of a retreat, I will be one of the last that leaves the field : and should I have the misfortune to survive such a day, I give you my word of honour never to draw a Prussian sword more.”¹ This speech of Fouquet’s (June 16th) was two days after Friedrich got on march from Schlettau. June 17th, Fouquet got to Landshut ; drove out the Austrians more easily than he had calculated, and set diligently, next day, to repair his works, writing to Friedrich : “ Your Majesty’s Order shall be executed here, while a man of us lives.” Fouquet, in the old Crown-Prince time, used to be called Bayard by his Royal friend. His Royal friend, now darker of face and scathed by much ill-weather, has just quitted Schlettau, three days before this recovery of Landshut ; and will not have gone far till he again hear news of Fouquet.

Night of June 14th–15th, Friedrich, “ between Zehren and Zabel,” several miles down stream,—his bridges now all ready, out of Lacy’s cognisance,—has suddenly crossed Elbe ; and next afternoon pitches camp at Broschwitz, which is straight towards Lacy again. To Lacy’s astonishment ; who is posted at Moritzburg, with headquarter in that beautiful Country-seat of Polish Majesty,—only 10 miles to eastward, should Friedrich take that road. Broschwitz is short way north of Meissen, and lies on the road either to Grossenhayn or to Radeburg (Radeburg only four miles northward of Lacy), as Friedrich shall see fit, on the morrow. For the Meissen north road forks off there, in those two directions : straight northward is for Grossenhayn, right hand is for Radeburg. Most interesting to Lacy, which of these forks, what is quite optional, Friedrich will take ! Lacy is an alert man ; looks well to himself ; warns Daun ; and will not be caught if he can help it. Daun himself is encamped at Reichenberg, within two miles of him, inexpugnably entrenched as usual ; and the danger surely is not great : nevertheless both these Generals, wise by experience, keep their eyes open.

¹ Stenzel. v. 230.

The First great Feat of Marching now follows, on Friedrich's part ; with little or no result to Friedrich ; but worth remembering, so strenuous, so fruitless was it,—so barred by ill-news from-without ! Both this and the Second stand recorded for us, in brief intelligent terms by Mitchell, who was present in both ; and who is perfectly exact on every point, and intelligible throughout,—if you will read him with a Map ; and divine for yourself what the real names are, out of the inhuman blotchings made of them, not by Mitchell's blame at all.¹

Tuesday, June 17th, second day of Friedrich's stay at Broschwitz, Mitchell, in a very confidential Dialogue they had together, learned from him, under seal of secrecy, That it was his purpose to march for Radeburg tomorrow morning, and attack Lacy and his 30,000, who lie encamped at Moritzburg out yonder ; for which step his Majesty was pleased further to show Mitchell a little, what the various inducements were : "One Russian Corps is aiming as if for Berlin ; the Austrians are about besieging Glatz,—pressing need that Fouquet were reinforced in his Silesian post of difficulty. Then here are the Reichs-people close by ; can be in Dresden three days hence, joined to Daun : 80,000 odd there will then be of Enemies in this part : I must beat Lacy, if possible, while time still is !"—and ended by saying : "Succeed here, and all may yet be saved ; be beaten here, I know the consequences : but what can I do ? The risk must be run ; and it is now smaller than it will ever again be."

Mitchell, whose account is a fortnight later than the Dialogue itself, does confess, "My Lord, these reasons, though unhappily the thing seems to have failed, 'appear to me to be solid and unanswerable.'" Much more do they do to Tempelhof, who sees deeper into the bottom of them than Mitchell did ; and finds that the failure is only superficial.² The real success, thinks Tempelhof, would be, Could the King manoeuvre himself into Silesia, and entice a cunctatory Daun away with him thither. A cunctatory Daun to preside over matters there, in his superstitiously cautious way; leaving Saxony free to the Reichsfolk,—whom a Hülsen, left with his small remnant in Schlettau, might easily take charge of, till Silesia were settled? “The plan was bold, was new, and completely worthy of Friedrich,” votes Tempelhof; “and it required the most consummate delicacy of execution. To lure Daun on, always with the prospect opened to him of knocking you on the head, and always by your rapidity and ingenuity to take care that he never got it done.” This is Tempelhof’s notion: and this, sure enough, was actually Friedrich’s mode of management in the weeks following; though whether already altogether planned in his head, or only gradually planning itself, as is more likely, nobody can say. We will look a very little into the execution, concerning which there is no dubiety:

¹ Mitchell, Memoirs and Papers, ii. 160 et seq.

² Mitchell, ii. 160 (Despatch, "June 30th, 1760") ; Tempelhof, iv.

Wednesday, 18th June, “Friedrich,” as predicted to Mitchell, the night before, “did start punctually, in three columns, at 3 A.M.” (Sun. just rising); “and, after a hot march, got encamped on the southward side of Radeburg: ready to cross the Rüdern Stream there, tomorrow, as if intending for the Lausitz” (should that prove needful for alluring Lacy),—“and in the mean while, very inquisitive where Lacy might be. One of Lacy’s outposts, those Saxon light horse, was fallen in with; was chased home, and Lacy’s camp discovered, that night. At Bernsdorf, not three miles to southward or right of us; Daun only another three to south of him. Let us attack Lacy tomorrow morning; wind round to get between Daun and him,¹—with fit arrangements; rapid as light! In the King’s Tent, accordingly, his Generals are assembled to take their Orders; brief, distinct, and to be done with brevity. And all are on the move for Bernsdorf at 4 next morning; when, behold,— Thursday 19th, “At Bernsdorf, there is no Lacy to be found. Cautious Daun has ordered him in,—and not for Lacy’s sake, as appears, but for his own: ‘Hitherward, you alert Lacy; to cover my right flank here, my Hill of Reichenberg,—lest it be not impregnable enough against that feline enemy !' And there they have taken post, say 60,000 against 30,000 ; and are palisading to a quite extraordinary degree. No fight possible with Lacy or Daun."

¹Tempelhof, iv. 47-49.

This is what Mitchell counts the failure of Friedrich's enterprise : and certainly it grieved Friedrich a good deal. Who, on riding out to reconnoitre Reichenberg (Quintus Icilius and Battalion Quintus part of his escort, if that be an interesting circumstance), finds Reichenberg a plainly unattackable post ; finds, by Daun's rate of palisading, that there will be no attack from Daun either. No attack from Daun ;—and, therefore, that Hülse's people may be sent home to Schlettau again ; and that he, Friedrich, will take post close by, and wearisomely be content to wait for some new opportunity.

Which he does for a week to come ; Daun sitting impregnable, entrenched and palisaded to the teeth,—rather wishing to be attacked, you would say ; or hopeful sometimes of doing something of the Hochkirch sort again (for the country is woody, and the enemy audacious) ;—at all events, very clear not to attack. A man erring, sometimes to a notable degree, by over-caution. "Could hardly have failed to overwhelm Friedrich's small force, had he at once, on Friedrich's crossing the Elbe, joined Lacy, and gone out against him," thinks Tempelhof, pointing out the form of operation too.¹ Caution is excellent ; but not quite by itself. Would caution alone do it, an Army all of Druidic whin-stones, or innocent clay-sacks, incapable of taking hurt, would be the proper one !—Daun stood there ; Friedrich looking daily into him,—visibly in ill-humour, says Mitchell ; and no wonder ; gloomy and surly words coming out of him, to the distress of his Generals : "which I took the liberty of hinting, one evening, to his Majesty ;" hint graciously received, and of effect perceptible, at least to my imagining.

Wednesday, June 25th, After nearly a week of this, there rose, towards sunset, all over the Reichenberg, and far and wide, an exuberant joy-firing : "For what in the world ?" thinks Friedrich. Alas, your Majesty,—since your own messenger has not arrived, nor indeed ever will, being picked up by Pandours,—here, gathered from the Austrian outposts or deserters, are news for you, fatal enough ! Landshut is done ; Fouquet and his valiant 13,000 are trodden out there. Indignant Fouquet has obeyed you, not wisely but too well. He has kept Landshut six nights and five days. On the morning of the 6th day, here is what befel :

¹ Templehof, iv. 42, 48.

"Landshut, Monday 23d June, About a quarter to 2 in the morning, Loudon, who had gathered 31,000 horse and foot for the business, and taken his measures, fired aloft, by way of signal, four howitzers into the gray of the summer morning ; and burst loose upon Fouquet, in various columns, on his southward front, on both flanks, ultimately in his rear too ; columns all in the height of fighting humour, confident as three to one,—and having brandy in them, it is likewise said. Fouquet and his people stood to arms, in the temper Fouquet had vowed they would : defended their Hills with an energy, with a steady skill, which Loudon himself admired ; but their Hill-works would have needed thrice the number ;—Fouquet, by detaching and otherwise, has in arms only 10,680 men. Toughly as they strove, after partial successes, they began to lose one Hill, and then another ; and in the course of hours, nearly all their Hills. Landshut Town Loudon had taken from them, Landshut and its roads : in the end, the Prussian position is become permeable, plainly untenable ;—Austrian force is moving to their rearward to block the retreat.

" Seeing which latter fact, Fouquet throws out all his Cavalry, a poor 1,500, to secure the Passes of the Bober ; himself forms square with the wrecks of his Infantry ; and, at a steady step, cuts way for himself with bayonet and bullet. With singular success for some time, in spite of the odds. And is clear across the Bober ; when lo, among the knolls ahead, masses of Austrian Cavalry are seen waiting him, besetting every passage ! Even these do not break him ; but these, with infantry and cannon coming up to help them, do. Here, for some time, was the fiercest tug of all,—till a bullet having killed Fouquet's horse, and carried the General himself to the ground, the spasm ended. The Lichnowski Dragoons, a famed Austrian regiment, who had charged and again charged with nothing but repulse on repulse, now broke in, all in a foam of rage ; cut furiously upon Fouquet himself ; wounded Fouquet thrice ; would have killed him, had it not been for the heroism of poor Trautschke, his Groom " (let us name the gallant fellow, even if unpronounceable), " who flung himself on the body of his Master, and took the bloody strokes instead of him ; shrieking his loudest, ' Will you murder the Commanding General, then ! ' Which brought up the Colonel of Lichnowski ; a Gentleman and Ritter, abhorrent of such practices. To him Fouquet gave his sword ;—kept his vow never to draw it again.

"The wrecks of Fouquet's Infantry were, many of them, massacred, no quarter given ; such the unchivalrous fury that had risen. His Cavalry, with the loss of about 500, cut their way through. They and some stragglers of Foot, in whole about 1,500 of both kinds, were what remained of those 10,680 after this bloody morning's work. There had been about six hours of it ; 'all over by 8 o'clock.' "

Fouquet has obeyed to the letter : "Did not my King wrong me ?" Fouquet may say to himself. Truly, Herr General, your King's Order was a little unwise ; as you (who were on the ground, and your King not) knew it to be. An unwise Order ;—perhaps not inexcusable in the sudden circumstances. And perhaps a still more perfect Bayard would have preferred obeying such a King in spirit, rather than in letter, and thereby doing him vital service against his temporary will ? It is not doubted but Fouquet, left to himself and his 13,000, with the Fortresses and Garrisons about him, would have maintained himself in Silesia till help came. The issue is,—Fouquet has probably lost this fine King his Silesia, for the time being ; and beyond any question, has lost him 10,000 Prussian-Spartan fighters, and a fine General whom he could ill spare !—In a word, the Gate of Silesia is burst open ; and Loudon has every prospect of taking Glatz, which will keep it so.

What a thunderbolt for Friedrich ! One of the last pillars struck away from his tottering affairs. "Inevitable, then ? We are over with it, then ?" One may fancy Friedrich's reflexions. But he showed nothing of them to anybody ; in a few hours, had his mind composed, and new plans on the anvil. On the morrow of that Austrian Joy-Firing,—morrow, or some day close on it (ought to have been dated, but is not),—there went from him, to Magdeburg, the Order : "Have me such and such quantities of Siege-Artillery in a state of readiness." Already meaning, it is thought, or contemplating as possible a certain Siege, which surprised everybody before long ! A most inventive, enterprising being ; no end to his contrivances and unexpected outbreaks ; especially when you have him jammed into a corner, and fancy it is all over with him !

¹ Hofbericht von der am 23 Junius 1760 bey Landshuth vorgefallenen Action (in Seyfarth, Beylagen, ii. 669-671) ; Helden-Geschichte, vi., 258-284 ; Tempelhof, iv. 26-41 ; Stenzel, v. 241 (who, by oversight,—this Volume being posthumous to poor Stenzel,—protracts the action to "half-past 7 in the evening").

² Tempelhof, iv. 51.

“To no other General,” says Tempelhof, “would such a notion of besieging Dresden have occurred ; or if it had suggested itself, the hideous difficulties would at once have banished it again ; or left it only as a pious wish. But it is strokes of this kind that characterise the great man. Often enough they have succeeded, been decisive of great campaigns and wars, and become splendid in the eyes of all mankind ; sometimes, as in this case, they have only deserved to succeed, and to be splendid in the eyes of judges. How get these masses of enemies lured away, so that you could try such a thing ? There lay the difficulty ; insuperable altogether, except by the most fine and appropriate treatment. Of a truth, it required a connected series of the wisest measures, and most secret artifices of war ;—and, withal, that you should throw over them such a veil as would lead your enemy to see in them precisely the reverse of what they meant. How all this was to be set in action, and how the Enemy’s own plans, intentions, and moods of mind were to be used as raw material for attainment of your object,—studious readers will best see in the manœuvres of the King in his now more than critical condition ; which do certainly exhibit the completest masterpiece in the Art of leading Armies that Europe has ever seen.”

Tempelhof is well enough aware, as readers should continue to be, that, primarily, and onward for three weeks more, not Dresden, but the getting to Silesia on good terms, is Friedrich’s main enterprise : Dresden only a supplement or substitute, a second string to his bow, till the first fail. But, in effect, the two enterprises or strings coincide, or are one, till the first of them fail ; and Tempelhof’s eulogy will apply to either. The initiatory step to either is a Second Feat of Marching ;—still notabler than the former, which has had this poor issue. Soldiers of the studious or scientific sort, if there are yet any such among us, will naturally go to Tempelhof, and fearlessly encounter the ruggedest Documents and Books, if Tempelhof leave them dubious on any point (which he hardly will): to ingenuous readers of other sorts, who will take a little pains for understanding the thing, perhaps the following intermittent far-off glimpses may suffice.¹

On ascertaining the Landshut disaster, Friedrich falls back a little; northward to Gross-Dobritz: "Possibly Daun will think us cowed by what has happened; and may try something on us?" Daun is by no means sure of this cowed phenomenon, or of the retreat it has made; and tries nothing on it; only rides up daily to it, to ascertain that it is there; and diligently sends out parties to watch the North-eastward parts, where run the Silesian Roads. After about a week of this, and some disappointments, Friedrich decides to march in earnest. There had, one day, come report of Lacy's being detached, Lacy with a strong Division, to block the Silesian roads; but that, on trial, proved to be false. "Pshaw, nothing for us but to go ourselves!" concludes Friedrich,—and, July 1st, sends off his Bakery and Heavy Baggage; indicating to Mitchell, "Tomorrow morning at 3!"—Here is Mitchell's own account; accurate in every particular, as we find:*

Wednesday, July 2d. "From Gross-Dobritz to Quosdorf"—(to Quosdorf, a poor Hamlet there, not Quolsdorf, as many write, which is a Town far enough from there)—"the Army marched, accordingly. In two columns; baggage, bakery and artillery in a third; through a Country extremely covered with wood. Were attacked by some Uhlans and Hussars; whom a few cannon-shot sent to the road again. March lasted from 3 in the morning to 3 in the afternoon;" twelve long hours. "Went north-eastward a space of twenty miles, leaving Radeburg, much more leaving Reichenberg, Moritzburg and the Daun quarters well to the right, and at last quite to rearward; crossed the Röder, crossed the Pulsnitz," small tributaries or sub-tributaries of the Elbe in those parts; "crossed the latter (which divides Meissen from the Lausitz) partly by the Bridge of Krakau, first Village in the Lausitz. Head-quarter was the poor Hamlet of Quosdorf, a mile farther on. 'This march had been carefully kept secret,' says Mitchell;

¹ Mitchell, ii. 162 et seq.; and Tempelhof (iv. 50-53 et seq.), as a scientific check on Mitchell, or unconscious fellow-witness with him,—agreeing beautifully almost always.

* Mitchell, ii. 164; Tempelhof, iv. 54.

'and it was the opinion of the most experienced Officers, that, had the Enemy discovered the King of Prussia's design, they might, by placing their light troops in the roads with proper supports, have rendered it extremely difficult, if not impracticable.' "

Daun very early got to know of Friedrich's departure, and whitherward ; which was extremely interesting to Daun : "Aims to be in Silesia before me ; will cut out Loudon from his fine prospects on Glatz ?"—and had instantly reinforced, perhaps to 20,000, Lacy's Division ; and ordered Lacy, who is the nearest to Friedrich's March, to start instantly on the skirts of said March, and endeavour diligently to trample on the same. For the purpose of harassing said March, Lacy is to do whatever he with safety can (which we see is not much : "a few Uhlans and Hussars") ; at lowest, is to keep it constantly in sight : and always encamp as near it as he dare ;—Daun himself girding up his loins ; and preparing, by a short cut, to get ahead of it in a day or two. Lacy was alert enough, but could not do much with safety : a few Uhlans and Hussars, that was all ; and he is now encamped somewhere to rearward, as near as he dare.

Thursday, 3d July. "A rest-day ; Army resting about Krakau, after such a spell through the woody moors. The King, with small escort, rides out reconnoitering, hither, thither, on the southern side or Lacy quarter : to the top of the Keulenberg (Bludgeon Hill), at last,—which is ten or a dozen miles from Krakau and Quosdorf, but commands an extensive view. Towns, village-belfries, courses of streams : a country of mossy woods and wild agricultures, of bogs, of shaggy moor. Southward 10 miles is Radeberg" (not Radeburg, observe) ; "yonder is the town of Pulsnitz on our stream of Pulsnitz ; to south-east, and twice as far, is Bischofswerda, chasmy Stolpen (too well known to us before this) : behind us, Königsbrück, Kamenz and the road from Grossenhayn to Bautzen : these and many other places memorable to this King are discoverable from Bludgeon Hill. But the discovery of discoveries to him is Lacy's Camp,—not very far off, about a mile behind Pulsnitz ; clearly visible, at Lichtenberg yonder. Which we at once determine to attack ; which, and the roads to which, are the one object of interest just now,—nothing else visible, as it were, on the top of the Keulenberg here, or as we ride homeward, meditating it with a practical view. 'March at midnight,' that is the practical result arrived at, on reaching home."

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 54.

Friday, July 4th. "Since the stroke of midnight we are all on march again; nothing but the baggages and bakeries left" (with Quintus to watch them, which I see is his common function in these marches): "King himself in the Vanguard, —who hopes to give Lacy a salutation." 'The march was full of defiles,' says Mitchell: and Mitchell, in his carriage, knew little what a region it was, with boggy intricacies, lakelets, tangly thickets, stocks and stumps; or what a business to pass with heavy cannon, baggage-wagons, and columns of men! Such a march: and again not far from 20 miles of it: very hot, as the morning broke, in the breathless woods. Had Lacy known what kind of ground we had to march in, and been enterprising—I think Tempelhof. The march being so retarded, Lacy got notice of it, and vanished quite away,—to Bischofswerda, I believe, and the protecting neighbourhood of Daun. Nothing of him left when we emerge, simultaneously from this hand and from that, on his front and on his rear, to take him as in a vice, as in the sudden snap of a fox-trap;—fox quite gone. Hardly a few hussars of him to be picked up; and no chase possible, after such a march."

Friedrich had done everything to keep himself secret: but Lacy has endless Pandours prowling about: and, I suppose, the Country-people (in the Lausitz here, who ought to have loyalty) are on the Lacy side. Friedrich has to take his disappointment. He encamps here, on the Heights, headquarter Pulsnitz,—till Quintus come up with the baggage, which he does punctually, but not till nightfall, not till midnight the last of him.

Saturday, July 5th. "To the road again at 3 A.M. Again to northward, to Kloster (Cloister) Marienstern, a 15 miles or so,—headquarter in the Cloister itself. Daun had set off for Bautzen, with his 50 or 60,000, in the extremest push of haste, and is at Bautzen this night; ahead of Friedrich, with Lacy as rearguard of him, who is also ahead of Friedrich, and safe at Bischofswerda. A Daun hastening as never before. This news of a Daun already at Bautzen awakened Friedrich's utmost speed: 'Never do, that Daun be in Silesia before us! Indispensable to get ahead of Bautzen and him, or to be waiting on the flank of his next march!' Accordingly, Sunday July 6th. "Friedrich, at 3 A.M., is again in motion ; in three columns, streaming forward all day : straight eastward, Daunward. Intends to cross the Spree, leaving Bautzen to the right ; and take post somewhere to north-east of Bautzen, and on the flank of Daun. The windless day grows hotter and hotter ; the roads are of loose sand, full of jungles and impediments. This was such a march for heat and difficulty as the King never had before. In front of each Column went wagons with a few pontoons : there being many brooks and little streams to cross. The soldier, for his own health's sake, is strictly forbidden to drink ; but as the burning day rose higher, in the sweltering close march, thirst grew irresistible. Crossing any of these Brooks, the soldiers pounce down, irrepressible, whole ranks of them ; lift water, clean or dirty ; drink it greedily from the brim of the hat. Sergeants may wag their tongues and their cudgels at discretion : 'showers of cudgel-strokes,' says Archenholtz ; Sergeants going like threshers on the poor men ;—'though the upper Officers had a touch of mercy, and affected not to see this disobedience to the Sergeants and their cudgels,' which was punishable with death. War is not an over-fond Mother, but a sufficiently Spartan one, to her Sons. There dropt down, in the march that day, 105 Prussian men, who never rose again. And as to intercepting Daun by such velocity,—Daun too is on march ; gone to Görlitz, at almost a faster pace, if at a far heavier,—like a cart-horse on gallop ; faring still worse in the heat : '200 of Daun's men died on the road this day, and 300 more were invalided for life.'¹

"Before reaching the Spree, Friedrich, who is in the Vanguard, hears of this Görlitz March, and that the bird is flown. For which he has, therefore, to devise straightway a new expedient : 'Wheel to the right ; cross Spree farther down, holding towards Bautzen itself,' orders Friedrich. And settles within two miles of Bautzen ; his left being at Dobereschütz,—on the strong ground he held after Hochkirch, while Daun, two years ago, sat watching so quiescent. Daun knows what kind of march these Prussians, blocked out from relief of Neisse, stole on him then, and saved their Silesia, in spite of his watching and blocking ;—and has plunged off, in the manner of a cart-horse scared into galloping, to avoid the like." What a Sabbath-day's journey, on both sides, for those Sons of War ! Nothing in the Roman times, though they had less baggage, comes up to such modern marching : nor is this the fastest of Friedrich's, though of Daun's it unspeakably is. "Friedrich, having missed Daun, is thinking now to whirl round, and go into Lacy,—which will certainly bring Daun back, even better.

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 58 ; Archenholtz, ii. 68 ; Mitchell, ii. 166.

"This evening, accordingly, Ziethen occupies Bautzen ; sweeps out certain Lacy precursors, cavalry in some strength, who are there. Lacy has come on as far as Bischofswerda : and his Horse-people seem to be wide ahead ; provokingly pert upon Friedrich's outposts, who determines to chastise them, the first thing tomorrow. Tomorrow, as is very needful, is to be a rest-day otherwise. For Friedrich's wearied people, a rest-day ; not at all for Daun's, who continues his heavy-footed galloping yet another day, and another, till he get across the Queiss, and actually reach Silesia.

Monday, July 7th. "Rest-day, accordingly, in Bautzen neighbourhood ; nothing passing but a curious Skirmish of Horse,—in which Friedrich, who had gone westward reconnoitering, seeking Lacy, had the main share, and was notably situated for some time. Gödau, a small town or village, six miles west of Bautzen, was the scene of this notable passage : actors in it were Friedrich himself, on the Prussian part ; and, on the Austrian, by degrees Lacy's Cavalry almost in whole. Lacy's Cavalry, what Friedrich does not know, are all in those neighbourhoods : and no sooner is Gödau swept clear of them, than they return in greater numbers, needing to be again swept ; and, in fact, they gradually gather in upon him, in a singular and dangerous manner, after his first successes on them, and before his Infantry have time to get up and support.

"Friedrich was too impatient, in this provoking little haggle, arresting him here. He had ordered on the suitable Battalion with cannon ; but hardly considers that the Battalion itself is six miles off,—not to speak of the Order, which is galloping on horseback, not going by electricity :—the impatient Friedrich had slashed in at once upon Gödau, taken above 100 prisoners ; but is astonished to see the slashed people return, with Saxon-Dragoon regiments, all manner of regiments, reinforcing them. And has some really dangerous fencing there ;—issuing in dangerous and curious pause of both parties ; who stand drawn up, scarcely beyond pistol-shot, and gazing into one another, for I know not how many minutes ; neither of them daring to move off, lest, on the instant of turning, it be charged and overwhelmed. As the impatient Friedrich, at last, almost was,—had not his Infantry just then got in, and given their cannon-salvo. He lost about 200, the Lacy people hardly so many; and is now out of a considerable personal jeopardy, which is still celebrated in the Anecdote-Books, perhaps to a mythical extent. ‘Two Uhlans’ (Saxon-Polish Light-Horse) ‘with their truculent pikes, are just plunging in,’ say the Anecdote-Books: ‘Friedrich’s Page, who had got unhorsed, sprang to his feet, bellowed in Polish to them: “What are you doing here, fellows?” “Excellenz” (for the Page is not in Prussian uniform, or in uniform at all, only well-dressed), “Excellenz, our horses ran away with us,” answer the poor fellows; and whirl back rapidly.’ The story, says Retzow, is true.¹

This is the one event of July 7th—and of July 8th withal; which day also, on news of Daun that come, Friedrich rests. Up to July 8th, it is clear Friedrich is shooting with what we called the first string of his bow,—intent, namely, on Silesia. Nor, on hearing that Daun is forward again, now hopelessly ahead, does he quit that enterprise; but, on the contrary, to-morrow morning, July 9th, tries it by a new method, as we shall see: method cunningly devised to suit the second string as well. “How lucky that we have a second string, in case of failure!”—

Tuesday, 8th July. “News that Daun reached Görlitz yesterday-night; and is due tonight at Lauban, fifty miles ahead of us:—no hope now of reaching Daun. Perhaps a sudden clutch at Lacy, in the opposite direction, might be the method of recalling Daun, and reaching him? That is the method fallen upon.

“Sun being set, the drums in Bautzen sound tattoo,—audible to listening Croats in the Environs;—beat tattoo, and, later in the night, other passages of drum-music, also for Croat behoof (general-march I think it is); indicating That we have started again, in pursuit of Daun. And, in short, every precaution being taken to soothe the mind of Lacy and the Croats, Friedrich silently issues, with his best speed, in Three columns, by Three roads, towards Lacy’s quarters, which go from that village of Gödau westward, in a loose way, several miles. In three columns, by three routes, all to converge, with punctuality, on Lacy. Of the columns, two are of Infantry, the leftmost and the rightmost, on each hand, hidden as much as possible, one is of Cavalry in the middle.

¹ Retzow, ii. 215.

Coming on in this manner—like a pair of triple pincers, which are to grip simultaneously on Lacy, and astonish him, if he keep quiet. But Lacy is vigilant, and is cautious almost in excess. Learning by his Pandours that the King seems to be coming this way, Lacy gathers himself on the instant ; quits Gödau, by one in the morning ; and retreats bodily, at his fastest step, to Bischofswerda again ; nor by any means stops there.”¹

For the third time ! “ Three is lucky,” Friedrich may have thought : and there has no precaution, of drum-music, of secrecy or persuasive finesse, been neglected on Lacy. But Lacy has ears that hear the grass grow : our elaborately accurate triple-pincers, closing simultaneously on Bischofswerda, after eighteen miles of sweep, find Lacy flown again ; nothing to be caught of him but some 80 hussars. All this day and all next night, Lacy is scouring through the western parts at an extraordinary rate ; halting for a camp, twice over, at different places,—Dürre Fuchs (Thirsty Fox), Dürre Bühle (Thirsty Sweetheart), or wherever it was ; then again taking wing, on sound of Prussian parties to rear ; in short, hurrying towards Dresden and the Reichsfolk, as if for life.

Lacy’s retreat, I hear, was ingeniously done, with a minimum of disorder in the circumstances : but certainly it was with a velocity as if his head had been on fire ; and, indeed, they say he escaped annihilation by being off in time. He put up finally, not at Thirsty Sweetheart, still less at Thirsty Fox, successive Hamlets and Public Houses in the sandy Wilderness which lies to north of Elbe, and is called Dresden Heath ; but further on, in the same Tract, at Weisse Hirsch (White Hart) ; which looks close over upon Dresden, within two miles or so ; and is a kind of Height, and military post of advantage. Next morning, July 10th, he crosses Dresden Bridge, comes streaming through the City ; and takes shelter with the Reichsfolk near there :—towards Plauen Chasm ; the strongest ground in the world ; hardly strong enough, it appears, in the present emergency.

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 61-63.

Friedrich's first string, therefore, has snapped in two ; but, on the instant, he has a second fitted on :—may that prove luckier !

CHAPTER II

FRIEDRICH BESIEGES DRESDEN.

FROM and after the Evening of Wednesday July 9th, it is upon a Siege of Dresden that Friedrich goes ;—turning the whole war-theatre topsy-turvy ; throwing Daun, Loudon, Lacy, everybody out, in this strange and sudden manner. One of the finest military feats ever done, thinks Tempelhof. Undoubtedly a notable result so far, and notably done ; as the impartial reader (if Tempelhof be a little inconsistent) sees for himself. These truly are a wonderful series of marches, opulent in continual promptitudes, audacities, contrivances ;—done with shining talent, certainly ; and also with result shining, for the moment. And in a Fabulous Epic I think Dresden would certainly have fallen to Friedrich, and his crowd of enemies been left in a tumbled condition.

But the Epic of Reality cares nothing for such considerations ; and the time allowable for the capture of Dresden is very brief. Had Daun, on getting warning, been as prompt to return as he was to go, frankly fronting at once the chances of the road, he might have been at Dresden again perhaps within a week,—no Siege possible for Friedrich, hardly the big guns got up from Magdeburg. But Friedrich calculated there would be very considerable fettling and haggling on Daun's part ; say a good Fortnight of Siege allowed ;—and that, by dead-lift effort of all hands, the thing was feasible within that limit. On Friedrich's part, as we can fancy, there was no want of effort ; nor on his people's part,—in spite of his complainings, say Retzow and the Opposition party ; who insinuate their own private belief of impossibility from the first. Which is not confirmed by impartial judgments,—that of Archenholtz, and others better. The truth is, Friedrich was within an inch of taking Dresden by the first assault,— they say he actually could have taken it by storm, the first day ; but shuddered at the thought of exposing poor Dresden to sack and plunder ; and hoped to get it by capitulation.

One of the rapidest and most furious Sieges anywhere on record. Filled Europe with astonishment, expectancy, admiration, horror :—must be very briefly recited here. The main chronological epochs, salient points of crisis, and successive phases of occurrence, will sufficiently indicate it to the reader's fancy.

“It was Thursday Evening, 10th July, when Lacy got to his Reichsfolk, and took breath behind Plauen Chasm. Maguire is Governor of Dresden. The consternation of garrison and population was extreme. To Lacy himself it did not seem conceivable that Friedrich could mean a Siege of Dresden. Friedrich, that night, is beyond the River, in Daun's old impregnability of Reichenberg : ‘He has no siege-artillery,’ thinks Lacy ; ‘no means, no time.’

“Nevertheless, Saturday, next day after tomorrow,—behold, there is Hülsen, come from Schlettau to our neighbourhood, on our Austrian side of the River. And at Kaditz yonder, a mile below Dresden, are not the King's people building their Pontoons ; in march since 2 in the morning,—evidently coming across, if not to besiege Dresden, then to attack us ; which is perhaps worse ! We outnumber them,—but as to trying fight in any form ? Zweibrück leaves Maguire an additional 10,000 ;—every help and encouragement to Maguire ; whose garrison is now 14,000 : ‘Be of courage, Excellenz Maguire ! Nobody is better skilled in siege-matters. Feldmarschall and relief will be here with despatch !’—and withdraws, Lacy and he, to the edge of the Pirna Country, there to be well out of harm's way. Lacy and he, it is thought, would perhaps have got beaten, trying to save Dresden from its misery. Lacy's orders were, Not on any terms to get into fighting with Friedrich, but only to cover Dresden. Dresden, without fighting, has proved impossible to cover, and Lacy leaves it bare.”¹

“‘At Kaditz,’ says Mitchell, ‘where the second bridge of boats took a great deal of time, I was standing by his Majesty, when news to the above effect came across from General Hülsen. The King was highly pleased : and, turning to me, said: "Just what I wished! They have saved me a very long march" (round by Dippoldiswalde or so, in upon the rear of them) "by going of will." And immediately the King got on horseback: ordering the Army to follow as fast as it could.' Through Preisnitz, Plauen-ward, goes the Army; circling round the Western and the Southern side of Dresden" (a dread spectacle from the walls); "across Weistritz Brook and the Plauen Chasm" (comfortably left vacant); "and encamps on the South-eastern side of Dresden, at Gruna, behind the Great Garden; ready to begin business on the morrow. Gruna, about a mile to south-east of Dresden Walls, is headquarter during this Siege.

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 65.

"Through the night, the Prussians proceed to build batteries, the best they can;—there is no right siege-artillery yet; a few accidental howitzers and 25-pounders, the rest mere field-guns;—but tomorrow morning, be as it may, business shall begin. Prince von Holstein" (nephew of the Holstein Beck, or "Holstein Silver-Plate," whom we lost long ago), "from beyond the River, encamped at the White Hart yonder, is to play upon the Neustadt simultaneously.

Sunday 14th, "At 6 A.M., cannonade began; diligent on Holstein's part and ours; but of inconsiderable effect. Maguire has been summoned; 'Will' (with such a garrison, in spite of such trepidations from the Court and others) 'defend himself to the last man.' Free-Corps people" (not Quintus's, who is on the other side of the River),¹ "with regulars to rear, advance on the Pirna Gate; hurl in Maguire's Out-parties; and had near got in along with them,—might have done so, they and their supports, it is thought by some, had storm seemed the recommendable method.

"For four days, there is livelier and livelier cannonading; new batteries getting opened in the Moschinska Garden, and other points; on the Prussian part, great longing that the Magdeburg artillery were here. The Prussians are making diligently ready for it, in the mean while (refitting the old Trenches, 'old Envelope' dug by Maguire himself in the Anti-Schmettan time; these will do well enough):—the Prussians reinforce Holstein at the Weisse Hirsch, throw a new bridge across to him; and are busy day and night. Maguire, too, is most industrious, resisting and preparing: Thursday shuts up the Weistritz Brook (a dam being ready this long while back, needing only to be closed), and lays the whole

¹ Mitchell, ii. 168.

² Tempelhof, iv. 67.

South side of Dresden under water. Many rumours about Daun : coming, not coming ;—must for certain come, but will possibly be slowish."

Thursday 18th. "Joy to every Prussian soul : here are the heavy guns from Magdeburg. These, at any rate, are come ; beds for them all ready ; and now the cannonading can begin in right earnest. As it does with a vengeance. To Mitchell, and perhaps others, 'the King of Prussia says He will now be master of the Town in a few days. And the disposition he has made of his troops on the other side of the River is intended not only to attack Dresden on that side' (and defend himself from Daun), 'but also to prevent the Garrison from retiring.' . . . 'This morning, Thursday 18th, the Suburb of Pirna, the one street left of it, was set fire to, by Maguire ; and burnt out of the way, as the others had been. Many of the wretched inhabitants had fled to our camp : "Let them lodge in Plauen, no fighting there, quiet artificial water-expanses there instead." Many think the Town will not be taken ; or "that, if it should, it will cost very dear,—so determined seems Maguire."'" "And, in effect, from this day onwards, the Siege became altogether fierce, and not only so, but fiery as well ; and, though lasting in that violent form only four, or at the very utmost seven, days more, had near ruined Dresden from the face of the world."

Friday 19th, "Maguire, touched to the quick by these new artilleries of the Prussians this morning, found good to mount a gun or two on the leads of the Kreuz-Kirche" (Protestant High Church, where, before now, we have noticed Friedrich attending quasi-divine service more than once) ;—"that is to say, on the crown of Dresden ; from which there is view into the bottom of Friedrich's trenches and operations. Others say, it was only two or three old Saxon cannon, which stand there, for firing on gala-days ; and that they hardly fired on Friedrich more than once. For certain, this is one of the desirablest battery stations,—if only Friedrich will leave it alone. Which he will not for a moment ; but brings terrific howitzers to bear on it ; cannonballs, grenadoes ; tears it to destruction, and the poor Kreuz-Kirche along with it. Kirche speedily all in flames, street after street blazing up round it, again and again for eight-and-forty hours coming ; hapless Dresden, during two days and nights, a mere volcano henceforth." "By mistake, all that, and without order of mine, says Friedrich once ;—

¹ Mitchell, iii. 170, 171.

meaning, I think, all that of the Kreuz-Kirche : and perhaps wishing he could mean the bombardment altogether,¹—who nevertheless got, and gets, most of the credit of the thing from a shocked outside world.

"This morning," same Friday 19th, "Daun is reported to have arrived ; vanguard of him said to be at Schönfeld, over in Thirsty-Sweetheart Country yonder : which Friedrich, going to reconnoitre, finds tragically indisputable : 'There, for certain ; only five miles from Holstein's post at the White Hart, and no River between ;—as the crow flies, hardly five from our own Camp. Perhaps it will be some days yet before he do anything?' So that Friedrich persists in his bombardment only the more : 'By fire-torture, then ! Let the bombarded Royalties assail Maguire, and Maguire give in ;—it is our one chance left ; and succeed we will and must !' Cruel, say you ?—Ah, yes, cruel enough, not merciful at all. The soul of Friedrich, I perceive, is not in a bright mood at this time, but in a black and wrathful, worn almost desperate against the slings and arrows of unjust Fate : 'Ahead, I say ! If everybody will do miracles, cannot we perhaps still manage it, in spite of Fate?' Mitchell is very sorry ; but will forget and forgive those inexorable passages of war."

"I cannot think of the bombardment of Dresden without horror," says he ; "nor of many other things I have seen. Misfortunes naturally sour men's temper" (even royal men's ; "and long continued, without interval, at last extinguish humanity." "We are now in a most critical and dangerous situation, which cannot long last : one lucky event, approaching to a miracle, may still save all : but the extreme caution and circumspection of Marshal Daun— ! ")

If Daun could be swift, and end the miseries of Dresden, surely Dresden would be much obliged to him. It was ten days yet, after that of the Kreuz-Kirche, before Dresden quite got rid of its Siege : Daun never was a sudden man. By a kind of accident, he got Holstein hustled across the River that first night (July 19th),—not annihilated, as was very feasible, but pushed home, out of his way. Whereby the North side of Dresden is now open ; and Daun has free communication with Maguire.

¹ Schöning, ii. 361 : "To Prince Henri at Giessen" (Frankfurt Country), "23d July 1760."

² Mitchell, ii. 184, 185.

Maguire rose thereupon to a fine pitch of spirits ; tried several things, and wished Daun to try ; but with next to no result. For two days after Holstein's departure, Daun sat still, on his safe Northern shore ; stirring nothing but his own cunctations and investigations, leaving the bombardment, or cannonade, to take its own course. One attempt he did make in concert with Maguire (night of Monday 21st), and one attempt only, of a serious nature ; which, like the rest, was unsuccessful. And would not be worth mentioning,—except for the poor Regiment Bernburg's sake ; Bernburg having got into strange case in consequence of it.

"This Attempt" (Night of 21st–22d July) "was a combined sally and assault,—Sally by Maguire's people, a General Nugent heading them, from the South or Plauen side of Dresden, and Assault by 4,000 of Daun's from the North side,—upon Friedrich's Trenches. Which are to be burst in upon, in this double way, and swept well clear, as may be expected. Friedrich, however, was aware of the symptoms, and had people ready waiting,—especially, had Regiment Bernburg, Battalions 1st and 2d ; a Regiment hitherto without stain.

"Bernburg accordingly, on General Nugent's entering their trenches from the south side, falls altogether heartily on General Nugent ; tumbles him back, takes 200 prisoners, Nugent himself one of them" (who is considered to have been the eye of the enterprise, worth many hundreds this night) : "all this Bernburg, in its usually creditable manner, does, as expected of it. But after, or during all this, when the Daun people from the north come streaming in, say four to one, both south and north, Bernburg looked round for support ; and seeing none, had, after more or less of struggle, to retire as a defeated Bernburg,—Austrians taking the battery, and ruling supreme there for some time. Till Wedell, or somebody with fresh Battalions, came up ; and, rallying Bernburg to him, retook their Battery, and drove out the Austrians, with a heavy loss of prisoners.¹

"I did not hear that Bernburg's conduct was liable to the least fair censure. But Friedrich's soul is severe at this time ; demanding miracles from everybody : 'You runaway Bernburg, shame on you !'—and actually takes the swords from them, and cuts off their Hat-tresses! 'There!' Which excited such an astonishment in the Prussian Army as was seldom seen before. And affected Bernburg to the length almost of despair, and breaking of heart,—in a way that is not ridiculous to me at all, but beautiful and pathetic. Of which there is much talk, now and long afterwards, in military circles. The sorrows of these poor Bernburgers, their desperate efforts to wash out this stigma, their actual washing; of it out, not many weeks hence, and their magnificent joy on the occasion,—these are the one distinguishing point in Daun's relief of Dresden, which was otherwise quite a cunctatory, sedentary matter."

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 79.

Daun built three Bridges,—he had a broad stone one already,—but did little or nothing with them; and never himself came across at all. Merely shot out nocturnal Pandour Parties, and ordered up Lacy and the Reichsfolk to do the like, and break the night's rest of his Enemy. He made minatory movements, one at least, down the River, by his own shore, on Friedrich's Ammunition Boats from Torgau, and actually intercepted certain of them, which was something; but, except this, and vague flourishings of the Pandour kind, left Friedrich to his own course.

Friedrich bombarded for a day or two farther; cannonaded, out of more or fewer batteries, for eight, or I think ten days more. Attacks from Daun there were to be, now on this side, now on that; many rumours of attack, but, except once only (midnight Pandours attempting the King's lodging, "a Farm-house near Gruna," but to their astonishment rousing the whole Prussian Army "in the course of three minutes"), rumour was mainly all. For guarding his siege-lines, Friedrich has to alter his position; to shift slightly, now fronting this way, now the other way; is "called always at midnight" (against these nocturnal disturbances), and "never has his clothes off." Nevertheless, continues his bombardment, and then his cannonading, till his own good time, which I think is till the 26th. His "ricochet-battery," which is good against ¹ Archenholtz, ii. 81 (who is very vivid, but does not date); Rödénbeck, ii. 24 (quotes similar account by another Eye-witness, and guesses it to be "night of July 22d-23d").

Maguire's people, innocent to Dresden, he continued for three days more ;—while gathering his furnitures about Plauen Country, making his arrangements at Meissen ;—did not march till the night of June 29th. Altogether calmly ; no Daun or Austrian molesting him in the least ; his very sentries walking their rounds in the trenches, till daylight ; after which they also marched, unmolested, Meissen-ward.

Unfortunate Friedrich has made nothing of Dresden, then. After such a June and July of it, since he left the Meissen Country ; after all these intricate manœuverings, hot fierce marchings and superhuman exertions, here is he returning to Meissen Country, poorer than if he had stayed. Fouquet lost, Glatz unrelieved—Nay, just before marching off, what is this new phenomenon ? Is this by way of "Happy journey to you !" Towards sunset of the 29th, exuberant joy-firing rises far and wide from the usually quiet Austrian lines,— "Meaning what, once more ?" Meaning that Glatz is lost, your Majesty ; that, instead of a siege of many weeks (as might have been expected with Fouquet for Commandant), it has held out, under Fouquet's Second, only a few hours ; and is gone without remedy ! Certain, though incredible. Imbecile Commandant, treacherous Garrison (Austrian deserters mainly), with stealthy Jesuits acting on them : no use asking what. Here is the sad Narrative, in succinct form :

Capture of Glatz (26th July 1760).

"Loudon is a swift man, when he can get bridle ; but the curb-hand of Daun is often heavy on him. Loudon has had Glatz blockaded since June 7th ; since June 23d, he has had Fouquet rooted away, and the ground clear for a siege of Glatz. But had to abstain altogether, in the mean time ; to take camp at Landshut, to march and manœuvre about, in support of Daun, and that heavy-footed gallop of Daun's which then followed : on the whole, it was not till Friedrich went for Dresden that the Siege-Artillery, from Olmütz, could be ordered forward upon Glatz ; not for a fortnight more that the Artillery could come ; and, in spite of Loudon's utmost despatch, not till break of day, July 26th, that the batteries could open. After which, such was Loudon's speed and fortune,—and so diligent had the Jesuits been in those seven weeks,—the 'Siege,' as they call it, was over in less than seven hours.

"One Colonel D'O" (Piedmontes by nation, an incompetent person, known to loud Trenck during his detention here) "was Commandant of Glatz, and had the principal Fortress,—for there are two, one on each side of the Neisse River;—his Second was a Colonel Quadt, by birth Prussian, seemingly not very competent he either, who had command of the Old Fortress, round which lies the Town of Glatz: a little Town, abounding in Jesuits;—to whose Virgin, if readers remember, Friedrich once gave a new gown; with small effect on her, as would appear. The Quadt-D'O garrison was 2,400,—and, if tales are true, it had been well bejesuited during those seven weeks.' At four in the morning, July 26th, the battering began on Quadt; Quadt, I will believe, responding what he could,—especially from a certain Arrowhead Redoubt (or Flèche) he has, which ought to have been important to him. After four or five hours of this, there was mutual pause,—as if both parties had decided upon breakfast before going farther.

"Quadt's Fortress is very strong, mostly hewn in the rock; and he has that important outwork of a Flèche; which is excellent for enfilading, as it extends well beyond the glacis; and, being of rock like the rest, is also abundantly defensible. Loudon's people, looking over into this Flèche, find it negligently guarded; Quadt at breakfast, as would seem:—and directly send for Harsch, Captain of the Siege, and even for Loudon, the General-in-Chief. Negligently guarded, sure enough; nothing in the Flèche but a few sentries, and these in the horizontal position, taking their unlawful rest there, after such a morning's work. 'Seize me that,' eagerly orders Loudon; 'hold that with firm grip!' Which is done; only to step in softly, two battalions of you, and lay hard hold. Incompetent Quadt, figure in what a flurry, rushing out to recapture his Flèche,—explodes instead into mere anarchy, whole Companies of him flinging down their arms at their Officers' feet, and the like. So that Quadt is totally driven in again, Austrians along with him; and is obliged to beat chamade;—D'O following the example, about an hour after, without even a capitulation. Was there ever seen such a defence! Major Unruh, one of a small minority, was Prussian, and stanch : here is Unruh's personal experience,—testimony on D'O's Trial, I suppose,—and now pretty much the one thing worth reading on this subject.

“Major Unruh testifies : ‘At four in the morning, 26th July 1760, the Enemy began to cannonade the Old Fortress’ (that of Quadt); ‘and about nine, I was ordered with 150 men to clear the Envelope from Austrians. Just when I had got to the Damm-Gate, halt was called. I asked the Commandant, who was behind me, which way I should march ; to the Crown-work or to the Envelope? Being answered, To the Envelope, I found on coming out at the Field Gate nothing but an Austrian Lieutenant-Colonel and some men. He called to me, “There had been chamade beaten, and I was not to run into destruction (nich unglücklich machen)!” I offered him Quarter; and took him in effect prisoner, with 20 of his best men ; and sent him to the Commandant, with request that he would keep my rear free, or send me reinforcement. I shot the Enemy a great many people here ; chased him from the Field-Gate, and out of both the Envelope and the Redoubt called the Crane’ (that is the Flèche itself, only that the Austrians are mostly not now there, but gone through into the interior there !) —‘Returning to the Field-Gate, I found that the Commandant had beaten chamade a second time ; there were marching in, by this Field-Gate, two battalions of the Austrian Regiment Andlau ; I had to yield myself prisoner, and was taken to General Loudon. He asked me, “Don’t you know the rules of war, then ; that you fire after chamade is beaten?” I answered in my heat, “I knew of no chamade ; what poltroonery or what treachery had been going on, I knew not!” Loudon answered, “You might deserve to have your head laid at your feet, Sir ! Am I here to inquire which of you shows bravery, which poltroonery?”’” A blazing Loudon, when the fire is up !—

After the Peace, D'O had Court-martial, which sentenced him to death, Friedrich making it perpetual imprisonment : “Perhaps not a traitor, only a blockhead !” thought Friedrich. He had been recommended to his post by Fouquet. What Trenck writes of him is, otherwise, mostly lies.

Thus is the southern Key of Silesia (one of the two southern Keys, Neisse being the other) lost to Friedrich, for the first time ; and Loudon is like to drive a trade there. “Will absolutely nothing prosper with us, then?" Nothing, seemingly, your Majesty! Heavier news Friedrich scarcely ever had. But there is no help. This too he has to carry with him as he can into the Meissen Country. Unsuccessful altogether; beaten on every hand. Human talent, diligence, endeavour, is it but as lightning smiting the Serbonian Bog? Smite to the lest, your Majesty, at any rate; let that be certain. As it is, and has been. That is always something, that is always a great thing.

Friedrich intends no pause in those Meissen Countries. July 30th, on his march northward, he detaches Hülsen with the old 10,000 to take Camp at Schlettau as before, and do his best for defence of Saxony against the Reichsfolks, numerous, but incompetent; he himself, next day, passes on, leaving Meissen a little on his right, to Schieritz, some miles farther down,—intending there to cross Elbe, and make for Silesia without loss of an hour. Need enough of speed thither; more need than even Friedrich supposes! Yesterday, July 30th, Loudon's Vanguard came blockading Breslau, and this day Loudon himself;—though Friedrich heard nothing, anticipated nothing, of that dangerous fact, for a week hence or more.

Soltikof's and Loudon's united intentions on Silesia he has well known this long while; and has been perpetually dunning Prince Henri on the subject, to no purpose,—only hoping always there would probably be no great rapidity on the part of these discordant Allies. Friedrich's feelings, now that the country is visible, and indeed all through the Summer in regard to the Soltikof-Loudon Business, and the Fouquet-Henri method of dealing with it, have been painful enough, and are growing ever more so. Cautious Henri never would make the smallest attack on Soltikof, but merely keep observing him;—the end of which, what can the end of it be? urges Friedrich always: "Condense yourselves; go in upon the Russians, while they are in separate corps;"—and is very ill-satisfied with the languor of procedures there. As is the Prince with such reproaches, or implied reproaches, on said languor. Nor is his humour cheered, when the King's bad predictions prove true. What has it come to? These Letters of King and Prince are worth reading,—if indeed you can, in the confusion of Schöning (a somewhat exuberant man, loud rather than luminous);—so curious is the Private Dialogue going on there at all times, in the background of the stage, between the Brothers. One short specimen, extending through the June and July just over; specimen distilled faithfully out of that huge jumbling sea of Schöning, and rendered legible, the reader will consent to.

Dialogue of Friedrich and Henri (from their Private Correspondence: June 7th—July 29th, 1760).

Friedrich (June 7th; before his first crossing Elbe: Henri at Sagan; he at Schlettau, scanning the waste of fatal possibilities). * * “Embarrassing? Not a doubt of that!” “I own, the circumstances both of us are in are like to turn my head, three or four times a-day.” “Loudon aiming for Neisse, don't you think? Fouquet all in the wrong.”—“One has nothing for it but to watch where the likelihood of the biggest misfortune is, and to run thither with one's whole strength.”

Henri. * * “I confess I am in great apprehension for Colberg:—‘shall one make thither, think you? Russians, 8,000 as the first instalment of them, have arrived; got to Posen under Fermor, June 1st:—so the Commandant of Glogau writes me (see enclosed).’”

Friedrich (June 9th). “Commandant of Glogau writes impossibilities: Russians are not on march yet, nor will be for above a week.”

“I cross Elbe, the 15th. I am compelled to undertake something of decisive nature, and leave the rest to chance. For desperate disorders desperate remedies. My bed is not one of roses. Heaven aid us: for human prudence finds itself fall short in situations so cruel and desperate as ours.”¹

Henri. “Hm, hm, ha” (Nothing but carefully-collected rumours, and wire-drawn auguries from them, on the part of Henri; very intense inspection of the chicken-bowels,—hardly ever without a shake of the head).

Friedrich (June 26th; has heard of the Fouquet disaster).

¹ Schöning, ii. 318 (“Meissen Camp, 7th June 1760”); ibid. ii. 317 (“9th June”).

* * "Yesterday my heart was torn to pieces" (news of Landshut, Fouquet's downfall there), "and I felt too sad to be in a state for writing you a sensible Letter; but today, when I have come to myself a little again, I will send you my reflections. After what has happened to Fouquet, it is certain London can have no other design but on Breslau" (he designs Glatz first of all): "it will be the grand point, therefore, especially if the Russians too are bending thither, to save that Capital of Silesia. Surely the Turks must be in motion:—if so, we are saved; if not so, we are lost! To-day I have taken this Camp of Dobritz, in order to be more collected, and in condition to fight well, should occasion rise,—and in case all this that is said and written to me about the Turks is true" (which nothing of it was), "to be able to profit by it when the time comes."¹

Henri (simultaneously, June 26th: Henri is forward from Sagan, through Frankfurt, and got settled at Landsberg, where he remains through the rest of the Dialogue). * * "Tottleben, with his Cossacks, scouring about, got a check from us,—nothing like enough." "By all my accounts, Soltikof, with the gross of the Russians, is marching for Posen. The other rumours and symptoms agree in indicating a separate Corps, under Fermor, who is to join Tottleben, and besiege Colberg: if both these Corps, the Colberg and the Posen one, act in concert, my embarrassment will be extreme." * * "I have just had news of what has befallen General Fouquet. Before this stroke, your affairs were desperate enough; now I see but too well what we have to look for."² (How comforting!)

Friedrich. "Would to God your prayers for the swift capture of Dresden had been heard; but unfortunately I must tell you, this stroke has failed me." * * "Dresden has been reduced to ashes, third part of the Altstadt lying burnt;—contrary to my intentions; my orders were, To spare the City, and play the Artillery against the works. My Minister Graf von Finck will have told you what occasioned its being set on fire."³

Henri (July 26th; Dresden Siege gone awry). * * "I am to keep the Russians from Frankfurt, to cover Glogau, and prevent a besieging of Breslau! All that, forms an overwhelming problem ;—which I, with my whole heart, will give up to somebody abler for it than I am.”¹

¹ Schöning, ii. 341 ("Gross-Dobritz, 26th June 1760").

² Ibid. ii. 339 ("Landsberg, 26th June 1760").

³ Ibid. ii. 361 ("2d-3d July").

Friedrich (29th July ; quits the Trenches of Dresden this night). * * “I have seen with pain that you represent everything to yourself on the black side. I beg you, in the name of God, my dearest Brother, don’t take things up in their blackest and worst shape :—it is this that throws your mind into such an indecision, which is so lamentable. Adopt a resolution rather, what resolution you like, but stand by it, and execute it with your whole strength. I conjure you, take a fixed resolution ; better a bad than none at all.” * * “What is possible to man, I will do ; neither care nor consideration nor effort shall be spared, to secure the result of my plans. The rest depends on circumstances. Amid such a number of enemies, one cannot always do what one will, but must let them prescribe.”²

An uncomfortable little Gentleman ; but full of faculty, if one can manage to get good of it ! Here, what might have preceded all the above, and been preface to it, is a pretty passage from him ; a glimpse he has had of Sans-Souci, before setting out on those gloomy marchings and cunctatory haggings. Henri writes (at Torgau, April 26th, just back from Berlin and farewell of friends) :

“I mean to march the day after to-morrow. I took arrangements with General Fouquet” (about that long fine-spun Chain of Posts, where we are to do such service ?)—“the Black Hussars cannot be here till to-morrow, otherwise I should have marched a day sooner. My Brother” (poor little invalid Ferdinand) “charged me to lay him at your feet. I found him weak and thin, more so than formerly. Returning hither, the day before yesterday, I passed through Potsdam ; I went to Sans-Souci” (April 24th, 1760) :—“all is green there ; the Garden embellished, and seemed to me excellently kept. Though these details cannot occupy you at present, I thought it would give you pleasure to hear of them for a moment.”³ Ah, yes ; all is so green and blessedly silent there : sight of the lost Paradise, actually it, visible for a moment yonder, far away, while one goes whirling in this manner on the illimitable wracking winds !—

¹ Schöning, ii. 369–371 (“Landsberg, 26th July”).

² Ibid. ii. 370–2 (“Leubnitz, before Dresden, 29th July 1760”).

³ Ibid. ii. 263 (“Torgau, 26th April 1760”).

Here finally, from a distant part of the War-Theatre, is another Note ; which we will read while Friedrich is at Schieritz. At no other place so properly ; the very date of it, chief date (July 31st), being by accident synchronous with Schieritz :

Duke Ferdinand's Battle of Warburg (31st July 1760).

Duke Ferdinand has opened his difficult Campaign ; and especially,—just while that Siege of Dresden blazed and ended,—has had three sharp Fights, which were then very loud in the Gazettes, along with it. Three once famous Actions ; which unexpectedly had little or no result, and are very much forgotten now. So that bare enumeration of them is nearly all we are permitted here. Pitt has furnished 7,000 new English, this Campaign,—there are now 20,000 English in all, and a Duke Ferdinand raised to 70,000 men. Surely, under good omens, thinks Pitt ; and still more think the Gazetteers, judging by appearances. Yes : but if Broglio have 130,000, what will it come to ? Broglio is two to one ; and has, before this, proved himself a considerable Captain.

Fight first is that of Korbach (July 10th) : of Broglio, namely, who has got across the River Ohm in Hessen (to Ferdinand's great disgust with the General Imhof in command there), and is streaming on to seize the Diemel River, and menace Hanover ; of Broglio, in successive sections, at a certain "Pass of Korbach," versus the Hereditary Prince (Erbprinz of Brunswick), who is waiting for him there in one good section,—and who beautifully hurls back one and another of the Broglio sections ; but cannot hurl back the whole Broglio Army, all marching by sections that way ; and has to retire, back-foremost, fencing sharply, still in a diligently handsome manner, though with loss.¹ That is the Battle of Korbach, fought July 10th,—while Lacy streamed through Dresden, panting to be at Plauen Chasm, safe at last.

Fight second (July 16th) was a kind of revenge on the Erbprinz's part : Affair of Emsdorf, six days after, in the same neighbourhood ; beautiful too, said the Gazetteers ; but of result still more insignificant. Hearing of a considerable French Brigade posted not far off, at that Village of Emsdorf, to guard Broglio's meal-carts there, the indignant Erbprinz shoots off for that; light of foot,—English horse mainly, and Hill Scots (Berg-Schotten so-called, who have a fine free stride, in summer weather);—dashes in upon said Brigade (Dragoons of Bauffremont and other picked men), who stood firmly on the defensive; but were cut up, in an amazing manner, root and branch, after a fierce struggle, and as it were brought home in one's pocket. To the admiration of military circles,—especially of messrooms, and the junior sort. "Elliot's light horse" (part of the new 7,000), "what a regiment! Unparalleled for willingness, and audacity of fence; lost 125 killed,"—in fact, the loss chiefly fell on Elliot.¹ The Berg-Schotten too,—I think it was here that these kilted fellows, who had marched with such a stride, "came home mostly riding:" poor Bauffremont Dragoons being entirely cut up, or pocketed as prisoners, and their horses ridden in this unexpected manner! But we must not linger,—hardly even on Warburg, which was the third and greatest; and has still points of memorability, though now so obliterated.

¹ Mauvillon, ii. 105.

"Warburg," says my Note on this latter, "is a pleasant little Hessian Town, some twenty-five miles west of Cassel, standing on the north or left bank of the Diemel, among fruitful knolls and hollows. The famous 'Battle of Warburg,'—if you try to inquire in the Town itself, from your brief railway-station, it is much if some intelligent inhabitant, at last, remembers to have heard of it! The thing went thus: Chevalier Du Muy, who is Broglio's Rearguard or Reserve, 30,000 foot and horse, with his back to the Diemel, and eight bridges across it in case of accident, has his right flank leaning on Warburg, and his left on a Village of Ossendorf, some two miles to north-west of that. Broglio, Prince Xavier of Saxony, especially Duke Ferdinand, are all vehemently and mysteriously moving about, since that Fight of Korbach; Broglio intent to have Cassel besieged, Du Muy keeping the Diemel for him; Ferdinand eager to have the Diemel back from Du Muy and him.

"Two days ago (July 29th), the Erbprinz crossed over into these neighbourhoods, with a strong Vanguard, nearly equal to Du Muy; and, after studious reconnoitering and survey had, means, this morning (July 31st), to knock him over the Diemel again, if he can. No time to be lost ; Broglio near and in such force. Duke Ferdinand too, quitting Broglio for a moment, is on march this way ; crossed the Diemel, about midnight, some ten miles farther down, or eastward ; will thence bend southward, at his best speed, to support the Erbprinz, if necessary, and beset the Diemel when got ;—Erbprinz not, however, in any wise, to wait for him ; such the pressure from Broglio and others. A most busy swift-going scene, that morning ;—hardly worth such describing at this date of time.

¹ Mauvillon, ii. 109 (Prisoners got "were 2,661, including General and Officers 179," with all their furnitures whatsoever, "400 horses, 8 cannon," &c.).

“The Erbprinz, who is still rather to north-eastward, that is to rightward, not directly frontward, of Du Muy’s lines ; and whose plan of attack is still dark to Du Muy, commences” (about 8 A.M., I should guess) “by launching his British Legion so-called,—which is a composite body, of Free-Corps nature, British some of it (‘Colonel Beckwith’s people,’ for example), not British by much the most of it, but an aggregate of wild strikers, given to plunder too :—by launching his British Legion upon Warburg Town, there to take charge of Du Muy’s right wing. Which Legion, ‘with great rapidity, not only pitched the French all out, but clean plundered the poor Town ;’ and is a sad sore on Du Muy’s right, who cannot get it attended to, in the ominous aspects elsewhere visible. For the Erbprinz, who is a strategic creature, comes on, in the style of Friedrich, not straight towards Du Muy, but sweeps out in two columns, round northward ; privately intending upon Du Muy’s left wing and front—left wing, right wing (by British Legion), and front, all three ;—and is well aided by a mist which now fell, and which hung on the higher ground, and covered his march, for an hour or more. This mist had not begun when he saw, on the knoll-tops, far off on the right, but indisputable as he flattered himself,—something of Ferdinand emerging ! Saw this ; and pours along, we can suppose, with still better step and temper. And bursts, pretty simultaneously, upon Du Muy’s right wing and left wing, coercing his front the while ; squelches both these wings furiously together ; forces the coerced centre, mostly horse, to plunge back into the Diemel, and swim. Horse could swim ; but many of the Foot, who tried, got drowned. And, on the whole, Du Muy is a good deal wrecked” (1,500 killed, 2,200 prisoners, not to speak of cannon and flags), “and, but for his eight bridges, would have been totally ruined.

"The fight was uncommonly furious, especially on Du Muy's left ; 'Maxwell's Brigade' going at it, with the finest bayonet-practice, musketry, artillery practice ; obstinate as bears. On Du Muy's right, the British Legion, left wing, British too by name, had a much easier job. But the fight generally was of hot and stubborn kind, for hours, perhaps two or more ;—and some say, would not have ended so triumphantly, had it not been for Duke Ferdinand's Vanguard, Lord Granby and the English Horse ; who, warned by the noise ahead, pushed on at the top of their speed, and got in before the death. Granby and the Blues had gone at the high trot, for above five miles ; and, I doubt not, were in keen humour when they rose to the gallop and slashed in. Mauvillon says, 'It was in this attack that Lord Granby, at the head of the Blues, his own regiment, had his hat blown off ; a big bald circle in his head rendering the loss more conspicuous. But he never minded ; stormed still on,' bare bald head among the helmets and sabres ; 'and made it very evident that had he, instead of Sackville, led at Minden, there had been a different story to tell. The English, by their valour,' adds he, 'greatly distinguished themselves this day. And accordingly they suffered by far the most ; their loss amounting to 590 men : ' or, as others count, —out of 1,200 killed and wounded, 800 were English.'¹

This of Granby and the bald head is mainly what now renders Warburg memorable. For, in a year or two, the excellent Reynolds did a Portrait of Granby ; and by no means forgot this incident ; but gives him bare-headed, bare and bald ; the oblivious British connoisseur not now knowing why, as perhaps he ought. The Portrait, I suppose, may be in Belvoir Castle ; the artistic Why of the baldness is this Battle of Warburg, as above. An Affair otherwise of no moment. Ferdinand had soon to quit the Diemel, or to find it useless for him, and to try other methods,—fencing gallantly, but too weak for Broglie ; and, on the whole, had a difficult Campaign of it, against that considerable Soldier with forces so superior.

¹ Mauvillon, ii. 114. Or better, in all these three cases, as elsewhere, Tempelhof's specific Chapter on Ferdinand (Tempelhof, iv. 101-122). Ferdinand's Despatch (to King George), in Knesbeck, ii. 96-98 ; —or in the Old Newspapers (Gentleman's Magazine, xxx. 386, 387), where also is Lord Granby's Despatch.

CHAPTER III.

BATTLE OF LIEGNITZ.

FRIEDRICH stayed hardly one day in Meissen Country ; Silesia, in the jaws of destruction, requiring such speed from him. His new Series of Marches thitherward, for the next two weeks especially, with Daun and Lacy, and at last with Loudon too, for escort, are still more singular than the foregoing ; a fortnight of Soldier History such as is hardly to be paralleled elsewhere. Of his inward gloom one hears nothing. But the Problem itself approaches to the desperate ; needing daily new invention, new audacity, with imminent destruction overhanging it throughout. A March distinguished in Military Annals ;—but of which it is not for us to pretend treating. Military readers will find it in Tempelhof, and the supplementary Books from time to time cited here. And, for our own share, we can only say, that Friedrich's labours strike us as abundantly Herculean ; more Alcides-like than ever,—the rather as hopes of any success have sunk lower than ever. A modern Alcides, appointed to confront Tartarus itself, and be victorious over the Three-headed Dog. Daun, Lacy, Loudon coming on you simultaneously, open-mouthed, are a considerable Tartarean Dog ! Soldiers judge that the King's resources of genius were extremely conspicuous on this occasion ; and to all men it is in evidence that seldom in the Arena of this Universe, looked on by the idle Populaces and by the eternal Gods and Antigods (called Devils), did a Son of Adam fence better for himself, now and throughout.

This, his Third march to Silesia in 1760, is judged to be the most forlorn and ominous Friedrich ever made thither ; real peril, and ruin to Silesia and him, more imminent than even in the old Leuthen days. Difficulties, complicacies very many, Friedrich can foresee : a Daun's Army and a Lacy's for escort to us ; and such a Silesia when we do arrive. And there is one complicacy more which he does not yet know of ; that of Loudon waiting ahead to welcome him, on crossing the Frontier, and increase his escort thenceforth!—Or rather, let us say, Friedrich, thanks to the despondent Henri and others, has escaped a great Silesian Calamity;—of which he will hear, with mixed emotions, on arriving at Bunzlau on the Silesian Frontier, six days after setting out. Since the loss of Glatz (July 26th), Friedrich has no news of Loudon; supposes him to be trying something upon Neisse, to be adjusting with his slow Russians; and, in short, to be out of the dismal account-current just at present. That is not the fact in regard to Loudon; that is far from the fact.

Loudon is trying a Stroke-of-Hand on Breslau, in the Glatz Fashion, in the Interim (July 30th—August 3d).

Hardly above six hours after taking Glatz, swift Loudon, no Daun now tethering him (Daun standing, or sitting, “in relief of Dresden” far off), was on march for Breslau—Vanguard of him “marched that same evening (July 26th):” in the liveliest hope of capturing Breslau; especially if Soltikof, to whom this of Glatz ought to be a fine symbol and pledge, make speed to coöperate. Soltikof is in no violent enthusiasm about Glatz; anxious rather about his own magazine at Posen, and how to get it carted out of Henri’s way, in case of our advancing towards some Silesian Siege. “If we were not ruined last year, it wasn’t Daun’s fault!” growls he often; and Montalembert has need of all his suasive virtues (which are wonderful to look at, if anybody cared to look at them, all flung into the sea in this manner) for keeping the barbarous man in any approach to harmony. The barbarous man had, after haggle enough, adjusted himself for besieging Glogau; and is surely to hear, on the sudden (order from Petersburg reinforcing Loudon), that it is Breslau instead. “Excellence, it is not Cunctator Daun this time, it is fiery Loudon.” “Well, Breslau, then!” answers Soltikof at last, after much suasion. And marches thither;’ faster than usual, quickened by new temporary hopes, of Montalembert’s raising or one’s own; “What a place-of-arms, and place of victual, would Breslau be for us, after all!”

‘Tempelhof, iv. 87-89 (“Rose from Posen, July 26”).

And really mends his pace, mends it ever more, as matters grow stringent ; and advances upon Breslau at his swiftest : "To rendezvous with Loudon under the walls there,—within the walls very soon, and ourselves chief proprietor!"—as may be hoped. Breslau has a garrison of 4,000, only 1,000 of them stanch ; and there are, among other bad items, 9,000 Austrian Prisoners in it. A big City with weak walls : another place to defend than rockhewn little Glatz,—if there be no better than a D'O for Commandant in it ! But perhaps there is.

.

" Wednesday, 30th July, Loudon's Vanguard arrived at Breslau ; next day Loudon himself ;—and besieged Breslau very violently, according to his means, till the Sunday following. Troops he has plenty, 40,000 odd, which he gives out for 50 or even 60,000 ; not to speak of Soltikof, 'with 75,000' (read 45,000), striding on in a fierce and dreadful manner to meet him here. 'Better surrender to Christain Austrians, had not you?' Loudon's Artillery is not come up, it is only struggling on from Glatz ; Soltikof of his own has no Siege-Artillery ; and Loudon judges that heavy-footed Soltikof, waited on by an alert Prince Henri, is a problematic quantity in this enterprise. 'Speedy oneself ; speedy and fiery !' thinks Loudon : 'by violence of speed, of bullying and bombardment, perhaps we can still do it!' And Loudon tried all these things to a high stretch ; but found in Tautentzien the wrong man.

" Thursday, 31st, Loudon, who has two bridges over Oder, and the Town begirt all round, summons Tautentzien in an awful-sounding tone : 'Consider, Sir : no defence possible ; a trading Town, you ought not to attempt defence of it : surrender on fair terms, or I shall, which God forbid, be obliged to burn you and it from the face of the world!' 'Pooh, pooh,' answers Tautentzien, in brief polite terms ; 'you yourselves had no doubt it was a Garrison, when we besieged you here, on the heel of Leuthen ; had you? Go to!'—Fiery Loudon cannot try storm, the Town having Oder and a wet ditch round it. He gets his bombarding batteries forward, as the one chance he has, aided by bullying. And to-morrow,

" Friday, August 1st, sends, half officially, half in the friendly way, dreadful messages again : a warning to the Mayor of Breslau (which was not signed by Loudon), 'Death and destruction, Sir, unless'—!—warning to the Mayor ; and, by the same private half-official messenger, a new summons to Tauentzien: 'Bombardment infallible; universal massacre by Croats; I will not spare the child in its mother's womb.' 'I am not with child,' said Tauentzien, 'nor are my soldiers! What is the use of such talk?' And about 10 that night, Loudon does accordingly break out into all the fire of bombardment he is master of. Kindles the Town in various places, which were quenched again by Tauentzien's arrangements; kindles especially the King's fine Dwelling-house (Palace they call it), and adjacent streets, not quenchable till Palace and they are much ruined. Will this make no impression? Far too little.

"Next morning, Loudon sends a private messenger of conciliatory tone: 'Any terms your Excellency likes to name. Only spare me the general massacre, and child in the mother's womb!' From all which Tauentzien infers that you are probably short of ammunition; and that his outlooks are improving. That day he gets guns brought to bear on General Loudon's own quarter; blazes into Loudon's sitting-room, so that Loudon has to shift elsewhere. No bombardment ensues that night; nor next day anything but desultory cannonading, and much noise and motion;—and at night, Sunday, 3d, everything falls quiet, and, to the glad amazement of everybody, Loudon has vanished."¹

Loudon had no other shift left. This Sunday his Russians are still five days distant; alert Henri, on the contrary, is, in a sense, come to hand. Crossed the Katzbach River this day, the Vanguard of him did, at Parchwitz; and fell upon our Bakery; which has had to take the road. "Guard the Bakery, all hands there," orders Loudon; "off to Striegau and the Hills with it;"—and is himself gone thither after it, leaving Breslau, Henri and the Russians, to what fate may be in store for them. Henri has again made one of his winged marches, the deft creature, though the despondent ; " march of 90 miles in three days " (in the last three, from Glogau, 90 ; in the whole, from Landsberg, above 200), " and has saved the State," says Retzow. " Made no camping, merely bivouacked ; halting for a rest four or five hours here and there ; " and, on August 5th, is at Lissa (this side the Field of Leuthen) ; making Breslau one of the gladdest of cities.

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 90-100; Archenholtz, ii. 89-94; Hofbericht von der Belagerung von Breslau im August 1760 (in Seyfarth, Beylagen, ii. 688-698); also in Helden-Geschichte, vi. 299-309: in Anonymous of Hamburg (iv. 115-124), that is, in the Old Newspapers, extremely particular account, How "not only the finest Horse in Breslau, and the finest House" (King's Palace), "but the handsomest Man, and, alas, also the prettiest Girl" (poor Jungfer Müller, shattered by a bomb-shell on the streets), "were destroyed in this short Siege,"—world-famous for the moment. Preuss, ii. 246.

So that Soltikof, on arriving (village of Hundsfield, August 8th), by the other side of the River, finds Henri's advanced guards entrenched over there, in Old Oder ; no Russian able to get within five miles of Breslau,—nor able to do more than cannonade in the distance, and ask with indignation, " Where are the siege-guns, then ; where is General Loudon ? Instead of Breslau capturable, and a sure Magazine for us, here is Henri, and nothing but steel to eat ! " And the Soltikof risen into Russian rages, and the Montalembert sunk in difficulties : readers can imagine these. Indignant Soltikof, deaf to suasion, with this dangerous Henri in attendance, is gradually edging back ; always rather back, with an eye to his provisions, and to certain bogs and woods he knows of. But we will leave the Soltikof-Henri end of the line, for the opposite end, which is more interesting.—To Friedrich, till he got to Silesia itself, these events are totally unknown. His cunctatory Henri, by this winged march, when the moment came, what a service has he done !—

Tauentzien's behaviour, also, has been superlative at Breslau ; and was never forgotten by the King. A very brave man, testifies Lessing of him ; true to the death : " Had there come but three, to rally with the King under a bush of the forest, Tauentzien would have been one." Tauentzien was on the ramparts once, in this Breslau pinch, giving orders ; a bomb burst beside him, did not injure him. " Mark that place," said Tauentzien ; and clapt his hat on it, continuing his orders, till a more permanent mark were put. In that spot, as intended through the next thirty years, he now lies buried.²

¹ Retzow, ii. 230 (very vague) ; in Tempelhof (iv. 89, 90, 95-97) clear and specific account.

² Militair-Lexikon, iv. 72-75 ; Lessing's Werke ; &c. &c.

Friedrich on March, for the Third Time, to rescue Silesia (August 1st–15th).

August 1st, Friedrich crossed the Elbe at Zehren, in the Schieritz vicinity, as near Meissen as he could ; but it had to be some six miles farther down, such the liabilities to Austrian disturbance. All are across that morning by 5 o'clock (began at 2) ; whence we double back eastward, and camp that night at Dallwitz,—are quietly asleep there, while Loudon's bombardment bursts out on Breslau, far away ! At Dallwitz we rest next day, wait for our Bakeries and Baggages ; and, Sunday, August 3d, at 2 in the morning, set forth on the forlornest adventure in the world.

The arrangements of the March, foreseen and settled beforehand to the last item, are of a perfection beyond praise ;—as is still visible in the General Order, or summary of directions given out ; which, to this day, one reads with a kind of satisfaction like that derivable from the Forty-seventh of Euclid : clear to the meanest capacity, not a word wanting in it, not a word superfluous, solid as geometry. “The Army marches always in Three Columns, left Column foremost : our First Line of Battle” (in case we have fighting) “is this foremost Column ; Second Line is the Second Column ; Reserve is the Third. All Generals' chaises, money-wagons, and regimental Surgeons' wagons remain with their respective Battalions ; as do the Heavy Batteries with the Brigades to which they belong. When the march is through woody country, the Cavalry regiments go in between the Battalions” (to be ready against Pandour operations and accidents).

“With the First Column, the Ziethen Hussars and Free-Battalion Courbière have always the vanguard ; Möhring Hussars and Free-Battalion Quintus” (speed to you, learned friend !) “the rearguard. With the Second Column always the Dragoon regiments Normann and Krockow have the vanguard ; Regiment Czetteritz” (Dragoons, poor Czetteritz himself, with his lost Manuscript, is captive since February last) “the rearguard. With the Third Column always the Dragoon regiment Holstein as head, and the ditto Finkenstein to close the Column.”—“During every march, however, there are to be of the Second Column 2 Battalions joined with Column Third ; so that the Third Column consist of 10 Battalions, the Second of 6, while on march.

“Ahead of each Column go three Pontoon Wagons ; and daily are 50 work-people allowed them, who are immediately to lay Bridge, where it is necessary. The rearguard of each Column takes up these Bridges again ; brings them on, and returns them to the head of the Column, when the Army has got to camp. In the Second Column are to be 500 wagons, and also in the Third 500 ; so shared that each battalion gets an equal number. The battalions—”¹ * * This may serve as specimen.

The March proceeded through the old Country : a little to left of the track in June past : Röder Water, Pulsnitz Water ; Kamenz neighbourhood, Bautzen neighbourhood,—Bunzlau on Silesian ground. Daun, at Bischofswerda, had foreseen this March ; and, by his Light people, had spoiled the Road all he could ; broken all the Bridges, half-felled the Woods (to render them impassable). Daun, the instant he heard of the actual March, rose from Bischofswerda : forward, forward always, to be ahead of it, however rapid ; Lacy, hanging on the rear of it, willing to give trouble with his Pandour harpies, but studious above all that it should not whirl round anywhere and get upon his, Lacy's, own throat. One of the strangest marches ever seen. “An onlooker, who had observed the march of these different Armies,” says Friedrich, “would have thought that they all belonged to one leader. Feldmarschall Daun's he would have taken for the Vanguard, the King's for the main Army, and General Lacy's for the Rearguard.”² Tempelhof says : “It is given only to a Friedrich to march on those terms ; between Two hostile Armies, his equals in strength, and a Third” (Loudon's, in Striegau Country) “waiting ahead.”

The March passed without accident of moment ; had not, from Lacy or Daun, any accident whatever. On the second day, an Aide-de-Camp of Daun's was picked up, with Letters from Lacy (back of the cards visible to Friedrich). Once,— it is the third day of the March (August 6th, village of Rothwasser to be quarter for the night),—on coming toward Neisse River, some careless Officer, trusting to peasants, instead of examining for himself and building a bridge, drove his Artillery-wagons into the so-called ford of Neisse ; which nearly swallowed the foremost of them in quicksands. Nearly, but not completely ; and caused a loss of five or six hours to that Second Column. So that darkness came on Column Second in the woody intricacies ; and several hundreds of the deserter kind took the opportunity of disappearing altogether. An unlucky, evidently too languid Officer ; though Friedrich did not annihilate the poor fellow, perhaps did not rebuke him at all, but merely marked it in elucidation of his qualities for time coming. “This miserable village of Rothwasser” (head-quarters after the dangerous fording of Neisse), says Mitchell, “stands in the middle of a wood, almost as wild and impenetrable as those in North America. There was hardly ground enough cleared about it for the encampment of the troops.”¹ Thursday, August 7th, Friedrich,—traversing the old Country, but more direct, by Königsbrück and Kamenz this time,—is at Bunzlau altogether. “Bunzlau on the Bober ;” the Silesian Bunzlau, not the Bohemian or any of the others. It is some 30 miles west of Liegnitz, which again lies some 40 north-west of Schweidnitz and the Strong Places. Friedrich has now done 100 miles of excellent marching ; and he has still a good spell more to do,—dragging “2,000 heavy wagons” with him, and across such impediments within and without. Readers that care to study him, especially for the next few days, will find it worth their while.

¹ In Tempelhof (iv. 125, 126) the entire Piece.

² Œuvres de Frédéric, v. 56.

Tempelhof gives, as usual, a most clear Account, minute to a degree ; which, supplemented by Mitchell and a Reimann Map, enables us as it were to accompany, and to witness with our eyes. Hitherto a March toilsome in the extreme, in spite of everything done to help it ; starting at 3 or at 2 in the morning ; resting to breakfast in some shady place, while the sun is high, frugally cooking under the shady woods,—“Burschen abzukochen here,” as the Order pleasantly bears. All encamped now, at Bunzlau in Silesia, on Thursday evening, with a very eminent week’s work behind them. “In the last five days, above 100 miles of road, and such road ; five considerable rivers in it”—Bober, Queiss, Neisse, Spree, Elbe ; and with such a wagon-train of 2,000 teams.”²

¹ Mitchell, ii. 190 ; Tempelhof, iv. 131. ² Tempelhof, iv. 123–150.

Proper that we rest a day here ; in view of the still swifter marchings and sudden dashings about, which lie ahead. It will be by extremely nimble use of all the limbs we have,—hands as well as feet,—if any good is to come of us now! Friedrich is aware that Daun already holds Striegau “as an outpost” (Loudon thereabouts, unknown to Friedrich), “these several days ;” and that Daun personally is at Schmöttseifen, in our own old Camp there, twenty or thirty miles to south of us, and has his Lacy to leftward of him, partly even to rearward : rather in advance of us, both of them,—if we were for Landshut ; which we are not. “Be swift enough, may not we cut through to Jauer, and get ahead of Daun?” counts Friedrich : “To Jauer, south-east of us, from Bunzlau here, is 40 miles ; and to Jauer it is above 30 east for Daun : possible to be there before Daun ! Jauer ours, thence to the Heights of Striegau and Hohenfriedberg Country, within wind of Schweidnitz, of Breslau : magazines, union with Prince Henri, all secure thereby ?” So reckons the sanguine Friedrich ; unaware that Loudon, with his corps of 35,000, has been summoned hitherward ; which will make important differences ! Loudon, Beck with a smaller Satellite Corps, both these, unknown to Friedrich, lie ready on the east of him : Loudon’s Army on the east ; Daun’s, Lacy’s on the south and west ; three big Armies, with their Satellites, gathering in upon this King : here is a Three-headed Dog, in the Tartarus of a world he now has ! On the fourth side of him is Oder, and the Russians, who are also perhaps building Bridges, by way of a supplementary or fourth head.

August 9th (Bunzlau to Goldberg), Friedrich, with his Three Columns and perfect arrangements, makes a long march : from Bunzlau at 3 in the morning ; and at 5 the afternoon arrives in sight of the Katzbach Valley, with the little Town of Goldberg some miles to right. Katzbach River is here ; and Jauer, for to-morrow, still fifteen miles ahead. But on reconnoitering here, all is locked and bolted : Lacy strong on the Hills of Goldberg ; Daun visible across the Katzbach ; Daun, and behind him Loudon, inexpugnably posted : Jauer an impossibility ! We have bread only for eight days ; our Magazines are at Schweidnitz and Breslau : what is to be done ? Get through, one way or other, we needs must ! Friedrich encamps for the night ; expecting an attack. If not attacked, he will make for Liegnitz leftward ; cross the Katzbach there, or farther down at Parchwitz :—Parchwitz, Neumarkt, Leuthen, we have been in that country before now :—Courage!

August 10th–11th (to Liegnitz and back). At 5 A.M., Sunday, August 10th, Friedrich, nothing of attack having come, got on march again: down his own left bank of the Katzbach, straight for Liegnitz; unopposed altogether; not even a Pandour having attacked him overnight. But no sooner is he under way, than Daun too rises; Daun, Loudon, close by, on the other side of Katzbach, and “like a Fourth column to our Three,” keep step with us, on our right; Lacy’s light people hovering on our rear:—three truculent fellows in buckram; fancy the feelings of the wayworn solitary fourth, whom they are gloomily dogging in this way! The solitary fourth does his fifteen miles to Liegnitz, unmolested by them; encamps on the Heights which look down on Liegnitz over the south; finds, however, that the Loudon-Daun people have likewise been diligent; that they now lie stretched out on their right bank, three or four miles up-stream or to rearward, and what is far worse, seven miles downwards, or ahead; that, in fact, they are a march nearer Parchwitz than he;—and that there is again no possibility. “Perhaps by Jauer, then, still? Out of this, and at lowest, into some vicinity of bread, it does behove us to be!” At 11 that night Friedrich gets on march again; returns the way he came. And,

August 11th, At daybreak, is back to his old ground; nothing now to oppose him but Lacy, who is gone across from Goldberg, to linger as rear of the Daun-Loudon march. Friedrich steps across on Lacy, thirsting to have a stroke at Lacy; who vanishes fast enough, leaving the ground clear. Could but our baggage have come as fast as we! But our baggage, Quintus guarding and urging, has to groan on for five hours yet; and without it, there is no stirring. Five mortal hours;—by which time, Daun, Lacy, Loudon are all up again; between us and Jauer, between us and everything helpful;—and Friedrich has to encamp in Seichau,—“a very poor Village in the Mountains” (writes Mitchell, who was painfully present there), “surrounded on all sides by Heights; on several of which, in the evening, the Austrians took camp, separated from us by a deep ravine only.”¹

Outlooks are growing very questionable to Mitchell and everybody. “Only four-days provisions” (in reality six), whisper the Prussian Generals gloomily to Mitchell and to one another : " Shall we have to make for Glogau, then, and leave Breslau to its fate ? Or perhaps it will be a second Maxen to his Majesty and us, who was so indignant with poor Finck ? " My friends, no ; a Maxen like Finck's it will never be : a very different Maxen, if any ! But we hope better things.

¹ Mitchell, ii. 194.

Friedrich's situation, grasped in the Three-lipped Pincers in this manner, is conceivable to readers. Soltikof, on the other side of Oder, as supplementary or fourth lip, is very impatient with these three. " Why all this dodging, and fidgeting to and fro ? You are above three to one of your enemy. Why don't you close on him at once, if you mean it at all ? The end is, He will be across the Oder ; and it is I that shall have the brunt to bear : Henri and he will enclose me between two fires ! " And in fact, Henri, as we know, though Friedrich does not or only half does, has gone across Oder, to watch Soltikof, and guard Breslau from any attempts of his,—which are far from his thoughts at this moment ;—a Soltikof fuming violently at the thought of such cunctations, and of being made cat's-paw again. " Know, however, that I understand you," violently fumes Soltikof, " and that I won't. I fall back into the Trebnitz Bog-Country, on my own right bank here, and look out for my own safety."—"Patience, your noble Excellenz," answer they always ; "oh, patience yet a little ! Only yesterday (Sunday 10th, the day after his arrival in this region), we had decided to attack and crush him ; Sunday very early : ' but he skipped away to Liegnitz. Oh, be patient yet a day or two : he skips about at such a rate ! " Montalembert has to be suasive as the Muses and the Sirens. Soltikof gloomily consents to another day or two. And even, such his anxiety lest this swift King skip over upon him, pushes out a considerable Russian Division, 24,000 ultimately, under Czernichef, towards the King's side of things, towards Auras on Oder, namely,—there to watch for oneself these interesting Royal movements ; or even to join with London out there, if that seem the safer course, against them.

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 137, 148-150.

Of Czernichef at Auras we shall hear farther on,—were these Royal movements once got completed a little.

Morning of August 12th, Friedrich has, in his bad lodging at Seichau, laid a new plan of route: "Towards Schweidnitz let it be; round by Pombesen and the south-east, by the Hill-roads, make a sweep flankward of the enemy!"—and has people out reconnoitering the Hill-roads. Hears, however, about 8 o'clock, That Austrians in strength are coming between us and Goldberg! "Intending to enclose us in this bad pot of a Seichau; no crossing of the Katzbach, or other retreat to be left us at all? Friedrich strikes his tents; ranks himself: is speedily in readiness for dispute of such extremity;—sends out new patrols, however, to ascertain. "Austrians in strength" there are not on the side indicated;—whereupon he draws in again. But, on the other hand, the Hill-roads are reported absolutely impassable for baggage; Pombesen an impossibility, as the other places have been. So Friedrich sits down again in Seichau to consider; does not stir all day. To Mitchell's horror, who, "with great labour," burns all the legationary ciphers and papers ("impossible to save the baggage if we be attacked in this hollow pot of a camp"), and feels much relieved on finishing.¹

Towards sunset, General Bülow, with the Second Line (second column of march), is sent out Goldberg-way, to take hold of the passage of the Katzbach: and at 8 that night, we all march, recrossing there about 1 in the morning; thence down our left bank to Liegnitz for the second time,—sixteen hours of it in all, or till noon of the 13th. Mitchell had been put with the Cavalry part; and "cannot but observe to your Lordship what a chief comfort it was in this long, dangerous and painful March," to have burnt one's ciphers and dread secrets quite out of the way.

And thus, Wednesday August 13th, about noon, we are in our old Camp; Headquarter in the southern suburb of Liegnitz (a wretched little Tavern, which they still show there, on mythical terms): main part of the Camp, I should think, is on that range of Heights, which reaches two miles southward, and is now called "Siegesberg (Victory Hill)," from a modern Monument built on it, after nearly 100 years. Here Friedrich stays one day,—more exactly, 30 hours ;—and his shifting, next time, is extremely memorable.

¹ Mitchell, ii. 144; Tempelhof, iv. 144.

Battle, in the Neighbourhood of Liegnitz, does ensue (Friday morning, 15th August 1760).

Daun, Lacy and Loudon, the Three-lipped Pincers, have of course followed, and are again agape for Friedrich, all in scientific postures : Daun in the Jauer region, seven or eight miles south ; Lacy about Goldberg, as far to south-west ; Loudon “ between Jeschkendorf and Koischwitz,” north-eastward, somewhat closer on Friedrich, with the Katzbach intervening. That Czernichef, with an additional 24,000, to rear of Loudon, is actually crossing Oder at Auras, with an eye to junction, Friedrich does not hear till to-morrow.¹

The scene is rather pretty, if one admired scenes. Liegnitz, a square, handsome, brick-built Town, of old standing, in good repair (population then, say 7,000), with fine old castellated edifices and aspects : pleasant meeting, in level circumstances, of the Katzbach valley with the Schwartzwasser (Black-water) ditto, which forms the north rim of Liegnitz ; pleasant mixture of green poplars and brick towers,—as seen from that “ Victory Hill ” (more likely to be “ Immediate-Ruin Hill ! ”) where the King now is. Beyond Liegnitz and the Schwartzwasser, north-westward, right opposite to the King’s, rise other Heights, called of Pfaffendorf, which guard the two streams after their uniting. Kloster Wahlstatt, a famed place, lies visible to south-east, few miles off. Readers recollect one Blücher “ Prince of Wahlstatt,” so named from one of his Anti-Napoleon victories gained there? Wahlstatt was the scene of an older Fight, almost six centuries older,²—a then Prince of Liegnitz versus hideous Tartar multitudes, who rather beat him ; and has been a Cloister Wahlstatt ever since. Till Thursday 14th, about 8 in the evening, Friedrich continued in his Camp of Liegnitz. We are now within reach of a notable Passage of War.

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 148-151 ; Mitchell, ii. 197.

² April 9th, 1241 (Köhler, Reichs-Historie).

Friedrich's Camp extends from the Village of Schimmelwitz, fronting the Katzbach for about two miles, north-eastward, to his Headquarter in Liegnitz Suburb : Daun is on his right and rearward, now come within four or five miles ; Loudon to his left and frontward, four or five, the Katzbach separating Friedrich and him ; Lacy lies from Goldberg north-eastward, to within perhaps a like distance rearward : that is the position on Thursday 14th. Provisions being all but run out ; and three Armies, 90,000 (not to count Czernichef and his 24,000 as a fourth) watching round our 30,000, within a few miles ; there is no staying here, beyond this day. If even this day it be allowed us ? This day, Friedrich had to draw out, and stand to arms for some hours ; while the Austrians appeared extensively on the Heights about, apparently intending an attack ; till it proved to be nothing : only an elaborate reconnoitering by Daun ; and we returned to our tents again.

Friedrich understands well enough that Daun, with the facts now before him, will gradually form his plan, and also, from the lie of matters, what his plan will be : many are the times Daun has elaborately reconnoitered, elaborately laid his plan ; but found, on coming to execute, that his Friedrich was off in the interim, and the plan gone to air. Friedrich has about 2,000 wagons to drag with him in these swift marches : Glogau Magazine, his one resource, should Breslau and Schweidnitz prove unattainable, is forty-five long miles north-westward. "Let us lean upon Glogau withal," thinks Friedrich ; "and let us be out of this straightway ! March tonight ; towards Parchwitz, which is towards Glogau too. Army rest till daybreak on the Heights of Pfaffendorf yonder, to examine, to wait its luck : let the empty meal-wagons jingle on to Glogau ; load themselves there, and jingle back to us in Parchwitz neighbourhood, should Parchwitz not have proved impossible to our manœuverings,—let us hope it may not !" — — Daun and the Austrians having ceased reconnoitering, and gone home, Friedrich rides with his Generals, through Liegnitz, across the Schwartzwasser, to the Pfaffendorf Heights. "Here, Messieurs, is our first halting-place to be : here we shall halt till daybreak, while the meal-wagons jingle on!" And explains to them orally where each is to take post, and how to behave. Which done, he too returns home, no doubt a wearied individual; and at 4 of the afternoon, lies down to try for an hour or two of sleep, while all hands are busy packing, according to the Orders given.

It is a fact recorded by Friedrich himself, and by many other people, That, at this interesting juncture, there appeared at the King's gate, King hardly yet asleep, a staggering Austrian Officer, Irish by nation, who had suddenly found good to desert the Austrian Service for the Prussian—"Sorrow on them: a pack of"—what shall I say?—Irish gentleman, bursting with intelligence of some kind, but evidently deep in liquor withal. "Impossible; the King is asleep," said the Adjutant on duty; but produced only louder insistence from the drunk Irish gentleman. "As much as all your heads are worth: the King's own safety, and not a moment to lose!" What is to be done? They awaken the King: "The man is drunk, but dreadfully in earnest, your Majesty." "Give him quantities of weak tea" (Tempelhof calls it tea, but Friedrich merely warm water); "then examine him, and report if it is anything." Something it was: "Your Majesty to be attacked, for certain, this night!" what his Majesty already guessed:—something, most likely little; but nobody to this day knows. Visible only, that his Majesty, before sunset, rode out reconnoitering with this questionable Irish gentleman, now in a very flaccid state; and altered nothing whatever in prior arrangements;—and that the flaccid Irish gentleman staggers out of sight, into dusk, into rest and darkness, after this one appearance on the stage of History.¹

From about eight in the evening, Friedrich's people got on march, in their several columns, and fared punctually on; one column through the streets of Liegnitz, others to left and to right of that; to left mainly, as remoter from the Austrians and their listening outposts from beyond the Katzbach River;—where the camp-fires are burning extremely distinct to-night. The Prussian camp-fires, they too are all burning uncommonly vivid ; country people employed to feed them ; and a few hussar sentries and drummers to make the customary sounds for Daun's instruction, till a certain hour. Friedrich's people are clearing the North Suburb of Liegnitz, crossing the Schwartzwasser : artillery and heavy wagons all go by the Stone-bridge at Topferberg (Potter-hill) there ; the lighter people by a few pontoons farther down that stream, in the Pfaffendorf vicinity. About 1 in the morning, all, even the right wing from Schimmelwitz, are safely across.

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, v. 63; Tempelhof, iv. 154.

Schwartzwasser, a River of many tails (boggy most of them, Schnelle or Swift Deichsel hardly an exception), gathering itself from the southward for twenty or more miles, attains its maximum of north at a place called Waldau, not far northwest of Topferberg. Towards this Waldau, Lacy is aiming all night ; thence to pounce on our "left wing,"—which he will find to consist of those empty watch-fires merely. Down from Waldau, past Topferberg and Pfaffendorf (Priest-town, or as we should call it, "Preston"), which are all on its northern or left bank, Schwartzwasser's course is in the form of an irregular horseshoe ; high ground to its northern side, Liegnitz and hollows to its southern ; till in an angular way it do join Katzbach, and go with that, northward for Oder the rest of its course. On the brow of these horseshoe Heights,—which run parallel to Schwartzwasser one part of them, and nearly parallel to Katzbach another (though above a mile distant, these latter, from it),—Friedrich plants himself : in Order of Battle ; slightly altering some points of the afternoon's program, and correcting his Generals, "Front rather so and so ; see where their fires are, yonder !" Daun's fires, Loudon's fires ; vividly visible both :—and, singular to say, there is nothing yonder either but a few sentries and deceptive drums ! All empty yonder too, even as our own Camp is ; all gone forth, even as we are ; we resting here, and our meal-wagons jingling on Glogau-way !

Excellency Mitchell, under horse-escort, among the lighter baggage, is on Kuchelberg Heath, in scrubby country, but well north behind Friedrich's centre : has had a dreadful march ; one comfort only, that his ciphers are all burnt. The rest of us lie down on the grass ;—among others, young Herr von Archenholtz, ensign or lieutenant in Regiment Forcade : who testifies that it is one of the beautifullest nights, the lamps of Heaven shining down in an uncommonly tranquil manner ; and that almost nobody slept. The soldier-ranks all lay horizontal, musket under arm ; chatting pleasantly in an undertone, or each in silence revolving such thoughts as he had. The Generals amble like observant spirits, hoarsely imperative.¹ Friedrich's line, we observed, is in the horse-shoe shape (or parabolic, straighter than horse-shoe), fronting the waters. Ziethen commands in that smaller Schwartzwasser part of the line, Friedrich in the Katzbach part, which is more in risk. And now, things being moderately in order, Friedrich has himself sat down,—I think, towards the middle or convex part of his line,—by a watchfire he has found there ; and, wrapt in his cloak, his many thoughts melting into haze, has sunk into a kind of sleep. Seated on a drum, some say ; half-asleep by the watchfire, time half-past 2,—when a Hussar Major, who has been out by the Bienowitz, the Pohlschildern way, northward, reconnoitering, comes dashing up full speed : “The King ? where is the King ?” “What is it, then ?” answers the King for himself. “Your Majesty, the Enemy in force, from Bienowitz, from Pohlschildern, coming on our Left Wing yonder ; has flung back all my vedettes ; is within 500 yards by this time !”

Friedrich springs to horse ; has already an Order speeding forth, “General Schenkendorf and his Battalion, their cannon, to the crown of the Wolfsberg, on our left yonder ; swift !” How excellent that every battalion (as by Order that we read) “has its own share of the heavy cannon always at hand !” ejaculate the military critics. Schenkendorf, being nimble, was able to astonish the Enemy with volumes of case-shot from the Wolfsberg, which were very deadly at that close distance. Other arrangements, too minute for recital here, are rapidly done ; and our Left Wing is in condition to receive its early visitors,—Loudon or whoever they may be. It is still dubious to the History-Books whether Friedrich was in clear expectation of Loudon here ; though of course he would now guess it was Loudon. But there is no doubt Loudon had not the least expectation of Friedrich ; and his surprise must have been intense, when, instead of vacant darkness (and some chance of Prussian baggage, which he had heard of), Prussian musketries and case-shot opened on him.

¹ Archenholtz, ii. 100-111.

Loudon had, as per order, quitted his Camp at Jeschken-dorf, about the time Friedrich did his at Schimmelwitz ; and, leaving the lights all burning, had set forward on his errand ; which was (also identical with Friedrich's), To seize the Heights of Pfaffendorf, and be ready there when day broke. Scouts having informed him that the Prussian Baggage was certainly gone through to Töpferberg,—more his scouts did not know, nor could Loudon guess,—“ We will snatch that Baggage ! ” thought Loudon ; and with such view has been speeding, all he could ; no vanguard ahead, lest he alarm the Baggage-escort : Loudon in person, with the Infantry of the Reserve, striding on ahead, to devour any Baggage-escort there may be. Friedrich's reconnoitering Hussar parties had confirmed this belief : “ Yes ! yes ! ” thought Loudon. And now suddenly, instead of Baggage to capture, here, out of the vacant darkness, is Friedrich in person, on the brow of the Heights where we intended to form !—

Loudon's behaviour, on being hurled back with his Reserve in this manner, everybody says, was magnificent. Judging at once what the business was, and that retreat would be impossible without ruin, he hastened instantly to form himself, on such ground as he had,—highly unfavourable ground, uphill in part, and room in it only for Five Battalions (5,000) of front ;—and came on again, with a great deal of impetuosity and good skill ; again and ever again, three times in all. Had partial successes ; edged always to the right to get the flank of Friedrich ; but could not, Friedrich edging conformably. From his right-hand, or north-east part, Loudon poured in, once and again, very furious charges of Cavalry ; on every repulse, drew out new Battalions from his left and centre, and again stormed forward : but found it always impossible. Had his subordinates all been Loudons, it is said, there was once a fine chance for him. By this edging always to the north-eastward on his part and Friedrich's, there had at last a considerable gap in Friedrich's Line established itself,—not only Ziethen's Line and Friedrich's Line now fairly fallen asunder, but, at the Village of Panten, in Friedrich's own Line, a gap where anybody might get in. One of the Austrian Columns was just entering Panten when the Fight began; in Panten that Column has stood cogitative ever since; well to left of Loudon and his struggles; but does not, till the eleventh hour, resolve to push through. At the eleventh hour;—and lo, in the nick of time, Möllendorf (our Leuthen-and-Hochkirch friend) got his eye on it; rushed up with infantry and cavalry; set Panten on fire, and blocked out that possibility and the too cogitative Column.

Loudon had no other real chance: his furious horse-charges and attempts were met everywhere by corresponding counter-fury. Bernburg, poor Regiment Bernburg, see what a figure it is making! Left almost alone, at one time, among those horse-charges; spending its blood like water, bayonet-charging, platooning as never before; and on the whole, stemming invincibly that horse-torrent,—not unseen by Majesty, it may be hoped; who is here where the hottest pinch is. On the third repulse, which was worse than any before, Loudon found he had enough; and tried it no farther. Rolled over the Katzbach, better or worse; Prussians catching 6,000 of him, but not following farther; threw up a fine battery at Bienowitz, which sheltered his retreat from horse:—and went his ways, sorely but not dishonourably beaten, after an hour and a half of uncommonly stiff fighting, which had been very murderous to Loudon. Loss of 10,000 to him: 4,000 killed and wounded; prisoners 6,000; 82 cannon, 28 flags, and other items; the Prussian loss being 1,800 in whole.¹ By 5 o'clock, the Battle, this Loudon part of it, was quite over; Loudon (35,000) wrecking himself against Friedrich's Left Wing (say half of his Army, some 15,000) in such conclusive manner.

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 159.

Friedrich's Left Wing alone has been engaged hitherto. And now it will be Ziethen's turn, if Daun and Lacy still come on.

By 11 last night, Daun's Pandours, creeping stealthily on, across the Katzbach, about Schimmelwitz, had discerned with amazement that Friedrich's Camp appeared to consist only of watchfires; and had shot off their speediest rider to Daun, accordingly; but it was one in the morning before Daun, busy marching and marshalling, to be ready at the Katzbach by daylight, heard of this strange news; which probably he could not entirely believe till seen with his own eyes. What a spectacle! One's beautiful Plan exploded into mere imbroglio of distraction; become one knows not what! Daun's watchfires too had all been left burning; universal stratagem, on both sides, going on; producing,—tragically for some of us,—a Tragedy of Errors, or the Mistakes of a Night! Daun sallied out again, in his collapsed, upset condition, as soon as possible: pushed on, in the track of Friedrich; warning Lacy to push on. Daun, though within five miles all the while, had heard nothing of the furious Fight and cannonade; "south-west wind having risen," so Daun said, and is believed by candid persons,—not by the angry Vienna people, who counted it impossible: "Nonsense; you were not deaf; but you loitered and haggled, in your usual way; perhaps not sorry that the brilliant Loudon should get a rebuff!"

Emerging out of Liegnitz, Daun did see, to north-eastward, a vast pillar or mass of smoke, silently mounting, but could do nothing with it. "Cannon-smoke, no doubt; but fallen entirely silent, and not wending hitherward at all. Poor Loudon, alas, must have got beaten!" Upon which Daun really did try, at least upon Ziethen; but could do nothing. Poured cavalry across the Stone-bridge at the Töpferberg; who drove in Ziethen's picket there; but were torn to pieces by Ziethen's cannon. Ziethen across the Schwartzwasser is alert enough. How form in order of battle here, with Ziethen's batteries shearing your columns longitudinally, as they march up? Daun recognises the impossibility; wends back through Liegnitz to his Camp again, the way he had come. Tide-hour missed again ; ebb going uncommonly rapid ! Lacy had been about Waldau, to try farther up the Schwartzwasser on Zie-then's right : but the Schwartzwasser proved amazingly boggy ; not accessible on any point to heavy people,—“owing to bogs on the bank,” with perhaps poor prospect on the other side too !

And, in fact, nothing of Lacy, more than of Daun, could manage to get across : nothing except two poor Hussar regiments ; who, winding up far to the left, attempted a snatch on the Baggage about Hummeln,—Hummeln, or Kuchel of the Scrubs. And gave a new alarm to Mitchell, the last of several during this horrid night ; who has sat painfully blocked in his carriage, with such a Devil's tumult going on to eastward, and no sight, share or knowledge to be had of it. Repeated hussar attacks there were on the Baggage here, Loudon's hussars also trying : but Mitchell's Captain was miraculously equal to the occasion ; and had beaten them all off. Mitchell, by magnanimous choice of his own, has been in many Fights by the side of Friedrich ; but this is the last he will ever be in or near :—this miraculous one of Liegnitz, 3 to 4½ A.M. Friday, August 15th, 1760.

Never did such a luck befall Friedrich before or after. He was clinging on the edge of slippery abysses, his path hardly a foot's-breadth, mere enemies and avalanches hanging round on every side : ruin likelier at no moment of his life ;—and here is precisely the quasi-miracle which was needed to save him. Partly by accident too ; the best of management crowned by the luckiest of accidents.¹

Friedrich rested four hours on the Battle-field,—if that could be called rest, which was a new kind of diligence highly wonderful. Diligence of gathering up accurately the results of the Battle ; packing them into portable shape ; and marching off with them in one's pocket, so to speak. Major-General Saldern had charge of this, a man of many talents ; and did it consummately. The wounded, Austrian as well as Prussian, are placed in the empty meal-wagons; and the more slightly wounded are set on horseback, double in possible cases: only the dead are left lying: 100 or more meal-wagons are left, their teams needed for drawing our 82 new cannon;—the wagons we split up, no Austrians to have them; useable only as firewood for the poor Country-folk. The 4 or 5,000 good muskets lying on the field, shall not we take them also? Each cavalry soldier slings one of them across his back, each baggage-driver one: and the muskets too are taken care of. About 9 A.M., Friedrich, with his 6,000 prisoners, new cannon-teams, sick-wagon teams, trophies, properties, is afoot again. One of the succinctest of Kings.

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 151-171 ; Archenholtz, ubi suprâ ; Hofbericht von der Schlacht so am 15 August 1760, bey Liegnitz, vorgefallen (Seyfarth, Beysagen, ii. 698-708) ; &c. &c.

I should have mentioned the joy of poor Regiment Bernburg; which rather affected me. Loudon gone, the miracle of Battle done, and this miraculous packing going on,—Friedrich riding about among his people, passed along the front of Bernburg, the eye of him perhaps intimating, “I saw you, Bürsche ;” but no word coming from him. The Bernburg Officers, tragically tressless in their hats, stand also silent, grim as blackened stones (all Bernburg black with gunpowder): “In us also is no word; unless our actions perhaps speak?” But a certain Sergeant, Fugleman, or chief Corporal, stepped out, saluting reverentially: “Regiment Bernburg, Ihro Majestät—?”—“Hm; well, you did handsomely. Yes, you shall have your side-arms back; all shall be forgotten and washed out!” “And you are again our Gracious King, then?” says the Sergeant, with tears in his eyes.—“Gewiss, Yea, surely!” Upon which, fancy what a peal of sound from the ecstatic throat and heart of this poor Regiment. Which I have often thought of; hearing mutinous blockheads, “glorious Sons of Freedom” to their own thinking, ask their natural commanding Officer, “Are not we as good as thou? Are not all men equal?” Not a whit of it, you mutinous blockheads; very far from it indeed!

This was the breaking of Friedrich’s imprisonment in the deadly rock-labyrinths; this success at Liegnitz delivered him into free field once more. For twenty-four hours more, indeed, the chance was still full of anxiety to him ; for twenty-four hours Daun, could he have been rapid, still had the possibilities in hand ;—but only Daun's Antagonist was usually rapid. About 9 in the morning, all road-ready, this latter Gentleman “gave three Salvoes, as Joy-fire, on the Field of Liegnitz ;” and, in the above succinct shape,—leaving Ziethen to come on, “with the prisoners, the sick-wagons, and captured cannon,” in the afternoon,—marched rapidly away. For Parchwitz, with our best speed : Parchwitz is the road to Breslau, also to Glogau,—to Breslau, if it be humanly possible ! Friedrich has but two-days bread left : on the Breslau road, at Auras, there is Czernichef with 24,000 ; there are, or there may be, the Loudon Remnants rallied again, the Lacy Corps untouched, all Daun's Force, had Daun made any despatch at all. Which Daun seldom did. A man slow to resolve, and seeking his luck in leisure.

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 162–164.

All judges say, Daun ought now to have marched, on this enterprise of still intercepting Friedrich, without loss of a moment. But he calculated Friedrich would probably spend the day in Te-Deum-ing on the Field (as is the manner of some) ;—and that, by to-morrow, things would be clearer to one's own mind. Daun was in no haste ; gave no orders,—did not so much as send Czernichef a Letter. Czernichef got one, however. Friedrich sent him one ; that is to say, sent him one to intercept. Friedrich, namely, writes a Note addressed to his Brother Henri : “Austrians totally beaten this day ; now for the Russians, dear Brother ; and swift, do what we have agreed on !”¹ Friedrich hands this to a Peasant, with instructions to let himself be taken by the Russians, and give it up to save his life. Czernichef, it is thought, got this Letter ; and perhaps rumour itself, and the delays of Daun, would, at any rate, have sent him across. Across he at once went, with his 24,000, and burnt his Bridge. A vanished Czernichef ;—though Friedrich is not yet sure of it : and as for the wandering Austrian Divisions, the Loudons, Lacys, all is dark to him.

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, v. 67.

So that, at Parchwitz, next morning (August 16th), the question, "To Glogau? To Breslau?" must have been a kind of sphinx-enigma to Friedrich; dark as that, and, in case of error, fatal. After some brief paroxysm of consideration, Friedrich's reading was, "To Breslau, then!" And, for hours, as the march went on, he was noticed "riding much about," his anxieties visibly great. Till at Neumarkt (not far from the Field of Leuthen), getting on the Heights there,—towards noon, I will guess,—what a sight! Before this, he had come upon Austrian Out-parties, Beck's or somebody's, who did not wait his attack: he saw, at one point, "the whole Austrian Army on march (the tops of its columns visible among the knolls, three miles off, impossible to say whitherward);" and fared on all the faster, I suppose, such a bet depending;—and, in fine, galloped to the Heights of Neumarkt for a view: "Dare we believe it? Not an Austrian there!" And might be, for the moment, the gladdest of Kings. Secure now of Breslau, of junction with Henri: fairly winner of the bet;—and can at last pause, and take breath, very needful to his poor Army, if not to himself, after such a mortal spasm of sixteen days! Daun had taken the Liegnitz accident without remark; usually a stoical man, especially in other people's misfortunes; but could not conceal his painful astonishment on this new occasion,—astonishment at unjust fortune, or at his own sluggardly cunctations, is not said.

Next day (August 17th), Friedrich encamps at Hermannsdorf, headquarter the Schloss of Hermannsdorf, within seven miles of Breslau; continues a fortnight there, resting his wearied people, himself not resting much, watching the dismal miscellany of entanglements that yet remain, how these will settle into groups,—especially what Daun and his Soltikof will decide on. In about a fortnight, Daun's decision did become visible; Soltikof's not in a fortnight, nor ever clearly at all. Unless it were To keep a whole skin, and gradually edge home to his victuals. As essentially it was, and continued to be; creating endless negotiations, and futile overtures and messagings from Daun to his barbarous Friend, endless suasions and trouble from poor Montalembert,—of which it would weary every reader to hear mention, except of the result only.

Friedrich, for his own part, is little elated with these bits of successes at Liegnitz or since; and does not deceive himself as to the difficulties, almost the impossibilities, that still lie ahead. In answer to D'Argens, who has written ("at midnight," starting out of bed, "the instant the news came"), in zealous congratulation on Liegnitz, here is a Letter of Friedrich's; well worth reading,—though it has been oftener read than almost any other of his. A Letter which D'Argens never saw in the original form; which was captured by the Austrians or Cossacks;¹ which got copied everywhere, soon stole into print, and is ever since extensively known.

Friedrich to the Marquis D'Argens (at Berlin).

"Hermannsdorf, near Breslau, 27th August 1760.

"In other times, my dear Marquis, the Affair of the 15th would have settled the Campaign; at present it is but a scratch. There will be needed a great Battle to decide our fate: such, by all appearance, we shall soon have; and then you may rejoice, if the event is favourable to us. Thank you, meanwhile, for all your sympathy. It has cost a deal of scheming, striving, and much address to bring matters to this point. Don't speak to me of dangers; the last Action cost me only a Coat" (torn useless, only one skirt left, by some rebounding cannon-ball?) "and a Horse" (shot under me): "that is not paying dear for a victory.

"In my life, I was never in so bad a posture as in this Campaign. Believe me, miracles are still needed if I am to overcome all the difficulties which I still see ahead. And one is growing weak withal. 'Herculean' labours to accomplish at an age when my powers are forsaking me, my weaknesses increasing, and, to speak candidly, even hope, the one comfort of the unhappy, begins to be wanting. You are not enough acquainted with the posture of things to know all the dangers that threaten the State : I know them, and conceal them ; I keep all the fears to myself, and communicate to the Public only the hopes, and the trifle of good news I may now and then have. If the stroke I am meditating succeed " (stroke on Daun's Anti-Schweidnitz strategies, of which anon), " then, my dear Marquis, it will be time to expand one's joy ; but till then, let us not flatter ourselves, lest some unexpected bit of bad news depress us too much.

¹ See Oeuvres de Frédéric, xix. 198 (D'Argens himself, "19th October" following), and ib. 191 n.; Rodenbeck, ii. 81, 86;—mention of it, in Voltaire, Montalembert, &c.

" I live here " (Schloss of Hermannsdorf, a 7 miles west of Breslau) " like a Military Monk of La Trappe : endless businesses, and these done, a little consolation from my Books. I know not if I shall outlive this War : but should it so happen, I am firmly resolved to pass the remainder of my life in solitude, in the bosom of Philosophy and Friendship. When the roads are surer, perhaps you will write me oftener. I know not where our winter-quarters this time are to be ! My House in Breslau is burnt down in the Bombardment " (Loudon's, three weeks ago). " Our enemies grudge us everything, even daylight, and air to breathe : some nook, however, they must leave us ; and if it be a safe one, it will be a true pleasure to have you again with me.

" Well, my dear Marquis, what has become of the Peace with France " (English Peace) ! " Your Nation, you see, is blinder than you thought : those fools will lose their Canada and Pondichery, to please the Queen of Hungary and the Czarina. Heaven grant Prince Ferdinand may pay them for their zeal ! And it will be the innocent that suffer, the poor officers and soldiers, not the Choiseuls and " — * * " But here is business come on me. Adieu, dear Marquis ; I embrace you.—F." ¹

Two Events, of opposite complexion, a Russian, and a Saxon, Friedrich had heard of while at Hermannsdorf, before writing as above. The Saxon Event is the pleasant one, and comes first :

Hülsen on the Dürrenberg, August 20th. " August 20th, at Strehla, in that Schlettau-Meissen Country, the Reichsfolk and Austrians made attack on Hülsen's Posts, principal Post of them the Dürrenberg (Dry-Hill) there,—in a most extensive manner ; filling the whole region with vague artillery-thunder, and endless charges, here, there, of foot and horse ; which all issued in zero and minus quantities; Hülsen standing beautifully to his work, and Hussar Kleist especially, at one point, cutting in with masterly execution, which proved general overthrow to the Reichs Project; and left Hülsen master of the field and of his Dürrenberg, plus 1,217 prisoners and one Prince among them, and one cannon: a Hülsen who has actually given a kind of beating to the Reichsfolk and Austrians, though they were 30,000 to his 10,000, and had counted on making a new Maxen of it."¹ Friedrich writes a glad laudatory Letter to Hülsen: "Right, so; give them more of that when they apply next!"

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 191.

This is a bit of sunshine to the Royal mind, dark enough otherwise. Had Friedrich got done here, right fast would he fly to the relief of Hülsen, and recovery of Saxony. Hope, in good moments, says, "Hülsen will be able to hold out till then!" Fear answers, "No, he cannot, unless you get done here extremely soon!"—The Russian Event, full of painful anxiety to Friedrich, was a new Siege of Colberg. That is the sad fact; which, since the middle of August, has been becoming visibly certain.

Second Siege of Colberg, August 26th. "Under siege again, that poor Place; and this time the Russians seem to have made a vow that take it they will. Siege by land and by sea; land-troops direct from Petersburg, 15,000 in all (8,000 of them came by ship), with endless artillery; and near 40 Russian and Swedish ships-of-war, big and little, blackening the waters of poor Colberg. August 26th" (the day before Friedrich's writing as above), "they have got all things adjusted,—the land-troops covered by redoubts to rearward, ships moored in their battering-places;—and begin such a bombardment and firing of redhot balls, upon Colberg, as was rarely seen. To which, one can only hope old Heyde will set a face of gray-steel character, as usual; and prove a difficult article to deal with, till one gets some relief contrived for him."

¹ Archenholtz, ii. 114; Bericht von der am 20 August 1760 bey Strehla vorgefallenen Action (Seyfarth, Beylagen, ii. 703-719).

² Letter in Schöning, ii. 396, "Hermsdorf" (Hermannsdorf), "27th August 1760."

³ Archenholtz, ii. 116: in Helden-Geschichte (vi. 73-83), "Tagebuch of Siege, 26th August—18th September," and other details.

CHAPTER IV.

DAUN IN WRESTLE WITH FRIEDRICH IN THE SILESIAN HILLS.

IN spite of Friedrich's forebodings, an extraordinary recoil, in all Anti-Friedrich affairs, ensued upon Liegnitz; everything taking the backward course, from which it hardly recovered, or indeed did not recover at all, during the rest of this Campaign. Details on the subsequent Daun-Friedrich movements,—which went all aback for Daun, Daun driven into the Hills again, Friedrich hopeful to cut off his bread, and drive him quite through the Hills, and home again,—are not permitted us. No human intellect in our day could busy itself with understanding these thousandfold marchings, manoeuvrings, assaults, surprisals, sudden facings about (retreat changed to advance); nor could the powerfullest human memory, not exclusively devoted to study the Art Military under Friedrich, remember them when understood. For soldiers, desirous not to be sham-soldiers, they are a recommendable exercise; for them I do advise Tempelhof and the excellent German Narratives and Records. But in regard to others—A sample has been given: multiply that by the ten, by the three-score and ten; let the ingenious imagination get from it what will suffice. Our first duty here to poor readers is to elicit from that sea of small things the fractions which are cardinal, or which give human physiognomy and memorability to it; and carefully suppress all the rest.

Understand, then, that there is a general going-back on the Austrian and Russian part. Czernichef we already saw at once retire over the Oder. Soltikof bodily, the second day after, deaf to Montalembert, lifts himself to rearward; takes post behind bogs and bushy grounds more and more inaccessible;¹ followed by Prince Henri with his best impressiveness for a week longer, till he seem sufficiently remote and peaceablymined : " Making home for Poland, he," thinks the sanguine King ; " leave Goltz with 12,000 to watch him. The rest of the Army over hither ! " Which is done, August 27th ; General Forcade taking charge, instead of Henri,—who is gone, that day or next, to Breslau, for his health's sake. " Prince Henri really ill," say some ; " Not so ill, but in the sulks," say others :—partly true, both theories, it is now thought ; impossible to settle in what degree true. Evident it is, Henri sat quiescent in Breslau, following regimen, in more or less pathetic humour, for two or three months to come ; went afterwards to Glogau, and had private theatricals ; and was no more heard of in this Campaign. Greatly to his Brother's loss and regret ; who is often longing for " your recovery " (and return hither), to no purpose.

¹ "August 18th, to Trebnitz, on the road to Militsch" (Tempelhof, iv. 167).

Soltikof does, in his heart, intend for Poland ; but has to see the Siege of Colberg finish first ; and, in decency even to the Austrians, would linger a little : " Willing I always, if only you prove feasible ! " Which occasions such negotiating, and messaging across the Oder, for the next six weeks, as—as shall be omitted in this place. By intense suasion of Montalembert, Soltikof even consents to undertake some sham movement on Glogau, thereby to alleviate his Austrians across the River ; and staggers gradually forward a little in that direction :—sham merely : for he has not a siege-gun, nor the least possibility on Glogau ; and Goltz with the 12,000 will sufficiently take care of him in that quarter.

Friedrich, on junction with Forcade, has risen to perhaps 50,000 ; and is now in some condition against the Daun-Loudon-Lacy Armies, which cannot be double his number. These still hang about, in the Breslau-Parchwitz region ; gloomy of humour ; and seem to be aiming at Schweidnitz,—if that could still prove possible with a Friedrich present. Which it by no means does ; though they try it by their best combinations ;—by " a powerful Chain of Army-posts, isolating Schweidnitz, and uniting Daun and Loudon ; " by " a Camp on the Zobtenberg, as crown of the same ; "—and put Friedrich on his mettle. Who, after survey of said Chain, executes (night of August 30th) a series of beautiful manœuvres on it, which unexpectedly conclude its existence :—"with unaccountable hardihood" (as Archenholtz has it, physiognomically true to Friedrich's general style just now, if a little incorrect as to the case in hand), "sees good to march direct, once for all, athwart said Chain ; right across its explosive cannonadings and it,—counter-cannonading, and marching rapidly on ; such a march for insolence, say the Austrians!"¹ Till, in this way, the insolent King has Schweidnitz under his protective hand again ; and forces the Chain to coil itself wholly together, and roll into the Hills for a safe lodging. Whither he again follows it : with continual changes of position, vying in inaccessibility with your own ; threatening your meal-wagons ; trampling on your skirts in this or the other dangerous manner ; marching insolently up to your very nose, more than once ("Dittmansdorf, September 18th," for a chief instance), and confusing your best schemes.²

This "insolent" style of management, says Archenholtz, was practised by Julius Cæsar on the Gauls ; and since his time by nobody,—till Friedrich, his studious scholar and admirer, revived it "against another enemy." "It is of excellent efficacy," adds Tempelhof ; "it disheartens your adversary, and especially his common people, and has the reverse effect on your own ; confuses him in endless apprehensions, and details of self-defence ; so that he can form no plan of his own, and his overpowering resources become useless to him." Excellent efficacy,—only you must be equal to doing it ; not unequal, which might be very fatal to you !

For about five weeks, Friedrich, eminently practising this style, has a most complex multifarious Briarean wrestle with big Daun and his Lacy-Loudon satellites ; who have a troublesome time, running hither, thither, under danger of slaps, and finding nowhere an available mistake made. The scene is that intricate Hill-Country between Schweidnitz and Glatz

¹ Archenholtz (ii. 115-116) ; who is in a hurry, dateless, and rather confuses a subsequent day (September 18th) with this "night of August 30th." See Retzow, ii. 26 ; and still better, Tempelhof, iv. 203.

² Tempelhof, iv. 193-231 ; &c. &c. : in Anonymous of Hamburg, iv. 222-235, "Diary of the Austrian Army" (3rd-8th September).

(kind of glacis from Schweidnitz to the Glatz Mountains): Daun, generally speaking, has his back on Glatz, Friedrich on Schweidnitz; and we hear of encampings at Kunzendorf, at Bunzelwitz, at Burkersdorf,—places which will be more famous in a coming Year. Daun makes no complaint of his Lacy-Loudon or other satellite people; who are diligently circumambient all of them, as bidden; but are unable, like Daun himself, to do the least good; and have perpetually, Daun and they, a bad life of it beside this Neighbour. The outer world, especially the Vienna outer world, is naturally a little surprised: "How is this, Feldmarschall Daun? Can you do absolutely nothing with him, then; but sit pinned in the Hills, eating sour herbs!"

In the Russians appears no help. Soltikof on Glogau, we know what that amounts to! Soltikof is evidently intending home, and nothing else. To all Austrian proposals,—and they have been manifold, as poor Montalembert knows too well,—the answer of Soltikof was and is: "Above 90,000 of you circling about, helping one another to do Nothing. Happy were you, not a doubt of it, could we be wiled across to you, to get worried in your stead!" Daun begins to be extremely ill off; provisions scarce, are far away in Bohemia; and the roads daily more insecure, Friedrich aiming evidently to get command of them altogether. Think of such an issue to our once-flourishing Campaign 1760! Daun is vigilance itself against such fatality; and will do anything except risk a Fight. Here, however, is the fatal posture: Since September 18th, Daun sees himself considerably cut off from Glatz, his provision-road more and more insecure;—and for fourteen days onward, the King and he have got into a dead-lock, and sit looking into one another's faces; Daun in a more and more distressed mood, his provender becoming so uncertain, and the Winter season drawing nigh. The sentries are in mutual view: each Camp could cannonade the other; but what good were it? By a tacit understanding they don't. The sentries, outposts, and vedettes forbear musketry; on the contrary, exchange tobaccos sometimes, and have a snatch of conversation. Daun is growing more and more unhappy. To which of the gods, if not to Soltikof again, can he apply?

Friedrich himself, successful so far, is abundantly dissatisfied with such a kind of success ;—and indeed seems to be less thankful to his stars than in present circumstances he ought. Profoundly wearied we find him, worn down into utter disgust in the Small War of Posts : “ Here we still are, nose to nose,” exclaims he (see Letters to Henri), “ both of us in unattackable camps. This Campaign appears to me more unsupportable than any of the foregoing. Take what trouble and care I like, I can’t advance a step in regard to great interests ; I succeed only in trifles.” “ Oh for good news of your health : I am without all assistance here ; the Army must divide again before long, and I have none to intrust it to.”¹

And to D’Argens, in the same bad days : “ Yes, yes, I escaped a great danger there ” (at Liegnitz). “ In a common War, it would have signified something ; but in this it is a mere skirmish ; my position little improved by it. I will not sing Jeremiads to you, nor speak of my fears and anxieties, but can assure you they are great. The crisis I am in has taken another shape ; but as yet nothing decides it, nor can the developement of it be foreseen. I am getting consumed by slow fever ; I am like a living body losing limb after limb. Heaven stand by us : we need it much.” * * * “ You talk always of my person, of my dangers. Need I tell you, it is not necessary that I live ; but it is that I do my duty, and fight for my Country to save it if possible. In many little things I have had luck : I think of taking for my motto, Maximus in minimis, et minimus in maximis. A worse Campaign than any of the others. I know not sometimes what will become of it. But why weary you with such details of my labours and my sorrows ? My spirits have forsaken me. All gaiety is buried with the Loved Noble Ones whom my heart was bound to. Adieu.”

Or, again, to Henri : “ Berlin ? Yes ; I am trying something

¹ Schöning, ii. 416.

² Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 193 (“ Dittmannsdorf, 18th September,” day after, or day of finishing, that cannonade).

in bar of that. Have a bad time of it, in the interim. 'Our means, my dear Brother, are so eaten away ; far too short for opposing the prodigious number of our enemies set against us :—if we must fall, let us date our destruction from the infamous Day of Maxen !'

Is in such health, too, all the while : "Am a little better, thank you ; yet have still the"—what shall we say (dreadful biliary affair) ?—" hémorroïdes aveugles : nothing that, were it not for the disquietudes I feel : but all ends in this world, and so will these." * * "I flatter myself your health is recovering. For these three days in continuance I have had so terrible a cramp, I thought it would choke me ;—it is now a little gone. No wonder the chagrins and continual disquietudes I live in should undermine and at length overturn the robustest constitution."

Friedrich, we observe, has heard of certain Russian-Austrian intentions on Berlin ; but, after intense consideration, resolves that it will behove him to continue here, and try to dislodge Daun, or help Hunger to dislodge him ; which will be the remedy for Berlin and all things else. There are news from Colberg of welcome tenor ; could Daun be sent packing, Soltikof, it is probable, will not be in much alacrity for Berlin !—September 18th, at Dittmannsdorf, was the first day of Daun's dead-lock : ever since, he has had to sit, more and more hampered, pinned to the Hills, eating sour herbs ; nothing but Hunger ahead, and a retreat (battle we will not dream of), likely to be very ruinous, with a Friedrich sticking to the wings of it. Here is the Note on Colberg :

September 18th, Colberg Siege raised. "The same September 18th, what a day at Colberg too ! It is the twenty-fourth day of the continual bombardment there. Colberg is black ashes, most of its houses ruins, not a house in it uninjured. But Heyde and his poor Garrison, busy day and night, walk about in it as if fire-proof ; with a great deal of battle still left in them. The King, I know not whether Heyde is aware, has contrived something of relief ; General Werner coming :—the fittest of men, if there be possibility. When, see, September 18th, uneasy motion in the Russian entrenchments (for the Russians too are entrenched against attack): Something that has surprised the Russians yonder. Climb, some of you, to the highest surviving steeple, highest chimney-top if no steeple survive:—‘Yonder is Werner come to our relief, oh God the Merciful!’

¹ Schöning, ii. 419 : "2d October." Ibid. ii. 410 : "16th September." Ibid. ii. 408.

“Werner, with 5,000, was detached from Glogau (September 5th), from Goltz’s small Corps there; has come as on wings, 200 miles in thirteen days. And attacks now, as with wings, the astonished Russian 15,000, who were looking for nothing like him,—with wings, with claws, and with beak; and in a highly aquiline manner, fierce, swift, skilful, storms these entrenched Russians straightway, scatters them to pieces,—and next day is in Colberg, the Siege raising itself with great precipitation; leaving all its artilleries and furnitures, rushing on shipboard all of it that can get—the very ships-of-war, says Archenholtz, hurrying dangerously out to sea, as if the Prussian Hussars might possibly take them. A glorious Werner! A beautiful defence, and ditto rescue; which has drawn the world’s attention.”¹

Heyde’s defence of Colberg, Werner’s swift rescue of it, are very celebrated this Autumn. Medals were struck in honour of them at Berlin, not at Friedrich’s expense, but under Friedrich’s patronage; who purchased silver or gold copies, and gave them about. Veteran Heyde had a Letter from his Majesty, and one of these gold Medals;—what an honour! I do not hear that Heyde got any other reward, or that he needed any. A beautiful old Hero, voiceless in History; though very visible in that remote sphere, if you care to look.

That is the news from Colberg; comfortable to Friedrich; not likely to inspire Soltikof with new alacrity in behalf of Daun. It remains to us only to add, that Friedrich, with a view to quicken Daun, shot out (September 24th, after night-fall, and with due mystery) a Detachment towards Neisse,—4,000 or so, who call themselves 15,000, and affect to be for Mähren ultimately. “For Mähren, and my bit of daily bread!” Daun may well think; and did for some time think, or partly did. Pushed off one small detachment really thither, to look after Mähren ; and (September 29th) pushed off another bigger ; Lacy namely, with 15,000, pretending to be thither,—but who, the instant they were out of Friedrich's sight, have whirled, at a rapid pace, quite into the opposite direction : as will shortly be seen ! Daun has now other irons in the fire. Daun, ever since this fatal Dead-lock in the Hills, has been shrieking hoarsely to the Russians, day and night ; who at last take pity on him,—or find something feasible in his proposals.

¹ Seyfarth, ii. 684; Archenholtz, ii. 116: in Holden-Geschichte (vi. 73-88), Tagebuch of Siege.

The Russians make a Raid on Berlin, for Relief of Daun, and their own Behoof (October 3d–12th, 1760).

Powerful entreaties, influences are exercised at Petersburg, and here in the Russian Camp : “ Noble Russian Excellencies, for the love of Heaven, take this man off my windpipe ! A sally into Brandenburg : oh, could not you ? Lacy shall accompany ; seizure of Berlin, were it only for one day ! ” Soltikof has fallen sick,—and, indeed, practically vanishes from our affairs, at this point ;—Fermor, who has command in the interim, finally consents : “ Our poor siege of Colberg, what an end is come to it ! What an end is the whole Campaign like to have ! Let us at least try this of Berlin, since our hands are empty.” The joy of Daun, of Montalembert, and of everybody in Austrian Court and Camp may be conceived.

Russians to the amount of 20,000, Czernichef Commander ; Tottleben, Second in command, a clever soldier, who knows Berlin : these are to start from Sagan Country, on this fine Expedition, and to push on at the very top of their speed. September 20th, Tottleben, with 3,000 of them as Vanguard, does accordingly cross Oder, at Beuthen in Sagan Country ; and strides forward direct upon Berlin : Lacy, with 15,000, has started from Silesia, we saw how, above a week later (September 29th), but at a still more furious rate of speed. Soltikof,—theoretically Soltikof, but practically Fermor, should the dim German Books be ambiguous to any studious creature,—with the Main Army (which by itself is still a 20,000 odd), moves to Frankfurt, to support the swift Expedition, and be within two marches of it. Here surely is a feasibility ! Berlin, for defence, has nothing but weak palisades ; and of effective garrison 1,200 men.

And feasible, in a sort, this thing did prove ; indisputably delivering Daun from strangulation in the Silesian Mountains ; filling the Gazetteer mind with loud emotion of an empty nature ; and very much affecting many poor people in Berlin and neighbourhood. Making a big Chapter in Berlin Local History ; though compressible to small bulk for strangers, who have no specific sympathies in that locality.

"Friday 3d October 1760, Tottleben, with his hasty Vanguard of 3,000, preceded by hastier rumour, comes circling round Berlin environs ; takes post at the Halle Gate" (west side of the City) ; "summons Rochow" (the same old Commandant of Haddick's time) ;—"requires instant admittance ; ransom of Four million Thalers, and other impossible things. Berlin has been putting itself in some posture ; repairing its palisades, throwing up bits of redoubts in front of the gates ; and, though sounding with alarms and uncertainties, shows a fine spirit of readiness for the emergency. Rochow is still Commandant, the same old Rochow who shrunk so questionably in Haddick's time : but Rochow has no Court to tremble for at present ; Queen and Royal Family, Archives, Principal Ministries, Directorium in a body, went all to Magdeburg again, on the Kunersdorf Disaster last year, and are safe from such insults. The spirit of the population, it appears, even of the rich classes, some of whom are very rich, is extraordinary. Besides Rochow, moreover, there are, by accident, certain Generals in Berlin : Seidlitz and two others, recovering from their Kunersdorf hurts, who step into the breach with heart admirably willing, if with limbs still lame. Then there is old Fieldmarshal Lehwald" (Anti-Russian at Gross Jägersdorf, but dismissed as too old), "who is official Governor of Berlin, who succeeded poor Keith in that honourable office : all these were strong for defence ;—and do not now grudge, great men as they are, to take each his Gate of Berlin, his small redoubt thrown up there, and pass the night and the day in doing his utmost with it.

"Rochow refuses the surrender and the Four-millions pure specie ; and Tottleben, about 3 p.m. in an intermittent way, and about 5 in a constant, begins bombarding,—grenadoes, red-hot balls, what he can,—and continues the same till 3 next morning. Without result to speak of; Seidlitz and Consorts making good counter-play; the poor old 1,200 of Garrison growing almost young again with energy, under their Seidlitzes; and the population zealously coöperating, especially quenching all fires that rose. What greatly contributed withal was the arrival of Prince Eugen overnight. Eugen of Württemberg” (cadet of that bad Duke) “had been engaged driving home the Swedes, but instantly quitted that with a 5,000 he had; and has marched this day,—his Vanguard has, mostly Horse, whom the Foot will follow to-morrow,—a distance of forty miles, on this fine errand. Delicate manœuvring, by these wearied horsemen, to enter Berlin amid uncertain jostlings, under the shine of Russian bombardment; ecstatic welcome to them, when they did get in,—instant subscription for fat oxen to them; a just abundance of beef to them, of generous beer I hope not more than an abundance: phenomena which, with others of the like, could be dwelt on, had we room.¹

“Tottleben, under these omens, found it would not do; wended off towards his Czernichef next morning; eastward again as far as Cöpenik, Prince Eugen attending him in a minatory manner: and, in Berlin for the moment, the bad ten hours were over. For four days more, the fate of things hung dubious; hope soon fading again, but not quite going out till the fifth day. And this, in fact, was mainly all of bombardment that the City had to suffer, though its fate of capture was not to be averted. Is not Tottleben gone? Yes; but Lacy, marching at a rate he never did before (except from Bischofswerda), is arrived in the environs this same evening, cautious but furious. The King is far away; what are Eugen’s 5,000 against these?

“On the other hand, Hülßen, leaving his Saxon affairs to their chance,—which, alas, are about extinct, at any rate; except Wittenberg, all Saxony gone from us!—Hülßen is on winged march hitherward with about 9,000. ‘How would the King come on wings, like an eagle from the Blue, if he were but aware!’ thought everybody, and said. Hülßen did arrive on the 8th; so that there are now 14,000 of us. Hülßen did;—but no King could; the King is just starting (October 4th, the King, on these bad rumours about Saxony, about Berlin, quitted the attempt on Daun ; October 7th, got on march hitherward ; has finished his first march hitherward,—Daun gradually preparing to attend him in the distance),—when Hülßen arrives. And here are all their Lacys, Czernichefs fairly assembled ; five to two of us,—35,000 of them against our 14,000.

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 266-290; Archenholtz, ii. 122-148; Kellen-Ge-schichte, vi. 103-149, 350-352; &c. &c.

“Hülßen and Eugen, drawn out in their skilfullest way, manœuvred about, all this Wednesday 8th ; attempted, did not attempt ; found on candid examination, That 14,000 versus 35,000 ran a great risk of being worsted ; that, in such case, the fate of the City might be still more frightful ; and that, on the whole, their one course was that of withdrawing to Spandau, and leaving poor Berlin to capitulate as it could. Capitulation starts again with Tottleben that same night ; Gotzkowsky, a magnanimous Citizen and Merchant-Prince, stepping forth with beautiful courageous furtherances of every kind ; and it ends better than one could have hoped : Ransom—not of Four-millions pure specie (which would have been 600,000l.) : ‘Gracious Sir, it is beyond our utmost possibility !’—but of One and a Half million in modern Ephraim coin ; with a 30,000l. of douceur-money to the common man, Russian and Austrian, for his forbearance ;—‘for the rest, we are at your Excellency’s mercy, in a manner !’ And so,

“Thursday, October 9th, About 7 in the morning, Tottleben marches in ; exactly six days since he first came circling to the Halle Gate, and began bombarding. Tottleben, knowing Friedrich, knew the value of despatch ; and, they say, was privately no enemy to Berlin, remembering old grateful days here. For Tottleben has himself been in difficulties ; indeed, was never long out of them, during the long stormy life he had. Not a Russian at all ; though I suppose Father of the now Russian Tottlebens whom one hears of ; this one was a poor Saxon Gentleman, Page once to poor old drunken Weissenfels, whom, for a certain fair soul’s sake, we sigh to remember ! Weissenfels dying, Tottleben became a soldier of Polish Majesty’s ;—acceptable soldier, but disagreed with Brühl, for which nobody will like him worse. Disagreed with Brühl ; went into the Dutch service (may have been in Fontenoy for what I know) ; was there till Aix-la-Chapelle, till after Aix-la-Chapelle ; kindly treated, and promoted in the Dutch Army ; but with outlooks, I can fancy, rather dull. Outlooks probably dull in such an element,—when, being a handsome fellow in epaulettes (Major-General, in fact, though poor), he, diligently endeavouring, caught the eye of a Dutch

West-Indian Heiress ; soft creature with no end of money ; whom he privately wedded, and ran away with. To the horror of her appointed Dutch Lover and Friends, who prosecuted the poor Major-General with the utmost rigour, not of Law only. And were like to be the ruin of his fair West-Indian and him ; when Friedrich, about 1754 as I guess, gave him shelter in Berlin ; finding no insupportable objection in what the man had done. The rather, as his Heiress and he were rich. Tottleben gained general favour in Berlin society ; wished, in 1756, to take service with Friedrich on the breaking out of this War. 'A Colonel with me, yes,' said Friedrich. But Tottleben had been Major-General among the Dutch, and could not consent to sink ; had to go among the Russians for a Major-Generality ; and there and elsewhere, for many years coming, had many adventures, mostly troublesome, which shall not be memorable to us here.¹

"Lacy, who, after hovering about in these vicinities for four days, had now actually come up, so soon as Eugen and Hülßen withdrew,—was deeply disgusted at the Terms of Capitulation : angry to find that Tottleben had concluded without him ; and, in fact, flew into open rage at the arrangements Tottleben had made for himself and for others. 'No admittance, except on order from his Excellency !' said the Russian Sentry to Lacy's Austrians : upon which Lacy forced the Gate, and violently marched in. Took lodging, to his own mind, in Friedrichstadt quarter ; and was fearfully truculent upon person and property during his short stay. A scandal to be seen, how his Croats and loose hordes went openly ravaging about, bent on mere housebreaking, street-robbery, and insolent violence. So that Tottleben had fairly to fire upon the vagabonds once or twice, and force, on the unwilling Lacy, some coercion of them within limits. For the three days of his continuance,—it was but three days in all,—Lacy was as the evil genius of Berlin ; Tottleben and his Russians the good. Their discipline was so excellent ; all Cossacks and loose rabble strictly kept out beyond the Walls. To Bachmann, Russian Commandant, the Berliners, on his departure, had gratefully got ready a money-gift of handsome amount : 'By no means,' answered Bachmann : 'your treatment was according to the mildness of our Sovereign Czarina. For myself, if I have served you in anything, the fact that for three days I have been Commandant of the Great Friedrich's Capital is more than a reward to me.'

¹ Sketch of Tottleben's Life, in Rödenbeck, ii. 69-72.

"Tottleben and Lacy, during those three days of Russian and Austrian joint dominion, had a stormy time of it together. 'Destroy the Lager-Haus,' said Lacy: Lager-Haus, where they manufacture their soldiers' uniforms; it is the parent of all cloth manufacturing in Prussia; set up by Friedrich-Wilhelm,—not on free-trade principles. 'The Lager-Haus,' say you? 'I doubt, it is now private property; screened by our Capitulation;'—which it proves to be. 'You shall blow up the Arsenal!' said Lacy, with vehemence and truculence. A noble edifice, as travellers yet know: fancy its fragments flying about among the populous streets, plunging through the roofs of Palaces, and great houses all round. Lacy was inexorable; Tottleben had to send a Russian Party (one wishes they had been Croats) on this sad errand. They proceeded to the Powder Magazine for explosive material, as preliminary; they were rash in handling the gunpowder there, which blew up in their hands; sent itself and all of them into the air; and saved the poor Arsenal: 'Not powder enough now left for our own artillery uses,' urged Tottleben.

"Saxon and Austrian Parties were in the Palaces about,—at Potsdam, at Charlottenburg, Schönhausen (the Queen's), at Friedrichsfeld (the Margraf Karl's), some of whom behaved well, some horribly ill. In Charlottenburg, certain Saxon Brühl-Dragoons, who by their conduct might have been Dragoons of Attila, smashed the furnitures, the doors, cutting the Pictures, much maltreating the poor people, and, what was reckoned still more tragical, overset the poor Polignac Collection of Antiques and Classicalities; not only knocking off noses and arms, but beating them small, lest reparation by cement should be possible. Their Officers, Pirna people, looking quietly on. A scandalous proceeding thought everybody, friend or foe,—especially thought Friedrich; whose indignation at this ruin of Charlottenburg came out in way of reprisal by and by. At Potsdam, on the other hand, Prince Esterhazy, with perhaps Hungarians among his people, behaved like a very Prince; received from the Castellan an Attestation that he had scrupulously respected everything; and took, as souvenir, only one Picture of little value; Prince de Ligne, who was under him, carrying off, still more daintily, one goose-quill, immortal by having been a pen of the Great Friedrich's.

"Tottleben, with no feeling other than Official tempered by Human, was in great contrast with Lacy, and very beneficent to Berlin, during the three days it lay under the tribula, or harrow of War. But the Tutelary Angel of Berlin, then and afterwards for weeks and months, till all scores got settled, was the Gotzkowsky mentioned above." Whom we shall see again helpful at Leipzig ; a man worth marking, in these tumults. " If Tottleben was the temporal Armed King, this Gotzkowsky was the Spiritual King, Papa or Universal Father, armed only with charities, pieties, prayers, ever shiningly attended by self-sacrifices on Gotzkowsky's part ; which averted woes innumerable (Lager-Haus only one of a long list) ; and which 'surpassed all belief,' write the Berlin Magistracy, as if in tears over such heroism. Truly a Prince of Merchants, this Gotzkowsky, not for his vast enterprises, and the mere 1,500 workmen he employs, but for the still greater heart that dwells in him. Had begun as a travelling Pedlar ; used to call at Reinsberg, with female haberdasheries exquisitely chosen ('gallanterie-wares' the Germans call them), for the then Princess Royal ; not unnoticed by Friedrich, who recognised the broad sense, solidity, and great thoughts of the man. Of all which Friedrich has known far more since then, in various branches of Prussian commerce improved by Gotzkowsky's managements. A truly notable Gotzkowsky ; became bankrupt at last, one is sorry to hear ; and died in affliction and neglect,—short of the humblest wages for so much good work done in the world !"¹

"Gotzkowsky's House was like a general store-room for everybody's preciousities ; his time, means, self, were the refuge of all the needy. In Zorndorf time, when this Czernichef" (if all readers can remember), "who is now so supreme,—Czernichef, Soltikof, and others,—had nothing for it but to lodge in the cellars of burnt Cüstrin, Gotzkowsky, with ready money, with advice, with assuagement, had been their Deus ex Machinâ : and now Czernichef remembers it ; and Gotzkowsky, as Papa, has to go with continual prayers, negotiations, counsellings, expedients, and be the refuge of all unjustly suffering men. Berlin has immensities of trade in war-furnitures : the capitals circulating are astonishing to Archenholtz ; million on the back of million ; no such city in Germany, for trade. The desire of the Three-days Lacy government is towards any Lager-Haus ; any mass of wealth, which can be construed as Royal or connected with Royalty. Ephraim and Itzig, mint-masters of that copper coinage ; rolling in foul wealth by the ruin of their neighbours ; ought not these to bleed ? Well,

¹ Preuss, ii. 257, &c. &c. ; Geschichte eines Patriotischen Kaufmanns (Berlin, 1769, by Gotzkowsky himself).

yes,—if anybody; and copiously if you like! I should have said so: but the generous Gotzkowsky said in his heart, 'No?,' and again pleaded and prevailed. Ephraim and Itzig, foul swollen creatures, were not broached at all; and their gratitude was, That, at a future day, Gotzkowsky's day of bankruptcy, they were hardest of any on Gotzkowsky.

Archenholtz and the Books are enthusiastically copious upon Gotzkowsky and his procedures; but we must be silent. This Anecdote only, in regard to Freedom of the Press,—to the so-called 'air we breathe, not having which we die!' Would modern Friends of Progress believe it? Because, in former stages of this War, the Berlin Newspapers have had offensive expressions (scarcely noticeable to the microscope, in our day, and below calculation for smallness) upon the Russian and Austrian Sovereigns or Peoples,—the Able Editors (there are only Two) shall now in person, here in the Market-place of Berlin, actually run the gauntlet for it,—'run the rods (Gassen-laufen)', as the fashion now is;—which is worse than gauntlet, not to speak of the ignominy. That is the barbaric Russian notion: 'Who are you, ill-informed insolent persons, that give a loose to your tongue in that manner? Strip to the waistband, swift! Here is the true career opened for you: on each hand, one hundred sharp rods ranked waiting you; run your courses there,—no hurry more than you like!' The alternative of death, I suppose, was open to these Editors; Roman death at least, and martyrdom for a new Faith (Faith in the loose Tongue), very sacred to the Democratic Ages now at hand. But nobody seems to have thought of it; Editors and Public took the thing as a sorrow incident to this dangerous Profession of the Tongue Loose (or looser than usual); which nobody yet knew to be divine. The Editors made passionate enough lamentation, in the stripped state; one of them, with loud weeping, pulled off his wig, showed ice-gray hair; 'I am in my 68th year!' But it seems nothing would have steaded them, had not Gotzkowsky been busy interceding. By virtue of whom there was pardon privately in readiness: to the ice-gray Editor complete pardon; to the junior, quasi-complete; only a few switches to assert the principle, and dismissed with admonition."¹

The pleasant part of the fact is, that Gotzkowsky's powerful intercessions were thenceforth no farther needed. The same day, Saturday, October 11th, a few hours after this of the Gassen-laufen, news arrived full gallop: "The King is coming!" After which it was beautiful to see how all things got to the gallop; and in a no-time Berlin was itself again. That same evening, Saturday, Lacy took the road, with extraordinary velocity, towards Torgau Country, where the Reichsfolk, in Hülse's absence, are supreme; and, the second evening after, was got 60 miles thitherward. His joint dominion had been of Two days. On the morning of Sunday 12th, went Tottleben, who had businesses, settlements of ransom and the like, before marching. Tottleben, too, made uncommon despatch; marched, as did all these invasive Russians, at the rate of thirty miles a day; their Main Army likewise moving off from Frankfurt to a safer distance. Friedrich was still five marches off; but there seemed not a moment to lose.

¹ Helden-Geschichte, vi 103-148; Rördenbeck, ii. 41-54; Archenholtz, ii. 130-147; Preuss, ubi supra; &c. &c.

The Russian spoilings during the retreat were more horrible than ever: "The gallows gaping for us; and only this one opportunity, if even this!" thought the agitated Cossack to himself. Our poor friend Nüssler had a sad tale to tell of them; 'as who had not? Terror and murder, incendiary fire and other worse unnameable abominations of the Pit. One old Half-pay gentleman, whom I somewhat respect, desperately barricaded himself, amid his domestics and tenancies, Wife and Daughters assisting: "Human Russian Officers can enter here; Cossacks no, but shall kill us first. Not a Cossack till all of us are lying dead!"' And kept his word; the human Russians owning it to be proper.

In Guben Country, "at Gross-Muckro, October 15th," the day after passing Guben, Friedrich first heard for certain, That the Russians had been in Berlin, and also that they were gone, and that all was over. He made two marches farther, —not now direct for Berlin, but direct for Saxony and it;—to Lübben, 50 or 60 miles straight south of Berlin; and halted there some days, to adjust himself for a new sequel. "These are the things," exclaims he, sorrowfully, to D'Argens, "which I have been in dread of since Winter last; this is what gave the dismal tone to my Letters to you. It has required not less than all my philosophy to endure the reverses, the provocations, the outrages, and the whole scene of atrocious things that have come to pass."¹ Friedrich's grief about Berlin we need not paint; though there were murmurs afterwards, "Why did not he start sooner?" which he could not, in strict reason, though aware that these savageries were on march. He had hoped the Eugen-Hülßen appliances, even should all else fail, might keep them at bay. And indeed, in regard to these latter, it turned only on a hair. Montalembert calculating, vowing, on his oath, "Can assure you, M. l'Ambassadeur, puis bien vous assurer comme si j'étais devant Dieu, as if I stood before God,"² that, from first to last, it was my doing; that, but for me, at the very last, the Russians, on sight of Hülßen and Eugen, and no Lacy come, would have marched away!

¹ In Büsching, Beytrage, i. 400, 401, account of their sacking of Nüssler's pleasant home and estate, "Weissensee, near Berlin."

² Archenholtz, ii. 153.

Friedrich's orderings and adjustings, dated Lübben, where his Army rested after this news from Berlin, were manifold; and a good deal still of wrecks from the Berlin Business fell to his share. For instance, one thing he had at once ordered: "Your Bill of a Million-and-half to the Russians, don't pay it, or any part of it! When Bamberg was ransomed, Spring gone a year,—Reich and Kaiser, did they respect our Bill we had on Bamberg? Did not they cancel it, and flatly refuse!" Friedrich is positive on the point, "Reprisal our clear remedy!" But Berlin itself was in alarm, for perhaps another Russian visit; Berlin and Gotzkowsky were humbly positive the other way. Upon which a visit of Gotzkowsky to the Royal Camp: "Merchants' Bills are a sacred thing, Your Majesty!" urged Gotzkowsky. Who, in his zeal for the matter, undertook dangerous visits to the Russian Quarters, and a great deal of trouble, peril and expense, during the weeks following. Magnanimous Gotzkowsky, "in mere bribes to the Russian Officials, spent about 6,000*l.* of his own," for one item. But he had at length convinced his Majesty that Merchants' Bills were a sacred thing, in spite of Bamberg and desecrative individualities; and that this Million-and-half must be paid. Friedrich was struck with Gotzkowsky and his view of the facts. Friedrich, from his own distressed funds, handed to Gotzkowsky the necessary Million-and-half, commanding only profound silence about it; and to Gotzkowsky himself a present of 150,000 thalers (20,000*l.* odd);¹ and so the matter did at last end.

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 199: "22d Oct."

² Montalembert, ii. 108.

It had been a costly business to Berlin, and to the King, and to the poor harried Country. To Berlin, bombardment of ten hours; alarm of discursive siege-work in the environs for five days; foreign yoke for three days; lost money to the amounts above stated; what loss in wounds to body or to peace of mind, or whether any loss that way, nobody has counted. The Berlin people rose to a more than Roman height of temper, testifies D'Argens;² so that perhaps it was a gain. The King's Magazines and War-furnitures about Berlin are wasted utterly,—Arsenal itself not blown up, we well know why;—and much Hunnish ruin in Charlottenburg, with damage to Antiques,—for which latter clause there shall, in a few months, be reprisal, if it please the Powers!

Of all this, Montalembert declares, "Before God, that he, Montalembert, is and was the mainspring." And indeed, Tempelhof, without censure of Montalembert and his vocation, but accurately computing time and circumstance, comes to the same conclusion;—as thus: "October 8th, seeing no Lacy come, Czernichef, had it not been for Montalembert's eloquence, had fixed for returning to Cöpenik: whom cautious Lacy would have been obliged to imitate. Suppose Czernichef had, October 9th, got to Cöpenik,—Eugen and Hülsen remain at Berlin; Czernichef could not have got back thither before the 11th; on the 11th was news of Friedrich's coming; which set all on gallop to the right about." So that really, before God, it seems Montalembert must have the merit of this fine achievement:—the one fruit, so far as I can discover, of his really excellent reasonings, eloquences, patientcies, sown broadcast, four or five long years, on such a field as fine human talent never had before. I declare to you, M. l'Ambassadeur, this excellent vulture-swoop on Berlin, and burning or reburning of the Peasantry of the Mark, is due solely to one poor zealous gentleman!—

¹ Archenholtz, ii. 146.

² Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 195–199: "D'Argens to the King: Berlin, 19th October 1760,"—an interesting Letter of details.

³ Tempelhof, iv. 277.

What was next to follow out of this,—in Torgau neighbourhood, where Daun now stands expectant,—poor M. de Montalembert was far from anticipating; and will be in no haste to claim the merit of before God or man.

CHAPTER V.

BATTLE OF TORGAU.

AFTER Hülsen's fine explosion on the Dürrenberg, August 20th, on the incompetent Reichs Generals, there had followed nothing eminent; new futilities, attemptings and desistings, advancings and recoilings, on the part of the Reich; Hülsen solidly maintaining himself, in defence of his Torgau Magazine and Saxon interests in those regions, against such overwhelming odds, till relief and reinforcement for them and him should arrive; and gaining time, which was all he could aim at in such circumstances. Had the Torgau Magazine been bigger, perhaps Hülsen might have sat there to the end. But having solidly eaten out said Magazine, what could Hülsen do but again move rearward? ¹ Above all, on the alarm from Berlin, which called him off double-quick, things had to go their old road in that quarter. Weak Torgau was taken, weak Wittenberg besieged. Leipzig, Torgau, Wittenberg, all that Country, by the time the Russians left Berlin, was again the Reich's. Eugen and Hülsen, hastening for relief of Wittenberg, the instant Berlin was free, found Wittenberg a heap of ruins, out of which the Prussian garrison, very hunger urging, had issued the day before, as prisoners of war. Nothing more to be done by Eugen, but take post, within reach of Magdeburg and victual, and wait new Order from the King.

¹ Hofbericht von dem Rückzug des General-Lieutenants von Hülsen aus dem Lager bey Torgau (in Seyfarth, Beylagen, ii. 755-784).

The King is very unquestionably coming on ; leaves Lübben thitherward October 20th.¹ With full fixity of purpose as usual ; but with as gloomy an outlook as ever before. Daun, we said, is now arrived in those parts : Daun and the Reich together are near 100,000 ; Daun some 60,000,—Loudon having stayed behind, and gone southward, for a stroke on Kosel (if Goltz will permit, which he won't at all !),—and the Reich 35,000. Saxony is all theirs : cannot they maintain Saxony ? Not a Town or a Magazine now belongs to Friedrich there, and he is in number as 1 to 2. "Maintain Saxony ; indisputably you can !" that is the express Vienna Order, as Friedrich happens to know. The Russians themselves have taken Camp again, and wait visibly, about Landsberg and the Warta Country, till they see Daun certain of executing said Order : upon which they intend, they also, to winter in those Elbe Prussian parts, and conjointly to crush Friedrich into great confinement indeed. Friedrich is aware of this Vienna Order ; which is a kind of comfort in the circumstances. The intentions of the hungry Russians, too, are legible to Friedrich ; and he is much resolved that said Order shall be impossible to Daun. "Were it to be possible, we are landless. Where are our recruits, our magazines, our resources for a new Campaign ? We may as well die, as suffer that to be possible !" Such is Friedrich's fixed view. He says to D'Argens :

"You, as a follower of Epicurus, put a value on life ; as for me, I regard death from the Stoic point of view. Never shall I see the moment that forces me to make a disadvantageous Peace ; no persuasion, no eloquence, shall ever induce me to sign my dishonour. Either I will bury myself under the ruins of my Country, or if that consolation appears too sweet to the Destiny that persecutes me, I shall know how to put an end to my misfortunes when it is impossible to bear them any longer. I have acted, and continue to act, according to that interior voice of conscience and of honour which directs all my steps: my conduct shall be, in every time, conformable to those principles. After having sacrificed my youth to my Father, my ripe years to my Country, I think I have acquired the right to dispose of my old age. I have told you, and I repeat it, Never shall my hand sign a humiliating Peace. Finish this Campaign I certainly will, resolved to dare all, and to try the most desperate things either to succeed or to find a glorious end (fin glorieuse)."¹

¹ Rödénbeck, ii. 35 : in Anonymous of Hamburg (iv. 241-245) Friedrich's Two Marches, towards and from Berlin (7th-17th October, to Lübben ; thence, 20th October—3d November, to Torgau).

Friedrich had marched from Lübben, after three days settling of affairs October 20th; arrived at Jessen, on the Elbe, within wind of Wittenberg, in two days more. "He formed a small magazine at Düben," says Archenholtz; "and was of a velocity, a sharpness,"—like lightning, in a manner! Friedrich is uncommonly dangerous when crushed into a corner, in this way: and Daun knows that he is. Friedrich's manœuvres upon Daun—all readers can anticipate the general type of them. The studious military reader, if England boasts any such, will find punctual detail of them in Tempelhof and the German Books. For our poor objects, here is a Summary which may suffice:

From Lübben, having winded up these bad businesses,—and reinforced Goltz, at Glogau, to a 20,000 for Silesia's sake, to look towards Kosel and Loudon's attempts there,—Friedrich gathered himself into proper concentration; and with all the strength now left to him, pushed forward (20th October) towards Wittenberg, and recovery of those lost Saxon Countries. To Wittenberg from Lübben is some 60 miles;—can be done, nearly, in a couple of days. With the King, after Goltz is furnished, there are about 30,000; Eugen and Hülssen, not idle for their own part, wait in those far Western or Ultra-Wittenberg regions (in and beyond Dessau Country), to join him with their 14,000, when they get signal. Joined with these, he will be 44,000 ; he will then cross Elbe somewhere, probably not where Daun and the Reich imagine, and be in contact with his Problem ; with what a pitch of willingness nobody need be told ! Daun, in Torgau Country, has one of the best positions ; nor is Daun a man for getting flurried.

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 202 ("Kemberg, 28th October 1760," a week and a day before Torgau).

The poor Reichs Army, though it once flattered itself with intending to dispute Friedrich's passage of the Elbe, and did make some detachings and manœuverings that way, on his approach to Wittenberg (October 22d-23d),—took a safer view, on his actual arrival there, on his re-seizure of that ruined place, and dangerous attitude on the right bank below and above. Safer view, on salutary second thoughts ;—and fell back Leipzig-way, southward to Düben, 30 or 40 miles. Whence rapidly to Leipzig itself, 30 or 40 more, on his actually putting down his bridges over Elbe. Friedrich's crossing-place was Schanzhaus, in Dessau Country, between Roslau and Klikau, 12 or 15 miles below Wittenberg ; about midway between Wittenberg and the inflow of the Mulda into Elbe. He crossed, October 26th, no enemy within wind at all ; Daun at Torgau in his inexpugnable Camp, Reichsfolk at Düben, making towards Leipzig at their best pace. And is now wholly between Elbe and Mulda ; nothing but Mulda and the Anhalt Countries and the Halle Country now to rear of him.

At Jonitz, next march southward, he finds the Eugen-Hülssen people ready. We said they had not been idle while waiting signal : of which here is one pretty instance. Eugen's Brother, supreme Reigning Duke of Würtemberg,—whom we parted with at Fulda, last Winter, on sore terms ; but who again, zealous creature, heads his own little Army in French-Austrian service, in still more eclipsed circumstances (" No subsidy at all, this Year, say your august Majesties ? Well, I must do without : a volunteer ; and shall need only what I can make by forced contributions ! " which of course he is diligent to levy wherever possible),—has latterly taken Halle Country in hand, very busy raising contributions there : and Eugen hears, not without interest, that certain regiments or detachments of his, pushed out, are lying here, there, superintending that salutary work,—within clutch, perhaps, of Kleist the Hussar ! Eugen despatches Kleist upon him ; who pounces with his usual fierce felicity upon these people. To such alarm of his poor Serenity and poor Army, that Serenity flies off homeward at once, and out of these Wars altogether ; where he never had other than the reverse of business to be, and where he has played such a farce-tragedy for four years back. Eugen has been heard to speak,—theoretically, and in excited moments,—of “running such a fellow through the body, were one near him :” but it is actually Eugen in person that sends him home from these Wars : which may be counted a not unfraternal or unpatriotic procedure ; being of indisputable benefit to the poor Sovereign man himself, and to everybody concerned with him.

Hearing that Friedrich was across, Daun came westward that same day (October 26th), and planted himself at Eilenburg ; concluding that the Reichsfolk would now be in jeopardy first of all. Which was partly the fact ; and indeed this Daun movement rather accelerated the completion of it. Without this the Reichs Army might have lived another day. It had quitted Düben (which is well ahead of Eilenburg), and gone for Leipzig, at 1 in the morning, so soon as news could reach it, at the gallop, that Friedrich was across. And now Friedrich, seeing Daun out in this manner, judged that a junction was contemplated ; and that one could not be too swift in preventing it. October 29th, with one diligent march, Friedrich posted himself at Düben ; there, between Daun and the Reichsfolk, detached Hülsen with a considerable force to visit these latter in Leipzig itself ; and begun with all diligence forming “a small Magazine in Düben,” Magdeburg and the current of the Elbe being hitherto his only resource in that kind. By the time of Hülsen’s return, this little operation will be well forward, and Daun will have declared himself a little.

Hülsen, evening of October 30th, found Leipzig in considerable emotion, the Reichsfolk taking refuge in it : not the least inclined to stand a push, when Hülsen presented himself. Night of 30th–31st, there was summoning and menacing ; Reich endeavouring to answer in firm style ; but all the while industriously packing up to go. By 5 in the morning, things had come to extremity ;—morning, happily for some of us, was dark mist. But about 5 o’clock, Hülsen (or Hülsen’s Second) coming on with menace of fire and sword upon these poor Reichspeople, found the Reichspeople wholly vanished in the mist. Gone bodily ; in full march for the spurs of the Metal-Mountain Range again ;—concluding, for the fourth time, an extremely contemptible Campaign. Daun, with the King ahead of him, made not the least attempt to help them in their Leipzig difficulty ; but retired to his strong Camp at Torgau ; feels his work to lie there,—as Friedrich perceives of him with some interest.

Hülßen left a little garrison in Leipzig (friend Quintus a part of it);¹ and returned to the King; whose small Magazine at Düben, and other small affairs there,—Magdeburg with boats, and the King with wagons, having been so diligent in carrying grain thither,—are now about completed. From Daun's returning to Torgau, Friedrich infers that the cautious man has got Order from Court to maintain Torgau at all costs,—to risk a battle rather than go. "Good: he shall have one!" thinks Friedrich. And, November 2d, in four columns, marches towards Torgau; to Schilda, that night, which is some seven miles on the southward side of Torgau. The King, himself in the vanguard as usual, has watched with eager questioning eye the courses of Daun's advanced parties, and by what routes they retreat; discerns for certain that Daun has no views upon Düben or our little Magazine; and that the tug of wrestle for Torgau, which is to crown this Campaign into conquest of Saxony, or shatter it into zero like its foregoers on the Austrian part, and will be of death-or-life nature on the Prussian part, ought to ensue tomorrow. Forward, then!

This Camp of Torgau is not a new place to Daun. It was Prince Henri's Camp, last Autumn; where Daun tried all his efforts to no purpose; and though hugely outnumbering the Prince, could make absolutely nothing of it. Nothing, or less; and was flowing back to Dresden and the Bohemian Frontier, uncheered by anything, till that comfortable Maxen Incident turned up. Daun well knows the strength of this position. Torgau and the Block of Hill to West, called Hill of Siptitz:—Hülßen, too, stood here this Summer; not to mention Finck and Wunsch, and their beating the Reichspeople here. A Hill and Post of great strength; not unfamiliar to many Prussians, nor to Friedrich's studious considerations, though his knowledge of it was not personal on all points;—as Tomorrow taught him, somewhat to his cost.

"Tourists, from Weimar and the Thuringian Countries," says a Note-book, sometimes useful to us, "have most likely omitted Rossbach, in their screaming railway flight eastward ; and done little in Leipzig but endeavour to eat dinner, and, still more vainly, to snatch a little sleep in the inhuman dormitories of the Country. Next morning, screaming Dresdenward, they might, especially if military, pause at Oschatz, a stage or two before Meissen, where again are objects of interest. You can look at Hubertsburg, if given that way,—a Royal Schloss, memorable on several grounds ;—at Hubertsburg, and at other features, in the neighbourhood of Oschatz. This done, or this left not done, you strike off leftward, that is northward, in some open vehicle, for survey of Torgau and its vicinities and environs. Not above fifteen miles for you ; a drive singular and pleasant ; time enough to return and be in Dresden for dinner.

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 290.

“Torgau is a fine solid old Town ; Prussian military now abundant in it. In ancient Heathen times, I suppose, it meant the Gau, or District, of Thor ; Capital of that Gau,—part of which, now under Christian or quasi-Christian circumstances, you have just been traversing, with Elbe on your right hand. Innocent rural aspects of Humanity, Boor’s life, Gentry’s life, all the way, not in any holiday equipment ; on the contrary, somewhat unkempt and scraggy, but all the more honest and inoffensive. There is sky, earth, air, and freedom for your own reflexions : a really agreeable kind of Gau ; pleasant, though in part ugly. Large tracts of it are pine-wood, with pleasant Villages and fine arable expanses interspersed. Schilda and many Villages you leave to right and left. Old-fashioned Villages, with their village industries visible around ; labouring each in its kind,—not too fast ; probably with extinct tobacco-pipe hanging over its chin (kalt-rauchend, ‘smoking cold,’ as they phrase it).

“Schilda has an absurd celebrity among the Germans : it is the Gotham of Teutschland ; a fountain of old broad-grins, and homely and hearty rustic banter ; welling up from the serious extinct Ages to our own day ; ‘Schiltbürger’ (Inhabitant of Schilda) meaning still, among all the Teutsch populations, a man of calmly obstinate whims and delusions, of notions altogether contrary to fact, and agreeable to himself only ; resolutely pushing his way through life on those terms : amid horse-laughter, naturally, and general wagging of beards from surrounding mankind. Extinct mirth, not to be growled at or despised, in Ages running to the shallow, which have lost their mirth, and become all one snigger of mock-mirth. For it is observable, the more solemn is your background of dark, the brighter is the play of all human genialities and coruscations on it,—of genial mirth especially, in the hour for mirth. Who the Doctor Bordel of Schilda was, I do not know: but they have had their Bordel, as Gotham had;—probably various Bordels; industrious to pick up those Spiritual fruits of the earth. For the records are still abundant and current; fully more alive than those of Gotham here are.—And yonder, then, is actually Schilda of the absurd fame. A small, cheerful-looking human Village, in its Island among the Woods; you see it lying to the left:—a clean brick-slate congeries, with faint smoke-canopy hanging over it, indicating frugal dinner-kettles on the simmer;—and you remember kindly those good old grinnings, over good Schiltbürgerer, good Wise Men of Gotham, and their learned Chroniclers, and unlearned Peasant Producers, who have contributed a wrinkle of human Fun to the earnest face of Life.

“After Schilda, and before, you traverse long tracts of Pine Forest, all under forest management; with long straight stretches of sandy road (one of which is your own), straight like red tape-strings, intersecting the wide solitudes: dangerous to your topographies,—for the finger-posts are not always there, and human advice you can get none. Nothing but the stripe of blue sky overhead, and the brown one of tape (or sand) under your feet: the trees poor and mean for most part, but so innumerable, and all so silent, watching you all like mute witnesses, mutely whispering together; no voice but their combined whisper or big forest sough audible to you in the world:—on the whole, your solitary ride there proves, unexpectedly, a singular deliverance from the mad railway, and its iron bedlamisms and shrieking discords and precipitances; and is soothing, and pensively welcome, though sad enough, and in outward features ugly enough. No wild boars are now in these woods, no chance of a wolf:”—what concerns us more is, that Friedrich’s columns, on the 3d of November, had to march-up through these long lanes, or tape-stripes of the Torgau Forest; and that one important column, one or more, took the wrong turn at some point, and was dangerously wanting at the expected moment!—

“Torgau itself stands near Elbe; on the shoulder, eastern or Elbe-ward shoulder, of a big mass of Knoll, or broad Height, called of Siptitz, the main Eminence of the Gau. Shoulder, I called it, of this Height of Siptitz; but more properly it is on a continuation, or lower ulterior height dipping into Elbe itself, that Torgau stands. Siptitz Height, nearly a mile from Elbe, drops down into a straggle of ponds ; after which, on a second or final rise, comes Torgau dipping into Elbe. Not a shoulder strictly, but rather a cheek, with neck intervening ;—neck goitry for that matter, or quaggy with ponds ! The old Town stands high enough, but is enlaced on the western and southern side by a set of lakes and quagmires, some of which are still extensive and undrained. The course of the waters hereabouts, and of Elbe itself, has had its intricacies : close to north-west, Torgau is bordered, in a straggling way, by what they call Old Elbe ; which is not now a fluent entity, but a stagnant congeries of dirty waters and morasses. The Hill of Siptitz abuts in that aqueous or quaggy manner ; its fore feet being, as it were, at or in Elbe River, and its sides, to the South and to the North for some distance each way, considerably enveloped in ponds and boggy difficulties.

“ Plenty of water all about, but I suppose mostly of bad quality ; at least Torgau has declined drinking it, and been at the trouble to lay a pipe, or Röhrgraben, several miles long, to bring its culinary water from the western neighbourhoods of Siptitz Height. Along the southern side of Siptitz Height goes leisurely an uncomfortable kind of Brook, called the ‘Röhrgraben (Pipe-Ditch) ;’ the meaning of which unexpected name you find to be, That there is a Service-Pipe laid cunningly at the bottom of this Brook ; lifting the Brook at its pure upper springs, and sending it along, in secret tubular quasi-bottled condition ; leaving the fouler drippings from the neighbourhood to make what ‘brook’ they still can, over its head, and keep it out of harm’s way till Torgau get it. This is called the Röhrgraben, this which comes running through Siptitz Village, all along by the southern base of Siptitz Hill ; to the idle eye, a dirtyish Brook, ending in certain notable Ponds eastward : but to the eye of the inquiring mind, which has pierced deeper, a Tube of rational Water, running into the throats of Torgau, while the so-called Brook disembogues at discretion into the Entefang (Duck-trap), and what Ponds or reedy Puddles there are,”—of which, in poor Wunsch’s fine bit of fighting, last Year, we heard mention. Let readers keep mind of them.

The Hill Siptitz, with this Röhrgraben at the southern basis of it, makes a very main figure in the Battle now imminent. Siptitz Height is, in fact, Daun’s Camp ; where he stands entrenched to the utmost, repeatedly changing his position, the better to sustain Friedrich's expected attacks. It is a blunt broad-backed Elevation, mostly in vineyard, perhaps on the average 200 feet above the general level, and of five or six square miles in area : length, east to west, from Grosswig neighbourhood to the environs of Torgau, may be about three miles ; breadth, south to north, from the Siptitz to the Zinna neighbourhoods, above half that distance. The Height is steepish on the southern side, all along to the south-west angle (which was Daun's left flank in the great Action coming), but swells up with easier ascent on the west, north and other sides. Let the reader try for some conception of its environment and it, as the floor or arena of a great transaction this day.

Daun stands fronting southward along these Siptitz Heights, looking towards Schilda and his dangerous neighbour ; heights, woods, ponds, and inaccessibilities, environing his Position and him. One of the strongest positions imaginable ; which, under Prince Henri, proved inexpugnable enough to some of us. A position not to be attacked on that southern front, nor on either of its flanks :—where can it be attacked ? Impregnable, under Prince Henri in far inferior force : how will you take it from Daun in decidedly superior ? A position not to be attacked at all, most military men would say ;—though One military man, in his extreme necessity, must and will find a way into it.

One fault, the unique military man, intensely pondering, discovers that it has : it is too small for Daun ; not area enough for manœuvring 65,000 men in it ; who will get into confusion if properly dealt with. A most comfortable light-flash, the eureka of this terrible problem. " We will attack it on rear and on front simultaneously ; that is the way to handle it ! " Yes ; simultaneously, though that is difficult, say military judges ; perhaps to Prussians it may be possible. It is the opinion of military judges who have studied the matter, that Friedrich's plan, could it have been perfectly executed, might have got not only victory from Daun, but was capable to fling his big Army and him pellmell upon the Elbe Bridge, that is to say, in such circumstances, into Elbe River, and swallow him bodily at a frightful rate! That fate was spared poor Daun.

Monday, 3d November 1760, at half-past six in the morning, Friedrich is on march for this great enterprise. The march goes northward, in Three Columns, with a Fourth of Baggage; through the woods, on four different roads; roads, or combinations of those intricate sandy avenues already noticed. Northward all of it, at first; but at a certain point ahead (at crossing of the Eilenburg-Torgau Road, namely), the March is to divide itself in two. Half of the force is to strike off rightward there with Ziethen, and to issue on the south side of Siptitz Hill; other half, under Friedrich himself, to continue northward, long miles farther, and then at last bending round, issue,—simultaneously with Ziethen, if possible,—upon Siptitz Hill from the north side. We are about 44,000 strong, against Daun, who is 65,000.

Simultaneously with Ziethen, so far as humanly possible: that is the essential point! Friedrich has taken every pains that it shall be correct, in this and all points; and to take double assurance of hiding it from Daun, he yesternight, in dictating his Orders on the other heads of method, kept entirely to himself this most important Ziethen-portion of the Business. And now, at starting, he has taken Ziethen in his carriage with him a few miles, to explain the thing by word of mouth. At the Eilenburg road, or before it, Ziethen thinks he is clear as to everything; dismounts; takes in hand the mass intrusted to him; and strikes off by that rightward course; "Rightward, Herr Ziethen; rightward till you get to Klitschen, your first considerable island in this sea of wood; at Klitschen strike to the left into the woods again,—your road is called the Butter-Strasse (Butter Street); goes by the north-west side of Siptitz Height; reach Siptitz by the Butter Street, and then do your endeavour!"

With the other Half of his Army, specially with the First Column of it, Friedrich proceeds northward on his own part of the adventure. Three Columns he has, besides the Baggage one: in number about equal to Ziethen's; if perhaps otherwise, rather the chosen Half; about 8,000 grenadier and foot-guard people, with Kleist's Hussars, are Friedrich's own Column. Friedrich's column marches nearest the Daun positions; the Baggage-column farthest; and that latter is to halt, under escort, quite away to left or westward of the disturbance coming; the other Two Columns, Hülsen's of foot, Holstein's mostly of horse, go through intermediate tracks of wood, by roads more or less parallel; and are all, Friedrich's own Column, still more the others, to leave Siptitz several miles to right, and to end, not at Siptitz Height, but several miles past it, and then wheeling round, begin business from the northward or rearward side of Daun, while Ziethen attacks or menaces his front,—simultaneously, if possible. Friedrich's march, hidden all by woods, is more than twice as far as Ziethen's,—some 14 or 15 miles in all; going straight northward 10 miles; thence bending eastward, then southward through woods; to emerge about Neiden, there to cross a Brook (Striebach), and strike home on the north side of Daun. The track of march is in the shape somewhat of a shepherd's crook; the long handle of it, well away from Siptitz, reaches up to Neiden, this is the straight or wooden part of said crook; after which comes the bent, catching, or iron part,—intended for Daun and his fierce flock. Ziethen has hardly above six miles; and ought to be deliberate in his woodlands, till the King's party have time to get round.

The morning, I find, is wet; fourteen miles of march: fancy such a Promenade through the dripping Woods; heavy, toilsome, and with such errand ahead! The delays were considerable; some of them accidental. Vigilant Daun has Detachments watching in these Woods:—a General Ried, who fires cannon and gets off: then a General St. Ignon and the St. Ignon Regiment of Dragoons; who, being between Column First and Column Second, cannot get away; but, after some industry by Kleist and those of Column Two, are caught and pocketed, St. Ignon himself prisoner among the rest. This delay may perhaps be considered profitable: but there were other delays absolutely without profit. For example, that of having difficulties with your artillery-wagons in the wet miry lanes ; that of missing your road, at some turn in the solitary woods,—which latter was the sad chance of Column Third, fatally delaying it for many hours.

Daun, learning by those returned parties from the Woods what the Royal intentions on him are, hastily whirls himself round, so as to front north, and there receive Friedrich : best line northward for Friedrich's behoof ; rear line or second-best will now receive Ziethen or what may come. Daun's arrangements are admitted to be prompt and excellent. Lacy, with his 20,000,—who lay, while Friedrich's attack was expected from south, at Loswig, as advanced guard, east side of the Grosse Teich (supreme pond of all, which is a continuation of the Duck-trap, Entefang, and hangs like a chief goitre on the goitry neck of Torgau),—Lacy is now to draw himself north and westward, and looking into the Entefang over his left shoulder (so to speak), be rearguard against any Ziethen or Prussian party that may come. Daun's baggage is all across the Elbe, all in wagons since yesterday ; three Bridges hanging for Daun and it, in case of adverse accident. Daun likewise brings all or nearly all his cannon to the new front, for Friedrich's behoof : 200 new pieces hither ; Archenholtz says 400 in whole ; certainly such a weight of artillery as never appeared in Battle before. Unless Friedrich's arrangements prove punctual, and his stroke be emphatic, Friedrich may happen to fare badly.

On the latter point, of emphasis, there is no dubiety for Friedrich : but on the former,—things are already past doubt, the wrong way ! For the last hour or so of Friedrich's march, there has been continual storm of cannonade and musketry audible from Ziethen's side :—"Ziethen engaged !" thinks everybody ; and quickens step here, under this marching music from the distance. Which is but a wrong reading or mistake, nothing more : the real phenomenon being as follows : Ziethen punctually got to Klitschen at the due hour ; struck into the Butter Strasse, calculating his paces ; but, on the edge of the Wood, found a small Austrian party, like those in Friedrich's route ; and, pushing into it, the Austrian party replied with cannon before running. Whereupon Ziethen, not knowing how inconsiderable it was, drew out in battle-order; gave it a salvo or two; drove it back on Lacy, in the Duck-trap direction,—a long way east of Butter Street, and Ziethen's real place;—unlucky that he followed it so far! Ziethen followed it; and got into some languid dispute with Lacy: dispute quite distant, languid, on both sides, and consisting mainly of cannon; but lasting in this way many precious hours. This is the phenomenon which friends in the distance read to be, "Ziethen engaged!" Engaged, yes, and alas with what? What Ziethen's degree of blame was, I do not know. Friedrich thought it considerable:—"Stupid, stupid, mien lieber!" which Ziethen never would admit;—and, beyond question, it was of high detriment to Friedrich this day. Such accidents, say military men, are inherent, not to be avoided, in that double form of attack: which may be true, only that Friedrich had no choice left of forms just now.

About noon, Friedrich's Vanguard (Kleist and Hussars), about 1 o'clock Friedrich himself, 7 or 8,000 Grenadiers, emerged from the Woods about Neiden. This Column, which consists of choice troops, is to be Front-line of the Attack. But there is yet no Second Column under Hulsen, still less any Third under Holstein, come in sight: and Ziethen's cannonade is but too audible. Friedrich halts; sends Adjutants to hurry on these Columns;—and rides out reconnoitering, questioning peasants; earnestly surveying Daun's ground and his own. Daun's now right wing well eastward about Zinna, had been Friedrich's intended point of attack; but the ground, out there, proves broken by boggy brooks and remnant stagnancies of the Old Elbe; Friedrich finds he must return into the Wood again; and attack Daun's left. Daun's left is carefully drawn down en potence, or gallows-shape there; and has, within the Wood, carefully built by Prince Henri last year, and extensive Abatis, or complete western wall,—only the north part of which is perhaps now passable, the Austrians having in the cold time used a good deal of it as firewood lately. There, on the north-west corner of Daun, across that weak part of the Abatis, must Friedrich's attack lie. But Friedrich's Columns are still fatally behind, —Holstein, with all the cavalry we have, so precious at present, is wandering by wrong paths; took the wrong turn at some point, and the Adjutant can hardly find him at all, with his precept of "Haste, Haste!"

We may figure Friedrich's humour under these ill omens. Ziethen's cannonade becomes louder and louder; which Friedrich naturally fancies to be death or life to him,—not to mean almost nothing, as it did. "Mein Gott, Ziethen is in action, and I have not my Infantry up!"¹ cried he. And at length decided to attack as he was: Grenadiers in front, the chosen of his Infantry; Ramin's Brigade for second line; and, except about 800 of Kleist, no Cavalry at all. His battalions march out from Neiden hand, through difficult brooks, Streibach and the like, by bridges of Austrian build, which the Austrians are obliged to quit in hurry. The Prussians are as yet perpendicular to Daun, but will wheel rightward, into the Domitsch Wood again; and then form,—parallel to Daun's north-west shoulder; and to Prince Henri's Abatis, which will be their first obstacle in charging. Their obstacles in forming were many and intricate; ground so difficult, for artillery especially: seldom was seen such expertness, such willingness of mind. And seldom lay ahead of men such obstacles after forming! Think only of one fact: Daun, on sight of their intention, has opened 400 pieces of artillery on them, and these go raging and thundering into the hem of the Wood, and to whatever issues from it, now and for hours to come, at a rate of deafening uproar and of sheer deadliness, which no observer can find words for.

Archenholtz, a very young officer of fifteen, who came into it perhaps an hour hence, describes it as a thing surpassable only by Doomsday: clangorous rage of noise risen to the infinite; the boughs of the trees raining down on you, with horrid crash; the Forest, with its echoes, bellowing far and near, and reverberating in universal deathpeal; comparable to the Trump of Doom. Friedrich himself, who is an old hand, said to those about him: "What an infernal fire (höllisches Feuer)! Did you ever hear such a cannonade before? I never."¹ Friedrich is between the Two Lines of his Grenadiers, which is his place during the attack: the first Line of Grenadiers, behind Prince Henri's Abatis, is within 800 yards of Daun; Ramin's Brigade is to rear of the Second Line, as a Reserve. Horse they have none, except the 800 Kleist Hussars; who stand to the left, outside the Wood, fronted by Austrian Horse in hopeless multitude. Artillery they have, in effect, none: their Batteries, hardly to be got across these last woody difficulties of trees growing and trees felled, did rank outside the Wood, on their left; but could do absolutely nothing (gun-carriages and gunners, officers and men, being alike blown away); and when Tempelhof saw them afterwards, they never had been fired at all. The Grenadiers have their muskets, and their hearts and their right-hands.

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 303.

With amazing intrepidity, they, being at length all ready in rank within 800 yards, rush into the throat of this Fire-volcano; in the way commanded,—which is the alone way: such a problem as human bravery seldom had. The Grenadiers plunge forward upon the throat of Daun; but it is into the throat of his iron engines and his tearing billows of cannon-shot that most of them go. Shorn down by the company, by the regiment, in those terrible 800 yards,—then and afterwards. Regiment Stutterheim was nearly all killed and wounded, say the Books. You would fancy it was the fewest of them that ever got to the length of selling their lives to Daun, instead of giving them away to his 400 cannon. But it is not so. The Grenadiers, both Lines of them, still in quantity, did get into contact with Daun. And sold him their lives, hand to hand, at a rate beyond example in such circumstances;—Daun having to hurry up new force in streams upon them; resolute to purchase, though the price, for a long while, rose higher and higher.

At last the 6,000 Grenadiers, being now reduced to the tenth man, had to fall back. Upon which certain Austrian ¹Tempelhof, iv. 304; Archenholtz, ii. 164.

Battalions rushed down in chase, counting it Victory come : but were severely admonished of that mistake ; and driven back by Ramin's people, who accompanied them into their ranks, and again gave Daun a great deal of trouble before he could overpower them. This is Attack First, issuing in failure first : one of the stiffest bits of fighting ever known. Began about 2 in the afternoon ; ended, I should guess, rather after 3.

Daun, by this time, is in considerable disorder of line ; though his 400 fire-throats continue belching ruin, and deafening the world, without abatement. Daun himself had got wounded in the foot or leg during this Attack, but had no time to mind it : a most busy, strong and resolute Daun ; doing his very best. Friedrich, too, was wounded,—nobody will tell me in which of these attacks ;—but I think not now, at least will not speak of it now. What his feelings were, as this Grenadier Attack went on,—a struggle so unequal, but not to be helped, from the delays that had risen,—nobody, himself least of all, records for us : only by this little symptom : Two Grandsons of the Old Dessauer's are Adjutants of his Majesty, and well loved by him ; one of them now at his hand, the other heading his regiment in this charge of Grenadiers. Word comes to Friedrich that this latter one is shot dead. On which, Friedrich, turning to the Brother, and not hiding his emotion as was usual in such moments, said : “ All goes ill today ; my friends are quitting me. I have just heard that your Brother is killed (Tout va mal aujourd'hui ; mes amis me quittent. On vient de m'annoncer la mort de votre frère) ! ” Words which the Anhalt kindred, and the Prussian military public, treasured up with a reverence strange to us. Of Anhalt perhaps some word by and by, at a fitter season.

Shortly after 3, as I reckon the time, Hülsen's Column did arrive : choice troops these too, the Pomeranian Manteuffel, one regiment of them ;—young Archenholtz of Forcade (first Battalion here, second and third are with Ziethen, making vain noise) was in this Column ; came, with the others, winding to the Wood's edge, in such circuits, poor young soul ; rain pouring, if that had been worth notice ; cannon-balls plunging, boughs crashing, such a Todes-Posaune, or Doomsday-Thunder, broken loose :—they did emerge steadily, nevertheless, he says, “like sea-billows or flow of tide, under the smoky hurricane.” Pretty men are here too, Manteuffel Pomerners ; no hearts stouter. With these, and the indignant Remnants which waited for them, a new assault upon Daun is set about. And bursts out, on that same north-west corner of him ; say about half-past 3. The rain is now done, “blown away by the tremendous artillery,” thinks Archenholtz, if that were any matter.

¹ Preuss, ii. 226.

The Attack, supported by a few more Horse (though Column Three still fatally lingers), and, I should hope, by some practicable weight of Field-batteries, is spurred by a grimmer kind of indignation, and is of fiercer spirit than ever. Think how Manteuffel of Foot will blaze out ; and what is the humour of those once-overwhelmed Remnants, now getting air again ! Daun's line is actually broken in this point, his artillery surmounted and become useless ; Daun's potency and north front are reeling backwards, Prussians in possession of their ground. “The field to be ours !” thinks Friedrich, for some time. If indeed Ziethen had been seriously busy on the southern side of things, instead of vaguely cannonading in that manner ! But resolute Daun, with promptitude, calls in his Reserve from Grosswig, calls in whatsoever of disposable force he can gather ; Daun rallies, rushes again on the Prussians in overpowering number ; and, in spite of their most desperate resistance, drives them back, ever back ; and recovers his ground.

A very desperate bout, this Second one ; probably the toughest of the Battle : but the result again is Daun's ; the Prussians palpably obliged to draw back. Friedrich himself got wounded here ;—poor young Archenholtz too, only wounded, not killed, as so many were :—Friedrich's wound was a contusion on the breast ; came of some spent bit of case-shot, deadened farther by a famed pelisse he wore,—“which saved my life,” he said afterwards to Henri. The King himself little regarded it (mentioning it only to Brother Henri, on inquiry and solicitation), during the few weeks it still hung about him. The Books intimate that it struck him to the earth, void of consciousness for some time, to the terror of those about him ; and that he started up, disregarding it altogether in this press of business, and almost as if ashamed of himself, which imposed silence on people's tongues. In military circles there is still, on this latter point, an Anecdote ; which I cannot confirm or deny, but will give for the sake of Berenhorst and his famed Book on the Art of War. Berenhorst,—a natural son of the Old Dessauer's, and evidently enough a chip of the old block, only gone into the articulate-speaking or intellectual form,—was, for the present, an Adjutant or Aide-de-Camp of Friedrich's ; and at this juncture was seen bending over the swooned Friedrich, perhaps with an over-pathos or elaborate something in his expression of countenance ; when Friedrich re-opened his indignant eyes : “ Was macht Er hier ? ” cried Friedrich : “ Er sammle Fuyards ! What have you to do here ? Go and gather runaways ” (be of some real use, can't you) !—which unkind cut struck deep into Berenhorst, they say ; and could never after be eradicated from his gloomy heart. It is certain he became Prince Henri's Adjutant soon after, and that in his Kriegskunst, amidst the clearest orthodox admiration, he manifests, by little touches up and down, a feeling of very fell and pallid quality against the King ; and belongs, in a peculiarly virulent though taciturn way, to the Opposition Party. His Book, next to English Lloyd's (or perhaps superior, for Berenhorst is of much the more cultivated intellect, highly condensed too, though so discursive and far-read, were it not for the vice of perverse diabolic temper), seemed, to a humble outsider like myself, greatly the strongest-headed, most penetrating, and humanly illuminative, I had had to study on that subject. Who the weakest-headed was (perhaps Jomini, among the widely-circulating kind ?), I will not attempt to decide, so great is the crush in that bad direction. To return.

This Second Attack is again a repulse to the indignant Friedrich ; though he still persists in fierce effort to recover himself : and indeed Daun's interior, too, it appears, is all in a whirl of confusion ; his losses too having been enormous :—when, see, here at length, about half-past 4, Sun now down, is the tardy Holstein, with his Cavalry, emerging from the Woods. Comes wending on yonder, half a mile to north of us ; straight eastward or Elbe-ward (according to the order of last night), leaving us and our death-struggles unregarded, as a thing that is not on his tablets, and is no concern of Holstein's. Friedrich halts him, not quite too late ; organises a new and third Attack. Simultaneous universal effort of foot and horse upon Daun's Front ; Holstein himself, who is almost at Zinna by this time, to go upon Daun's right wing. This is Attack Third ; and is of sporadic intermittent nature, in the thickening dusk and darkness ; part of it successful, none of it beaten, but nowhere the success complete. Thus, in the extreme west or leftmost of Friedrich's attack, Spaen Dragoons,—one of the last Horse Regiments of Holstein's Column,—Spaen Dragoons, under their Lieutenant-Colonel Dalwig (a beautiful manœuverer, who has stormed through many fields, from Möllwitz onwards), cut in, with an admired impetuosity, with an audacious skill, upon the Austrian Infantry Regiments there ; broke them to pieces, took two of them in the lump prisoners ; bearded whole torrents of Austrian cavalry rushing up to the rescue,—and brought off their mass of prisoner regiments and six cannon ;—the Austrian rescuers being charged by some new Prussian party, and hunted home again.' "Had these Prussian Horse been on their ground at 2 o'clock, and done as now, it is very evident," says Tempelhof "what the Battle of Torgau had by this time been !"

Near by, too, farther rightwards, if in the bewildering indistinctness I might guess where (but the where is not so important to us), Bayreuth Dragoons, they of the 67 standards at Striegau long since, plunged into the Austrian Battalions at an unsurpassable rate ; tumbled four regiments of them (Regiment Kaiser, Regiment Neipperg,—nobody now cares which four) heels over head, and in a few minutes took the most of them prisoners ; bringing them home too, like Dalwig, through crowds of rescuers. Eastward, again, or Elbe-ward, Holstein has found such intricacies of ground, such boggy depths and rough steepes, his Cavalry could come to no decisive sabering with the Austrian; but stood exchanging shot;—nothing to be done on that right wing of Daun.

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 305.

Daun's left flank, however, does appear, after Three such Attacks, to be at last pretty well ruined: Tempelhof says, "Daun's whole Front Line was tumbled to pieces; disorder had, sympathetically, gone rearward, even in those eastern parts; and on the western and north-western the Prussian Horse Regiments were now standing in its place." But indeed such charging and recharging, pulsing and repulsing, has there been hereabouts for hours past, the rival Hosts have got completely interpenetrated; Austrian parties, or whole regiments, are to rear of those Prussians who stand ranked here, and in victorious posture, as the Night sinks. Night is now sinking on this murderous day: "Nothing more to be made of it; try it again tomorrow!" thinks the King; gives Hülsen charge of bivouacking and rearranging these scattered people; and rides with escort north-westward to Elsnig, north of Neiden, well to rear of this bloody arena,—in a mood of mind which may be figured as gloomy enough.

Daun, too, is home, to Torgau,—I think, a little earlier,—to have his wound dressed, now that the day seems to him secure. Buccow, Daun's second, is killed; Daun's third is an Irish Graf O'Donnell, memorable only on this one occasion; to this O'Donnell, and to Lacy, who is firm on his ground yonder, untouched all day, the charge of matters is left. Which cannot be a difficult one, hopes Daun. Daun, while his wound is dressing, speeds off a courier to Vienna. Courier did enter duly there, with glorious trumpeting postillions, and universal Hep-hep-hurrah; kindling that ardently loyal City into infinite triumph and illumination,—for the space of certain hours following.

Hülsen meanwhile has been doing his best to get into proper bivouac for the morrow; has drawn back those eastward horse regiments, drawn forward the infantry battalions; forward, I think, and well rightward, where, in the daytime, Daun's left flank was. On the whole, it is north-westward that the general Prussian Bivouac for this night is; the extremest south-westernmost portion of it is Infantry, under General Lestwitz; a gallant useful man, who little dreams of becoming famous, this dreary uncertain night.

It is 6 o'clock. Damp dusk has thickened down into utter darkness, on these terms:—when, lo, cannonade and musketade from the south, audible in the Lestwitz-Hülsen quarters: seriously loud; red glow of conflagration visible withal,—some unfortunate Village going up (“Village of Siptitz, think you?”); and need of Hülsen at his fastest! Hülsen, with some readiest Foot Regiments, circling round, makes thitherward; Lestwitz in the van. Let us precede him thither, and explain a little what it was.

Ziethen, who had stood all day making idle noises,—of what a fatal quality we know, if Ziethen did not,—waiting for the King’s appearance, must have been considerably displeased with himself at nightfall, when the King’s fire gradually died out farther and farther north, giving rise to the saddest surmises. Ziethen’s Generals, Saldern and the Leuthen Möllendorf, are full of gloomy impatience, urgent on him to try something. “Push westward, nearer the King? Some stroke at the enemy on their south or south-western side, where we have not molested them all day? No getting across the Röhrgraben on them, says your Excellenz? Siptitz Village, and their Battery there, is on our side of the Röhrgraben:—um Gottes Willen, something, Herr General!” Ziethen does finally assent: draws leftward, westward; unbuckles Saldern’s people upon Siptitz; who go like sharp hounds from the slip; fasten on Siptitz and the Austrians there, with a will; wrench these out, force them to abandon their Battery, and to set Siptitz on fire, while they run out of it. Comfortable bit of success, so far,—were not Siptitz burning, so that we cannot get through. “Through, no: and were we through, is not there the Röhrgraben?” thinks Ziethen, not seeing his way.

How lucky that, at this moment, Möllendorf comes in, with a discovery to westward; discovery of our old friend “the Butter Street,"—it is nothing more,—where Ziethen should have marched this morning : there would he have found a solid road across the Rührgraben, free passage by a bridge between two bits of ponds, at the Schäferei (Sheep-Farm) of Siptitz yonder. "There still," reports Möllendorf, "the solid road is ; unbeset hitherto, except by me Möllendorf !" Thitherward all do hasten, Austrians, Prussians : but the Prussians are beforehand ; Möllendorf is master of the Pass, deploying himself on the other side of it, and Ziethen and everybody hastening through to support him there, and the Austrians making fierce fight in vain. The sound of which has reached Hülsen, and set Lestwitz and him in motion thither.

For the thing is vital, if we knew it. Close ahead of Möllendorf, when he is through this Pass, close on Möllendorf's left, as he wheels round on the attacking Austrians, is the southwest corner of Siptitz Height. South-west corner, highest point of it ; summit and key of all that Battle area ; rules it all, if you get cannon thither. It hangs steepish on the southern side, over the Rührgraben, where this Möllendorf-Austrian fight begins ; but it is beautifully accessible, if you bear round to the west side,—a fine saddle-shaped bit of clear ground there, in shape like the outside or seat of a saddle ; Domitsch Wood the crupper part ; summit of this Height the pommel, only nothing like so steep :—it is here (on the southern saddle-flap, so to speak), gradually mounting westward to the crupper-and-pommel part, that the agony now is.

And here, in utter darkness, illuminated only by the musketry and cannon blazes, there ensued two hours of stiff wrestling in its kind : not the fiercest spasm of all, but the final which decided all. Lestwitz, Hülsen, come sweeping on, led by the sound and the fire ; "beating the Prussian march, they," sharply on all their drums,—Prussian march, rat-tat-tan, sharply through the gloom of Chaos in that manner ; and join themselves, with no mistake made, to Möllendorf's, to Ziethen's, left and the saddle-flap there, and fall on. The night is pitch-dark, says Archenholtz ; you cannot see your hand before you. Old Hülsen's bridle-horses were all shot away, when he heard this alarm, far off: no horse left; and he is old, and has his own bruises. He seated himself on a cannon; and so rides, and arrives; right welcome the sight of him, doubt not! And the Fight rages still for an hour or more.

To an observant Möllendorf, watching about all day, the importance and all-importance of Siptitz Summit, if it can be got, is probably known; to Daun it is alarmingly well known, when he hears of it. Daun is zealously urgent on Lacy, on O'Donnell; who do try what they can; send reinforcements, and the like; but nothing that proves useful. O'Donnell is not the man for such a crisis: Lacy, too, it is remarked, has always been more expert in ducking out of Friedrich's way than in fighting anybody.¹ In fine, such is the total darkness, the difficulty, the uncertainty, most or all of the reinforcements sent halted short, in the belly of the Night, uncertain where; and their poor friends got altogether beaten and driven away.

About 9 at night, all the Austrians are rolling off, eastward, eastward. Prussians goading them forward what they could (firing not quite done till 10); and that ill-important pommel of the saddle is indisputably won. The Austrians settled themselves, in a kind of half-moon shape, close on the suburbs of Torgau; the Prussians in a parallel half-moon posture, some furlongs behind them. The Austrians sat but a short time; not a moment longer than was indispensable. Daun perceives that the key of his ground is gone from him; that he will have to send a second Courier to Vienna. And, above all things, that he must forthwith get across the Elbe and away. Lucky for him that he has Three Bridges (or Four, including the Town Bridge), and that his Baggage is already all across and standing on wheels. With excellent despatch and order Daun winds himself across,—all of him that is still coherent; and indeed, in the distant parts of the Battle-field, wandering Austrian parties were admonished hitherward by the River's voice in the great darkness,—and Daun's loss in prisoners, though great, was less than could have been expected: 8,000 in all.

¹ Archenholtz's sour remark.

Till towards one in the morning, the Prussians, in their half-moon, had not learned what he was doing. About one they pushed into Torgau, and across the Town Bridge; found 26 pontoons,—all the rest packed off except these 26;—and did not follow farther. Lacy retreated by the other or left bank of the River, to guard against attempts from that side. Next day there was pursuit of Lacy; some prisoners and futilities got from him, but nothing of moment: Daun and Lacy joined at Dresden; took post, as usual, behind their inaccessible Plauen Chasms. Sat there, in view of the chasing Prussians, without farther loss than this of Torgau, and of a Campaign gone to water again. What an issue, for the third time!—

On Torgau-field, behind that final Prussian half-moon, there reigned, all night, a confusion which no tongue can express. Poor wounded men by the hundred and the thousand, weltering in their blood, on the cold wet ground; not surgeons or nurses, but merciless predatory sutlers, equal to murder if necessary, waiting on them and on the happier that were dead. “Unutterable!” says Archenholtz; who, though wounded, had crawled or got carried to some village near. The living wandered about in gloom and uncertainty; lucky he whose haversack was still his, and a crust of bread in it: water was a priceless luxury, almost nowhere discoverable. Prussian Generals roved about with their Staff-Officers, seeking to re-form their Battalions; to little purpose. They had grown indignant, in some instances, and were vociferously imperative and minatory; “but in the dark who needed mind them?—they went raving elsewhere, and, for the first time, Prussian word-of-command saw itself futile.” Pitch darkness, bitter cold, ground trampled into mire. On Siptitz Hill there is nothing that will burn: farther back, in the Domitsch Woods, are numerous fine fires, to which Austrians and Prussians alike gather : "Peace and truce between us ; tomorrow morning, we will see which are prisoners, which are captors." So pass the wild hours, all hearts longing for the dawn, and what decision it will bring.

¹ Tempelhof, iv. 291-318; Archenholtz, ii. 159-174; Retzow, ii. 299 et seq.; Umständliche Beschreibung des &c. (in Seyfarth, Beylagen, ii. 823-848): in Helden-Geschichte, or in Anonymous of Hamburg (iv. 245-300), the Daun Despatches, the Lists, &c.

Friedrich, at Elsnig, found every hut full of wounded, and their surgeries, and miseries silent or loud. He himself took shelter in the little Church ; passed the night there. Busy about many things ;—"using the altar," it seems, "by way of writing-table" (self or secretaries kneeling, shall we fancy, on those new terms ?), "and the stairs of it as seat." Of the final Ziethen-Lestwitz effort he would scarcely hear the musketry or cannonade, being so far away from it. At what hour, or from whom first, he learned that the Battle of Torgau had become Victory in the night-time, I know not : the Anecdote-Books send him out in his cloak, wandering up and down before daybreak ; standing by the soldiers' fires ; and at length, among the Woods, in the faint incipency of dawn, meeting a Shadow which proves to be Ziethen himself in the body, with embraces and congratulations :—evidently mythical, though dramatic. Reach him the news soon did ; and surely none could be welcomer. Headquarters change from the altar-steps in Elsnig Church to secular rooms in Torgau. Ziethen has already sped forth on the skirts of Lacy ; whole Army follows next day ; and, on the War-theatre it is, on the sudden, a total change of scene. Conceivable to readers without the details.

Hopes there were of getting back Dresden itself ; but that, on closer view, proved unattemptable. Daun kept his Plauen Chasm, his few square miles of ground beyond ; the rest of Saxony was Friedrich's, as heretofore. Loudon had tried hard on Kosel for a week ; storming once, and a second time, very fiercely, Goltz being now near ; but could make nothing of it ; and, on wind of Goltz, went his way.¹ The Russians, on sound of Torgau, shouldered arms, and made for Poland. Daun, for his own share, went to Vienna this Winter ; in need of surgery, and other things. The population there is rather disposed to be grumbly on its once heroic Fabius ; wishes the Fabius were a little less cunctatory. But Imperial Majesty herself, one is proud to relate, drove out, in Old Roman spirit, some miles, to meet him, her defeated ever-honoured Daun, and to inquire graciously about his health, which is so important to the State.¹

¹ Hofbericht von der Belagerung von Kosel, im October 1760 (Seyfarth, Bejagen, II. 798-1004) : began, "October 21st ;" ended, "at daybreak, October 27th."

Torgau was Daun's last battle : Daun's last Battle ; and, what is more to the joy of readers and their Editor here, was Friedrich's last,—so that the remaining Two Campaigns may fairly be condensed to an extreme degree ; and a few Chapters more will deliver us altogether from this painful element!—

Daun lost at Torgau, by his own account, “about 11,000 men,”—should have said, according to Tempelhof, and even to neutral persons, “above 12,000 killed and wounded, plus 8,000 prisoners, 45 cannon, 29 flags, 1 standard (or horse-flag),”² which brings him to at least 20,000 minus ;—the Prussian loss, heavy enough too, being, by Tempelhof's admission, “between 13 and 14,000, of whom 4,000 prisoners.” The sore loss, not so computable in arithmetic,—but less sore to Daun, perhaps, than to most people,—is that of being beaten, and having one's Campaign reduced to water again. No Conquest of Saxony, any more than of Silesia, possible to Daun, this Year. In Silesia, thanks to Loudon, small thanks to Loudon's Chief, they have got Glatz : Kosel they could not get ; fiery Loudon himself stormed and blazed to no purpose there, and had to hurry home on sight of Goltz and relief. Glatz is the net sum-total. Daun knows all this ; but in a stoical arithmetical manner, and refuses to be flurried by it.

Friedrich, as we said, had hoped something might be done in Saxony on the defeated Daun ;—perhaps Dresden itself be got back from him, and his Army altogether sent to winter in Bohemia again ? But it proved otherwise. Daun showed not the least disposition to quit his Plauen Chasm, or fall into discouragement : and after some weeks of diligent trial, on Friedrich's part, and much running about in those central and Hillward parts, Friedrich found he would have to be content with his former allotment of Saxon territory, and to leave the Austrians quiet in theirs. Took winter-quarters accordingly, and let the Enemy take. Cantoned himself, in that Meissen-Freyberg Country, in front of the Austrians and their impassable Plauens and Chasms ;—pretty much as in the past Year, only that the Two Armies lay at a greater distance, and were more peaceable, as if by mutual consent.

¹ Archenholtz, ii. 179.

² Tempelhof, iv. 213 ; Kanaler, p. 726.

Headquarter of the King is Leipzig ; where the King did not arrive till December 8th,—such adjusting and arranging has he had, and incessant running to and fro. He lived in the “Apel House, New Neumarkt, No. 16 ;” the same he had occupied in 1757, in the Rossbach time. “Ach ! how lean your Majesty has grown !” said the Mistress of it, at sight of him again (mythically, I should fancy, though it is in the Anecdote-Books). “Lean, ja wohl,” answered he : “and what wonder, with Three Women” (Theresa, Czarina, Pompadour) “hanging on the throat of me all this while !” But we propose to look in upon him ourselves, in this Apel House, on more authentic terms by and by. Read, meanwhile, these Two bits of Autograph, thrown off incidentally, at different places, in the previous busy journeyings over Meissen-Freyberg Country :

1. Friedrich to Marquis D'Argens (at Berlin).

“Meissen, 10th November 1760.

* * “I drove the enemy to the Gates of Dresden ; they occupy their Camp of last Year ; all my skill is not enough to dislodge them,”—(Chasm of Plauen, “a place impregnable, were it garrisoned by chimney-sweeps,” says the King once). “We have saved our reputation by the Day of Torgau : but don't imagine our enemies are so disheartened as to desire Peace. Duke Ferdinand's affairs are not in a good way” (missed Wesel, of which presently :—and, alas also, George II. died, this day gone a fortnight, which is far worse for us, if we knew it !)—“I fear the French will preserve through Winter the advantages they gained during the Campaign.

¹ Rodenbeck. ii. 65.

"In a word, I see all black, as if I were at the bottom of a tomb. Have some compassion on the situation I am in ; conceive that I disguise nothing from you, and yet that I do not detail to you all my embarrassments, my apprehensions and troubles. Adieu, dear Marquis ; write to me sometimes,—don't forget a poor devil, who curses ten times a day his fatal existence, and could wish he already were in those Silent Countries from which nobody returns with news."¹

2. The Second, of different complexion, is a still more interesting little Autograph, date elsewhere, farther on, in those wanderings. Madame Camas, Widow of the Colonel Camas whom we knew twenty years ago, is "Queen's Ober-Hofmeisterinn (Lady in Chief),"—to whom the King's Letters are always pretty :

Friedrich to Madame Camas (at Magdeburg, with the Queen's Majesty).

"Neustadt, 18th November 1760.

"I am exact in answering, and eager to satisfy you" (in that matter of the porcelain) : "you shall have a breakfast-set, my good Mamma ; six coffee-cups, very pretty, well diapered, and tricked out with all the little embellishments which increase their value. On account of some pieces which they are adding to the set, you will have to wait a few days ; but I flatter myself this delay will contribute to your satisfaction, and produce for you a toy that will give you pleasure, and make you remember your old Adorer. It is curious how old people's habits agree. For four years past I have given up suppers, as incompatible with the Trade I am obliged to follow ; and in marching days, my dinner consists of a cup of chocolate.

"We hurried off, like fools, quite inflated with our Victory, to try if we could not chase the Austrians out of Dresden : they made a mockery of us from the tops of their mountains. So I have withdrawn, like a bad little boy, to conceal myself, out of spite, in one of the wretchedest villages in Saxony. And here the first thing will be to drive the Circle gentlemen" (Reichs Army) "out of Freyberg into Chemnitz, and get ourselves room to quarter and something to live upon. It is, I swear to you, a dog of a life" (or even a she-dog, chienne de vie), "the like of which nobody but Don Quixote ever led before me. All this tumbling and toiling, and bother and confusion that never ceases, has made me so old that you would scarcely know me again. On the right side of my head the hair is all gray; my teeth break and fall out; I have got my face wrinkled like the falbalas of a petticoat; my back bent like a fiddle-bow; and spirit sad and downcast like a monk of La Trappe. I forewarn you of all this, lest, in case we should meet again in flesh and bone, you might feel yourself too violently shocked by my appearance. There remains to me nothing but the heart,—which has undergone no change, and which will preserve, so long as I breathe, its feelings of esteem and of tender friendship for my good Mamma. Adieu."—To which add only this on Duke Ferdinand, "whose affairs," we just heard, "are not in a good way:"

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 204, 5.

Fight of Kloster Kampen (Night of October 15th–16th); Wesel not to be had by Duke Ferdinand.

After Warburg (July 31st, while Friedrich was on the eve of crossing Elbe on new adventures, Dresden Siege having failed him), Duke Ferdinand made no figure to the Gazetteers; fought no Battle farther; and has had a Campaign, which is honourable only to judges of a higher than the Gazetteer sort.

By Warburg Ferdinand had got the Diemel; on the north bank of which he spread himself out, impassable to Broglie, who lay trying on the opposite bank:—"No Hanover by this road." Broglie thereupon drew back a little; pushed out circuitously from his right wing, which reaches far eastward of Ferdinand, a considerable Brigade,—circuitously, round by the Weser-Fulda Country, and beyond the embouchure of Diemel,—to try it by that method. Got actually a few miles into Hanoverian territory, by that method; laid hold of Göttingen, also of Münden, which secures a road thither: and at Göttingen there, "ever since August 4th," Broglie has been throwing up works and shooting out hussar parties to a good distance;—intending, it would seem, to maintain himself, and to be mischievous, in that post. Would, in fact, fain entice Ferdinand across the Weser, to help Göttingen. "Across Weser, yes;—and so leave Broglie free to take Lippstadt from me, as he might after a short siege," thinks Ferdinand always; "which would beautifully shorten Broglie's communication" (quite direct then, and without interruption, all the way to Wesel), "and make Hanover itself, Hanover and Brunswick, the central Seat of War!" Which Ferdinand, grieved as he is for Göttingen, will by no means consent to.

Ferdinand, strong only as one to two, cannot hinder Broglio, though he tries variously; and is much at a loss, seeing Broglio irrepressibly busy this way, all through August and on into September;—has heard, however, from Wesel, through secret partisans there, That Wesel, considered altogether out of risk, is left in a very weak condition; weak in garrison, weak even in gunners. Reflecting upon which, in his difficulties, Ferdinand asks himself, "A sudden stroke at Wesel, 200 miles away, might it not astonish Broglio, who is so busy on us just here?"—and, September 22d, despatches the Hereditary Prince on that errand. A man likely for it, if there be one in the world:—unable to do it, however, as the issue told. Here is what I find noted.

"September 22d, the Erbprinz, with a chosen Corps of 15,000, mostly English, left these Diemel regions towards Wesel, at his speediest. September 29th, Erbprinz and vanguard, Corps rapidly following, are got to Dorsten, within 20 miles of Wesel. A most swift Erbprinz; likely for such work. And it is thought by judges, Had he had either siege-artillery or scaling apparatus, he might really have attacked Wesel with good chance upon it. But he has not even a ladder ready, much less a siege-gun. Siege-guns are at Bielefeld" (come from Bremen, I suppose, by English boating, up the Weser so far); "but that is six-score miles of wheel-carriage; roads bad, and threatening to be worse, as it is equinoctial weather. There is nothing for it but to wait for those guns.

"The Erbprinz, hopefully waiting, does his endeavour in the interim; throws a bridge over the Rhine, pounces upon Cleve garrison (prisoners, with their furnitures), pounces upon this and that; 'spreads terror' on the French thereabouts 'up to Düsseldorf and Köln,'—and on Broglio himself, so far off, the due astonishment. 'Wesel to be snatched,—ye Heavens! Our Netherlands road cut off: Düsseldorf, Köln, our Rhine Magazines, all and sundry, fallen to the hawks,—who, the lighter-winged of them, might pay visits in France itself!' Broglio has to suspend his Göttingen operations, and detach Marquis de Castries with (say ultimately, for Castries is to grow and gather by the road) 35,000 to relieve Wesel. Castries marches double-quick; weather very rainy:—arrives in those parts, October 13th;—hardly a gun from Bielefeld come to hand yet, Erbprinz merely filling men with terror. And so,

"October 14th, after two weeks and a day, the Hereditary Prince sees, not guns from Bielefeld, but Castries pushing into Wesel a 7,000 of additional garrison,—and the Enterprise on Wesel grown impossible. Impossible, and probably far more; Castries in a condition to devour us, if he prove sharp. It behoves the Hereditary Prince to be himself sharp;—which he undoubtedly was, in this sharp crisis. Next day, our Erbprinz, taking survey of Castries in his strong ground of Kloster Kampen, decides, like a gallant fellow, to attack him;—and straightway does it. Breaks, that same night (October 15th–16th, 1760), stealthily, through woods and with precautions, into Castries' Post;—intending surprisal, and mere ruin to Castries. And there ensued, not the Surprisal as it turned out, but the Battle of Kloster Kampen; which again proved unsuccessful, or only half successful, to the Hereditary Prince. A many-winged, intricate Night-Battle; to be read of in Books. This is where the Chevalier D'Assas, he or Somebody, gave the alarm to the Castries people at the expense of his life. "À moi, Auvergne, Ho, Auvergne!" shouted D'Assas (if it was D'Assas at all), when the stealthy English came upon him; who was at once cut down.¹ It is certain, Auvergne gave fire; awoke Castries bodily; and saved him from what was otherwise inevitable. Surprise now there was none farther; but a complex Fight, managed in the darkness with uncommon obstinacy; ending in withdrawal of the Erbprinz, as from a thing that could not be done. His loss in killed, wounded, and prisoners, was 1,638; that of Castries, by his own counting, 2,036 : but Kloster Kampen, in the wide-awake state, could not be won.

¹ Preuss (ii. 270 n.) asserts it to be proved, in "Miscellen aus den neuesten ausländischen Litteratur (1824, No. 3, p. 409)," a Book which none of us ever saw, "That the real hero" (equal to a Roman Decius or more) was not Captain D'Assas, of the Regiment Auvergne, but a poor Private Soldier of it, called Dubois!—Is not this a strange turn, after such be-pensioning, be-painting, singing and celebrating, as rose upon poor D'Assas, or the Family of D'Assas, twenty years afterwards (1777–1790)!—Both Dubois and D'Assas, I conclude, lay among the slain at Kloster-Kampen, silent they forever:—and a painful doubt does rise, As to the miraculous operation of Posthumous Rumour and Wonder; and Whether there was any "miracle of heroism," or other miracle at all, and not rather a poor nocturnal accident,—poor sentry in the edge of the wood, shrieking out, on apparition of the stealthy English, "Ho, Auvergne, help!" probably firing withal; and getting killed in consequence? Non nostrum est.

"During the Fight, the Erbprinz's Rhine-Bridge had burst in two : his ammunition was running short ;—and, it would seem, there is no retreat, either ! The Erbprinz put a bold face on the matter, stood to Castries in a threatening attitude ; manœuvred skillfully for two days longer, face still to Castries, till the Bridge was got mended ; then, night of October 18th–19th, crossed to his own side ; gathered up his goods : and at a deliberate pace marched home, on those terms ;—doing some useful fighting by the road."

Had lost nothing, say his admirers, "but one cannon, which burst." One burst cannon left on the field of Kloster Kampen ;—but also, as we see, his errand along with it ; and 1,600 good fighters lost and burst : which was more important ! Criticisms there were on it in England, perhaps of the unwise sort generally ; sorrow in the highest quarter. "An unaccountable expedition," Walpole calls it, "on which Prince Ferdinand suddenly dispatched his Nephew, at the head of a considerable force, towards the frontiers of Holland,"—merely to see the country there ?—"which occasioned much solicitude in England, as the Main Army, already unequal to that of France, was thus rendered much weaker. King George felt it with much anxiety." * An unaccountable Enterprise, my poor Gazetteer friends,—very evidently an unsuccessful one, so far as Wesel went. Many English fallen in it, too : "the English showed here again a ganz ausnehmende Tapferkeit," says Mauvillon ; and probably their share of the loss was proportionate.

Clearly enough there is no Wesel to be had. Neither could Broglio, though disturbed in his Göttingen fortifyings and operations, be ejected out of Göttingen. Ferdinand, on failure of Wesel, himself marched to Göttingen, and tried for some days ; but found he could not, in such weather, tear out that firmly-rooted French Post, but must be content to "mask it," for the present ; and, this done, withdrew (December 13th) to his winter-quarters near by, as did Broglio to his,—about the time Friedrich and Daun had finally settled in theirs.

Ferdinand's Campaigns henceforth, which turn all on the defence of Hanover, are highly recommended to professional

* Mauvillon, ii. 120–129 ; Tempelhof, ii. 325–332.

† Walpole's George Second, iii. 299.

readers ; but, to the laic sort, do not prove interesting in proportion to the trouble. In fact, the huge War henceforth begins everywhere, or everywhere except in Pitt's department of it, to burn lower, like a lamp with the oil getting done ; and has less of brilliancy than formerly. "Let us try for Hanover," the Belleisles, Choiseuls, and wise French heads had said to themselves : "Canada, India, everything is lost ; but were dear Hanover well in our clutch, Hanover would be a remedy for many things !" Through the remaining Campaigns, as in this now done, that is their fixed plan. Ferdinand, by unwearied effort, succeeded in defending Hanover,—nothing of it but that inconsiderable slice or skirt round Göttingen, which they kept long, could ever be got by the French. Ferdinand defended Hanover ; and wore out annually the big French Armies which were missioned thither, as in the spasm of an expiring last effort by this poor hag-ridden France,—at an expense to her, say, of 50,000 men per year. Which was good service on Ferdinand's part ; but done less and less in the shining or universally notable way.

So that with him too we are henceforth, thank Heaven, permitted and even bound to be brief. Hardly above two Battles more from him, if even two :—and mostly the wearied Reader's imagination left to conceive for itself those intricate strategies, and endless manœuverings on the Diemel and the Dill, on the Ohm River and the Schwalm and the Lippe, or wherever they may be, with small help from a wearied Editor !—

CHAPTER VI.

WINTER-QUARTERS 1760-61.

A MELANCHOLY little event, which afterwards proved unexpectedly unfortunate for Friedrich, had happened in England, ten days before the Battle of Torgau. Saturday, 25th October 1760, George II., poor old gentleman, suddenly died. He was in his 77th year ; feeble, but not feebler than usual,—unless, perhaps, the unaccountable news from Kloster

Kampen may have been too agitating to the dim old mind? On the Monday of this week he had, "from a tent in Hyde Park," presided at a Review of dragoons; and on Thursday, as his Coldstream Guards were on march for Portsmouth and foreign service, "was in his Portico at Kensington to see them pass;"—full of zeal always in regard to military matters, and to this War in particular. Saturday, by sunrise he was on foot; took his cup of chocolate; inquired about the wind, and the chances of mails arriving; opened his window, said he would have a turn in the Gardens, the morning being so fine. It was now between 7 and 8. The Valet then withdrew with the chocolate apparatus; but had hardly shut the door, when he heard a deep sigh, and fall of something,—“billet of wood from the fire?” thought he;—upon which, hurrying back, he found it was the King, who had dropt from his seat, “as if in attempting to ring the bell.” King said faintly, “Call Amelia,” and instantly died. Poor deaf Amelia (Friedrich’s old love, now grown old and deaf) listened wildly for some faint sound from those lips now mute forever. George Second was no more; his grandson George Third was now King.¹

Intrinsically taken, this seemed no very great event for Friedrich, for Pitt, for England or mankind: but it proved otherwise. The merit of this poor King deceased, who had led his Nation stumbling among the chimney-pots at such a rate in these mad German Wars for Twenty Years past, was, That he did now stand loyal to the Enterprise, now when it had become sane indeed; now when the Nation was broad awake, and a Captain had risen to guide it out of that perilous posture, into never-expected victory and triumph! Poor old George had stood by his Pitt, by his Ferdinand, with a perfect loyalty at all turns; and been devoted, heart and soul and breeches-pocket, to completely beating Bourbon’s oppressive ideas out Bourbon’s head. A little fact, but how important, then and there! Under the Successor, all this may be different:—ghastly beings, Old Tutors, Favourites, Mother’s-Favourites, flit, as yet invisible, on the new back-stairs;—should

¹ Old Newspapers (in Gentleman’s Magazine, xxx. 436-88).

Bute and Company get into the fore-ground, people will then know how important it was. Walpole says :

"The Yorkes" (Ex-Chancellor Hardwicke people) "had long distasted this War:" yes, and been painfully obliged to hold their tongues: "but now," within a month or so of the old King's death, "there was published, under Lord Hardwicke's countenance, a Tract setting forth the burden and ill-policy of our German measures. It was called Considerations on the German War; was ably written, and changed many men's minds." This is the famous "Mauduit Pamphlet:" first of those small stones, from the sling of Opposition not obliged to be dormant, which are now beginning to rattle on Pitt's Olympian Dwelling-place,—high really as Olympus, in comparison with others of the kind, but which unluckily is made of glass like the rest of them! The slinger of this first resounding little missile, Walpole informs us, was "one Mauduit, formerly a Dissenting Teacher,"—son of a Dissenting Minister in Bermondsey, I hear, and perhaps himself once a Preacher, but at present concerned with Factorage of Wool on the great scale; got soon afterwards promoted to be Head of the Customhouse in Southampton, so lovely did he seem to Bute and Company. "How agreeable his politics were to the interior of the Court, soon appeared by a place" (Southampton Customhouse) "being bestowed on him by Lord Bute." A fortunate Mauduit, yet a stupidly tragical; had such a destiny in English History! Hear Walpole a little farther, on Mauduit, and on other things then resonant to Arlington Street in a way of their own.

"To Sir Horace Mann" (at Florence):

"November 14th, 1760" (tenth night after Torgau). * *

"We are all in guns and bonfires for an unexpected victory of the King of Prussia over Daun; but as no particulars are yet arrived, there are doubters."

"December 5th, 1760. I have received the samples of brocade." * * "I shall send you a curious Pamphlet, the only work I almost ever knew that changed the opinions of many. It is called Considerations on the Present German War,¹ and is written by a wholesale Woollen-Draper" (connected with Wool, in some way; "Factor at Blackwell Hall," if that mean Draper :—and a growing man ever after ; came to be “Agent for Massachusetts,” on the Boston-Tea occasion, and again did Tracts ; was “President of the”—in short, was a conspicuous Vice-president, so let us define him, of The general Anti-Penalty or Life-made-Soft Association, with Cause of civil and religious Liberty all over the World, and such like ; and a Mauduit comfortably resonant in that way till he died¹) ; “but the materials are supposed to be furnished by the faction of the Yorkes. The confirmation of the King of Prussia’s victory near Torgau does not prevent the disciples of the Pamphlet from thinking that the best thing which could happen for us would be to have that Monarch’s head shot off.” (Hear, hear !)—

¹ "London: Printed for John Wilkie, at the Bible, in St. Paul's Churchyard, 1761," adds my poor Copy (a frugal 12mo, of pp. 144), not adding of what edition.

“There are Letters from the Hague” (what foolish Letters do fly about, my friend !), “that say Daun is dead of his wounds. If he is, I shall begin to believe that the King of Prussia will end successfully at last.” (Oh !) “It has been the fashion to cry down Daun ; but, as much as the King of Prussia may admire himself” (does immensely, according to our Selwyn informations), “I dare say he would have been glad to be matched with one much more like himself than one so opposite as the Marshal.”

“January 2d, 1761. The German War is not so popular as you imagine, either in the Closet or in the Nation.” (Enough, enough.)

The Mauduit Pamphlet, which then produced such an effect, is still to be met on old Collections and on Book-stalls ; but produces little save weariness to a modern reader. “Han-over not in real danger,” argues he ; “if the French had it, would not they, all Europe ordering them, have to give it up again ?” Give it up,—gratis, or in return for Canada and Pondichery, Mauduit does not say. Which is an important omission ! But Mauduit’s grand argument is that of expense ; frightful outlay of money, aggravated by ditto mismanagement of same.

A War highly expensive, he says—(and the truth is, Pitt was never stingy of money : “Nearly the one thing we have in any plenty ; be frank in use of that, in an Enterprise so ill provided otherwise, and involving life and death!" thinks Pitt);—"dreadfully expensive," urges Mauduit, and gives some instances of Commissariat moneys signally wasted,—not by Pitt, but by the stupidity of Pitt's War Offices, Commissariat Offices, Offices of all kinds ; not to be cured at once by any Pitt:—How magazines of hay were shipped and re-shipped, carried hither, thither, up this river, down that (nobody knowing where the war-horses would be that were to eat it) ; till at length, when it had reached almost the value of bohea tea, the right place of it was found to be Emden (nearest to Britain from the first, had one but known), and not a horse would now taste it, so spoiled was the article ; all horses snorted at it, as they would have done at Bohea, never so expensive.¹ These things are incident to British warfare ; also to Swedish, and to all warfares that have their War Offices in an imaginary state,—state much to be abhorred by every sane creature ; but not to be mended all at once by the noblest of men, into whose hands they are suddenly thrust for saving his Nation. Conflagration to be quenched ; and your buckets all in hideous leakage, like buckets of the Danaïdes :—your one course is, ply them, pour with them, such as they are.

¹ Chalmers, Bing. Dictionary ; Nichols, Literary Anecdotes ; &c. &c

² Walpole, Letters to Sir Horace Mann (Lond. 1843), i. 6, 7.

Mauduit points out farther the enormous fortunes realised by a swindling set of Army-Furnishers, Hebrews mainly, and unbeautiful to look on. Alas, yes ; this too is a thing incident to the case ; and in a degree to all such cases, and situations of sudden crisis ;—have not we seen Jew Ephraim growing rich by the copper money even of a Friedrich? Christian Protestants there are, withal, playing the same game on a larger scale. Herr Schimmelmänn ("Mouldy-man") the Dane, for instance,—Dane or Holsteiner,—is coining false money for a Duke of Holstein-Plön, who has not a Seven-Years War on his hands. Diligently coining, this Mouldy Individual ; still more successfully, is trading in Friedrich's Meissen China (bought in the cheapest market, sold in the dearest) ; has at ¹ Mauduit (towards the end) has a story of that tenor,—particulars not worth verifying.

Hamburg his "Auction of Meissen Porcelain," steadily going on, as a new commercial institution of that City ;—and, in short, by assiduously labouring in such harvest-fields, gathers a colossal fortune, 100,000*l.*, 300,000*l.*, or I will not remember what. Gets "ennobled," furthermore, by a Danish Government prompt to recognise human merit ; Elephant Order, Dannebrog Order ; no Order good enough for this Mouldyman of merit ;¹—and is, so far as I know, begetting "Nobles," that is to say, Vice-Kings and monitory Exemplars, for the Danish People, to this day. Let us shut down the iron lid on all that.

Mauduit's Pamphlet, if it raised in the abhorrent unthinking English mind some vague notion, as probably it did, that Pitt was responsible for these things, or was in a sort the cause or author of them, might produce some effect against him. "What a splash is this you are making, you Great Commoner ; wetting everybody's feet,—as our Mauduit proves ;—while the Conflagration seems to be going out, if you let it alone !" For the heads of men resemble—My friend, I will not tell you what they, in multitudinous instances, resemble.

But thus has woollen Mauduit, from his private camp ("Clement's Lane, Lombard Street," say the Dictionaries), shot, at a very high object, what pigeon's-egg or small pebble he had ; the first of many such that took that aim ; with weak though loud-sounding impact, but with results—results on King Friedrich in particular, which were stronger than the Cannonade of Torgau ! As will be seen. For within year and day, Mauduit and Company making their noises from without, and the Butes and Hardwickses working incessantly with such rare power of leverage and screwage in the interior parts,—a certain Quasi-Olympian House, made of glass, will lie in shreds, and the ablest and noblest man in England see himself forbidden to do England any service farther : "Not needed more, Sir ! Go you,—and look at us for the remainder of your life !"

¹ Prussia, ii. 391, 282, &c.

King Friedrich in the Apel House at Leipzig (8th December 1760—17th March 1761).

Friedrich's Winter in the Apel House at Leipzig is of cheerfuller character than we might imagine. Endless sore business he doubtless has, of recruiting, financiering, watching and providing, which grows more difficult year by year; but he has subordinates that work to his signal, and an organised machinery for business such as no other man. And solacements there are withal: his Books he has about him; welcomer than ever in such seasons: Friends too,—he is not solitary; nor neglectful of resources. Faithful D'Argens came at once (stayed till the middle of March)¹; D'Argens, Quintus Icilius, English Mitchell; these three almost daily bore him company. Till the middle of January, also, he had his two Nephews with him (Sons of his poor deceased Brother, the late tragic Prince of Prussia),—the elder of whom, Friedrich Wilhelm, became King afterwards; the second, Henri by name, died suddenly of small-pox within about seven years hence, to the King's deep and sore grief, who liked him the better of the two. Their ages respectively are now about 16 and 14.² Their appetite for dancing, and their gay young ways, are pleasant now and afterwards to the old Uncle in his grim element.³

Music, too, he had; daily evening Concert, though from himself there is no fluting now. One of his Berlin Concert people who had been sent for, was Fasch, a virtuoso on I know not what instrument,—but a man given to take note of things about him. Fasch was painfully surprised to see his King so altered in the interim past: "bent now, sunk into himself, grown old; to whom these five years of war-tumult and anxiety, of sorrow and hard toil, had given a dash of gloomy seriousness and melancholy, which was in strong contrast with his former vividly bright expression, and was not natural to his years."¹

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 212, 213. Sends a Courier to conduct D'Argens "for December 8th;" "21st March," D'Argens is back at Berlin.

² Henri, born 30th December 1747, died 26th May 1767:—Friedrich Wilhelm, afterwards Friedrich Wilhelm II. (sometimes called Der Dicke, The Big), born 25th December 1744; King, 17th August 1786; died 16th November 1797.

³ Letters, &c. in Schöning.

From D'Argens there is one authentic Anecdote, worth giving. One evening D'Argens came to him; entering his Apartment, found him in a situation very unexpected; which has been memorable ever since. "One evening" (there is no date to it, except vaguely, as above, December 1760—March 1761), "D'Argens, entering the King's Apartment, found him sitting on the ground with a big platter of fried meat, from which he was feeding his dogs. He had a little rod, with which he kept order among them, and shoved the best bits to his favourites. The Marquis, in astonishment, recoiled a step, struck his hands together, and exclaimed: 'The Five Great Powers of Europe, who have sworn alliance, and conspired to undo the Marquis de Brandebourg, how might they puzzle their heads to guess what he is now doing! Scheming some dangerous plan for the next Campaign, think they; collecting funds to have money for it; studying about magazines for man and horse; or he is deep in negotiations to divide his enemies, and get new allies for himself? Not a bit of all that. He is sitting peaceably in his room, and feeding his dogs!'"²

Interview with Herr Professor Gellert (Thursday, 18th December 1760).

Still more celebrated is the Interview with Gellert; though I cannot say it is now more entertaining to the ingenuous mind. One of Friedrich's many Interviews, this Winter, with the Learned of Leipzig University; for he is a born friend of the Muses so-called, and never neglects an opportunity. Wonderful to see how, in such an environment, in the depths of mere toil and tribulation, with a whole breaking world lying on his shoulders, as it were,—he always shows such appetite for a snatch of talk with anybody presumably of sense, and knowledge on something!

¹ Zelter's Life of Fasch (cited in Preuss, ii. 278).

² Preuss, ii. 282.

This Winter, say the Books, "he had, in vacant intervals, a great deal of communing with the famed of Leipzig University;" this or other famed Professor,—Winkler, Ernesti, Gottsched again, and others, coming to give account, each for himself, of what he professed to be teaching in the world: "on the Natural Sciences, more especially the Moral; on Libraries, on Rare Books. Gottsched was able to satisfy the King on one point; namely, That the celebrated passage of St. John's Gospel—'There are three that bear record'—was not in the famous Manuscript of the Vienna Library; Gottsched having himself examined that important Codex, and found in the text nothing of said Passage, but merely, written on the margin, a legible intercalation of it, in Melancthon's hand. Luther, in his Version, never had it at all."¹ A Gottsched inclined to the Socinian view? Not the least consequence to Friedrich or us! Our business is exclusively with Gellert here.

"Readers have heard of Gellert; there are, or there were, English Writings about him, Lives, or I forget what: and in his native Protestant Saxony, among all classes, especially the higher, he had, in those years and onwards to his death, such a popularity and real splendour of authority as no man before or since. Had risen, against his will in some sort, to be a real Pope, a practical Oracle in those parts. In his modest bachelor lodging" (age of him five-and-forty gone) "he has sheaves of Letters daily,—about affairs of the conscience, of the household, of the heart: from some evangelical young lady, for example, 'Shall I marry him, think you, O my Father?' and perhaps from her Papa, 'Shall she, think you, O my ditto?'—Sheaves of Letters: and of oral consulters such crowds, that the poor Oracle was obliged to appoint special hours for that branch of his business. His class-room (he lectures on Morals, some Theory of Moral Sentiment, or suchlike) is crowded with 'blue uniforms' (ingenuous Prussian Officers eager to hear a Gellert), in these Winters. Rugged Hülßen, this very season, who commands in Freyberg Country, alleviates the poor village of Hainichen from certain official inflictions, and bids the poor people say, 'It is because Gellert was born among you!' Plainly the Trisme-gistus of mankind at that date:—who is now, as usual, become a surprising Trismegistus to the new generations!

¹ Helden-Geschichte, vi. 506.

“He had written certain thin Books, all of a thin languid nature; but rational, clear; especially a Book of Fables in Verse, which are watery, but not wholly water, and have still a languid flavour in them for readers. His Book on Letter-writing was of use to the rising generation, in its time. Clearly an amiable, ingenious, correct, altogether good man; of pious mind,—and, what was more, of strictly orthodox, according to the then Saxon standard in the best circles. This was the figure of his Life for the last fifteen years of it; and he was now about the middle of that culminating period. A modest, despondent kind of man, given to indigestions, dietetics, hypochondria: ‘of neat figure and dress; nose hooked, but not too much; eyes mournfully blue and beautiful, fine open brow;’—a fine countenance, and fine soul of its sort, poor Gellert; ‘punctual like the church-clock at divine service, in all weathers.’”

“A man of some real intellect and melody; some, by no means much; who was of amiable meek demeanour; studious to offend nobody, and to do whatever good he could by the established methods;—and who, what was the great secret of his success, was of orthodoxy perfect and eminent. Whom, accordingly, the whole world, polite Saxon orthodox world, hailed as its Evangelist and Trismegistus. Essentially a commonplace man; but who employed himself in beautifying and illuminating the commonplace of his day and generation:—infinitely to the satisfaction of said generation. ‘How charming that you should make thinkable to us, make vocal, musical, and comfortably certain, what we were all inclined to think; you creature plainly divine!’ And the homages to Gellert were unlimited and continual, not pleasant all of them to an idlish man in weak health.

“Mitchell and Quintus Icilius, who are often urging on the King that a new German Literature is springing up, of far more importance than the King thinks, have spoken much to him of Gellert the Trismegistus;—and, at length, in the course of a ten days from Friedrich’s arrival here, actual Interview ensues. The Dialogue, though it is but dull and watery to a modern palate, shall be given entire, for the sake of one of the Interlocutors. The Report of it, gleaned gradually from Gellert himself, and printed, not long afterwards, from his manuscripts or those of others, is to be taken as perfectly faithful. Gellert, writing to his inquiring Friend Rabener (a then celebrated Berlin Wit), describes, from Leipzig, '29th January 1760,' or about six weeks after the event: 'How, one day about the middle of December, Quintus Icilius suddenly came to my poor Lodging here, to carry me to the King.' Am too ill to go. Quintus will excuse me today; but will return tomorrow, when no excuse shall avail. Did go accordingly next day, Thursday 18th December, 4 o'clock of the afternoon; and continued till a quarter to 6. 'Had nothing of fear in speaking to the King. Recited my Maler zu Athen.' King said, at parting, he would send for me again. 'The English Ambassador' (Mitchell), 'an excellent man, was probably the cause of the King's wish to see me. . . . The King spoke sometimes German, sometimes French; I mostly German.' As follows:

¹ Jördens, Lexikon Deutscher Dichter und Prosaisten (Leipzig, 1807), ii. 54–68 (§ Gellert).

King. "'Are you (Er) the Professor Gellert?' Gellert. "'Yea, Ihro Majestät.'

King. "'The English Ambassador has spoken highly of you to me. Where do you come from?' Gellert. "'From Hainichen near Freyberg.'

King. "'Have not you a brother at Freyberg?'

Gellert. "'Yea, Ihro Majestät.'

King. "'Tell me why we have no good German Authors.'

Major Quintus Icilius (puts in a word). "'Your Majesty, you see here one before you;—one whom the French themselves have translated, calling him the German La Fontaine!'

King. "'That is much. Have you read La Fontaine?'

Gellert. "'Yea, your Majesty; but have not imitated: I am original (ich bin ein Original).'

King. "'Well, this is one good Author among the Germans; but why have not we more?' Gellert. "'Your Majesty has a prejudice against the Germans.'

King. "'No; I can't say that (Nein; das kann ich nicht sagen).'

Gellert. "'At least, against German writers.'

King. "'Well, perhaps. Why have we no good Historians? Why does no one undertake a Translation of Tacitus?'

Gellert. "'Tacitus is difficult to translate; and the French themselves have but bad Translations of him.'

¹ Gellert's Briefwechsel mit Demoiselle Lucius; herausgegeben von F. A. Ebert (Leipzig, 1823), pp. 629, 631.

King. "That is true (Da hat Er Recht)."

Gellert. "'And, on the whole, various reasons may be given why the Germans have not yet distinguished themselves in every kind of writing. While Arts and Sciences were in their flower among the Greeks, the Romans were still busy in War. Perhaps this is the Warlike Era of the Germans:—perhaps also they have yet wanted Augustuses and Louis-Fourteenths!'

King. "'How, would you wish one Augustus, then, for all Germany?'

Gellert. "'Not altogether that; I could wish only that every Sovereign encouraged men of genius in his own country.'

King (starting a new subject). "'Have you never been out of Saxony?'

Gellert. "'I have been in Berlin.'

King. "'You should travel.'

Gellert. "'Ihro Majestät, for that I need two things,—health and means.'

King. "'What is your complaint? Is it die gelehrte Krankheit ("Disease of the Learned," Dyspepsia so-called)? "'I have myself suffered from that. I will prescribe for you. You must ride daily, and take a dose of rhubarb every week.'

Gellert. "'Ach, Ihro Majestät: if the horse were as weak as I am, he would be of no use to me; if he were stronger, I should be too weak to manage him.' (Mark this of the Horse, however; a tale hangs by it.)

King. "'Then you must drive out.'

Gellert. "'For that I am deficient in the means.'

King. "'Yes, that is true; that is what Authors (Gelehrte) in Deutschland are always deficient in. I suppose these are bad times, are not they?'

Gellert. "'Ja wohl; and if your Majesty would grant us Peace (den Frieden geben wollen)—'

King. "'How can I? Have not you heard, then? There are three of them against me (Es sind ja drei wider mich)!'

Gellert. "'I have more to do with the Ancients and their History than with the Moderns.'

King (changing the topic). "'What do you think, is Homer or Virgil the finer as an Epic Poet?'

Gellert. "'Homer, as the more original.'

King. "'But Virgil is much more polished (viel polirter).'

Gellert. "'We are too far removed from Homer's times to judge of his language. I trust to Quintilian in that respect, who prefers Homer.'

King. "'But one should not be a slave to the opinion of the Ancients.'

Gellert. "'Nor am I that. I follow them only in cases where, owing to the distance, I cannot judge for myself.'

Major Icilius (again giving a slight fillip or suggestion). " 'He,' the Herr Professor here, 'has also treated of German Letter-writing, and has published specimens.'

King. " 'So? But have you written against the Chancery Style, then' (the painfully solemn style, of ceremonial and circumlocution; Letters written so as to be mainly wig and buckram)?

Gellert. " 'Ach ja, that have I, Ihro Majestät!'

King. " 'But why doesn't it change? The Devil must be in it (Es ist etwas Vertheufeltes). They bring me whole sheets of that stuff, and I can make nothing of it!' Gellert. " 'If your Majesty cannot alter it, still less can I. I can only recommend, where you command.'

King. " 'Can you repeat any of your Fables?' Gellert. " 'I doubt it; my memory is very treacherous.'

King. " 'Bethink you a little; I will walk about' (Gellert bethinks him, brow puckered. King, seeing the brow unpucker itself). 'Well, have you one?' Gellert. " 'Yes, your Majesty: The Painter.' Gellert recites ("voice plaintive and hollow; somewhat preachy, I should doubt, but not cracked or shrieky);—we condense him into prose abridgement for English readers; German can look at the bottom of the page;'

" 'A prudent Painter in Athens, more intent on excellence than on money, had done a God of War; and sent for a real ' " *Ein kluger Maler in Athen, Der minder, weil man ihn be-zahlte,

Als weil er Ehre suchte, malte,
Lies einen Kenner einst den
Mars im Bilde sehn,
Und bat sich seine Meinung aus.
Der Kenner sagt ihm frei her-aus,
Dass ihm das Bild nicht ganz ge-fallen wollte,
Und dass es, um recht schön zu
sein,
Weit minder Kunst verrathen sollte.
Der Maler wandte vieles ein;*

*Der Kenner stritt mit ihm aus Gründen,
Und konnt ihn doch nicht überwinden.
Gleich trat ein junger Geck herein,
Und nahm das Bild in Augenschein.
'O,' rief er, 'bei dem ersten Blicke,
Ihr Götter, welch ein Meisterstücke!
Ach, welcher Fuss! O, wie geschickt
Sind nicht die Nägel ausgedrückt!
Mars leht durchaus in diesem Bilde.
Wie viele Kunst, wie viele Pracht,
Ist in dem Helm und in dem Schilde,
Und in der Rüstung angebracht!'
Der Maler ward beschämt gerühret, Und sah den Kenner klüglich an.*

Critic to give him his opinion of it. On survey, the Critic shook his head: "Too much Art visible; won't do, my friend!" The Painter strove to think otherwise; and was still arguing, when a young Coxcomb' (Geck, Gawk) 'stept in: "Gods, what a masterpiece!" cried he at the first glance: "Ah, that foot, those exquisitely-wrought toe-nails; helm, shield, mail, what opulence of Art!" The sorrowful Painter looked penitentially at the real Critic, looked at his brush; and the instant this Geck was gone, struck out his God of War."

King. "'And the Moral?"

Gellert (still reciting):

"'When the Critic does not like thy Bit of Writing, it is a bad sign for thee; but when the Fool admires, it is time thou at once strike it out.'"

King. "'That is excellent; very fine indeed. You have a something of soft and flowing in your verses; them I understand altogether. But there was Gottsched, one day, reading me his Translation of Iphigénie; I had the French Copy in my hand, and could not understand a word of him' (a Swan of Saxony, labouring in vain that day)! 'They recommended me another Poet, one Peitsch' (Herr Peitsch of Königsberg, Hofrath, Doctor and Professor there, Gottsched's Master in Art; edited by Gottsched thirty years ago; now become a dumb idol, though at one time a god confessed); 'him I flung away.'

Gellert. "'Ihro Majestät, him I also fling away.'

King. "'Well, if I continue here, you must come again often; bring your Fables with you, and read me something.'

Gellert. "'I know not if I can read well; I have the singing kind of tone, native to the Hill Country.'

King. "'Ja, like the Silesians. No, you must read me the Fables yourself; they lose a great deal otherwise. Come back soon.' " (Exit Gellert.)

'Nun,' sprach er, 'bin ich über-führet!

Ihr habt mir nicht zu viel gethan.'

Der junge Geck war kaum hinans,
So strich er seinen Kriegsgott aus."

MORAL.

"Wenn deine Schrift dem Kenner nicht gefällt, Doch, wenn sie gar des Narren Lob erhält,

So ist es schon ein böses Zeichen; So ist es Zeit, sie auszustreichen."—
(Gellert's Werke: Leipzig, 1840: i. 185.)

¹ Gellert's Briefwechsel mit Demoiselle Lucius (already cited), pp. 632 et seq.

King (to Icilius, as we learn from a different Record).
 “ ‘That is quite another man than Gottsched !’ ” (Exeunt omnes.)

The modest Gellert says he “remembered Jesus Sirach’s advice, Press not thyself on Kings,—and never came back ;” nor was specially sent for, in the hurries succeeding ; though the King never quite forgot him. Next day, at dinner, the King said, “He is the reasonablest man of all the German Literary People, C’est le plus raisonnable de tous les Savans Allemands.” And to Garve at Breslau, years afterwards : “Gellert is the only German that will reach posterity ; his department is small, but he has worked in it with real felicity.” And indeed the King had, before that, as a practical result of the Gellert Dialogue, managed to set some Berlin Bookseller upon printing of these eligible Fables, “for the use of our Prussian Schools ; in which and other capacities the Fables still serve with acceptance, there and elsewhere.”

In regard to Gellert’s Horse-exercise, I had still to remember that Gellert, not long after, did get a Horse ; two successive Horses ; both highly remarkable. The first especially ; which was Prince Henri’s gift ; “The Horse Prince Henri had ridden at the Battle of Freyberg” (Battle to be mentioned hereafter) ;—quadruped that must have been astonished at itself ! But a pretty enough gift from the war-like admiring Prince to his dyspeptic Great Man. This Horse having yielded to Time, the very Kurfürst (grandson of Polish Majesty that now is) sent Gellert another, housing and furniture complete ; mounted on which, Gellert and it were among the sights of Leipzig ;—well enough known here to young Goethe, in his College days, who used to meet the great man and princely horse, and do salutation, with perhaps some twinkle of scepticism in the corner of his eye.¹ Poor Gellert fell seriously ill in December 1769 ; to the fear and grief of all the world : “estafettes from the Kurfürst himself galloped daily, or oftener, from Dresden for the sick bulletin ;" but poor Gellert died, all the same (13th of that month) ; and we have (really with pathetic thoughts, even we) to bid his amiable existence in this world, his bits of glories and him, adieu forever.

¹ Preuss, ii. 274.

² Dichtung und Wahrheit, Theil ii. Buch 6 (in Goethe’s Works, xxv. 51 et seq.).

Dialogue with General Saldern (in the Apel House, Leipzig, 21st January 1761).

Four or five weeks after this of Gellert, Friedrich had another Dialogue, which also is partly on record, and is of more importance to us here : Dialogue with Major-General Saldern ; on a certain business, delicate, yet profitable to the doer,—nobody so fit for it as Saldern, thinks the King. Saldern is he who did that extraordinary feat of packing the wrecks of battle on the Field of Liegnitz ; a fine, clear-flowing, silent kind of man, rapid and steady, with a great deal of methodic and other good faculty in him,—more, perhaps, than he himself yet knows of. Him the King has sent for, this morning ; and it is on the business of Polish Majesty's Royal Hunting-Schloss at Hubertsburg,—which is a thing otherwise worth some notice from us.

For three months long, the King had been representing, in the proper quarters, what plunderings, and riotous and even disgusting savageries, the Saxons had perpetrated at Charlottenburg, Schönhausen, Friedrichsfeld, in October last, while masters there for a few days : but neither in Reichs Diet, where Plotho was eloquent, nor elsewhere by the Diplomatic method, could he get the least redress, or one civil word of regret. From Polish Majesty himself, to whom Friedrich remonstrated the matter, through the English Resident at Warsaw, Friedrich had expected regret ; but he got none. Some think he had hoped that Polish Majesty, touched by these horrors of war, and by the reciprocities evidently liable to follow, might be induced to try something towards meditating a General Peace : but Polish Majesty did not ; Polish Majesty answered simply nothing at all, nor would get into any correspondence : upon which Friedrich, possibly a little piqued withal, had at length determined on retaliation.

Within our cantonments, reflects Friedrich, here is Hubertsburg Schloss, with such a hunting apparatus in and around it; Polish Majesty's Hertzblatt ("lid of the heart," as they call it; breastbone, at least, and pit of his stomach, which inclines to nothing but hunting): let his Hubertsburg become as our Charlottenburg is; perhaps that will touch his feelings! Friedrich had formed this resolution; and, Wednesday, January 21st, sends for Saldern, one of the most exact, deft-going, and punctiliously honourable of all his Generals, to execute it. Enter Saldern accordingly,—royal Audience-room 'in the Apel'sche Haus, New Neumarkt, No. 16," as above;—to whom (one Küster, a reliable creature, reporting for us on Saldern's behalf) the King says, in the distinct slowish tone of a King giving orders:

King. "'Saldern, tomorrow morning you go'" (Er, He goes) "'with a detachment of Infantry and Cavalry, in all silence, to Hubertsburg; beset the Schloss, get all the furnitures carefully packed up and invoiced. I want nothing with them; the money they bring I mean to bestow on our Field Hospitals, and will not forget you in disposing of it.'

"Saldern, usually so prompt with his 'Ja' on any Order from the King, looks embarrassed, stands silent,—to the King's great surprise;—and after a moment or two says:

Saldern. "'Forgive me, your Majesty: but this is contrary to my honour and my oath.'

King (still in a calm tone). "'You would be right to think so, if I did not intend this desperate method for a good object. Listen to me: great words don't feel it in their scalp when their subjects are torn by the hair; one has to grip their own locks, as the only way to give them pain.' (These last words the King said in a sharper tone; he again made his apology for the resolution he had formed; and renewed his Order. With the modesty usual to him, but also with manliness, Saldern replied:)

Saldern. "'Order me, your Majesty, to attack the enemy and his batteries, I will on the instant cheerfully obey: but against honour, oath, and duty, I cannot, I dare not!'

"The King," with voice gradually rising, I suppose, "repeated his demonstration that the thing was proper, necessary in the circumstances; but Saldern, true to the inward voice, answered steadily:

Saldern. “‘For this commission your Majesty will easily find another person in my stead.’

King (“whirling hastily round, with an angry countenance,” but, I should say, an admirable preservation of his dignity in such extreme case). “‘Saldern, Er will nicht reich werden,—Saldern, you refuse to become rich.’” And exit, leaving Saldern to his own stiff courses.¹

Nothing remained for Saldern but to fall ill, and retire from the Service ; which he did : a man honourably ruined, thought everybody ;—which did not prove to be the case, by and by.

This surely is a remarkable Dialogue ; far beyond any of the Gellert kind. An absolute King and Commander-in-Chief, and of such a type in both characters, getting flat refusal once in his life (this once only, so far as I know), and how he takes it :—one wishes Küster, or somebody, had been able to go into more details !—Details on the Quintus-Icilius procedure, which followed next day, would also have been rather welcome, had Küster seen good. It is well known, Quintus Icilius and his Battalion, on order now given, went cheerfully, next day, in Saldern’s stead. And sacked Hubertsburg Castle, to the due extent or farther : 100,000 thalers (15,000*l.*) were to be raised from it for the Field-Hospital behoof ; the rest was to be Quintus’s own ; who, it was thought, made an excellent thing of it for himself. And in hauling out the furnitures, especially in selling them, Quintus having an enterprising sharp head in trade affairs, “it is certain,” says Küster, as says everybody, “various Schändlichkeiten (scandals) occurred, which were contrary to the King’s intention, and would not have happened under Saldern.” What the scandals particularly were, is not specified to me anywhere, though I have searched up and down ; much less the net amount of money realised by Quintus. I know only, poor Quintus was bantered about it, all his life after, by this merciless King ; and at Potsdam, in years coming, had ample time and admonition for what penitence was needful.

¹ Küster, Charakterzüge des General-Lieutenant v. Saldern (Berlin, 1798), p. 39-44.

"The case was much canvassed in the Army," says poor Küster ; "it was the topic in every tent among Officers and common Men. And among us Army-Chaplains too," poor honest souls, "the question of conflicting duties arose : Your King ordering one thing, and your own Conscience another, what ought a man to do ? What ought an Army-Chaplain to preach or advise ? And considerable mutual light in regard to it we struck out from one another, and saw how a prudent Army-Chaplain might steer his way. Our general conclusion was, That neither the King nor Saldern could well be called wrong. Saldern listening to the inner voice ; right he, for certain. But withal the King, in his place, might judge such a thing expedient and fit ; perhaps Saldern himself would, had Saldern been King of Prussia there in January 1761."

Saldern's behaviour in his retirement was beautiful ; and after the Peace, he was recalled, and made more use of than ever ; being indeed a model for Army arrangements and procedures, and reckoned the completest General of Infantry now left, far and near. The outcries made about Hubertsburg, which still linger in Books, are so considerable, one fancies the poor Schloss must have been quite ruined, and left standing as naked walls. Such, however, we by no means find to be the case ; but, on the contrary, shall ourselves see that everything was got refitted there, and put into perfect order again, before long.

There are some War-movements during Winter ; general financiering Difficulties. Choiseul proposes Peace.

February 15th, there fell out, at Langensalza, on the Unstrut, in Gotha Country, a bit of sharp fighting ; done by Friedrich's people and Duke Ferdinand's in concert ; which, and still more what followed on it, made some noise in the quiet months. Not a great thing, this of Langensalza, but a sudden, and successfully done ; costing Broglio some 2,000 prisoners ; and the ruin of a considerable Post of his, which he had lately pushed out thither, "to seize the Unstrut," as he hoped. A Broglio grasping at more than he could hold, in those Thüringen parts, as elsewhere ! And, indeed, the Fight of Langensalza was only the beginning of a series of such ; Duke Ferdinand being now upon one of his grand Winter-Adventures : that of suddenly surprising and exploding Broglio's Winter-quarters altogether, and rolling him back to Frankfurt for a lodging. So that, since the first days of February, especially since Langensalza day, there rose suddenly a great deal of rushing about, in those regions, with hard bits of fighting, at least of severe campaigning ;—which lasted two whole months ;—filling the whole world with noise that Winter ; and requiring extreme brevity from us here. It was specially Duke Ferdinand's Adventure ; Friedrich going on it, as per bargain, to the Langensalza enterprise, but no farther ; after which it did not much concern Friedrich, nor indeed come to much result for anybody :

“Strenuous Ferdinand, very impatient of the Göttingen business, and provoked to see Broglio's quarters extend into Hessen, so near hand, for the first time, silently determines to dislodge him. Broglio's chain of quarters, which goes from Frankfurt north as far as Marburg, then turns east to Ziegenhayn ; thence north again to Cassel, to Münden with its Defiles ; and again east, or south-east, to Langensalza even : this chain has above 150 miles of weak length ; and various other grave faults to the eye of Ferdinand,—especially this, that it is in the form, not of an elbow only, or joiner's square, which is entirely to be disapproved, but even of two elbows ; in fact, of the profile of a chair” (if readers had a Map at hand. “Foot of the chair is Frankfurt ; seat part is from Marburg to Ziegenhayn ; back part, near where Ferdinand lies in chief force, is the Cassel region, on to Münden, which is top of the back,—still backwards from which, there is a kind of proud curl or overlapping, down to Langensalza in Gotha Country, which greedy Broglio has likewise grasped at ! Broglio's friends say he himself knew the faultiness of this zigzag form, but had been overruled. Ferdinand certainly knows it, and proceeds to act upon it.

“In profound silence, namely, ranks himself (February 1st-12th) in three Divisions, wide enough asunder ; bursts up sudden as lightning, at Langensalza and elsewhere ; kicks to pieces Broglio's Chair-Profile, kicks out especially the bottom part, which ruins both foot and back, these being disjoined thereby, and each exposed to be taken in rear;—and of course astonishes Broglio not a little; but does not steal his presence of mind.

“So that, in effect, Broglio had instantly to quit Cassel and warm lodging, and take the field in person; to burn his Magazines; and, at the swiftest rate permissible, condense himself, at first partially about Fulda (well down the leg of his chair), and then gradually all into one mass near Frankfurt itself;—with considerable losses, loss especially of all his Magazines, full or half-full. And has now, except Marburg, Ziegenhayn and Cassel, no post between Göttingen and him. Ferdinand, with his Three Divisions, went storming along in the wild weather, Granby as vanguard; pricking into the skirts of Broglio. Captured this and that of Corps, of Magazines that had not been got burnt; laid siege to Cassel, siege to Ziegenhayn; blocked Marburg, not having guns ready; and, for some three or four weeks, was by the Gazetteer world and general public thought to have done a very considerable feat;—though to himself, such were the distances, difficulties of the season, of the long roads, it probably seemed very questionable whether, in the end, any feat at all.

“Cassel he could not take, after a month’s siege under the best of Siege-Captains: Ziegenhayn still less under one of the worst. Provisions, ammunitions, were not to be had by force of wagony: scant food for soldiers, doubly scant the food of Sieges;”—“the road from Beverungen” (where the Weser-boats have to stop, which is 30 miles from Cassel, perhaps 60 from Ziegenhayn, and perhaps 100 from the outmost or southernmost of Ferdinand’s parties) “is paved with dead horses,” “nor has even Cassel nearly enough of ammunition:—in a word, Broglio, finding the time come, bursts up from his Frankfurt Position (March 14th–21st) in a sharp and determined manner; drives Ferdinand’s people back, beats the Erbprinz himself one day (by surprisal, ‘My compliment for Langensalza’), and sets his people running. Ferdinand sees the affair to be over; and deliberately retires; lucky, perhaps, that he still can deliberately: and matters return to their old posture. Broglio resumes his quarters, somewhat altered in shape, and not quite so grasping as formerly; and beyond his half-filled Magazines, has lost nothing considerable, or more considerable than has Ferdinand himself.”¹

¹ Tempelhof, v. 15–45; Mauvillon, ii. 135–148.

The vital element in Ferdinand's Adventure was the Siege of Cassel ; all had to fail, when this, by defect of means, under the best of management, declared itself a failure. Siege-Captain was a Graf von Lippe-Bückeburg, Ferdinand's Ordnance-Master, who is supposed to be "the best Artillery Officer in the world,"—and is a man of great mark in military and other circles. He is Son and Successor of that fantastic Lippe-Bückeburg, by whom Friedrich was introduced to Freemasonry long since. He has himself a good deal of the fantast again, but with a better basis of solidity beneath it. A man of excellent knowledge and faculty in various departments ; strict as steel, in regard to discipline, to practice and conduct of all kinds ; a most punctilious, silently supercilious gentleman, of polite but privately irrefragable turn of mind. A tall, lean, dusky figure ; much seen to by neighbours, as he stalks loftily through this puddle of a world, on terms of his own. Concerning whom there circulates in military circles this Anecdote, among many others ;—which is set down as a fact ; and may be, whether quite believable or not, a symbol of all the rest, and of a man not unimportant in these Wars. "Two years ago, on King Friedrich's birthday, 24th January 1759, the Count had a select dinner-party in his tent in Ferdinand's Camp, in honour of the occasion. Dinner was well over, and wine handsomely flowing, when somebody at last thought of asking, 'What is it, then, Herr Graf, that whistling kind of noise we hear every now and then overhead ?' 'That is nothing,' said the Graf, in his calm, dusky way : 'that is only my Artillery-people practising ; I have bidden them hit the pole of our tent if they can ; unhappily there is not the slightest danger. Push the bottles on.'"¹ Lippe-Bückeburg was Siege-Captain at Cassel ; Commandant besieged was Comte de Broglio, the Marshal's younger Brother, formerly in the Diplomatic line ;—whom we saw once, five years ago, at the Pirna Barrier, fly into fine frenzy, and kick vainly against the pricks. Friedrich says once, to D'Argens or somebody : 'I hope we shall soon have Cassel, and M. le Comte de Broglio prisoner" (deserves it for his fine frenzies, at Pirna and since) ;—but that comfort was denied us.

¹ Archenholtz, ii. 356.

Some careless Books say, Friedrich had at first good hopes of this Enterprise ; and "had himself lent 7,000 men to it:" which is the fact, but not the whole fact. Friedrich had approved, and even advised this plan of Ferdinand's, and had agreed to send 7,000 men to co-operate at Langensalza,—which, so far out in Thüringen, and pointing as if to the Reichsfolk, is itself an eye-sorrow to Friedrich. The issue we have seen. His 7,000 went accordingly, under a General Syburg ; met the Ferdinand people (General Spörken head of these, and Walpole's "Conway" one of them) ; found the Unstrut in flood, but crossed nevertheless ; dashed in upon the French and Saxons there, and made a brilliant thing of it at Langensalza.¹ Which done, Syburg instantly withdrew, leaving Spörken and his Conways to complete the Adventure ; and, for his part, set himself with his whole might "to raising contributions, recruits, horses, proviants, over Thüringen ;" "which," says Tempelhof, "had been his grand errand there, and in which he succeeded wonderfully."

Towards the end of Ferdinand's Affair, Cassel Siege now evidently like to fail, Friedrich organised a small Expedition for his own behoof : expedition into Voigtland, or Frankensland, against the intrusive Reichs people,—who have not now a Broglio or Langensalza to look across to, but are mischievous upon our outposts on the edge of the Voigtland yonder. The expedition lasted only ten days (April 1st, it left quarters ; April 11th, was home again) ; a sharp, swift and very pretty expedition ;² of which we can here say only that it was beautifully impressive on the Reichs gentlemen, and sent their Croateries and them home again, to Bamberg, to Eger, quite over the horizon, in a considerably flurried state. After which there was no Small-War farther, and everybody rested in cantonment, making ready till the Great should come.

¹ Bericht von der bey Langensalza am 15 Februar 1761 vorgefallenen Action (in Seyfarth, Beylagen, iii. 75) ; Tempelhof, v. 22-27.

² Tempelhof, v. 48-57.

The Prussian wounded are all in Leipzig this Winter; a crowded stirring Town: young Archenholtz, among many others, going about in convalescent state,—not attending Gellert's course, that I hear of,—but noticing vividly to right and left. Much difficulty about the contributions, Archenholtz observes;—of course an ever-increasing difficulty, here as everywhere, in regard to finance! From Archenholtz chiefly, I present the following particulars; which, though in loose form, and without date, except the general one of Winter 1760–61, to any of them, are to be held substantially correct:

* * “It is impossible to pay that Contribution,” exclaim the Leipzigers: “you said, long since, it was to be 75,000*l.* on us by the year; and this year you rise to 160,000*l.*; more than double!”—“Perhaps that is because you favoured the Reichs-folk while here?” answer the Prussians, if they answer anything: “It is the King's order. Pay it you must.”—“Cannot; simply impossible.” “Possible, we tell you, and also certain; we will burn your Leipzig if you don't!” And they actually, these Collector fellows, a stony-hearted set, who had a percentage of their own on the sums levied, got soldiers drawn out more than once, pitch-link in hand, as if for immediate burning: but the Leipzigers thought to themselves, “King Friedrich is not a Soltikof!” and openly laughed at those pitch-links. Whereupon about a hundred of their Chief Merchants were thrown into prison,—one hundred or so, riddled down in a day or two to Seventeen; which latter Seventeen, as they stood out, were detained a good many days, how many is not said, but only that they were amazingly firm. Black-hole for lodging, bread-and-water for diet, straw for bed: nothing would avail on the Seventeen: “Impossible,” they answered always; each unit of them, in sight of the other sixteen, was upon his honour, and could not think of finching. “You shall go for soldiers, then;—possibly you will prefer that; you fine powdered velvet gentlemen? Up, then, and march; here are your fire-locks, your seventeen knapsacks: to the road with us; to Magdeburg, there to get on drill!” Upon which the Seventeen, horror-struck at such quasi-actual possibility, gave in.

“Magnanimous Gotzkowsky, who had come to Leipzig on business at the time” (which will give us a date for this by and by), “and been solemnly applied to by Deputation of the Rath, pleaded with his usual zealous fidelity in their behalf ; got various alleviations, abatements ; gave bills :—"Never was seen such magnanimity !" said the Leipzig Town-Council solemnly, as that of Berlin, in October last, had done."¹

Of course the difficulties, financial and other, are increasing every Winter ;—not on Friedrich's side only. Here, for instance, from the Duchy of Göttingen, are some items in the French Account current, this Winter, which are also furnished by Archenholtz :

"For bed-ticking, 13,000 webs ; of shirts ready-made, 18,000 ; shoes," I forget in what quantity ; but "from the poor little Town of Duderstadt 600 pairs,—liability to instant flogging if they are not honest shoes ; flogging, and the whole shoemaker guild summoned out to see it." Hardy women the same Duderstadt has had to produce : 300 of them, "each with basket on back, who are carrying cannon-balls from the foundry at Lauterberg to Göttingen, the road being bad."² "These French are in such necessity," continues Archenholtz, "they spare neither friend nor foe. The Frankish Circle, for example, pleads piteously in Reichs Diet that it has already smarted by this War to the length of 2,230,000*l.*, and entreats the Kaiser to bid Most Christian Majesty cease his exactions,—but without the least result." Result ! If Most Christian Majesty and his Pompadour will continue this War, is it he, or is it you, that can furnish the Magazines ? "Magazine-furnishings, over all Hessen and this part of Hanover, are enormous. Recruits too, native Hessian, native Hanoverian, you shall furnish,—and 'We will hang them, and do, if caught deserting' (to their own side) !"

I add only one other item from Archenholtz : "Mice being busy in these Hanover Magazines, it is decided to have cats, and a requisition goes out accordingly" (cipher not given) : "cats do execution for a time, but cannot stand the confinement," are averse to the solitary system, and object (think with what vocality !): "upon which Hanover has to send foxes and weasels."³ These guardian animals, and the 300 women laden with cannon-balls from the forge, are the most peculiar items in the French Account current, and the last I will mention.

¹ Archenholtz, ii. 187-192.

² Ibid., ii. 237.

³ Ibid., ii. 240.

Difficulty, quasi-impossibility, on the French side, there evidently is, perhaps more than on any other. But Choiseul has many arts ;—and his Official existence, were there nothing more, demands that he do the impossible now if ever. This Spring (26th March 1761), to the surprise and joy of mankind, there came formal Proposal, issuing from Choiseul, to which Maria Theresa and the Czarina had to put their signatures ; regretting that the British-Prussian Proposal of last Year had, by ill accident, fallen to the ground, and now repeating it themselves (real “Congress at Augsburg,” and all things fair and handsome) to Britannic and Prussian Majesties. Who answer (April 3d) as before, “Nothing with more willingness, we !”¹

And there actually did ensue, at Paris, a vivid Negotiating all Summer ; which ended, not quite in nothing, but in less, if we might say so. Considerably less, for some of us. We shall have to look what end it had, and Mauduit will look !—Most people, Pitt probably among the others, came to think that Choiseul, though his France is in beggary, had no real view from the first, except to throw powder in the eyes of France and mankind, to ascertain for himself on what terms those English would make Peace, and to get Spain drawn into his quarrel. A Choiseul with many arts. But we will leave him and his Peace-Proposals, and the other rumours and futilities of this Year. They are part of the sound and smoke which fill all Years ; and which vanish into next to nothing, oftenest into pure nothing, when the Years have waited a little. Friedrich’s finances, copper and other, were got completed ; his Armies too were once more put on a passable footing ;—and this Year will have its realities withal.

Gotzkowsky, in regard to those Leipzig Finance difficulties, yields me a date, which is supplementary to some of the Archenholtz details. I find it was “January 20th, 1761,”—precisely while the Saldern Interview, and subsequent wreck of Hubertsburg, went on,—that “Gotzkowsky arrived in Leipzig,”² and got those unfortunate Seventeen out of ward, and the contributions settled.

¹ The “Declaration” (of France &c.), with the Answer or “Counter-Declaration,” in Seyfarth, Beylagen, iii. 12–16. ² Rödenbeck, ii. 77.

And withal, at Paris, in the same hours, there went on a thing worth noting. That January day, while Icilius was busy on the Schloss of Hubertsburg, poor old Maréchal de Belleisle,—mark him, reader!—"in the Rue de Lille at Paris," lay sunk in putrid fever; and on the fourth day after, "January 26th, 1761," the last of the grand old Frenchmen died. "He had been reported dead three days before," says Barbier: "the public wished it so; they laid the blame on him of this apparent" (let a cautious man write it, "apparent) derangement in our affairs,"—instead of thanking him for all he had done and suffered (loss of so much, including reputation and an only Son) to repair and stay the same. "He was in his 77th year. Many people say, 'We must wait three months, to see if we shall not regret him,'"—even him! ¹ So generous are Nations.

Maréchal Duc de Belleisle was very wealthy: in Vernon Country, Normandy, he had estates and châteaux to the value of about 24,000*l.* annually. All these, having first accurately settled for his own debts, he, in his grand old way, childless, forlorn, but loftily polite to the last, bequeathed to the King. His splendid Paris Mansion he expressly left "to serve in perpetuity as a residence for the Secretary of State in the Department of War;" a magnificent Town-House it is, "hôtel magnifique, at the end of the Pont-Royal,"—which, I notice farther, is in our time called "Hôtel de Choiseul-Praslin,"—a house latterly become horrible in men's memory, if my guess is right.

And thus vanishes, in sour dark clouds, the once great Belleisle. Grandiose, something almost of great in him, of sublime,—alas, yes, of too sublime; and of unfortunate beyond proportion, paying the debt of many foregoers! He too is a notability gone out, the last of his kind. Twenty years ago, he crossed the Œil-de-Bœuf with Papers, just setting out to cut Teutschland in Four: and in the Rue de Lille, ¹ Barbier, iv. 373; L 154.

No. 54, with that grandiose Enterprise drawing to its issue in universal defeat, disgrace, discontent, and preparation for the General Overturn (Culbute Générale of 1789), he closes his weary old eyes. Choiseul succeeds him as War-Minister; War-Minister and Prime-Minister both in one;—and by many arts of legerdemain, and another real spasm of effort upon Hanover to do the impossible there, is leading France with winged steps the same road.

Since March 17th, Friedrich was no longer in Leipzig. He left at that time, for Meissen-Country, and the Hill Cantons,—organised there his little Expedition into Voigtland, for behoof of the Reichsfolk;—and did not return. Continued, mostly in Meissen-Country, as the fittest for his many businesses, Army-regulating and other. Till the Campaign come, we will remember of him nothing, but this little Note, and pleasant little Gift, to his Chère Maman, the day after his arrival in those parts :

To Madame Camas (at Magdeburg, with the Queen).

“Meissen, 20th March, 1761.

“I send you, my dear Mamma, a little Trifle, by way of keepsake and memento” (Snuffbox of Meissen Porcelain, with the figure of a Dog on the lid). “You may use the Box for your rouge, for your patches, or you may put snuff in it, or bonbons or pills : but whatever use you turn it to, think always, when you see this Dog, the Symbol of Fidelity, that he who sends it, outstrips, in respect of fidelity and attachment to Maman, all the dogs in the world ; and that his devotion to you has nothing whatever in common with the fragility of the material which is manufactured hereabouts.

“I have ordered Porcelain here for all the world, for Schönhausen” (for your Mistress, my poor uncomplaining Wife), for my Sisters-in-law ; in fact, I am rich in this brittle material only. And I hope the receivers will accept it as current money : for the truth is, we are poor as can be, good Mamma ; I have nothing left but honour, my coat, my sword, and porcelain.

“Farewell, my beloved Mamma. If Heaven will, I shall one day see you again face to face : and repeat to you by word of mouth, what I have already said and written ; but, turn it and re-turn it as I may, I shall never, except very incompletely, express what the feelings of my heart to you are.—F.”

. It was during this Winter, if it ever was, that Friedrich received the following Letter from an aspiring Young Lady, just coming out, age seventeen,—in a remote sphere of things. In “Sleepy Hollow” namely, or the Court of Mirow in Mecklenburg-Strelitz, where we once visited with Friedrich almost thirty years ago. The poor collapsed Duke has ceased making dressing-gowns there ; and this is his Niece, Princess Charlotte, Sister to the now reigning Duke.

This Letter, in the translated form, and the glorious results it had for some of us, are familiar to all English readers for the last hundred years. Of Friedrich’s Answer to it, if he sent one, we have no trace whatever. Which is a pity, more or less ;—though, in truth, the Answer could only have been some polite formality ; the Letter itself being a mere breath of sentimental wind, absolutely without significance to Friedrich or anybody else—except always to the Young Lady herself, to whom it brought a Royal Husband and Queenship of England within a year. Signature, presumably, this Letter once had ; date of place, of day, year, or even century (except by implication), there never was any : but judicious persons, scanning on the spot, have found that the “Victory” spoken of can only have meant Torgau ; and that the aspiring Young Lady, hitherto a School Girl, not so much as “confirmed” till a month or two ago, age seventeen in May last, can only have written it, at Mirow, in the Winter subsequent.¹ Certain it is, in September next, September 1761, directly after George III.’s Wedding, there appeared in the English Newspapers, what doubtless had been much handed about in society before, the following “Translation of a Letter, said to have been written by Princess Charlotte of Mecklenburg to the King of Prussia, on one of his Victories,”—without farther commentary or remark of any kind ; everybody then understanding, as everybody still. So notable a Document ought to be given in the

¹ Given in Rödenbeck, ii. 79 ; omitted, for I know not what reason, in Œuvres de Frédéric, xviii. 145 : cited partly in Preuss, ii. 282.

² Ludwig Giesebrecht,—Der Fürstenhof in Mirow während der Jahre 1708-1761, in Programm des vereinigten Königlichen und Stadt-Gymnasiums for 1863 (Stettin, 1863), pp. 26-29,—enters into a minute criticism.

Original as well (or in what passes for such), and with some approach to the necessary preliminaries of time and place :¹

[To his Majesty the King of Prussia (in Leipzig, or Somewhere).

Mirow in Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Winter of 1760-61.]

"Sire!—Ich weiss nicht, ob ich über Euer. Majestät letzteren Sieg fröhlich oder traurig sein soll, weil eben der glückliche Sieg, der neue Lorbeern um Dero Schüssel geflochten hat, über mein Vaterland Jammer und Elend verbreitet. Ich weiss, Sire, in diesem unserm lusterhaft verfeinerten Zeitalter werde ich verachtet werden, dass mein Herz über das Unglück des Landes trauert, dass ich die Drangsale des Krieges beweine, und von ganzer Seele die Rückkehr des Friedens wünsche. Selbst Sie, Sire, werden vielleicht denken, es schicke sich besser für mich, mich in der Kunst zu gefallen zu üben, oder mich nur um häusliche Angelegenheiten zu bekümmern. Allein dem sey, wie ihm wolle, so fühlt mein Herz zu sehr für diese Unglücklichen, um eine dringende Fürbitte für dieselben zurückzuhalten.

"Seit wenigen Jahren hatte dieses Land die angenehmste Gestalt gewonnen. Man traf keine verödete Stellen an. Alles war angebaut. Das Landvolk sah vergnügt aus, und in den Städten herrschte Wohlstand und Freude. Aber welch' eine Veränderung gegen eine so angenehme Scene! Ich bin in partheiischen Beschreibungen nicht erfahren, noch weniger kann ich die Gräueltaten der Verwüstung mit ertöhlten Schilderungen schrecklicher darstellen. Allein gewiss selbst Krieger, welche ein eitles Herz und Gefühl besitzen, würden durch den Anblick dieser Scenen zu Thränen bewegt werden. Das ganze "May it please your Majesty,

I am at a loss whether I shall congratulate or condole with you on your late victory ; since the same success that has covered you with laurels has overspread the Country of Mecklenburgh with desolation. I know, Sire, that it seems unbecoming my sex, in this age of vicious refinement, to feel for one's Country, to lament the horrors of war, or wish for the return of peace. I know you may think it more properly my province to study the art of pleasing, or to turn my thoughts to subjects of a more domestic nature : but, however unbecoming it may be in me, I can't resist the desire of interceding for this unhappy people.

"It was but a very few years ago that this territory wore the most pleasing appearance. The Country was cultivated, the peasant looked cheerful, and the towns abounded with riches and festivity. What an alteration at present from such a charming scene ! I am not expert at description, nor can my fancy add any horrors to the picture ; but sure even conquerors themselves would weep at the hideous prospect now before me. The whole Country, my dear Country, lies one frightful waste, presenting only objects to excite terror, pity, and despair. The business of the husbandman and the shepherd are quite discontinued ; the husbandman and the shepherd are become soldiers themselves, and help to ravage the soil they formerly occupied. The towns are inhabited only by old men, women and children; perhaps here and there a warrior, by wounds and loss of limbs, rendered unfit for service, left at his door; his little children hang round him, ask a history of every wound, and grow themselves soldiers before they find strength for the field. But this were nothing, did we not feel the alternate insolence of either army, as it happens to advance or retreat. It is impossible to express the confusion, even those who call themselves our friends create. Even those from whom we might expect redress oppress us with new calamities. From your justice, therefore, it is that we hope relief; to you even children and women may complain, whose humanity stoops to the meanest petition, and whose power is capable of repressing the greatest injustice.

¹ From Gentleman's Magazine (for October 1761, xxxi. 447) we take, verbatim, the Translation ; from Preuss (ii. 186) the "Original," who does not say where he got it, whether from an old German Newspaper or not

Land, mein werthes Vaterland, liegt da gleich einer Wüste. Der Ackerbau und die Viehzucht haben aufgehört. Der Bauer und der Hirt sind Soldaten worden, und in den Städten sieht man nur Greise, Weiber und Kinder, vielleicht noch hier und da einen jungen Mann, der aber durch empfangene Wunden ein Krüppel ist und den ihn umgebenden kleinen Knaben die Geschichte einer jeden Wunde mit einem so pathetischen Heulton erzählt, dass ihr Herz schon der Trommel folgt, ehe sie recht gehen können. Was aber das Elend auf den höchsten Gipfel bringt, sind die immer abwechselnden Vorrückungen und Zurückziehungen beider Armeen, da selbst die, so sich unser Freunde nennen, beim Abzuge alles mitnehmen und verheeren, und wenn sie wieder kommen, gleich viel wieder herbei geschafft haben wollen. Von Dero Gerechtigkeit, Sire, hoffen wir Hülfe in dieser äussersten Noth. An Sie, Sire, mögen auch Frauen, ja selbst Kinder ihre Klagen bringen. Sie, die sich auch zur niedrigsten Klasse gütigst herablassen, und dadurch, wenn es möglich ist, noch grösser werden, als selbst durch ihre Siege, werden die meinigen nicht unerhört lassen und, zur Ehre Dero eigenen Ruhmes, Bedrückungen und Drangsalen abhelfen, welche wider alle Menschenliebe und wider alle gute Kriegszucht streiten. Ich bin, &c."

"I am, Sire, &c."

It is remarked that this Young Lady, so amiably melodious in tone, though she might address to King Friedrich, seems to be writing to the wind; and that she gives nothing of fact or picture in regard to Mecklenburg, especially to Mecklenburg-Strelitz, but what is taken from her own beautiful young brain. All operative, vague, imaginary,—some of it expressly untrue.' So that latterly there have been doubts as to its authenticity altogether !¹ And in fact the Piece has a good deal the air of some School-Exercise, Model of Letter-writing, Patriotic Aspiration or the like ;—thrown off, shall we say, by the young Parson of Mirow (Charlotte's late Tutor), with Charlotte there to sign ; or by some Patriotic Schoolmaster elsewhere, anywhere, in a moment of enthusiasm, and without any Charlotte but a hypothetic one ? Certainly it is difficult to fancy how a modest, rational, practical young person like Charlotte can have thought of so airy a feat of archery into the blue ! Charlotte herself never disavowed it, that I heard of ; and to Colonel Grahame the ex-Jacobite, hunting about among potential Queens of England, for behoof of Bute and of a certain Young King and King's Mother, the Letter did seem abundantly unquestionable and adorable. Perhaps authentic, after all ;—and certainly small matter whether or not.

¹ In Mecklenburg-Schwerin, which had always to smart sore for its Duke and the line he took, the Swedes, this year, as usual (but, till Torgau, with more hope than usual), had been trying for winter-quarters: and had by the Prussians, as usual, been hunted out,—Eugen of

CHAPTER VII.

SIXTH CAMPAIGN OPENS : CAMP OF BUNZELWITZ.

To the outward observer, Friedrich stands well at present, and seems again in formidable posture. After two such Victories, and such almost miraculous recovery of himself, who shall say what resistance he will not yet make ? In comparison with 1759 and its failures and disasters, what a Year has 1760 been ! Liegnitz and Torgau, instead of Kunersdorf and Maxen, here are unexpected phenomena ; here is a King risen from the deeps again,—more incalculable than ever to contemporary mankind. "How these things will end ?" Fancy of Württemberg speeding thither, directly after Torgau ; Rostock his winter-quarters ;—who, doubtless with all rigour, is levying contributions for Prussian behoof. But as to Mecklenburg-Strelitz,—see, for example, in Schöning, iii. 30 &c., an indirect but altogether conclusive proof of the perfectly amicable footing now and always subsisting there ; Friedrich reluctant to intrude even with a small request or solicitation, on Eugen's behalf, at this time.

¹ "Boll, Geschichte Meklenburgs mit besonderer Berücksichtigung der Culturgeschichte (Neubrandenburg, 1856), ii. 303-305 ;"—cited by Giesebrecht, who himself takes the opposite view.

what a palpitating interest then, while everybody watched the huge game as it went on ; though it is so little interesting now to anybody, looking at it all finished ! Finished ; no mystery of chance, or world-hope or of world-terror now remaining in it ; all is fallen stagnant, dull, distant ;—and it will behove us to be brief upon it.

Contemporaries, and Posterity that will make study, must alike admit that, among the sons of men, few in any Age have made a stiffer fight than Friedrich has done and continues to do. But to Friedrich himself it is dismally evident, that year by year his resources are melting away ; that a year must come when he will have no resources more. Ebbing very fast, his resources ;—fast too, no doubt, those of his Enemies, but not so fast. They are mighty Nations, he is one small Nation. His thoughts, we perceive, have always, in the back-ground of them, a hue of settled black. Easy to say, “ Resist till we die ; ” but to go about, year after year, practically doing it, under cloudy omens, no end of it visible ahead, is not easy. Many men, Kings and other, have had to take that stern posture ;—few on sterner terms than those of Friedrich at present ; and none that I know of with a more truly stoical and manful figure of demeanour. He is long used to it ! Wet to the bone, you do not regard new showers ; the one thing is, reach the bridge before it be swum away.

The usual hopes, about Turks, about Peace, and the like, have not been wanting to Friedrich this Winter ; mentionable as a trait of Friedrich’s character, not otherwise worth mention. Hope of aid from the Turks, it is very strange to see how he nurses this fond shadow, which never came to anything ! Happily, it does not prevent, it rather encourages, the utmost urgency of preparation : “ The readier we are, the likelier are Turks and everything ! ” Peace, at least between France and England, after such a Proposal on Choiseul’s part, and such a pass as France is really got to, was a reasonable probability. But indeed, from the first year of this War, as we remarked, Peace has seemed possible to Friedrich every year ; especially from 1759 onward, there is always every winter a lively hope of Peace :—“ No slackening of preparation ; the reverse, rather ; but surely the Campaign of next Summer will be cut short, and we shall all get home only half expended ! ”¹

Practically, Friedrich has been raising new Free-Corps people, been recruiting, refitting, and equipping, with more diligence than ever ; and, in spite of the almost impossibilities, has two Armies on foot, some 96,000 men in all, for defence of Saxony and of Silesia,—Henri to undertake Saxony, versus Daun ; Silesia, with Loudon and the Russians, to be Friedrich’s heavier share. The Campaign, of which, by the one party and the other, very great things had been hoped and feared, seemed once as if it would begin two months earlier than usual ; but was staved off, a long time, by Friedrich’s dexterities, and otherwise ; and in effect did not begin, what we can call beginning, till two months later than usual. Essentially it fell, almost all, to Friedrich’s share ; and turned out as little decisive on him as any of its foregoers. The one memorable part of it now is, Friedrich’s Encampment at Bunzelwitz ; which did not occur till four months after Friedrich’s appearance on the Field. And from the end of April, when Loudon made his first attempt, till the end of August, when Friedrich took that Camp, there was nothing but a series of attempts, all ineffectual, of demonstrations, marchings, manœuverings, and small events ; which, in the name of every reader, demand condensation to the utmost. If readers will be diligent, here, so far as needful, are the prefatory steps.

Since Fouquet’s disaster, Goltz generally has Silesia in charge ; and does it better than expected. He was never thought to have Fouquet’s talent in him ; but he shows a rugged loyalty of mind, less egoistic than the fiery Fouquet’s ; and honestly flings himself upon his task, in a way pleasant to look at : pleasant to the King especially, who recognises in Goltz a useful, brave, frank soul ;—and has given him, this Spring, the Order of Merit, which was a high encouragement to Goltz. In Silesia, after Kosel last Year, there had been truce between Goltz and Loudon ; which should have produced repose to both ; but did not altogether, owing to mistakes that rose. And at any rate, in the end of April, Loudon, bursting suddenly into Silesia with great increase to the forces already there, gave notice, as per bargain, That "in 96 hours" the Truce would expire. And waiting punctiliously till the last of said hours was run out, Loudon fell upon Goltz (April 25th, in the Schweidnitz-Landshut Country), with his usual vehemence ;—meaning to get hold of the Silesian Passes, and extinguish Goltz (only 10 or 12,000 against 30,000), as he had done Fouquet last Year.

¹ Schöning (in loco).

But Goltz took his measures better ; seized "the Gallows-Hill of Hohenfriedberg," seized this and that ; and stood in so forcible an attitude, that Loudon, carefully considering, durst not risk an assault ; and the only result was : Friedrich hastened to relief of Goltz (rose from Meissen Country, May 3d), and appeared in Silesia six weeks earlier than he had intended. But again took Cantonments there (Schweidnitz and neighbourhood) ;—Loudon retiring wholly, on first tidings of him, home to Bohemia again. Home in Bohemia ; at Braunau, on the western edge of the Glatz Mountains,—there sits Loudon thenceforth, silent for a long time ; silently collecting an Army of 72,000, with strict orders from Vienna to avoid fighting till the Russians come. Loudon has very high intentions this Year. Intends to finish Silesia altogether ;—cannot he, after such a beginning upon Glatz last year ? That is the firm notion at Vienna among men of understanding : ever-active Loudon the favourite there, against a Cunctator who has been too cunctatory many times. Liegnitz itself, was not that (as many opine) a disaster due to cunctation, not of Loudon's ?

Loudon is to be joined by 60,000 Russians, under a Feldmarschall Butturlin, not under sulky Soltikof, this Year ; junction to be in Upper Silesia, in Neisse neighbourhood. "We take that Fortress," say the Vienna people ; "it is next on the file after Glatz. Neisse taken ; thence northward, cleaning the Country as we go : Brieg, Schweidnitz, Glogau, probably Breslau itself in some good interim : there are but Four Fortresses to do ; and the thing is finished. Let the King, one to three, and Loudon in command against him, try if he can hinder it!" This is the Program in Vienna and in Petersburg. And, accordingly, the Russians have got on march about the end of May; plodding on ever since, due hereabouts before June end; "junction to be as near Neisse as you can: and no fighting of the King, on any terms, till the Russians come." Never were the Vienna people so certain before. Daun is to do nothing "rash" in Saxony (a Daun not given that way, they can calculate), but is to guard Loudon's game; carefully to reinforce, comfort, and protect the brave Loudon and his Russians till they win;—after which, Saxony as rash as you like. This is the Program of the Season:—readers feel what an immensity of preliminary higgings, hitchings and manœuverings will now demand to be suppressed by us! Read these essential Fractions, chiefly chronological;—and then, at once, To Bunzelwitz, and the time of close grips in Silesia here.

"Last Year," says a loose Note, which we may as well take with us, Tottleben did not go home with the rest, but kept hovering about, in eastern Pommern, with a 10,000, all Winter; attempting several kinds of mischief in those Countries, especially attempting to do something on Colberg; which the Russians mean to besiege next Summer, with more intensity than ever, for the Third, and, if possible, the last time. 'Storm their outposts there,' thinks Tottleben, 'especially Belgard, the chief outpost; girdle tighter and tighter the obstinate little crow's-nest of a Colberg, and have it ready for besieging in good time.' Tottleben did try upon the outposts, especially Belgard the chief one (January 18th, 1761), but without the least success at Belgard; with a severe reproof instead, Werner's people being broad awake: upon which Tottleben and they made a truce, 'Peaceable till May 12th; till June 1st, it proved, about which time' (which time, or afterwards, as the Silesian crisis may admit!) "we will look in on them again."

May 3d, as above intimated, Friedrich hastened off for Silesia, quitted Meissen that day, with an Army of some 50,000; pressing intent to relieve Goltz from his dangerous predicament there. This is one of Friedrich's famed marches, done in a minimum of time and with a maximum of ingenuity; concerning which I will remember only that, one night, "he lodged again at Rodewitz, near Hochkirch, in the same house as on that Occasion" (what a thirty months to look back upon, as you sink to sleep!)—"and that no accident anywhere befel the March, though Daun's people, all through Saxony and the Lausitz, were hovering on the flank,—apprehensive chiefly lest it might mean a plunge into Bohemia, for relief of Goltz, instead of what it did." For six weeks after that hard March, the King's people got to Cantonments again, and rested.

¹ Account of it, Helden-Geschichte, vi. 670.

Prince Henri is left in Saxony, with Daun in huge force against him, Daun and the Reich; between whom and Henri,—Seidlitz being in the field again with Henri, Seidlitz and others of mark,—there fell out a great deal of exquisite manœuvring, rapid detaching, and occasional sharp cutting on the small scale; but nothing of moment to detain us here, or afterwards. We shall say only that Henri, to a wonderful extent, maintained himself against the heavy overwhelming Daun and his Austrian and Reichs masses; and that Napoleon, I know not after what degree of study, pronounced this Campaign of 1761 to be the master-piece of Henri, and really a considerable thing, "La campagne de 1761 est celle où ce Prince a vraiment montré des talents supérieurs ; the Battle of Freyberg" (wait till next Year) "nothing in comparison."¹ Which may well detain soldier-people upon it; but must not us, in any measure. The result of Henri being what we said,—a drawn game, or nearly so,—we will, without interference from him, follow Friedrich and Goltz.

Friedrich and Goltz,—or, alas, it is very soon Friedrich alone; the valiant Goltz soon perishing from his hand! After brief junction in Schweidnitz Country, Friedrich detached Goltz to his old fortified Camp at Glogau, there to be on watch. Goltz watching there, lynx-eyed, skilful, volunteered a Proposal (June 22d): "Reinforce me to 20,000, your Majesty; I will attack so and so of those advancing Russians!" Which his Majesty straightway approved of, and set going.² Goltz thereupon tasked all his energies, perhaps overmuch; and it was thought might at last really have done something for the King, in this matter of the Russians still in separate

¹ Montholon, Mémoires de Napoléon, vii. 324.

² Goltz's Letter to the King, "Glogau, 22d June 1761," is in Tempelhof (v. 88-90), who thinks the plan good.

Divisions,—a thing feasible if you have energy and velocity ; always unfeasible otherwise. But, alas, poor Goltz, just when ready to march, was taken with sudden violent fever, the fruit probably of over-work ; and, in that sad flame, blazed away his valiant existence in three or four days :—gone forever, June 30th, 1761 ; to the regret of Friedrich and of many.

Old Ziethen was at once pushed on, from Glogau over the frontier, to replace Goltz ; but, I doubt, had not now the requisite velocity : Ziethen merely manœvered about, and came home “attending the Russians,” as Henri, Dohna and others had done. The Russians entered Silesia, from the north-east or Polish side, without difficulty ; and (July 15th–20th) were within reach of Breslau and of an open road to southward, and to junction with Loudon, who is astir for them there. About Breslau, they linger and higggle, at their leisure, for three weeks longer : and if their junction with the Austrians “in Neisse neighbourhood” is to be prevented or impeded, it is Friedrich, not Ziethen, that will have to do it.

Junction in Neisse neighbourhood (Oppeln, where it should have been, which is some 35 miles from Neisse), Friedrich did, by velocity and dexterity, contrive to prevent ; but junction somewhere he probably knows to be inevitable. These are among Friedrich’s famed marches and manœuverings, these against the swift Loudon and his slow Russians ; but we will not dwell on them. My readers know the King’s manner in such cases ; have already been on two Marches with him, and even in these same routes and countries. We will say only, that the Russians were and had been very dilatory ; Loudon much the reverse ; and their and Loudon’s Adversary still more. That, for five days, the Russians, at length close to Breslau (August 6th–11th), kept vaguely cannonading and belching noise and apprehension upon the poor City, but without real damage to it, and as if merely to pass the time ; and had gradually pushed out fore-posts, as far as Oppeln, towards Loudon, up their safe right bank of Oder. That Loudon, on the first glimpse of these, had made his best speed Neisse-ward ; and did a march or two with good hope ; but at Münsterberg (July 22d), on the morning of the third or fourth day’s march, was astonished to see Friedrich ahead of him, nearer Neisse than he ; and that in Neisse Country there was nothing to be done, no Russian junction possible there.

“Try it in Schweidnitz Country, then !” said Loudon. The Russians leave off cannonading Breslau ; cross Oder, about Auras or Leubus (August 11th-12th); and Loudon, after some finessing, marches back Schweidnitz-way, cautiously, skilfully; followed by Friedrich, anxious to prevent a junction here too, or at lowest to do some stroke before it occur. A great deal of cunning marching, shifting and manœuvring there is, for days round Schweidnitz on all sides; encampings by Friedrich, now Liegnitz headquarter, now Wahlstadt, now Schönbrunn, Striegau;—without the least essential harm to Loudon, or likelihood increasing that the junction can be hindered. No offer of battle either; Loudon is not so easy to beat as some. The Russians come on at a snail's pace, so Loudon thinks it, who is extremely impatient; but makes no mistakes in consequence, keeps himself safe (Kunzendorf, on the edge of the Glatz Hills, his main post), and the roads open for his heavy-footed friends.

In Nicolstadt, a march from Wahlstadt, 16th August, there are 60,000 Russians in front of Friedrich, 72,000 Austrians in rear: what can he, with at the very utmost 57,000, do against them? Now was the time to have fallen upon the King, and have consumed him between two fires, as it is thought might have been possible, had they been simultaneous, and both of them done it with a will. But simultaneity was difficult, and the will itself was wanting, or existed only on Loudon's side. Nothing of the kind was attempted on the confederate part, still less on Friedrich's,—who stands on his guard, and, from the Heights about, has at last to witness what he cannot hinder. Sees both Armies on march; Austrians from the south-east or Kunzendorf-Freyberg side, Russians from the north-east or Kleinerwitz side, wending in many columns by the back of Jauer and the back of Liegnitz respectively; till (August 18th) they “join hands,” as it is termed, or touch mutually by their light troupes; and on the 19th (Friedrich now off on another scheme, and not witnessing), fall into one another's arms, ranked all in one line of posts.¹ “Can the Reichshofrath say our junction is not complete?” And so ends what we called the Prefatory part; and the time of Close Gripes seems to be come!—

Friedrich has now nothing for it but to try if he cannot possibly get hold of Kunzendorf, and cut off Loudon's staff of bread; Loudon's and Butturlin's as well; for the whole 130,000 are now to be fed by Loudon, and no slight task he will find it. By rushing direct on Kunzendorf with such a velocity as Friedrich is capable of, it is thought he might have managed Kunzendorf ; but he had to mask his design, and march by the rear or east side of Schweidnitz, not by the west side : "They will think I am making off in despair, intending for the strong post of Pilzen there, with Schweidnitz to shelter me in front !" hoped Friedrich (morning of the 19th), as he marched off on that errand. But on approaching in that manner, by the bow, he found that Loudon had been quite sceptical of such despair, and at any rate had, by the string, made sure of Kunzendorf and the food-sources. August 20th, at break of day, scouts report the Kunzendorf ground thoroughly beset again, and Loudon in his place there. No use marching thitherward farther :—whither now, therefore ?

¹ Tempelhof, v. 58-150.

Friedrich knows Pilzen, what an admirable post it really is ; except only that Schweidnitz will be between the enemy and him, and liable to be besieged by them ; which will never do ! Friedrich, on the moment of that news from Kunzendorf, gets on march, not by the east side (as intended till the scouts came in), but by the west or exposed side of Schweidnitz :—he stood waiting, ready for either route, and lost not a moment on his scouts coming in. All upon the road by 3 A.M., August 20th ; and encamps, still at an early hour, midway between Schweidnitz and Striegau : right wing of him at Zedlitz, left wing at Jauernik ; headquarters, Bunzelwitz, a poor Village, celebrated ever since in War-annals. And begins (that same evening, the earlier or rested part of him begins) digging and trenching at a most extraordinary rate, according to plan formed ; no enemy taking heed of him, or giving the least molestation. This is the world-famous Camp of Bunzelwitz, upon which it is worth while to dwell for a little.

To common eyes, the ground hereabouts has no peculiar military strength : a wavy champaign, with nothing of abrupt or high, much of it actual plain, excellent for cavalry and their work ;—this latter, too, is an advantage, which Friedrich has well marked, and turns to use in his scheme. The area he takes in is perhaps some seven or eight miles long, by as many broad. On the west side runs the still-young Striegau

Water, defensive more or less ; and on the farther bank of it green little Hills, their steepest side stream-ward. Inexpugnable Schweidnitz, with its stores of every kind, especially with its store of cannon and of bread, is on the left or east part of the circuit ; in the intervening space are peaceable farm-villages, spots of bog ; knolls, some of them with wood. Not a village, bog, knoll, but Friedrich has caught up, and is busy profiting by. "Swift, Bursche, dig ourselves in here, and be ready for any quotity and quantity of them, if they dare attack !'

And 25,000 spades and picks are at work, under such a Field-Engineer as there is not in the world when he takes to that employment. At all hours, night and day, 25,000 of them : half the Army asleep, other half digging, wheeling, shovelling ; plying their utmost, and constant as Time himself : these, in three days, will do a great deal of spade-work. Batteries, redoubts, big and little ; spare not for digging. Here is ground for Cavalry, too ; post them here, there, to bivouac in readiness, should our Batteries be unfortunate. Long Trenches there are, and also short ; Batteries commanding every in-gate, and under them are Mines : "We will blow you and our Batteries both into the air, in case of capture !" think the Prussians, the common men at least, if Friedrich do not. "Mines, and that of being blown into the air," says Tempelhof, "are always very terrible to the common man." In places there are "Trenches 16 feet broad, by 16 deep," says an admiring Archenholtz, who was in it : "and we have two of those Flatterminen (scatter-mines," blowing-up apparatuses) "to each battery."

"Bunzelwitz, Jauernik, Tschechen, and Peterwitz, all fortified," continues Archenholtz ; "Würben, in the centre, is like a citadel, looking down upon Striegau Water. Heavy cannon, plenty of them, we have brought from Schweidnitz : we have 460 pieces of cannon in all, and 182 mines. Würben, our citadel and centre, is about five miles from Schweidnitz. Our entrenchments"— You already heard what gulfs some of them were ! "Before the lines are palisades, storm-posts, the things we call Spanish Horse (chevaux-de-frise);—woods we have in abundance in our Circuit, and axes busy for carpenteries of that kind. There are four entrenched knolls; 24 big batteries, capable of playing beautifully, all like pieces in a concert." Four knolls elaborately entrenched, clothed with cannon; founded upon flatter-mines: try where you will to enter, such torrents of death-shot will converge on you, and a concert of 24 big batteries begin their music!—

¹ Archenholtz, ii. 262, &c.

On the third day, Loudon, looking into this thing, which he has not minded hitherto, finds it such a thing as he never dreamt of before. A thing strong as Gibraltar, in a manner;—which it will be terribly difficult to attack with success! For eight days more Friedrich did not rest from his spade-work; made many changes and improvements, till he had artificially made a very Stolpen of it, a Plauen, or more. Cogniazo, the Austrian Veteran, says: "Plauen, and Daun's often-ridiculed precautions there, were nothing to it. Not as if Bunzelwitz had been so inaccessible, as our sheer rocks there; but because it is a masterpiece of Art, in which the principles of tactics are combined with those of field-fortifications, as never before." Tielke grows quite eloquent on it: "A masterpiece of judgment in ground," says he; "and the treatment of it a model of sound, true, and consummate field engineering."¹

Ziethen, appointed to that function, watches on the Heights of Würben, the citadel of the place: keeps a sharp eye to the south-west. 'All round, in huge half-moon on the edge of the Hills over there, six or more miles from Ziethen, lie the angry Enemies; Austrians south and nearest, about Kunzendorf and Freyberg. Russians are on the top of Striegau Hills, which are well known to some of us; Russian headquarter is Hohenfriedberg,—who would have thought it, Herr General von Ziethen? Sixteen years ago, we have seen these Heights in other tenantry: Austrian field-music and displayed banners coming down; a thousand and a thousand Austrian watch-fires blazing out yonder, in the silent June night, eve of such a Day ! Bayreuth Dragoons and their No. 67 ;—you will find the Bayreuth Dragoons still here in a sense, but also in a sense not. Their fencing Chasot is gone to Lübeck long since ; will perhaps pay Friedrich a visit by and by : their fiery Gessler is gone much farther, and will never visit anybody more ! Many were the reapers then, and they are mostly gone to rest. Here is a new harvest ; the old sickles are still here ; but the hands that wielded them— ! —“ Steady ! ” answers the Herr General ; profoundly aware of all that, but averse to words upon it.

¹ Tielke, iii. § Bunzelwitz (which is praised as an attractive Piece); Oesterreichischer Veteran, iv. 79: cited in Preuss, ii. 285.

Fancy Loudon’s astonishment, on the third day : “ While we have sat consulting how to attack him, there is he,—unattackable, shall we say ? ” Unattackable, Loudon will not consent to think him, though Butturlin has quite consented. “ Difficult, murderous,” thinks Loudon ; “ but possible, certain, could Butturlin but be persuaded ! ” And tries all his rhetoric on Butturlin : “ Shame on us ! ” urges the ardent Loudon : “ Imperial and Czarish Majesties ; Kriegshofrath, Russian Senate ; Vienna, Petersburg, Versailles, and all the world,—what are they expecting of us ? To ourselves it seemed certain, and here we sit helplessly gazing ! ” Loudon is very diligent upon Butturlin : “ Do but believe that it is possible. A plan can be made ; many plans : the problem is solved, if only your Excellency will believe.” Which Butturlin never quite will.

Nobody knows better than Friedrich in what perilous crisis he now stands : beaten here, what army or resource has he left ? Silesia is gone from him ; by every likelihood, the game is gone. This of Bunzelwitz is his last card ; this is now his one stronghold in the world :—we need not say if he is vigilant in regard to this. From about the fourth day, when his engineering was only complete in outline, he particularly expects to be attacked. On the fifth night he concludes it will be ; knowing Loudon’s way. Towards sunset, that evening (August 25th), all the tents are struck : tents, cookeries, every article of baggage, his own among the rest, are sent to Würben Heights (to Schweidnitz, Archenholtz says ; but has misremembered) : the ground cleared for action. And horse and foot, every man marches out, and stands ready under arms.

Contrary to everybody's expectation, not a shot was heard, that night. Nor the next night, nor the next : but the practice of vigilance was continued. Punctual as mathematics : at a given hour of the afternoon, tents are all struck ; tents and furnitures, field swept clear ; and the 50,000 in their places wait under arms. Next morning, nothing having fallen out, the tents come back ; the Army (half of it at once, or almost the whole of it, according to aspects) rests, goes to sleep if it can. By night there is vigilance, is work, and no sleep. It is felt to be a hard life, but a necessary.

Nor in these labours of detail is the King wanting ; far from it ; the King is there, as ear and eye of the whole. For the King alone there is, near the chief Battery, "on the Pfarrberg, namely, in the clump of trees there," a small Tent, and a bundle of straw where he can lie down, if satisfied to do so. If all is safe, he will do so ; perhaps even still he soon awakens again ; and strolls about among his guard-parties, or warms himself by their fires. One evening, among the orders, is heard this item : "And remember, a lock of straw, will you,—that I may not have to sleep on the ground, as last night !"¹ Many anecdotes are current to this day, about his pleasant homely ways and affabilities with the sentry people, and the rugged hospitalities they would show him at their watchfires. "Good evening, children." "The same to thee, Fritz." "What is that you are cooking ?"—and would try a spoonful of it, in such company ; while the rough fellows would forbid smoking, "Don't you know he dislikes it ?" "No, smoke away !" the King would insist.

Mythical mainly, these stories ; but the dialect of them true ; and very strange to us. Like that of an Arab Sheik among his tribesmen ; like that of a man whose authority needs no keeping up, but is a Law of Nature to himself and everybody. He permits a little bantering even ; a rough joke against himself, if it springs sincerely from the complexion of the fact. The poor men are terribly tired of this work : such bivouack-

¹ Seyfarth, iii. 16 n.

ing, packing, unpacking ; and continually waiting for the tug of battle, which never comes. Biscuits, meal are abundant enough ; but flesh meat wearing low ; above all, no right sleep to be had. Friedrich's own table, I should think, is very sparingly beset ("A cup of chocolate is my dinner on marching-days," wrote he once, this Season) ; certainly his Lodging,—damp ground, and the straw sometimes forgotten,—is none of the best. And thus it has to last, night after night and day after day. On September 8th, General Bülow went out for a little butcher's-meat ; did bring home "200 head of neat cattle" (I fear, not very fat) "and 300 sheep."¹

Loudon, all this while, is labouring, as man seldom did, to bring Butturlin to the striking place ;—who continues flaccid, Loudon screwing and rescrowing, altogether in vain. Loudon does not deny the difficulty ; but insists on the possibility, the necessity : Councils of War are held, remonstrances, encouragements. "We will lend you a Corps," answers Butturlin ; "but as to our Army coöperating,—except in that far-off way, it is too dangerous !" Meanwhile provisions are running low ; the time presses. A formal Plan, presented by the ardent Loudon,—Loudon himself to take the deadlier part,—"Mark it, noble Russian gentleman ; and you to have the easier !"—surely that is loyal, and not in the old cat's-paw way ? But in that, too, there is an offence. Butturlin and the Russians grumble to themselves : "And you take all the credit, as you did at Kunersdorf ? A mere adjunct, or auxiliary, we :—and we are a Feldmarschall ; and you, what is your rank and seniority ?" In short, they will not do it ; and in the end coldly answer : "A Corps, if you like ; but the whole Army, positively no." Upon which Loudon goes home half mad ; and has a colic for eight-and-forty hours. This was September 2d ; the final sour refusal ;—nearly heart-breaking to Loudon. Provisions are run so low withal ; the Campaign season all but done ; result, nothing : not even an attempt at a result.

No Prussian, from Friedrich downwards, had doubted but

¹ Tempelhof, v. 172.

the attack would be : the grand upshot and fiery consummation of these dark continual hardships and nocturnal watchings. Thrice over, on different nights, the Prussians imagined Loudon to have drawn out, intending actual business ; and thrice over to have drawn in again,—instead of once only, as was the fact, and then taken colic.¹ Friedrich's own notion, that "over dinner, glass in hand," the two Generals had, in the enthusiasm of such a moment, agreed to do it, but on sober inspection found it too dubious,² appears to be ungrounded. Whether they could in reality have stormed him, had they all been willing, is still a question ; and must continue one. Wednesday evening, 9th September, there was much movement noticeable in the Russian camp ; also among the Austrian, there are regiments, foot and horse, coming down hitherward : "Meaning to try it, then ?" thought Friedrich, and got at once under arms. Suppositions were various ; but about 10 at night, the whole Russian Camp went up in flame ; and, next morning, the Russians were not there.

Russian main Army clean gone ; already got to Jauer, as we hear ; and Beck with a Division to see them safe across the Oder ;—only Czernichef and 20,000 being left, as a Corps of Loudon's. Who, with all Austrians, are quiet in their Heights of Kunzendorf again. And thus on the twentieth morning, September 10th, this strange Business terminated. Shot of those batteries is drawn again ; powder of those mines lifted out again : no firing of your heavy Artillery at all, nor even of your light, after such elaborate charging and shoving of it hither and thither for the last three weeks. The Prussians cease their bivouacking, nightly striking of tents ; and encamp henceforth in a merely human manner ; their "Spanish Riders" (Frisian Horse, Chevaux-de-Frise, others of us call them), their Storm-pales and elaborate wooden Engineerings, they gradually burn as fuel in the cold nights ; finding Loudon absolutely quiescent, and that the thing is over, for the present. One huge peril handsomely staved away, though so many others impend.

¹ Tempelhof, v. 170.

² Œuvres de Frédéric, v. 125.

By way of accelerating Butturlin, Friedrich, next day, September 11th, despatched General Platen with some 8,000 (so I will guess them from Tempelhof's enumeration by battalions), to get round the flank of Butturlin, and burn his Magazines. Platen, a valiant skilful person, did this business, as he was apt to do, in a shining style; shot dextrously forward by the skirts of Butturlin; heard of a big Wagenburg or Travelling Magazine of his, at Gostyn over the Polish Frontier; in fact, his travelling bread-basket, arranged as "Wagon-fortress" in and round some Convent there, with trenches, brick-walls, cannon, and defence considered strong enough for so important a necessary of the road. September 15th, Platen, before cock-crow, burst out suddenly on this Wagon-fortress, with its cannons, trenches, brick-walls and defensive Russians; stormed into it with extraordinary fury: "Fixed bayonets, ordered he, at the main point of their defence, "not a shot till they are tumbled out!"—tumbled them out accordingly, into flight and ruin; took of prisoners 1,845, seven cannon, and burnt the 5,000 provender wagons, which was the soul of the adventure; and directly got upon the road again.¹ Detachments of him then fell on Posen, on Posen and other small Russian repositories in those parts,—hay-magazines, biscuit-stores, soldiers' uniforms; distributed or burnt the same;—completely destroying the travelling haversack or general road-bag of Butturlin: a Butturlin that will have to hasten forward or starve.

Which done, Platen (not waiting the King's new orders, but anticipating them, to the King's great contentment) marched instantly, with his best speed and skilfullest contrivance of routes and methods, not back to the King, but onward towards Colberg,—(which he knows, as readers shall anon, to be much in need of him at present);—and without injury, though begirt all the way by a hurricane of Cossacks and light people doing their utmost upon him, arrived there, September 25th; victoriously cutting in across the Besieging Party: and will again be visible enough when we arrive there.

¹ Tempelhof, v. 281-293; Helden-Geschichte, vi. 643-649.

Indignant Butturlin chased violently, eager to punish Platen ; but could get no hold : found Platen was clear off, to Pommern,—on what errand Butturlin knew well, if not so well what to do in consequence. “Reinforce our poor Besiegers there, and again reinforce” (to enormous amounts, 40,000 of them in the end);—“get bread from them withal:—and, before long, flow bodily thitherward, for bread to ourselves and for their poor sake !” That, on the whole, was what Butturlin did.

Friedrich stayed at Bunzelwitz above a fortnight after Butturlin. “Why did not Friedrich stay altogether, and wait here?” said some, triumphantly soon after. That was not well possible. His Schweidnitz Magazine is worn low : not above a month’s provision now left for so many of us. The rate of sickness, too, gets heavier and heavier in this Bunzelwitz Circuit. In fine, it is greatly desirable that Loudon, who has nothing but Bohemia for outlook, should be got to start thither as soon as possible, and be quickened homeward. September 25th–26th, Friedrich will be under way again.

And, in the mean while, may not we employ this fortnight of quiescence in noting certain other things of interest to him and us, which have occurred, or are occurring, in other parts of the Field of War? Of Henri in Saxony we undertook to say nothing ; and indeed hitherto,—big Daun with his Lacys and Reichsfolk, lying so quiescent, tethered by considerations (Daun continually detaching, watching, for support of his Loudon and Russians and their thrice-important operation, which has just had such a finish),—there could almost nothing be said. Nothing hitherto, or even henceforth, as it proves, except mutual vigilances, multifarious bickerings, manœuvrings, affairs of posts : sharp bits of cutting (Seidlitz, Green Kleist, and other sharp people there) ; which must not detain us in such speed. But there are two points, the Britannic-French Campaign, and the Third Siege of Colberg ; which in no rate of speed could be quite omitted.

Of Ferdinand's Battle of Vellinghausen (15th-16th July); and the Campaign 1761.

Vellinghausen is a poor little moory Hamlet in Paderborn County, near the south or left bank of the Lippe River; lies to the north of Soest,—some 15 miles to your left-hand there, as you go by rail from Aachen to Paderborn;—but nobody now has ever heard of it at Soest or elsewhere, famous as it once became a hundred years ago. Ferdinand had taken a singular position there, in the early days of July 1761. Here is brief Notice of that Affair, and of some results, or adjuncts, still more important, which it had :

“This Year, Ferdinand's Campaign is more difficult than ever; Choiseul having made a quite spasmodic effort towards Hanover, while negotiating for Peace. Two Armies, counting together 160,000 men, in great completeness of equipment, Choiseul has got on foot, against Ferdinand's of 95,000. Had a fine dashing plan, too;—devised by himself (something of a Soldier, he too, and full of what the messrooms call ‘dash’);—not so bad a Plan of the dashing kind, say judges. But it was marred sadly in one point: That Broglio, on issuing from his Hessian Winter-quarters, is not to be sole General; that Soubise, from the Lower Rhine Country, is to be Co-General;—such the inexorable will of Pompadour. This clause of the business Ferdinand, at an early stage, appears to have guessed or discerned might, for him, be the saving clause.

“Now, as formerly, Ferdinand's first grand business is to guard Lippstadt,—guard it now from these two Generals:—and, singular to see, instead of opposing the junction of them, he has submitted cheerfully to let them join. And in the course of a week or two after taking the field, is found to be on the western or outmost flank of Soubise, crushing him up towards Broglio, not otherwise! And has, partly by accident, taken a position at Vellinghausen which infinitely puzzles Broglio and Soubise, when they rush into junction at Soest (July 6th), and study the thing, with their own eyes, ‘for eight whole days, in concert.’ What continual reconnoitering, galloping about of high-plumed gentlemen together or apart; what memoir-ing, mutual consulting, beating of brains, to little purpose, during those eight days!—

“Ferdinand stands in moory difficult ground, length of him about eight miles, looking eastward ; with his left at Vellinghausen and the Lippe ; centre of him is astride of the Ahse (centre partly, and right wing wholly, are on the south side of Ahse), which is a branch of Lippe ; and in front, he has various little Hamlets, Kirch-Denkern" (Kirch-Denkern, for there are three or four other Denkers thereabouts), "Scheidingen, Wambeln, and others ; and his right wing is covered farther by a quaggy brook, which runs into the above-said Ahse, and is a sub-branch of Lippe. At most of these Villages Ferdinand has thrown up something of earthworks : there are bogs, rough places, woods ; all are turned to advantage. Ferdinand is in a strongish, but yet a dangerous position ; and will give difficulties, and does give endless dubieties, to these high-plumed gentlemen galloping about with their spyglasses for eight days. One possibility they pretty soon discern in him : His left flank rests on Lippe, yes ; but his right flank is in the air, has nothing to rest on ;—here surely is some possibility for us ? A strong Position, that of his ; but if driven out of it by any method, he has no retreat ; is tumbled back into the angle where Ahse and Lippe meet, and into the little Town of Hamm there, where his Magazine is. What a fate for him, if we succeed !—

"Ferdinand, by the incessant reconnoitering and other symptoms, judges what is coming ; concludes he will be attacked in this posture of his ; and on the whole, what critics now reckon very wise and very courageous of him, determines to stand his chance in it. The consultations of Broglio and Soubise are a thing unique to look upon ; spread over volumes of Official Record, and about a volume and a half even of Bourcet, where it is still almost amusing to read ;' and ending in helpless downbreak on both parts. Of strategic faculty nobody supposes they had much, and nearly all of it is in Broglio ; Soubise being strong in Court-favor only. Exquisitely polite they both strive to be ; and under the exquisite politeness, what infirmities of temper, splenetic suspicions, and in fact mutual hatred lay hidden, could never be accurately known. 'Attack him, Sunday next ; on the 13th !' so, at the long last, both of them had said. And then, on more reflexion, Broglio afterwards: 'Or not till the 15th, M. le Prince; till I reconnoitre yet again, and drive in his outposts?' 'M. le Maréchal's will is always mine: Tuesday, 15th, reconnoitre him, drive him in; be it so, then!' answers Soubise, with extreme politeness,—but thinking in his own mind (or thought to be thinking), 'Wants to do it himself, or to get the credit of doing it, as in former cases; and bring me into disgrace!' Not quite an insane notion either, on Soubise's part, say some who have looked into the Broglio-Soubise Controversy;—which far be it from any of us, at this or at any time, to do. Here are the facts that ensued.

¹ Mémoires Historiques (that is to say, for most part, Selection of Official Papers) sur la Guerre que les Français ont soutenue en Allemagne depuis 1757 jusqu'au 1762 : Par M. de Bourcet, Lieutenant-Général des Armées du Roi (3 tomes, Paris, 1792) ;—worthily done ; but occupied, two-thirds of it, with this Vellinghausen and the paltry "Campaign of 1761 !"

Tuesday, July 15th, 1761, Broglio reconnoitered with intensity all day, drove in all Ferdinand's outposts; and about six in the evening, seeing hope of surprise, or spurred by some notion of doing the feat by himself, suddenly burst into onslaught on Ferdinand's Position: 'Vellinghausen yonder, and the woody strengths about,—could not we get hold of that; it would be so convenient tomorrow morning!' Granby and the English are in camp about Vellinghausen; and are taken quite on the sudden: but they drew out rapidly, in a state of bottled indignation, and fought, all of them,—Pembroke's Brigade of Horse, Cavendish's of Foot, Berg-Schotten, Maxwell's Brigade, and the others, in a highly satisfactory way,—'mit unbeschreiblicher Tapferkeit,' says Mauvillon on this occasion again. Broglio truly has burst out into enormous cannonade, musketaile, and calvary-work, in this part; and struggles at it, almost four hours,—a furious, and especially a very noisy business, charging, recharging through the woods there;—but, met in this manner, finds he can make nothing of it; and about 10 at night, leaves off till a new morning.

"Next morning; about 4, Broglio, having diligently warned Soubise overnight, recommenced; again very fiercely, and with loud cannonading; but with result worse than before. Ferdinand overnight, while Broglio was warning Soubise, had considerably strengthened his left wing here,—by detachments from the right or Anti-Soubise wing; judging, with good foresight, how Soubise would act. And accordingly, while poor Broglio kept storming forward with his best ability, and got always hurled back again, Soubise took matters easy; 'had understood the hour of attack to be' so-and-so, 'had understood' this and that; and on the whole, except summoning or threatening, in the most languid way, one outlying redoubt ('redoubt of Scheidingen') on Ferdinand's right wing, did nothing, or next to nothing, for behoof of his Broglio. Who, hour after hour, finds himself ever worse bested ;—those Granby people proving ‘indescribable’ once more” (their Wutgenau also, with his Hanoverians, not being absent, as they rather were last night) ;—“and about 10 in the morning, gives up the bad job ; and sets about retiring. If retiring be now permissible ; which it is not altogether. Ferdinand, watching intently through his glass the now silent Broglio, discerns ‘Some confusion in the Maréchal yonder!’—and orders a general charge of the left wing upon Broglio ; which considerably quickened his retreat ; and broke it into flight, and distressful wreck and capture, in some parts,—Regiment Rouge, for one item, falling wholly, men, cannon, flags and furniture, to that Maxwell and his Brigade.

“Ferdinand lost, by the indistinct accounts, ‘from 1,500 to 2,000 :’ Broglio’s loss was ‘above 5,000 ; 2,000 of them prisoners.’ Soubise, for his share, ‘had of killed 24,’—O you lag-gard of a Soubise !’ And it is a Battle lost to Choiseul’s grand Pair of Armies ; a Campaign checked in mid volley ; and nothing but recriminations, courts-martial, shrieky jargonings,—and plain incompatibility between the Two Maréchaux de France ; so that they had to part company, and go each his own road henceforth. Choiseul remonstrates with them, urges, encourages ; writes the ‘admirablest Despatches ;’ to no purpose. ‘How ridiculous and humiliating would it be for us, if, with Two Armies of such strength, we accomplished nothing, and the whole Campaign were lost !’ writes he once to them.

“Which was in fact the result arrived at ; the two Generals parting company for this Campaign (and indeed for all others) ; and each, in his own way, proving futile. Soubise, with some 30,000, went gasconading about, in the Westphalian, or extreme western parts ; taking Embden (from two Companies of Chelsea Pensioners ; to whom he broke his word, poor old souls ;—to whom, and much more to the Populations there'), —taking Embden, not taking Bremen ; and in fact doing nothing, except keep the Gazetteers in vain noise : a Soubise not in force, by himself, to shake Ferdinand ; and who, it is remarked, now and formerly, always prefers to be at a good distance from that Gentleman. Broglio, on the other hand, keeps violently pulsing out, round Ferdinand's flanks ; taking Wolfenbüttel (Broglio's for two days), besieging Brunswick (for one day) ;—and, in short, leaving, he too, the matter as he had found it. A man of difficult, litigious temper, I should judge ; but clearly has something of generalship : 'does understand tactic, if strategy not,' said everybody ; 'while Soubise, in both capacities, is plain zero !' ' The end, however, was : next Winter, Broglio got dismissed, in favour of Soubise ;—rest from shrieky jargon having its value to some of us ; and 'hold of Hanover' being now plainly a matter hopeless to France and us."

¹ Mauvillon, ii. 171–189 ; Tempelhof, v. 207–221 ; Bourcet, ii. 75 et seq. In Helden-Geschichte (vi. 770–782–792) the French Account, and the English (or Allied), with Lists, and the like. Slight Letter from Sir Robert Murray Keith to his Excellency Papa, now at Petersburg, “Excellency first,” as we used to define him, stands in the miserably edited Memoirs and correspondence (London, 1849), i. 104–5 ; and may tempt you to a reading ; but alters nothing, adds little or nothing. Sir R. fights here as a Colonel of Highlanders, but afterwards became “Excellency second” of his name.

In this Battle a fine young Prince of Brunswick got killed ; Erbprinz's second Brother ;—leading on a Regiment of Berg-Schotten, say the accounts.' Berg-Schotten, and English generally, Pembroke's Horse, Cavendish's Brigade,—we have mentioned their behaviour ; and how Maxwell's Brigade took one whole regiment prisoners, in that final charge on Broglio. "What a glorious set of fellows !" said the English people over their beer, at home. Beer let us fancy it ; at the Sign of The Marquis of Granby, which is now everywhere prevalent and splendid ;—the beer, we will hope, good. And as this is a thing still said, both over beer and higher liquors, and perhaps is liable to be too much insisted on, I will give, from a candid Bystander, who knows the matter well, what probably is a more solid and circumstantially correct opinion. Speaking of Ferdinand's skill of management, and of how very composite a kind his Army was, Major Mauvillon has these words :

¹ Letter from a French Protestant Gentleman at Gröningen ; followed by confirmatory Letter from &c. &c. (copied into Gentleman's Magazine for 1761), give special details of the altogether Ultra-Solतिकof atrocities, perpetrated by Soubise's people (doubtless against his will) on the recalcitrant or disaffected Peasants, on the &c. &c.

² Excellency Stanley (see infra) to Pitt, "Paris, 30th July 1761 : " in Thackeray, II. 561-2.

³ "The Life of Prince Albert Henry" (had lived only 19 years, poor youth, not much of a "Life !" —but the account of his Education is worth reading, from a respectable Eyewitness) "of Brunswick-Luneburg, Brother to the Hereditary Prince ; who so eminently &c. at Fellinghausen &c. &c. (London, Printed for &c. 1763). Written originally in German by the Rev. Mr. Hierusalem" (Father of the "Young Jerusalem" who killed himself afterwards, and became, in a sense, Goethe's Werther and Sorrows). Price, probably, Two-pence.

"The first in rank," of Ferdinand's Force, "were the English ; about a fourth part of the whole Army. Braver troops, when on the field of battle and under arms against the enemy, you will nowhere find in the world : that is a truth ;—and with that the sum of their military merits ends. In the first place, their Infantry consists of such an unselected hand-over-head miscellany of people, that it is highly difficult to preserve among them even a shadow of good discipline,"—of Mannszucht, in regard to plunder, drinking and the like ; does not mean Kriegszucht, or drill. "Their Cavalry indeed is not so constituted ; but a foolish love for their horses makes them astonishingly plunderous of forage ; and thus they exhaust a district far faster in that respect than do the Germans.

"Officers' Commissions among them are all had by purchase : from which it follows that their Officers do not trouble their heads about the service ; and understand of it, very very few excepted, absolutely nothing whatever" (what a charming set of "Officers !")—"and this goes from the Ensign up to the General. Their home-customs incline them to the indulgences of life ; and, nearly without exception, they all expect to have ample and comfortable means of sleep." (Hear, hear !) "This leads them often into military negligences, which would sound incredible, were they narrated to a soldier. To all this is added a quiet natural arrogance (Uebermuth),"—very quiet, mostly unconscious, and as if inborn and coming by discernment of mere facts,—“which tempts them to despise the enemy as well as the danger ; and as they very seldom think of making any surprisal themselves, they generally take it for granted that the enemy will as little.

"This arrogance, however, had furthermore a very bad consequence for their relation to the rest of the Army. It is well known how much these people despise all Foreigners. This of itself renders their coöperating with Troops of other Nations very difficult. But in this case there was the circumstance that, as the Army was in English pay, they felt a strong tendency to regard their fellow-soldiers and copartners as a sort of subordinate war-valets, who must be ready to put up with anything :—which was far indeed from being the opinion of the others concerned ! The others had not the smallest notion of consenting to any kind of inferior treatment or consideration in respect of them. To the Hanoverians especially, from known political feelings, they were at heart, for most part, specially indisposed ; and this mode of thinking was capable of leading to very dangerous outbreaks. The Hanoverians, a dull steady people, brave as need be, but too slow for anything but foot service, considered silently this War to be their War, and that all the rest, English as well, were here on their " (and Britannic Majesty's) " account.

"Think what difficulties Ferdinand's were, and what his merit in quietly subduing them ; while to the cursory observer they were invisible, and nobody noticed them but himself !"

Yes, doubtless. He needed to know his kinds of men ; to regard intensely the chemic affinities and natural properties, to keep his phosphorescents, his nitres and charcoals well apart ; to get out of these English what they were capable of giving him, namely, heavy strokes,—and never ask them for what they had not : them or the others ; but treat each according to his kind. Just, candid, consummately polite ; an excellent manager of men, as well as of war-movements, though Voltaire found him shockingly defective in esprit. The English, I think, he generally quartered by themselves ; employed them oftenest under the Hereditary Prince,—a man of swift execution and prone to strokes like themselves. "Oftenest under the Erbprinz," says Mauvillon : "till, after the Fight of Kloster Kampen, it began to be noticed that there was a change in that respect ; and the messrooms whispered, 'By accident or not ?'"—which shall remain mysterious to me. In Battle after Battle he got the most unexceptionable sabering and charging from Lord Granby and the difficult English element ; and never was the least discord heard in his Camp ;—nor could even Sackville at Minden tempt him into a loud word.

But enough of English soldiering, and battling with the French. For about two months prior to this of Vellinghausen, and for more than two months after, there is going on, by special Envoys between Pitt and Choiseul, a lively Peace-Negotiation, which is of more concernment to us than any Battle. "Congress at Augsburg" split upon formalities, preliminaries, and never even tried to meet: but France and England are actually busy. Each Country has sent its Envoy: the Sieur de Bussy, a tricky gentleman, known here of old, is Choiseul's, whom Pitt is on his guard against; "Mr. Hans Stanley," a lively, clear-sighted person, of whom I could never hear elsewhere, is Pitt's at Paris: and it is in that City, between Choiseul and Stanley, with Pitt warily and loftily presiding in the distance, that the main stress of the Negotiation lies. Pitt is lofty, haughty, but very fine and noble; no King or Kaiser could be more. Sincere, severe, though most soft-shining; high, earnest, steady, like the stars. Artful Choiseul, again, flashes out in a cheerily exuberant way; and Stanley's Despatches about Choiseul ("ce fou plein d'esprit," as Friedrich once christens him),—about Choiseul and the France then round him, and the effects of Vellinghausen in society, and the like,—are the liveliest reading one almost anywhere meets with in that kind.¹ Choiseul frankly admits that he has come to the worse: ready for concessions, but the question is, What? Canada is gone, for instance; of Canada you will allow us nothing: but our poor Fisher-people, toiling in the Newfoundland waters, cannot they have a rock to dry their fish on; Isle of Miquelon, or the like?" "Not the breadth of a blanket,"—that is Pitt's private expression, I believe; and for certain, that, in polite official language, is his inexorable determination. "You shall go home out of those Countries, Messieurs; America is to be English or Yankee, not Frangcee: that has turned out to be the Decree of Heaven; and we will stand by that."

¹ Mauvillon, ii. 270-272.

So that Choiseul soon satisfies himself it will be a hard bargain, this with Pitt; and turns the more assiduously to the Majesty of Spain (Baby Carlos, our old friend, who has sore grudges of his own against the English, standing grievances of Campeachy Logwood, of bitter Naples reminiscences, and enough else),—turns to Baby Carlos, time after time, with his pathetic “See, your Most Catholic Majesty!” And by rapid degrees induces Most Catholic Majesty to go wholly into the adventure with Most Christian Ditto;—and to say, at length, or to let Choiseul say for him, by way of cautious first-step (15th July, a date worth remembering, if the reader please): “might not Most Catholic Majesty be allowed perhaps to mediate a little in this Business?” “Most Catholic Majesty!” answers Pitt, with a flash as if from the empyrean: “Who sent for Most Catholic Majesty?”—and the matter catches fire, totally explodes, and Spain too declares War; in what way is generally known.

¹ In Thackeray, i. 505-579, and especially ii. 520-626, is the Stanley-and-Pitt Correspondence: Stanley went, "23d May;" return, "got his passports for returning," "September 20th."

Details are not permitted us. The Catastrophe we shall give afterwards, and can here say only: First, That old Earl Marischal, Friedrich’s Spanish Envoy, is a good deal in England, coming and going, at this time,—on that interesting business of the Kintore Inheritance, doubtless,—and has been beautifully treated. Been pardoned, disattainted, permitted to inherit,—by the King on the instant, by the Parliament so soon as possible;—and is of a naturally grateful turn. Secondly, That in the profoundest secrecy, penetrable only to eyes near at hand and that see in the dark, a celebrated Bourbon Family Compact was signed (August 15th, 1761, ten days before the Digging at Bunzelwitz began), of which the first news to the Olympian man (conveyed by Marischal, as is thought) was like—like news of dead Pythons pretending to revive upon him. And thirdly, That, postponing the Catastrophe, and recommending the above two dates, 15th July, 15th August, to careful readers, we must hasten to Colberg for the present.

Third Siege of Colberg.

Readers had, some while ago, a flying Note, which we promised to take up again; about Tottleben’s procedures, and a Third Siege of Colberg coming. Siege, we have chanced to see, there accordingly is, and a Platen gone to help against it. Siege, after infinite delays and haggles, has at length come,—uncommonly vivid during the final days of Bunzelwitz;—and is, and has been, and continues to be, much in the King's thoughts. Probably a matter of more concernment to him, before, during, and after Bunzelwitz (though the Pitt Catastrophe, going on simultaneously, is still more important, if he knew it), than anything else befalling in the distance. Let us now give a few farther indications on that matter.

¹ King’s Patent is of “30th April 1760” (dated 29th May 1750), “Act of Parliament to follow shortly;” “August 10th, 1760, Act having passed, is Marischal’s public Presentation to his Majesty” (late Majesty): Old Gazettes in Gentleman’s Magazine (for 1760), xxx. 201, 392.

Truce between Werner and Tottleben expired, May 12th; but for five weeks more nothing practical followed; except diligent reinforcing, revictualling, and extraordinary fortifying of Colberg and its environs, on the Prussian part,—Eugen of Würtemberg, direct from Rostock and his Anti-Swede business, Eugen 12,000 strong, with a Werner and other such among them, taking head charge outside the walls; old Heyde again as Commandant within: while on the Russian part, under General Romanzow, there is a most tortoise-like advance,—except that the tortoise carries all his resources with him, and Romanzow's, multifarious and enormous, are scattered over seas and lands, and need endless waiting for, in the intervals of crawling.

This is the Romanzow who failed at Colberg once already (on the heel of Zorndorf in 1758, if readers recollect); and is the more bound to be successful now. From sea and from land, for five weeks, there is rumour of a Romanzow in overwhelming force, and with intentions very furious upon Colberg,—upon the outposts, under Werner, as first point. Five weeks went, before anything of Romanzow was visible even to Werner (22d June, at Cöslin, forty miles to eastward); after which his advance (such waiting for the ships, for the artilleries, the this and the that) was slower than ever; and for about eight weeks more, he haggles along through Cöslin, through Corlin, Belgard again, flowing slowly forward upon Werner's outposts, like a summer glacier with its rubbishes; or like a slow lava-tide,—a great deal of smoke on each side of him (owing to the Cossacks), as usual. Romanzow's progress is of the slowest ; and it is not till August 19th that he practically gets possession of Cörlin, Belgard and those outposts on the Persante River, and comes within sight of Colberg and his problem. By which time, he finds Eugen of Würtemberg encamped and entrenched still ahead of him, still nearer Colberg, and likely to give him what they call "de la tablature," or extremely difficult music to play.

"It was on August 19th" (very eve of Friedrich's going into Bunzelwitz), "that Romanzow,—Werner, for the sake of those poor Towns he holds, generally retiring without bombardment or utter conflagration,—had got hold of Cörlin and of the River Persante" (with "Quetzin and Degow," if anybody knew them, as his main posts there) : "and was actually now within sight of Colberg,—only 7 or 8 miles west of him, and a river more or less in his way :—when, singular to see, Eugen of Würtemberg has rooted himself into the ground farther inward, environing Colberg with a fortified Camp as with a second wall ; and it will be a difficult problem indeed !

"But Sea Armaments, Swedish-Russian, with endless siege-material and red-hot balls, are finally at hand ; and this pitiful Colberg must be done, were it only by falling flat on it, and smothering it by weight of numbers and of red-hot iron. The day before yesterday, August 17th, after such rumouring and such manœuvring as there has been, six Russian ships-of-war showed themselves in Colberg Roads, and three of them tried some shooting on Heyde's workpeople, busy at a redoubt on the beach ; but hit nothing, and went away till Romanzow himself should come. Romanzow come, there is utmost despatch ; and within the eight days following, the Russian ships, and then the Swedish as well, have all got to their moorings,—12 sail of the line, with 42 more of the frigate and gunboat kind, 54 ships in all ;—and from August 24th, especially from August 28th, bombardment to the very uttermost is going on.' Bombardment by every method, from sea and from land, continues diligent for the next fortnight,—with little or no result ; so diligent are Eugen and veteran Heyde.

"September 4th. The Swedish-Russian gunboats have been much shot down by Heyde's batteries on the beach ; no success had, owing to Heyde and Eugen : paltry little Colberg as impossible as Bunzelwitz, it seems? 'Double our diligence, therefore!' That is Romanzow's and everybody's sentiment here. Romanzow comes closer in, September 4th; besieges in form, since not Colberg, Eugen's Camp, or brazen wall of Colberg; and there rises in and round this poor little Colberg (a 2,000 balls daily, red-hot and other) such a volcano as attracts the eyes of all the world thither.

¹ Tempelhof, v. 811.

"September 12th. News yesterday of reinforcement, men and provender, coming from Stettin; is to be at Treptow on the 13th. Werner, night of the 11th, stealthily sets out to meet it, it in the first place; then, joined with it, to take by rearward a certain inconvenient battery, which Romanzow is building to westward of us, out that way; to demolish said battery, and be generally distressful to the rear of Romanzow. At Treptow, after his difficult night's march, Werner is resting, secure now of the adventure;—too contemptuous of his slow Russians, as appeared! Who, for once, surprise him; and, at and round Treptow, next morning, Werner finds himself suddenly in a most awkward predicament. Werner, one of the rapidest and stormiest of skilful men, plunged valiantly into the affair; would still have managed it, they say, had not, in some sudden swoop,—charge, or something of critical or vital nature,—rapid Werner's horse got shot, and fallen with him; whereby not only the charge failed, but Werner himself was taken prisoner. A loss of very great importance, and grievous to everybody: though, I believe, the reinforcement and supply, for this time, got mostly through, and the dangerous battery was got demolished by other means.' This is Romanzow's first item of success, this of getting such a Werner snatched out of the game" (and sent to Petersburg instead, as we shall hear); "and other items fell to Romanzow thenceforth by the aid of time and hunger.

"In the way of storming, battering, or otherwise capturing Eugen's Camp, not to speak of Heyde's town, Romanzow finds, on trial after trial, that he can do as good as nothing; and his unwieldy sea-comrades (equinoctial gales coming on them, too) are equally worthless. September 19th" (a week after this of Werner, tenth day after Bunzelwitz had ended), "Romanzow made his fiercest attempt that way; fiercest and last: furious extremely, from 2 in the morning onwards: had for some time hold of the important 'Green Redoubt,' but was still more furiously battered and bayoneted out again, with the loss of above 3,000 men ; and tried that no farther. Impossible by that method. But he can stand between the Eugen-Heyde people and supplies ; and by obstinacy hunger them out : this, added to the fruitless bombardment, is now his more or less fruitful industry.

¹ Seyfarth, Beylagen, iii. 238; Tempelhof, v. 314.

“In the end of September, the effects of Bunzelwitz are felt : Platen, after burning the Butturlin Magazine at Gostyn, has hastened hither ; in what style we know. Platen arrives, 25th September ; cuts his way through Romanzow into Eugen’s Camp, raises Eugen to about 15,000 ;¹ renders Eugen, not to speak of Heyde, more impossible than ever. Butturlin did truly send reinforcements, a 10,000, a 12,000, ‘As many as you like, my Romanzow !’ And, in the beginning of October, came rolling thitherward bodily ; hoping, they say, to make a Maxen of it upon those Eugens and Platens : but after a fortnight’s survey of them, found there was not the least feasibility ;—and that he himself must go home, on the score of hunger. Which he did, November 2d ; leaving Romanzow reinforced at discretion” (40,000, but with him too provisions are fallen low), “and the advice, ‘Cut off their supplies : time and famine are our sole chances here !’ Butturlin’s new Russians, endless thousands of them, under Fermor and others, infesting the roads from Stettin, are a great comfort to Romanzow. Nor could any Eugen,—with his Platens, Thaddens, and utmost expenditure of skill and of valour and endurance, which are still memorable in soldier-annals,²—suffice to convey provisions through that disastrous Wilderness of distances and difficulties.

“From Stettin, which lies south-west, through Treptow, Gollnow, and other wild little Prussian Towns, is about 100 miles ; from Lansberg south, 150 : Friedrich himself is well-nigh 300 miles away ; in Stettin alone is succour, could we hold the intervening Country. But it is overrun with Russians, more and ever more. A Country of swamps and moors, winter darkness stealing over it,—illuminated by such a volcano as we see : a very gloomy waste scene ; and traits of stubborn human valour and military virtue plentiful in it, with utter hardship as a constant quantity : details not permissible here, only the main features and epochs, if they could be indicated.

¹ Tempelhof, v. 350.

² Tagebuch der Unternehmungen des Platenschen Corps vom September bis November 1761 (Seyfarth, Beylagen, iii. 32-76). Bericht von der Unternehmungen des Thaddenschen Corps vom Jenner bis zum December 1761 (ibid. 77-147).

"The King is greatly interested for Colberg; sends orders to collect from every quarter supplies at Stettin, and strain every nerve for the relief of that important little Haven. Which is done by the diligent Bevern, the collecting part, could only the conveying be accomplished. But endless Russians are afield, Fermor with a 15,000 of them waylaying; the conveyance is the difficulty."¹——

But now we must return to Bunzelwitz, and September 25th, in Headquarters there.

CHAPTER VIII.

LOUDON POUNCES UPON SCHWEIDNITZ, ONE NIGHT (LAST OF SEPTEMBER, 1761).

It was September 25th, more properly 26th,² when Friedrich quitted Bunzelwitz; we heard on what errand. Early that morning, he marches with all his goods, first to Pilzen (that fine post on the east side of Schweidnitz); and from that, straightway,—south-westward, two marches farther,—to Neisse neighbourhood (Gross-Nossen, the name of the place); Loudon making little dispute or none. In Neisse are abundant Magazines: living upon these, Friedrich intends to alarm Loudon's rearward country, and draw him towards Bohemia. As must have gradually followed; and would at once,—had Loudon been given to alarms, which he was not. Loudon, very privately, has quite different game afield. Loudon merely detaches this and the other small Corps to look after Friedrich's operations, which probably he believes to be only a feint:—and, before a week passes, Friedrich will have news he little expects!

Friedrich, pausing at Gross-Nossen, and perhaps a little surprised to find no Loudon meddling with him, pushes out, first one party and then another,—Dalgwig, Bülow, towards Landshut Hill-Country, to threaten Loudon's Bohemian roads;—who, singular to say, do not hear the least word of Loudon thereabouts. A Loudon strangely indifferent to this new Enterprise of ours. On the third day of Gross-Nossen (Friday, October 2d), Friedrich detaches General Lentulus to rearward, or the way we came, for news of Loudon. Rearward too, Lentulus sees nothing whatever of Loudon: but, from the rumour of the country, and from two Prussian garrison-soldiers, whom he found wandering about,—he hears, with horror and amazement, That Loudon, by a sudden panther-spring, the night before last, has got hold of Schweidnitz: now his wholly, since 5 A.M. of yesterday; and a strong Austrian garrison in it by this time! That was the news Lentulus brought home to his King; the sorest Job's-post of all this War.

¹ Bericht von den Unternehmungen der Württembergischen Corps in Pommern, vom May 1761 bis December 1761 (Seyfarth, Beylagen, iii. 147-258). Tempelhof, v. 313-326. Helden-Geschichte, vi. 669-708.

² Tempelhof, v. 327.

Truly, a surprising enterprise this of Loudon's; and is allowed by everybody to have been admirably managed. Loudon has had it in his head for some time;—ever since that colic of forty-eight hours, I should guess; upon the wrecks of which it might well rise as a new daystar. He kept it strictly in his own head; nobody but Daun and the Kaiser had hint of it, both of whom assented, and agreed to keep silence.

"On Friedrich's removal towards Neisse and threatening of Bohemia," says my Note on this subject, "Loudon's time had come. Friedrich had disappeared to south-westward, Saturday, September 26th: 'Gone to Pilzen,' reported Loudon's scouts; 'rests there over Sunday. Gone to Sigeroth, 28th; gone to Gross-Nossen, Tuesday, September 29th.'" That will do, thinks Loudon; who has sat immovable at Kunzendorf all this while;—and, Wednesday 30th, instantly proceeds to business.

"Draws out, about 10 A.M. of Wednesday, all round Schweidnitz at some miles distance, a ring, or complete girdle of Croat-Cossack people; blocking up every path and road: 'Nobody to pass, this day, towards Schweidnitz, much less into it, on any pretext.' That is the duty of the Croat people. To another active Officer he intrusts the task of collecting from the neighbouring Villages (outside the Croat girdle) as many ladders, planks, and the like, as will be requisite ; which also is punctually done. For the Attack itself, which is to be Fourfold, four picked Officers are chosen, with the 20 best Battalions in the Army : Czernichef is apprised ; who warmly assents, and offers every help :—' 800 of your Grenadiers,' answers Loudon ; ' no more needed.' Loudon's arrangements for management of the ladders, for punctuality about the routes, the times, the simultaneity, are those of a perfect artist ; no Friedrich could have done better.

¹ Tempelhof, v. 830.

" About 4 in the afternoon, all the Captains and Battalions, with their ladders and furnitures, everybody with Instruction very pointed and complete, are assembled at Kunzendorf : Loudon addresses the Troops in a few fiery words ; assures himself of victory by them ; promises them 10,000*l.* in lieu of plunder, which he strictly prohibits. Officers had better make themselves acquainted with the Four Routes they are to take in the dark : proper also to set all your watches by the chief General's, that there be no mistake as to time.' At 9, all being now dark, and the Croat girdle having gathered itself closer round the place since nightfall, the Four Divisions march to their respective starting-places ; will wait there, silent ; and about 2 in the morning, each at its appointed minute, step forward on their Business. With fixed bayonets all of them ; no musketry permitted till the works are won. Loudon will wait at the Village of Schönbrunn" (not Warkotsch's Schönbrunn, of which by and by, and which also is not far),—" at Schönbrunn, within short distance ; give Loudon notice when you are within 600 yards ;—there shall, if desirable, be reinforcements, farther orders. Loudon knows Schweidnitz like his own bedroom. He was personally there, in Leuthen time, improving the Works. By nocturnal Croat parties, in the latter part of Bunzelwitz time ; and since then, by deserters and otherwise,—he knows the condition of the Garrison, of the Commandant, and of every essential point. Has calculated that the Garrison is hardly third part of what it ought to be,—3,800 in whole, and many of them loose deserter fellows ; special artillery-men, instead of about 400, only 191 ;—most important of all, that Commandant Zastrow is no wizard in his trade ; and, on the whole, that the Enterprise is likely to succeed.

¹ In Tempelhof (v. 332-349) and Archenholtz (ii. 272-280) all these details.

² See Archenholtz, ii. 287 ; and correct his mistake of the two places.

“Zastrow has been getting married lately ; and has many things to think of, besides Schweidnitz. Some accounts say this was his wedding-night,—which is not true, but only that he had meant to give a Ball this last night of September ; and perhaps did give it, dancing over before 2, let us hope ! Something of a jolter-head, seemingly, though solid and honest. I observe he is a kind of butt, or laughing-stock, of Friedrich’s, and has yielded some gleams of momentary fun, he and this marriage of his, between Prince Henri and the King, in the tragic gloom all round.’ Nothing so surprises me in Friedrich as his habitual inattention to the state of his Garrisons. He has the best of Commandants and also the worst : Tauentzien in Breslau, Heyde in Colberg, unsurpassable in the world ; in Glatz a D’O ; in Schweidnitz a Zastrow, both of whom cost him dear. Opposition sneers secretly, ‘It is as they happen to have come to hand.’ Which has not much truth, though some. Tauentzien he chose ; D’O was Fouquet’s choice, not his ; Zastrow he did choose ; Heyde he had by accident ; of Heyde he had never heard till the defence of Colberg began to be a world’s wonder. And in regard to his Garrisons, it is indisputable they were often left palpably defective in quantity and quality : and, more than once, fatally gave way at the wrong moment. We can only say that Friedrich was bitterly in want of men for the field ; that ‘a Garrison-Regiment’ was always reckoned an inferior article ; and that Friedrich, in the press of his straits, had often had to say : ‘Well, these’ (plainly Helots, not Spartans), ‘these will have to do !’ For which he severely suffered : and perhaps repented,—who knows ?

“Zastrow, in spite of Loudon’s precautionary Girdle of Croats, and the cares of a coming Ball, had got sufficient inkling of something being in the wind. And was much on the Walls all day, he and his Officers ; scanning with their glasses and their guesses the surrounding phenomena, to little purpose. At night he sent out patrols ; kept sputtering with musketry and an occasional cannon into the vacant darkness (‘We are alert, you see, Herr Loudon !’). In a word, took what measures he could, poor man ;—very stupid measures, thinks Tempelhof, and almost worse than none, especially this of sputtering with musketry ;—and hoped always there would be no Attack, or none to speak of. Till, in fine, between 2 and 3 in the morning, his patrols gallop in, 'Austrians on march!' and Zastrow, throwing out a rocket or two, describes in momentary illumination that the Fact is verily here.

¹ Schöning, ii. (acpius).

"His defence (four of the Five several Forts attacked at once) was of a confused character; but better than could have been expected. Loudon's Columns came on with extraordinary vigor and condensed impetuosity; stormed the Outworks everywhere, and almost at once got into the shelter of the Covered-way: but on the Main Wall, or in the scaling part of their business, were repulsed, in some places twice or thrice; and had a murderous struggle, of very chaotic nature, in the dark element. No picture of it in the least possible or needful here. In one place, a Powder-Magazine blew up with about 400 of them,—blown (said rumour, with no certainty) by an indignant Prussian artillery-man to whom they had refused quarter: in another place, the 800 Russian Grenadiers came unexpectedly upon a chasm or bridgeless interstice between two ramparts; and had to halt suddenly,—till (says rumour again, with still less certainty) their Officers insisting with the rearward part, 'Forward, forward!' enough of front men were tumbled in to make a roadway! This was the story current; greatly exaggerated, I have no doubt. What we know is, That these Russians did scramble through, punctually perform their part of the work;—and furthermore that, having got upon the Town-Wall, which was finis to everything, they punctually sat down there; and, reflectively leaning on their muskets, witnessed with the gravity and dignity of antique sages, superior to money or money's worth, the general plunder which went on in spite of Loudon's orders.

"For, in fine, between 5 and 6, that is in about three hours and a half, Loudon was everywhere victorious; Zastrow, Schweidnitz Fortress, and all that it held, were Loudon's at discretion; Loudon's one care now was to stop the pillage of the poor Townsfolk, as the most pressing thing. Which was not done without difficulty, nor completely till after hours of exertion by cavalry regiments sent in. The captors had fought valiantly; but it was whispered there had been a preliminary of brandy in them; certainly, except those poor Russians, nobody's behaviour was unexceptionable."

The capture of Schweidnitz cost Loudon about 1,400 men; he found in Schweidnitz, besides the Garrison all prisoners or killed, some 240 pieces of artillery,—“211 heavy guns, 135 hand-mortars,” say the Austrian Accounts, “with stores and munitions” in such quantities; “89,760 musket-cartridges, 1,300,600 flints,”¹ for two items:—and all this was a trifle compared to the shock it has brought on Friedrich’s Silesian affairs. For, in present circumstances, it amounts to the actual conquest of a large portion of Silesia; and, for the first time, of a real prospect of finishing the remainder next Year. It is judged to have been the hardest stroke Friedrich had in the course of this War. “Our strenuous Campaign, on a sudden rendered wind, and of no worth! The Enemy to winter in Silesia, after all; Silesia to go inevitably,—and life along with it!” What Friedrich’s black meditations were, nobody knows. “In the following weeks” (not close following, but poor Küster does not date), “the King fell ill of gout, saw almost nobody, never came out; and, it was whispered, the inflexible heart of him was at last breaking; that is to say, the very axis of this Prussian world giving way. And for certain, there never was in his camp and over his dominions such a gloom as in this October 1761; till at length he appeared on horseback again, with a cheerful face; and everybody thought to himself, ‘Ha, the world will still roll, then!’”²

¹ Archenholtz, ii. 275.

This is what Loudon had done, without any Russians, except Russians to give him eight-and-forty hours colic, and put him on his own shifts. And the way in which the Kriegshofrath, and her Imperial Majesty the Kaiserinn, received it, is perhaps still worth a word. The Kaiser, who had alone known of Loudon’s scheme, and for good reason (absolute secrecy being the very soul of it) had whispered nothing of it further to any mortal, was naturally overjoyed. But the Olympian brow of Maria Theresa, when the Kaiser went radiant to her with this news, did not radiate in response; but gloomed indignantly: “No order from Kriegshofrath, or

¹ In Helden-Geschichte (vi. 651–665) the Austrian Account, with Lists &c.

² Küster, Lebens-Rettungen Friedrichs des Zweyten (Berlin, 1797), p. 59 &c. It is the same innocent reliable Küster whom we cited, in Saltern’s case, already.

me!" Indignant Kriegshofrath called it a Croatenstreich (Croat's-trick); and Loudon, like Prince Eugene long since, was with difficulty excused this act of disobedience. Great is Authority;—and ought to be divinely rigorous, if (as by no means always happens) it is otherwise of divine quality!

Friedrich's treatment of Zastrow was in strong contrast of style. Here is his Letter to that unlucky Gentleman, who is himself clear that he deserves no blame: "My dear Major-General von Zastrow,—The misfortune that has befallen me is very grievous; but what consoles me in it is, to see by your Letter that you have behaved like a brave Officer, and that neither you nor the Garrison have brought disgrace or reproach on yourselves. I am your well-affectioned King,—FRIEDRICH." And in Autograph this Postscript: "You may, in this occurrence, say what Francis I., after the Battle of Pavia, wrote to his Mother: 'All is lost except honour.' As I do not yet completely understand the affair, I forbear to judge of it; for it is altogether extraordinary.—F."¹

And never meddled farther with Zastrow; only left him well alone for the future. "Grant me a Court-Martial, then!" said Zastrow, finding himself fallen so neglected, after the Peace. "No use," answered Friedrich: "I impute nothing of crime to you; but after such a mishap, it would be dangerous to trust you with any post or command;"—and in 1766, granted him, on demand, his demission instead. The poor man then retired to Cassel, where he lived twenty years longer, and was no more heard of. He was half-brother of the General Zastrow who got killed by a Pandour of long range (bullet through both temples, from brushwood, across the Elbe), in the first year of this War.

¹ Militair-Lexicon, iv. 305, 306 (Letter undated there; date probably, "Gross-Nossen, October 3d").

CHAPTER IX.

TRAITOR WARKOTSCH.

FRIEDRICH's Army was to have cantoned itself round Neisse, October 3d : but on the instant of this fatal Schweidnitz news, proceeded (3d-6th October) towards Strehlen instead, —Friedrich personally on the 5th ;—and took quarters there in the villages round. General cantonment at Strehlen, in guard of Breslau and of Neisse both ; Loudon, still immovable at Kunzendorf, attempting nothing on either of those places, and carefully declining the risk of a Battle, which would have been Friedrich's game : all this continued till the beginning of December, when both parties took Winter-quarters ;¹ cantoned themselves in the neighbouring localities,—Czernichef, with his Russians, in Glatz Country ; Friedrich in Breslau as headquarter ;—and the Campaign had ended. Ended in this part, without farther event of the least notability ;—except the following only, which a poor man of the name of Kappel has recorded for us. Of which, and the astounding Sequel to which, we must now say something.

Kappel is a Gentleman's Groom of those Strehlen parts ; and shall, in his own words, bring us face to face with Friedrich in that neighbourhood, directly after Schweidnitz was lost. It is October 5th, day, or rather night of the day, of Friedrich's arrival thereabouts ; most of his Army ahead of him, and the remainder all under way. Friedrich and the rearward part of his Army are filing about, in that new Strehlen-ward movement of theirs, under cloud of night, in the intricate Hill-and-Dale Country ; to post themselves to the best advantage for their double object, of covering Breslau and Neisse both. Kappel loquitur ; abridged by Küster, whom we abridge :

" Monday Night, October 5th, 1761, The King, with two or three attendants, still ahead of his Army, appeared at Schön-

¹ Tempelhof, v. 349.

brunn, a Schloss and ^{Warkotsch} Strehlen; and ^{Warkotsch} Kriegshofrath called it a Croatenstreich quaintance o; and Honour of lodging there. Before bedtime,—if indeed the King intended bed at all, meaning to be off in four hours hence,—Friedrich inquired of Warkotsch for 'a trusty man, well acquainted with the roads in this Country.' Warkotsch mentioned Kappel, his own groom; one who undoubtedly knew every road of the Country; and who had always behaved as a trusty fellow in the seven years he had been with him. 'Let me see him,' said the King. Kappel was sent up, about midnight, King still dressed; sitting on a sofa, by the fire: Kappel's look was satisfactory; Kappel knows several roads to Strehlen, in the darkest night: 'It is the footpath which goes so-and-so that I want' (for Friedrich knows this Country intimately: readers remember his world-famous Camp of Strehlen, with all the diplomacies of Europe gathered there, through summer, in the train of Möllwitz). 'Ja, Ihro Majestät, I know it!' 'Be ready, then, at 4.'

"Before the stroke of 4, Kappel was at the door, on Master's best horse; the King's Groom too, and led horse, a nimble little gray, were waiting. As 4 struck, Friedrich came down, Warkotsch with him, 'Unspeakable the honour you have done my poor house!' Besides the King's Groom, there were a Chamberlain, an Adjutant, and two mounted Chasers (reitende Jäger), which latter had each a lighted lantern: in all seven persons, including Kappel and the King. 'Go before us on foot with your lanterns,' said the King. Very dark it was. And over-night the Army had arrived all about; some of them just coming in, on different roads and paths. The King walked above two miles, and looked how the Regiments were, without speaking a word. At last, as the cannons came up, and were still in full motion, the King said: 'Sharp, sharp, Bursche; it will be March directly.' 'March? The Devil it will: we are just coming into Camp!' said a cannonier, not knowing it was the King.

"The King said nothing. Walked on still a little while; then ordered, 'Blow out the lanterns; to horseback now!' and mounted, as we all did. Me he bade keep five steps ahead; five and not more, that he might see me; for it was very dark. Not far from the Lordship Casserey, where there is a Water-

¹ This is the Warkotsch Schönbrunn; not the other near Schweidnitz, as Archenholtz believes: see Archenholts, ii. 287, and the bit of myth he has gone into in consequence.

... you missed the Bridge
... topographies which may come to concern him!)—and ride with the utmost silence, and make no jingle. As day broke, we were in sight of Strehlen, near by the Farm of Treppendorf. 'And do you know where the Kallenberg lies?' said the King: 'It must be to left of the Town, near the Hills; bring us thither!'

"When we got on the Kallenberg, it was not quite day; and we had to halt for more light. After some time, the King said to his Groom, 'Give me my perspective!' looked slowly all round for a good while, and then said, 'I see no Austrians!'
—(ground all at our choice, then; we know where to choose!)
'The King then asked me if I knew the road to—in fact, to several places, which, in a Parish History of those parts, would be abundantly interesting, but must be entirely omitted here." * * * "The King called his Chamberlain; gave some sign, which meant 'Beer-money to Kappel!'—and I got four eight-groschen pieces" (three shillings odd; a rich reward in those days); "and was bid tell my Master, 'That the King thanked him for the good quarters, and assured him of his favour.'"

"Riding back across country, Kappel, some four or five miles homeward, came upon the 'whole Prussian Army,' struggling forward in their various Columns. Two Generals, —one of them Krusemark, King's Adjutant (Colonel Krusemark, not General, as Kappel thinks, who came to know him some weeks after),—had him brought up: to whom he gave account of himself, how he had been escorting the King, and where he had left his Majesty. 'Behind Strehlen, say you?
Breslau road? Devil knows whither we shall all have to go yet!' observed Krusemark, and left Kappel free."¹

In those weeks, Colberg Siege, Pitt's Catastrophe, and high things are impending, or completed, elsewhere: but this is the one thing noticeable hereabouts. In regard to Strehlen, and Friedrich's history there, what we have to say turns all upon this Kappel and Warkotsch: and,—after mentioning only that Friedrich's lodging is not in Strehlen proper, but in Weiselwitz, a village or suburb almost half a mile off, and very negligently guarded,—we have to record an Adventure which then made a great deal of noise in the world.

¹ Küster, Lebens-Rettungen, pp. 66-76.

Warkotsch is a rich lord ; Schönbrunn only one of five or six different Estates which he has in those parts ; though, not many years ago, being younger brother, he was a Captain in the Austrian service (Regiment Botta, if you are particular); and lay in Olmütz,—with very dull outlooks ; not improved, I should judge, by the fact that Silesia and the Warkotsch connexions were become Prussian since this junior entered the Austrian Army. The junior had sown his wild oats, and was already getting gray in the beard, in that dull manner, when, about seven years ago, his Elder Brother, to whom Friedrich had always been kind, fell unwell ; and, in the end of 1755, died : whereupon the junior saw himself Heir ; and entered on a new phase of things. Quitted his Captaincy, quitted his allegiance ; and was settled here peaceably under his new King in 1756, a little while before this War broke out. And, at Schönbrunn, October 5th, 1761, has had his Majesty himself for guest.

Warkotsch was not long in riding over to Strehlen to pay his court, as in duty bound, for the honour of such a Visit ; and from that time, Kappel, every day or two, had to attend him thither. The King had always had a favour for Warkotsch's late Brother, as an excellent Silesian Landlord and Manager, whose fine Domains were in an exemplary condition ; as, under the new Warkotsch too, they have continued to be. Always a gracious Majesty to this Warkotsch as well ; who is an old soldier withal, and man of sense and ingenuity ; acceptable to Friedrich, and growing more and more familiar among Friedrich's circle of Officers now at Strehlen.

To Strehlen is Warkotsch's favourite ride ; in the solitary country, quite a charming adjunct to your usual dull errand out for air and exercise. Kappel, too, remarks about this time that he (Kappel) gets once and again, and ever more frequently, a Letter to carry over to Siebenhuben, a Village three or four miles off ; the Letter always for one Schmidt, who is Catholic Curate there ; Letter under envelope, well sealed,—and consisting of two pieces, if you finger it judiciously. And, what is curious, the Letter never has any address ; Master merely orders, "Punctual ; for Curatus Schmidt, you know !" What can this be ? thinks Kappel. Some secret, doubtless ; perhaps some intrigue, which Madam must not know of,—"Ach, Herr Baron ; and at your age,—fifty, I am sure !" Kappel, a solid fellow, concerned for groom-business alone, punctually carries his Letters ; takes charge of the Responses too, which never have any address ; and does not too much trouble himself with curiosities of an impertinent nature.

To these external phenomena I will at present only add this internal one : That an old Brother Officer of Warkotsch's, a Colonel Wallis, with Hussars, is now lying at Heinrichau,—say, 10 miles from Strehlen, and about 10 from Schönbrunn too, or a mile more if you take the Siebenhuben way ; and that all these missives, through Curatus Schmidt, are for Wallis the Hussar Colonel, and must be a secret, not from Madam alone ! How a Baron, hitherto of honour, could all at once become turpissimus, the Superlative of Scoundrels ? This is even the reason,—the prize is so superlative.

"Monday Night, November 30th, 1761" (night bitter cold), "Kappel finds himself sitting mounted, and holding Master's horse, in Strehlen, more exactly in Woiselwitz, a suburb of Strehlen, near the King's door,—Majesty's travelling coach drawn out there, symbol that Strehlen is ending, general departure towards Breslau now nigh. Not to Kappel's sorrow, perhaps, waiting in the cold there. Kappel waits, hour after hour ; Master taking his ease with the King's people, regardless of the horses and me, in this shivery weather ;—and one must not walk about either, for disturbing the King's sleep ! Not till midnight does Master emerge, and the freezing Kappel and quadrupeds get under way. Under way, Master breaks out into singular talk about the King's lodging : Was ever anything so careless ; nothing but two sentries in the King's anteroom ; thirteen all the soldiers that are in Woiselwitz ; Strehlen not available in less than twenty minutes ; nothing but woods, haggly glens and hills, all on to Heinrichau ; How easy to snatch off his Majesty ! 'Um Gottes Willen, my Lord, don't speak so : think if a patrolling Prussian were to hear it, in the dark !' Pooh, pooh, answers the Herr Baron.

"At Schönbrunn, in the short hours, Kappel finds Frau Kappel in a state of unappeasable curiosity: 'What can it be? Curatus Schmidt was here all afternoon; much in haste to see Master; had to go at last,—for the Church-service, this St. Andrew's Eve. And only think, though he sat with My Lady hours and hours, he left this letter with me: "Give it to your Husband, for my Lord, the instant they come; and say I must have an Answer to-morrow morning at 7." Left it with me, not with My Lady;—My Lady not to know of it!' 'Tush, woman!' But Frau Kappel has been, herself, unappeasably running about, ever since she got this Letter; has applied to two fellow-servants, one after the other, who can read writing, 'Break it up, will you?' But they would not. Practical Kappel takes the Letter up to Master's room; delivers it, with the Message. 'What, Curatus Schmidt!' interrupts My Lady, who was sitting there: 'Herr Good-man, what is that?' 'That is a Letter to me,' answers the Good-man: 'What have you to do with it?' Upon which My Lady flounces out in a huff, and the Herr Baron sets about writing his Answer, whatever it may be.

"Kappel and Frau are gone to bed, Frau still eloquent upon the mystery of Curatus Schmidt, when his Lordship taps at their door; enters in the dark: 'This is for the Curatus, at 7 o'clock to-morrow; I leave it on the table here: be in time, like a good Kappel!' Kappel promises his Unappeasable that he will actually open this Piece before delivery of it; upon which she appeases herself, and they both fall asleep. Kappel is on foot betimes next morning. Kappel quietly pockets his Letter; still more quietly, from a neighbouring room, pockets his Master's big Seal (Petschaft), with a view to resealing: he then steps out; giving his Bursch" (Apprentice or Under-Groom) "order to be ready in so many minutes, 'You and these two horses' (specific for speed); and, in the interim, walks over, with Letter and Petschaft, to the Reverend Herr Gerlach's, for some preliminary business. Kappel is Catholic; Warkotsch, Protestant; Herr Gerlach is Protestant preacher in the village of Schönbrunn,—much hated by Warkotsch, whose standing order is: 'Don't go near that insolent fellow;' but known by Kappel to be a just man, faithful in difficulties of the weak against the strong. Gerlach, not yet out of bed, listens to the awful story: reads the horrid missive; Warkotsch to Colonel Wallis: 'You can seize the King, living or dead, this night!'—hesitates about copying it (as Kappel wishes, for a good purpose); but is encouraged by his Wife, and soon writes a Copy. This Copy Kappel sticks into the old cover, seals as usual; and, with the Original safe in his own pocket, returns to the stables now. His Bursch and he mount; after a little, he orders his Bursch: 'Bursch, ride you to Siebenhuben and Curatus Schmidt, with this sealed Letter; you, and say nothing. I was to have gone myself, but cannot; be speedy, be discreet!' And the Bursch dashes off for Siebenhuben with the sealed copy for Schmidt, Warkotsch, Wallis and Company's behoof; Kappel riding, at a still better pace, to Strehlen with the Original, for behoof of the King's Majesty.

"At Strehlen, King's Majesty not yet visible, Kappel has great difficulties in the anteroom among the sentry people. But he persists, insists: "Read my Letter, then!" which they dare not do; which only Colonel Krusemark, the Adjutant, perhaps dare. They take him to Krusemark. Krusemark reads, all aghast; locks up Kappel; runs to the King; returns, muffles Kappel in soldier's cloak and cap, and leads him in. The King, looking into Kappel's face, into Kappel's clear story and the Warkotsch handwriting, needed only a few questions; and the fit orders, as to Warkotsch and Company, were soon given: dangerous engineers now fallen harmless, blown up by their own petard. One of the King's first questions was: 'But how have I offended Warkotsch?' Kappel does not know; 'Master is of strict wilful turn;—Master would grumble and growl sometimes about the peasant people, and how a nobleman has now no power over them, in comparison.' 'Are you a Protestant?' 'No, your Majesty, Catholic.' 'See, ihr Herren,' said the King to those about him; 'Warkotsch is a Protestant; his Curatus Schmidt is a Catholic; and this man is a Catholic: there are villains and honest people in every creed!'

"At noon, that day, Warkotsch had sat down to dinner, comfortably in his dressing-gown, nobody but the good Baroness there; when Rittmeister Rabenau suddenly descended on the Schloss and dining-room with dragoons: 'In arrest, Herr Baron; I am sorry you must go with me to Brieg!' Warkotsch, a strategic fellow, kept countenance to Wife and Rittmeister, in this sudden fall of the thunderbolt: 'Yes, Herr Rittmeister; it is that mass of Corn I was to furnish' (showing him an actual order of that kind), 'and I am behind my time with it! Nobody can help his luck. Take a bit of dinner with us, any way!' Rittmeister refused; but the Baroness too pressed him; he at length sat down. Warkotsch went ‘to dress ;’ first of all, to give orders about his best horse ; but was shocked to find that the dragoons were a hundred, and that every outgate was beset. Returning half-dressed, with an air of baffled hospitality : ‘Herr Rittmeister, our Schloss must not be disgraced ; here are your brave fellows waiting, and nothing of refreshment ready for them. I have given order at the Tavern in the Village ; send them down ; there they shall drink better luck to me, and have a bit of bread and cheese.’ Stupid Rabenau again consents :—and in a few minutes more, Warkotsch is in the Woods, galloping like Epsom, towards Wallis ; and Rabenau can only arrest Madam (who knows nothing), and return in a baffled state.

“Schmidt too got away. The party sent after Schmidt found him in the little Town of Nimptsch, half way home again from his Wallis errand ; comfortably dining with some innocent hospitable people there. Schmidt could not conceal his confusion ; but pleading piteously a necessity of nature, was with difficulty admitted to the—to the Abtritt so-called ; and there, by some long pole or rake-handle, vanished wholly through a never-imagined aperture, and was no more heard of in the upper world. The Prussian soldiery does not seem expert in thief-taking.

“Warkotsch came back about midnight that same Tuesday, 500 Wallis Hussars escorting him ; and took away his ready moneys, near 5000*l.* in gold, reports Frau Kappel, who witnessed the ghastly operation (Hussars in great terror, in haste, and unconscionably greedy as to sharing) ;—after which our next news of him, the last of any clear authenticity, is this Note to his poor Wife, which was read in the Law Procedures on him some six months hence : ‘My Child (Mein Kind),—The accursed thought I took up against my King has overwhelmed me in boundless misery. From the top of the highest hill I cannot see the limits of it. Farewell ; I am in the farthest border of Turkey.—WARKOTSCH.’”

Schmidt and he, after patient trial, were both of them be-headed and quartered,—in pasteboard effigy,—in the Salt Ring (Great Square) of Breslau, May 1762 :—in pasteboard, Friedrich liked it better than the other way. “Meinetwegen,” wrote he, sanctioning the execution, “For aught I care ; the Portraits will likely be as worthless as the Originals.” Ritt-meister Rabenau had got off with a few days' arrest, and the remark, "Er ist ein dummer Teufel (You are a stupid devil)!" Warkotsch's Estates, all and sundry, deducting the Baroness's jointure, which was punctually paid her, were confiscated to the King,—and by him were made over to the Schools of Breslau and Glogau, which, I doubt not, enjoy them to this day. Reverend Gerlach in Schönbrunn, Kappel and Kappel's Bursch, were all attended to, and properly rewarded, though there are rumours to the contrary. Hussar-Colonel Wallis got no public promotion, though it is not doubted the Head People had been well cognisant of his ingenious intentions. Official Vienna, like mankind in general, shuddered to own him; the great Counts Wallis at Vienna published in the Newspapers, "Our House has no connexion with that gentleman;"—and, in fact, he was of Irish breed, it seems, the name of him Wallisch (or Walsh), if one cared. Warkotsch died at Raab (this side of the farthest corner of Turkey), in 1769: his poor Baroness had vanished from Silesia five years before, probably to join him. He had some pension or aliment from the Austrian Court; small or not so small is a disputed point.

¹ Küster, Lebens-Rettungen, p. 88 : Küster, pp. 65–188 (for the general Narrative) ; Tempelhof, v. 346, &c. &c.

And this is, more minutely than need have been, in authentic form only too diffuse, the once world-famous Warkotsch Tragedy or Wellnigh-Tragic Melodrama; which is still interesting and a matter of study, of pathos and minute controversy, to the patriot and antiquary in Prussian Countries, though here we might have been briefer about it. It would, indeed, have "finished the War at once;" and on terms delightful to Austria and its Generals near by. But so would any unit of the million balls and bullets which have whistled round that same Royal Head, and have, every unit of them, missed like Warkotsch! Particular Heads, royal and other, meant for use in the scheme of things, are not to be hit on any terms till the use is had.

Friedrich settled in Breslau for the Winter, December 9th. From Colberg bad news met him in Breslau; bad and ever worse: Colberg, not Warkotsch, is the interesting matter there, for a fortnight coming,—till Colberg end, it also ir-remediable. The Russian hope on Colberg is, long since, limited to that of famine. We said the conveyance of Supplies, across such a Hundred Miles of wilderness, from Stettin thither, with Russians and the Winter gainsaying, was the difficulty. Our short Note continues :

"In fact, it is the impossibility : trial after trial goes on, in a strenuous manner, but without success. October 13th, Green Kleist tries ; October 22d, Knobloch and even Platen try. For the next two months, there is trial on trial made (Hussar Kleist, Knobloch, Thadden, Platen), not without furious fencing, struggling ; but with no success. There are, in wait at the proper places, 15,000 Russians waylaying. Winter comes early, and unusually severe : such marchings, such endeavourings and endurances,—without success ! For darkness, cold, grim difficulty, fierce resistance to it, one reads few things like this of Colberg. 'The snow lies ell-deep,' says Archenholtz ; 'snow-tempests, sleet, frost : a country wasted and hungered out ; wants fuel-wood ; has not even salt. The soldier's bread is a block of ice ; impracticable to human teeth till you thaw it,—which is only possible by night.' The Russian ships disappear (17th October) ; November 2d, Butturlin, leaving reinforcements without stint, vanishes towards Poland. The day before Butturlin went, there had been solemn summons upon Eugen, 'Surrender honourably, we once more bid you ; never will we leave this ground, till Colberg is ours !' 'Vain to propose it !' answers Eugen, as before. The Russians too are clearly in great misery of want ; though with better roads open for them ; and Romanzow's obstinacy is extreme.

"Night of November 14th-15th, Eugen, his horse-fodder being entirely done, and Heyde's magazines worn almost out, is obliged to glide mysteriously, circuitously from his Camp, and go to try the task himself. The most difficult of marches, gloriously executed ; which avails to deliver Eugen, and lightens the pressure on Heyde's small store. Eugen, in a way Tempelhof cannot enough admire, gets clear away. Joins with Platen, collects Provision ; tries to send Provision in, but without effect. By the King's order, is to try it himself in a collective form. Had Heyde food, he would care little.

"Romanzow, who is now in Eugen's old Camp, summons the Veteran ; they say, it is 'for the twenty-fifth time,'—not yet quite the last. Heyde consults his people ; ‘ Kameraden, what think you should I do ? ’ ‘ Thun Sie’s durchaus nicht, Herr Obrist, Do not a whit of it, Herr Colonel : we will defend ourselves as long as we have bread and powder.’¹ It is grim frost ; Heyde pours water on his walls. Romanzow tries storm ; the walls are glass ; the garrison has powder, though on half rations as to bread : storm is of no effect. By the King’s order, Eugen tries again. December 6th, starts ; has again a march of the most consummate kind ; December 12th, gets to the Russian entrenchment ; storms a Russian redoubt, and fights inexpressibly ; but it will not do. Withdraws ; leaves Colberg to its fate. Next morning, Heyde gets his twenty-sixth summons ; reflects on it two days ; and then (December 16th), his biscuit done, decides to ‘ march out, with music playing, arms shouldered, and the honours of war.’ ” Adieu to the old Hero ; who, we hope, will not stay long in Russian prison.

“ What a Place of Arms for us ! ” thinks Romanzow ; — “ though, indeed, for Campaign 1762, at this late time of year, it will not so much avail us.” No ; — and for 1763, who knows if you will need it then ! ”

Six weeks ago, Prince Henri and Daun had finished their Saxon Campaign in a much more harmless manner. November 5th, Daun, after infinite rallying, marshalling, re-arranging, and counselling with Loudon, who has sat so long quiescent on the Heights at Kunzendorf, ready to aid and reinforce, did at length (nothing of “ rashness ” chargeable on Daun) make “ a general attack on Prince Henri’s outposts,” in the Meissen or Mulda-Elbe Country, “ from Rosswein all across to Sieben-eichen ; ” simultaneous attack, 15 miles wide, or I know not how wide, but done with vigour ; and, after a stiff struggle in the small way, drove them all in ; — in, all of them, more or less ; — and then did nothing farther whatever. Henri had to contract his quarters, and stand alertly on his guard : but nothing came. “ Shall have to winter in straiter quarters, behind the Mulda, not astride of it as formerly ; that is all.”

¹ Seyfarth, iii. 28 ; Archenholtz, ii. 304.

² Tempelhof, v. 351–377 ; Archenholtz, ii. 294–307 ; especially the Seyfarth Beylagen above cited.

And so the Campaign in Saxony had ended, "without, in the whole course of it" (say the Books), "either party gaining any essential advantage over the other."¹

CHAPTER X.

FRIEDRICH IN Breslau ; HAS NEWS FROM PETERSBURG.

SINCE December 9th, Friedrich is in Breslau, in some remainder of his ruined Palace there ; and is represented to us, in Books, as sitting amid ruins ; no prospect ahead of him but ruin. Withdrawn from Society ; looking fixedly on the gloomiest future. Sees hardly anybody ; speaks, except it be on business, nothing. "One day," I have read somewhere, "General Lentulus dined with him ; and there was not a word uttered at all." The Anecdote-Books have Dialogues with Ziethen ; Ziethen still trusting in Divine Providence ; King trusting only in the iron Destinies, and the stern refuge of Death with honour : Dialogues evidently symbolical only. In fact, this is not, or is not altogether, the King's common humour. He has his two Nephews with him (the elder, old enough to learn soldiering, is to be of next Campaign under him) ; he is not without society when he likes,—never without employment whether he like or not ; and in the blackest murk of despondencies has his Turk and other Illusions, which seem to be brighter this Year than ever.²

For certain, the King is making all preparation, as if victory might still crown him : though of practical hope he, doubtless often enough, has little or none. England seems about deserting him ; a most sad and unexpected change has befallen there : great Pitt thrown out ; perverse small Butes come in, whose notions and procedures differ far from Pitt's ! At home here, the Russians are in Pommern and the Neumark ; Austrians have Saxony, all but a poor strip beyond the Mulda ;

¹ Seyfarth, iii. 54 ; Tempelhof, v. 275 et seq. (ibid. pp. 263-280 for the Campaign at large, in all breadth of detail).

² Letters to Henri : in Schöning, iii. (scapilla).

Silesia, all but a fraction on the Oder: Friedrich has with himself 30,000; with Prince Henri 25,000; under Eugen of Würtemberg, against the Swedes, 5,000; in all his Dominions, 60,000 fighting men. To make head against so many enemies, he calculates that 60,000 more must be raised this Winter. And where are these to come from; England and its help having also fallen into such dubiety? Next Year, it is calculated by everybody, Friedrich himself hardly excepted (in bad moments), must be the finis of this long agonistic tragedy. On the other hand, Austria herself is in sore difficulties as to cash; discharges 20,000 men,—trusting she may have enough besides, to finish Friedrich. France is bankrupt, starving, passionate for Peace; English Bute nothing like so ill to treat with as Pitt: to Austria no more subsidies from France. The war is waxing feeble, not on Friedrich's side only, like a flame short of fuel. This Year it must go out; Austria will have to kill Friedrich this Year, if at all.

Whether Austria's and the world's prophecy would have been fulfilled? Nobody can say what miraculous sudden shifts, and outbursts of fiery enterprise, may still lie in this man. Friedrich is difficult to kill, grows terribly elastic when you compress him into a corner. Or Destiny, perhaps, may have tried him sufficiently; and be satisfied? Destiny does send him a wonderful star-of-day, bursting out on the sudden, as will be seen!—Meanwhile here is the English calamity; worse than any Schweidnitz, Colberg, or other that has befallen in this blackest of the night.

The Pitt Catastrophe: how the Peace-Negotiation went off by Explosion; how Pitt withdrew (3d October 1761), and there came a Spanish War nevertheless.

In St. James's Street, "in the Duke of Cumberland's late lodgings," on the 2d of October 1761, there was held one of the most remarkable Cabinet-Councils known in English History: it is the last of Pitt's Cabinet-Councils, for a long time,—might as well have been his last of all;—and is of the highest importance to Friedrich through Pitt. We spoke of the Choiseul Peace-Negotiation; of an offer indirectly from King Carlos, "Could not I mediate a little?"—offer which exploded said Negotiation, and produced the Bourbon Family Compact and an additional War instead. Let us now look, slightly for a few moments, into that matter and its sequences.

It was July 15th, when Bussy, along with something in his own French sphere, presented this beautiful Spanish Appendix,—“apprehensive that War may break out again with Spain, when we Two have got settled.” By the same opportunity came a Note from him, which was reckoned important too: “That the Empress Queen would and did, whatever might become of the Congress of Augsburg, approve of this Separate Peace between France and England, — England merely undertaking to leave the King of Prussia altogether to himself in future with her Imperial Majesty and her Allies.” “Never, Sir!” answered Pitt, with emphasis, to this latter Proposition; and to the former about Spain’s interfering, or whispering of interference, he answered—by at once returning the Paper, as a thing non-extant, or which it was charitable to consider so. “Totally inadmissible, Sir; mention it no more!”—and at once called upon the Spanish Ambassador to disavow such impertinence imputed to his Master. Fancy the colloquies, the agitated consultations thereupon, between Bussy and this Don, in view suddenly of breakers ahead!

In about a week (July 23d), Bussy had an Interview with Pitt himself on this high Spanish matter; and got some utterances out of him which are memorable to Bussy and us. “It is my duty to declare to you, Sir, in the name of his Majesty,” said Pitt, “that his Majesty will not suffer the disputes with Spain to be blended, in any manner whatever, in the Negotiation of Peace between the Two Crowns. To which I must add, that it will be considered as an affront to his Majesty’s dignity, and as a thing incompatible with the sincerity of the Negotiation, to make further mention of such a circumstance.”¹ Bussy did not go at once, after this deliverance; but was unable, by his arguments and pleadings, by all his oil and fire joined together, to produce the least improvement on it: "Time enough to treat of all that, Sir, when the Tower of London is taken sword in hand!"¹ was Pitt's last word. An expression which went over the world; and went especially to King Carlos, as fast it could fly, or as his Choiseul could speed it: and, in about three weeks, produced,—it and what had gone before it, by the united industry of Choiseul and Carlos, finally produced,—the famed Bourbon Family Compact (August 15th, 1761), and a variety of other weighty results, which lay in embryo therein.

¹ In Thackeray, ii. 554;—Pitt next day putting it in writing, “word for word,” at Bussy’s request.

Pitt, in the interim, had been intensely prosecuting, in Spain and everywhere, his inquiry into the Bussy phenomenon of July 15th; which he, from the first glimpse of it, took to mean a mystery of treachery in the pretended Peace-Negotiation, on the part of Choiseul and Catholic Majesty;—though other long heads, and Pitt's Ambassador at Madrid investigating on the spot, considered it an inadvertence mainly, and of no practical meaning. On getting knowledge of the Bourbon Family Compact, Pitt perceived that his suspicion was a certainty;—and likewise that the one clear course was, To declare War on the Spanish Bourbon too, and go into him at once: "We are ready; fleets, soldiers, in the East, in the West; he not ready anywhere. Since he wants War, let him have it, without loss of a moment!" That is Pitt's clear view of the case; but it is by no means Bute and Company's,—who discern in it, rather, a means of finishing another operation they have long been secretly busy upon, by their Maudivits and otherwise; and are clear against getting into a new War with Spain or anybody: "Have not we enough of Wars?" say they.

Since September 18th, there had been three Cabinet-Councils held on this great Spanish question: "Mystery of treachery, meaning War from Spain? Or awkward Inadvertence only, practically meaning little or nothing?" Pitt, surer of his course every time, every time meets the same contradiction. Council of October 2d was the third of the series, and proved to be the last.

¹ Beatson. ii. 434. Archenholtz (ii. 245) has heard of this expression, in a slightly incorrect way.

"Twelve Seventy-fours sent instantly to Cadiz," had been Pitt's proposal, on the first emergence of the Bussy phenomenon. Here are his words, October 2d, when it is about to get consummated: "This is now the time for humbling the whole House of Bourbon: and if this opportunity is let slip, we shall never find another! Their united power, if suffered to gather strength, will baffle our most vigorous efforts, and possibly plunge us in the gulf of ruin. We must not allow them a moment to breathe. Self-preservation bids us crush them before they can combine or collect themselves."—"No evidence that Spain means war; too many wars on our hands; let us at least wait!" urge all the others,—all but one, or one and a half, of whom presently. Whereupon Pitt: "If these views are to be followed, this is the last time I can sit at this Board. I was called to the Administration of Affairs by the voice of the People: to them I have always considered myself as accountable for my conduct; and therefore cannot remain in a situation which makes me responsible for measures I am no longer allowed to guide."¹ Carteret Granville, President of said Council for ten years past,² now an old red-nosed man of seventy-two, snappishly took him up,—it is the last public thing poor Carteret did in this world,—in the following terms: "I find the Gentleman is determined to leave us; nor can I say I am sorry for it, since otherwise he would have certainly compelled us to leave him" (Has ruled us, may not I say, with a rod of iron!) "But if he be resolved to assume the office of exclusively advising his Majesty and directing the operations of the War, to what purpose are we called to this Council? When he talks of being responsible to the People, he talks the language of the House of Commons; forgets that, at this Board, he is only responsible to the King. However, though he may possibly have convinced himself of his infallibility, still it remains that we should be equally convinced, before we can resign our understandings to his direction, or join with him in the measure he proposes."¹.

¹ Beatson, ii. 438.

² Came in, "17th June 1751,"—died, "2d January 1768."

Who, besides Temple (Pitt's Brother-in-law) confirmatory of Pitt, Bute negatory, and Newcastle silent, the other beautiful gentlemen were, I will not ask ; but poor old Carteret,—the wine perhaps sour on his stomach (old age, too, with German memories of his own, " A biggish Life once mine, all futile for want of this same Kingship like Pitt's ! ")—I am sorry old Carteret should have ended so ! He made the above Answer ; and Pitt resigned next day.² " The Nation was thunderstruck, alarmed and indignant," says Walpole :³ yes, no wonder ;—but, except a great deal of noisy jargoning in Parliament and out of it, the Nation gained nothing for itself by its indignant, thunder-stricken, and other feelings. Its Pitt is irrecoverable ; and it may long look for another such. These beautiful recalcitrants of the Cabinet-Council had, themselves, within three months (think under what noises and hootings from a non-admiring Nation), to declare War on Spain,⁴ not on better terms than when Pitt advised ; and, except for the " readiness " in which Pitt had left all things, might have fared differently in it.

To Spain and France, the results of the Family Compact (we may as well give them at once, though they extend over the whole next year and farther, and concern Friedrich very little) were : a War on England (chiefly on poor Portugal for England's sake) ; with a War by England in return, which cost Spain its Havanah and its Philippine Islands.

" From 1760 and before, the Spanish Carlos, his orthodox mind perhaps shocked at Pombal and the Anti-Jesuit procedures, had forbidden trade with Portugal ; had been drawing

¹ Biog. Britannica (Kippis's ; London, 1784), iii. 278. See Thackeray, i. 589-592.

² Thackeray, i. 592 n. " October 5th " (acceptance of the resignation, I suppose ?) is the date commonly given.

³ Memoirs of the Reign of George the Third, i. 82 et seq.

⁴ " 2d January 1762," the English ; " 18th January," the Spaniard (Annual Register for 1762, p. 50 ; or better, Beatson, ii. 443).

out dangerous 'militia forces on the Frontier;' and afflicting and frightening the poor Country. But on the actual arrival of War with England, Choiseul and he, as the first feasibility discernible, made Demand (three times over, 16th March—18th April, 1762, each time more stringently), on poor Portuguese Majesty: 'Give up your objectionable Heretic Ally, and join with us against him; will you, or will you not?' To which the Portuguese Majesty, whose very title is Most Faithful, answered always: 'You surprise me! I cannot; how can I? He is my Ally, and has always kept faith with me! For certain, No!'¹ So that there is English reinforcement got ready, men, money; an English General, Lord Trawley, General and Ambassador; with a 5 or 6,000 horse and foot, and many volunteer officers besides, for the Portuguese behoof.' In short, every encouragement to poor Portugal: 'Pull, and we will help you by tracing.'

"The poor Portuguese pulled very badly: were disgusting to Trawley, he to them; and cried passionately, 'Get us another General;'—upon which, by some wise person's counsel, that singular Artillery General, the Graf von der Lippe Bückeburg, who gave the dinner in his Tent with cannon firing at the pole of it, was appointed; and Trawley came home in a huff.' Which was probably a favourable circumstance. Bückeburg understands War, whether Trawley do or not. Duke Ferdinand has agreed to dispense with his Ordnance-Master; nay, I have heard the Ordnance-Master, a man of sharp speech on occasion, was as good as idle; and had gone home to Bückeburg, this Winter: indignant at the many imperfections he saw, and perhaps too frankly expressing that feeling now and then. What he thought of the Portuguese Army in comparison is not on record; but may be judged of by this circumstance, That on dining with the chief Portuguese military man, he found his Portuguese captains and lieutenants waiting as valets behind the chairs.'

"The improvements he made are said to have been many;—and Portuguese Majesty, in bidding farewell, gave him a

¹ London Gazette, 5th May, 1762, &c. (in Gentleman's Magazine for 1762, xxxii. 205, 321, 411).

² List of all this in Beatson, ii. 491, iii. 323;—"did not get to sea till 12th May 1762" (Gentleman's Magazine for 1762, p. 239).

³ Varnhagen von Ense, Graf Wilhelm zur Lippe (Berlin, 1845), in Vermischte Schriften, i. 1-118: pp. 33-54, his Portuguese operations.

⁴ Varnhagen (gives no date anywhere).

park of Miniature Gold Cannon by way of gracious symbol. But, so far as the facts show, he seems to have got from his Portuguese Army next to no service whatever : and, but for the English and the ill weather, would have fared badly against his French and Spaniards,—42,000 of them, advancing in Three Divisions, by the Douro and the Tagus, against Oporto and Lisbon.

“His War has only these three dates of event. 1°. May 9th, The northmost of the Three Divisions ' crosses the Portuguese Frontier on the Douro ; summons Miranda, a chief Town of theirs ; takes it, before their first battery is built ; takes Braganza, takes Monte Corvo ; and within a week is master of the Douro in that part. ' Will be at Oporto directly ! ' shriek all the Wine people (no resistance anywhere, except by peasants organised by English Officers in some parts) ; upon which Seventy-fours were sent.

“2°. Division Second of the 42,000 came by Beira Country, between Tagus and Douro, by Tras-os-Montes ; and laid siege to a place called Almeida ” (north-west some 20 odd miles from Ciudad Rodrigo, a name once known to veterans of us still living), “ which Bückeburg had tried to repair into strength, and furnish with a garrison. Garrison defended itself well ; but could not be relieved ;—had to surrender, August 25th : whereby it seems the Tagus is now theirs ! all the more, as Division Three is likewise got across from Estremadura, invading Alemtejo : what is to keep these Two from falling on Lisbon together ?

“3°. Against this, Bückeburg does find a recipe. Despatches Brigadier Burgoyne with an English party upon a Town called Valencia d'Alcantara ” (not Alcantara Proper, but Valencia of ditto, not very far from Badajoz), “ where the vanguard of this Third Division is, and their principal Magazine. Burgoyne and his English did perfectly : broke into the place, stormed it sword in hand (August 27th) ; kept the Magazine and it, though ' the sixteen Portuguese Battalions ' could not possibly get up in time. In manner following (say the Old Newspapers) :

“ ‘ The garrison of Almeida, before which place the whole Spanish Army had been assembled, surrendered to the Spaniards on the 25th ’ (August 25th, as we have just heard), ‘ having capitulated on condition of not serving against Spain for six months.

¹ Annual Register for 1762, p. 30.

“ ‘As a counterbalance to this advantage, the Count de Lippe caused Valencia d’Alcantara to be attacked, sword-in-hand, by the British troops ; who carried it, after an obstinate resistance. The loss of the British troops, who had the principal share in this affair, is luckily but inconsiderable : and consists in Lieutenant Burk of Colonel Frederick’s, one sergeant, and three privates killed ; two sergeants, one drummer, 18 privates wounded ; 10 horses killed, and 2 wounded ’ (loss not at all considerable, in a War of such dimensions !) ‘ The British troops behaved upon this occasion with as much generosity as courage ; and it deserves admiration, that, in an affair of this kind, the town and the inhabitants suffered very little ; which is owing to the good order Brigadier Burgoyne kept up even in the heat of the action. This success would probably have been attended with more, if circumstances, that could not well be expected, had not retarded the march of sixteen Portuguese battalions, and three regiments of cavalry.’ ”

“ Upon which—upon which, in fact, the War had to end. Rainy weather came, deluges of rain : Burgoyne, with or without the sixteen Battalions of Portuguese, kept the grip he had. Valencia d’Alcantara and its Magazine a settled business, roads round gone all to mire,—this Third Division, and with it the 42,000 in general, finding they had nothing to live upon, went their ways again.” Note, The Burgoyne, who begins in this pretty way at Valencia d’Alcantara, is the same who ended so dismally at Saratoga, within twenty years :—perhaps, with other War-Officers, and training himself in something suitable than Parliamentary Eloquence, he might have become a kind of General, and have ended far otherwise than there ?—

“ Such was the credit account on Carlos’s side : By gratuitous assault on Portugal, which had done him no offence ; result zero, and pay your expenses. On the English, or per contra side, again, there were these three items, two of them specifically on Carlos : First, Martinique captured from the French this Spring (finished, 4th February 1762) :¹ was to have been done in any case, Guadaloupe and it being both on Pitt’s books for some time, and only Guadaloupe yet got. Secondly, King Carlos, for Family Compact and fruitless attempt at burglary on an unoffending neighbour, Debtor : 1°. To Loss of the Havanah (6th June—13th August 1762),² which might easily have issued in loss of all his West Indies together, and total abolition of the Pope's meridian in that Western Hemisphere; and 2°. To Loss of Manilla, with his Philippine Islands (23d September—6th October 1762),¹ which was abolition of it in the Eastern. After which, happily for Carlos, Peace came,—Peace, and no Pitt to be severe upon his Indies and him. Carlos's War of ten months had stood him uncommonly high."

¹ Old Newspapers (in Gentleman’s Magazine for 1762, p. 443).

² Gentleman’s Magazine for 1762, p. 127.

³ Ibid. 408–459, &c.

All these things the English Public, considerably sullen about the Cabinet-Council event of October 3d, ascribed to the real owner of them. The Public said: "These are, all of them, Pitt's bolts, not yours,—launched, or lying ready for launching, from that Olympian battery which, in the East and in the West, had already smitten down all Lallys and Montcalms; and had force already massed there, rendering your Havanahs and Manillas easy for you. For which, indeed, you do not seem to care much; rather seem to be embarrassed with them, in your eagerness for Peace and a lazy life!"—Manilla was a beautiful work:² but the Manilla Ransom; a million sterling, half of it in bills,—which the Spaniards, on no pretext at all but the disagreeableness, refused to pay! Havanah, though victorious, cost a good many men: was thought to be but badly managed. "What to do with it?" said Bute, at the Peace: "Give us Florida in lieu of it,"—which proved of little benefit to Bute. Enough, enough of Bute and his performances.

Pitt being gone, Friedrich's English Subsidy lags: this time, Friedrich concludes it is cut off;—silent on the subject; no words will express one's thoughts on it. Not till April 9th has poor Mitchell the sad errand of announcing formally that, such are our pressures, Portuguese War and others, we cannot afford it farther. Answered by I know not what kind of glance from Friedrich ; answered, I find, by words few or none from the forsaken King : " Good ; that too was wanting," thought the proud soul : " Keep your coin, since you so need it ; I have still copper, and my sword ! " The alloy this Year became as 3 to 1 :—what other remedy ?

¹ Gentleman's Magazine, xxxiii. 171–177.

² A Journal of the Proceedings of his Majesty's Forces in the Expedition to Manilla (London Gazette, April 19th, 1763; Gentleman's Magazine, xxxiii. 171 et seq.). Written by Colonel or Brigadier-General Draper (suggester, contriver, and performer of the Enterprise; an excellent Indian Officer, of great merit with his pen as well,—Bully Junius's Correspondent afterwards).

From the same cause, I doubt not, this Year, for the first time in human memory, came that complete abeyance of the Giftmoneys (Douceur Gelder), which are become a standing expectation, quasi-right, and necessary item of support to every Prussian Officer, from a Lieutenant upward : not a word, in the least official, said of them this Year ; still less a penny of them actually forthcoming to a worn-out expectant Army. One of the greatest sins charged upon Friedrich, by Prussian or Prussian-Military public opinion : not to be excused at all ; —Prussian-Military and even Prussian-Civil opinion having a strange persuasion that this King has boundless supply of money, and only out of perversity refuses it for objects of moment. In the Army as elsewhere much is gone awry ;¹ many rivets loose after such a climbing of the Alps as there has been, through dense and rare.

It will surprise everybody that Friedrich, with his copper and other resources, actually raised his additional 60,000 ; and has for himself 70,000 to recover Schweidnitz, and bring Silesia to its old state ; 40,000 for Prince Henri and Saxony, with a 10,000 of margin for Sweden and accidental sundries. This is strange, but it is true.² And has not been done without strivings and contrivings, hard requisitions on the places liable ; and has involved not a little of severity and difficulty,—especially a great deal of haggling with the collecting parties, or at least with Prince Henri, who presides in Saxony, and is apt to complain and mourn over the undoable, rather than proceed to do it. The King's Correspondence with Henri, this Winter, is curious enough ; like a Dialogue between Hope on its feet, and Despair taking to its bed. " You know there are Two Doctors in Molière," says Friedrich to him once ; " a Doctor Tant-mieux (So much the Better) and a Doctor Tant- pis (So much the Worse): these two cannot be expected to agree!"—Instead of infinite arithmetical details, here is part of a Letter of Friedrich's to D'Argens; and a Passage, one of many, with Prince Henri;—which command a view into the interior that concerns us.

¹ See Möllendorf's two or three Letters (Preuss, iv. 407-411).

² Stenzel, v. 297, 286 ; Tempelhof, vi. 2, 10, 68.

The King to D'Argens (at Berlin).

"Breslau, 18th January 1762.

* * * "You have lifted the political veil which covered horrors and perfidies meditated and ready to burst out" (Bute's dismal procedures, I believe; who is ravenous for Peace, and would fain force Friedrich along with him on terms altogether disgraceful and inadmissible):¹ "you judge correctly of the whole situation I am in, of the abysses which surround me; and, as I see by what you say, of the kind of hope that still remains to me. It will not be till the month of February" (Turks, probably, and Tartar Khan; great things coming then!) "that we can speak of that; and that is the term I contemplate for deciding whether I shall hold to Cato" (Cato,—and the little Glass Tube I have!) "or to Cæsar's Commentaries," and the best fight one can make.

"The School of patience I am at is hard, long-continued, cruel, nay barbarous. I have not been able to escape my lot: all that human foresight could suggest has been employed, and nothing has succeeded. If Fortune continues to pursue me, doubtless I shall sink; it is only she that can extricate me from the situation I am in. I escape out of it by looking at the Universe on the great scale, like an observer from some distant Planet; all then seems to me so infinitely small, and I could almost pity my enemies for giving themselves such trouble about so very little. What would become of us without philosophy, without this reasonable contempt of things frivolous, transient, and fugitive, about which the greedy and ambitious make such a pother, fancying them to be solid! This is to become wise by stripes, you will tell me; well, if one do become wise, what matters it how?—I read a great deal; I devour my Books, and that brings me useful alleviation. But for my Books, I think hypochondria would have had me in bedlam before now. In fine, dear Marquis, we live in troublesome times and in desperate situations:—I have all the properties of a Stage-Hero; always in danger, always on the point of perishing. One must hope the conclusion will come ; and if the end of the piece be lucky, we will forget the rest. Patience then, mon cher, till February 20th " (By which time, what far other veritable star-of-day will have risen on me !) " Adieu, mon cher.—F."¹

¹ See D'Argens's Letter (to which this is Answer), Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 281, 282.

Tiff of Quarrel between King and Henri (March—April, 1762.)

In the Spring months, Prince Henri is at Hof in Voigtland, on the extreme right of his long line of " Quarters behind the Mulda ; " busy enough, watching the Austrians and Reich ; levying the severe contributions ; speeding, all he can, the manifold preparatives ; conscious to himself of the greatest vigilance and diligence, but wrapt in despondency and black acidulent humours ; a " Doctor So much the Worse," who is not a comforting Correspondent. From Hof, towards the middle of March, he becomes specially gloomy and acidulous ; sends a series of Complaints ; also of News, not important, but all rather in your favour, my dearest Brother, than in mine, if you will please to observe ! As thus :

Henri (at Hof, 10th-13th March). * * " Sadly off here, my dearest Brother ! Of our ' 1,284 head of commissariat horses,' only 180 are come in ; of our ' 287 drivers,' not one. Will be impossible to open Campaign at that rate."—" Grenadier Battalions Rothenburg and Grant demand to have picked men to complete them " (of Cantonist, or sure Prussian sort). * * " I find " (nota bene, Reader !) " there are eight Austrian regiments going to Silesia " (off my hands, and upon yours, in a sense), " eight instead of four that I spoke of : intending, probably, for Glatz, to replace Czernichef " (Czerinchef off for home lately, in a most miraculous way ; as readers shall hear !) "—to replace Czernichef, and the blank he has left there ? Eight of them : Your Majesty can have no difficulty ; but I will detach Platen or somebody, if you order it ; though I am myself perilously ill off here, so scattered into parts, not capable of speedy junction like your Majesty."

Friedrich (14th-16th March). " Commissariat horses, drivers ? I arranged and provided where everything was to be got. But if my orders are not executed, nor the requisitions brought in, of course there is failure. I am despatching Adjutant von Anhalt to Saxony a second time, to enforce matters. If I could be for three weeks in Saxony, myself, I believe I could put all on its right footing ; but, as I must not stir two steps from here, I will send you Anhalt, with orders to the Generals, to compel them to their duty."¹ "As to Grenadier Battalions Grant and Rothenburg, it is absurd." (Henri falls silent for about a week, brooding his gloom ;—not aware that still worse is coming. King continues :

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 282, 283.

King (22d March). "Eight regiments, you said? Here, by enclosed List, are seventeen of them, names and particulars all given," which is rather a different view of the account against Silesia! Seventeen of them, going, not for Glatz, I should say, but to strengthen our Enemies hereabouts.

Henri. "Hm, hah" (answers only in German ; dry, military reports, official merely ;—thinks of writing to Chief-Clerk Eichel, who is factotum in these spheres). * * "Artillery recruits are scarce in the extreme ; demand bounty : five thalers, shall we say?"

King. "Seventeen regiments of them, beyond question, instead of eight, coming on us : strange that you didn't warn me better. I have therefore ordered your Major-General Schmettau hitherward at once. As he has not done raising the contributions in the Lausitz, you must send another to do it, and have them ready when General Platen passes that way hither."—"Five thalers bounty for artillery men," say you? It is not to be thought of. Artillery men can be had by conscription where you are." Henri (in silence, still more indignant) sends military reports exclusively. March 26th, Henri's gloom reaches the igniting-point ; he writes to Chief-Clerk Eichel :

"Monsieur, you are aware that Adjutant von Anhalt is on the way hither. To judge by his orders, if they correspond to the Letters I have had from the King, Adjutant von Anhalt's appearance here will produce an embarrassment, from which I am resolved to extricate myself by a voluntary retirement from office. My totally ruined (abîmée) health, the vexations I have had, the fatigues and troubles of war, leave in me little regret to quit the employment. I solicit only, from your attentions and skill of management, that my retreat be permitted to take place with the decency observed towards those who have served the State. I have not a high opinion of my services ; but perhaps I am not mistaken in supposing that it would be more a shame to the King than to me if he should make me endure all manner of chagrins during my retirement."

¹ Schöning, iii. 301, 302.

² Ibid. iii. 307.

Eichel sinks into profound reflexion ; says nothing. How is this fire to be got under ? Where is the place to trample on it, before opening door or window, or saying a word to the King or anybody ?

Henri (same day, 26th March). "My dearest Brother,—In the List you send me of those seventeen Austrian regiments, several, I am informed, are still in Saxony ; and by all the news that I get, there are only eight gone towards Silesia."—"From Leipzig my accounts are, the Reichs Army is to make a movement in advance, and Prince Xavier with the Saxons was expected at Naumberg the 20th ult. I know not if you have arranged with Duke Ferdinand for a proportionate succour, in case his French also should try to penetrate into Saxony upon me ? I am, with the profoundest attachment, your faithful and devoted servant and Brother."

King (30th March). "Seventeen of them, you may depend ; I am too well informed to be allowed to doubt in any way. What you report of the Reichfolk and Saxons moving hither, thither ; that seems to me a bit of game on their part. They will try to cut one post from you, then another, unless you assemble a corps and go in upon them. Till you decide for this resolution, you have nothing but chicanes and provocations to expect there. As to Duke Ferdinand of Brunswick, I don't imagine that his Orders" (from England) "would permit him what you propose" (for relief of yourself) : "at any rate, you will have to write at least thrice to him,—that is to say, waste three weeks, before he will answer No or Yes. You yourself are in force enough for those fellows : but so long as you keep on the defensive alone, the enemy gains time, and things will always go a bad road." Henri's patience is already out ; this same day, he is writing to the King.

Henri (30th March). * * "You have hitherto received proofs enough of my ways of thinking and acting to know that if in reality I was mistaken about those eight regiments, it can only have been a piece of ignorance on the part of my spy : meanwhile you are pleased to make me responsible for what misfortune may come of it. I think I have my hands full with the task laid on me of guarding 4,000 square miles of country with fewer troops than you have, and of being opposite an enemy whose posts touch upon ours, and who is superior in force. Your preceding Letters" (from March 16th hitherto), "on which I have wished to be silent, and this last proof of want of affection, show me too clearly to what fortune I have sacrificed these Six Years of Campaigning."

King (3d April : Official Orders given in Teutsch ; at the tail of which). "Spare your wrath and indignation at your servant, Monseigneur ! You, who preach indulgence, have a little of it for persons who have no intention of offending you, or of failing in respect for you ; and deign to receive with more benignity the humble representations which the conjunctures sometimes force from me. F."—Which relieves Eichel of his difficulties, and quenches this sputter.¹

Prince Henri, for all his complaining, did beautifully, this Season again (though to us it must be silent, being small-war merely) ;—and in particular, May 12th, early in the morning, simultaneously in many different parts, burst across the Mulda, ten or twenty miles long (or broad rather, from his right hand to his left), sudden as lightning, upon the supine Serbelloni and his Austrians and Reichsfolk. And hurled them back, one and all, almost to the Plauen Chasm and their old haunts ; widening his quarters notably.² A really brilliant thing, testifies everybody, though not to be dwelt on here. Seidlitz was of it (much fine cutting and careering, from the Seidlitz and others, we have to omit in these two Saxon Campaigns !)—Seidlitz was of it ; he, and another still more special acquaintance of ours, the learned Quintus Icilius ; who also did his best in it, but lost his "Amusette" (small bit of cannon, "Plaything," so called by Maréchal de Saxe, inventor of the article), and did not shine like Seidlitz.

Henri's quarters being notably widened in this way, and nothing but torpid Serbellonis and Prince Stolbergs on the opposite part, Henri "drew himself out thirty-five miles long ;" and stood there, almost looking into Plauen region as formerly. And with his fiery Seidlitzes, Kleists, made a handsome Summer of it. And beat the Austrians and Reichsfolk at Freyberg (October 29th, a fine Battle, and his sole one),—on the Horse which afterward carried Gellert, as is pleasantly known.

But we are omitting the news from Petersburg,—which came the very day after that gloomy Letter to D'Argens ; months before the Tiff of Quarrel with Henri, and the brilliant better destinies of that Gentleman in his Campaign.

¹ Plucked up from the waste imbroglios of Schöning (iii. 296-311), by arranging and omitting.

² Bericht von dem Uebergang über die Mulde, den der Prinz Heinrich den 12ten May 1762 glücklich ausgeführt (in Seyfarth, Beylagen, iii. 280-291).

Bright News from Petersburg (certain, January 19th); which grow ever brighter; and become a Star-of-day for Friedrich.

To Friedrich, long before all this of Henri, indeed almost on the very day while he was writing so despondently to D'Argens, a new phasis had arisen. Hardly had he been five weeks at Breslau, in those gloomy circumstances, when,—about the middle of January 1762 (day not given, though it is forever notable),—there arrive rumours, arrive news,—news from Petersburg; such as this King never had before! “Among the thousand ill strokes of Fortune, does there at length come one pre-eminently good? The unspeakable Sovereign Woman, is she verily dead, then, and become peaceable to me for evermore?” We promised Friedrich a wonderful star-of-day; and this is it,—though it is long before he dare quite regard it as such. Peter, the Successor, he knows to be secretly his friend and admirer; if only, in the new Czarish capacity and its chaotic environments and conditions, Peter dare and can assert these feelings? What a hope to Friedrich, from this time onward! Russia may be counted as the bigger half of all he had to strive with; the bigger, or at least the far uglier, more ruinous and incendiary;—and if this were at once taken away, think what a daybreak when the night was at the blackest!

Pious people say, The darkest hour is often nearest the dawn. And a dawn this proved to be for Friedrich. And the fact grew always the longer the brighter;—and before Campaign time, had ripened into real daylight and sunrise. The dates should have been precise; but are not to be had so: here is the nearest we could come. January 14th, writing to Henri, the King has a mysterious word about “possibilities of an uncommon sort,”—rumours from Petersburg, I could conjecture; though perhaps they are only Turk or Tartar-Khan affairs, which are higher this year than ever, and as futile as ever. But, on January 19th, he has heard plainly,—with what hopes (if one durst indulge them)!—that the Implacable Imperial Woman, infâme Catin du Nord, is verily dead. Dead ; and does not hate me any more. Deliverance, Peace and Victory lie in the word !—Catin had long been failing, but they kept it religiously secret within the Court walls : even at Petersburg, nobody knew till the Prayers of the Church were required : Prayers as zealous as you can,—the Doctors having plainly intimated that she is desperate, and that the thing is over. On Christmas-day 1761 by Russian Style, 5th January 1762 by European, the poor Imperial Catin lay dead ;—a death still more important than that of George II. to this King.

Peter III., who succeeded, has long been privately a sworn friend and admirer of the King ; and hastens, not too slowly as the King had feared, but far the reverse, to make that known to all mankind. That, and much else,—in a far too headlong manner, poor soul ! Like an ardent, violent, totally inexperienced person (enfranchised schoolboy, come to the age of thirty-four), who has sat hitherto in darkness, in intolerable compression ; as if buried alive ! He is now Czar Peter, Autocrat, not of Himself only, but of All the Russias ;—and has, besides the complete regeneration of Russia, two great thoughts : First, That of avenging native Holstein, and his poor martyr of a Father now with God, against the Danes ;—and,

Second, what is scarcely second in importance to the first, and indeed is practically a kind of preliminary to it, That of delivering the Prussian Pattern of Heroes from such a pattern of foul combinations, and bringing Peace to Europe, while he settles the Holstein-Danish business. Peter is Russian by the Mother's side ; his Mother was Sister of the late Catin, a Daughter, like her, of Czar Peter called the Great, and of the little brown Catharine whom we saw transiently long ago. His Holstein Business shall concern us little ; but that with Friedrich, during the brief Six Months allowed him for it,—for it, and for all his remaining businesses in this world,—is of the highest importance to Friedrich and us.

Peter is one of the wildest men ; his fate, which was tragical, is now to most readers rather of a ghastly-grotesque than of a lamentable and pitiable character. Few know, or have ever considered, in how wild an element poor Peter was born and nursed ; what a time he has had, since his fifteenth year especially, when Cousin of Zerbst and he were married. Perhaps the wildest and maddest any human soul had, during that Century. I find in him, starting out from the Lethæan quagmires where he had to grow, a certain rash greatness of idea ; traces of veritable conviction, just resolution ; veritable and just, though rash. That of admiration for King Friedrich was not intrinsically foolish, in the solitary thoughts of the poor young fellow ; nay it was the reverse ; though it was highly inopportune in the place where he stood. Nor was the Holstein notion bad ; it was generous rather, noble and natural, though, again, somewhat impracticable in the circumstances.

The summary of the Friedrich-Peter business is perhaps already known to most readers, and can be very briefly given ; nor is Peter's tragical Six Months of Czarship (5th January—9th July 1762) a thing for us to dwell on beyond need. But it is wildly tragical, strokes of deep pathos in it, blended with the ghastly and grotesque : it is part of Friedrich's strange element and environment : and though the outer incidents are public enough, it is essentially little known. Had there been an Æschylus, had there been a Shakespeare !—But poor Peter's shocking Six Months of History has been treated by a far different set of hands, themselves almost shocking to see : and, to the seriously inquiring mind, it lies, and will long lie, in a very waste, chaotic, enigmatic condition. Here, out of considerable bundles now burnt, are some rough jottings, Excerpts of Notes and Studies,—which, I still doubt rather, ought to have gone in Auto de Fe along with the others. Auto de Fe I called it ; Act of Faith, not Spanish-Inquisitional, but essentially Celestial many times, if you reflect well on the poisonous consequences, on the sinfulness and deadly criminality, of Human Babble,—as nobody does nowadays ! I label the different Pieces, and try to make legible ;—hasty readers have the privilege of skipping if they like. The first Two are of preliminary or prefatory nature,— perhaps still more skippable than those that will by and by follow :

1. Genealogy of Peter. "His grandfather was Friedrich IV., Duke of Holstein-Gottorp and Schleswig, Karl XII.'s brother-in-law ; on whose score it was (Denmark finding the time opportune for a stroke of robbery there) that Karl XII., a young lad hardly eighteen, first took arms ; and began the career of fighting that astonished Denmark and certain other Neighbours who had been too covetous on a young King. This his young Brother-in-law, Friedrich of Holstein-Gottorp (young he too, though Karl's senior by ten years), had been reinstated in his Territory, and the Danes sternly forbidden farther burglary there, by the victorious Karl ; but went with Karl in his farther expeditions. Always Karl's intimate, and at his right hand for the next two years : fell in the Battle of Clissow, 19th July 1702 ; age not yet thirty-one.

"He left as Heir a poor young Boy, at this time only two years old. His young Widow Hedwig survived him six years.¹ Her poor child grew to manhood ; and had tragic fortunes in this world ; Danes again burglarious in that part, again robbing this poor Boy at discretion, so soon as Karl XII. became unfortunate ; and refusing to restore (have not restored Schleswig at all) : "—a grimly sad story to the now Peter, his only Child ! This poor Duke at last died, 18th June 1739, age thirty-nine ; the now Peter then about 11,—who well remembers tragic Papa ; tragic Mamma not, who died above ten years before.²

"Czar Peter called the Great had evidently a pity for this unfortunate Duke, a hope in his just hopes ; and pleaded, as did various others, and endeavoured with the unjust Danes, mostly without effect. Did, however, give him one of his Daughters to wife ;—the result of whom is this new Czar Peter, called the third : a Czar who is Sovereign of Holstein, and has claims of Sovereignty in Sweden, right of heirship in Schleswig, and of damages against Denmark, which are in litigation to this day. The Czarina Catin, tenderly remembering her Sister, would hear of no Heir to Russia but this Peter. Peter, in virtue of his paternal affinities, was elected King of Sweden about the same time ; but preferred Russia,—with an eye to his Danes, some think. For certain, did adopt the Russian Expectancy, the Greek religion so-called ; and was," in the way we saw long years ago, "married (or to all appearance married) to Catharina Alexiewna of Anhalt-Zerbst, born in Stettin ;¹ a Lady who became world-famous as Czarina of the Russias.

¹ Michaelis, ii. 618-629.

² A.D. 1864, have at last had to do it, under unexpected circumstances.

³ Michaelis, ii. 617 ; Hübner, tt. 227, 229.

"Peter is an abstruse creature ; has lived, all this while, with his Catharine an abstruse life, which would have gone altogether mad except for Catharine's superior sense. An awkward, ardent, but helpless kind of Peter, with vehement desires, with a dash of wild magnanimity even : but in such an inextricable element, amid such darkness, such provocations of unmanageable opulence, such impediments, imaginary and real,—dreadfully real to poor Peter,—as made him the unique of mankind in his time. He 'used to drill cats,' it is said, and to do the maddest-looking things (in his late buried-alive condition) ;—and fell partly, never quite, which was wonderful, into drinking, as the solution of his inextricabilities. Poor Peter : always, and now more than ever, the cynosure of vulturous vulpine neighbours, withal ; which infinitely aggravated his otherwise bad case !—

"For seven or eight years, there came no progeny, nor could come ; about the eight or ninth, there could, and did : the marvellous Czar Paul that was to be. Concerning whose exact paternity there are still calumnious assertions widely current : to this individual Editor much a matter of indifference, though on examining, his verdict is : 'Calumnies, to all appearance ; mysteries which decent or decorous society refuses to speak of, and which indecent is pretty sure to make calumnies out of.' Czar Paul may be considered genealogically genuine, if that is much an object to him. Poor Paul, does not he father himself, were there nothing more ? Only that Peter and this Catharine could have begotten such a Paul. Genealogically genuine enough,—my poor Czar, that needed to be garrotted so very soon !

¹ Herr Preuss knows the house : "Now Dr. Lehmann's" (at that time, the Governor of Stettin's), "in which also Czar Paul's second Spouse" (Eugen of Württemberg, a new Governor's Daughter), "who is Mother of the Czars that follow, was born : " Preuss, ii. 810, 811. Catharine, during her reign, was pious in a small way to the place of her cradle ; sent her successive Medals &c. to Stettin, which still has them to show.

2. Of Catharine and the Books upon Peter and Her. "Catharine too had an intricate time of it under the Catin; which was consoled to her only by a tolerably rapid succession of lovers, the best the ground yielded. In which department it is well known what a Thrice-Greatest she became: superior to any Charles II.; equal almost to an August the Strong! Of her loves now and henceforth, which are heartily uninteresting to me, I propose to say nothing further; merely this, That in extent they probably rivalled the highest male sovereign figures (and are to be put in the same category with these, and damned as deep, or a little deeper);—and cost her, in gifts, in magnificent pensions to the emeriti (for she did things always in a grandiose manner, quietly and yet inexorably dismissing the emeritus with stores of gold), the considerable sum of 20 millions sterling, in the course of her long reign. One, or at most two, were off on pension, when Hanbury Williams brought Poniatowski for her, as we transiently saw. Poniatowski will be King of Poland in the course of events." * * *

"Russia is not a publishing country; the Books about Catharine are few, and of little worth. Tooke, an English Chaplain; Castéra, an unknown French Hanger-on, with copies from Tooke, or Tooke from him: these are to be read, as the bad-best, and will yield little satisfactory insight; Castéria, in particular, a great deal of dubious backstairs gossip and street rumour, which are not delightful to a reader of sense. In fine, there has been published, in these very years, a Fragment of early Autobiography by Catharine herself,—a credible and highly remarkable little Piece; worth all the others, if it is knowledge of Katharine you are seeking.¹ A most placid, solid, substantial young Lady comes to light there; dropped into such an element as might have driven most people mad. But it did not her; it only made her wiser and wiser in her generation. Element black, hideous, dirty, as Lapland Sorcery;—in which the first clear duty is to hold one's tongue well, and keep one's eyes open. Stars,—not very heavenly, but of fixed nature, and heavenly to Catharine,—a star or two, shine through the abominable murk: Steady, patient; steer silently, in all weathers, towards these!

¹ Mémoires de l'Impératrice Catharine II, écrits par Elle-même (A. Herzen editing; London, 1859);—which we already cited, on occasion of Catharine's marriage.

Anonymous (Castéra), Vie de Catharine II, Impératrice de Russie (à Paris, 1797; or reprinted, most of it, enough of it, à Varsovie, 1798), 2 tomes, 8vo. Tooke, Life of Catharine II. (4th edition, London, 1800), 3 voll. 8vo; View of the Russian Empire during &c. (London, 1799), 3 voll. 8vo.—Hermann, Geschichte des Russischen Staats (Hamburg, 1853 et anted), v. 241–308 et seq.; is by much the most solid Book, though a dull and heavy. Stenzel cites, as does Hermann, a Biographie Peters des IIlen; which no doubt exists, in perhaps 3 volumes; but, where, when, by whom, or of what quality, they do not tell me.

“Young Catharine's immovable equanimity in this distracted environment strikes us very much. Peter is careering, tumbling about, on all manner of absurd broomsticks, driven too surely by the Devil; terrific-absurd big Lapland Witch, surrounded by multitudes smaller, and some of them less ugly. Will be Czar of Russia, however;—and is one's so-called Husband. These are prospects for an observant, immovably steady-going young Woman! The reigning Czarina, old Catin herself, is silently the Olympian Jove to Catharine, who reveres her very much. Though articulately stupid as ever, in this Book of Catharine's, she comes out with a dumb weight, of silence, of obstinacy, of intricate abrupt rigour, which—who knows but it may savour of dumb unconscious wisdom in the fat old blockhead? The Book says little of her, and in the way of criticism, of praise or of blame, nothing whatever; but one gains the notion of some dark human female object, bigger than one had fancied it before.

“Catharine steered towards her stars. Lovers were vouchsafed her, of a kind (her small stars, as we may call them); and, at length, through perilous intricacies, the big star, Autocracy of all the Russias,—through what horrors of intricacy, that last! She had hoped always it would be by Husband Peter that she, with the deeper steady head, would be Autocrat: but the intricacies kept increasing, grew at last to the strangling pitch; and it came to be, between Peter and her, ‘Either you to Siberia (perhaps farther), or else I!’ And it was Peter that had to go;—in what hideous way is well enough known; no Siberia, no Holstein thought to be far enough for Peter:—and Catharine, merely weeping a little for him, mounted to the Autocracy herself. And then, the big star of stars being once hers, she had, not in the lover kind alone, but in all uncelestial kinds, whole nebulae and milky-ways of small stars. A very Semiramis, or the Louis-Quatorze of those Northern Parts. ‘Second Creatress of Russia,’ second Peter the Great in a sense. To me none of the loveliest objects ; yet there are uglier, how infinitely uglier : object grandiose, if not great."—We return to Friedrich and the Death of Catin.

Colonel Hordt, I believe, was the first who credibly apprised Friedrich of the great Russian Event. Colonel Hordt, late of the Free-Corps Hordt, but captive since soon after the Kunersdorf time ; and whose doleful quasi-infernal 'twenty-five months and three days' in the Citadel of Petersburg have changed in one hour into celestial glories in the Court of that City ;—as readers shall themselves see anon. By Hordt or by whomsoever, the instant Friedrich heard, by an authentic source, of the new Czar's Accession, Friedrich hastened to turn round upon him with the friendliest attitude, with arms as if ready to open ; dismissing all his Russian Prisoners ; and testifying, in every polite and royal way, how gladly he would advance if permitted. To which the Czar, by Hordt and by other channels, imperially responded ; rushing forward, he, as if with arms flung wide.

January 31st, is Order from the King, ' That our Russian Prisoners, one and all, shod, clad and dieted, be forthwith set under way from Stettin : in return for which generosity the Prussians, from Siberia or wherever they were buried, are, soon after, hastening home in like manner. Gudowitsh, Peter's favourite Adjutant, who had been sent to congratulate at Zerbst, comes round by Breslau (February 20th), and has joyfully benign audience next day ; directly on the heel of whom, Adjutant Colonel von der Goltz, who is Kammerherr as well as Colonel, and understands things of business, goes to Petersburg. February 23d, Czarish Majesty, to the horror of Vienna and glad astonishment of mankind, emits Declaration (Note to all the Foreign Excellencies in Petersburg), " That there ought to be Peace with this King of Prussia ; that Czarish Majesty, for his own part, is resolved on the thing ; gives up East Preussen and the so-called conquests made ; Russian participation in such a War has ceased." And practically orders Czernichef, who is wintering with his

¹ In Schöning, iii. 275 (" Breslau, 31st January 1762").

20,000 in Glatz, to quit Glatz and these Austrian Combinations, and march homeward with his 20,000. Which Czernichef, so soon as arrangements of proviant and the like are made, hastens to do ;—and does, as far as Thorn ; but no farther, for a reason that will be seen. On the last day of March, Czernichef, off about a week ago from Glatz, and now got into the Breslau latitude,—came across, with a select Suite of Four, to pay his court there ; and had the honor to dine with his Majesty, and to be, personally too, a Czernichef agreeable to his Majesty.

The vehemency of Austrian Diplomacies at Petersburg ; and the horror of Kaiserinn and Kriegshofrath, in Vienna,—who have just discharged 20,000 of their own people, counting on this Czernichef, and being dreadfully tight for money,—may be fancied. But all avails nothing. The ardent Czar advances towards Friedrich with arms flung wide. Goltz and Gudowitsh are engaged on Treaty of Peace ; Czar frankly gives up East Preussen, “Yours again ; what use has Russia for it, Royal Friend ?” Treaty of Peace goes forward like the drawing of a Marriage-settlement (concluded May 5th) ; and, in a month more, has changed into Treaty of Alliance ;—Czernichef ordered to stop short at Thorn ; to turn back, and join himself to this heroic King, instead of fighting against him. Which again Czernichef, himself an admirer of this King, joyfully does ;—though, unhappily, not with all the advantage he expected to the King.

Swedish Peace, Queen Ulrique and the Anti-French Party now getting the upper hand, had been hastening forward in the interim (finished, at Hamburg, May 22d) : a most small matter in comparison to the Russians ; but welcome enough to Friedrich ;—though he said slightly of it, when first mentioned : “Peace ? I know not hardly of any War there has been with Sweden ;—ask Colonel Belling about it !” Colonel Belling, a most shining swift Hussar Colonel, who, with a 2,000 sharp fellows, hanging always on the Swedish flanks, sharp as lightning, “nowhere and yet everywhere,” as was said of him, has mainly, for the last year or two, had the management of this extraordinary “War.” Peace over all the North, Peace and more, is now Friedrich's. Strangling imbroglio, wide as the world, has ebbed to man's height ; dawn of day has ripened into sunrise for Friedrich ; the way out is now a thing credible and visible to him. Peter's friendliness is boundless ; almost too boundless ! Peter begs a Prussian Regiment,—dresses himself in its uniform, Colonel of Itzenplitz ; Friedrich begs a Russian Regiment, Colonel of Schulowof : and all is joyful, hopeful ; marriage-bells instead of dirge ditto and gallows ditto,—unhappily not for very long.

In regard to Friedrich's feelings while all this went on, take the following small utterances of his, before going farther : January 27th, 1762 (To Madam Camas, eight days after the Russian Event : "I rejoice, my good Mamma, to find you have such courage ; I exhort you to redouble it ! All ends in this world ; so we may hope this accursed War will not be the only thing eternal there. Since Death has trussed up a certain Catin of the Hyperborean Countries, our situation has advantageously changed, and becomes more supportable than it was. We must hope that some other good events" (favour of the new Czar mainly) "will happen ; by which we may profit to arrive at a good Peace."

January 31st (To Minister Finckenstein) : "Behold the first gleam of light that rises ;—Heaven be praised for it ! We must hope good weather will succeed these storms. God grant it." ¹

End of March (To D'Argens) : * * "All that" (at Paris ; about the Pompadourisms, the exile of Broglio and Brother, and your other news) "is very miserable ; as well as that discrepancy between King's Council and Parlement for and against the Jesuits ! But, mon cher Marquis, my head is so ill, I can tell you nothing more,—except that the Czar of Russia is a divine man ; to whom I ought to erect altars." ²

May 25th (To the same,—Russian Peace three weeks ago) : "It is very pleasant to me, dear Marquis, that Sans-Souci could afford you an agreeable retreat during the beautiful Spring days. If it depended only on me, how soon should I be there beside you ! But to the Six Campaigns there is a Seventh to be added, and will soon open ; either because the Number 7 had once mystic qualities, or because in the Book of Fate from all eternity the" — * * "Jesuits banished from France? Ah, yes:—hearing of that, I made my bit of plan for them" (mean to have my pick of them as schoolmasters in Silesia here); "and am waiting only till I get Silesia cleared of Austrians as the first thing. You see we must not mow the corn till it is ripe."¹

¹ Preuss, ii. 812.

² Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 301.

May 28th (To the same): * * "Tartar Khan actually astir, 10,000 men of his in Hungary" (I am told); "Turk potentially ditto, with 200,000" (futile both, as ever): "All things show me the sure prospect of Peace by the end of this Year; and, in the background of it, Sans-Souci and my dear Marquis! A sweet calm springs up again in my soul; and a feeling of hope, to which for six years I had got unused, consoles me for all I have come through. Think only what a coil I shall be in, before a month hence" (Campaign opened by that time, horrid Game begun again); "and what a pass we had come to, in December last: Country at its last gasp (agonisait), as if waiting for extreme unction: and now—!" * * *

June 8th (To Madame Camas,—Russian Alliance now come): "I know well, my good Mamma, the sincere part you take in the lucky events that befall us. The mischief is, we are got so low, that we want at present all manner of fortunate events to raise us again; and Two grand conclusions of Peace" (the Russian, the Swedish), "which might reestablish Peace throughout, are at this moment only a step towards finishing the War less unfortunately."²

Same day, June 8th (To D'Argens): "Czernichef is on march to join us. Our Campaign will not open till towards the end of this month" (did open, July 1st); "but think then, what a pretty noise in this poor Silesia again! In fine, my dear Marquis, the job ahead of me is hard and difficult; and nobody can say positively how it will all go. Pray for us; and don't forget a poor devil who kicks about strangely in his harness, who leads the life of one damned; and who nevertheless loves you sincerely.—Adieu."³ D'Argens (May 24th)

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, p. 321.

² Ibid. xviii. 146-7.

³ Ibid. xix. 323.

⁴ Ibid. xix. 327.

has heard, by Letters from very well-informed persons in Vienna, that "Imperial Majesty, for some time past, spends half of her time in praying to the Virgin, and the other half in weeping." "I wish her," adds the ungallant D'Argens, "as punishment for the mischiefs her ambition has cost mankind these seven years past, the fate of Phæthron's Sisters, and that she melt altogether into water!"—Take one other little utterance; and then to Colonel Hordt and the Petersburg side of things.

June 19th (still to D'Argens): "What is now going on in Russia no Count Kaunitz could foresee; what has come to pass in England,—of which the hatefulest part" (Bute's altogether extraordinary attempts, in the Kaunitz, in the Czar Peter direction, to force a Peace upon me) "is not yet known to you,—I had no notion of, in forming my plans! The Governor of a State, in troublous times, never can be sure. This is what disgusts me with the business, in comparison. A Man of Letters operates on something certain; a Politician can have almost no data of that kind." (How easy everybody's trade but one's own!)

Readers know what a tragedy poor Peter's was. His Czernichef did join the King; but with far less advantage than Czernichef or anybody had anticipated!—It is none of our intention to go into the chaotic Russian element, or that wildly-blazing sanguinary Catharine-and-Peter business; of which, at any rate, there are plentiful accounts in common circulation, more or less accurate,—especially M. Rulhière's,¹ the most succinct, lucid, and least unsatisfactory, in the accessible languages. Only so far as Friedrich was concerned are we. But readers saw this Couple married, under Friedrich's auspices,—a Marriage which he thought important twenty years ago; and sure enough the Dissolution of it did prove important to him, and is a necessary item here!

Readers, even those that know Rulhière, will doubtless consent to a little supplementing from Two other Eye-witnesses of credit. The first and principal is a respectable Ex-Swedish Gentleman, whom readers used to hear of ; the Colonel Hordt above mentioned, once of the Free-Corps Hordt, but fallen Prisoner latterly ;—whose experiences and reports are all the more interesting to us, as Friedrich himself had specially to depend on them at present ; and doubtless, in times long afterwards, now and then heard speech of them from Hordt. Our second Eye-witness is the Reverend Herr Doctor Büsching (of the Erdbeschreibung, of the Beyträge, and many other Works, an invaluable friend to us all along) ; who, in his wandering time, has come to be “Pastor of the German Church at Petersburg,” some years back.

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 320 ("24th May 1762"). ² Ibid. p. 329.

² Histoire ou Anecdotes sur la Révolution de Russie en l'année 1762 (written, 1768; first printed, Paris, 1797: English Translation, London, 1797).

What Colonel Hordt and the Others saw at Petersburg (January—July 1762).

Autumn 1759, in the sequel to Kunersdorf,—when the Russians and Daun lay so long torpid, uncertain what to do except keep Friedrich and Prince Henri well separate, and Friedrich had such watchings, campings, and marchings about on the hither skirt of them (skirt always veiled in Cossacks, and producing skirmishes as you marched past),—we did mention Hordt's capture ;¹ not much hoping that readers could remember it in such a press of things more memorable. It was in, or as prelude to, one of those skirmishes (one of the earliest, and a rather sharp one, “at Trebatsch,” in Frankfurt-Lieberose Country, “4th September 1759”), that Hordt had his misfortune : he had been out reconnoitering, with an Orderly or two, before the skirmish began, was suddenly “surrounded by 200 Cossacks,” and after desperate plunging into bogs, desperate firing of pistols and the like, was taken prisoner. Was carted miserably to Petersburg,—such a journey for dead ennui as Hordt never knew ; and was then tumbled out into solitary confinement in the Citadel, a place like the Spanish Inquisition ; not the least notice taken of his requests for a few Books, for leave to answer his poor Wife's Letter merely by the words, “Dear one, I am alive ;”—and was left there, to the company of his own reflexions, and a life as if in vacant Hades, for twenty-five months and three days. After the lapse of that period, he has something to say to us again, and we transiently look in upon him there.

¹ Suprd, vol. v. p. 429.

The Book we excerpt from is, Mémoires du Comte de Hordt (second edition, 2 volumes 12mo, Berlin, 1789). This is Bookseller Pitra's redaction of the Hordt Autobiography (Berlin, 1788, was Pitra's first edition): several years after, how many is not said, nor whether Hordt (who had become a dignitary in Berlin society before Pitra's feat) was still living or not, a "M. Borelly, Professor in the Military School," undertook a second considerably enlarged and improved redaction;—of which latter there is an English Translation; easy enough to read; but nearly without meaning, I should fear, to readers unacquainted with the scene and subject.¹ Hordt was reckoned a perfectly veracious, intelligent kind of man: but he seldom gives the least date, specification, or precise detail; and his Book reads, not like the Testimony of an Eye-witness, which it is, and valuable when you understand it; but more like some vague Forgery, compiled by a destitute inventive individual, regardless of the Ten Commandments (sparingly consulting even his file of Old Newspapers), and writing a Book which would deserve the treadmill, were there any Police in his trade!—

Wednesday, 6th January 1762, Hordt's vacant Hades of an existence in the Citadel of Petersburg was broken by a loud sound: three minute guns went off from different sides, close by; and then whole salvos, peal after peal: "Czarina gone overnight, Peter III. Czar in her stead!" said the Officer, rushing in to tell Hordt; to whom it was as news of resurrection from the dead. "Evening of same day, an Aide-de-Camp of the new Czar came to announce my liberty; equipage waiting to take me at once to his Russian Majesty. Asked him to defer it till the following day;—so agitated was I" And indeed the Czar, busy taking acclamations, oaths of fealty, riding about among his Troops by torchlight, could have made little of me that evening.² "Ultimately, my presentation was deferred till Sunday," January 10th, "that it might be done with proper splendour, all the Nobility being then usually assembled about his Majesty."

¹ Memoirs of the Count de Hordt: London, 1806: 2 voll. 12mo,—only the first volume of which (unavailable here) is in my possession.

² Hermann. Geschichte des Russischen Staats, v. 241.

"Waited, amid crowds of Nobility, in the Gallery, accordingly. Was presented in the Gallery, through which the Czar, followed by Czarina and all the Court, were passing on their way to Chapel. Czar made a short kind speech ('Delighted to do you an act of justice, Monsieur, and return a valuable servant to the King I esteem'); gave me his hand to kiss: Czarina did the same. General Korf," an excellent friend, so kind to me at Königsberg while I was getting carted hither, and a General now in high Office here, "who had been my introducer, led me into Chapel, to the Court's place (tribune de la Cour). Czar came across repeatedly" (while public worship was going on; a Czar perhaps too regardless that way!) "to talk to me; dwelt much on his attachment to the King. On coming out, the Head Chamberlain whispered me, 'You dine with the Court.' Which, of course, I did.

"Table was of sixty covers; splendid as the Arabian Tales. Czar and Czarina sat side by side; Korf and I had the honour to be placed opposite them. Hardly were we seated when the Czar addressed me: 'You have had no Prussian news this long while. I am glad to tell you that the King is well, though he has had such fighting to right and left;—but I hope there will soon be an end to all that.' Words which everybody listened to like prophecy!" (Peter is nothing of a Politician.) "'How long have you been in Prison?' continued the Czar. 'Twenty-five months and three days, your Majesty.' 'Were you well treated?'" Hordt hesitated, knew not what to say; but the Czar urging him, confessed, "He had been always rather badly used; not even allowed to buy a few books to read." At which the Czarina was evidently shocked: "Cela est bien barbare!" she exclaimed aloud. "I wished much to return home at once; and petitioned the Czar on that subject, during coffee, in the withdrawing rooms; but he answered, 'No, you must not,—not till an express Prussian Envoy arrive!' I had to stay, therefore; and was thenceforth almost daily at Court,"—but unluckily a little vague, and altogether dateless as to what I saw there!

Bieren and Männich, both of them just home from Siberia, are to drink together (No date: Palace of Petersburg, Spring 1762).—Peter had begun in a great way: all for liberalism, enlightenment, abolition of abuses, general magnanimity on his own and everybody's part. Rulhière did not see the following scene; but it seems to be well enough vouched for, and Rulhière heard it talked of in society. "As many as 20,000 persons, it is counted, have come home from Siberian Exile:"

the L'Estocs, the Münnichs, Bierens, all manner of internecine figures, as if risen from the dead. "Since the night when Münnich arrested Bieren" (readers possibly remember it, and Mannstein's account of it'), "the first time these two met was in the gay and tumultuous crowd which surrounded the new Czar. 'Come, bygones be bygones,' said Peter, noticing them; 'let us three all drink together, like friends!'"—and ordered three glasses of wine. Peter was beginning his glass to show the others an example, when somebody came with a message to him, which was delivered in a low tone; Peter listening drank out his wine, set down the glass and hastened off; so that Bieren and Münnich, the two old enemies, were left standing, glass in hand, each with his eyes on the Czar's glass;—at length, as the Czar did not return, they flashed each his eyes into the other's face; and after a moment's survey, set down their glasses untasted, and walked off in opposite directions." Won't coalesce, it seems, in spite of the Czar's high wishes. An emblem of much that befel the poor Czar in his present high course of good intentions and headlong magnanimities!—We return to Hordt:

The Czar wears a Portrait of Friedrich on his Finger. "Czar Peter never disguised his Prussian predilections. One evening he said, 'Propose to your friend Keith' (English Excellency here, whom we know) 'to give me a supper at his house to-morrow night. The other Foreign Ministers will perhaps be jealous; but I don't care!' Supper at the English Embassy took place. Only ten or twelve persons, of the Czar's choosing, were present. Czar very gay and in fine spirits. Talked much of the King of Prussia. Showed me a signet-ring on his finger, with Friedrich's Portrait in it; ring was handed round the table." This is a signet-ring famous at Court, in those months. One day Peter had lost it (mis-laid somewhere), and got into furious explosion till it was found for him again. Let us now hear Büsching, our Geographical Friend, for a moment:

Herr Pastor Büsching does the Homaging for Self and People. * * "In most Countries, it is Official or Military People that administer the Oath of Homage, on a change of Sovereigns. But in Petersburg, among the German population, it is the Pastors of their respective Churches. At the accession of Peter III., I, for the first time" (being still a young

¹ Suprà, vol. iii. p. 194.

² Hordt, ii. 118, 124, 129.

³ Rulhière, p. 83.

⁴ Hermann, v. 258.

hand rather than an old), "took the Oath from several thousands in my Church,"—and handed it over, with my own, in the proper quarter. .

"As to the Congratulatory Addresses, the new Czar received the Congratulations of all classes, and also of the Pastors of the Foreign Churches, in the following manner. He came walking slowly through a suite of rooms, in each of which a body of Congratulators were assembled. Court-Officials preceded, State-Officials followed him. Then came the Czarina, attended in a similar way. And always on entering a new room, they received a new Congratulation from the spokesman of the party there. The spokesman of us Protestant Pastors was my colleague, Senior Trefurt; but the General-in-Chief and Head-of-Police, Baron von Korf" (Hordt's friend, known to us above, German, we perceive, by creed and name), "thinking it was I that had to make the speech, and intending to present me at the same time to the Czar, motioned to me from his place behind the Czar to advance. But I did not push forward; thinking it inopportune and of no importance to me."—"Neither did I share the great expectations which Baron von Korf and everybody entertained of this new reign. All people now promised themselves better things, without reflecting" (as they should have done!) "that the better men necessary to produce these were nowhere forthcoming!"¹

For the first two or three months, Peter was the idol of all the world: Such generousities and magnanimities; such zeal and diligence, one magnanimous improvement following another! He had at once abolished Torture in his Law Courts; resolved to have a regular Code of Laws,—and Judges to be depended on for doing justice. He "destroyed monopolies;" "lowered the price of salt." To the joy of everybody, he had hastened (January 18th, second week of reign) to abolish the Secret Chancery,—a horrid Spanish-Inquisition engine of domestic politics. His Nobility he had determined should be noble: January 28th (third week of reign just beginning), he absolved the Nobility from all servile duties to him: "You can travel when and where you please; you are not obliged to serve in my Armies; you may serve in anybody's not at war with me!" under plaudits loud and universal from that Order of men. And was petitioned by a grateful Petersburg world: "Permit us, magnanimous Czar, to raise a Statue of your Majesty in solid Gold?" "Don't at all!" answered Peter: "Ah, if by good governing I could raise a memorial in my People's hearts; that would be the Statue for me!"¹ Poor headlong Peter!—It was a less lucky step that of informing the Clergy (date not given), That in the Czarship lay Spiritual Sovereignty as well as Temporal, and that he would henceforth administer their rich Abbey Lands and the like;—this gave a sad shock to the upper strata of Priesthood, extending gradually to the lower, and ultimately raising an ominous general thought (perhaps worse than a general cry) of "Church in Danger! Alas, is our Czar regardless of Holy Religion, then? Perhaps, at heart still Lutheran, and has no Religion?" This, and his too headlong Prussian tendencies, are counted to have done him infinite mischief.

¹ Büsching's Beyträge, vi. ("Author's own Biography") 462 et seq.

Herr Büsching sees the Czar on Horseback. "When the Czar's own Regiment of Cuirassiers came to Petersburg, the Czar, dressed in the uniform of the regiment, rode out to meet it; and returning at its head, rode repeatedly through certain quarters of the Town. His helmet was buckled tight with leather straps under the chin; he sat his horse as upright and stiff as a wooden image; held his sabre in equally stiff manner; turned fixedly his eyes to the right; and never by a hairs-breadth changed that posture. In such attitude he twice passed my house with his regiment, without changing a feature at sight of the many persons who crowded the windows. To me" (in my privately austere judgment) "he seemed so kleingeistisch, so small-minded a person, that I"—in fact, knew not what to think of it."

Hordt sees the deceased Czarina lying in State. "One day, after dining at Court, General Korf proposed that we should go and see the Lit de Parade" (Parade-Bed) of the late Czarina, which is in another Palace, not far off. "Count Schuwalof" (not her old lover, who has died since her, poor old creature; but his Son, a cultivated man, afterwards Voltaire's friend) "accompanied us; and, his rooms being contiguous to those of the dead Lady, he asked us to take coffee with him afterwards. The Imperial Bier stood in the Grand Saloon, which was hung all round with black, festooned and garlanded with cloth-of-silver, the glare of wax-lights quite blinding. Bier, covered with cloth-of-gold trimmed with silver lace, was raised upon steps. A rich crown was on the head of the dead Czarina. Beside the Bier stood Four Ladies, two on each hand, in grand mourning: immense crape training on the ground behind them. Two Officers of the Life-Guard occupied the lowest steps: on the topmost, at the foot of the bier, was an Archimandrite (superior kind of Abbot), who had a Bible before him, from which he read aloud,—continuously till relieved by another. This went on day and night without interruption. All round the bier, on stools (tabourets), were placed different Crowns and the insignia of various Orders,—those of Prussia, among others. It being established usage, I had, to my great repugnance, to kiss the hand of the corpse! We then talked a little to the Ladies in attendance (with their crape trains), joking about the article of hand-kissing; finally we adjourned for coffee to Count Schuwalof's apartments, which were of an incredible magnificence." That same evening, farther on,—

¹ Hermann, v. 248.

² Büsching's Beiträge, vi, 464.

"I supped with the Czar in his Petit Appartement, Private Rooms" (a fine free-and-easy nook of space!) "The company there consisted of the Countess Woronzow, a creature without any graces, bodily or mental, whom the Czar had chosen for his Mistress" (snub-nosed, pock-marked, fat, and with a pert tongue at times), "whom I liked the less, as there were one or two other very handsome women there. Some Courtiers too; and no Foreigners but the English Envoy and myself. The supper was very gay, and was prolonged late into the night. These late orgies, however, did not prevent his Majesty from attending to business in good time next morning. He would appear unexpectedly, at an early hour, at the Senate, at the Synod" (Head Consistory), "making them stand to their duties,"—or pretend to do it. His Majesty is not understood to have got much real work out of either of these Governing Bodies; the former, the Senate, or secular one, which had fallen very torpid latterly, was, not long after this, suffered to die out altogether. Peter himself was a violently pushing man, and never shrank from labour; always in a plunge of hurries, and of irregular hours. In his final time, people whispered, 'The Czar is killing himself; sits smoking, tipping, talking till 2 in the morning; and is overhead in business again by 7!'

Czarina Elizabeth's Funeral, as seen by Hordt (much abridged).
 "At 10 in the morning all the bells in Petersburg broke out; and tolled incessantly" (day or month not hinted at,—nor worth seeking; grim darkness of universal frost perceptible enough; clangour of bells; and procession seemingly of miles long,—on this extremely high errand!)—"Minute-guns were fired from the moment the procession set out from the Castle till it arrived at the Citadel, a distance of two English miles and a half. Planks were laid all the way ; forming a sort of bridge through the streets, and over the ice of the Neva. All the soldiers of the Garrison were ranked in espalier on each side. Three hundred grenadiers opened the march ; after them, three hundred priests, in sacerdotal costume ; walking two-and-two, singing hymns. All the Crowns and Orders, above mentioned by me, were carried by high Dignitaries of the Court, walking in single file, each a chamberlain behind him. Hearse was followed by the Czar, his black cloak carried by Twelve Chamberlains, each a lighted taper in the other hand. Prince George of Holstein" (Czar's Uncle) "came next, then Holstein-Beck" (Czar's Cousin). "Czarina Catharine followed, also on foot, with a lighted taper ; her cloak borne by all her Ladies. Three hundred grenadiers closed the procession. Bells tolling, minute-guns firing, seas of people crowding."—Thus the Russians buried their Czarina. Day and its dusky frost-curtains sank ; and Boötes, looking down from the starry deeps, found one Telluric Anomaly forever hidden from him. She had left of unworn Dresses, the richest procurable in Nature (five a-day her usual allowance, and never or seldom worn twice), "15,000 and some hundreds."¹ Hordt is of the new Czarina Catharine's Evening Parties. "The Czarina received company every morning. She received everybody with great affability and grace. But notwithstanding her efforts to appear gay, one could perceive a deep background of sadness in her. She knew better than anybody the violent (ardente) character of her husband ; and perhaps she then already foresaw what would come. She also had her circle every evening, and always asked the company to stay supper. One evening, when I was of her party, a confidential Equerry of the Czar came in, and whispered me That I had been searched for all over Town, to come to supper at the Countess's (that was the usual designation of the Sultana,"—das Fräulein, spelt in Russian ways, is the more usual). "I begged to be excused for this time, being engaged to sup with the Czarina, to whom I could not well state the reason for which I was to leave. The Equerry had not gone long, when suddenly a great noise was heard, the two wings of the door were flung open, and the Czar entered. He saluted politely the Czarina and her circle ; called me with that smiling and gracious air which he always had ; took me by the arm, and said to the Czarina: 'Excuse me, Madame, if to-night I carry off one of your guests; it is this Prussian I had searched for all over the Town.' The Czarina laughed; I made her a deep bow, and went away with my conductor. Next morning I went to the Czarina; who, without mentioning what had passed last night, said smiling, 'Come and sup with me always when there is nothing to prevent it.'"

¹ Hermann, v. 176.

February 21st, Hordt at Zarskoe-Zeloe. "On occasion of the Czar's birthday" (which gives us a date, for once),¹ "there were great festivities, lasting a week. It began with a grand Te Deum, at which the Czar was present, but not the Czarina. She had, that morning, in obedience to her husband's will, decorated 'the Countess' with the cordon of the Order of St. Catharine. She was now detained in her Apartment 'by indisposition;' and did not leave it during the eight days the festivities lasted." This happened at the Country Palace, Zarskoe-Zeloe; and is a turning-point in poor Peter's History.² From that day, his Czarina saw that, by the medium of her Peter, it was not she that would ever come to be Autocrat; not she, but a pock-marked, unbeautiful Person, with Cordon of the Order of St. Catharine,—blessings on it! From that day, the Czarina sat brooding her wrongs and her perils,—wrongs done, very many, and now wrongs to be suffered, who can say how many! She perceives clearly that the Czar is gone from her, fixedly sullen at her (not without cause);—and that Siberia, or worse, is possible by and by. The Czarina was helplessly wretched for some time; and by degrees entered on a Plot;—assisted by Princess Dashkof (Sister of the Snub-nosed), by Panin (our Son's Tutor, "a genuine Son, I will swear, whatever the Papa may think in his wild moments!"), by Gregory Orlof (one's present Lover), and others of less mark;—and it ripened exquisitely within the next four months!—

Hordt hears the Praises of his King. "Next day" (nobody can guess what day) "I dined at Court. I sat opposite the Czar, who talked of nothing but of his 'good friend the King of Prussia.' He knew all the smallest details of his Campaigns; all his military arrangements; the dress and strength of all his Regiments; and he declared aloud that he would shortly put all his troops upon the same footing" (which he did shortly, to the great disgust of his troops).—"Rising from table, the Czar himself did me the honour to say, 'Come to-morrow ; dine with me en petit appartement ' (on the snug, where we often play high-jinks, and go to great lengths in liquor and tobacco) ; 'I will show you something curious, which you will like.' I went at the accustomed hour ; I found Lieutenant-General Werner " (hidden since his accident at Colberg last winter, whom a beneficent Czar has summoned again into the light of noon). "I made a great friendship with this distinguished General, who was a charming man ; and went constantly about with him, till he left me here,"—Czarish kindness letting Werner home, and detaining me, to my regret.'

¹ Michaelis, ii. 627: "21st February 1728.

² Hermann, p. 253.

The Prussian Treaties, first of Peace (May 5th), with all our Conquests flung back, and then of Alliance, with yourself and ourselves, as it were, flung into the bargain,—were by no means so popular in Petersburg as in Berlin ! From May 5th onwards, we can suppose Peter to be, perhaps rather rapidly, on the declining hand. Add the fatal element, "Church in Danger" (a Czar privately Apostate) ; his very Guardsmen indignant at their tight-fitting Prussian uniforms, and at their no less tight Prussian drill (which the Czar is uncommonly urgent with) ; and a Czarina Plot silently spreading on all sides, like subterranean mines filled with gunpowder !—

Herr Düsching sees the Catastrophe (Friday, 9th July 1762). "This day being the day before Peter-and-Paul, which is a great Holiday in Petersburg, I drove out, between 9 and 10 in the morning, to visit the sick. On my way from the first house where I had called, I heard a distant noise like that of a rising thunderstorm, and asked my people what it was. They did not know ; but it appeared to them like the shouting of a mob (Volksgeschrei), and there were all sorts of rumours afloat. Some said, 'The Czar had suddenly resolved to get himself crowned at Petersburg, before setting out for the war on Denmark.' Others said, 'He had named the Czarina to be Regent during his absence, and that she was to be crowned for this purpose.' These rumors were too silly : meanwhile the noise perceptibly drew nearer ; and I ordered my coachman to proceed no farther, but to turn home.

"On getting home, I called my Wife ; and told her, That something extraordinary was then going on, but that I could not learn what ; that it appeared to me like some popular Tumult, which was coming nearer to us every moment ! We hurried to the corner room of our house; threw open the window, which looks to the Church of St. Mary of Casan" (where an Act of Thanksgiving has just been consummated, of a very peculiar kind!)"—"and we then saw, near this Church, an innumerable crowd of people; dressed and half-dressed soldiers of the foot-regiments of the Guards, mixed with the populace. We perceived that the crowd pressed round a common two-seated Hackney Coach drawn by two horses; in which, after a few minutes, a Lady dressed in black, and wearing the Order of St. Catharine, coming out of the church, took a seat. Whereupon the church-bells began ringing, and the priests, with their assistants carrying crosses, got into procession, and walked before the Coach. We now recognized that it was the Czarina Catharine saluting the multitude to right and left, as she fared along."¹

¹ Hordt, ii. 133–145, 151.

Yes, Doctor, that Lady in black is the Czarina; and has come a drive of twenty miles this morning; and done a great deal of business in Town,—one day before the set time. In her remote Apartment at Peterhof, this morning between 2 and 3, she awoke to see Alexei Orlof, called oftener Scarred Orlof (Lover Gregory's Brother), kneeling at her bedside, with the words, "Madam, you must come: there is not a moment to lose!"—who, seeing her awake, vanished to get the vehicles ready. About 7, she, with the Scarred and her maid and a valet or two, arrived at the Guards' Barracks here,—Gregory Orlof, and others concerned, waiting to receive her, in the fit temper for playing at sharps. She has spoken a little, wept a little to the Guards (still only half-dressed, many of them): "Holy religion, Russian Empire thrown at the feet of Prussia; my poor Son to be disinherited: Alack, ohoo!" Whereupon the Guards (their Officers already gained by Orlof) have indignantly blazed up into the fit Hurra-hurraing:—and here, since about 9 A.M., we have just been in the "Church of St. Mary of Casan" ("Oh, my friends, Orthodox Religion, first of all!"), doing Te-Deums, and the other Divine Offices, for the thrice-happy Revolution and Deliverance now vouchsafed us and you! And the Herr Doctor, under outburst of the chimes of St. Mary, and of the jubilant Soldieries and Populations, sees the Czarina saluting to right and left; and Priests with their assistants and crucifixes ("behold them, ye Orthodox; is there anything equal to true Religion?"), walking before her Hackney Coach.

¹ Beyträge, vi. 465; compare Bulkière, p. 95; Hermann, v. 287.

"On the one step of her Coach," continues the Herr Doctor, "stood Grigorei Grigorjewitsh Orlof," so he spells him, "and in front of it, with drawn sword, rode the Field-marshal and Hetman Count Kirila Grigorjewitsh Rasomowski, Colonel of the Ismailow Guard, Lieutenant-General (soon to be General-Ordnance-Master) Villebois came galloping up; leapt from his horse under our windows, and placed himself on the other step of the Coach. The procession passed before our house; going first to the New stone Palace, then to the Old wooden Winter Palace. Common Russians shouted mockingly up to us, 'Your god' (meaning the Czar) 'is dead!' And others, 'He is gone; we will have no more of him!'"—

About this hour of the day, at Oranienbaum (Orange-Tree, some twenty miles from here, and from Peterhof guess ten or twelve), Czar Peter is drilling zealously his brave Holsteiners (2,000 or more, "the flower of all my troops"); and has not, for hours after, the least inkling of all this. Catharine had been across to visit him, on Wednesday, no farther back; and had kindled Oranienbaum into opera, into illumination and what not. Thursday (yesterday), Czar and Czarina met at some Grandee's festivity, who lives between their two Residences. This day the Czar is appointed for Peterhof; to-morrow, July 10th (Peter-and-Paul's grand Holiday), Czar, Czarina, and united Court were to have done the Festivities together there,—with Czarina's powder-mine of Plot laid under them; which latter has exploded one day sooner, in the present happy manner! The poor Czar, this day, on getting to Peterhof, and finding Czarina vanished, understood too well: he saw "big smoke-clouds rise suddenly over Petersburg region," withal,—“Ha, she has cannon going for her yonder; salvoing and homaging!”—and rushed back to Oranienbaum half-mad. Old Münnich undertook to save him, by one, by two or even three different methods, "Only order me, and stand up to it with sword bare!"—but Peter's wits were all flying miscellaneously about, and he could resolve on nothing.

Peter and his Czarina never met more. Saturday (to-morrow), he abdicates; drives over to Peterhof, expecting, as per bargain, interview with his Wife; freedom to retire to Holstein, and "every sort of kindness compatible with his situation:" but is met there instead, on the staircases, by brutal people, who tear the orders off his coat, at length the very clothes off his back,—and pack him away to Ropscha, a quiet Villa some miles off, to sit silent there till Orlof and Company have considered. Consideration is: "To Holstein? He has an Anti-Danish Russian Army just now in that neighbourhood ; he will not be safe in Holstein ;—where will he be safe ? ” Saturday 17th, Peter’s seventh day in Ropscha, the Orlofs (Scarred Orlof, and Four other miscreants, one of them a Prince, one a Playactor) came over, and murdered poor Peter, in a treacherous, and even bungling and disgusting, and altogether hideous manner. “ A glass of burgundy ” (poisoned burgundy), “ your Highness ? ” said they, at dinner with his poor Highness. On the back of which, the burgundy having failed and been found out, came grappling and hauling, trampling, shrieking, and at last strangulation. Surely the Devil will reward such a Five of his Elect ? — — But we detain Herr Büsching : it is still only Friday morning, 9th of the month ; and the Czarina’s Hackney Coach, in the manner of a comet and tail, has just gone into other streets :

“ After this terrible uproar had left our quarter, I hastened to the Danish Ambassador, Count Haxthausen, who lived near me, to bring him the important news that the Czar was said to be dead. The Count was just about to burn a mass of Papers, fearing the mob would plunder his house ; but he did not proceed with it now, and thanked Heaven for saving his Country. His Secretary of Legation, my friend Schumacher, gave me all the money he had in his pockets, to distribute amongst the poor ; and I returned home. Directly after, there passed our house, at a rate as if the horses were running away, a common two-horse coach, in which sat Head-Tutor (Ober-Hofmeister) von Panin with the Grand Duke ” (famous Czar Paul, that is to be), “ who was still in his night-gown,” poor frightened little boy !—

“ Not long after, I saw some of the Foot-guards, in the public street near the Winter Palace, selling, at rates dog-cheap, their new uniforms after the Prussian cut, which they had stripped off ; whilst others, singing merrily, carried about, stuck on the top of their muskets, or on their bayonets, their new grenadier caps of Prussian fashion.¹ I saw several soldiers, out on errand or otherwise, seizing the coaches they met in the streets, and driving on in them. Others appropriated the eatables which hucksters carried about in baskets. But, in all this wild tumult, nobody was killed ; and only at Oranienbaum a few Holstein soldiers got wounded by some low Russians, in their wantonness.

“ July 11th, the disorder amongst the soldiers was at its height ; yet still much less than might have been expected. Many of them entered the houses of Foreigners, and demanded money. Seeing a number of them come into my house, I hastily put a quantity of roubles and half-roubles in my pocket, and went out with a servant, especially with a cheerful face, to meet them,"—and no harm was done.

¹ See in Hermann (v. 201) the Saxon Ambassador’s Report.

"Saturday, July 17th, was the day of the Czar's death ; on the same 17th, the Empress was informed of it ; and next day, his body was brought from Ropscha to the Convent of St. Alexander Newski, near Petersburg. Here it lay in state three days ; nay, an Imperial Manifesto even ordered that the last honours and duty be paid to it. July 20th, I drove thither with my Wife ; and to be able to view the body more minutely, we passed twice through the room where it lay" (An uncommonly broad neckcloth on it, did you observe ?) "Owing to the rapid dissolution, it had to be interred on the following day :—and it was a touching circumstance that this happened to be the very day on which the Czar had fixed to start from Petersburg on his Campaign against Denmark.¹

Catharine, one must own with a shudder, has not attained the Autocracy of All the Russias gratis. Let us hope she would once,—till driven upon a dire alternative,—have herself shuddered to purchase at such a price. A kind of horror haunts one's notion of her red-handed brazen-faced Orlofs and her, which all the cosmetics of the world will never quite cover. And yet, on the spot, in Petersburg at the moment—! Read this Clipping from Smelfungus, on a collateral topic :

In Büsching's Magazine are some Love-letters from the old Marshal Münnich to Catharine just after this event, which are psychologically curious. Love-letters, for they partake of that character ; though the man is 82, and has had such breakages and vicissitudes in this Earth. Alive yet, it would seem ; and full of ambitions. Unspeakably beautiful is this young Woman to him ; radiant as ox-eyed Juno, as Diana of the silver bow,—such a power in her to gratify the avarices, ambitions, cupidities of an insatiable old fellow : Oh divine young Empress, Aurora of bright Summer epochs, rosy-fingered daughter of the Sun,—grant me the governing of This, the administering of That : and see what a thing I will make of it (I, an inventive old gentleman), for your Majesty's honour and glory, and my own advantage!'¹—Innumerable persons of less note than Münnich have their Biographies, and are known to the reading public and in all barbers'-shops, if that were an advantage to them. Very considerable, this Münnich, as a soldier, for one thing. And surely had very strange adventures; an original German character withal:—about the stature of Belleisle, for example; and not quite unlike Belleisle, in some of his ways? Came originally from the swamps of Oldenburg, or Lower Weser Country,—son of a Deichgräfe (Ditch-Superintendent) there. Requiescant in oblivious silence, Belleisle and he; it is better than being lied of, and maundered of, and blotted and blundered of.

¹ Büsching, vi. 464-467.

"Biographies were once rhythmic, earnest as death or as life, earnest as transcendent human Insight risen to the Singing pitch; some Homer, nay some Psalmist or Evangelist, spokesman of reverent Populations, was the Biographer. Rhythmic, with exactitude, investigation to the very marrow; this, or else oblivion, Biography should now, and at all times, be; but is not,—by any manner of means. With what result is visible enough, if you will look! Human Stupor, fallen into the dishonest, lazy, and unflogged condition, is truly an awful thing."

Catharine did not persist in her Anti-Prussian determination. July 9th, the Manifesto had been indignantly emphatic on Prussia; July 22d, in a Note to Goltz from the Czarina, it was all withdrawn again.² Looking into the deceased Czar's Papers, she found that Friedrich's Letters to him had contained nothing of wrong or offensive; always excellent advices, on the contrary,—advice, among others, To be conciliatory to his clever-witted Wife, and to make her his ally, not his opponent, in living and reigning. In Königsberg (July 16th, seven days after July 9th), the Russian Governor, just on the point of quitting, emitted Proclamation, to everybody's horror: "No; altered all that; under pain of death, your Oath to ¹ Büsching, Magazin für die neue Historie und Geographie (Halle, Year 1782), xvi. 418-477 (22 Letters, and only thrice or so a word of Response from "ma Divinité:" dates, "Narva, 4th August 1762" . . .

"Petersburg, 3d October 1762").

² Rodenbeck, ii. 171.

Russia still valid!" Which, for the next ten days, or till his new Proclamation, made such a Königsberg of it as may be imagined. The sight of those Letters is understood to have turned the scale; which had hung wavering till July 22d in the Czarina's mind. "Can it be good," she might privately think withal, "to begin our reign by kindling a foolish War again?" How Friedrich received the news July 9th, and into what a crisis it threw him, we shall soon see. His Campaign had begun July 1st;—and has been summoning us home, into its horizon, for some time.

HISTORY
OF FRIEDRICH THE SECOND

CALLED FREDERICK THE GREAT

BY THOMAS CARLYLE

IN EIGHT VOLUMES
VOL. VIII

NEW YORK:
JOHN B. ALDEN, PUBLISHER,
1885.

CONTENTS OF VOL. VIII.

BOOK XX.—(Continued.)

FRIEDRICH IS NOT TO BE OVERWHELMED: THE SEVEN-YEARS
WAR GRADUALLY ENDS.

25th April 1760—15th February 1763.

CHAPTER	PAGE
XI. SEVENTH CAMPAIGN OPENS	7
XII. SIEGE OF SCHWEIDNITZ; SEVENTH CAMPAIGN ENDS.....	21
XIII. PEACE OF HUBERTSBERG.....	40

BOOK XXI

AFTERNOON AND EVENING OF FRIEDRICH'S LIFE. 1763-1786.

I. PREPARATORY	53
II. REPAIRING OF A RUINED PRUSSIA.....	61
Landrath Nüssler and the King (30th March—8d April 1763), p. 63.
Kriegsrath Roden and the King (6th—18th June 1763), 67.
Of Friedrich's new Excise-System, 76.
The Neue Palais, in Sans-Souci Neighbourhood, is founded and finished (1763-1770), 87.
"Obituary in Friedrich's Circle till 1771," 92.
III. TROUBLES IN POLAND.....	94
King of Poland dies; and there ensue huge Anarchies in that Country, p. 98.
Ex-lover Poniatowski becomes King of Poland (7th Septem- ber 1764), and is crowned without Loss of his Hair, 117.

For several Years the Dissident Question cannot be got settled; Confederation of Radom (23d June 1767—5th March 1768, pushes it into Settlement, 120.

Confederation of Bar ensues, on the per-contra Side (March 28th, 1768); and, as first Result of its Achievements (October 6th, 1768), a Turk-Russian War, 124.

IV. PARTITION OF POLAND..... 135

First Interview between Friedrich and Kaiser Joseph (Neisse, 25th—28th August 1769), p. 136.

Next Year, there is a Second Interview; Friedrich making a Return-Visit during the Kaiser's Moravian Reviews (Camp of Mährisch-Neustadt, 3d—7th September 1770), 144.

Russian-Turk War, First Two Campaigns, 155.

Prince Henri has been to Sweden; is seen at Petersburg in Masquerade (on or about Newyear's Day 1771); and does get Home, with Results that are important, 164.

What Friedrich did with his new Acquisition, 174.

V. A CHAPTER OF MISCELLANIES..... 185

Herr Doctor Zimmermann, the famous Author of the Book "On Solitude," walks reverentially before Friedrich's Door in the Dusk of an October Evening; and has a Royal Interview next Day, p. 186.

Sister Ulrique, Queen-Dowager of Sweden, revisits her native Place (December 1771—August 1772), 195.

Wilhelmina's Daughter, Elizabeth Frederike Sophie, Duchess of Würtemberg, appears at Ferney (September 1773), 203.

No. 1. Doctor Burney has sight of Voltaire (July 1770), 213.

No. 2. A Reverend Mr. Sherlock sees Voltaire, and even dines with him (April 1776), 216.

General or Fieldmarshal Conway, direct from the London Circles, attends one of Friedrich's Reviews (August—September 1774), 221.

Exuberant Sherlock and Eleven other English are presented to Friedrich, on a Court Occasion (8th October 1777); and Two of them get spoken to, and speak each a Word. Excellency Hugh Elliot is their Introducer, 236.

CONTENTS.

5

CHAPTER	PAGE
VI. THE BAVARIAN WAR	248
VII. MILLER ARNOLD'S LAWSUIT	280
VIII. THE FÜRSTENBUND: FRIEDRICH'S LAST YEARS.....	305
Prince de Ligne, after Ten Years, sees Friedrich a Sec- ond Time; and reports what was said, p. 314.
How General von der Marwitz, in early Boyhood, saw Friedrich the Great Three Times (1782-85), 325.
General Bonillé, home from his West-Indian Exploits, visits Friedrich (August 5th-11th, 1784), 331.
IX. FRIEDRICH'S LAST ILLNESS AND DEATH.....	348
<hr/>
GENERAL CONTENTS AND INDEX TO THE WORK.....	363

FREDERICK THE GREAT.

BOOK XX.—(Continued.)

FRIEDRICH IS NOT TO BE OVERWHELMED: THE SEVEN-YEARS WAR GRADUALLY ENDS.

25th April 1760—15th February 1763.

CHAPTER XI.

SEVENTH CAMPAIGN OPENS.

FRIEDRICH's plan of Campaign is settled long since : Recapture of Schweidnitz ; clear Silesia of the enemy ; Silesia and all our own Dominions clear, we can then stand fencible against the Austrian perseverances. Peace, one day, they must grant us. The general tide of European things is changed by these occurrences in Petersburg and London. Peace is evidently near. France and England are again beginning to negotiate ; no Pitt now to be rigorous. The tide of War has been wavering at its summit for two years past ; and now, with this of Russia, and this of Bute instead of Pitt, there is ebb everywhere, and all Europe determining for peace. Steady at the helm, as heretofore, a Friedrich, with the world-current in his favour, may hope to get home after all.

Austrian Headquarters had been at Waldenburg, under Loudon or his Lieutenants, all Winter. Loudon returned thither from Vienna, April 7th ; but is not to command in chief, this Year,—Schweidnitz still sticking in some people's throats : " Dangerous ; a man with such rash practices, rapidi-ties and Pandour tendencies!" Daun is to command in Silesia; Loudon, under him, obscure to us henceforth, and in-offensive to Official people. Reichs Army shall take charge of Saxony; nominally a Reichs Army, though there are 35,000 Austrians in it, as the soul of it, under some Serbelloni, some Stolberg as Chief—(the fact, I believe, is: Serbelloni got angrily displaced on that "crossing of the Mulda by Prince Henri, May 13th;" Prince of Zweibrück had angrily abdicated the year before; and a Prince Von Stolberg is now Generalissimo of Reich and Allies: but it is no kind of matter),—some Stolberg, with Serbelloni, Haddick, Maguire, and such-like, in subaltern places. Cunctator Daun, in spite of his late sleepy ways, is to be Headman again: this surely is a cheering circumstance to Friedrich: Loudon, not Daun, being the only man he ever got much ill of hitherto.

Daun arrives in Waldenburg, May 9th; and to show that he is not cunctatory, steps out within a week after. May 15th, he has descended from his Mountains; has swept round by the back and by the front of Schweidnitz, far and wide, into the Plain Country, and encamped himself crescent-wise, many miles in length, Headquarter near the Zobtenberg. Bent fondly round Schweidnitz; meaning, as is evident, to defend Schweidnitz against all comers,—his very position symbolically intimating: "I will fight for it, Prussian Majesty, if you like!"

Prussian Majesty, however, seemed to take no notice of him; and what was very surprising, kept his old quarters; "a Cantonment or Chain of Posts, ten miles long; Schweidnitz Water on his right flank, Oder on his left;" perfectly safe, as he perceives, being able to assemble in four hours, if Daun try anything.¹ And, in fact, sat there, and did not come into the Field at all for five weeks or more;—waiting till Czernichef's 20,000 arrive, who are on march from Thorn since June 2d. Mere small-war goes on in the interim; world getting all greener and flowrier; the Glatz Highlands, to one's left yonder (Owl-Mountains Eulengebirge so-called), lying magically blue and mysterious:—on the Plain in front of them, ten miles from the final peaks of them, is Schweidnitz Fortress, lying full in view, with a picked Garrison of 12,000 under a picked Captain, and all else of defence or impregnability; and Friedrich privately determined to take it, though by methods of his own choosing, and which cannot commence till Czernichef come. Daun, with his right wing, has hold of those Highland Regions, and cautiously guards them; can, when he pleases, wend back to Waldenburg Country; and at once, with his superior numbers, block all passages, and sit there impregnable. The methods of dislodging him are obscure to Friedrich himself; but methods there must be, dislodged he must be, and sent packing. Without that, all siege of Schweidnitz is flatly impossible.

¹ Tempelhof, vi. 66.

June 27th, Friedrich's Headquarter is Tintz, Czernichef now nigh: 'two days ago (June 25th), Czernichef's Cossacks "crossed the Oder at Auras,"—with how different objects from those they used to have! July 1st, Czernichef himself is here, in full tale and equipment. Had encamped, a day ago, on the Field of Lissa; where Majesty reviewed him, inspected and manœuvered him, with great mutual satisfaction. "Field of Lissa;" it is where our poor Prussian people encamped on the night of Leuthen, with their "Nun danket alle Gott," five years ago, in memorable circumstances: to what various uses are Earth's Fields liable!

Friedrich, by degrees, has considerably changed his opinion, and bent towards the late Keith's, about Russian Soldierly: a Soldierly of most various kinds; from predatory Cossacks and Calmucks to those noble Grenadiers, whom we saw sit down on the Walls of Schweidnitz when their work was done. A perfectly steady obedience is in these men; at any and all times, obedient, to the death if needful, and with a silence, with a steadfastness as of rocks and gravitation. Which is a superlative quality in soldiers. Good in Nations too, within limits; and much a distinction in the Russian Nation: rare, or almost unique, in these unruly Times. The Russians have privately had their admirations of Friedrich, all this while; and called him by I forget what unpronounceable vernacular epithet, signifying "Son of Lightning," or some such thing. No doubt they are proud to have a stroke of service under such a one, since Father Peter Feodorowitsh graciously orders it: the very Cossacks show an alertness, a vivacity; and see cheery possibilities ahead, in Countries not yet plundered out. They stayed with Friedrich only Three Weeks,—Russia being an uncertain Country. As we have seen above; though Friedrich, who is vitally concerned, has not yet seen! But their junction with him, and review by him in the Field of Lissa, had its uses by and by; and may be counted an epoch in Russian History, if nothing more. The poor Russian Nation, most pitiable of loyal Nations,—struggling patiently ahead, on those bad terms, under such Catins and foul Nightmares,—how it, shall we say, quite gone without conquest in this mad War? Perhaps, not quite. It has at least shown Europe that it possesses fighting qualities: a changed Nation, since Karl XII. bent them easily, at Narva, 8,000 to 80,000, in the snowy morning, long since!—

¹ Tempelhof, vi. 76.

Czernichef once come, and in his place in the Camp of Tintz, business instantly begins,—business, and a press of it, in right earnest;—upon the hitherto idle Daun. July 1st, there is general complex Advance everywhere on Friedrich's part; general attempt towards the Mountains. Upon which Daun, well awake, at once rolls universally thitherward again; takes post in front of the Mountains,—on the Heights of Kunzendorf, to wit (Loudon's old post in Bunzelwitz time); and elaborately spreads himself out in defence there. "Take him multifari-ously by the left flank, get between him and his Magazine at Braunau!" thinks Friedrich. Discovering which, Daun straightway hitches back into the Mountains altogether, leaving Kunzendorf to Friedrich's use as main camp. His out-most Austrians, on the edge of the Mountain Country, and back as far as suitable, Daun elaborately posts; and entrenches himself behind them in all the commanding points,—Schweidnitz still well in sight; and Braunau and the roads to it well capable of being guarded. Daun's Headquarter is Tannhausen ; Burkersdorf, Ludwigsdorf, if readers can remember them, are frontward posts :—in his old imperturbable way, Daun sits there waiting events.

¹ Buchholz, Neueste Preussisch-Brandenburgische Geschichte (1775), vol. ii. (page irrecoverable).

And for near three weeks there ensues a very multiplex series of rapid movements, and alarming demonstrations, on Daun's front, on Daun's right flank ; with serious extensive effort (masked in that way) to turn Daun's left flank, and push round by Landshut Country upon Bohemia and Braunau. Effort very serious indeed on that Landshut side : conducted at first by Friedrich in person, with General Wied (called also Neuwied, a man of mark since Liegnitz time) as second under him ; latterly by Wied himself, as Friedrich found it growing dubious or hopeless. That was Friedrich's first notion of the Daun problem. There are rapid marches here, there, round that western or left flank of Daun ; sudden spurts of fierce fighting, oftenest with a stiff climb as preliminary : but not the least real success on Daun. Daun perfectly comprehends what is on foot ; refuses to take shine for substance ; stands massed, or grouped, at his own skilful judgment, in the proper points for Braunau, still more for Schweidnitz ; and is very vigilant and imperturbable.

Kunzendorf Heights, which are not of the Hills, but in front of them, with a strip of flat still intervening ;—these, we said, Daun had at once quitted : and these are now Friedrich's ;—but yield him a very complex prospect at present. A line of opposing Heights, Burkersdorf, Ludwigsdorf, Leuthmannsdorf, bristling with abundant cannon ; behind is the multiplex sea of Hills, rising higher and higher, to the ridge of the Eulenberg in Glatz Country 10 or 12 miles southward : Daun, with forces much superior, calmly lord of all that ; infinitely needing to be ousted, could one but say how ! Friedrich begins to perceive that Braunau will not do ; that he must contrive some other plan. General Wied he still leaves to prosecute the Braunau scheme : perhaps there is still some chance in it ; at lowest it will keep Daun's attention thitherward. And Wied perseveres upon Braunau ; and Braunau proving impossible, pushes past it deeper into Bohemia, Daun loftily regardless of him. Wied's marches and attempts were of approved quality ; though unsuccessful in the way of stirring Daun. Wied's Light troops went scouring almost as far as Prag,—especially a 500 Cossacks that were with him, following their old fashion, in a new Country. To the horror of Austria ; who shrieked loudly, feeling them in her own bowels ; though so quiet, while they were in other people's on her score. This of the 500 Cossacks under Wied, if this were anything, was all of actual work that Friedrich had from his Czernichef Allies ;—nothing more of real or actual while they stayed, though something of imaginary or ostensible which had its importance, as we shall see.

Friedrich, in the third week, recalls Wied : “ Braunau clearly impossible ; only let us still keep up appearances ! ” July 18th, Wied is in Kunzendorf Country again ; on an important new enterprise, or method with the Daun Problem, in which Wied is to bear a principal hand. That is to say, The discomfiture and overturn of Daun's right wing, if we can,—since his left has proved impossible. This was the Storming of Burkersdorf Heights ; Friedrich's new plan. Which did prove successful, and is still famous in the Annals of War : reckoned by all judges a beautiful plan, beautifully executed, and once more a wonderful achieving of what seemed the impossible, when it had become the indispensable. One of Friedrich's prettiest feats ; and the last of his notable performances in this War. Readers ought not to be left without some shadowy authentic notion of it ; though the real portraiture or image (which is achievable too, after long study) is for the professional soldier only,—for whom Tempelhof, good maps, and plenty of patience, are the recipe.

“ The scene is the Wall of Heights, running east and west, parallel to Friedrich's Position at Kunzendorf ; which form the Face, or decisive beginning, of that Mountain Glacis spreading up ten miles farther, towards Glatz Country. They, these Heights called of Burkersdorf, are in effect Daun's right wing ; vitally precious to Daun, who has taken every pains about them. Burkersdorf Height (or Heights, for there are two, divided by the Brook Weistritz ; but we shall neglect the eastern or lower, which is ruled by the other, and stands or falls along with it), Burkersdorf Height is the principal: a Hill of some magnitude (short way south of the Village of Burkersdorf, which also is Daun's); Hill falling rather steep down, on two of its sides, namely on the north side, which is towards Friedrich and Kunzendorf, and on the east side, where Weistritz Water, as yet only a Brook, gushes out from the Mountains,—hastening towards Schweidnitz or Schweidnitz-Water; towards Lissa and Leuthen Country, where we have seen it on an important night. Weistritz, at this part, has scraped the eastern flank of Burkersdorf Height; and made for itself a pleasant little Valley there: this is the one Pass into the Mountains. A Valley of level bottom; where Daun has a terrific trench and sunk battery level with the ground, capable of sweeping to destruction whoever enters there without leave.

“East from Burkersdorf Lesser Height (which we neglect for the present), and a little farther inwards or south, are Two other Heights: Ludwigsdorf and Leuthmannsdorf; which also need capture, as adjuncts of Burkersdorf, or second line to Burkersdorf; and are abundantly difficult, though not so steep as Burkersdorf.

“The Enterprise, therefore, divides itself into two. Wied is to do the Ludwigsdorf-Leuthmannsdorf; Möllendorf, the Burkersdorf. The strength of guns in these places, especially on Burkersdorf,—we know Daun's habit in that particular; and need say nothing. Man-devouring batteries, abatis; battalions palisaded to the teeth, ‘the pales strong as masts, and room only for a musket-barrel between;’ nay, they are ‘furnished with a lath or cross-strap all along, for resting your gun-barrel on and taking aim:’—so careful is Daun. The ground itself is intricate, in parts impracticably steep; everywhere full of bushes, gnarls, and impediments. Seldom was there such a problem altogether! Friedrich's position, as we say, is Kunzendorf Heights, with Schweidnitz and his old ground of Bunzelwitz to rear, Czernichef and others lying there, and Würben and the old Villages and Heights again occupied as posts:—what a tale of Egyptian bricks has one to bake, your Majesty, on certain fields of this world; and with such insufficiency of raw-material sometimes!”

By the 16th of July, Friedrich's plans are complete. Contrived, I must say, with a veracity and opulent potency of intellect, flashing clear into the matter, and yet careful of the smallest practical detail. Friday 17th, Möllendorf, with men and furnitures complete, circles off north-westward by Würben (for the benefit of certain onlookers), but will have circled round to Burkersdorf neighbourhood two days hence ; by which time also Wied will be quietly in his place thereabouts, with a view to business on the 20th and 21st. Möllendorf, Wied and everything, are prosperously under way in this manner,—when, on the afternoon of that same Friday 17th,¹ Czernichef steps over, most privately, to headquarters : with what a bit of news ! “ A Revolution in Petersburg ” (July 9th, as we saw above, or as Herr Büsching saw) ; “ Czar Peter, your Majesty’s adorer, is dethroned, perhaps murdered ; your Majesty’s enemies, in the name of Czarine Catharine, order me instantly homeward with my 20,000 ! ” This is true news, this of Czernichef. A most unexpected, overwhelming Revolution in those Northern Parts ;—not needing to be farther touched upon in this place.

What here concerns us is, Friedrich’s feelings on hearing of it ; which no reader can now imagine. Horror, amazement, pity, very poignant ; grief for one’s hapless friend Peter, for one’s still more hapless self ! “ The Sisypheus stone, which we had got dragged to the top, the chains all beautifully slack these three months past,—has it leapt away again ? And on the eve of Burkersdorf, and our grand Daun problem ! ” Truly, the Destinies have been quite dramatic with this King, and have contrived the moment of hitting him to the heart. He passionately intreats Czernichef to be helpful to him,—which Czernichef would fain be, only how can he ? To be helpful ; at least to keep the matter absolutely secret yet for some hours : this the obliging Czernichef will do. And Friedrich remains, Czernichef having promised this, in the throes of desperate consideration and uncertainty, hour after hour,—how many hours I do not know. It is confidently said,² Friedrich had the thought of forcibly disarming Czernichef and his 20,000 :—in which case he must have given up the Daun Enterprise ; for without Czernichef as a positive quantity, much more with Czernichef as a negative, it is impossible. But, at any rate, most luckily for himself, he came upon a milder thought : stay with us yet three days, merely in the semblance of Allies, no service required of you, but keeping the matter a dead secret ;—on the fourth day go, with my eternal thanks ! ” This is his milder proposal ; urged with his best efforts upon the obliging Czernichef : who is in huge difficulty, and sees it to be at peril of his head, but generously consents. It is the same Czernichef who got lodged in Cüstrin cellars, on one occasion : know, O King,—the King, before this, does begin to know,—that Russians too can have something of heroic, and can recognise a hero when they see him ! In this fine way does Friedrich get the frightful chasm, or sudden gap of the ground under him, bridged over for the moment ; and proceeds upon Burkersdorf all the same.

¹ Compare Tempelhof, vi. 99, and Rüdtenbeck, ii. 164.

² Retzow, ii. 415.

Of the Attack itself we propose to say almost nothing. It consists of Two Parts, Wied and Möllendorf, which are intensely Real ; and of a great many more which are Scenic chiefly,—some of them Scenic to the degree of Drury Lane itself, as we perceive ;—all cunningly devised, and beautifully playing into one another, both the real and the scenic. Evening of the 20th, Friedrich is on his ground, according to Program. Friedrich,—who has now his Möllendorf and Wied beside him again, near this Village of Burkersdorf ; and has his completely-scenic Czernichef, and partly-scenic Ziethen and others, all in their places behind him,—quietly crushes Daun’s people out of Burkersdorf Village ; and furthermore, so soon as night has fallen, bursts up, for his own uses, Burkersdorf old Castle, and its obstinate handful of defenders, which was a noisier process. Which done, he diligently sets to trenching, building batteries in that part ; will have forty formidable guns, howitzers a good few of them, ready before sunrise. And so,

Wednesday, 21st July 1762, All Prussians are in motion, far and wide ; especially Möllendorf and Wied (versus O’Kelly and Prince de Ligne), which Pair of Prussians may be defined rather as near and close ; these Two being, in fact, the soul of the matter, and all else garniture and semblance. About 4 in the morning, Friedrich's battery of 40 had been raging; the howitzers diligent upon O'Kelly and his Burkersdorf Height,—not much hurting O'Kelly or his Height, so high was it, but making a prodigious noise upon O'Kelly;—others of the cannon sheering home on those palisades and elaborations, in the Weistritz Valley in particular, and quite tearing up a Cavalry Regiment which was drawn out there; so that O'Kelly had instantly to call it home, in a very wrecked condition. Why O'Kelly ever put it there,—except that he saw no place for it in his rugged localities, or no use for it anywhere,—is still a mystery to the intelligent mind.¹ The howitzers, their shells bursting mostly in the air, did O'Kelly little hurt, nor for hours yet was there any real attack on Burkersdorf or him; but the noise, the horrid death-blaze was prodigious, and kept O'Kelly, like some others, in an agitated, occupied condition till their own turn came.

For it had been ordered that Wied and Möllendorf were not to attack together: not together, but successively,—for the following reasons. Together; suppose Möllendorf to prosper on O'Kelly (whom he is to storm, not by the steep front part as O'Kelly fancies, but to go round by the western flank and take him in rear); suppose Möllendorf to be near prospering on Burkersdorf Height,—unless Wied too have prospered, Ludwigsdorf batteries and forces will have Möllendorf by the right flank, and between two fires he will be ruined; he and everything! On the other hand, let Wied try first: if Wied can manage Ludwigsdorf, well: if Wied cannot, he comes home again with small damage; and the whole Enterprise is off for the present. That was Friedrich's wise arrangement, and the reason why he so bombards O'Kelly with thunder, blank mostly.

And indeed, from 4 this morning and till 4 in the afternoon, there is such an outburst and blazing series of Scenic Effect, and thunder mostly blank, going on far and near all over that District of Country; General This ostentatiously speeding off, as if for attack on some important place; General That, for attack on some other ; all hands busy,—the 20,000 Russians not yet speeding, but seemingly just about to do it,—and blank thunder so mixed with not-blank, and scenic effect with bitter reality,¹ as was seldom seen before. And no wiseat Daun, not to speak of his O'Kellys and lieutenants, can, for the life of him, say where the real attack is to be, or on what hand to turn himself. Daun in person, I believe, is still at Tannhausen, near the centre of this astonishing scene ; five or six miles from any practical part of it. And does order forward, hither, thither, masses of force to support the De Ligne, the O'Kelly among others ; but who can tell what to support ? Daun's lieutenants were alert some of them, others less : General Guasco, for instance, who is in Schweidnitz, an alert Commandant, with 12,000 picked men, was drawing out, of his own will, with certain regiments to try Friedrich's rear ; but a check was put on him (some dangerous shake of the fist from afar), when he had to draw in again. In general the O'Kelly supports sat gazing dubiously, and did nothing for O'Kelly but roll back along with him when the time came. But let us first attend to Wied, and the Ludwigsdorf-Leuthmannsdorf part.

¹ Tempelhof, vi. 107.

Wied, divided into Three, is diligently pushing up on Ludwigsdorf by the slacker eastern ascents ; meets firm enough battalions, potent, dangerous, and resolute in their strong posts ; but endeavors firmly to be more dangerous than they. Dialodges everything, on his right, on his left ; comes in sight of the batteries and ranked masses atop, which seem to him difficult indeed ; flatly impossible if tried on front ; but always some Colonel Lottum, or quick-eyed man, finds some little valley, little hollow ; gets at the Enemy side-wise and rear-wise ; rushes on with fixed bayonets, double-quick, to co-operate with the front : and, on the whole, there are the best news from Wied, and we perceive he sees his way through the affair.

Upon which, Möllendorf gets in motion, upon his specific errand. Möllendorf has been surveying his ground a little, during the leisure hour ; especially examining what mode of passage there may be, and looking for some road up those slacker western parts: has found no road, but a kind of sheep-track, which he thinks will do. Möllendorf, with all energy, surmounting many difficulties, pushes up accordingly; gets into his sheep-track; finds, in the steeper part of this track, that horses cannot draw his cannon; sets his men to do it; pulls and pushes, he and they, with a right will;—sees over his left shoulder, at a certain point, the ranked Austrians waiting for him behind their cannon (which must have been an interesting glimpse of scenery for some moments); tugs along, till he is at a point for planting his cannon; and then, under help of these, rushes forward,—in two parts, perhaps in three, but with one impetus in all,—to seize the Austrian fruit set before him. Surely, if a precious, a very prickly pomegranate, to clutch hold of on different sides, after such a climb! The Austrians make stiff fight; have abatis, multiplex defences; and Möllendorf has a furious wrestle with this last remnant, holding out wonderfully,—till at length the abatis itself catches fire, in the musketry, and they have to surrender. This must be about noon, as I collect: and Feldmarschall Daun himself now orders everybody to fall back. And the tug of fight is over;—though Friedrich's scenic effects did not cease; and in particular, his big battery raged till 5 in the afternoon, the more to confirm Daun's rearward resolutions and quicken his motions. On fall of night, Daun, everybody having had his orders, and been making his preparations for six hours past, ebbed totally away; in perfect order, bag and baggage. Well away to southward; and left Friedrich quit of him.¹

¹ Tempelhof, vi. 105-111.

Quit of Daun forevermore, as it turned out. Plainly free, at any rate, to begin upon Schweidnitz, whenever he sees good. Of the behaviour of Wied, Möllendorf, and their people, indeed of the Prussians one and all, what can be said, but that it was worthy of their Captain and of the Plannings he had made? Which is saying a great deal, "We got about 14 big guns," report they; "above 1,000 prisoners, and perhaps twice as many that deserted to us in the days following." Czernichef was full of admiration at the day's work: he marched early next morning,—I trust with lasting gratitude on the part of an obliged Friedrich.

¹ Tempelhof, vi. 100–115: compare Bericht von der bey Leutmannsdorf den 21sten Julius 1762 vorgefallenen Action (Seyfarth, Beylagen, iii. 302–308); Anderer Bericht von der &c. (ibid. 308–314); Archenholtz, &c. &c.

Some three weeks before this of Burkersdorf, Duke Ferdinand, near a place called Wilhelmsthal, in the neighbourhood of Cassel, in woody broken country of Hill and Dale, favourable for strategic contrivances, had organised a beautiful movement from many sides, hoping to overwhelm the too careless or too ignorant French, and gain a signal victory over them: Battle, so-called, of Wilhelmsthal, June 24th, 1762, being the result. Mauvillon never can forgive a certain stupid Hanoverian, who mistook his orders; and on getting to his Hill-top, which was the centre of all the rest,—formed himself with his back to the point of attack; and began shooting cannon at next to nothing, as if to warn the French, that they had better instantly make off! Which they instantly set about, with a will; and mainly succeeded in; nothing all day but mazes of intricate marching, on both sides, with spurts of fight here and there,—ending in a truly stiff bout between Granby and a Comte de Stainville, who covered the retreat, and who could not be beaten without a great deal of trouble. The result a kind of victory to Ferdinand; but nothing like what he expected.¹

Soubise leads the French this final Year; but he has a D'Estrées with him (our old D'Estrées of Hastenbeck), who much helps the account current; and though generally on the declining hand (obliged to give up Göttingen, to edge away farther and farther out of Hessen itself, to give up the Weser, and see no shift but the farther side of Fulda, with Frankfurt to rear),—is not often caught napping as here at Wilhelmsthal. There ensued about the banks of the Fulda, and the question, Shall we be driven across it sooner or not so soon? a great deal of fighting and pushing (Battle called of Luttern- berg, Battle of Johannisberg, and others) : but all readers will look forward rather to the Cannonade of Amöneburg, more precisely Cannonade of the Brücken-Mühle (September 21st), which finishes these wearisome death-wrestlings. Peace is coming ; all the world can now count on that !

¹ Mauvillon, ii. 227-236; Tempelhof, vi. &c. &c.

Bute is ravenous for Peace ; has been privately taking the most unheard-of steps :—wrote to Kaunitz, "Peace at once, and we will vote for your having Silesia ;" to which Kaunitz, suspecting trickery in artless Bute, answered, haughtily sneering, "No help needed from your Lordship, in that matter !" After which repulse, or before it, Bute had applied to the Czar's Minister in London : "Czarish Majesty to have East Preussen guaranteed to him, if he will insist that the King of Prussia dispense with Silesia ;" which the indignant Czar rejected with scorn, and at once made his Royal Friend aware of ;—with what emotion on the Royal Friend's part we have transiently seen. "Horrors and perfidies !" ejaculated he, in our hearing lately ; and regarded Bute, from that time, as a knave and an imbecile both in one ; nor ever quite forgave Bute's Nation either, which was far from being Bute's accomplice in this unheard-of procedure. "No more Alliances with England !" counted he : "What Alliance can there be with that ever-fluctuating People ; today they have a thrice-noble Pitt ; tomorrow a thrice-paltry Bute, and all goes heels-overhead on the sudden !" ¹

Bute, at this rate of going, will manage to get hold of Peace before long. To Friedrich himself, a Siege of Schweidnitz is now free ; Schweidnitz his, the Austrians will have to quit Silesia. "Their cash is out : except prayer to the Virgin, what but Peace can they attempt farther ? In Saxony things will have gone ill, if there be not enough left us to offer them in return for Glatz. And Peace and As-you-were must ensue !" —

Let us go upon Schweidnitz, therefore ; pausing on none of these subsidiary things ; and be brief upon Schweidnitz too.

¹ Preuss, ii. 308 ; Mitchell, ii. 286.

CHAPTER XII.

SIEGE OF SCHWEIDNITZ: SEVENTH CAMPAIGN ENDS.

DAUN being now cleared away, Friedrich instantly proceeds upon Schweidnitz. Orders the necessary Siege Materials to get under way from Neisse; posts his Army in the proper places, between Daun and the Fortress,—King's headquarter Dittmannsdorf, Army spread in fine large crescent-shape, to south-west of Schweidnitz some ten miles, and as far between Daun and it;—orders home to him his Upper-Silesia Detachments, "Home, all of you, by Neisse Country, to make up for Czernichef's departure; from Neisse onwards you can guard the Siege-Ammunition wagons!" Naturally he has blockaded Schweidnitz, from the first; he names Tauentzien Siege-Captain, with a 10 or 12,000 to do the Siege: "Ahead, all of you!"—and in short, August 7th, with the due adroitness and precautions, opens his first parallel; suffering little or nothing hitherto by a resistance which is rather vehement.¹ He expects to have the place in a couple of weeks—"one week (huit jours)" he sometimes counts it; but was far out in his reckoning as to time.

The Siege of Schweidnitz occupied two most laborious, tedious months;—and would be wearisome to every reader now, as it was to Friedrich then, did we venture on more than the briefest outline. The resistance is vehement, very skilful:—Commandant is Guasco (the same who was so truculent to Schmettau in the Dresden time); his Garrison is near 12,000, picked from all regiments of the Austrian Army; his provisions, ammunitions, are of the amplest; and he has under him as chief Engineer a M. Gribeauval, who understands "counter-mining" like no other. After about a fortnight of trial, and one Event in the neighbourhood which shall be mentioned, this of Mining and Countermining,—though the External Sap went restlessly forward too, and the cannonading was incessant on both sides,—came to be regarded more and more as the real method, and for six or seven weeks longer was persisted in, with wonderful tenacity of attempt and resistance. Friedrich's chief Mining Engineer is also a Frenchman, one Lefebvre; who is personally the rival of Gribeauval (his old class-fellow at College, I almost think); but is not his equal in subterranean work,—or perhaps rather has the harder task of it, that of Mining, instead of Counter-mining, or spoiling Mines. Tempelhof's account of these two people, and their underground wrestle here, is really curious reading;—clear as daylight to those that will study, but of endless expansion (as usual in Tempelhof), and fit only to be indicated here.¹

¹ Tempelhof, vi. 126.

The external Event I promised to mention is an attempt on Daun's part (August 16th) to break in upon Friedrich's position, and interrupt the Siege, or render it still impossible. Event called the Battle of Reichenbach, though there was not much of battle in it;—in which our old friend the Duke of Brunswick-Bevern (whom we have seen in abeyance, and merely a Garrison Commandant, for years back, till the Russians left Stettin to itself) again played a shining part.

Daun,—at Tannhausen, 10 miles to south-west of Friedrich, and spread out among the Hills, with Loudons, Lacys, Becks, as lieutenants, and in plenty of force, could he resolve on using it,—has at last, after a month's meditation, hit upon a plan. Plan of flowing round by the southern skirt of Friedrich, and seizing certain Heights to the south-eastern or open side of Schweidnitz,—Költschen Height the key one; from which he may spread up at will, Height after Height, to the very Zobtenberg on that eastern side, and render Schweidnitz an impossibility. The plan, people say, was good; but required rapidity of execution,—a thing Daun is not strong in.

Bevern's behaviour, too, upon whom the edge of the matter fell, was very good. Bevern, coming on from Neisse and Upper-Silesia, had been much manœuvred upon for various days by Beck ; Beck, a dangerous, alert man, doing his utmost to seize post after post, and bar Bevern's way,—meaning especially, as ultimate thing, to get hold of a Height called Fischerberg, which lies near Reichenbach (in the southern Schweidnitz vicinities), and is preface to Kolttschen Height and to the whole Enterprise of Daun. In most of which attempts, especially in this last, Bevern, with great merit, not of dexterity alone (for the King's Orders had often to be disobeyed in the letter, and only the spirit of them held in view), contrived to outmanœuvre Beck ; and be found (August 13th) already firm on the Fischerberg, when Beck, in full confidence, came marching toward it. "The Fischerberg lost to us!" Beck had to report, in disappointment. "Must be recovered, and my grand Enterprise no longer put off!" thinks Daun to himself, in still more disappointment ("Laggard that I am!").—And, on the third day following, the Battle of Reichenbach ensued. Lacy, as chief, with abundant force, and Beck and Brentano under him : these are to march, "Recover me that Fischerberg ; it is the preface to Kolttschen, and all else!"¹

¹ Tempelhof, vi. 122-219; Bericht und Tagebuch von der Belagerung von Schweidnitz vom 7ten August bis 9 October 1762 (Seyfarth, Beylagen, iii. 376-479): Archenholtz, Retzow, &c.

Monday, August 16th, pretty early in the day, Lacy, with his Becks and Brentanos, appeared in great force on the western side of Fischerberg ; planted themselves there, about the three Villages of Peilau (Upper, Nether, and Middle Peilau, a little way to south of Reichenbach), within cannonshot of Bevern ; their purpose abundantly clear. Behind them, in the gorges of the Mountains, what is not so clear, lay Daun and most of his Army ; intending to push through at once upon Kolttschen and seize the key, were this of Fischerberg had. Lacy, after reconnoitering a little, spreads his tents (which it is observable Beck does not) ; and all Austrians proceed to cooking their dinner. "Nothing coming of them till tomorrow!" said Friedrich, who was here ; and went his way home, on this symptom of the Austrian procedures ;—hardly consenting to regard them farther, even when he heard their cannonade begin.

Lacy, the general composure being thus established, and dinner well done, suddenly drew out about five in the evening, in long strong line, before these Hamlets of Peilau, on the western side of the Fischerberg; Beck privately pushing round by woods to take it on the eastern side: and there ensued abundant cannonading on the part of Lacy and Brentano, and some idle flourishing about of horse, responded to by Bevern; and, on the part of Lacy and Brentano, nothing else whatever. More like a theatre fight than a real one, says Tempelhof. Beck, however, is in earnest; has a most difficult march through the tangled pathless woods; does arrive at length, and begin real fighting, very sharp for some time; which might have been productive, had Lacy given the least help to it, as he did not.¹ Beck did his fieriest; but got repulsed everywhere. Beck tries in various places; finds swamps, impediments, fierce resistance from the Bevern people;—finds, at length, that the King is awake, and that reinforcements, horse, foot, riding-artillery, are coming in at the gallop; and that he, Beck, cannot too soon get away.

¹ Tempelhof, vi. 144.

None of the King's Foot people could get in for a stroke, though they came mostly running (distance five miles); but the Horse-charges were beautifully impressive on Lacy's theatrical performers, as was the Horse-Artillery, to a still more surprising degree; and produced an immediate Exeunt Omnes on the Lacy part. All off; about 7 P.M.,—Sun just going down in the autumn sky; and the Battle of Reichenbach a thing finished. Seeing which, Daun also immediately withdrew, through the gorges of the Mountains again. And for seven weeks thenceforth sat contemplative, without the least farther attempt at relief of Schweidnitz. It was during those seven weeks, some time after this, that poor Madam Daun, going to a Levee at Schönbrunn one day, had her carriage half filled with symbolical nightcaps, successively flung in upon her by the Vienna people;—symbolical; in lieu of Slashing Articles, and Newspapers the best Instructors, which they as yet have not.

Next day the Joy-fire of the Prussians taught Guasco what disaster had happened; and on the fifth day afterwards (August 22d), hearing nothing farther of Daun, Guasco offered to surrender, on the principle of Free Withdrawal. "No, never," answered Tauentzien, by the King's order: "As Prisoners of War it must be!" Upon which Guasco stood to his defences again; and maintained himself,—Gribeauval and he did,—with an admirable obstinacy: the details of which would be very wearisome to readers. Gribeauval and he, I said; for from this time, Engineer Lefebvre, though he tried (with bad skill, thinks Tempelhof) some bits of assault above ground, took mainly to mining, and a grand underground invention called Globes de Compression; which he reckoned to be the real sovereign method,—unlucky that he was! I may at least explain what Globes de Compression is; for it becomes famous on this occasion, and no name could be less descriptive of the thing. Not a globe at all, for that matter, nor intended to "compress," but to express, and shatter to pieces in a transcendent degree: it is, in fact, a huge cubical mine-chamber, filled by a wooden box (till Friedrich, in his hurry, taught Lefebvre that a sack would do as well), loaded with, say, five thousand-weight of powder. Sufficient to blow any horn-work, bastion, bulwark, into the air,—provided you plant it in the right place; which poor Lefebvre never can. He tried, with immense labour, successively some four or almost five of these "Press Balls" so-called (or Volcanoes in Little); mining on, many yards, 15 or 20 feet underground (tormented by Gribeauval all the way), then at last, exploding his five thousand-weight,—would produce a "Funnel," or crater, of perhaps "30 yards in diameter," but, alas, "150 yards off any bastion."

¹ Tempelhof, vi. 146-151.

Funnel of no use to him;—mere sign to him that he must go down into it, and begin there again; with better aim, if possible. And then Gribeauval's tormentings; never were the like! Gribeauval has, all round under the Glacis, mine-galleries, or main-roads for Countermining, ready to his hand (mine-galleries built by Friedrich, while lately proprietor); there Gribeauval is hearkening the beat of Lefebvre's picks: "Ten yards off from us, think you? Six yards? Get a 30 hundred-weight of chamber ready for him!" And will, at the right moment, blow Lefebvre's gallery about his ears ;—sometimes burst in upon him bodily with pistol and cutlass, or still worse, with explosive sulphur-balls, choke-pots, and infinitudes of malodour instantaneously developed on Lefebvre,—which mean withal, “You will have to begin again, Monsieur !” Enough to drive a Lefebvre out of his wits. Twice, or oftener, Lefebvre, a zealous creature, but a thin-skinned, flew out into open paroxysm ; wept, invoked the gods, threatened suicide : so that Friedrich had to console him, “Courage, you will manage it ; make chicanes on Gribeauval, as he does on you,”—and suggested that powder-sack instead of deal-box, which we just mentioned.

Friedrich's patience seems to have been great ; but in the end he began to think the time long. He was in three successive headquarters, Dittmannsdorf, Peterswaldau, Bögendorf, nearer and nearer ; at length quite near (Bögendorf within a couple of miles) ; and wondering Gazetteers reported him on horseback, examining minutely the parallels and siege-works,—with a singular indifference to the cannon-balls flying about (“Not easy to hit a small object with cannon !”), and intent only on giving Tauentzien suggestions, admonitions, and new orders. Here, prior to Bögendorf, are three snatches of writing, which successively have indications for us. King to Prince Henri :

Peterswaldau (King has just shifted hither, August 10th, on the Bevern-Reichenbach score ; continues here till September 23d), August 13th, 1762. * * “You are right to say, ‘We ourselves are our best Allies.’ I am of the same opinion ; nevertheless, it is a clear duty and call of prudence to try and alleviate the burden as much as possible : and I own to you, that if, after all I have written, the thing fails this time” (as it does), “I shall be obliged to grant that there is nothing to be made of those Turks.”— —“We are now in the press of our crisis as to Schweidnitz. The Siege advances beautifully : but Beck is come hereabouts, Lacy masked behind him ; and I cannot yet tell you (not till Reichenbach and the 16th) whether the Enemy intends some big adventure for disengaging Schweidnitz, or will content himself with disturbing and annoying us.”

Peterswaldau, 9th September. "Springs, water-threads coming into our mines delay us a little : by the 12th" (in 3 days time, little thinking it would be 30 days !) "I still hope to despatch you a courier with the news, All is over ! Your Nephew" (Prince of Prussia) "is out today assisting in a forage ; he begins to kindle into fine action. We are nothing but pygmies in comparison to him" (in point of physical stature) ; "imagine to yourself Prince Franz" (of Brunswick ; killed, poor fellow, at Hochkirch), "only taller still ; this is the figure of him at present."

Peterswaldau, September 19th. * * "Our Siege wearies all the world ; people persecute me to know the end of it ; I never get a Berlin Letter without something on that head ;—and I have no resource myself but patience. We do all we can : but I cannot hinder the enemy from defending himself, and Gribeauval from being a clever fellow :—soon, however, surely soon, soon, we shall see the end. Our weather here is like December ; the Seasons are as mad as the Politics of Europe. Finally, my dear Brother, one must shove Time on ; day follows day, and at last we shall catch the one that ends our labours. Adieu ; je vous embrasse."¹—Here farther, from the Siege-ground itself, are some traceries, scratchings by a sure hand, which yield us something of image. Date is still only "Before Schweidnitz," far on in the eighth week :

September 23d. "This morning, before 9, the King" (direct from Peterswaldau, where he has been lodging hitherto,—must have breakfasted rather early) "came into the lines here :—his quarter is now to be at Bögendorf near hand, in a Farm-house there. The Prince of Prussia was riding with him, and Lieutenant-Colonel von Anhalt" (the Adjutant whom we have heard of) : "he looked at the Battery" lately ordered by him ; "looked at many things ; rode along, a good 100 yards, inside of the vedettes ; so that the Enemy noticed him, and fired violently,"—King decidedly ignoring. "To Captain Beauvrye" (Captain of the Miners) "he paid a gracious compliment ; Major Lefebvre he rallied a little for losing heart, for bungling his business ; but was not angry with him, consoled him rather ; bantered him on the shabbiness of his equipments, and made him a gift of 400 thalers (60*l.*), to improve them. Lefebvre, Tauentzien, and "another General "dined with him at Bögendorf today."

¹ Schöning, iii. 403, 430, 446.

September 24th, early. "The King on horseback viewed the trenches, rode close behind the first parallel, along the midmost communication-line: the Enemy cannonaded at us horribly (erschrecklich); a ball struck down the Page von Pirch's horse" (Pirch lay writhing, making moan,—plainly over-much, thought the King): "on Pirch's accident, too, the Prince of Prussia's horse made a wild plunge, and pitched its rider aloft out of the saddle; people thought the Prince was shot, and everybody was in horror: great was the commotion; only the King was heard calling with a clear voice. 'Pirch, vergiss Er seinen Sattel nicht,—Pirch, bring your saddle with you!'"

This of Pirch and the saddle is an Anecdote in wide circulation; taken sometimes as a proof of Royal thrift; but is mainly the Royal mode of rebuking Pirch for his weak behaviour in the accident that had befallen. Pirch, an ingenious handy kind of fellow, famed for his pranks and trickeries in those Page-days, had many adventures in the world;—was, for one while, something of a notability among the French; will "teach you the Prussian mode of drill" and actually got leave to try it "on the German Regiments in our service:"—died, finally, as Colonel of one of these, at the Siege of Gibraltar, in 1783.

September 25th. "Morning and noon, each time two hours, the King was in his new batteries; and, with great satisfaction, watched the working of them. This day there dined with him the Prince of Bernburg" (General of Brigade here), "Tauentzien, Lefebvre, and Dieskau" (head of the Artillery).

The King is always riding about; has now, virtually, taken charge of the Siege himself. "In Bögendorf, the first night, he dismissed the Guard sent for him; would have nothing there but six chasers (jäger):" an alarming case! "After a night or two, there came always, without his knowledge, a dragoon party of 30 horse; took post behind Bögendorf ² Voltaire's wondering Report of him ("Ferney, 7th December 1774", and Friedrich's quiet Answer ("Berlin, 28th December 1774"): in Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiii. 297, 301. Rödénbeck (ii. 198-200) has a slight "Biography" of Pirch.

¹ "Captain Gotz's Notebook" (a conspicuous Captain here, Notebook still in manuscript, I think): cited in Schöning, iii. 453 et seq.

Church, patrolled towards Kunzendorf, Giesdorf, and had three pickets."

September 28th. "Gribeauval has sprung a mine last night;" totally blown up Lefebvre again! "Engineer-Lieutenants Gerhard and Von Kleist were wounded by our own people; Captain Guyon was shot:" things all going wrong,—weather, I suspect also, bad. "The King was in dreadful humour (sehr ungnädig); rated and rebuked to right and left: 'If it should last till January, the Attack must go on. Nobody seems to be able for his business; Lefebvre a blockhead (dummer Teufel), who knows nothing of mining: the Generals, too, where are they? Every General henceforth is to take his place in the third parallel, at the head of his Covering-Party' (most exposed place of all), 'and stay his whole twenty-four hours there' (Prince of Anhalt-Bernburg is Covering-Party today; I hope, in his post during this thunder!): 'Taken the Place can and must be! We have the misfortune, That a stupid Engineer who knows nothing of his art has the direction; and a General without sense in Sieging has the command. Everybody is at a nonplus, it appears! Not all our Artillery can silence that Front-fire; not in a single place can Thirty stupid Miners get into the Fort.' Today and yesterday the King spoke neither to General Tautentzien nor to Major Lefebvre; Lieutenant-Colonel von Anhalt had to give all the Orders." An electric kind of day!

The weather is becoming wet. In fact, there ensue whole weeks of rain,—the trenches swimming, service very hard. Guasco's guns are many of them dismounted; no Daun to be heard of. Guasco again and again proposes modified capitulations; answer always, "Prisoners of War on the common terms." Guasco is wearing low: October 7th (Lefebvre sweating and puffing at his last Globe of Expression, hoping to hit the mark this last time), an accidental grenade from Tautentzien, above ground, rolled into one of Guasco's powder-vaults; blew it, and a good space of Wall along with it, into wreck; two days after which, Guasco had finished his Capitulating;—and we get done with this wearisome affair.¹ Guasco was invited to dine with the King ; praised for his excellent defence. Prisoners of War his Garrison and he ; about 9,000 of them still on their feet ; their entire loss had been 3,552 killed and wounded ; that of the Prussians 3,033. Poor Guasco died, in Königsberg, still prisoner, before the Peace came.

¹ Tempelhof, vi. 122-220; Tagebuch von der Belagerung von Schweidnitz von 7ten August bis 9ten October 1762 (Seyfarth Beylagen, iii. 376-479); Tielke, &c. &c.

Of Austrian fighting in Silesia, this proved to be the last, in the present Controversy which has endured so long. No thought of fighting is in Daun ; far the reverse. Daun is getting ill off for horse-forage in his Mountains ; the weather is bad upon him ; we hear " he has had, for some time past, 12,000 labourers " palisading and fortifying at the Passes of Bohemia : " Truce for the Winter " is what he proposes. To which the King answers, " No ; unless you retire wholly within Bohemia and Glatz Country : " this at present Daun grudged to do ; but was forced to it, some weeks afterwards, by the sleets and the snows, had there been no other pressure. In about three weeks hence, Friedrich, leaving Bevern in command here, and a Silesia more or less adjusted, made for Saxony ; whither important reinforcements had preceded him,—reinforcements under General Wied, the instant it was possible. Saxony he had long regarded as the grand point, were Schweidnitz over : " Recapture Dresden, and they will have to give us Peace this very Winter ! " Daun, also with reinforcements, followed him to Saxony, as usual ; but never quite arrived, or else found matters settled on arriving ;—and will not require farther mention in this History. He died some three years hence, age 60 ;¹ an honourable, imperturbable, eupeptic kind of man, sufficiently known to readers by this time.

Friedrich did not recapture Dresden ; far enough from that,—though Peace came all the same. Hardly a week after our recovery of Schweidnitz, Stolberg and his Reichsfolk, especially his Austrians, became unexpectedly pert upon Henri ; pressed forward (October 15th), in overpowering force, into his Posts about Freyberg, Pretschendorf, and that south-western Reichward part : " No more invadings of Bohemia from you, Monseigneurs ; no more tormentings of the Reich ; here is other work for you, my Prince !"—and in spite of all Prince Henri could do, drove him back, clear out of Freyberg ; north-westward, towards Hülßen and his reserves.¹ Giving him, in this manner, what solders call a slap ; slap which might have been more considerable, had those Stolberg people followed it up with emphasis. But they did not ; so alert was Henri. Henri at once rallied beautifully from his slap (King's reinforcements coming, too, as we have said) ; and, in ten-days time, without any reinforcement, paid Stolberg and Company by a stunning blow : Battle of Freyberg (October 29th),—which must not go without mention, were it only as Prince Henri's sole Battle, and the last of this War. Preparatory to which and its sequel, let us glance again at Duke Ferdinand and the English-French posture,—also for the last time.

¹ " 5th February 1766 ; " " born, 24th September 1705 " (Hormayr, Oesterreichischer Plutarch, ii. 80-111.)

Cannonade at Amöneburg (21st September 1762). "The controversies about right or left bank of the Fulda have been settled long since in Ferdinand's favour ; who proceeded next to blockade the various French strongholds in Hessen ; Marburg, Ziegenhayn, especially Cassel ; with an eye to besieging the same, and rooting the French permanently out. To prevent or delay which, what can Soubise and D'Estrées do but send for their secondary smaller Army, which is in the Lower-Rhine Country under a Prince de Condé, mostly idle at present, to come and join them in the critical regions here. Whereupon new Controversy shifting westward to the Mayn and Nidda-Lahn Country to achieve said Junction and to hinder it. Junction was not to be hindered. The D'Estrées-Soubise people and young Condé made good manœuvring, handsome fight on occasion ; so that in spite of all the Erbprinz could do, they got hands joined ; far too strong for the Erbprinz thenceforth ; and on the last night of August were all fairly together, headquarters Friedberg in Frankfurt Country (a thirty miles north of Frankfurt) ; and were earnestly considering the now not hopeless question, 'How, or by what routes and methods, push to north-westward, get through to those blockaded Hessian Strong-places, Cassel especially; and hinder Ferdinand's besieging them, and quite outrooting us there?'

¹ Bericht von dem Angriff so am 15ten October 1762 von der Reichs-Armee auf die Königlich-Preussischen unter dem Prinzen Heinrich geschehen (Seyfarth, Beylagen, iii. 362-364). Ausführlicher Bericht von der den 15ten October 1762 bey Brand vorgefallenen Action (Ibid. iii. 350-362). Tempelhof, vi. 238.

"This is a difficult question, but a vital. 'Sweep rapidly past Ferdinand,—cannot we? Well frontward or westward of him, dexterously across the Lahn and its Branches (our light people are to rear of him, on this side of the Fulda, between the Fulda and him): once joined with those light people by such methods, we have Cassel ahead, Ferdinand to rear, and will make short work with the blockades,—the blockades will have to rise in a hurry!' This was the plan devised by D'Estrées; and rapidly set about; but it was seen into, at the first step, by Ferdinand, who proved still more rapid upon it. Campings, counter-campings, crossings of the Lahn by D'Estrées people, then recrossings of it, ensued for above a fortnight; which are not for mention here: in fine, about the middle of September, the D'Estrées Enterprise had plainly become impossible, unless it could get across the Ohm,—an eastern, or wide-circling north-eastern Branch of the Lahn,—where, on the right or eastern bank of which, as better for him than the Lahn itself in this part, Ferdinand now is. 'Across the Ohm: and that, how can that be done, the provident Ferdinand having laid hold of Ohm, and secured every pass of it, several days ago! Perhaps by a Surprisal; by extreme despatch?'

"Amöneburg is a pleasant little Town, about thirty miles east of Marburg,—in which latter we have been, in very old times; looking after St. Elizabeth, Teutsch Ritters, Philip the Magnanimous, and other objects. Amöneburg stands on the left or western bank of the Ohm, with an old Schloss in it, and a Bridge near by; both of which, Ferdinand, the left or southmost wing of whose Position on the other bank of Ohm is hereabouts, has made due seizure of. Seizure of the Bridge, first of all,—Bridge with a Mill at it (which, in consequence, is called Brücken-Mühle, Bridge-Mill),—at the eastern end of this there is a strong Redoubt, with the Bridge-way blocked and rammed ahead of it; there Ferdinand has put 200 men; 500 more are across in Amöneburg and its old castle. Unless by surprisal and extreme despatch, there is clearly no hope! Ferdinand's headquarter is seven or eight miles to north-west of this his Brücken-Mühle and extreme left; next to Brücken-Mühle is Zastrow's Division; next, again, is Granby's ; several Divisions between Ferdinand and it : ' Do it by surprisal, by utmost force of vehemency ! ' say the French. And accordingly,

" September 21st " (day of the Equinox 1762), " An hour before sunrise, there began, quite on the sudden, a vivid attack on the Brücken-Mühle and on Amöneburg, by cannon, by musketry, by all methods ; and, in spite of the alert and completely obstinate resistance, would not cease ; but, on the contrary, seemed to be on the increasing hand, new cannon, new musketries ; and went on, hour after hour, ever the more vivid. So that, about 8 in the morning, after three hours of this, Zastrow, with his Division, had to intervene : to range himself on the Hill-top behind this Brücken-Mühle ; replace the afflicted 200 (many of them hurt, not a few killed) by a fresh 200 of his own ; who again needed to be relieved before long. For the French, whom Zastrow had to imitate in that respect, kept bringing up more cannon, ever more, as if they would bring up all the cannon of their Army ; and there rose between Zastrow and them such a cannonade, for length and loudness together, as had not been heard in this War. Most furious cannonading, musketading ; and seemingly no end to it. Ferdinand himself came over to ascertain ; found it a hot thing indeed. Zastrow had to relieve his 200 every hour : ' Don't go down in rank, you new ones,' ordered he ;—' slide, leap, descend the hill-face in scattered form : rank at the bottom ! '—and generally about half of the old 200 were left dead or lamed by their hour's work. ' They intend to have this Bridge from us at any cost,' thinks Ferdinand ; ' and at any cost they shall not ! ' And, in the end, orders Granby forward, in room of Zastrow who has had some eight hours of it now ; and rides home to look after his main quarters.

" It was about 4 in the afternoon when Granby and his English came into the fire ; and I rather think the French onslaught was, if anything, more furious than ever :—Despair striding visibly forward on it, or something too like Despair. Amöneburg they had battered to pieces, Wall and Schloss, so that the 500 had to ground arms : but not an inch of way had they made upon the Bridge, nor were like to make. Granby continued on the old plan, plying all his diligences and artilleries ; needing them all. Fierce work to a degree : ' 200 of you go down on wings' (in an hour about 100 will come back) ! In English Families you will still hear some vague memory of Amöneburg, How we had built walls of the dead, and fired from behind them,—French more and more furious, we more and more obstinate. Granby had still four hours of it ; sunset, twilight, dusk ; about 8, the French, in what spirits I can guess, ceased, and went their way. Bridge impossible ; game up. They had lost, by their own account, 1,100 killed and wounded ; Ferdinand probably not fewer."¹

And in this loud peal, what none could yet know, the French-English part of the Seven-Years War had ended. The French attempted nothing farther ; huddled themselves where they were, and waited in the pouring rains : Ferdinand also huddled himself, in guard of the Ohm ; while his people plied their Siege-batteries on Cassel, on Ziegenhayn, cannonading their best in the bad weather ;—took Cassel, did not quite take Ziegenhayn, had it been of moment ;—and for above six weeks coming (till November 7th–14th²), nothing more but skirmishes and small scuffles, not worth a word from us, fell out between the Two Parties there. That Cannonade of the Brücken-Mühle had been finis.

For supreme Bute, careless of the good news coming in on him from West and from East, or even rather embarrassed by them, had some time ago started decisively upon the Peace Negotiation. "September 5th," three weeks before that of Amöneburg, "the Duke of Bedford, Bute's Plenipotentiary, set out towards Paris,—considerably hissed on the street here by a sulky population," it would seem ;—"but sure of success in Paris. Bute shared in none of the national triumphs of this Year. The transports of rejoicing which burst out on the news of Havanah" were a sorrow and distress to him.³ "Havanah, what shall we do with it ?" thought he ; and for his own share answered stiffly, "Nothing with it ; fling it back to them !"—till some consort of his persuaded him Florida would look better.⁴ Of Manilla and the Philippines he did not even hear till Peace was concluded ; had made the

¹ Mauvillon, ii. 251 ; Helden-Geschichte, vii. 482–489.

² Preliminaries of Peace signed, "Paris, November 8d ;" known to French Generals, "November 7th ;" not, officially, to Ferdinand till "November 14th" (Mauvillon, ii. 257).

³ Walpole's George the Third, ii. 191.

⁴ Thackeray, ii. 11.

Most Catholic Carlos a present of that Colony,—who would not even pay our soldiers their Manilla Ransom, as too disagreeable. Such is the Bute, such and no other, whom the satirical Fates have appointed to crown and finish off the heroic Day's-work of such a Pitt. Let us, if we can help it, speak no more of him! Friedrich writes before leaving for Saxony: "The Peace between the English and the French is much farther off than was thought;—so many oppositions do the Spaniards raise, or rather do the French,—busy duping this buzzard of an English Minister, who has not common sense."¹ Never fear, your Majesty: a man with Havanahs and Manillas of that kind to fling about at random, is certain to bring Peace, if resolved on it!—

We said, Prince Henri rallied beautifully from his little slap, and loss of Freyberg (October 15th), and that the King was sending Wied with reinforcements to him. In fact, Prince Henri of himself was all alertness, and instantly appeared on the Heights again; seemingly quite in sanguinary humour, and courting Battle, much more than was yet really the case. Which cowed Stolberg from meddling with him farther, as he might have done. Not for some ten days had Henri finished his arrangements; and then, under cloud of night (28th–29th October 1762), he did break forward on those Spittelwalds and Michael's Mounts, and multiplex impregnabilities about Freyberg, in what was thought a very shining manner. The Battle of Freyberg, I think, is five or six miles long, all on the west, and finally on the south-west side of Freyberg (north and north-west sides, with so many batteries and fortified villages, are judged unattackable); and the main stress, very heavy for some time, lay in the abatis of the Spittelwald (where Seidlitz was sublime), and about the roots of St. Michael's Mount (the top of it Stolberg, or some foolish General of Stolberg's, had left empty; nobody there when we reached the top), down from which, Freyberg now lying free ahead of us, and the Spittelwald on our left now also ours, we take Stolberg in rear, and turn him inside out. The

¹ Schöning, iii. 480 (To Henri: "Peterswaldau, 17th October 1762")

no work at all, except at last running), were all under and the hopes of some Saxon Victory to balance one's graces in Silesia had altogether vanished.¹

Of Austrians and Reichsfolk together I dimly count at 40,000, in this Action; Prince Henri seems to have been under 30,000.² I will give Prince Henri's Despatch to Brother (a most modest Piece); and cannot afford to say more of the matter,—except that “Wegfurth,” where Henri gets on march the night before, lies 8 or more miles west-1, north of Freyberg and the Spittelwald, and is about as far straight south from Hainichen, Gellert's birthplace, who afterwards got the War-horse now coming into action,—I sometimes think, with what surprise to that quadruped!

Prince Henri to the King (Battle just done; King on the road from Silesia hither, Letter meets him at Löwenberg).

“Freyberg, 29th October, 1762.

“My dearest Brother,—It is a happiness for me to send you the agreeable news, That your Army has this day gained a considerable advantage over the combined Austrian and Reichs Army. I marched yesternight; I had got on through Wegfurth, leaving Spittelwald³ to my left, with intent to seize” (storm if necessary) “the Height of St. Michael,—where I came upon the Enemy's Army. I made two true attacks and two false: the Enemy resisted obstinately; but the sustained valour of your troops prevailed: and, after three hours in fire, the Enemy was obliged to yield everywhere. I do not yet know the number of Prisoners; but there must be at least 4,000:—the Reichs Army has lost next to nothing; the share of effort fell to the Austrian share. We have got quantities of Cannon and Flags; Lieutenant-General Roth of the Reichs Army is among our Prisoners. I reckon we have lost five to 3,000 men; among them no Officer of mark. Lieutenant-

¹ Beschreibung der am 29sten October 1762 bey Freyberg vorgefallenen Schlacht (Seyfarth, Beylagen, iii. 365–376). Tempelhof, vi. 235–258; Helden-Geschichte, vii. 177–181.

² “29 battalions, 60 squadrons,” versus “49 battalions, 68 squadrons” (Schöning, iii. 499).

³ Tempelhof, p. 287.

General von Seidlitz renders me the highest services; in a place where the Cavalry could not act" (border of the Spittelwald, and its impassable entanglements and obstinacies), "he put himself at the head of the Infantry, and did signal service" (his Battle of the Infanteries); "Generals Bellings and Kleist" (re-tured private accounts); "I vainly, scheming and all, say some ill-named Colonels at will"; "Generals Bellings and Kleist" (re-did their very march known to us, now become Major-Generals) "one battalion yid Decbest. All the Infantry was admirable; not breadth, a famousichs held ground. My Aide-de-Camp" (Kal-brings you this King man in the Napoleon times long after), "who through the Spittelwald" (and did it well, we can suppose): "if, on that ground, you pleased to have the goodness to advance him, I should have my humble thanks to give you. There are a good many Officers who have distinguished themselves and behaved with courage, for whom I shall present similar requests. You will permit me to pay those who have taken flags, or cannons and flags" (100 ducats per cannon, 50 per flag, or whatever the tariff was:—"By all manner of means!" "The enemy would answer).

The Enemy is retiring towards Dresden and Dippoldiswalda. I am sending at his heels this night, and shall hear the result. My Aide-de-Camp is acquainted with all, and will be able to render you account of everything you may wish to know in regard to our present circumstances. General Wied, I believe, will cross Elbe to-morrow" (General Wied, with 10,000 men, perhaps, to help us,—for whom it was too dangerous to wait, or perhaps there was a spur on one's own mind?); "his arrival could be" (not "would have been:" cela viendrait, not even viendrait) "very opportune for me. I am, with all attachment, your dearest brother,—your most devoted Servant and Brother, HENRI."

Tomorrow, in cipher, goes the following Despatch:

"Freyberg, 30th October 1762.

"General Wied" (not yet come to hand, or even got across Elbe) "informs me, That Prince Albert of Saxony" (pushing hither with reinforcement, sent by Daun) "must have crossed Elbe yesterday at Pirna" (did not show face here, with his large reinforcements to them, or what would have become of us!);—"and that for this reason he, Wied, must himself cross; which he will to-morrow. The same day I am to be joined by some battalions from C. after to-morrow, when General Werner Hülsen; and the day Bridge, it appears) "shall have reached" (coming by Meissen whole of General Hülsen's troops with the Katzenhäuser, the thereupon I shall—" Or no more of th. join me. Directly Friedrich's Letter in Response is better worth second Despatch; th giving:

"Löwenberg, 2c.

"My dear Brother,—The arrival of Kalkreuth November 1762. sists in calling him), "and of your Letter, Kalkreuth" (so he per- has made me twenty" (not to say forty) "yearly dear Brother, terday I was sixty, to-day hardly eighteen. If younger: yes- for preserving you in health (bonne santé," so I bless Heaven of lesion in fight); "and that things have passed we term escape You took the good step of attacking those who did so happily! tack you; and, by your good and solid measures (I meant to at- you have overcome all the difficulties of a strong disposition), vigorous resistance. It is a service so important in Post and a you to the State, that I cannot enough express my rendered by and will wait to do it in person. gratitude,

"Kalkreuth will explain what motions I"— * "If Fortune favour our views on Dresden" (which it cannot * "If least, at this late season), "we shall indubitably have it in the this Winter or next Spring,—and get honourably out of the Peace sicut and perilous conjuncture, where we have effected a dif- ourselves within two steps of total destruction. And, as seen which you have now done, to you alone will belong th by this our of having given the final stroke to Austrian Obstacles hon- and laid the foundations of the Public Happiness, which we be the consequence of Peace.—F."

Two days after this, November 4th, Friedrich is in Meissen. November 9th, he comes across to Freyberg; has a pleasant day,—pleasant survey of the Battlefield, Henri and Seidlitz escorting as guides. Henri, in furtherance of the Dresden project, has Kleist out on the Bohemian Magazines,—"That is the one way to clear Dresden neighbourhood of Enemies!" thinks Henri always. Kleist burns the considerable magazine of Saatz; finds the grand one of Leitmeritz too well guarded for him:—upon which, in such snowdrifts and sleety deluges, is not Dresden plainly impossible, your Majesty? Impossible.

¹ Schöning, iii. p. 493.

² Ibid. iii. 495, 496.

ble, Friedrich admits,—the rather as he now sees Peace to be coming without that. Freyberg has at last broken the back of Austrian Obstinacy. “Go in upon the Reich,” Friedrich now orders Kleist, the instant Kleist is home from his Bohemian inroad: “In upon the Reich, with 6,000, in your old style! That will dispose the Reichs Principalities to Peace.”

Kleist marched, November 3d; kept the Reichs in paroxysm, till December 13th;—Plotho, meanwhile, proclaiming in the Reichs Diet: “Such Reichs Princes as wish for Peace with my King can have it; those that prefer War, they too can have it!” Kleist, dividing himself in the due artistic way, flew over the Voigtland, on to Bamberg, on to Nürnberg itself (which he took, by sounding ram’s-horns, as it were, having no gun heavier than a carbine, and held for a week);¹—fluttering the Reichs Diet not a little, and disposing everybody for Peace. The Austrians saw it with pleasure, “We solemnly engaged to save these poor people harmless, on their joining us;—and, behold, it has become thrice and four times impossible. Let them fall off into Peace, like ripe pears, of themselves; we can then turn round and say, ‘Save you harmless? Yes; if you hadn’t fallen off!’”

November 24th, all Austrians make Truce with Friedrich, Truce till March 1st;—all Austrians, and what is singular, with no mention of the Reich whatever. The Reich is defenceless, at the feet of Kleist and his 6,000. Stolberg is still in Prussian neighbourhood; and may be picked up any day! Stolberg hastens off to defend the Reich; finds the Reich quite empty of enemies before his arrival;—and at least saves his own skin. A month or two more, and Stolberg will lay down his Command, and the last Reichs-Execution Army, playing Farce-Tragedy so long, make its exit from the Theatre of this World.

¹ Helden-Geschichte, vii. 186-194.

known to us) on that subject, and had said to him, That the French had many advantages; among others, that a word could often be used in a complex signification, for which you had in German to scrape together several different expressions. Upon which Gottsched had said, "We will have that mended (Das wollen wir noch machen)!" These words the King repeated twice or thrice, with such a tone that you could well see how the man's conceit had struck him,—and in short, as we know already, what a gigantic entity, consisting of wind mainly, he took this elevated Gottsched to be.

Upon which, Putter retires into the honorary ranks again; silent, at least to us, and invisible; as the rest of this Royal Evening at Gotha is.' Here, however, is the Letter following on it two days after:

Friedrich to the Duchess of Sachsen-Gotha.

"Leipzig, 6th December 1762.

"Madame,—I should never have done, my adorable Duchess, if I rendered you account of all the impressions which the friendship you lavished on me has made on my heart. I could wish to answer it by entering into everything that can be agreeable to you" (conduct of my Recruiters or Commissariat people first of all). "I take the liberty of forwarding the Answers which have come in to the two Mémoires you sent me. I am mortified, Madame, if I have not been able to fulfil completely your desires; but if you knew the situation I am in, I flatter myself you would have some consideration for it.

"I have found myself here" (in Leipzig, as elsewhere) "overwhelmed with business, and even to a degree I had not expected. Meanwhile, if I ever can manage again to run over and pay you in person the homage of a heart which is more attached to you than that of your near relations, assuredly I will not neglect the first opportunity that shall present itself.

"Messieurs the English" (Bute, Bedford and Company, with their Preliminaries signed, and all my Westphalian Provinces left in a condition we shall hear of) "continue to betray. Poor M. Mitchell has had a stroke of apoplexy on hearing it. It is a hideous thing (chose affreuse); but I will speak of it no more. May you, Madame, enjoy all the prosperities that I wish for you, and not forget a Friend, who will be till his death, with sentiments of the highest esteem and the most perfect consideration,—Madame, your Highness's most faithful Cousin and Servant,—FRIEDRICH.”¹

¹ "Putter's Selbstbiographie (Autobiography), p. 406;" cited in Preuss, li. 277 n.

For a fortnight past, Friedrich has had no doubt that general Peace is now actually at hand. November 25th, ten days before this visit, a Saxon Privy-Councillor, Baron von Fritsch, who, by Order from his Court, had privately been at Vienna on the errand, came privately next, with all speed, to Friedrich (Meissen, November 25th):² “Austria willing for Treaty; is your Majesty willing?” “Thrice-willing, I; my terms well known!” Friedrich would answer,—gladdest of mankind to see general Pacification coming to this vexed Earth again. The Dance of the Furies, waltzing itself off, home out of this upper sunlight: the mad Ballona steeds plunging down, down, towards their Abysses again, for a season!—

This was a result which Friedrich had foreseen as nearly certain ever since the French and English signed their Preliminaries. And there was only one thing which gave him anxiety: that of his Rhine Provinces and Strong Places, especially Wesel, which have been in French hands for six years past, ever since Spring 1757. Bute stipulates That those places and countries shall be evacuated by his Choiseul, as soon as weather and possibility permit; but Bute, astonishing to say, has not made the least stipulation as to whom they are to be delivered to,—allies or enemies, it is all one to Bute. Truly rather a shameful omission, Pitt might indignantly think,—and call the whole business steadily, as he persisted to do, “a shameful Peace,” had there been no other article in it but this;—as Friedrich, with at least equal emphasis, thought and felt. And, in fact, it had thrown him into very great embarrassment, on the first emergence of it.

For her Imperial Majesty began straightway to draw troops into those neighbourhoods: “We will take delivery, our Allies playing into our hand!” And Friedrich, who had no disposable troops, had to devise some rapid expedient; and did.

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xviii. 201.

² Rödénbeck, ii. 193.

Set his Free-Corps agents and recruiters in motion : " Enlist me those Light people of Duke Ferdinand's, who are all getting discharged ; especially that Britannic Legion so-called. All to be discharged ; re-enlist them, you ; Ferdinand will keep them till you do it. Be swift ! " And it is done ;—a small bit of actual enlistment among the many prospective that were going on, as we noticed above. Precise date of it not given ; must have been soon after November 3d. There were from 5 to 6,000 of them ; and it was promptly done. Divided into various regiments ; chief command of them given to a Colonel Bauer, under whom a Colonel Beckwith whose name we have heard : these, to the surprise of Imperial Majesty, and alarm of a pacific Versailles, suddenly appeared in the Cleve Countries, handy for Wesel, for Geldern ; in such posts, and in such force and condition as intimated, " It shall be we, under favour, that take delivery ! " Snatch Wesel from them, some night, sword in hand : that had been Bauer's notion ; but nothing of that kind was found necessary ; mere demonstration proved sufficient. To the French Garrisons the one thing needful was to get away in peace ; Bauer with his brows gloomy is a dangerous neighbour. Perhaps the French Officers themselves rather favoured Friedrich than his enemies. Enough, a private agreement, or mutual understanding on word of honour, was come to : and, very publicly, at length, on the 11th and 12th days of March 1763 (Peace now settled everywhere), Wesel, in great gala, full of field-music, military salutations and mutual dining, saw the French all filing out, and Bauer and people filing in, to the joy of that poor Town.¹

Soon after which, painful to relate, such the inexorable pressure of finance, Bauer and people were all paid off, flung loose again : ruthlessly paid off by a necessitous King ! There were about 6,000 of those poor fellows,—specimens of the bastard heroic, under difficulties, from every country in the world ; Beckwith and I know not what other English specimens of the lawless heroic ; who were all cashiered, officer and man, on getting to Berlin. As were the earlier Free-

¹ Preuss, ii. 842.

Corps, and indeed the subsequent, all and sundry, "except seven," whose names will not be interesting to you. Paid off, with or without remorse, such the exhaustion of finance; Kleist, Icilius, Count Hordt and others vainly repugning and remonstrating; the King himself inexorable as Arithmetic. "Can maintain 138,000 of regular, 12,000 of other sorts; not a man more!" Zealous Icilius applied for some consideration to his Officers: "partial repayment of the money they have spent from their own pocket, in enlistment of their people now discharged!" Not a doit. The King's answer is in autograph, still extant; not in good spelling, but with sense clear as light: "Seine Officiers haben wie die Raben gestollen Sie Krigen nichts, Your Officers stole like ravens;—they get Nothing."¹ Lessing's fine play of Minna von Barnhelm testifies to considerable public sympathy for these impoverished Ex-Military people. Pathetic truly, in a degree; but such things will happen. Irregular gentlemen, to whom the world's their oyster,—said oyster does suddenly snap-to on them, by a chance. And they have to try it on the other side, and say little!—But we are forgetting the Peace Treaty itself, which still demands a few words.

Kleist's raid into the Reich had a fine effect on the Potentates there; and Plotho's Offer was greedily complied with; the Kaiser, such his generosity, giving "free permission." We spoke of Privy-Councillor von Fritsch, and his private little word with Friedrich, at Meissen, on November 25th. The Electoral-Prince of Saxony, it seems, was author of that fine stroke; the history of it this. Since November 3d, the French and English have had their preliminaries signed; and all Nations are longing for the like. "Let us have a German Treaty for general Peace," said the Kurprinz of Saxony, that amiable Heir-Apparent whom we have seen sometimes, who is rather crooked of back, but has a sprightly Wife. "By all means," answered Polish Majesty: "and as I am in the distance, do you in every way further it, my Son!" Whereupon despatch of Fritsch to Vienna, and thence to Meissen; with

¹ Preuss, ii. 320.

"Yes" to him from both parties. Plenipotentiaries are named: "Fritsch shall be ours: they shall have my Schloss of Hubertsburg for Place of Congress," said the Prince. And on Thursday, December 30th, 1762, the Three Dignitaries met at Hubertsburg, and began business.

This is the Schloss in Torgau Country which Quintus Icilius's people, Saldern having refused the job, willingly undertook spoiling; and, as is well known, did it, January 22d, 1761; a thing Quintus never heard the end of. What the amount of profit, or the degree of spoil and mischief, Quintus's people made of it, I could not learn; but infer from this new event that the wreck had not been so considerable as the noise was; at any rate, that the Schloss had soon been restored to its pristine state of brilliancy. The Plenipotentiaries,—for Saxony, Fritsch; for Austria, a Von Collenbach, unknown to us; for Prussia, one Hertzberg, a man experienced beyond his years, who is of great name in Prussian History subsequently,—sat here till February 15th, 1763, that is for six weeks and five days. Leaving their Protocols to better judges, who report them good, we will much prefer a word or two from Friedrich himself, while waiting the result they come to.

Friedrich to Prince Henri (home at Berlin).

"Leipzig, 14th January 1763. * * Am not surprised you find Berlin changed for the worse: such a train of calamities must, in the end, make itself felt in a poor and naturally barren Country, where continual industry is needed to second its fecundity and keep up production. However, I will do what I can to remedy this dearth (la disette), at least as far as my small means permit" * *

"No fear of Geldern and Wesel: all that has been cared for by Bauer and the new Free-Corps. By the end of February, Peace will be signed; at the beginning of April, everybody will find himself at home, as in 1756.

"The Circles are going to separate: indifferent to me, or nearly so; 'but it is good to be plucking out tiresome burning sticks, stick after stick. I hope you amuse yourself at Berlin: at Leipzig, nothing but balls and redouts; my nephews diverting themselves amazingly. Madame Friedrich, lately Garden-maid at Seidlitz' (Village in the Neumark, with this Beauty plucking weeds in it,—little prescient of such a fortune), ‘now Wife to an Officer of the Free Hussars, is the principal heroine of these Festivities.’”¹ Leipzig, 25th January 1763. “Thanks for your care about my existence. I am becoming very old, dear Brother; in a little while, I shall be useless to the world and a burden to myself: it is the lot of all creatures to wear down with age,—but one is not, for all that, to abuse one’s privilege of falling into dotage.

“You still speak without full confidence of our Negotiation business” (going on at Hubertsburg yonder). “Most certainly the chapter of accidents is inexhaustible; and it is still certain there may happen quantities of things which the limited mind of man cannot foresee; but, judging by the ordinary course, and such degrees of probability as human creatures found their hopes on, I believe, before the month of February entirely end, our Peace will be completed. In a permanent Arrangement, many things need settling, which are easier to settle now than they ever will be again. Patience; haste without speed, is a thriftless method.”²

February 5th, the trio at Hubertsburg got their Preliminaries signed. On the tenth day thereafter, the Treaty itself was signed and sealed. All other Treaties on the same subject had been guided towards a contemporary finis: England and France, ready since the 3d of November last, signed and ended February 10th. February 11th, the Reich signed and ended; February 15th, Prussia, Austria, Saxony; and the Third Silesian or Seven-Years War was completely finished.³

It had cost, in loss of human lives first of all, nobody can say what: according to Friedrich’s computation, there had perished of actual fighters, on the various fields, of all the nations, 853,000; of which above the fifth part, or 180,000, is his own share: and, by misery and ravage, the general population of Prussia finds itself 500,000 fewer; nearly the ninth man missing. This is the expenditure of Life. Other items are not worth enumerating, in comparison; if statistically given, you can find the most approved guesses at them by the same Head, who ought to be an authority.¹ It was a War distinguished by—Archenholtz will tell you, with melodious emphasis, what a distinguished, great, and thrice-greatest War it was. There have since been other far bigger Wars, if size were a measure of greatness; which it by no means is? I believe there was excellent Heroism shown in this War, by persons I could name; by one person, Heroism really to be called superior, or, in its kind, almost of the rank of supreme;—and that in regard to the Military Arts and Virtues, it has as yet, for faculty and for performance, had no rival; nor is likely soon to have. The Prussians, as we once mentioned, still use it as their school-model in those respects. And we—Oh readers, do not at least you and I thank God to have now done with it!—

¹ Schöning, iii. 528.

² Ibid. iii. 529.

³ Copy of the Treaty, in Holden-Geschichte, vii. 624 et seq.; in Seyfarth, Beylagen, iii. 479–495; in Roussel, in Wenck, in &c. &c.

Of the Peace-Treaties at Hubertsburg, Paris, and other places, it is not necessary that we say almost anything. They are to be found in innumerable Books, dreary to the mind; and of the 158 Articles to be counted there, not one could be interesting at present. The substance of the whole lies now in Three Points, not mentioned or contemplated at all in those Documents, though repeatedly alluded to and intimated by us here.

The issue, as between Austria and Prussia, strives to be, in all points, simply As-you-were; and, in all outward or tangible points, strictly is so. After such a tornado of strife as the civilised world had not witnessed since the Thirty-Years War. Tornado springing doubtless from the regions called Infernal; and darkening the upper world from south to north, and from east to west for Seven Years long;—issuing in general As-you-were! Yes truly, the tornado was Infernal; but Heaven too had silently its purposes in it. Nor is the mere expenditure of men's diabolic rages, in mutual clash as of opposite electricities, with reduction to equipoise, and restoration of zero and repose again after seven years, the one or the principal result arrived at. Inarticulately, little dreamt of at the time by any by-stander, the results, on survey from this distance, are visible as Threifold. Let us name them one other time :

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, v. 230-234; Preuss, iii. 340-351.

1°. There is no taking of Silesia from this man ; no clipping of him down to the orthodox old limits ; he and his Country have palpably outgrown these. Austria gives up the Problem : " We have lost Silesia ! " Yes ; and, what you hardly yet know,—and what, I perceive, Friedrich himself still less knows, Teutschland has found Prussia. Prussia, it seems, cannot be conquered by the whole world trying to do it ; Prussia has gone through its Fire-Baptism, to the satisfaction of gods and men ; and is a Nation henceforth. In and of poor dislocated Teutschland, there is one of the Great Powers of the World henceforth ; an actual Nation. And a Nation not grounding itself on extinct Traditions, Wiggeries, Papistries, Immaculate Conceptions ; no, but on living Facts,—Facts of Arithmetic, Geometry, Gravitation, Martin Luther's Reformation, and what it really can believe in :—to the infinite advantage of said Nation and of poor Teutschland henceforth. To be a Nation ; and to believe as you are convinced, instead of pretending to believe as you are bribed or bullied by the devils about you ; what an advantage to parties concerned ! If Prussia follow its star—As it really tries to do, in spite of stumbling ! For the sake of Germany, one hopes always Prussia will ; and that it may get through its various Child-Diseases, without death : though it has had sad plunges and crises,—and is perhaps just now in one of its worst Influences, the Parliamentary-Eloquence or Ballot-Box Influenza ! One of the most dangerous Diseases of National Adolescence ; extremely prevalent over the world at this time,—indeed unavoidable, for reasons obvious enough. "Sic itur ad astra ;" all nations certain that the way to Heaven is By voting, by eloquently wagging the tongue "within those walls !" Diseases, real or imaginary, await Nations like individuals ; and are not to be resisted, but must be submitted to, and got through the best you can. Measles and mumps ; you cannot prevent them in Nations either. Nay fashions even ; fashion of Crinoline, for instance (how infinitely more, that of Ballot-Box and Fourth Estate !),—are you able to prevent even that ? You have to be patient under it, and keep hoping !

2°. In regard to England. Her Jenkins's-Ear Controversy is at last settled. Not only liberty of the Seas, but if she were not wiser, dominion of them ; guardianship of liberty for all others whatsoever : Dominion of the Seas for that wise object. America is to be English, not French ; what a result is that, were there no other ! Really a considerable Fact in the History of the World. Fact principally due to Pitt, as I believe, according to my best conjecture, and comparison of probabilities and circumstances. For which, after all, is not everybody thankful, less or more ? Oh my English brothers, Oh my Yankee half-brothers, how oblivious are we of those that have done us benefit !—

These are the results for England. And in the rear of these, had these and the other elements once ripened for her, the poor Country is to get into such merchandisings, colonisings, foreign-settlings, gold-nuggetings, as lay beyond the drunkenest dreams of Jenkins (supposing Jenkins addicted to liquor) ; —and, in fact, to enter on a universal uproar of Machineries, Eldorados, “ Unexampled Prosperities,” which make a great noise for themselves in the very days now come. Prosperities evidently not of a sublime type : which, in the mean while, seem to be covering the at one time creditably clean and comely face of England with mud-blotches, soot-blotches, miscellaneous squalors and horrors ; to be preaching into her amazed heart, which once knew better, the omnipotence of shoddy ; filling her ears and soul with shriekery and metallic clangour, mad noises, mad hurries mostly nowhither ; —and are awakening, I suppose, in such of her sons as still go into reflexion at all, a deeper and more ominous set of Questions than have ever risen in England's History before. As in the foregoing case, we have to be patient and keep hoping.

3°. In regard to France. It appears, noble old Teutschland, with such pieties, and unconquerable silent valours, such opulences human and divine, amid its wreck of new and old confusions, is not to be cut in Four, and made to dance to the piping of Versailles or another. Far the contrary ! To

Versailles itself, there has gone forth, Versailles may read it or not, the writing on the wall: "Thou art weighed in the balance, and found wanting" (at last even "found wanting")! France, beaten, stript, humiliated; sinful, unrepentant, governed by mere sinners and, at best, clever fools (fous pleins d'esprit),—collapses, like a creature whose limbs fail it; sinks into bankrupt quiescence, into nameless fermentation, generally into dry-rot. Rotting, none guesses whitherward;—rotting towards that thrice-extraordinary Spontaneous-Combustion, which blazed out in 1789. And has kindled, over the whole world, gradually or by explosion, this unexpected Outburst of all the chained Devilries (among other chained things), this roaring Conflagration of the Anarchies; under which it is the lot of these poor generations to live,—for I know not what length of Centuries yet. "Go into Combustion, my pretty child!" the Destinies had said to this belle France, who is always so fond of shining and out-shining: "Self-Combustion;—in that way, won't you shine, as none of them yet could?" Shine; yes, truly,—till you are got to caput mortuum, my pretty child (unless you gain new wisdom!)—But not to wander farther:

Wednesday, March 16th, Friedrich, all Saxon things being now settled,—among the rest "eight Saxon Schoolmasters" to be a model in Prussia,—quitted Leipzig, with the Seven-Years War safe in his pocket, as it were. Drove to Moritzburg, to dinner with the amiable Kurprinz and still more amiable Wife: "It was to your Highness that we owe this Treaty!" A dinner, which readers may hear of again. At Moritzburg; where, with the Lacys, there was once such rattling and battling. After which, rapidly on to Silesia, and an eight days of adjusting and inspecting there.

Wednesday, March 30th, Friedrich arrives in Frankfurt-on-Oder, on the way homeward from Silesia: "takes view of the Field of Kunersdorf" (reflexions to be fancied); early in the afternoon, speeds forward again; at one of the stages (place called Tassdorf), has a Dialogue, which we shall hear of; and between 8 and 9 in the evening, not through the solemn receptions and crowded streets, drives to the Schloss of Berlin. "Goes straight to the Queen's Apartment," Queen, Princesses and Court all home triumphantly some time ago ; sups there with the Queen's Majesty and these bright creatures,—beautiful supper, had it consisted only of cresses and salt ; and, behind it, sound sleep to us under our own roof-tree once more.' Next day, "the King made gifts to," as it were, to everybody ; "to the Queen about 5,000*l.*, to the Princess Amelia 1,000*l.*," and so on ; and saw true hearts all merry round him,—merrier, perhaps, than his own was.

¹ Rœdenbeck, ii. 211, 212 ; Prens, ii. 845, 846 ; &c. &c.

BOOK XXI.

 AFTERNOON AND EVENING OF FRIEDRICH'S LIFE.

1763-1786.

 CHAPTER I.

PREFATORY.

THE Twelve Hercules-labours of this King have ended here ; what was required of him in World-History is accomplished. There remain to Friedrich Twenty-three Years more of Life, which to Prussian History are as full of importance as ever ; but do not essentially concern European History, Europe having gone the road we now see it in. On the grand World-Theatre, the curtain has fallen for a New Act ; Friedrich's part, like everybody's for the present, is played out. In fact, there is, during the rest of his Reign, nothing of World-History to be dwelt on anywhere. America, it has been decided, shall be English ; Prussia be a Nation. The French, as finis of their attempt to cut Germany in Four, find themselves sunk into torpor, abeyance, and dry rot ; fermenting towards they know not what. Towards Spontaneous Combustion, in the year 1789, and for long years onwards !

There, readers, there is the next mile-stone for you, in the History of Mankind ! That universal Burning-up, as in hell-fire, of Human Shams. The oath of Twenty-five Million men, which has since become that of all men whatsoever, " Rather than live longer under lies, we will die ! "—that is the New Act in World-History. New Act,—or, we may call it New Part ; Drama of World-History, Part Third. If Part Second was 1,800 years ago, this I reckon will be Part Third. This is the truly celestial-infernal Event: the strangest we have seen for a thousand years. Celestial in one part ; in the other infernal. For it is withal, the breaking-out of universal mankind into Anarchy, into the faith and practice of No-Government,—that is to say (if you will be candid), into unappeasable Revolt against Sham-Governors and Sham-Teachers,—which I do charitably define to be a Search, most unconscious, yet in deadly earnest, for true Governors and Teachers. That is the one fact of World-History worth dwelling on at this day ; and Friedrich cannot be said to have had much hand farther in that.

Nor is the progress of a French or European world, all silently ripening and rotting towards such issue, a thing one wishes to dwell on. Only when the Spontaneous Combustion breaks out ; and, many-coloured, with loud noises, envelopes the whole world in anarchic flame for long hundreds of years : then has the Event come ; there is the thing for all men to mark, and to study and scrutinise as the strangest thing they ever saw. Centuries of it yet lying ahead of us ; several sad Centuries, sordidly tumultuous, and good for little ! Say Two Centuries yet,—say even Ten of such a process : before the Old is completely burnt out, and the New in any state of sightliness ? Millennium of Anarchies ;—abridge it, spend your heart's blood upon abridging it, ye Heroic Wise that are to come ! For it is the consummation of All the Anarchies that are and were ;—which I do trust always means the death (temporary death) of them ! Death of the Anarchies : or a world once more built wholly on Fact better or worse ; and the lying, jargoning professor of Sham-Fact, whose name is Legion, who as yet (oftenest little conscious of himself) goes tumulting and swarming from shore to shore, become a species extinct, and well known to be gone down to Tophet !—

There were bits of Anarchies before, little and greater : but till that of France in 1789, there was none long memorable ; all were pigmies in comparison, and not worth mentioning separately. In 1772 the Anarchy of Poland, which had been a considerable Anarchy for about three hundred years, got itself extinguished,—what we may call extinguished ;—decisive surgery being then first exercised upon it : an Anarchy put in the sure way of extinction. In 1775, again, there began, over seas, another Anarchy much more considerable,—little dreaming that it could be called an Anarchy ; on the contrary, calling itself Liberty, Rights of Man ; and singing boundless Io-Pæans to itself, as is common in such cases ; an Anarchy which has been challenging the Universe to show the like, ever since. And which has, at last, flamed up as an independent Phenomenon, unexampled in the hideously suicidal way ;—and does need much to get burnt out, that matters may begin anew on truer conditions. But neither the Partition of Poland nor the American War of Independence have much general importance, or, except as precursors of 1789, are worth dwelling on in history. From us here, so far as Friedrich is concerned with them, they may deserve some transient mention, more or less : but World-History, eager to be at the general Funeral-pile and ultimate Burning-up of Shams in this poor World, will have less and less to say of small tragedies and premonitory symptoms.

Curious how the busy and continually watchful and speculating Friedrich, busied about his dangers from Austrian encroachments, from Russian-Turk Wars, Bavarian Successions, and other troubles and anarchies close by, saw nothing to dread in France ; nothing to remark there, except carelessly from time to time, its beggarly decaying condition, so strangely sunk in arts, in arms, in finance ; oftenest an object of pity to him, for he still has a love for France ;—and reads not the least sign of that immeasurable all-engulfing French Revolution which was in the wind ! Neither Voltaire nor he have the least anticipation of such a thing. Voltaire and he see, to their contentment, superstition visibly declining : Friedrich rather disapproves the heat of Voltaire's procedures on the Infâme. “ Why be in such heat ? Other nonsense, quite equal to it, will be almost sure to follow. Take care of your own skin ! ” Voltaire and he are deeply alive, especially Voltaire is, to the horrors and miseries which have issued on mankind from a Fanatic Popish Superstition, or Creed of Incredibilities,—which (except from the throat outwards, from the bewildered tongue outwards) the orthodox themselves cannot believe, but only pretend and struggle to believe. This Voltaire calls "The Infamous;" and this—what name can any of us give it? The man who believes in falsities is very miserable. The man who cannot believe them, but only struggles and pretends to believe; and yet, being armed with the power of the sword, industriously keeps menacing and slashing all round, to compel every neighbour to do like him: what is to be done with such a man? Human Nature calls him a Social Nuisance; needing to be handcuffed, gagged, and abated. Human Nature, if it be in a terrified and imperilled state, with the sword of this fellow swashing round it, calls him "Infamous," and a Monster of Chaos. He is indeed the select Monster of that region; the Patriarch of all the Monsters, little as he dreams of being such. An Angel of Heaven the poor caitiff dreams himself rather, and in cheery moments is conscious of being:—Bedlam holds in it no madder article. And I often think he will again need to be tied up (feeble as he now is in comparison, disinclined though men are to manacling and tying), so many helpless infirm souls are wandering about, not knowing their right-hand from their left, who fall a prey to him. "L'Infâme" I also name him,—knowing well enough how little he, in his poor muddled drugged and stupefied mind, is conscious of deserving that name. More signal enemy to God, and friend of the Other Party, walks not the Earth in our day.

Anarchy in the shape of religious slavery was what Voltaire and Friedrich saw all round them. Anarchy in the shape of Revolt against Authorities was what Friedrich and Voltaire had never dreamed of as possible, and had not in their minds the least idea of. In one, or perhaps two places, you may find in Voltaire a grim and rather glad forethought, not given out as a prophecy, but felt as interior assurance in a moment of hope, How these Priestly Sham Hierarchies will be pulled to pieces, probably on the sudden, once people are awake to them. Yes, my much-suffering M. de Voltaire, be pulled to pieces ; or go aloft, like the awakening of Vesuvius, one day, —Vesuvius awakening after ten centuries of slumber, when his crater is all grown grassy, bushy, copiously “tenanted by wolves” I am told ; which, after premonitory grumbings, heeded by no wolf or bush, he will hurl bodily aloft, ten acres at a time, in a very tremendous manner !¹ A thought like this, about the Priestly Sham-Hierarchies, I have found somewhere in Voltaire : but of the Social and Civic Sham-Hierarchies (which are likewise accursed, if they knew it, and indeed are junior copartners of the Priestly ; and, in a sense, sons and products of them, and cannot escape being partakers of their plagues), there is no hint in Voltaire, though Voltaire stood at last only fifteen years from the Fact (1778–1793) ; nor in Friedrich, though he lived almost to see the Fact beginning.

Friedrich's History being henceforth that of a Prussian King, is interesting to Prussia chiefly, and to us little otherwise than as the Biography of a distinguished fellow-man. Friedrich's Biography, his Physiognomy as he grows old, quietly on his own harvest-field, among his own People : this has still an interest, and for any feature of this we shall be eager enough ; but this withal is the most of what we now want. And not very much even of this ; Friedrich the unique King, not having as a man any such depth and singularity, tragic, humorous, devotionally pious, or other, as to authorise much painting in that aspect. Extreme brevity becoms us in these circumstances : and indeed there are,—as has already happened in different parts of this Enterprise (Nature herself, in her silent way, being always something of an Artist in such things),—other circumstances, which leave us no choice as to that of detail. Available details, if we wished to give them, of Friedrich's later Life, are not forthcoming : masses of incondite marine-stores, tumbled out on you, dry rubbish shot with uncommon diligence for a hundred years, till, for Rubbish-Pelion piled on Rubbish-Ossa, you lose sight of the stars and azimuths ; whole mountain continents, seemingly all of cinders and sweepings (though fragments and remnants do lie hidden, could you find them again) :—these are not details that will be available ! Anecdotes there are in quantity ; but of uncertain quality ; of doubtful authenticity, above all. One recollects hardly any Anecdote whatever that seems completely credible, or renders to us the Physiognomy of Friedrich in a convincing manner. So remiss a creature has the Prussian Clio been,—employed on all kinds of loose errands over the Earth and the Air ; and as good as altogether negligent of this most pressing errand in her own House. Peace be with her, poor slut ; why should we say one other hard word on taking leave of her to all eternity !—

¹ First modern Eruption of Vesuvius, A.D. 1631, after long interval of rest.

The practical fact is, what we have henceforth to produce is more of the nature of a loose Appendix of Papers, than of a finished Narrative. Loose Papers,—which, we will hope, the reader can, by industry, be made to understand and tolerate : more we cannot do for him. No continuous Narrative is henceforth possible to us. For the sake of Friedrich's closing Epoch, we will visit, for the last time, that dreary imbroglio under which the memory of Friedrich, which ought to have been, in all the epochs of it, bright and legible, lies buried ; and will try to gather, as heretofore, and put under labels. What dwells with oneself as human, may have some chance to be humanly interesting. In the wildest chaos of marine-stores and editorial shortcomings (provided only the editors speak truth, as these poor fellows do), this can be done. Part the living from the dead ; pick out what has some meaning, leave carefully what has none ; you will in some small measure pluck up the memory of a hero, like drowned honour by the locks, and rescue it into visibility.

That Friedrich, on reaching home, made haste to get out of the bustle of joyances and exclamations on the streets ; proceeded straight to his music-chapel in Charlottenburg, summoning the Artists, or having them already summoned ; and had there, all alone, sitting invisible wrapt in his cloak, Graun's or somebody's grand Te-Deum pealed out to him, in seas of melody,—soothing and salutary to the altered soul, revolving many things,—is a popular myth, of pretty and appropriate character ; but a myth only, with no real foundation, though it has some loose and apparent.¹ No doubt, Friedrich had his own thoughts on entering Berlin again, after such a voyage through the deeps ; himself, his Country still here, though solitary and in a world of wild shipwrecks. He was not without piety ; but it did not take the devotional form, and his habits had nothing of the clerical.

What is perfectly known, and much better worth knowing, is the instantaneous practical alacrity with which he set about repairing that immense miscellany of ruin ; and the surprising success he had in dealing with it. His methods, his rapid inventions and procedures, in this matter, are still memorable to Prussia ; and perhaps might with advantage be better known than they are in some other Countries. To us, what is all we can do with them here, they will indicate that this is still the old Friedrich, with his old activities and promptitudes ; which indeed continue unabated, lively in Peace as in War, to the end of his life and reign.

The speed with which Prussia recovered was extraordinary. Within little more than a year (June 1st, 1764), the Coin was all in order again ; in 1765, the King had rebuilt, not to mention other things, “in Silesia 8,000 Houses, in Pommern 6,500.”² Prussia has been a meritorious Nation ; and, however cut and ruined, is and was in a healthy state, capable of recovering soon. Prussia has defended itself against overwhelming odds,—brave Prussia ; but the real soul of its merit, was that of having merited such a King to command it. Without this King, all its valours, disciplines, resources of war, would have availed Prussia little. No wonder Prussia has still a loyalty to its great Friedrich, to its Hohenzollern Sovereigns generally. Without these Hohenzollerns, Prussia had been, what we long ago saw it, the unluckiest of German Provinces ; and could never have had the pretension to exist as a Nation at all. Without this particular Hohenzollern, it had been trampled out again, after apparently succeeding. To have achieved a Friedrich the Second for King over it, was Prussia's grand merit.

¹ In Preuss, ii. 46, all the details of it.

² Rödenbeck, ii. 234, 261.

An accidental merit, thinks the reader? No, reader, you may believe me, it is by no means altogether such. Nay, I rather think, could we look into the Account-Books of the Recording Angel for a course of centuries, no part of it is such! There are Nations in which a Friedrich is, or can be, possible; and again there are Nations in which he is not and cannot. To be practically reverent of Human Worth to the due extent, and abhorrent of Human Want of Worth in the like proportion, do you understand that art at all? I fear, not,—or that you are much forgetting it again! Human Merit, do you really love it enough, think you;—human Scoundrelism (brought to the dock for you, and branded as scoundrel), do you even abhor it enough? Without that reverence and its corresponding opposite-pole of abhorrence, there is simply no possibility left. That, my friend, is the outcome and summary of all virtues in this world, for a man or for a Nation of men. It is the supreme strength and glory of a Nation;—without which, indeed, all other strengths, and enormities of bullion and arsenals and warehouses, are no strength. None, I should say;—and are oftenest even the reverse.

Nations who have lost this quality, or who never had it, what Friedrich can they hope to be possible among them? Age after age, they grind down their Friedrichs, contentedly under the hoofs of cattle on their highways; and even find it an excellent practice, and pride themselves on Liberty and Equality. Most certain it is, there will no Friedrich come to rule there; by and by, there will none be born there. Such Nations cannot have a King to command them; can only have this or the other scandalous swindling Copper Captain, constitutional Gilt Mountebank, or other the like unsalutary entity by way of King; and the sins of the fathers are visited upon the children in a frightful and tragical manner, little noticed in the Penny Newspapers and Periodical Literatures of this generation. Oh my friends—!—But there is plain Business waiting us at hand.

CHAPTER II.

REPAIRING OF A RUINED PRUSSIA.

THAT of Friedrich's sitting wrapped in a cloud of reflexions Olympian-Abysmal, in the music-chapel at Charlottenburg, while he had the Ambrosian Song executed for him there, as the preliminary step, was a loose myth ; but the fact lying under it is abundantly certain. Few Sons of Adam had more reason for a piously-thankful feeling towards the Past, a piously-valiant towards the Future. What king or man had seen himself delivered from such strangling imbroglios of destruction, such devouring rages of a hostile world ? And the ruin worked by them lay monstrous and appalling all round. Friedrich is now Fifty-one gone ; unusually old for his age ; feels himself an old man, broken with years and toils ; and here lies his Kingdom in haggard slashed condition, worn to skin and bone : How is the King, resourceless, to remedy it ? That is now the seemingly impossible problem. " Begin it,—thereby alone will it ever cease to be impossible ! " Friedrich begins, we may say, on the first morrow morning. Labours at his problem, as he did in the march to Leuthen ; finds it to become more possible, day after day, month after month, the farther he strives with it.

" Why not leave it to Nature ? " think many, with the Dismal Science at their elbow. Well ; that was the easiest plan, but it was not Friedrich's. His remaining moneys, 25 million thalers ready for a Campaign which has not come, he distributes to the most necessitous : " all his artillery horses " are parted into plough-teams, and given to those who can otherwise get none : think what a fine figure of rye and barley, instead of mere windlestraws, beggary and desolation, was realised by that act alone. Nature is ready to do much ; will of herself cover, with some veil of grass, and lichen, the nakedness of ruin : but her victorious act, when she can accomplish it, is that of getting you to go with her handsomely, and change disaster itself into new wealth. Into new wisdom and valour, which are wealth in all kinds; California mere zero to them, zero, or even a frightful minus quantity! Friedrich's procedures in this matter I believe to be little less didactic than those other, which are so celebrated in War: but no Dryasdust, not even a Dryasdust of the Dismal Science, has gone into them, rendered men familiar with them in their details and results. His Silesian Land-Bank (joint-stock Moneys, lent on security of Land) was of itself, had I room to explain it, an immense furtherance.¹ Friedrich, many tell us, was as great in Peace as in War: and truly, in the economic and material provinces, my own impression, gathered painfully in darkness, and contradiction of the Dismal-Science Doctors, is much to that effect. A first-rate Husbandman (as his Father had been); who not only defended his Nation, but made it rich beyond what seemed possible; and diligently sowed annuals into it, and perennials which flourish aloft at this day.

Mirabeau's Monarchie Prussienne, in 8 thick Volumes 8vo,—composed, or hastily cobbled together, some Twenty years after this period,—contains the best tabular view one anywhere gets of Friedrich's economics, military and other practical methods and resources:—solid exact tables these are, and intelligent intelligible descriptions, done by Mauvillon Fils, the same punctual Major Mauvillon who used to attend us in Duke Ferdinand's War;—and so far as Mirabeau is concerned, the Work consists farther of a certain small Essay done in big type, shoved into the belly of each Volume, and eloquently recommending, with respectful censures and regrets over Friedrich, the Gospel of Free Trade, dear to Papa Mirabeau. The Son is himself a convert; far above lying, even to please Papa: but one can see, the thought of Papa gives him new fire of expression. They are eloquent, ruggedly strong Essays, those of Mirabeau Junior upon Free Trade:—they contain, in condensed shape, everything we were privileged to hear, seventy years later, from all organs, coach-horns, jews-harps and scrannel-pipes, pro and contra, on the same sublime subject:

¹ Preuss, iii. 75; Œuvres de Frédéric, vi. 81.

"God is great, and Plugson of Undershot is his Prophet. Thus saith the Lord, Buy in the cheapest market, sell in the dearest!" To which the afflicted human mind listens what it can;—and after seventy years, mournfully asks itself and Mirabeau, "M. le Comte, would there have been in Prussia, for example, any Trade at all; any Nation at all, had it always been left 'Free?' There would have been mere sand and quagmire, and a community of wolves and bisons, M. le Comte. Have the goodness to terminate that Litany, and take up another!"—

We said, Friedrich began his problem on the first morrow morning; and that is literally true, that or even more. Here is how Friedrich takes his stand amid the wreck, speedy enough to begin; this view of our old friend Nüssler and him is one of the Pieces we can give,—thanks to Herr Büsching and his Beyträge for the last time! Nüssler is now something of a Country Gentleman, so to speak; has a pleasant place out to east of Berlin; is Landrath (County Chairman) there, "Landrath of Nether-Barnim Circle;" where we heard of the Cossacks spoiling him: he, as who not, has suffered dreadfully in these tumults. Here is Büsching's welcome Account.

Landrath Nüssler and the King (30th March—3d April 1763).

"March 30th, 1763, Friedrich, on his return to Berlin, came by the route of Tassdorf,"—Tassdorf, in Nether-Barnim Circle (40 odd miles from Frankfurt, and above 15 from Berlin);—"and changed horses there. During this little pause, among a crowd assembled to see him, he was addressed by Nüssler, Landrath of the Circle, who had a very piteous story to tell. Nüssler wished the King joy of his noble victories, and of the glorious Peace at last achieved: 'May your Majesty reign in health and happiness over us many years, to the blessing of us all!'—and recommended to his gracious care the extremely ruined, and, especially by the Russians, uncommonly devastated Circle, for which" (continues Büsching) "this industrious Landrath had not hitherto been able to extract any effective help." Generally for the Provinces wasted by the Russians there had already some poor 300,000 thalers (45,000*l.*) been allowed by a helpful Majesty, not over-rich himself at the moment; and of this, Nether-Barnim no doubt gets its share: but what is this to such ruin as there is? A mere preliminary drop, instead of the bucket and buckets we need!—Büsching, a dull, though solid accurate kind of man, heavy-footed, and yet always in a hurry, always slipshod, has nothing of dramatic here; far from it; but the facts themselves fall naturally into that form,—in Three Scenes:

1. Tussdorf (still two hours from Berlin), King, Nüssler and a Crowd of People, Nüssler alone daring to speak.

King (from his Carriage, ostlers making despatch). "What is your Circle most short of?"

Landrath Nüssler. "Of horses for ploughing the seed-fields, of rye to sow them, and of bread till the crops come."

King. "Rye for bread, and to sow with, I will give; with horses I cannot assist."

Nüssler. "On representation of Privy-Councillor von Brenkenhof" (the Minister concerned with such things), "your Majesty has been pleased to give the Neumark and Pommern an allowance of Artillery and Commissariat-Horses: but poor Nether-Barnim, nobody will speak for it; and unless your Majesty's gracious self please to take pity on it, Nether-Barnim is lost"—("A great many things more he said, in presence of a large crowd of men who had gathered round the King's Carriage as the horses were being changed; and spoke with such force and frankness that the King was surprised, and asked:—")

King. "Who are you?" (has forgotten the long-serviceable man!)

Nüssler. "I am the Nüssler who was lucky enough to manage the Fixing of the Silesian Boundaries for your Majesty!"

King. "Ja, ja, now I know you again! Bring me all the Landraths of the Kurmark" (Mark of Brandenburg Proper, Electoral Mark) "in a body; I will speak with them."

Nüssler. "All of them but two are in Berlin already."

King. "Send off estafettes for those two to come at once to Berlin; and on Thursday," day after tomorrow, "come yourself, with all the others, to the Schloss to me: I will then have some closer conversation, and say what I can and will do for helping of the country" (King's Carriage rolls away, with low bows and blessings from Nüssler and everybody.

2. Thursday, April 1st, Nüssler and assembled Landraths at the Schloss of Berlin. To them, enter King. * *

Nüssler (whom they have appointed spokesman). * * "Your Majesty has given us Peace; you will also give us Well-being in the Land again: we leave it to Highest-the-Same's gracious judgment" (no limit to Highest-the-Same's power, it would seem) "what you will vouchsafe to us as indemnification for the Russian plunderings."

King. "Be you quiet; let me speak. Have you got a pencil (Hat Er crayon)? Yes! Well then, write, and these Gentlemen shall dictate to you:

"How much rye for bread; How much for seed; How many Horses, Oxen, Cows, their Circles do in an entirely pressing way require.

"Consider all that to the bottom; and come to me again the day after tomorrow. But see that you fix everything with the utmost exactitude, for I cannot give much." (Exit King.)

Nüssler (to the Landraths). "Meine Herren, have the goodness to accompany me to our Landschaft House" (we have a kind of County Hall, it seems); "there we will consider everything."

"And Nüssler, guiding the deliberations, which are glad to follow him on every point, and writing as Pro-tempore Secretary, has all things brought to luminous Protocol, in the course of this day and next."

3. Saturday, April 3d, in the Schloss again; Nüssler and Landraths. To them, the King.

Nüssler. "We deliver to your Majesty the written Specifications you were graciously pleased to command of us. It contains only the indispensablest things that the Circles are in need of. Moreover, it regards only the Stände" (richer Nobility), "who pay contribution; the Gentry" (Adel), "and other poor people, who have been utterly plundered out by the Russians, are not included in it:—the Gentry too have suffered very much by the War and the Plundering."

King. "What Edelleute that are members of Stände have you" (Er) "got in your Circle?"

Nüssler (names them; and, as finis of the list, adds): * * "I myself, too, your Majesty, I have suffered more than anybody : I absolutely could not furnish those 4,000 bushels of meal ordered of me by the Russians ; upon which they—”

King. “I cannot give to all : but if you have poor Nobles in your Circle, who can in no way help themselves, I will give them something.”

Nüssler (“has not any in Nether-Barnim who are altogether in that extreme predicament ; but knows several in Lebus Circle, names them to the King ;—and turning to the Landrath of Lebus, and to another who is mute) : ‘Herr, you can name some more in Lebus ; and you, in Teltow Circle, Herr Landrath, since his Majesty permits.’” * * In a word, “the King having informed himself and declared his intention, Nüssler leads the Landraths to their old County Hall, and brings to Protocol what had taken place.

“Next day, the Kammer President” (Exchequer President), “Von der Gröben, had Nüssler, with other Landraths, to dinner. During dinner there came from Head-Secretary Eichel” (Majesty’s unwearied Clerk of the Pells, Sheepskins, or Papers) “an earnest request to Von der Gröben for help,—Eichel not being able to remember, with the requisite precision, everything his Majesty had bid him put down on this matter. ‘You will go, Herr von Nüssler ; be so kind, won’t you ?’ And Nüssler went, and fully illuminated Eichel.” * *

To the poorest of the Nobility, Büsching tells us, what is otherwise well known, the King gave considerable sums : to one Circle 12,000*l.*, to another 9,000*l.*, 6,000*l.*, and so on. “By help of which bounties, and of Nüssler labouring incessantly with all his strength, Nieder-Barnim Circle got on its feet again, no subject having been entirely ruined, but all proving able to recover.”¹

This Büsching Fragment is not in the style of the Elder Dramatists, or for the Bankside Theatre ; but this represents a Fact which befel in God’s Creation, and may have an interest of its own to the Practical Soul, especially in anarchic Countries, far advanced in the “Gold-nugget and Nothing to Buy with it” Career of unexampled Prosperities.

On these same errands, the King is soon going on an Inspection Journey, where we mean to accompany. But first, one word, and one will suffice, on the debased Coin. The Peace was no sooner signed, than Friedrich proceeded on the Coin. The third week after his arrival home, there came out a salutary Edict on it, April 21st; King eager to do it without loss of time, yet with the deliberation requisite. Not at one big leap, which might shake, to danger of oversetting, much commercial arrangement; but at two leaps, with a halfway station intervening. Halfway station, with a new coinage ready, much purer of alloy (and marked how much, for the benefit of parties with accounts to settle), is to commence on Trinitatis (Whitsunday) instant; from and after Whitsunday, the improved new coin to be sole legal tender, till farther notice. Farther notice comes accordingly, within a year, March 29th, 1764: "Pure money of the standard of 1750" (honest silver coinage: readers may remember Linsenbarth, the Candidatus Theologiæ, and his sack of Batzen, confiscated at the Packhof) "shall be ready on the 1st of June instant;" —from and after which day we hear no more of that sad matter. Finished off in about fourteen months. Here, meanwhile, is the Inspection Journey.

¹ Büsching, Beiträge (§ Nüssler), i. 401–405.

Kriegsrath Roden and the King (6th–13th June 1763).

June 2d, 1763, Friedrich left Potsdam for Westphalia; got as far as Magdeburg that day. Intends seeing into matters with his own eyes in that region, as in others, after so long and sad an absence. There are with him Friedrich Wilhelm, Prince of Prussia, a tall young fellow of nineteen; General-Adjutant von Anhalt; and one or two Prussian military people. From Magdeburg and onwards the great Duke Ferdinand accompanies,—who is now again Governor of Magdeburg, and a quiet Prussian Officer as heretofore, though with excellent Pensions from England, and glory from all the world.

The Royal Party goes by Halberstadt, which suffered greatly in the War; thence by Minden (June 4th); and the first thing next day, Friedrich takes view of the Battlefield there,—under Ferdinand's own guidance, doubtless; and an interesting thing to both Friedrich and him, though left silent to us. This done, they start for Lippstadt, are received there under joyous clangorous outburst of all the bells and all the honours, that same afternoon ; and towards sunset, Hamm being the Night-quarter ahead, are crossing Vellinghausen Battleground,—where doubtless Ferdinand again, like a dutiful apprentice, will explain matters to his old master, so far as needful or permissible. The conversation, I suppose, may have been lively and miscellaneous : Ferdinand mentions a clever business-person of the name of Roden, whom he has known in those parts ; “Roden ?” the King carefully makes note ;—and, in fact, we shall see Roden presently, and his bit of Dialogue with the King (recorded by his own hand) is our chief errand on this Journey. From Hamm, next morning (June 6th), they get to Wesel by 11 A.M. (only sixty miles) ; Wesel all in gala as Lippstadt was, or still more than Lippstadt ; and for four days farther, they continue there very busy. As Roden is our chief errand, let us attend to Roden.

¹ Rodenbeck, ii. 214, 234.

Wesel, Monday, June 6th, “Dinner being done,” says an authentic Third-Party,¹ “the King had Kammer-Director Meyen summoned to him with his Register-Books, Schedules, and Reports” (what they call États) ; “and was but indifferently contented with Meyen and them.” And in short, “ordering Meyen to remodel these into a more distinct condition,”—we may now introduce the Herr Kriegs-rath Roden, a subaltern in rank, but who has perhaps a better head than Meyen to judge of these États. Roden himself shall now report. This is the Royal Dialogue with Roden ; accurately preserved for us by him ;—I wish it had been better worth the reader’s trouble ; but its perfect credibility in every point will be some recommendation to it.

“Monday, 6th June 1763, about 11 A.M. his Majesty arrived in Wesel,” says Roden (confirming to us the authentic Third Party) ; “I waited on Adjutant-General Colonel von Anhalt to announce myself ; who referred me to Kriegs-rath Cöper” (“mein Segreter Köper” is a name we have heard before), “who told me to be ready so soon as Dinner should be over.

¹ Rödenbeck, ii. 217.

Dinner was no sooner over" (2 P.M. or so), "than the Herr Kammer-Director Meyen with his États was called in. His Majesty was not content with these, Herr Meyen was told; and they were to be remodelled into a more distinct condition. The instant Herr Meyen stepped out, I was called in. His Majesty was standing with his back to the fire; and said:

King. "'Come nearer' (Roden comes nearer). 'Prince Ferdinand' (of Brunswick, whom we generally call Duke and great, to distinguish him from a little Prussian Prince Ferdinand) 'has told me much good of you: where do you come from?'

Roden. "'From Soest' (venerable 'stone-old' little Town, in Vellinghausen region).

King. "'Did you get my Letter?'

Roden. "'Yes, Ihro Majestät.'

King. "'I will give you some employment. Have you got a pencil?'

Roden. "'Yea' (and took out his Notebook and tools, which he had 'bought in a shop a quarter of an hour before').

King. "'Listen. By the War many Houses have got ruined: I mean that they shall be put in order again; for which end,—to those that cannot themselves help, particularly to Soest, Hamm, Lünen and in part Wesel, as places that have suffered most,—I intend to give the moneys. Now you must make me an exact List of what is to be done in those places. Thus' (King, lifting his finger, let us fancy, dictates; Roden, with brand-new pencil and tablets, writes):

"1°. In each of those Towns, how many ruined Houses there are, which the proprietors themselves can manage to rebuild. 2°. How many which the proprietors cannot. 3°. The vacant grounds or steadings of such proprietors as are perhaps dead, or gone elsewhere, must be given to others that are willing to build: but, in regard to this, Law also must do its part, and the absent and the heirs must be cited to say, Whether they will themselves build? and in case they won't, the steadings can then be given to others." Roden having written,— King. "'In the course of six days you must be ready' (what an expeditious King! Is to be at Cleve the sixth day hence: Meet me there, then),—'longer I cannot give you.'

Roden (considering a moment). "'If your Majesty will permit me to use estafettes' (express messengers) 'for the Towns farthest off,—as I cannot myself, within the time, travel over all the Towns,—I hope to be ready.'

King. "'That I permit; and will repay you the estafette moneys.—Tell me, How comes the decrease of population in these parts? Recruits I got none.'

Roden. "'Under favour of your Majesty, Regiment Schenckendorf got, every year, for recompletion, what recruits were wanted, from its Canton in the Grafschaft Mark here.'

King. "'There you may be right: but from Cleve Country we had no recruits; not we, though the Austrians had' (with a slight sarcasm of tone).

Roden. "'Out of Cleve, so far as I know, there were no recruits delivered to the Austrians.'

King. "'You could not know; you were with the Allied Army' (Duke Ferdinand's, commissariating and the like, where Duke Ferdinand recognised you to have a head).

Roden. "'There have been many epidemic diseases too; especially in Soest;—after the Battle of Vellinghausen all the wounded were brought thither, and the hospitals were established there.'

King. "'Epidemic diseases they might have got without a Battle' (dislikes hearing ill of the soldier trade). 'I will have Order sent to the Cleve Kammer, Not to lay hindrance in your way, but the contrary. Now God keep you (Gott bewahre Ihn).'"—Exit Roden;—"darauf retirirte mich," says he;—but will reappear shortly.

Sunday 12th June is the sixth day hence; later than the end of Sunday is not permissible to swift Roden; nor does he need it.

Friday 10th, Friedrich left Wesel; crossed the Rhine, intending for Cleve; went by Crefeld,—at Crefeld, had view of another Battlefield, under good ciceroneship; remarks or circumstances otherwise not given:—and, next day, Saturday 11th, picked up D'Alembert, who, by appointment; is proceeding towards Potsdam, at a more leisurely rate. That same Saturday, after much business done, the King was at Kempen, thence at Geldern; speeding for Cleve itself, due there that night. At Geldern, we say, he picked up D'Alembert;—concerning whom, more by and by. And finally, "on Saturday night, about half-past 8, the King entered Cleve," amid joyances extraordinary, but did not alight; drove direct through by the Nassau Gate, and took quarter "in the neighbouring Country-house of Bellevue, with the Dutch General von Spaen there,"—an obliging acquaintance once, while Lieutenant Spaen, in our old Crown-Prince times of trouble! Had his year in Spandau for us there, while poor Katte lost his head! To whom, I have heard, the King talked charmingly on this occasion, but was silent as to old Potsdam matters.—

By his set day, Roden is also in Cleve, punctual man, finished or just finishing; and ready for summons by his Majesty. And accordingly:

Cleve, Monday, June 13th, At 9 in the morning,” records he, “I had audience of the King’s Majesty:”—(In Spaen’s Villa of Bellevue, shall we still suppose? Duke Ferdinand, Prince of Prussia, and the rest, have bestowed themselves in other fit houses; D’Alembert too,—who is to make direct for Potsdam henceforth, by his own route; and will meet us on arriving).—“I handed him my Report, with the Tabular Schedule. His Majesty read it carefully through, in my presence; and examined all of it with strictness. Was pleased to signify his satisfaction with my work. Resolved to allow 250,000 thalers (37,500*l.*) for this business of Rebuilding; gave out the due Orders to his Kammer, in consequence, and commanded me to arrange with the Kammer what was necessary. This done, his Majesty said:

King. “‘What you were described to me, I find you to be. You are a diligent laborious man; I must have you nearer to me;—in the Berlin Kammer you ought to be. You shall have a good, a right good Salary; your Patent I will give you gratis; also a Vorspann-Pass’ (Standing Order available at all Prussian Post-Stations) ‘for two carriages’ (rapid Program of the thing, though yet distant, rising in the Royal fancy!). ‘Now serve on as faithfully as you have hitherto done.’

Roden. “‘That is the object of all my endeavors.”” (Exit: —I did not hear specially whitherward just now; but he comes to be supreme Kammer-President in those parts by and by.)

“The Herr Kriegsrath Cöper was present, and noted all the Orders to be expedited.”

These snatches of notice at first hand, and what the reader’s fancy may make of these, are all we can bestow on this Section of Friedrich’s Labours; which is naturally more interesting to Prussian readers than to English. He has himself given lucid and eloquent account of it,—Two ample Chapters,

¹ Suprà, iii. 24.

² Preuss, ii. 442; Rödenbeck, ii. 217, 218: in regard to D’Alembert, see Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiv. 190.

"Des Finances ;" "Du Militaire,"—altogether pleasant reading, should there still be curiosity upon it. There is something of flowingly eloquent in Friedrich's account of this Battle waged against the inanimate Chaos ; something of exultant and triumphant, not noticeable of him in regard to his other Victories. On the Leuthens, Rossbachs, he is always cold as water, and nobody could gather that he had the least pleasure in recording them. . Not so here. And indeed here he is as beautiful as anywhere ; and the reader, as a general son of Adam,—proud to see human intellect and heroism slaying that kind of lions, and doing what in certain sad epochs is unanimously voted to be impossible and unattemptsable,—exults along with him ; and perhaps whispers to his own poor heart, nearly choked by the immeasurable imbroglio of Blue-books and Parliamentary Eloquences which for the present encumber Heaven and Earth, "Meliora spero." To Mirabeau, the following details, from First Hand, but already of twenty-three years distance, were not known,² while he sat penning those robust Essays on the Duty of Leave-Alone.

"To form an idea of the general subversion," says the King, in regard to 1763, "and how great were the desolation and discouragement, you must represent to yourself Countries entirely ravaged, the very traces of the old habitations hardly discoverable ; Towns, some ruined from top to bottom, others half-destroyed by fire ;—13,000 Houses, of which the very vestiges were gone. No field in seed ; no grain for the food of the inhabitants ; 60,000 horses needed, if there was to be ploughing carried on : in the Provinces generally Half-a-million Population (500,000) less than in 1756,—that is to say, upon only Four Millions and a Half, the ninth man was wanting. Noble and Peasant had been pillaged, ransomed, foraged, eaten out by so many different Armies ; nothing now left them, but life and miserable rags.

"There was no credit by trading people, even for the daily necessities of life." And furthermore what we were not prepared for, "No police in the Towns : to habits of equity and order had succeeded a vile greed of gain and an anarchic disorder. The Colleges of Justice and of Finance had, by these frequent invasions of so many enemies, been reduced to inaction : " no Judge, in many places not even a Tax-gatherer : " the silence of the Laws had produced in the people a taste for license ; boundless appetite for gain was their main rule of action : the noble, the merchant, the farmer, the labourer, raising emulously each the price of his commodity, seemed to endeavour only for their mutual ruin. Such, when the War ended, was the fatal spectacle over these Provinces, which had once been so flourishing : however pathetic the description may be, it will never approach the touching and sorrowful impression which the sight of it produced."

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, vii. 73-90, 91-109.

² Appeared first in Tome v. of "Œuvres Posthumes de Frédéric II" (are in Tome vi. of Preuss's Edition of Œuvres), "Berlin 1788 ;"—above a year after Mirabeau had left.

Friedrich found that it would never do to trust to the mere aid of Time in such circumstances : at the end of the Thirty-Years War, "Time" had, owing to absolute want of money, been the one recipe of the Great Elector in a similar case ; and Time was then found to mean "about a hundred Years." Friedrich found that he must at once step in with active remedies, and on all hands to make the impossible possible. Luckily he had in readiness, as usual, the funds for an Eighth Campaign, had such been needed. Out of these moneys he proceeded to rebuild the Towns and Villages ; "from the Corn-Stores (granaries d'abondance," Government establishments gathered from plentiful harvests against scarce, according to old rule) "were taken the supplies for food of the people and sowing of the ground : the horses intended for the artillery, baggage and commissariat," 60,000 horses we have heard, were distributed among those who had none, to be employed in the tillage of the land. Silesia was discharged from all taxes for six months ; Pommern and the Neumark for two years. A sum of about Three Million sterling " (in thalers 20,389,000) was given for relief of the Provinces, and as acquittance of the impositions the Enemy had wrung from them.

"Great as was this expense, it was necessary and indispensable. The condition of these Provinces after the Peace of Hubertsburg recalled what we know of them when the Peace of Münster closed the famous Thirty-Years War. On that occasion the State failed of help from want of means ; which put it out of the Great Elector's power to assist his people : and what happened ? That a whole century elapsed before his Successors could restore the Towns and Champaigns to what they were. This impressive example was admonitory to the King : that to repair the Public Calamities, assistance must be prompt and effective. Repeated gifts (largesses) restored courage to the poor Husbandmen, who began to despair of their lot ; by the helps given, hope in all classes sprang up anew : encouragement of labour produced activity ; love of Country rose again with fresh life : in a word " (within the second year in a markedly hopeful manner, and within seven years altogether), "the fields were cultivated again, manufacturers had resumed their work ; and the Police, once more in vigour, corrected by degrees the vices that had taken root during the time of anarchy."¹

To Friedrich's difficulties, which were not inconsiderable, mark only this last additament : "During this War, the elder of the Councillors, and all the Ministers of the Grand Directorium" (centre of Prussian Administration), "had successively died : and in such time of trouble it had been impossible to replace them. The embarrassment was, To find persons capable of filling these different employments" (some would have very soon done it, your Majesty ; but their haste would not have tended to speed !)—"We searched the Provinces (on fouilla, sifted), where good heads were found as rare as in the Capital : at length five Chief Ministers were pitched upon"—who prove to be tolerable, and even good. Three of them were, the Vons Blumenthal, Massow, Hagen, unknown to readers here : fourth and fifth were, the Von Wedell as War Minister, once Dictator at Züllichau ; and a Von der Horst, who had what we might partially call the Home Department, and who may by accident once or so be nameable again.

Nor was War all, says the King : "accidental Fires in different places," while we struggled to repair the ravagings of War, "were of unexampled frequency, and did immense farther damage. From 1765 to 1769, here is the list of places burnt : In East Preussen, the City of Königsberg twice over ; in Silesia, the Towns of Freystadt, Ober-Glogau" (do readers recollect Manteuffel of Foot and "Wir wollen ihm was !"), "Parchwitz, Naumberg-on-Queiss, and Goldberg ; in the Mark, Nauen ; in the Neumark, Calies and a part of Lansberg ; in Pommern, Belgard and Tempelburg. These accidents required incessantly new expenditures to repair them."

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, vi. 74, 75.

Friedrich was not the least of a Free Trader, except where it suited him : and his continual subventions and donations, guidances, encouragements, commandings and prohibitions, wise supervision and impulsion,—are a thing I should like to hear an intelligent Mirabeau (Junior or Senior) discourse upon, after he had well studied them ! For example : "On rendit les Prêtres utiles, The Priests, Catholic Priests, were turned to use by obliging all the rich Abbeys to establish manufactures : here it was weavers making damasks and table-cloths ; there oil-mills" (oil from linseed) ; "or workers in copper, wire-drawers ; as suited the localities and the natural products,—the flaxes and the metals, with water-power, markets, and so on." What a charming resuscitation of the rich Abbeys from their dormant condition !

I should like still better to explain how, in Lower Silesia, "we (on) managed to increase the number of Husbandmen by 4,000 families. You will be surprised how it was possible to multiply to this extent the people living by Agriculture in a Country where already not a field was waste. The reason was this. Many Lords of Land, to increase their Domain, had imperceptibly appropriated to themselves the holdings (terres) of their vassals. Had this abuse been suffered to go on, in time a great—" But the commentary needed would be too lengthy ; we will give only the result : "In the long-run, every Village would have had its Lord, but there would have been no tax-paying Farmers left." The Landlord, ruler of these Landless, might himself (as Majesty well knows) have been made to pay, had that been all ; but it was not. "To possess something ; that is what makes the citizen attached to his Country ; those who have no property, and have nothing to lose, what tie have they ?" A weak one in comparison ! "All these things being represented to the Landlord Class, their own advantage made them consent to replace their Peasants on the old footing." * *

"To make head against so many extraordinary demands," adds the King (looking over to a new Chapter, that of The Military, which Department, to his eyes, was not less shockingly dilapidated than the Civil, and equally or more needed instant repair), "new resources had to be devised. For, besides what was needed for reëstablishment of the Provinces, new Fortifications were necessary; and all our Cannon, évasés (worn too wide in the bore), needed to be refounded; which occasioned considerable new expense. This led us to improvement of the Excises,"—concerning which there will have to be a Section by itself.

Of Friedrich's new Excise-System.

In his late Inspection-Journey to Cleve country, D'Alembert, from Paris, by appointment waited for the King;—picked up at Geldern (June 11th), as we saw above. D'Alembert got to Potsdam, June 22d; stayed till middle of August. He had met the King once before, in 1755; who found him "a bon garçon," as we then saw. D'Alembert was always, since that time, an agreeable, estimable little man to Friedrich. Age now about forty-six; has lately refused the fine Russian post of "Tutor to the Czarowitsh" (Czarowitsh Paul, poor little Boy of eight or nine, whom we, or Herr Büsching for us, saw galloping about, not long since, "in his dressing-gown," under Panim's Tutorage); refuses now, in a delicate gradual manner, the fine Prussian post of Perpetual President, or Successor to Maupertuis;—definitely preferring his frugal pensions at Paris, and garret all his own there. Continues, especially after this two-months visit of 1763, one of the King's chief correspondents for the next twenty years.¹ A man of much clear intellect; a thought shreeky in his ways sometimes; but always prudent, rational, polite, and loyally recognising Friedrich as a precious article in this world. Here is a word of D'Alembert's to Madame du Deffand, at Paris, some ten or twelve days after the Cleve meeting, and the third day after his arrival here :

¹ In Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiv. 377-380 (D'Alembert's fine bits of Letters in prospect of Potsdam, "Paris, 7th March—29th April 1763;" and two small Notes while there, "Sans-Souci, 6th July—15th August 1763").

² "29th October 1783," D'Alembert died: "born 16th November 1717;"—a Foundling as is well known; "Mother a Sister of Cardinal Tencin's; Father,' accidental, "an Officer in the Artillery."

“ Potsdam, 25th June 1763. “ Madame,— * * I will not go into the praises of this Prince, King Friedrich, my now Host ; in my mouth it might be suspicious : I will merely send you two traits of him, which will indicate his way of thinking and feeling. When I spoke to him ” (at Geldern, probably, on our first meeting) “ of the glory he had acquired, he answered, with the greatest simplicity, That there was a furious discount to be deducted from said glory ; that chance came in for almost the whole of it ; and that he would far rather have done Racine’s Athalie than all this War :—Athalie is the work he likes, and re-reads oftenest ; I believe you won’t disapprove his taste there. The other trait I have to give you is, That on the day ” (15th February last) “ of concluding this Peace, which is so glorious to him, some one saying, ‘ It is the finest day of your Majesty’s life : ’ ‘ The finest day of life,’ answered he, ‘ is the day on which one quits it.’ * *—Adieu Madame.”¹

The meeting in Cleve Country was, no doubt, a very pretty passage, with Two pretty Months following ;—and if it be true that Helvetius was a consequence, the 11th of June 1763 may almost claim to be a kind of epoch in Friedrich’s later history. The opulent and ingenious M. Helvetius, who wrote De l’Esprit, and has got banished for that feat (lost in the gloom of London in those months), had been a mighty Tax-gatherer as well ; D’Alembert, as brother Philosophe, was familiar with Helvetius. It is certain, also, King Friedrich, at this time, found he would require annually two million thalers more ;—where to get them, seemed the impossibility. A General Krockow, who had long been in French Service, and is much about the King, was often recommending the French Excise-system ;—he is the Krockow of Domstättl, and that Siege of Olmütz, memorable to some of us :—“ a wonderful Excise-system,” Krockow is often saying, in this time of straits. “ Who completely understands it ? ” the King might ask. “ Helvetius, against the world ! ” D’Alembert could justly answer. "Invite Helvetius to leave his London exile, and accept an asylum here, where he may be of vital use to me!" concludes Friedrich.

¹ Œuvres Posthumes de D’Alembert (Paris, 1799), i. 197 : ” cited in Preuss, ii. 348.

Helvetius came in March 1765; stayed till June 1766:¹—within which time a French Excise-system, which he had been devising and putting together, had just got in gear, and been in action for a month, to Helvetius's satisfaction. Who thereupon went his way, and never returned;—taking with him, as man and tax-gatherer, the King's lasting gratitude; but by no means that of the Prussian Nation, in his tax-gathering capacity! All Prussia, or all of it that fell under this Helvetius Excise-system, united to condemn it, in all manner of dialects, louder and louder: here, for instance, is the utterance of Herr Hamann, himself a kind of Custom-house Clerk (at Königsberg, in East Prussen), and on modest terms a Literary man of real merit and originality, who may be supposed to understand this subject: "And so," says Hamann, "the State has declared its own subjects incapable of managing its Finance-system; and in this way has intrusted its heart, that is the purse of its subjects, to a company of Foreign Scoundrels, ignorant of everything relating to it!"²

This lasted all Friedrich's lifetime; and gave rise to not a little buzzing, especially in its primary or incipient stages. It seems to have been one of the unsuccessfullest Finance-adventures Friedrich ever engaged in. It cost his subjects infinite small trouble; awakened very great complaining; and for the first time, real discontent,—skin-deep but sincere and universal, against the misguided Vater Fritz. Much noisy absurdity there was upon it, at home, and especially abroad: "Gripping miser," "greedy tyrant," and so forth! Deducting all which, everybody now admits that Friedrich's aim was excellent and proper: but nobody denies withal that the means were inconsiderable, of no profit in proportion to the trouble they gave, and improper to adopt unless the necessity compelled.

¹ Rödénbeck, ii. 254; Preuss, iii. 11.

² "Hamannu to Jacobi" (see Preuss, iii. 1-35), "Königsberg, 18th January 1786."

Friedrich is forbidden, or forbids himself, as we have often mentioned, to impose new taxes : and nevertheless now, on calculations deep, minute, and no doubt exact, he judges, That for meeting new attacks of War (or being ready to meet, which will oftenest mean averting them),—a thing which, as he has just seen, may concern the very existence of the State,—it is necessary that there should be on foot such and such quantities and kinds of Soldiery and War-furniture, visible to all neighbours ; and privately in the Treasury never less than such and such a sum. To which end Arithmetic declares that there is required about Two Million thalers more of yearly revenue than we now have. And where, in these circumstances, are the means of raising such a sum ?

Friedrich imposes no new taxes ; but there may be stricter methods of levying the old ;—there may, and in fact there must, be means found ! Friedrich has consulted his Finance Ministers ; put the question seriatim to these wise heads : they answer with one voice, “There are no means.”¹ Friedrich, therefore, has recourse to Helvetius ; who, on due consideration, and after survey of much documentary and tabulary raw-material, is of opinion, that the Prussian Excises would, if levied with the punctuality, precision and vigilant exactitude of French methods, actually yield the required overplus. “Organise me the methods, then ; get them put in action here ; under French hands, if that be indispensable.” Helvetius bethought him of what fittest French hands there were to his knowledge,—in France there are a great many hands flung idle in the present downbreak of finance there :—Helvetius appears to have selected, arranged and contrived in this matter with his best diligence. De Launay, the Head-engineer of the thing, was admitted by all Prussia, after Twenty-two years unfriendly experience of him, to have been a suitable and estimable person ; a man of judicious ways, of no small intelligence, prudence, and of very great skill in administering business.

Head-engineer De Launay, one may guess, would be consulted by Helvetius in choice of the subaltern Officials, the

¹ Rödénbeck, ii. 256.

stokers and steerers in this new Steam-Machinery, which had all to be manned from France. There were Four heads of departments immediately under De Launay, or scarcely under him, junior brothers rather :—who chose these I did not hear ; but these latter, it is evident, were not a superior quality of people. Of these Four,—all at very high salaries, from De Launay downwards ; “higher than a Prussian Minister of State !” murmured the public,—two, within the first year, got into quarrel ; fought a duel, fatal to one of them ; so that there were now only Three left. “Three, with De Launay, will do,” opined Friedrich ; and divided the vacant salary among the survivors : in which form they had at least no more duelling.

As to the subaltern working-parties, the Visitateurs, Controlleurs, Jaugeurs (Gaugers), Plombeurs (Lead-stampers), or the strangest kind of all, called “Cellar-Rats (Commis Rats-de-Cave),” they were so detested and exclaimed against, by a Public impatient of the work itself, there is no knowing what their degree of scoundrelism was, nor even, within amazingly wide limits, what the arithmetical number of them was. About 500 in the whole of Prussia, says a quiet Prussian, who has made some inquiry ;¹ 1,500 says Mirabeau ; 3,000 say other exaggerative persons, or even 5,000 ; De Launay’s account is, Not at any time above 200. But we can all imagine how vexatious they and their business were. Nobody now is privileged with exemption : from one and all of you, Nobles, Clergy, People, strict account is required about your beers and liquors ; your coffee, salt ; your consumptions and your purchases of all excisable articles :—nay, I think in coffee and salt, in salt for certain, what you will require, according to your station and domestic numbers, is computed for you, to save trouble ; such and such quantities you will please to buy in our presence, or to pay duty for, whether you buy them or not. Into all houses, at any hour of the day or of the night, these cellar-rats had liberty,—(on warrant from some higher rat of their own type, I know not how much higher ; and no sure appeal for you, except to the King ; tolerably sure there, if you be innocent, but evidently perilous if you be only not-convicted !)—had liberty, I say, to search for contraband ; all your presses, drawers, repositories, you must open to these beautiful creatures ; watch in nightcap, and candle in hand, while your things get all tumbled hither and thither, in the search for what perhaps is not there ; nay, it was said and suspected, but I never knew it for certain, that these poisonous French are capable of slipping-in something contraband, on purpose to have you fined whether or not.

¹ “Beguelin, Accise- und Zoll-Verfassung, S. 138” (Preuss, iii. 18).

Readers can conceive, though apparently Friedrich did not, what a world of vexation all this occasioned ; and how, in the continual annoyance to all mankind, the irritation, provocation, and querulous eloquence spread among high and low. Of which the King knew something ; but far from the whole. His object was one of vital importance ; and his plan once fixed, he went on with it, according to his custom, regardless of little rubs. The Anecdote Books are full of details, comic mostly, on this subject : How the French rats pounced down upon good harmless people, innocent frugal parsonages, farm-houses ; and were comically flung prostrate by native ready wit, or by direct appeal to the King. Details, never so authentic, could not be advisable in this place. Perhaps there are not more than Two authentic Passages, known to me, which can now have the least interest, even of a momentary sort, to English readers. The first is, Of King Friedrich caricatured as a Miser grinding Coffee. I give it, without essential alteration of any kind, in Herr Preuss's words, copied from those of one who saw it :—the second, which relates to a Princess or Ex-Princess of the Royal House, I must reserve for a little while. Herr Preuss says :

“Once during the time of the Regie” (which lasted from 1766 to 1786 and the King's death : no other date assignable, though 1768, or so, may be imaginable for our purpose), “as the King came riding along the Jäger Strasse, there was visible near what is called the Fürstenhaus,” kind of Berlin Somerset-House,¹ “a great crowd of people. ‘See what it is!’

¹ Nicolai, i. 155.

the King sent his one attendant, a heiduc or groom, into it, to learn what it was. 'They have something posted up about your Majesty,' reported the groom; and Friedrich, who by this time had ridden forward, took a look at the thing; which was a Caricature figure of himself: King in very melancholy guise, seated on a Stool, a Coffee-mill between his knees; diligently grinding with the one hand, and with the other picking up any bean that might have fallen. 'Hang it lower,' said the King, beckoning his groom with a wave of the finger: 'Lower, that they may not have to hurt their necks about it!' No sooner were the words spoken, which spread instantly, than there rose from the whole crowd one universal huzzah of joy. They tore the Caricature into a thousand pieces, and rolled after the King with loud 'Lebehoch, Our Friedrich forever!' as he rode slowly away." That is their Friedrich's method with the Caricature Department. Heffner, Kapellmeister in Upsala, reports this bit of memorability; he was then of the King's Music-Chapel in Berlin, and saw this with his eyes.

The King's tendency at all times, and his practice generally, when we hear of it, was to take the people's side; so that gradually these French procedures were a great deal mitigated; and die Regie,—so they called this hateful new-fangled system of Excise Machinery,—became much more supportable, "the sorrows of it nothing but a tradition to the younger sort," reports Dohm, who is extremely ample on this subject. De Launay was honourably dismissed, and the whole Regie abolished, a month or two after Friedrich's death.

With a splenetic satisfaction, authentic Dohm, who sufficiently condemns the Regie, adds that it was not even successful; and shows by evidence, and computation to the uttermost farthing, that instead of two million thalers annually, it yielded on the average rather less than one. The desired overplus of two millions, and a good deal more did indeed come in, says he : but it was owing to the great prosperity of Prussia at large, after the Seven-Years War ; to the manifold industries awakening, which have gone on progressive ever since. Dohm declares farther, that the very object was, in a sort, fanciful, nugatory ; arguing that nobody did attack Friedrich ; —but omitting to prove that nobody would have done so, had Friedrich not stood ready to receive him. We will remark only, what is very indisputable, that Friedrich, owing to the Régie, or to other causes, did get the humble overplus necessary for him ; and did stand ready for any war which might have come (and which did in a sort come) ; that he more and more relaxed the Régie, as it became less indispensable to him ; and was willing, if he found the Caricatures and Opposition Placards too high posted, to save the poor reading people any trouble that was possible.

¹ Preuss, iii. 275 ("from Berlin Conversationsblatt &c. of 1827, No. 253").

² Christian Wilhelm von Dohm, Denkwürdigkeiten meiner Zeit (Lemz und Hanover, 1819), iv. 500 et seq.

A French eyewitness testifies : “ They had no talent, these Régie fellows, but that of writing and ciphering ; extremely conceited too, and were capable of the most ridiculous follies. Once, for instance, they condemned a common soldier, who had hidden some pounds of tobacco, to a fine of 200 thalers. The King, on reviewing it for confirmation, wrote on the margin : ‘ Before confirming this sentence, I should wish to know where the Soldier, who gets 8 groschen ’ (ninepence halfpenny) ‘ in the 5 days, will find the 200 crowns for paying this Fine ! ’ ”¹ Innumerable instances of a constant disposition that way, on the King’s part, stand on record. “ A crown a head on the import of fat cattle, Tax on butcher’s meat ? ” writes he once to De Launay : “ No, that would fall on the poorer classes ; to that I must say No. I am, by office, Procurator of the Poor (l’avocat du pauvre). ” Elsewhere it is, “ Avocat du pauvre et du soldat (of the working-man and of the soldier) ; and have to plead their cause.”²

We will now give our Second Anecdote ; which has less of memorability to us strangers at present, though doubtless it was then, in Berlin society, the more celebrated of the two ; relating, as it did, to a high Court-Lady, almost the highest, and who was herself only too celebrated in those years. The heroine is Princess Elizabeth of Brunswick, King's own Niece and a pretty woman ; who for four years (14th July 1765—18th April 1769) of her long life was Princess Royal of Prussia,—Wife of that tall young Gentleman, whom we used to see dancing about, whom we last saw at Schweidnitz, getting flung from his horse, on the day of Pirch's saddle there ;—but in the fourth year ceased to be so ' (for excellent reasons, on both sides), and lived thenceforth in a divorced state, at Stettin, where is laid the scene of our Anecdote. I understand it to be perfectly true ; but cannot ascertain from any of the witnesses in what year the thing happened ; or whether it was at Stettin or Berlin,—though my author has guessed, "Stettin, in the Lady's divorced state," as appears :

¹ Laveaux (2d edition), iii. 228.

² Preuss, iii. 20.

"This Princess had commissioned, direct from Lyon, a very beautiful dress ; which arrived duly, addressed to her at Stettin. As this kind of stuffs is charged with very heavy dues, the Douanier, head Customhouse Personage of the Town, had the impertinence to detain the dress till payment were made. The Princess, in a lofty indignation, sent word to this person, To bring the dress instantly, and she would pay the dues on it. He obeyed : but,"—mark the result,—“scarcely had the Princess got eye on him, when she seized her Lyon Dress ; and, giving, the Douanier a couple of good slaps on the face, ordered him out of her apartment and house.

"The Douanier, thinking himself one and somewhat, withdrew in high choler ; had a long Procès-verbal of the thing drawn out ; and sent it to the King with eloquent complaint, 'That he had been dishonoured in doing the function appointed him.' Friedrich replied as follows : 'To the Douanier at Stettin : The loss of the Excise-dues shall fall to my score ; the Dress shall remain with the Princess ; the slaps to him who has received them. As to the pretended Dishonour, I entirely relieve the complainant from that : never can the appliance of a beautiful hand dishonour the face of an Officer of Customs.—F.'"

Northern Tourists, Wraxall and others, passing that way, speak of this Princess, down to recent times, as a phenomenon of the place. Apparently a high and peremptory kind of Lady, disdaining to be bowed too low by her disgraces. She survived all her generation, and the next and the next, and indeed into our own. Died, 18th February 1840 : at the age of ninety-six. Three score and eleven years of that eclipsed Stettin Existence ; this of the Lyon gown, and caitiff of a Customhouser slapped on the face, her one adventure put on record for us !—

¹ Rodenbeck, ii. 241, 257.

² Ibid. (abridged) iii. 229.

She was signally blameable in that of the Divorce ; but not she alone, nor first of the Two. Her Crown-Prince, Friedrich Wilhelm, called afterwards, as King, "der Dicke (the Fat, or the Big)," and held in little esteem by Posterity,—a headlong, rather dark and physical kind of creature, though not ill-meaning or dishonest,—was himself a dreadful sinner in that department of things ; and had begun the bad game against his poor Cousin and Spouse ! Readers of discursive turn are perhaps acquainted with a certain "Gräfin von Lichtenau," and her Memoirs so-called :—not willingly, but driven, I fish up one specimen, and one only, from that record of human puddles and perversities :

"From the first year of our attachment," says this precious Gräfin, "I was already the confidant of his," the Prince of Prussia's, "most secret thoughts. One day" (in 1767, second year of his married life, I then fifteen, slim Daughter of a Player on the French Horn, in his Majesty's pay), "the Prince happened to be very serious ; and was owing to me with frankness that he had some wrongs towards my sex to reproach himself with,"—alas yes, some few :—"and he swore that he would never forsake me ; and that if Heaven disposed of my life before his, none but he should close my eyes. He was fingering with a penknife at the time ; he struck the point of it into the palm of his left hand, and wrote with his blood" (the unclean creature), "on a little bit of paper, the Oath which his lips had just pronounced in so solemn a tone. Vainly should I undertake to paint my emotion on this action of his ! The Prince saw what I felt ; and took advantage of it to beg that I would follow his example. I hastened to satisfy him ; and traced, as he had done, with my blood, the promise to remain his friend to the tomb, and never to forsake him. This Promise must have been found among his Papers after his death " (still in the Archives? we will hope not!)—"Both of us stood faithful to this Oath. The tie of love, it is true, we broke: but that was by mutual consent, and the better to fix ourselves in the bonds of an inviolable friendship. Other mistresses reigned over his senses; but I"—Ach Gott, no more of that.¹

The King's own account of the affair is sufficiently explicit. His words are: "Not long ago" (about two years before this of the penknife), "we mentioned the Prince of Prussia's marriage with Elizabeth of Brunswick" (his Cousin twice over, her Mother, Princess Charlotte of Prussia, being his Father's Sister and mine, and her Father his Mother's Brother,—if you like to count it). "This engagement, from which everybody expected happy consequences, did not correspond to the wishes of the Royal House." Only one Princess could be realized (subsequently Wife to the late Duke of York),—she came this same year of the penknife,—and bad outlooks for more. "The Husband, young and dissolute (sans mœurs), given up to a crapulous life, from which his relatives could not correct him, was continually committing infidelities to his Wife. The Princess, who was in the flower of her beauty, felt outraged by such neglect of her charms; her vivacity, and the good opinion she had of herself, brought her upon the thought of avenging her wrongs by retaliation. Speedily she gave into excesses, scarcely inferior to those of her Husband. Family quarrels broke out, and were soon publicly known. The antipathy that ensued took away all hope of succession" (had it been desirable in these sad circumstances!). "Prince Henri" (Junior, this hopeful Prince of Prussia's Brother), "who was gifted with all the qualities to be wished in a young man" (witness my tears for him), "had been carried off by small-pox."² The King's Brothers, Princes Henri and Ferdinand, avowed frankly that they would never consent to have, by some accidental bastard, their rights of succession to the crown carried off. In the end, there was nothing for it but proceeding to a divorce."¹

¹ Mémoires de la Comtesse de Lichtenau (à Londres, chez Colburn Libraire, Conduit-street, Bond-street, 2 tomes, small 8vo, 1809), i. 129.

² "26th May 1767," age 19 gone; Eloge of him by Friedrich ("Ma still stained with tears"), in Œuvres de Frédéric, vii. 37 et seq.

Divorce was done in a beautiful private manner ; case tried with strictly-shut doors ; all the five judges under oath to carry into the grave whatever they came to know of it : ' divorce completed, 18th April 1769' ; and, within three months, a new marriage was accomplished, Princess Frederika Louisa of Hesse-Darmstadt the happy woman. By means of whom there was duly realised a Friedrich Wilhelm, who became "King Friedrich Wilhelm III" (a much-enduring, excellent, though inarticulate man), as well as various other Princes and Princesses, in spite of interruptions from the Lichtenau Sisterhood. High-souled Elizabeth was relegated to Stettin ; her amount of Pension is not mentioned ; her Family, after the unhappy proofs communicated to them, had given their consent and sanction ;—and she stayed there, idle, or her own mistress of work, for the next seventy-one years.—Enough of her Lyon Dress, surely, and of the Excise-system altogether !—

The Neue Palais, in Sans-Souci Neighbourhood, is founded and finished (1763–1770).

If D'Alembert's Visit was the germ of the Excise-system, it will be curious to note,—and indeed whether or not, it will be chronologically serviceable to us here, and worth noting,—that there went on a small synchronous affair, still visible to everybody : namely, That in the very hours while Friedrich and D'Alembert were saluting mutually at Geldern (11th June 1763), there was laid the foundation of what they call the Neue Palais ; New Palace of Sans-Souci : ' a sumptuous Edifice, in the curious Louis-Quinze or what is called "Rococo" style of the time ; Palace never much inhabited by Friedrich or his successors, which still stands in those ornamental Potsdam regions. Why built, especially in the then down-pressed financial circumstances, some have had their difficulties to imagine. It appears, this New Palace had been determined on, before the War broke out ; and Friedrich said to himself : " We will build it now, to help the mechanical classes in Berlin,—perhaps also, in part " (think some, and why should not they, a little ?) " to show mankind that we have still ready money ; and are nothing like so ruined as they fancy."

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, vi. 23.

² Preuss, iv. 180–186.

³ Rüdtenbeck, ii. 219.

" This Neue Palais," says one recent Tourist, " is a pleasant quaint object, nowadays, to a stranger. It has the air dégagé pococurante : pleasantly fine in aspect and in posture ;—spacious expanses round it, not in a waste, but still less in a strict condition ; and (in its deserted state) has a silence, especially a total absence of needless flunkys and of gaping fellow-loungers, which is charming. Stands mute there, in its solitude, in its stately silence and negligence, like some Tadmor of the Wilderness in small. The big square of Stables, Coach-houses, near by, was locked up,—probably one sleeping groom in it. The very Custos of the grand Edifice (such the rarity of fees to him) I could not awaken without difficulty. In the gray autumn zephyrs, no sound whatever about this New Palace of King Friedrich's, except the rustle of the crisp brown leaves, and of any faded or fading memories you may have.

" I should say," continues he, " it somehow reminds you of the City of Bath. It has the cut of a battered Beau of old date ; Beau still extant, though in strangely other circumstances ; something in him of pathetic dignity in that kind. It shows excellent sound masonries ; which have an over-tendency to jerk themselves into pinnacles, curvatures and graciosities ; many statues atop,—three there are, in a kind of grouped, or partnership attitude ; ' These,' said diligent scandal, ' note them ; these mean Maria Theresa, Pompadour and Catin du Nord ' (mere Muses, I believe, or of the Nymph or Hamadryad kind, nothing of harm in them). In short, you may call it the stone Apotheosis of an old French Beau. Considerably weatherbeaten (the brown of lichen spreading visibly here and there, the firm-set ashlar telling you, ' I have stood a hundred years ') ;—Beau old and weatherbeaten, with his cocked-hat not in the fresh condition, all his gold laces tarnished ; and generally looking strange, and in a sort tragical, to find himself, fleeting creature, become a denizen of the Architectural Fixities and earnest Eternities ! ”—

From Potsdam Palace to the New Palace of Sans-Souci may be a mile distance ; flat ground, parallel to the foot of Hills ; all through arbours, parterres, water-works, and ornamental gardenings and cottagings or villa-ings,—Cottage-Villa for Lord Marischal is one of them. This mile of distance, taking the Cottage Royal of Sans-Souci on its hill-top as vertex, will be the base of an isosceles or nearly isosceles triangle, flatter than equilateral. To the Cottage Royal of Sans-Souci may be about three-quarters of a mile north-east from this New Palace, and from Potsdam Palace to it rather less. And the whole square-mile or so of space is continuously a Garden, not in the English sense, though it has its own beauties of the more artificial kind ; and, at any rate, has memories for you, and footsteps of persons still unforgotten by mankind.—Here is a Notice of Lord Marischal ; which readers will not grudge ; the chronology of the worthy man, in these his later epochs, being in so hazy a state :

Lord Marischal, we know well and Pitt knows, was in England in 1761,—ostensibly, on the Kintore Heritage ; and in part perhaps, really on that errand. But he went and came, at dates now uncertain ; was back in Spain after that, had difficult voyagings about ;¹—and did not get to rest again, in his Government of Neufchâtel, till April 1762. There is a Letter of the King's, which at least fixes that point :

“ Breslau, 10th April 1762. My nose is the most impertinent nose in the universe, mon cher Mylord ” (Queen-Dowager snuff, Spaniol from the fountain-head, of Marischal's providing ; quality exquisite, but difficult to get transmitted in the Storms of War) ; “ I am ashamed of the trouble it costs you ! I beg many pardons ;—and should be quite abashed, did I not know how you compassionate the weak points of your friends, and that, for a long time past, you have a singular indulgence for my nose. I am very glad to know you happily returned to your Government, safe at Colombier (Dove-cote) in Neufchâtel again.” This is 10th April 1762. There, as I gather, quiet in his Dove-cote, Marischal continued, though rather weary of the business, for about a year more; or till the King got home,—who delights in companionship, and is willing to let an old man demit for good.

¹ King's Letters to him, in Œuvres de Frédéric, xx. 282-285.

It was in Summer 1762 (about three months after the above Letter from the King), that Rousseau made his celebrated exodus into Neuchâtel Country, and found the old Governor so good to him,—glad to be allowed to shelter the poor skinless creature. And, mark as curious, it must have been on two of those mornings, towards the end of the Siege of Schweidnitz, when things were getting so intolerable, and at times breaking out into electricity, into “rebuke all round,” that Friedrich received that singular pair of Laconic Notes from Rousseau in Neuchâtel: forwarded, successfully, by Lord Marischal; Note First, of date, “Motier-Travers, Neuchâtel, September,” nobody can guess what day, “1762:” “I have said much ill of you, and don’t repent it. Now everybody has banished me; and it is on your threshold that I sit down. Kill me, if you have a mind!” And then (after, not death, but the gift of 100 crowns), Note Second, “October 1762:” * * “Take out of my sight that sword, which dazzles and pains me; it has only too well done its duty, while the sceptre is abandoned:” Make Peace, can’t you!’—What curious reading for a King in such posture, among the miscellaneous arrivals overnight! Above six weeks before either of these Notes, Friedrich, hearing of him from Lord Marischal, had answered: “An asylum? Yes, by all means: the unlucky cynic!” It is on September 1st that he sends, by the same channel, 100 crowns for his use, with advice to “give them in naturâ, lest he refuse otherwise;” as Friedrich knows to be possible. In words, the Rousseau Notes got nothing of Answer. “A garçon singulier,” says Friedrich: odd fellow, yes indeed, your Majesty;—and has such a pungency of flattery in him, too, presented in the way of snarl! His Majesty might take him, I suppose, with a kind of relish, like Queen-Dowager snuff.

There was still another shift of place, shift which proved temporary, in old Marischal’s life: Home to native Aberdeenshire. The two childless Brothers, Earls of Kintore, had died successively, the last of them, November 22d, 1761: title and heritage, not considerable the latter, fell duly, by what preparatives we know, to old Marischal; but his Keith kinsfolk, furthermore, would have him personally among them,—nay, after that, would have him to wed and produce new Keiths. At the age of 78; decidedly an inconvenient thing! Old Marischal left Potsdam, "August 1763,"—New-Palace scaffoldings and big stone-blocks conspicuous in those localities; pleasant D'Alembert now just about leaving in the other direction,—much to Friedrich's regret, the old Marischal especially, as is still finely evident.

¹ Œuvres complètes de Rousseau (à Genève, 1782-1789), xxxiii. 64, 65.

Friedrich to Lord Marischal (in Scotland for the last six months).

"Sans-Souci, 16th February 1764.

"I am not surprised that the Scotch fight to have you among them: and wish to have progeny of yours, and to preserve your bones. You have, in your lifetime, the lot of Homer after death: Cities arguing which is your birthplace;—I myself would dispute it with Edinburgh to possess you. If I had ships, I would make a descent on Scotland, to steal off my cher Mylord, and bring him hither. Alas! our Elbe Boats can't do it. But you give me hopes;—which I seize with avidity! I was your late Brother's friend, and had obligations to him; I am yours with heart and soul. These are my titles, these are my rights:—you shan't be forced in the matter of progeny here (faire l'étalon ici), neither priests nor attorneys shall meddle with you; you shall live here in the bosom of friendship, liberty and philosophy." Come to me! * * —F."

Old Marischal did come; and before long. I know not the precise month: but "his Villa-Cottage was built for him," the Books say, "in 1764." He had left D'Alembert just going; next year, he will find Helvetius coming. He lived here, a great treasure to Friedrich, till his death, 25th May 1778, age 92.

The New Palace was not finished till 1770;—in which year, also, Friedrich reckons that the general Problem of Repairing Prussia was victoriously over. New Palace, growing or complete, looks down on all these operations and occurrences. In its cradle, it sees D'Alembert go, Lord Marischal go; Helvetius come, Lord Marischal come; in its boyhood or maturity, the Excise, and French Rats-de-Cave, spring up; Crown Prince

¹ Letters of his to the King ("Londres, 14 Août 1763") in Œuvres de Frédéric, xx. 293.

² Œuvres de Frédéric, xx. 295.

Friedrich Wilhelm prick his hand for a fit kind of ink ; Friedrich Wilhelm's Divorced Wife give her Douanier two slaps in the face, by way of payment. Nay, the same Friedrich Wilhelm, become "Friedrich Wilhelm II., or der Dicke," died in it,—his Lichtenau and his second Wife, jewel of women, nursing him in his last sickness there.¹

The violent stress of effort for repairing Prussia, Friedrich intimates, was mostly over in 1766 : till which date specifically, and in a looser sense till 1770, that may be considered as his main business. But it was not at any time his sole business ; not latterly at all equal in interest to some others that had risen on him, as the next Chapter will now show. Here, first, is a little Fraction of Necrology, which may be worth taking with us. Readers can spread these fateful specialties over the Period in question ; and know that each of them came with a kind of knell upon Friedrich's heart, whatever he might be employed about. Hour striking after hour on the Horologe of Time ; intimating how the Afternoon wore, and that Night was coming. Various meanings there would be to Friedrich, in these footfalls of departing guests, the dear, the less dear, and the indifferent or hostile ; but each of them would mean : "Gone, then, gone ; thus we all go !"

"Obituary in Friedrich's Circle till 1771."

Of Polish Majesty's death (5th October 1763), and then (2d December following) of his Kurprinz or Successor's, with whom we dined at Moritzburg so recently, there will be mention by and by. November 28th, 1763, in the interval between these two, the wretched Brühl had died. April 14th, 1764, died the wretched Pompadour ;—"To us not known, Je ne la connais pas :"—hapless Butterfly, she had been twenty years in the winged condition ; age now forty-four : dull Louis, they say, looked out of window as her hearse departed, "froidement," without emotion of any visible kind. These little concern Friedrich or us : we will restrict ourselves to Friends.

Died in 1764. At Pisa, Algarotti (23d May 1764, age fifty-two) : with whom Friedrich has always had some correspondence hitherto (to himself interesting, though not to us), and will never henceforth have more. Friedrich raised a Monument to him; a Monument still to be seen in the Campo-Santo of Pisa: 'Hic jacet Ovidii æmulus et Newtoni discipulus;' friends have added 'Fredericus Magnus poni fecit;' and on another part of the Monument, 'Algarottus non omnis.'

¹ Died, 16th November 1797.

"—in 1765. At the age of eighty, November 18th, Gräfin Camas, 'Ma bonne Maman' (widow since 1741); excellent old Lady,—once brilliantly young, German by birth, her name Brandt;—to whom the King's Letters used to be so pretty." This same year, too, Kaiser Franz died; but him we will reserve, as not belonging to this Select List.

"—in 1766. At Nanci, 23d February, age eighty-six, King Stanislaus Leczinsky: 'his clothes caught fire' (accidental spark or sputter on some damask dressing-gown or the like); and the much-enduring innocent old soul ended painfully his Titular career.

"—in 1767. October 22d, the Grand-Duchess of Sachsen-Gotha, age fifty-seven; a sad stroke this also, among one's narrowing List of Friends.—I doubt if Friedrich ever saw this high Lady after the visit we lately witnessed. His Letters to her are still in the Archives of Gotha: not hers to him; all lost, these latter, but an accidental two, which are still beautiful in their kind."

"—in 1770. Bielfeld, the fantastic individual of old days. Had long been out of Friedrich's circle,—in Altenburg Country, I think;—without importance to Friedrich or us: the year of him will do, without search for day or month.

"—in 1771. Two heavy deaths come this year. January 28th, 1771, at Berlin, dies our valuable old friend Excellency Mitchell,—still here on the part of England, in cordial esteem as a man and companion; though as Minister, I suppose, with function more and more imaginary. This painfully ushers in the year. To usher it out, there is still worse: faithful D'Argens dies, 26th December 1771, on a visit in his native Provence,—leaving, as is still visible," a big and sad blank behind him at Potsdam." But we need not continue; at least not at present.

Long before all these Friedrich had lost friends; with a sad but quiet emotion he often alludes to this tragic fact, that all the souls he loved most are gone. His Winterfelds, his Keiths, many loved faces, the War has snatched : at Monbijou, at Baireuth, it was not War ; but they too are gone. Is the world becoming all a Mausoleum, then ; nothing of divine in it but the Tombs of vanished loved ones ? Friedrich makes no noise on such subjects : loved and unloved alike must go.

¹ Preuss, iv. 188.

² Given in Œuvres de Frédéric, xviii. 165, 256.

³ Friedrich's two Letters to the Widow (given in Œuvres de Frédéric, xix. 427-429).

We have still to mark Kaiser Franz's sudden death ; a thing politically interesting, if not otherwise. August 1765, at Innspruck, during the Marriage-festivities of his Second Son, Leopold (Duke of Florence, who afterwards, on Joseph's death, was Kaiser),—Kaiser Franz, sauntering about in the evening gala, " 18th August, about 9 p.m.," suddenly tottered, staggered as falling ; fell into Son Joseph's arms ; and was dead. Above a year before, this same Joseph, his Eldest Son, had been made King of the Romans : " elected, 26th March ; crowned, 3d April 1764 ;"—Friedrich furthering it, wishful to be friendly with his late enemies.¹

On this Innspruck Tragedy, Joseph naturally became Kaiser,—Part-Kaiser ; his Dowager-Mother, on whom alone it depends, having decided that way. The poor Lady was at first quite overwhelmed with her grief. She had the death-room of her Husband made into a Chapel ; she founded furthermore a Monastery in Innspruck, " Twelve Canonesses to pray there for the repose of Franz ;" was herself about to become Abbess there, and quit the secular world ; but in the end was got persuaded to continue, and take Son Joseph as Coadjutor.² In which capacity we shall meet the young man again.

CHAPTER III.

TROUBLES IN POLAND.

APRIL 11th, 1764, one year after his Seven-Years labour of Hercules, Friedrich made Treaty of Alliance with the new Czarina Catharine. England had deserted him ; France was his enemy, especially Pompadour and Choiseul, and refused reconciliation, though privately solicited ; he was without an Ally anywhere. The Russians had done him frightful damage in the last War, and were most of all to be dreaded in the case of any new one. The Treaty was a matter of necessity as well as choice. Agreement for mutual good neighbourhood and friendly offices ; guarantee of each other against intrusive third parties : should either get engaged in war with any neighbour, practical aid to the length of 12,000 men, or else money in lieu. Treaty was for eight years, from day of date.

¹ Rödenbeck, ii. 234.

² Hormayr, Oesterreichischer Plutarch (§ Maria Theresa), iv. (2tes Bändchen) 6-124 ; Maria Theresiens Leben, p. 80.

As Friedrich did not get into war, and Catharine did, with the Turks and certain loose Polacks, the burden of fulfilment happened to fall wholly on Friedrich ; and he was extremely punctual in performance,—eager now, and all his life after, to keep well with such a Country under such a Czarina. Which proved to be the whole rule of his policy on that Russian side. “ Good that Country cannot bring me by any quarrel with it ; evil it can, to a frightful extent, in case of my quarrelling with others ! Be wary, be punctual, magnanimously polite, with that grandiose Czarina and her huge territories and notions : ” this was Friedrich’s constant rule in public and in private. Nor is it thought his Correspondence with the Empress Catharine, when future generations see it in print, will disclose the least ground of offence to that highflying Female Potentate of the North. Nor will it ever be known what the silently observant Friedrich thought of her, except indeed what we already know, or as good as know, That he, if anybody did, saw her clearly enough for what she was ; and found good to repress into absolute zero whatever had no bearing upon business, and might by possibility give offence in that quarter. For we are an old King, and have learned by bitter experiences ! No more nicknames, biting verses, or words which a bird of the air could carry ; though this poor Lady too has her liabilities, were not we old and prudent ;—and is entirely as weak on certain points (deducting the devotions and the brandy-and-water) as some others were ! The Treaty was renewed when necessary ; and continued valid and vital in every particular, so long as Friedrich ruled.

By the end of the first eight years, by strictly following this passive rule, Friedrich, in counterbalance of his losses, unexpectedly found himself invested with a very singular bit of gain,—“unjust gain!” cried all men, making it of the nature of gain and loss to him,—which is still practically his, and which has made, and makes to this day, an immense noise in the world. Everybody knows we mean West-Prussen; Partition of Poland; bloodiest picture in the Book of Time, Sarmatia’s fall unwept without a crime;—and that we have come upon a very intricate part of our poor History.

No prudent man,—especially if to himself, as is my own poor case in regard to it, the subject have long been altogether dead and indifferent,—would wish to write of the Polish Question. For almost a hundred years the Polish Question has been very loud in the world; and ever and anon rises again into vocality among Able Editors, as a thing pretending not to be dead and buried, but capable of rising again, and setting itself right, by good effort at home and abroad. Not advisable, beyond the strict limits of compulsion, to write of it at present! The rather as the History of it, any History we have, is not an intelligible series of events, but a series of vociferous execrations, filling all Nature, with nothing left to the reader but darkness, and such remedies against despair as he himself can summon or contrive.

“Rulhière’s on that subject,” says a Note which I may cite, “is the only articulate-speaking Book to which mankind as yet can apply;”¹ and they will by no means find that a sufficient one. Rulhière’s Book has its considerable merits; but it absolutely wants those of a History; and can be recognised by no mind as an intelligible cosmic Portraiture of that chaotic Mass of Occurrences: chronology, topography, precision of detail by time and place; scene, and actors on scene, remain unintelligible. Rulhière himself knew Poland, at least had looked on it from Warsaw outwards, year after year, and knew of it what an inquiring Secretary of Legation could pick up on those terms, which perhaps, after all, is not very much. His Narrative is drowned in beautiful seas of description and reflexion; has neither dates nor references; and advances at an intolerable rate of slowness; in fact, rather turns on its axis than advances ; produces on you the effect of a melodious Sonata, not of a lucid and comfortably instructive History.

¹ Cl. Rulhière, Histoire de l’Anarchie de Pologne (Paris, 1807), 4 voll. 12mo.

"I forget for how long Rulhière had been in Poland, as Ambassador's Assistant : but the Country, the King, and leading Personages were personally known to him, more or less ; Events with all details of them were known : ' Why not write a History of the Anarchy and Wreck they fell into ? ' said the Official people to him, on his return home : ' For behoof of the Dauphin ' (who is to be Louis XVI. shortly) ; ' may not he perhaps draw profit from it ? At the top of the Universe, experience is sometimes wanted. Here are the Archives, here is Salary, here are what appliances you like to name : Write ! ' It is well known he was appointed, on a Pension of 250*l.* a-year, with access to all archives, documents, and appliances in possession of the French Government, and express charge to delineate this subject for benefit of the Dauphin's young mind. Nor can I wonder, considering everything, that the process on Rulhière's part, being so full of difficulties, was extremely deliberate ; that his Book did not grow so steadily or fast as the Dauphin did ; and that in fact the poor Dauphin never got the least benefit from it,—being guillotined, he, in 1793, and the Book intended for him never coming to light for fourteen years afterwards, it too in a posthumous and still unfinished condition.

"Rulhière has heard the voices of rumour, knows an infinitude of events that were talked of ; but has not discriminated which were the vital, which were the insignificant ; treats the vital and the insignificant alike ; seldom with satisfactory precision ; mournfully seldom giving any date, and by no chance any voucher or authority ;—and instead of practical terrestrial scene of action, with distances, milestones, definite sequence of occurrences, and of causes and effects, paints us a rosy cloudland, which, if true at all, as he well intends it to be, is little more than symbolically or allegorically so ; and can satisfy no clear-headed Dauphin or man. Rulhière strives to be authentic, too ; gives you no suspicion of his fairness. There is really fine high-coloured painting in Rulhière ; and you hope always he will let you into the secret of the matter : but the sad fact is, he never does. He merely loses himself in picturesque details, philosophic eloquences, elegancies ; takes you to a Castle of Choczim, a Monastery of Czenstochow, a Bay of Tschesme, and lets off extensive fireworks that contain little or no shot ; leads you on trackless marches, inroads or outroads, through the Lithuanian Peat-bogs, on daring adventures and hairbreadth escapes of mere Pulawski, Potocki, and the like ;—had not got to understand the matter himself, you perceive : how hopeless to make you understand it ! ”

English readers, however, have no other shift ; the rest of the Books I have seen,—Histoire des Révolutions de Pologne ;¹ Histoire des Trois Démembrements de la Pologne ;² Letters on Poland,³ and many more,—are not worth mentioning at all. Comfortable in the mad dance of these is Hermann's recent dull volume,⁴—commonplace, dull, but steady and faithful : yielding us at least dates, and an immunity from noise. By help of Hermann and the others, distilled to caput mortuum, a few dated facts (cardinal we dare not call them) may be extracted,—dimly out of these, to the meditating mind, some outline of the phenomenon may begin to become conceivable.

King of Poland dies ; and there ensue huge Anarchies in that Country.

The poor old King of Poland,—whom we saw, on that fall of the curtain at Pirna seven years ago, rush off for Warsaw with his Brühl, with expressive speed and expressive silence, and who has been waiting there ever since, sublimely confident that his powerful terrestrial friends, Austria, Russia, France, not to speak of Heaven's justice to all, would exact due penalty, of signal and tremendous nature, on the Prussian Aggressor,—has again been disappointed. The poor old Gentleman got no compensation for his manifold losses and woes at Pirna or elsewhere ; not the least mention of such a thing, on ¹ 1778 (d Warsowie, et se trouve à Paris), 2 voll. 8vo.

² Anonymous (by one Ferrand, otherwise unknown to me), Paris, 1820, 3 voll. 8vo.

³ Anonymous (by a “Reverend Mr. Lindsey,” it would seem), Letters concerning the Present State of Poland, together with &c. (London, 1773 ; 1 vol. 8vo) : of these Letters, or at least of Reverend Lindsey, Author of them, “Tutor to King Stanislaus's Nephew,” and a man of painfully loud loose tongue, there may perhaps be mention afterwards.

⁴ Hermann, Geschichte des Russischen Staats, vol. v. (already cited in regard to the Peter-Catharine tragedy) ; seems to be compiled mainly from the Saxon Archives, from Despatches written on the spot, and at the time.

the final winding-up of that War of Seven Years, in which his share had been so tragical ; no alleviation was provided for him in this world. His sorrows in Poland had been manifold ; nothing but anarchies, confusions and contradictions had been his Royal portion there : in about Forty different Diets he had tried to get some business done,—no use asking what ; for the Diets, one and all, exploded in Nie pozwalam ; and could do no business, good, bad, or indifferent, for him or anybody. An unwise, most idle Country ; following as chief employment perpetual discrepancy with its idle unwise King and self ; Russia the virtual head of it this long while, so far as it has any head.

February—August 1763, just while the Treaty of Hubertsburg was blessing everybody with the return of Peace, and for long months after Peace had returned to everybody, Polish Majesty was in sore trouble. Trouble in regard to Courland, to his poor Son Carl, who fancied himself elected, under favour and permission of the late Czarina our gracious Protectress and Ally, to the difficult post of Duke in Courland ; and had proceeded, three or four years ago, to take possession,—but was now interrupted by Russian encroachments and violences. Not at all well disposed to him, these new Peters, new Catharines. They have recalled their Bieren from Siberia ; declare that old Bieren is again Duke, or at least that young Bieren is, and not Saxon Karl at all ; and have proceeded, Czarina Catharine has, to instal him forcibly with Russian soldiers. Karl declares, “ You shall kill me before you or he get into this Palace of Mietau ! ”—and by Domestics merely, and armed private Gentlemen, he does maintain himself in said Palatial Mansion ; valiantly indignant, for about six months ; the Russian Battalions girding him on all sides, minatory more and more, but loth to begin actual bloodshed.¹ A transaction very famed in those parts, and still giving loud voice in the Polish Books, which indeed get ever noisier from this point onward, till they end in inarticulate shrieks, as we shall too well hear.

Empress Catharine, after the lapse of six months, sends an ¹ Bulhière, ii. (Livre v.) 81 et antea ; Hermann, v. 348 et seq.

Ambassador to Warsaw (Kayserling by name), who declares, in tone altogether imperative, that Czarish Majesty feels herself weary of such contumacy, weary generally of Polish Majesty's and Polish Republic's multifarious contumacies ; and, in fine, cruellest of all, that she has troops on the Frontier : that Courland is not the only place where she has troops. What a stab to the poor old man ! "Contumacies ?" Has not he been Russia's patient stepping-stone, all along ; his anarchic Poland and he accordant in that, if in nothing else ? "Let us to Saxony," decides he passionately, "and leave all this." In Saxony his poor old Queen is dead long since ; much is dead : Saxony and Life generally, what a Golgotha ! He immediately sends word to Karl : "Give up Courland ; I am going home !"—and did hastily make his packages, and bid adieu to Warsaw, and, in a few weeks after, to this anarchic world altogether. Died at Dresden, 5th October 1763.

Polish Majesty had been elected, 5th October 1733 ; died, you observe, 5th October 1763 ;—was King of Poland ("King," save the mark !) for thirty years to a day. Was elected—do readers still remember how ? Leaves a ruined Saxony lying round him ; a ruined life mutely asking him, "Couldst thou have done no better, then ?" Wretched Brühl followed him in four or five weeks. Nay, in about two months, his Son and Successor, "Friedrich Christian" (with whom we dined at Moritzburg), had followed him ;¹ leaving a small Boy, age 13, as new Kurfürst, "Friedrich August" the name of him, with guardians to manage the Minority ; especially with his Mother as chief guardian,—of whom, for two reasons, we are now to say something. Reason first is, That she is really a rather brilliant, distinguished creature, distinguished more especially in Friedrich's world ; whose Letters to her are numerous, and, in their kind, among the notablist he wrote ;—of which we would gladly give some specimen, better or worse : and reason second, That in so doing, we may contrive to look, for a moment or two, into the preliminary Polish Anarchies at first hand ; and, transiently and far off, see something of them as if with our own eyes.

¹ Prince died, 17th December (Brühl, 18th November) 1763.

Marie-Antoinc, or Marie-Antoinette, Electress of Saxony, is still a bright Lady, and among the busiest living ; now in her 36th year : "born 17th July 1724 ; second child of Kaiser Karl VII.;"—a living memento to us of those old times of trouble. Papa, when she came to him, was in his 27th year ; this was his second daughter ; three years afterwards, he had a son (born, 1727 ; died, 1777), who made the "Peace of Füssen," to Friedrich's disgust, in 1745, if readers recollect ;—and who, dying childless, will give rise to another War (the "Potato War" so-called), for Friedrich's behoof and ours. This little creature would be in her teens during that fatal Kaisership (1742–1745, her age then 18–21),—during these triumphs, flights, and furnished-lodging intricacies. Her Mamma, whom we have seen, a little fat bullet given to devotion, was four years younger than Papa. Mamma died, "11th December 1756," Germany all blazing out in War again ; she had been a Widow eleven years.

Marie-Antoine was wedded to Friedrich Christian, Saxon Kurprinz, "20th June 1747 ;" her age 23, his 25 :—Chronology itself is something, if one will attend to it, in the absence of all else ! The young pair were Cousins, their Mothers being Sisters ; Polish Majesty one's Uncle, age now 51,—who was very fond of us, poor indolent soul, and glad of our company on an afternoon, "being always in his dressing-gown by 2 o'clock." Concerning which the tongue of Court scandal was not entirely idle,—Hanbury chronicling, as we once noticed. All which I believe to be mere lying wind. The young Princess was beautiful ; extremely clever, graceful, and lively, we can still see for ourselves : no wonder poor Polish Majesty, always in his dressing-gown by 2, was charmed to have her company,—the rather as I hope she permitted him a little smoking withal.

Her Husband was crook-backed ; and, except those slight, always perfectly polite little passages, in Schmettau's Siege (1759), in the Hubertsburg Treaty affair, in the dinner at Moritzburg, I never heard much history of him. He became Elector, 5th October 1763 ; but enjoyed the dignity little more than two months. Our Princess had borne him seven children,—three boys, four girls,—the eldest about 13, a Boy, who succeeded ; the youngest a girl, hardly 3. The Boy is he who sent Gellert the caparisoned Horse, and had estafettes on the road while Gellert lay dying. This Boy lived to be 77, and saw strange things in the world ; had seen Napoleon and the French Revolution ; was the first “King of Saxony” so-called ; saw Jena, retreat of Moscow ; saw the “Battle of the Nations” (Leipzig, 15th–18th October 1813), and his great Napoleon terminate in Bankruptcy. He left no Son. A Brother, aged 72, succeeded him as King for a few years ; whom again a Brother would have succeeded, had not he (this third Brother, age now 66) renounced, in favour of his Son, the present King of Saxony. Enough, enough!—

August 28th, 1763, while afflicted Polish Majesty is making his packages at Warsaw, far away,—Marie-Antoinette, in Dresden, had sent Friedrich an Opera of her composing, just brought out by her on her Court-theatre there. Here is Friedrich’s Answer,—to what kind of Opera I know not, but to a Letter accompanying it which is extremely pretty.

Friedrich to the Electoral Princess (at Dresden).

“Potsdam, 5th September 1763.

“Madam, my Sister,—The remembrance your Royal Highness sends is the more flattering to me, as I regret infinitely not to have been spectator and hearer of the fine things” (Opera Thalestris, words and music entirely lost to us) “which I have admired for myself in the silent state.

“I wish I could send you things as pleasant out of these parts : but, Madam, I am obliged to give you a hint, which may be useful if you can have it followed. In Saxony, however, my Letters get opened ;—which obliges me to send this by a special Messenger ; and him, that he may cause no suspicion, I have charged with fruits from my garden. You will have the goodness to say” (if anybody is eavesdropping) “that you asked them of me at Moritzburg, when I was happy enough to see you there” (six months ago, coming home from the Seven-Years War). “The hint I had to give was this :

“In Petersburg people’s minds are getting angry at the stubbornness your friends show in refusing to recognize Duke Bieren” (home from Siberia, again Duke of Courland, by Russian appointment, as if Russia had that right; Polish Majesty and his Prince Karl resisting to the uttermost). "I counsel you to induce the powerful in your circle to have this condescension" (they have had it, been obliged to have it, though Friedrich does not yet know); "for it will turn out ill to them, if they persist in being obstinately stiff. It begins already to be said That there are more than a million Russian subjects at this time refugees in Poland; whom, by I forget what cartel, the Republic was bound to deliver up. Orders have been given to Detachments of Military to enter certain places, and bring away these Russians by force. In a word, you will ruin your affairs forever, unless you find means to produce a change of conduct on the part of him they complain of. Take, Madam, what I now say as a mark of the esteem and profound regard with which—"F.'

This hint, if the King knew, had been given, in a less kind shape, by Necessity itself; and had sent Polish Majesty, and his Brühls and "powerful people," bodily home, and out of that Polish-Russian welter, in a headlong and tragically passionate condition. Electoral Princess, next time she writes, is become Electress all at once.

Electress Marie-Antoine to Friedrich.

"Dresden, 5th October 1763.

"Sire,—Your Majesty has given me such assurance of your goodness and your friendship, that I will not appeal to that promise. You have assured us, too, that you would with pleasure contribute to secure Poland for us. The moment is come for accomplishing that promise. The King is dead" (died this very day; see if I lose time in sentimental lamentations!)—"with him these grievances of Russia" (our stiffness on Courland and the like) "must be extinct; the rather as we" (the now reigning) "will lend ourselves willingly to everything that can be required of us for perfect reconciliation with that Power.

"You can do all, if you will it; you can contribute to this reconciliation! You can render it favourable to us. You will give me that proof of the flattering sentiments I have been so proud of hitherto,—won't you, now? "Russia cannot disapprove the mediation you might deign to offer on that behalf;—our intentions being so honestly amicable, and all ground of controversy having died with the late King. Russia reconciled, our views on the Polish Crown might at once be declared (éclater).” Oh, do it, your Majesty ;—“my gratitude shall only end with life !—M. A.”¹

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiv. 46.

Friedrich, who is busy negotiating his Treaty with Russia (perfected 11th April next), and understands that they will mean not to have a Saxon, but to have a Piast, and perhaps dimly even what Piast (Stanislaus Poniatowski, the emeritus Lover), who will be their own, and not Saxony’s at all,—must have been a little embarrassed by such an appeal from his fair friend at this moment. “Wait a little ; don’t answer yet,” would have occurred to the common mind. But that was not Friedrich’s resource : he answered by return of post, as always in such cases ;—and in the following adroit manner brushes off, without hurt to it, with kisses to it rather, the beautiful hand that has him by the button :

To the Electress Marie Antoine (at Dresden).

“Berlin, 8th October 1763.

“Madam my Sister,—I begin by making my condolences and my congratulations to your Electoral Highness on the death of the King your Father-in-law, and on your Accession to the Electorate.

“Your Electoral Highness will remember what I wrote, not long since, on the affairs of Poland. I am afraid, Madam, that Russia will be more contrary to you than you think. M. de Woronzow” (famous Grand-Chancellor of Russia ; saved himself dexterously in the late Peter-Catharine overturn ; has since fallen into disfavour for his notions about our Gregory Orlof, and is now on his way to Italy, “for health’s sake,” in consequence), “who is just arrived here,” told me, too, of some things which raise an ill augury of this affair. If you do not disapprove of my speaking frankly to you, it seems to me that it would be suitable in you to send some discreet Diplomatist to that Court to notify the King’s death ; and you would learn by him what you have to expect from her Czarish Majesty” (the Empress, he always calls her, knowing she prefers that title). “It seems to me, Madam, that it would be precipitate procedure should I wish to engage you in an Enterprise, which appears to myself absolutely dubious (hasardée), unless approved by that Princess. As to me, Madam, I have not the ascendant there which you suppose :

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiv. 47.

² “Had his audience, 7th October” (yesterday) : Rodenbeck, ii. 224.

I act under rule of all the delicacies and discretions with a Court which separated itself from my Enemies when all Europe wished to crush me : but I am far from being able to regulate the Empress's way of thinking.

"It is the same with the quarrels about the Duke of Courland ; one cannot attempt mediation except by consent of both parties. I believe I am not mistaken in supposing that the Court of Russia does not mean to terminate that business by foreign mediation. What I have heard about it (what, however, is founded only on vague news) is, That the Empress might prevail upon herself (pourrait se résoudre) to purchase from Brühl the Principality of Zips" (Zips on the edge of Hungary ; let readers take note of that Principality, at present in the hand of Brühl,—who has much disgusted Poland by his voracity for Lands ; and is disgorging them all again, poor soul !), "to give it to Prince Karl in compensation : but that would lead to a negotiation with the Court of Vienna, which might involve the affair in other contentions.

"I conjure you, Madam, I repeat it, Be not precipitate in anything ; lest, as my fear is, you replunge Europe into the troubles it has only just escaped from ! As to me, I have found, since the Peace, so much to do within my own borders, that I have not, I assure you, had time, Madam, to think of going abroad. I confine myself to forming a thousand wishes for the prosperity of your Electoral Highness, assuring you of the high esteem with which I am,—F. "¹

After some further Letters, of eloquently pressing solicitation on the part of the Lady, and earnest advising, as well as polite fencing, on the part of Friedrich, the latter writes :

Friedrich to Electress.

"Potsdam, 3d November 1763.

"Madam my Sister,—At this moment I receive a Letter from the Empress of Russia, the contents of which do not appear to me favourable, Madam, to your hopes. She requires (exige) that I should instruct my Minister in Poland to act entirely in concert with the Count Kayserling ; and she adds these very words : 'I expect, from the friendship of your Majesty, that you will not allow a passage through your territory, nor the entry into Poland, to Saxon troops, who are to be regarded there absolutely as strangers.'

"Unless your Letters, Madam" (Madam had said that she had written to the Empress, assuring her &c.), "change the sentiments of the Empress, I do not see in what way the Elector could arrive at the throne of Poland; and consequently, whether I deferred to the wishes of the Empress in this point, or refused to do so, you would not the more become Queen; and I might commit myself against a Power which I ought to keep well with (ménager). I am persuaded, Madam, that your Electoral Highness enters into my embarrassment; and that, unless you find yourself successful in changing the Empress's own ideas on this matter, you will not require of me that I should embroil myself fruitlessly with a neighbour who deserves the greatest consideration from me.

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiv. 48.

"All this is one consequence of the course which Count Brühl induced his late Polish Majesty to take with regard to the interests of Prince Karl in Courland: and your Electoral Highness will remember, that I often represented to you the injury which would arise to him from it.

"I will wish, Madam, that other opportunities may occur, where it may be in my power to prove to your Electoral Highness the profound esteem and consideration with which I am—"—F.¹

Electress to Friedrich.

"Dresden, 11th November 1763.

"Sire,—I am not yet disheartened. I love to flatter myself with your friendship, Sire, and I will not easily renounce the hope that you will give me a real mark of it in an affair which interests me so strongly. Nobody has greater ascendancy over the mind of the Empress of Russia than your Majesty; use it, Sire, to incline it to our favour. Our obligation will be infinite." * * "Why should she be absolutely against us? What has she to fear from us? The Courland business, if that sticks with her, could be terminated in a suitable manner."—"Troops into Poland, Sire?" "My Husband so little thinks of sending troops thither, that he has given orders for the return of those already there. He does not wish the Crown except from the free suffrages of the Nation: if the Empress absolutely refuse to help him with her good offices, let her, at least, not be against him. Do try, Sire."—Friedrich answers, after four days, or by return of post—But we will give the rest in the form of Dialogue.

Friedrich (after four days). * * "If, Madam, I had

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiv. 52.

² Ibid. xxiv. 53.

Crowns to give away, I would place the first on your head, as most worthy to bear it. But I am far from such a position. I have just got out of a horrible War, which my enemies made upon me with a rage almost beyond example ; I endeavour to cultivate friendship with all my neighbours, and to get embroiled with nobody. With regard to the affairs of Poland, an Empress whom I ought to be well with, and to whom I owe great obligations, requires me to enter into her measures ; you, Madam, whom I would fain please if I could, you want me to change the sentiments of this Empress. Do but enter into my embarrassment !” * *

“According to all I hear from Russia, it appears to me that every resolution is taken there ; and that the Empress is resolved even to sustain the party of her partisans in Poland with the forces she has all in readiness at the borders. As for me, Madam, I wish, if possible, not to meddle at all with this business, which hitherto is not complicated, but which may, any day, become so by the neighbours of Poland taking a too lively part in it. Ready, otherwise, on all occasions, to give to your Electoral Highness proofs of my—”¹

Electress (after ten days). * * “Why should the Empress be so much against us? We have not deserved her hatred. On the contrary, we seek her friendship. She declares, however, that she will uphold the freedom of the Poles in the election of their King. You, Sire”—²—But we must cut short, though it lasts long months after this. Great is the Electress’s persistence,—“My poor Husband being dead, cannot our poor Boy, cannot his uncle Prince Xavier try? O Sire!” Our last word shall be this of Friedrich’s; actual Election-time now drawing nigh :

Friedrich. “I am doing like the dogs who have fought bitterly till they are worn down : I sit licking my wounds. I notice most European Powers doing the same ; too happy if, whilst Kings are being manufactured to right and left, public tranquillity is not disturbed thereby, and if every one may continue to dwell in peace beside his hearth and his household gods.”³ Adieu, bright Madam.

No reader who has made acquaintance with Polish History can well doubt but Poland was now dead or moribund, and well deserved to die. Anarchies are not permitted in this world. Under fine names, they are grateful to the Populaces, and to the Editors of Newspapers ; but to the Maker of this Universe they are eternally abhorrent ; and from the beginning have been forbidden to be. They go their course, applauded or not applauded by self and neighbours,—for what lengths of time none of us can know ; for a long term sometimes, but always for a fixed term ; and at last their day comes. Poland had got to great lengths, two centuries ago, when poor John Casimir abdicated his Crown of Poland, after a trial of twenty years, and took leave of the Republic in that remarkable Speech to the Diet of 1667.

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiv. 54: “Potsdam, 16th November 1763.”

² Ibid. p. 55: “Dresden, 26th November 1763.”

³ “Sans-Souci, 26th June 1764” (Ibid. p. 69).

This John is “Casimir V.,” last Scion of the Swedish House of Vasa,—with whom, in the Great Elector’s time, we had some slight acquaintance ; and saw at least the three-days beating he got (Warsaw, 28th–30th July 1656) from Karl Gustav of Sweden and the Great Elector,¹ ancestors respectively of Karl XII and of our present Friedrich. He is not “Casimir the Great” of Polish Kings ; but he is, in our day, Casimir the alone Remarkable. It seems to me I once had in extenso this Valedictory Speech of his ; but it has lapsed again into the general Mother of Dead Dogs, and I will not spend a week in fishing for it. The gist of the Speech, innumerable Books and Dead Dogs tell you,² is “lamentation over the Polish Anarchies,” and “a Prophecy,” which is very easily remembered. The poor old Gentleman had no doubt eaten his peck of dirt among those Polacks, and swallowed chagrins till he felt his stomach could no more, and determined to have done with it. To one’s fancy, in abridged form, the Valediction must have run essentially as follows :

“Magnanimous Polack Gentlemen, you are a glorious Republic, and have Nie pozwalam, and strange methods of business, and of behaviour to your Kings and others. We have often fought together, been beaten together, by our enemies and by ourselves ; and at last I, for my share, have enough of it. I intend for Paris ; religious-literary pursuits, and the society of Ninon de l'Enclos. I wished to say before going, that according to all record, ancient and modern, of the ways of God Almighty in this world, there was not heretofore, nor do I expect there can henceforth be, a Human Society that would stick together on those terms. Believe me, ye Polish Chivalries, without superior except in Heaven, if your glorious Republic continue to be managed in such manner, not good will come of it, but evil. The day will arrive " (this is the Prophecy, almost in ipsisimis verbis), " the day perhaps is not so far off, when this glorious Republic will get torn into shreds, hither, thither ; be stuffed into the pockets of covetous neighbours, Brandenburg, Muscovy, Austria ; and find itself reduced to zero, and abolished from the face of the world.

¹ Suprà, i. 284–286.

² Histoire des Trois Démembrements does, and many others do ;—copied in Biographie Universelle, vii. 278 (§ Casimir).

" I speak these words in sorrow of soul ; words which probably you will not believe. Which only Fate can compel you to believe, one day, if they are true words :—you think, probably, they are not ? Me, at least, or interest of mine, they do not regard. I speak them from the fulness of my heart, and on behest of friendship and conviction alone ; having the honour at this moment to bid you and your Republic a very long farewell. Good morning, for the last time ! " and so exit : to Rome (had been Cardinal once) ; to Paris and the society of Ninon's Circle, for the few years left him of life.¹

This poor John had had his bitter experiences : think only of one instance. In 1652, the incredible Law of Liberum Veto had been introduced, in spite of John and his endeavours. Liberum Veto ; the power of one man to stop the proceedings of Polish Parliament by pronouncing audibly, "Nie pozwalam, I don't permit !"—never before or since among mortals was so incredible a Law. Law standing indisputable, nevertheless, on the Polish Statute-Book for above two hundred years : like an ever-flowing fountain of Anarchy, joyful to the Polish Nation. How they got any business done at all, under such a Law ? Truly they did but little ; and for the last thirty years, as good as none. But if Polish Parliament was universally in earnest to do some business, and veto came upon it, Honourable Members, I observe, gathered passionately round the vetoing Brother ; conjured, obtested, menaced, wept, prayed ; and, if the case was too urgent and insoluble otherwise, the Nie pozwalam Gentleman still obstinate, they plunged their swords through him, and in that way brought consent. The commoner course was to dissolve and go home again, in a tempest of shrieks and curses.

¹ " Died, 16th December 1672, age 63."

The Right of Confederation, too, is very curious : do readers know it ? A free Polack gentleman, aggrieved by anything that has occurred or been enacted in his Nation, has the right of swearing, whether absolutely by himself I know not, but certainly with two or three others of like mind, that he will not accept said occurrence or enactment, and is hereby got into arms against its abettors and it. The brightest jewel in the cestus of Polish Liberty is this right of confederating ; and it has been, till of late, and will be now again practised to all lengths : right of every Polish gentleman to confederate with every other against, or for, whatsoever to them two may seem good ; and to assert their particular view of the case by fighting for it against all comers, King and Diet included. It must be owned, there never was in Nature such a Form of Government before ; such a mode of social existence, rendering "government" impossible for some generations past.

On the strength of Saxony and its resources and connexions, the two Augusts had contrived to exist with the name of Kings ; with the name, but with little or nothing more. Under this last August, as we heard, there have been about forty Diets, and in not one of them the least thing of business done ; all the forty, after trying their best, have stumbled on Nie pozwalam, and been obliged to vanish in shrieks and curses.¹ As to August the Physically Strong, such treatment had he met with,—poor August, if readers remember, had made up his mind to partition Poland ; to give away large sections of it in purchase of the consent of neighbours, and plant himself hereditarily in the central part ;—and would have done so, had not Grumkow and he drunk so deep, and death by inflammation of the foot suddenly come upon the poor man. Some partition of Poland has been more than once thought of by practical people concerned. Poland, as "a house chronically smoking through the slates," which usually brings a new European War every time it changes King, does require to be taken charge of by its neighbours.

¹ Buchholz (Preussisch-Brandenburgische Geschichte, ii. 133, 154, &c. &c.) gives various samples, and this enumeration.

Latterly, as we observed, there has been little of confederating ; indeed, for the last thirty years, as Rulhière copiously informs us, there has been no Government, consequently no mutiny needed ; little or no National business of any kind,—the Forty Diets having all gone the road we saw. Electing of the Judges,—that, says Rulhière, and wearisomely teaches by example again and ever again, has always been an interesting act, in the various Provinces of Poland ; not with the hope of getting fair or upright Judges, but Judges that will lean in the desirable direction. In a Country overrun with endless lawsuits, debts, credits, feudal intricacies, claims, liabilities, how important to get Judges with the proper bias ! And these once got, or lost till next term,—what is there to hope or to fear ? Russia does our Politics, fights her Seven-Years War across us ; and we, happy we, have no fighting ;—never till this of Courland was there the least ill-nature from Russia ! We are become latterly the peaceable stepping-stone of Russia into Europe and out of it ;—what may be called the doormat of Russia, useful to her feet, when she is about paying visits or receiving them ! That is not a glorious fact, if it be a safe and "lucky" one ; nor do the Polish Nobilities at all phrase it in that manner. But a fact it is ; which has shown itself complete in the late Czarina's and late August's time, and which had been on the growing hand ever since Peter the Great gained his Battle of Pultawa, and rose to the ascendancy, instead of Karl and Sweden.

The Poles put fine colours on all this ; and are much contented with themselves. The Russians they regard as intrinsically an inferior barbarous people ; and to this day you will hear indignant Polack Gentlemen bursting out in the same strain : "Still barbarian, sir ; no culture, no literature," —inferior because they do not make verses equal to ours! How it may be with the verses, I will not decide: but the Russians are inconceivably superior in respect that they have, to a singular degree among Nations, the gift of obeying, of being commanded. Polack Chivalry sniffs at the mention of such a gift. Polack Chivalry got sore stripes for wanting this gift. And in the end, got striped to death, and flung out of the world, for continuing blind to the want of it, and never acquiring it. Beyond all the verses in Nature, it is essential to every Chivalry and Nation and Man. “Polite Polish Society for the last thirty years has felt itself to be in a most halcyon condition,” says Rulhière:’ “given up to the agreeable, and to that only;” charming evening-parties, and a great deal of flirting; full of the benevolences, the philanthropies, the new ideas,—given up especially to the pleasing idea of “Laissez-faire, and everything will come right of itself.” “What a discovery!” said every liberal Polish mind: “for thousands of years, how people did torment themselves trying to steer the ship; never knowing that the plan was, To let go the helm, and honestly sit down to your mutual amusements and powers of pleasing!”

To this condition of beautifully phosphorescent rot-heap has Poland ripened, in the helpless reigns of those poor Augusts;—the fulness of time not now far off, one would say? It would complete the picture, could I go into the state of what is called “Religion” in Poland. Dissenterism, of various poor types, is extensive; and, over against it, is such a type of Jesuit Fanaticism as has no fellow in that time. Of which there have been truly savage and sanguinary outbreaks, from time to time; especially one at Thorn, forty years ago, which shocked Friedrich Wilhelm and the whole Protestant world.* Polish Orthodoxy, in that time, and perhaps still in ours, is a thing worth noting. A late Tourist informs me, he saw on the streets of Stettin, not long since, a drunk human creature staggering about, who seemed to be a Baltic sailor, just arrived; the dirtiest, or among the dirtiest, of mankind;

’ Rulhière, i. 216 (a noteworthy passage).

* See suprà, ii. 110, 111 (and many old Pamphlets on it).

who, as he reeled along, kept slapping his hands upon his breast, and shouting, in exultant soliloquy, "Polack, Catholik!" I am a Pole and Orthodox, ye inferior two-legged entities!— In regard to the Jesuit Fanaticisms, at Thorn and elsewhere, no blame can attach to the poor Augusts, who always leant the other way, what they durst or could. Nor is speciality of blame due to them on any score; it was "like People, like King," all along;—and they, such their luck, have lived to bring in the fulness of time.

The Saxon Electors are again aspirants for this enviable Throne. We have seen the beautiful Electress zealously soliciting Friedrich for help in that project; Friedrich, in a dexterously graceful manner, altogether declining. Hereditary Saxons are not to be the expedient this time, it would seem; a grandiose Czarina has decided otherwise. Why should not she? She and all the world are well aware, Russia has been virtual lord of Poland this long time. Credible enough that Russia intends to continue so; and also that it will be able, without very much expenditure of new contrivance for that object.

So far as can be guessed and assiduously deduced from Rulhière, with your best attention, Russian Catharine's interference seems first of all to have been grounded on the grandiose philanthropic principle. Astonishing to the liberal mind; yet to appearance true. Rulhière nowhere says so; but that is gradually one's own perception of the matter; no other refuge for you out of flat inconceivability. Philanthropic principle, we say, which the Voltaires and Sages of that Epoch are prescribing as one's duty and one's glory: "Oh ye Kings, why won't you do good to mankind, then?" Catharine, a kind of She-Louis Quatorze, was equal to such a thing. To put one's cast Lover into a throne,—poor soul, console him in that manner;—and reduce the long dissentient Country to blessed composure under him: what a thing! Foolish Poniatowski, an empty, windy creature, redolent of macassar and the finer sensibilities of the heart: him she did make King of Poland; but to reduce the long dissentient Country to composure,—that was what she could not do.

Countries in that predicament are sometimes very difficult to compose. The Czarina took, for above five years, a great deal of trouble, without losing patience. The Czarina, after every new effort, perceived with astonishment that she was further from success than ever. With astonishment ; and gradually with irritation, thickening and mounting towards indignation.

There is no reason to believe that the grandiose Woman handled, or designed to handle, a doomed Poland in the merciless feline-diabolic way set forth with wearisome loud reiteration in those distracted Books ; playing with the poor Country as cat does with mouse ; now lifting her fell paw, letting the poor mouse go loose in floods of celestial joy and hope without limit ; and always clutching the hapless creature back into the blackness of death, before eating and ending it. Reason first is, that the Czarina, as we see her elsewhere, never was in the least a Cat or a Devil, but a mere Woman ; already virtual proprietress of Poland, and needing little contrivance to keep it virtually hers. Reason second is, that she had not the gift of prophecy, and could not foreknow the Polish events of the next ten years, much less shape them out beforehand, and preside over them, like a Devil or otherwise, in the way supposed.

My own private conjecture, I confess, has rather grown to be, on much reading of those Rulhières and distracted Books, that the Czarina,—who was a grandiose creature, with considerable magnanimities, natural and acquired ; with many ostentations, some really great qualities and talents ; in effect, a kind of She-Louis Quatorze (if the reader will reflect on that Royal Gentleman, and put him into petticoats in Russia, and change his improper females for improper males),—that the Czarina, very clearly resolute to keep Poland hers, had determined with herself to do something very handsome in regard to Poland ; and to gain glory, both with the enlightened Philosophes and with her own proud heart ; by her treatment of that intricate matter. “On the one hand,” thinks she, or let us fancy she thinks, “here is Poland ; a Country fallen bedrid amid Anarchies, curable or incurable ; much tormented with religious intolerance at this time, hateful to the philosophic mind ; a hateful fanaticism growing upon it for forty years past" (though it is quite against Polish Law) ; "and the cries of oppressed Dissidents" (Dissenters, chiefly of the Protestant and of the Greek persuasion) "becoming more and more distressing to hear. And, on the other hand, here is Poniatowski who, who—!"—

Readers have not forgotten the handsome, otherwise extremely paltry, young Polack, Stanislaus Poniatowski, whom Excellency Williams took with him 8 or 9 years ago, ostensibly as "Secretary of Legation," unostensibly as something very different? Handsome Stanislaus did duly become Lover of the Grand Duchess ; and has duly, in the course of Nature, some time ago (date uncertain to me), become discarded Lover ; the question rising, What is to be done with that elegant inane creature, and his vaporous sentimentalisms and sublime sorrows and disappointments? "Let us make him King of Poland !" said the Czarina, who was always much the gentleman with her discarded Lovers (more so, I should say, than Louis Quatorze with his ;—and indeed it is computed they cost her, in direct moneys, about twenty millions sterling, —being numerous and greedy ; but never the least tiff of scolding or ill language) :—"King of Poland, with furnishings, and set him handsomely up in the world ! We will close the Dissident Business for him, cure many a curable Anarchy of Poland, to the satisfaction of Voltaire and all leading spirits of mankind. He shall have outfit of Russian troops, poor creature ; and be able to put down Anarchies, and show himself a useful and grateful Viceroy for us there. Outfit of 10,000 troops, a Wise Russian Manager : and the Question of the Dissidents to be settled as the first glory of his reign !"

Ingenuous readers are invited to try, in their diffuse vague Rulhières, and unintelligible shrieky Polish Histories, whether this notion does not rise on them as a possible human explanation, more credible than the feline-diabolic one, which needs withal such a foreknowledge, unattainable by cat or devil? Poland must not rise to be too strong a Country, and turn its back on Russia. No, truly ; nor, except by miraculous suspension of the Laws of Nature, is there danger of that. But neither need Poland lie utterly lame and prostrate, useless to Russia ; and be tortured on its sick-bed with Dissident Questions and Anarchies, curable by a strong Sovereign, of whom much is expected by Voltaire and the leading spirits of mankind.

¹ Castéra (Vie de Catherine II.) has an elaborate Appendix on this part of his subject.

What we shall have to say with perfect certainty, and what alone concerns us in our own affair, is, First, that Catharine did proceed by this method, of crowning, fitting out and otherwise setting up Stanislaus ; did attempt settlement (and at one time thought she had settled) the Dissident Question and some curable Anarchies,—but stirred up such legions of incurable, waxing on her hands, day after day, year after year, as were abundantly provoking and astonishing :—and that within the next eight years she had arrived, with Poland and her cargo of anarchies, at results which struck the whole world dumb. Dumb with astonishment, for some time ; and then into tempests of vociferation more or less delirious, which have never yet quite ended, though sinking gradually to lower and lower stages of human vocality. Fact first is abundantly manifest. Nor is fact second any longer doubtful. That King Friedrich, in regard to all this, till a real crisis elsewhere had risen, took little or no visible interest whatever ; had one unvarying course of conduct, that of punctually following Czarish Majesty in every respect ; instructing his Minister at Warsaw always to second and reinforce the Russian one, as his one rule of policy in that Country,—whose distracted procedures, imbecilities and anarchies, are, beyond this point of keeping well with a grandiose Czarina concerned in it, of no apparant practical interest to Prussia or its King.

Friedrich, for a long time, passed with the Public for contriver of the Catastrophe of Poland,—“felonious mortal,” “monster of maleficence,” and what not, in consequence. Rulhière, whose notion of him is none of the friendliest nor correctest, acquits him of this atrocity ; declares him, till the very end, mainly or altogether passive in it. Which I think is a little more than the truth,—and only a little, as perhaps may appear by and by. Beyond dispute, these Polish events did at last grow interesting enough to Prussia and its King ;—and it will be our task, sufficient in this place, to extricate and riddle out what few of these had any cardinal or notable quality, and put them down (dated, if possible and in intelligible form), as pertinent to throwing light on this distressing matter, with careful exclusion of the immense mass which can throw only darkness.

Ex-Lover Poniatowski becomes King of Poland (7th Sept. 1764), and is crowned without Loss of his Hair.

Warsaw, 7th September 1764. Stanislaus Poniatowski, by what management of an Imperial Catharine upon an anarchic Nation readers shall imagine ad libitum, was elected, what they call elected, King of Poland. Of course there had been preliminary Diets of Convocation, much dieting, demonstrating, and electing of imaginary members of Diet,—only “ten persons massacred” in the business. There was a Saxon Party ; but no counter-candidate of that or any other nation. King Friedrich, solicited by a charming Electress-Dowager, decides to remain accurately passive. Polish emissaries came entreating him. A certain Mockranowski, who had been a soldier under him (never of much mark in that capacity, though now a flamingly conspicuous “General” and Politician, in the new scene he has got into), came passionately entreating (Potsdam, Summer of 1764, is all the date), “Donnez-nous le Prince Henri, Give us Prince Henri for a King!” the sound of which almost made Friedrich turn pale: “Have you spoken or hinted of this to the Prince?” “No, your Majesty.” “Home then, instantly ; and not a whisper of it again to any mortal !”¹ which, they say, greatly irritated Prince Henri, and left a permanent sore-place in his mind, when he came to hear of it long after.

“A question rises here,” says one of my Notes, which perhaps I had better have burnt: “At or about what dates did this glorious Poniatowski become Lover of the Grand-Duchess, and then become Ex-Lover? Nobody will say ; or perhaps can ?” Would have been a small satisfaction to us ; and it is denied ! ‘Ritter Williams’ (that is, Hanbury) must have produced him at Petersburg some time in 1756 : ‘11th January 1757,’ finding it would suit, Poniatowski appeared there on his own footing as ‘Ambassador from Warsaw,’—(easy to get that kind of credential from a devoted Warsaw, if you are succeeding at the Court of Petersburg ; “Warsaw watchfully makes that the rule of distributing its honours ; and, from freezing-point upwards, is the most delicate thermometer,” says Hermann somewhere). And this is our one date, “Poniatowski in business, Spring 1757 ;” of “Poniatowski fallen bankrupt,” date is totally wanting.

¹ Bulhière, ii 268 ; Hermann, vi. 355-364.

² Preuss (iv. 12) seems to try, but does not succeed.

“Poniatowski’s age is 32 gone ;—how long out of Russia, readers have to guess. Made his first public appearance on the streets of Warsaw, in the late Election time, as a Captain of Patriot Volunteers,—‘Independence of Poland ! Shall Poland be dictated to !’ cried Stanislaus and an indignant Public at one stage of the affair. His Uncles Czartoryski were piloting him in ; and in that mad element, the cries, and shiftings of tack, had to be many.’ He is Nephew, by his mother, of these Czartoryskis ; but is not by the father of very high family. ‘Ought to be King of Poland ?’ argued some Polish Emissary at Petersburg : ‘His Grandfather was Land-steward to the Sapiehas.’ ‘And if he himself had been it !’ said the Empress, inflexible, though with a blush.—It seems the family was really good, though fallen poor ; and, since that Land-steward phasis, had bloomed well out again. His Father was conspicuous as a busy, shifting kind of man, in the Charles-Twelfth and other troubles ; had died two years ago, as ‘Castellan of Cracow ;’ always a dear friend of Stanislaus Leczinski, who gets his death two years hence” (in 1766, as we have seen).

“King Stanislaus had five Brothers : two of them dead long before this time ; a third, still alive, was Bishop of Something, Abbot of Something ; ate his revenues in peace, and demands silence from us. The other two, Casimir and Andreas, are better worth naming,—especially the Son of one of them is. Casimir, the eldest, is ‘Grand Crown-Chamberlain’ in the days now coming, is also ‘Starost of Zips’” (a Country you may note the name of!)—“and has a Son,” who is not the “remarkable one. Andreas, the second Brother (died, 1773), was in the Austrian Service, ‘Ordnance Master,’ and a man of parts and weight ;—who has been here at Warsaw, ardently helping, in the late Election time. He too had a Son (at this time a child in arms),—who is really the remarkable ‘Nephew of King Stanislaus,’ and still deserves a word from us.

¹ In Hermann, v. 362–380 (still more in Rulhière, ii. 119–289), wearisome account of every particular.

“This Nephew, bred as an Austrian soldier, like his Father, is the Joseph Poniatowski, who was very famous in the Newspapers fifty years ago. By all appearance, a man of some real patriotism, energy and worth. He had tried to believe (though, I think, never rightly able) what his omnipotent Napoleon had promised him, That extinct Poland should be resuscitated ; and he fought and strove very fiercely, his Poles and he, in that faith or half-faith. And perished, fiercely fighting for Napoleon, fiercely covering Napoleon’s retreat when his game was lost : horse and man plunged into the Elster River (Leipzig Country, October 19th, 1813, evening of the ‘Battle of the Nations’ there), and sank forever ;—and the last gleam of Poland along with him.’ Not even a momentary gleam of hope for her, in the sane or half-sane kind, since that,—though she now and then still tries it in the insane : the more to my regret, for her and others !

“Besides these three Brothers, King Stanislaus had two Sisters still living : one of them Wife of a very high Zamoiski ; the other of a ditto Branicki (pronounce Branitzki)—him whom our German Books call Kron-Grossfeldherr, ‘Grand Crown-General,’ if the Crown have any soldiers at all ; the sublime, debauched old Branicki, of whom Rulhière is continually talking, and never reports anything but futilities in a futile manner. So much is futile, and not worth reporting, in this Polish element !—King Stanislaus himself was born, 17th January 1732 ; played King of shreds and patches till 1790,—or even farther (not till 1795 did Catharine pluck the paper tabard quite off him) ; he died in Petersburg, February 11th or 12th, 1798.” After such a life !—

Stanislaus was crowned, 25th November 1764. He needs, as preliminary, to be anointed, on the bare scalp of him, with holy oil before crowning ; ought to have his head close-shaved with that view. Stanislaus, having an uncommonly fine head of hair, shuddered at the barbarous idea ; absolutely would not : whereupon delay, consultation ; and at length some artificial scalp, or second skull, of pasteboard or dyed leather, was contrived for the poor man, which comfortably took the oiling in a vicarious way, with the ambrosial locks well packed out of sight under it, and capable of flowing out again next day, as if nothing had happened.¹ Not a sublime specimen of Ornamental Human Nature, this poor Stanislaus. Ornamental wholly: the body of him, and the mind of him, got up for representation; and terribly plucked to pieces on the stage of the world. You may try to drop a tear for him, but will find mostly that you cannot.

¹ Biographie Universelle (§ Poniatowski, Joseph), xxxv. 349–359.

For several Years the Dissident Question cannot be got settled; Confederation of Radom (23d June 1767—5th March 1768) pushes it into Settlement.

For several years after this feat of the false scalp, through long volumes, wearisome even in Rulhière, there turns up nothing which can now be called memorable. The settling of the Dissident Question proves exceedingly tedious to an impatient Czarina; as to curing of the other curable Anarchies, there is absolutely nothing but a knitting up by A, with a ravelling out again by B, and no progress discernible whatever. Impatient Czarina ardently pushes on some Dissident settlement,—seconded by King Friedrich and the chief Protestant Courts, London included, and by the European leading spirits everywhere,—through endless difficulties: finds native Orthodoxy an unexpectedly stiff matter; Bishops generally having a fanaticism which is wonderful to think of, and which keeps mounting higher and higher. Till at length there will Images of the Virgin take to weeping,—as they generally do in such cases, when in the vicinity of brewhouses and conveniences;²—a Carmelite Monk go about the country working miracles; and, in short, an extremely ugly phasis of religious human nature disclose itself to the afflicted reader. King Friedrich thinks, had it not been for this Dissident Question, things would have taken their old Saxon complexion, and Poland might have rotted on as heretofore, perhaps a good while longer.

As to the knitting up and ravelling out again, which is called curing of the other anarchies, no reader can or need say any thing: it seems to be a most painful knitting up, by the Czartoryskis chiefly, then an instant ravelling out by malign

¹ Rulhière.

² Nicolai, in his Travels over Germany, doggedly undertook to overhauil one of those weeping Virgins (somewhere in Austria, I think); and found her, he says, to depend on subterranean percolation of steam from a Brewery not far off.

Opposition parties of various indistinct complexion ; the knitting, the raveling, and the malign Opposition parties, alike indistinct and without interest to mankind. A certain drunken, rather brutal Phantasm of a Prince Radzivil, who hates the Czartoryskis, and is dreadfully given to drink, to wasteful ambitions and debaucheries, figures much in these businesses ; is got banished and confiscated, by some Confederation formed ; then, by new Confederations, is recalled and reinstated,—worse if possible than ever. The thing is reality ; but it reads like a Phantasmagory produced by Lapland Witches, under presidency of Diabolus (very certainly the Devil presiding, as you see at all turns),—and is not worth understanding, were it even easy.

Much semi-intelligible, wholly forgettable stuff about King Stanislaus and his difficulties, and his duplicities and treacherous imbecilities, now of interest to no mortal. Stanislaus is at one time out with the uncles Czartoryski, at another in with these worthy gentlemen : a man not likely to cure Anarchies, unless wishing would do it. On the Dissident Question itself he needs spurring : a King of liberal ideas, yes ; but with such flames of fanaticism under the nose of him. In regard to the Dissident and all other curative processes he is languid, evasive, for moments recalcitrant to Russian suggestions : a lost imbecile,—forget him, with or without a tear. He has still a good deal of so-called gallantry on his hands : flies to his harem when outside things go contradictory.* Think of malign Journalists printing this bit of Letter at one time, to do him ill in a certain quarter : “ Oh, come to me, my Princess ! Dearer than all Empresses :—imperial charms, what were they to thine for a heart that has—” with more of the like stuff, for a Czarina’s behoof.

Winter of 1766, Imperial Majesty, whether after or before that miraculous Carmelite Monk, I do not remember, became impatient of these tedious languors and tortuosities about the Dissident Question, and gave express order, “ Settle it straightway ! ” To which end, Confederations and the other machinery were set agoing : Confederations among the Protestants and Dissidents themselves, about Thorn and such places (got up by Russian engineering), and much more extensively in the Lithuanian parts ; Confederations of great extent, imperative, minatory ; ostensibly for reinstating these poor people in their rights (which, by old Polish Law, they quite expressly were, if that were any matter), but in reality for bringing back drunken Radzivil, who has covenanted to carry that measure. And so,

* Hermann, v. 400, &c. ; Bulhière passim.

* Hermann, v. 402, &c.

June 23d, 1767, These multiplex Polish-Lithuanian Confederations, twenty-four of them in all, with their sublime marshals and officials, and above 80,000 noblemen in them, meet by deputies at Radom, a convenient little Town within wind of Warsaw (lies 60 miles to south of Warsaw); and there coalesce into one general "Confederation of Radom,"¹ with drunken Radzivil atop, who, glad to be reinstated in his ample Domains and Wine-cellars, and willing at any rate to spite the Czartoryskis and others, has pledged himself to carry that great measure in Diet, and quash any *Nie pozwalam*s and difficulties there may be. This is the once world-famous, now dimly discoverable, Confederation of Radom, which,—by preparatory declaring, under its hand and seal, That the Law of the Land must again become valid, and "Free Polacks of Dissident opinions concerning Religion (Nos dissidentès de religione)," as the old Law phrases it, shall have equal rights of citizenship,—was beautifully instrumental in achieving that bit of Human Progress, and pushing it through the Diet, and its difficulties shortly ensuing.

Not that the Diet did not need other vigorous treatment as well, the flame of fanaticism being frightfully ardent, many of the poor Bishops having run nearly frantic at this open spoliation of Mother Church, and snatching of the sword from Peter. So that Imperial Majesty had to decide on picking out a dozen, or baker's dozen, of the hottest Bishops; and carrying them quietly into Russia under lock and key, till the thing were done. Done it was, surely to the infinite relief of mankind;—I cannot say precisely on what day: October 13th–14th (locking up of the dozen Bishops), was one vital epoch of it; November 19th, 1767 (report of Committee on it, under Radzivil's and Russia's coercion), was another: first and last it took about five months baking in Diet. Diet met, Oct. 4th, 1767, Radzivil controlling as Grand-Marshal, and Russia as minatory Phantom controlling Radzivil; Diet, after adjournments, after one long adjournment, disappeared, 5th March 1768; and of work mentionable it had done this of the Dissidents only. That of contributing to "the sovereign contempt with which King Stanislaus is regarded by all ranks of men," is hardly to be called peculiar work or peculiarly mentionable.

¹ Hermann, v. 420.

At this point, to relieve the reader's mind, and, at any rate, as the date is fully come, we will introduce a small Newspaper Article from a very high hand, little guessed till long afterwards as the writer,—namely, from King Friedrich's own. It does not touch on the Dissident Question, or the Polish troubles; but does, in a back-handed way, on Prussian Rumours rising about them; and may obliquely show more of the King's feeling on that subject than we quite suppose. It seems the King had heard that the Berlin people were talking and rumouring of "a War being just at hand;" whereupon—"March 5th, 1767, in the Vossische Zeitung (Voss's Chronicle), No. 28," an inquisitive Berlin public read, as follows:

"We are advised from Potsdam, that, on the 27th of February, towards evening, the sky began to get overcast; black clouds, presaging a tempest of unexampled fury, covered all the horizon: the thunder, with its lightnings, forked bolts of amazing brilliancy, burst out; and, under its redoubled peals, there descended such a torrent of hail as within man's memory had not been seen. Of two bullocks yoked in their plough, with which a peasant was hastening home, one was struck on the head by a piece of it, and killed outright. Many of the common people were wounded in the streets; a brewer had his arm broken. Roofs are destroyed by the weight of this hail; all the windows that looked windward while it fell were broken. In the streets, hailstones were found of the size of pumpkins (citrouilles), which had not quite melted, two hours after the storm ceased. This singular phenomenon has made a very great impression. Scientific people say, the air had not buoyancy enough to support these solid masses when congealed to ice; that the small hailstones in these clouds getting so lashed about in the impetuosity of the winds, had united the more the further they fell, and had not acquired that enormous magnitude till comparatively near the earth. Whatever way it may have happened, it is certain that occurrences of that kind are rare, and almost without example."¹

Another singularity is, "Professor Johann Daniel Titius of Wittenberg," who teaches Natural Philosophy in that famous University, one may judge with what effect, wrote a Monograph on this unusual Phenomenon!²

¹ Vossische Zeitung, ubi suprà; Œuvres de Frédéric, xv. 204.

² Rödénbeck (ii. 285) gives the Title of it, "Considerations on the Potsdam Hail of Last Year (Wittenberg, 1768)."

Confederation of Bar ensues, on the per-contra Side (March 28th, 1768); and, as first Result of its Achievements (October 6th, 1768), a Turk-Russian War.

The Confederation of Radom, and its victorious Diet, had hardly begun their Song of Triumph, when there ensued on the per-contra side a flaming Confederation of Bar;—which, by successive stages, does at last burn out the Anarchies of Poland, and reduce them to ashes. Confederation of Bar; and then, as progeny for that, for and against, such a brood of Confederations, orthodox, heterodox, big, little, short-lived, long-lived, of all complexions, and degrees of noisy fury, potent, at any rate, each of them for murder and arson, within a certain radius, as the Earth never saw before. Now was the time of those inextricable marchings (as inroads and outroads) through the Lithuanian Bogs, of those death-defiant, unparalleled exploits, skirmishings, scaladings, riding by the edge of precipices, of Pulawski, Potocki, and others,—in which Rulhière loses himself and turns on his axis, amid impatient readers.

For the Russian troops (summoned by a trembling Stanislaus and his Senate, in terms of Treaty 1764), and in more languid manner, the Stanislaus soldiery, as per law of the case, proceeded to strike in,—generally, my impression was, with an eye to maintain the King's Peace and keep down murder and arson:—and sure enough, the small bodies of drilled Russians blew an infuriated orthodox Polack chivalry to right and left at a short notice; but as to the Constables' Peace or King's, made no improvement upon that, far the reverse. It is certain the Confederate chivalry were driven about, at a terrible rate,—over the Turk frontier for shelter; began to appeal to the Grand Turk, in desperate terms: "Brother of the Sun and Moon, saw you ever such a chance for finishing Russia? Polack chivalry is Orthodox, but also it is Anti-Russian!" The Turk beginning to give ear to it, made the matter pressing and serious. Here, more specifically, are some features and successive phases,—unless the reader prefer to skip.

Bar, March 1768. The Confederation of Radom, as efficient preliminary, and chief agent in that Diet of emancipation to the Dissident human mind, might long have been famous over Poland and the world; but there instantly followed as corollary to it a Confederation of Bar, which quite dimmed the fame of Radom, and indeed of all Confederations prior or posterior! As the Confederation of Bar and its Doings, or rather sufferings and tragical misdoings and undoings, still hang like fitful spectralities, or historical shadows, of a vague ghastly complexion, in the human memory, one asks at least: Since they were on this Planet, tell us where? Bar is in the Waiwodship Podol (what we call Podolia), some 400 miles south-east of Warsaw; not far from the Dniester River:—not very far from that mystery of the Dniester, the Zaporavian Cossacks,—from those rapids or cataracts (quasi-cataracts of the Dniester, with Islands in them, where those Cossack robbers live unassailable):—across the Dniester lies Turkey, and its famed Fortress of Choczim. This is a commodious station for Polish Gentlemen intending mutiny by law.

March 8th, 1768, Three short days after the Diet had done its fine feat, and retired to privacy, news come to Warsaw, That Podolia and the Southern parts are all up, confederating with the highest animation; in hot rage against such decisions of a Diet, contrary to Holy Religion and to much else; and that the said decision will have to fight for itself, now that it has done voting. This interesting news is true; and goes on intensifying and enlarging itself, one dreadful Confederation springing up, and then another and ever another, day after day; till at last we hear that on the 27th of the month, March 27th, 1768, at Bar, a little Town on the Southern or Turkish Frontier, all these more or less dreadful Confederations have met by delegates, and coalesced into one "Confederation of Bar,"—which did surely prove dreadful enough, to itself especially, in the months now ensuing!

No history of Bar Confederation shall we dream of; far be such an attempt from us. It consists of many Confederations, and out of each, pro and contra, spring many. Like the Lernean Hydra, or even Hydras in a plural condition. A many-headed dog: and how many whelps it had,—I cannot give even the cipher of them, or I would! One whelp Confederation, that of Cracow, is distinguished by having frequently or generally been "drunk;" and of course its procedures had often a vinous character.' I fancy to have read somewhere that the number of them was one hundred and twenty-five. The rumour and the furious barking of Bar and its whelps goes into all lands: such rabid loud baying at mankind and the moon ; and then, under Russia's treatment, such shrill yelping and shrieking, was not heard in the world before, though perhaps it has since.

¹ In Hermann (v. 431-448); and especially in Rulhière (ii. livre 8 et seq.), details in superabundance.

Poor Bar's exploits in the fighting way were highly considerable ; all on the same scale ; and spread over such a surface of country, mostly unknown, as renders it impossible to give them head-room, were you never so unfurnished. They can be read in eloquent Rulhière ; but by no mortal held in memory. Anarchy is not a thing to be written of : a Lernean Hydra, several Lernean Hydras, in chaotic genesis, getting their heads lopped off, and at the same time sprouting new ones in such ratio, where is the Zoologist that will give account of it ? There was not anything considerable of fighting ; but of Bullying, plundering, murdering and being murdered, a frightful amount. There are seizures of castles, convents, defensible houses ; marches at a rate like that of antelopes, through the Lithuanian parts, boggy, hungry, boundless, opening to the fancy the Infinitude of Peat in the solid and the fluid state. This, perhaps, is the finest species of feats, though they never lead to anything. There are heroes famed for these marches.

The Pulawskis, for example,—four of them, Lawyer people,—showed much activity, and a talent for impromptu soldiering, in that kind. The Magnates of the Confederation, I was surprised to learn, had all quitted it the instant it came to strokes : “ You Lawyer people, with your priests and orthodox peasantries, you do the fighting part ; ours is the consulting ! ” And except Potocki (and he worse than none), there is presently not a Magnate of them left in Poland,—the rest all gone across the Austrian Border, to Teschen, to Bilitz, a handy little town and domain in that Duchy of Teschen ; and sit there as “ Committee of Government : ” much at their ease in comparison, could they but agree among themselves, which they cannot. Bilitz is one of the many domains of Magnate Sulkowski :—do readers recollect the Sulkowski who at one time “ declared War ” on King Friedrich ; and was picked up, both War and he, so compendiously by General Goltz, and locked in Glogau to cool ? This is the same Sulkowski ; much concerned now in these matters ; a rich Magnate, glad to see his friends about him as Governing Committee ; but gets, and gives, a great deal of vexation in it, the element proving again too hot !—

I said there were four famed Pulawskis ;¹ a father, once Advocate in Warsaw, with three sons and a nephew; who, though extremely active people, could do no good whatever. The father Pulawski had the fine idea of introducing the British Constitution; clothing Poland wholly in British tailorage, and so making it a new Poland: but he never could get it done. This poor gentleman died in Turkish prison, flung into jail at Constantinople, on calumnious accusation and contrivance by a rival countryman; his sons and nephew, poor fellows, all had their fame, more or less, in the Cause of Freedom so-called; but no other profit in this world, that I could hear of. Casimir, the eldest son, went to America; died there, still in the Cause of Freedom so-called; Fort Pulawski, in the Harbour of Charlestown (which is at present, on very singular terms, reengaged in the same so-called Cause!), was named in memory of this Casimir. He had defended Czenstochow (if anybody knew what Czenstochow was, or could find it in the Polish map); and it was also he that contrived that wonderful plan of suddenly snapping up King Stanislaus from the streets of Warsaw one night,¹ and of locking him away (by no means killing him), as the source of all our woes. Oh my Pulawskis, men not without manhood, what a bedlam of a Time have you and I fallen into, and what Causes of Freedom it has got in hand!

¹ Hermann, v. 465.

Bar, a poor place, with no defences but a dry ditch and some miserable earthworks, the Confederates had not the least chance to maintain; Kaminiec, the only fortress of the Province, they never even got into, finding some fraction of royal soldiery who stood for King Stanislaus there, and who fired on the Confederates when applied to. Bar a small Russian division, with certain Stanislaus soldieries conjoined, took by capitulation; and (date not given) entered in a victorious manner. The War-Epic of the Confederates, which Rulhière sings at such length, is blank of meaning.

Of "Cloister Czenstochow," a famed feat of Pulawski's, also without result, I could not from my Rulhière discover (what was altogether an illuminative fact to me!) that the date of Czenstochow was not till 1771. A feat of "Cloister Berdiczow," almost an exact fac-simile by the same Pulawski, also resultless, I did, under Hermann's guidance, at once find;—and hope the reader will be satisfied to accept it instead: Cloister Berdiczow, which lies in the Palatinate of Kiow; and which has a miraculous Holy Virgin, not less venerated far and wide in those eastern parts, than she of Cloister Czenstochow in the western : this Cloister Berdiczow and its salutary Virgin, Pulawski (the Casimir, now of Charlestown Harbour) did defend, with about 1,000 men, in a really obstinate way. The Monastery itself had in it gifts of the faithful accumulated for ages ; and all the richest people in those Provinces, Confederate or not, had lodged their preciousities there, as in an impregnable and sure place, in those times of trouble. Intensely desirous, accordingly, the Russians were to take it, but had no cannon ; desperately resolute Pulawski and his 1,000 to defend. Pulawski and his 1,000 fired intensely, till their cannon balls were quite done ; then took to firing with iron work, and hard miscellanies of every sort, especially glad when they could get a haul of glass to load with ;—and absolutely would not yield till famine came ; though the terms offered were good,—had they been kept. So that Pulawski, it would appear, did Two Cloister Defences ? Two, each with a miraculous Holy Virgin ; an eastern, and then a westerly. This of Berdiczow, not dated to me farther, is for certain of the year 1768 ; and Pulawski, owing to famine, did yield here. In 1771, at miraculous Cloister Czenstochow, in the western parts, Pulawski did an external feat, or consented to see it done,—that of trying to snuff out poor King Stanislaus on the streets (3d November, 10 P.M., “miraculously” in vain, as most readers know),—which brought its obloquies and troubles on the Defender of Czenstochow. Obloquies and troubles : but as to surrendering Czenstochow on call of obloquy, or of famine itself, Pulawski would not, not he for his own part ; but solemnly left his men to do it, and walked away by circuitous uncertain paths, which end in Charlestown Harbour, as we have seen. Defence of Czenstochow in 1771 shall not concern us farther. Truly these two small defences of monasteries by Pulawski are almost all, I do not say of glorious, but even of creditable or human, that reward the poor wanderer in that Polish Valley of Jehoshaphat, much of it peat-country ; wherefore I have, as before, marked the approximate localities, approximate dates, for behoof of ingenious readers.

¹ "3d November, 1771."

The Russians, ever since 1764, from the beginnings of those Stanislaus times, are pledged to maintain peace in Poland ; and it is they that have to deal with this affair,—they especially, or almost wholly, poor Stanislaus having scarcely any power, military or other, and perhaps being loth withal. There was more of investigating and parleying, bargaining and intriguing, than of fighting, on Stanislaus's part. “June 11th, 1768," says a Saxon Note from Warsaw, "Mokranowski, Stanislaus's General" (the same that was with Friedrich), "has been sent down to Bar to look into those Confederates. Mokranowski does not think there are above 8,000 of them; about 3,000 have got their death from Russian castigation. The 8,000 might be treated with, only Russians are so dreadfully severe, especially so intent on wringing money from them. Confederates have been complaining to the Turk; Turk ambiguous; gives them no definite ground of hope. 'What, then, is your hope?' I inquired. 'Little or none, except in Heaven,' several answered: 'it is for religion and our liberty;' religion cut to pieces by this Dissident Toleration-blasphemy; liberty ditto by the Russian guarantee of peace among us: 'what can we do but trust in God and our own despair?'" "Prave words, Ancient Pistol,"—but much destitute of sense, and not to be realised in present circumstances. Here is something much more critical:

June—July 1768. "The peasants in the Southern regions, Palatinates Podol, Kiow, Braclaw, called Ukraine or Border-Country' by the Poles, are mostly of Greek and other schismatic creeds. Their Lords are of an orthodox religion, and not distinguished by mild treatment of such Peasantry, upon whom civil war and plunder have been latterly a sore visitation. To complete the matter, the Confederates in certain quarters, blown upon by fanatical priests, set about converting these poor peasants, or forcing them, at the point of the bayonet, to swear that they adopt the 'Greek united rite,' which I suppose to be a kind of halfway house towards perfect orthodoxy. In one Village, which was getting converted in this manner, the military party seemed to be small; the Village boiled over upon it; trampled orthodoxy and military both under foot, in a violent and sanguinary manner; and was extremely frightened when it had done. Extremely frightened, not the Village only, but the Schismatic mind generally in those parts, dreading vengeance for such a paroxysm. But the atrocious Russians whispered them, 'We are here to protect you in your religions and rights, in your poor consciences and skins.' Upon which hint of the atrocious Russians, the schismatic mind and population one and all rose; and, 'with the cannibal's ferocity, gave way to their appetite for plunder!' * * *

"Nay, the Russian Government" (certain Russian Officials hard pressed) "had invited the Zaporavian Cossacks to step over from their Islands in the Dniester, and assist in defending their Religion" (true Greek, of course); "who at once did so; and not only extinguished the last glimmer of Confederation there, but overwhelmed the Country, thousands on thousands of them, attended by revolted peasants,—say a 20,000 of peasants under command of these Zaporavians,—who went about plundering and burning. That they plundered the Jew pothouses of their brandy, and drank it, was a small matter. Very furious upon Jews, upon Noblemen, Landlords, upon Catholic Priests. 'On one tree' (tree should have been noted) 'was found hanged a specimen of each of those classes, with a Dog adjoined, as fit company.' In one little Town, Town of Human" (so-called in that foreign dialect), "getting some provocation or other, they set to massacring; and if brandy were plentiful, we can suppose they made short work. By the lowest computation the number of slain Jews and Catholics amounted to 10,000 odd"—Rulhière says '50,000, by some accounts 200,000.'" This I guess to have been at its height about the end of June; this leads direct to the Catastrophe, as will presently be seen.

¹ "Essen's Report, 11th June 1768" (in Hermann, v. 441).

Foreign States don't seem to pay much attention,—indeed, what sane person would like to interfere, or hope to do it with profit? France, Austria, both wish well to Poland, at least ill to Russia; Choiseul has no finance, can do nothing but intrigue, and stir up trouble everywhere: a devout Kaiserin goes with Holy Church, and disapproves of these Dissident Tolerations: it is remarked that all through 1768 the Confederates of Bar are permitted to retire over the Austrian Frontier into Austrian Silesia, and find themselves there in safety. Permitted to buy arms, to make preparations, issue orders: at Sulkowski's Bilitz, in the Duchy of Teschen, supreme Managing Committee sits there; no Kaunitz or Official person meddling with it. About the beginning of next year (1769), it is, ostensibly, a little discountenanced; and obliged to go to Eperjes, on the Hungarian Frontier* (as a more decent, or less conspicuous place),—such trouble now rising; a Turk War having broken out, momentous not to the Confederation alone. March 1769, the ever-intriguing Choiseul,—fancy with what rapturous effect,—had sent some kind of Agent or Visitor to Teschen; Vergennes in Turkey, from the beginning of these things, has been plying night and day his diplomatic bellows upon every live-coal ("I who myself kindled this Turk-War!" brags he afterwards); not till next year (1770) did Choiseul send his Dumouriez to the Bilitz neighbourhoods; not till next again, when Choiseul was himself out, did his Vioménil come: neither of whom, by their own head alone, without funds, without troops, could do other than with fine effort make bad worse.

¹ Hermann, v. 444: Rulhière, iii. 93.

² See Busching: for Eperjes, ii. 1427; for Bilitz, viii. 885.

It is needless continuing such a subject. Here is one glimpse two years later, and it shall be our last: "Near Lublin, 25th September, 1770. It is frightful, all this that is passing in these parts,—about the Town of Labun, for example. The dead bodies remain without burial; they are devoured by the dogs and the pigs." * * "Everywhere reigns Pestilence; nor do we fear contagion so much as famine. Offer 100 ducats for a fowl or for a bit of bread, I swear you won't get it. General von Essen" (Russian, we will hope) "has had to escape from Laticzew, then from" some other place, "Pestilence chasing him everywhere."

To apply to the Turks,—afflicted Polish Patriots prostrating themselves with the hope of despair, "Save us, your sublime Clemency; throw a ray of pity on us, Brother of the Sun and Moon: oh, chastise our diabolic oppressors;"—this was one of the first resources of the Bar Confederates. The Turks did give ear; not inattentive, though pretending to be rather deaf. M. de Vergennes,—of whose "diplomatic bellows" we just heard (in fact, for diligence in this Turk element, in this young time, the like of him was seldom seen; we knew him long afterwards as a diligent old gentleman, in French Revolution days),—M. de Vergennes zealously supports; zealous to let loose the Turks upon Anti-French parties. The Turks seem to wag their heads, for some time; and their responses are ambiguous. For some time, not for long. Here, fast enough, comes, in disguised shape, the Catastrophe itself, ye poor plaintive Poles!

July—October 1768. Those Zaporavian and other Cossacks, with 20,000 peasants plundering about on both sides of the Dniester, had set fire to the little Town of Balta, which is on the south side, and belongs to the Turks : a very grave accident, think all political people, think especially the Foreign Excellencies at Warsaw, when news of it arrives. Burning of Balta, not to be quenched by the amplest Russian apologies, proved a live-coal at Constantinople ; and Vergennes says, he set population and Divan on fire by it : a proof that the population and Divan had already been in a very inflammable state. Not a wise Divan, though a zealous. Plenty of fury in these people ; but a sad deficiency of every other faculty. They made haste, in their hot humour, to declare War (6th October 1768) ;¹ not considering much how they would carry it on. Declared themselves in late Autumn,—as if to give the Russians ample time for preparing ; those poor Turks themselves being as yet ready with nothing, and even the season for field-operations being over.

¹ Thrown out, "2d December 1770,"—by Louis's new Pompadour.

² Hermann, v. 469–471; in Rulhière (iv. 241–289), account of Dumouriez and his fencings and spyings, still more of Vioménil, who had "French Volunteers," and did some bits of real fighting on the small scale.

King Friedrich, who has still a Minister at the Porte, endeavoured to dissuade his old Turk friends, in this rash crisis ; but to no purpose ; they would listen to nothing but Vergennes and their own fury. Friedrich finds this War a very mad one on the part of his old Turk friends ; their promptitude to go into it (he has known them backward enough when their chances were better !), and their way of carrying it on, are alike surprising to him. He says : “ Catharine’s Generals were unacquainted with the first elements of Castrametation and Tactic ; but the Generals of the Sultan had a still more prodigious depth of ignorance ; so that to form a correct idea of this War, you must figure a set of purblind people, who, by constantly beating a set of altogether blind, end by gaining over them a complete mastery.”² This, as Friedrich knows, is what Austria cannot suffer ; this is what will involve Austria and Russia, and Friedrich along with them, in—Friedrich, as the matter gradually unfolds itself, shudders to think what. The beginnings of this War were perhaps almost comical to the old Soldier-King ; but as it gradually developed itself into complete shattering to pieces of the stupid Blind by the ambitious Purblind, he grew abundantly serious upon it.

It is but six months since Polish Patriotism, so effulgent to its own eyes in Orthodoxy, in Love of glorious Liberty, confederated at Bar, and got into that extraordinary whirlpool, or cesspool, of miseries and deliriums we have been looking at ; and now it has issued on a broad highway of progress,—broad and precipitous,—and will rapidly arrive at the goal set before it. All was so rapid, on the Polish and on the Turkish part. The blind Turks, out of mere fanaticism and heat of humour, have rushed into this adventure ;—and go rushing forward into a series of chaotic platitudes on the huge scale, and mere tragical disasters, year after year, which would have been comical, had they not been so hideous and sanguinary : constant and enormous blunders on the Turk part, issuing in disasters of like magnitude ; which in the course of Two Campaigns had quite finished off their Polish friends, in a very unexpected way ; and had like to have finished themselves off, had not drowned Poland served as a stepping-stone.

¹ Hermann, v. 608-11.

² Œuvres de Frédéric, vi. 28-34.

Not till March 26th, 1769, six months after declaring in such haste, did the blind Turks “ display their Banner of Mahomet,” that is, begin in earnest to assemble and make ready. Nor were the Russians shiningly strategic, though sooner in the field,—a Prince Galitzin commanding them (an extremely purblind person) ; till replaced by Romanzow, our old Colberg acquaintance, who saw considerably better. Galitzin, early in the season, made a rush on Choczim (Chotzim), the first Turk Fort beyond the Dniester ; and altogether failed,—not by Turk prowess, but by his own purblind mal-arrangements (want of ammunition, want of bread, or I will forget what) ;—which occasioned mighty grumblings in Russia : till in a month or two, by favour of Fortune and blindness of the Turk, matters had come well round again ; and Galitzin, walking up to Choczim the second time, found there was not a Turk in the place, and that Choczim was now his on those uncommonly easy terms !

Instead of farther details on such a War,—the shadow or reflex of which, as mirrored in the Austrian mind, has an importance to Friedrich and us ; but the self or substance of which has otherwise little or none,—we will close here with a bit of Russian satire on it, which is still worth reading. The date is evidently Spring 1769; the scene what we are now treating of: Galitzin obliged to fall back from Choczim; great rumour—"What a Galitzin; what a Turk War his, in contrast to the last we had!"—no Romanzow yet appointed in his room. And here is a small Manuscript, which was then circulating fresh and new in Russian Society; and has since gone over all the world (though mostly in an uncertain condition, in old Jest-Books and the like), as a genuine bit of caviare from those Northern parts:

Manuscript circulating in Russian Society. "Galitzin, much grieved about Choczim, could not sleep; and, wandering about in his tent, overheard, one night, a common soldier recounting his dream to the sentry outside the door.

"'A curious dream,' said the soldier: 'I dreamt I was in a battle; that I got my head cut off; that I died; and, of course, went to Heaven. I knocked at the door: Peter came with a bunch of Keys; and made such rattling that he awoke God; who started up in haste, asking, "What is the matter?" "Why," says Peter, "there is a great War on earth between the Russians and the Turks." "And who commands my Russians?" said the Supreme Being. "Count Münnich," answered Peter. "Very well; I may go to sleep again."—But this was not the end of my dream,' continued the soldier; 'I fell asleep and dreamt again, the very same as before, except that the War was not Count Münnich's, but the one we are now in. Accordingly, when God asked, "Who commands my Russians?" Peter answered, "Prince Galitzin." "Galitzin? Then, get me my boots!" said the '(Russian) 'Supreme Being.'"

¹ Turk War of 1736-1739, under Münnich (suprà, iii. 169-216).

² W. Richardson (then at Petersburg, Tutor to Excellency Cathcart's Children; afterwards Professor at Glasgow, and a man of some reputation in his old age), Anecdotes of the Russian Empire, in a Series of Letters written a few Years ago from St. Petersburg (London, 1784), p. 110: date of this Letter is "17th October 1769."

CHAPTER IV.

PARTITION OF POLAND.

THESE Polish phenomena were beginning to awaken a good deal of attention, not all of it pleasant, on the part of Friedrich. From the first he had, as usual, been a most clear-eyed observer of everything; and found the business, as appears, not of tragical nature, but of expensive-farcical, capable to shake the diaphragm rather than touch the heart of a reflective onlooker. He has a considerable Poem on it,—War of the Confederates by title (in the old style of the Palladion, imitating an unattainable Jeanne d'Arc),—considerable Poem, now forming itself at leisure in his thoughts,¹ which decidedly takes that turn; and laughs quite loud at the rabid fanaticisms, blustering inanities and imbecilities of these noisy unfortunate neighbours:—old unpleasant style of the Palladion and Pucelle; but much better worth reading; having a great deal of sharp sense in its laughing guise, and more of real Historical Discernment than you will find in any other Book on that delirious subject.

Much a laughing-stock to this King hitherto, such a “War of the Confederates,”—consisting of the noisiest, emptiest bedlam tumults, seasoned by a proportion of homicide, and a great deal of battery and arson. But now, with a Russian-Turk War springing from it, or already sprung, there are quite serious aspects rising amid the laughable. By Treaty, this War is to cost the King either a 12,000 of Auxiliaries to the Czarina, or a 72,000*l.*, (480,000 thalers) annually;²—which latter he prefers to pay her, as the alternative: not an agreeable feature at all; but by no means the worst feature. Suppose it lead to Russian conquests on the Turk, to Austrian complicacies, to one knows not what, and kindle the world round one again! In short, we can believe Friedrich was very willing to stand well with next-door neighbours at present, and be civil to Austria and its young Kaiser's civilities.

¹ “La Guerre des Confédérés” (Œuvres, xiv. 183 et seq.), “finished in November 1771.”

² Œuvres de Frédéric, vi. 13.

First Interview between Friedrich and Kaiser Joseph (Neisse, 25-28th August 1769).

In 1766, the young Kaiser, who has charge of the Military Department, and of little else in the Government, and is already a great traveller, and enthusiastic soldier, made a pilgrimage over the Bohemian and Saxon Battlefields of the Seven-Years War. On some of them, whether on all I do not know, he set up memorial stones; one of which you still see on the field of Lobositz;—of another on Prag field, and of reverent salutation by Artillery to the memory of Schwerin there, we heard long ago. Coming to Torgau on this errand, the Kaiser, through his Berlin Minister, had signified his "particular desire to make acquaintance with the King in returning;" to which the King was ready with the readiest;—only that Kaunitz and the Kaiserinn, in the interim, judged it improper, and stopped it. "The reported Interview is not to take place," Friedrich warns the Newspapers; "having been given up, though only from courtesy, on some points of ceremonial."¹

The young Kaiser felt a little huffed; and signified to Friedrich that he would find a time to make good this bit of uncivility, which his pedagogues had forced upon him. And now, after three years, August 1769, on occasion of the Silesian Reviews, the Kaiser is to come across from his Bohemian businesses, and actually visit him: Interview to be at Neisse, 25th August 1769, for three days. Of course the King was punctual, everybody was punctual, glad and cordial after a sort,—no ceremony, the Kaiser, officially incognito, is a mere Graf von Falkenstein, come to see his Majesty's Reviews. There came with him four or five Generals, Loudon one of them; Lacy had preceded: Friedrich is in the Palace of the place, ready and expectant. With Friedrich are: Prince Henri;

¹ "Friedrich to One of his Foreign Ambassadors" (the common way of announcing in Newspapers): Preuss, iv. 22 n.

Prince of Prussia; Margraf of Anspach, Friedrich's Nephew (Lady Craven's Margraf, the one remnant now left there); and some Generals and Military functionaries, Seidlitz the notablist figure of these. And so, Friday, August 25th, shortly after noon—But the following Two Letters, by an Eyewitness, will be preferable; and indeed are the only real Narrative that can be given:

No. 1. Engineer Le Febvre to Perpetual Secretary Formey (at Berlin).

“Neisse, 26th” (partly 25th) “August 1769.

“My most worthy Friend,—I make haste to inform you of the Kaiser's arrival here at Neisse, this day, 25th August 1769, at one in the afternoon. The King had spent the morning in a proof Manœuvre, making rehearsal of the Manœuvre that was to be. When the Kaiser was reported just coming, the King went to the window of the grand Episcopal Saloon, and seeing him alight from his carriage, turned round and said, ‘Je l'ai vu (I have seen him).’ His Majesty then went to receive him on the grand staircase” (had hardly descended three or four steps), “where they embraced; and then his Majesty led by the hand his august Guest into the Apartments designed for him, which were all standing open and ready,”—which, however, the august Guest will not occupy except with a grateful imagination, being for the present incognito, mere Graf von Falkenstein, and judging that The Three-Kings Inn will be suitable.

“Arrived in the Apartments, they embraced anew; and sat talking together for an hour and half.”—

(The talk, unknown to Le Febvre, began in this strain. Kaiser: “Now are my wishes fulfilled, since I have the honour to embrace the greatest of Kings and Soldiers.” King: “I look upon this day as the fairest of my life; for it will become the epoch of uniting Two Houses which have been enemies too long, and whose mutual interests require that they should strengthen, not weaken one another.” Kaiser: “For Austria there is no Silesia farther.”¹ Talk, it appears, lasted an hour and half.)

¹ Preuss, iv. 23; Œuvres de Frédéric, vi. 25, 26.

—“The Kaiser” (continues our Engineer) “had brought with him the Prince of Sachsen-Teschen” (his august Brother-in-law, Duke of Teschen, son of the late Polish Majesty of famous memory) : “afterwards there came Feldmarschall Lacy, Graf von Dietrichstein, General von Loudon,” and three others of no account to us. “At the King’s table were the Kaiser, the Prince of Prussia” (dissolute young Heir-Apparent, of the polygamous tendency), “Prince Henri, the Margraf of Anspach” (King’s Nephew, unfortunate Lady-Craven Margraf, ultimately of Hammersmith vicinity) ; “the above Generals of the Austrian suite, and Generals Seidlitz and Tauentzien. The rest of the Court was at two other tables.” Of the dinner itself an Outside Individual will say nothing.

“The Kaiser, having expressly requested the King to let him lodge in an inn (Three Kings), under the name of Graf von Falkenstein, would not go into the carriage which had stood expressly ready to conduct him thither. He preferred walking on foot” (the loftily scornful Incognito) “in spite of the rain ; it was like a lieutenant of infantry stepping out of his quarters. Some moments after, the King went to visit him ; and they remained together from 5 in the evening till 8. It was thought they would be present (assister) at a Comic Opera which was to be played : but after waiting till 7 o’clock, the people received orders to go on with the Piece ;”—both Majesties did afterwards look in ; but finding it bad, soon went their way again. (Major Le Febvre stops writing for the night.)

“This morning, 26th, the Manœuvre” (rehearsed yesterday) “has been performed before both their Majesties : the troops, by way of finish, filing past them in the highest order. The Kaiser accompanied the King to his abode ; after which he returned to his own. This is all the news I have to-day : the sequel by next Post” (apparently a week hence). “I am, and shall ever be,—your true Friend, LE FEBVRE.”

No. 2. Same to Same.

“Neisse, 2d September 1760.

“Monsieur and dearest Friend,—We had, as you heard, our first Manœuvre on Saturday 26th, in presence of the Kaiser and the King, and of the whole Court of each. That evening there was Opera ; which their Majesties honoured by attending. Sunday was our Second Manœuvre ; Operette in the evening. Monday 28th, was our last Manœuvre ; at the end of which the two Majesties, without alighting from horseback, embraced each other; and parted, protesting mutually the most constant and inviolable friendship. One took the road for Breslau; the other that of Königsgrätz. All the time the Kaiser was here, they have been continually talking together, and exhibiting the tenderest friendship,—from which I cannot but think there will benefit result.

“I am almost in the mind of coming to pass this Winter at Berlin; that I may have the pleasure of embracing you,—perhaps as cordially as King and Kaiser here. I am, and shall always be, with all my heart,—your very good Friend,

“LE FEBVRE.”¹

The Le Febvre that writes here is the same who was set to manage the last Siege of Schweidnitz, by Globes of Compression and other fine inventions; and almost went out of his wits because he could not do it. An expert ingenious creature; skilful as an engineer; had been brought into Friedrich's service by the late Balbi, during Balbi's ascendancy (which ended at Olmütz long ago). At Schweidnitz, and often elsewhere, Friedrich, who had an esteem for poor Le Febvre, was good to him, and treated his excitabilities with a soft hand, not a rough. Once at Neisse (1771, second year after these Letters), on looking round at the works done since last review, in sight of all the Garrison he embraced Le Febvre, while commending his excellent performance; which filled the poor soul with a now unimaginable joy.

“Hélas,” says Formey, “the poor Gentleman wrote to me of his endless satisfaction; and how he hoped to get through his building, and retire on half pay this very season, thenceforth to belong to the Academy and me; he had been Member for twenty years past.” With this view, thinks Formey, he most likely hastened on his buildings too fast: certain it is, a barrack he was building tumbled suddenly, and some workmen perished in the ruins. “Enemies at Court suggested,” or the accident itself suggested without any enemy, “has not he been playing false, using cheap bad materials?”—and Friedrich ordered him arrest in his own Apartments, till the question were investigated. Excitable Le Febvre was like to lose his wits, almost to leap out of his skin. “One evening at supper, he managed to smuggle away a knife; and in the course of the night, gave himself sixteen stabs with it; which at length sufficed. The King said, 'He has used himself worse than I should have done;' and was very sorry." Of Le Febvre's scientific structures, globes of compression and the rest, I know not whether anything is left; the above Two Notes, thrown off to Formey, were accidentally a hit, and, in the great blank, may last a long while.

¹ Formey, Souvenirs d'un Citoyen, ii. 145–148.

The King found this young Kaiser a very pretty man; and could have liked him considerably, had their mutual positions permitted. "He had a frankness of manner, which seemed natural to him," says the King; "in his amiable character, gaiety and great vivacity were prominent features." By accidental chinks, however, one saw "an ambition beyond measure" burning in the interior of this young man,¹—let an old King be wary. A three days, clearly, to be marked in chalk; radiant outwardly to both; to a certain depth, sincere; and uncommonly pleasant for the time. King and Kaiser were seen walking about arm in arm. At one of the Reviews a Note was brought to Friedrich: he read it, a Note from her Imperial Majesty; and handing it to Kaiser Joseph, kissed it first. At parting, he had given Joseph, by way of keepsake, a copy of Maréchal de Saxe's Réveries (a strange Military Farago, dictated, I should think, under opium²): this Book lay continually thereafter on the Kaiser's night-table; and was found there at his death, Twenty-one years hence,—not a page of it read, the leaves all sticking together under their bright gilding.³

It was long believed, by persons capable of seeing into mill-stones, that, under cover of this Neisse Interview, there were important Political negotiations and consultations carried on;—that here, and in a Second Interview or Return-Visit, of which presently, lay the real foundation of the Polish Catastrophe. What of Political passed at the Second Interview readers shall see for themselves, from an excellent Authority. As to what passed at the present ("mutual word-of-honour : should England and France quarrel, we will stand neutral"'), it is too insignificant for being shown to readers. Dialogues there were, delicately holding wide of the mark, and at length coming close enough ; but, at neither the one Interview nor the other, was Poland at all a party concerned,—though, beyond doubt, the Turk War was ; silently this first time, and with clear vocality on the second occasion.

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric (in Mémoires de 1763 jusqu'à 1775, a chapter which yields the briefest, and the one completely intelligible account we yet have of those affairs), vi. 25.

² Mes Réveries; Ouvrage Posthume, par," &c. (2 voll. 4to: Amsterdam et Leipzig, 1757).

³ Preuss, iv. 24 n.

In spite of Galitzin's blunders, the Turk War is going on at a fine rate in these months ; Turks, by the hundred thousand getting scattered in panic rout :—but we will say nothing of it just yet. Polish Confederation, horror-struck, as may be imagined, at its auxiliary Brother of the Sun and Moon and his performances,—is weltering in violently impotent spasms into deeper and ever deeper wretchedness, Friedrich sometimes thinking of a Burlesque Poem on the subject ;—though the Russian successes, and the Austrian grudgings and gloomings, are rising on him as a very serious consideration. "Is there no method, then, of allowing Russia to prosecute its Turk War in spite of Austria and its umbrages?" thinks Friedrich sometimes, in his anxieties about Peace in Europe :—"If the Ukraine, and its meal for the Armies, were but Russia's ! At present, Austria can strike in there, cut off the provisions, and at once put a spoke in Russia's wheel." Friedrich tells us "he (on," the King himself, what I do not find in any other Book) "sent to Petersburg, under the name of Count Lynar, the seraphic Danish Gentleman, who, in 1757, had brought about the Convention of Kloster-Zeven, a Project, or Sketch of Plan, for Partitioning certain Provinces of Poland, in that view ;"—the Lynar opining, so far as I can see, somewhat as follows : "Russia to lay hold of the essential bit of Polish Territory for provisioning itself against the Turk, and allow to Austria and Prussia certain other bits ; which would content everybody, and enable Russia and Christendom to exclude and suppress ad libitum that abominable mass of Mahometan Sensualism, Darkness and Fanaticism from the fairest part of God's Creation." An excellent Project, though not successful? "To which Petersburg, intoxicated with its own outlooks on Turkey, paid not the least attention," says the King.¹ He gives no date to this curious statement; nor does anybody else mention it at all; but we may fancy it to have been of Winter 1769-1770,—and leave it with the curious, or the idly curious, since nothing came of it now or afterwards.

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, ubi supra.

Potsdam, 20th-29th October 1769. Only two months after Neisse, what kindles Potsdam into sudden splendour, Electress Marie-Antoine makes a Visit of nine days to the King. "In July last," says a certain Note of ours, "the Electress was invited to Berlin, to a Wedding; 'would have been delighted to come, but letter of invitation arrived too late. Will, however, not give up the plan of seeing the great Friedrich.' Comes to Potsdam, 20th-29th October. Stays nine days; much delighted, both, with the visit. 'Magnificent palaces, pleasant gardens, ravishing concerts, charming Princes and Princesses: the pleasantest nine days I ever had in my life,' says the Electress. Friedrich grants, to her intercession, pardon for some culprit. 'Diva Antonia,' he calls her henceforth for some time; she him, 'Plus grand des mortels,' 'Salomon du Nord,' and the like names.' Next year, too (September 26th—October 5th, 1770), the bright Lady made a second visit; 'no third,—the times growing too political, perhaps; the times not suiting. The Correspondence continues to the end; and is really pretty. And would be instructive withal, were it well edited. For example,—if we might look backwards, and shoot a momentary spark into the vacant darkness of the Past,—Friedrich wrote (the year before this):

Potsdam, 3d May 1768 * * "Jesuits have got all cut adrift: A dim rumour spreads that his Holiness will not rest with that first anathema, but that a fulminating Bull is coming out against the Most Christian, the Most Catholic and the Most Faithful. If that be so, my notion is, Madam, that the Holy Father, to fill his table, will admit the Defender of the Faith" (poor George III.) "and your Servant; for it does not suit a Pope to sit solitary." * *

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, vi. 28.

² Ibid. (Correspondence avec l'Electrice Marie-Antoine), xxiv. 179-186.

³ Rüdtenbeck, iii. 24.

"A pity for the human race, Madam, that men cannot be tranquil,—but they never and nowhere can! Not even the little Town of Neufchâtel but has had its troubles: your Royal Highness will be astonished to learn how. A Parson there" (this was above seven years ago, in old Marischal's reign¹) "had set forth in a sermon, That considering the immense mercy of God, the Pains of Hell could not last forever. The Synod shouted murder at such scandal; and has been struggling, ever since, to get the Parson exterminated. The affair was of my jurisdiction; for your Royal Highness must know that I am Pope in that Country;—here is my decision: Let the parsons who make for themselves a cruel and barbarous God, be eternally damned, as they desire, and deserve; and let those parsons, who conceive God gentle and merciful, enjoy the plenitude of his mercy! However, Madam, my sentence has failed to calm the minds; the schism continues; and the number of the damnatory theologians prevails over the others."—Or again:

Potsdam, 1st December 1766. "At present I have with me my Niece" (Sister's Daughter, of Schwedt), "the Duchess of Würtemberg; who remembers with pleasure to have had the happiness of seeing your Royal Highness in former times. She is very unhappy and much to be pitied; her Husband" (Eugen of Würtemberg, whom we heard much of, and last at Colberg) "gives her a deal of trouble: he is a violent man, from whom she has everything to fear; who gives her chagrins, and makes her no allowances. I try my best to bring him to reason;"—but am little successful. Three years after this, "May 3d, 1769," we find Eugen, who once talked of running his august Reigning Brother through the body, has ended by returning to Stuttgart and him; where, or at Mümpelgard, his Apanage, he continued thenceforth; and was Reigning Duke himself, long afterwards, for two years, at the very end of his life.² At this date of 1766, "my poor Niece and he" have been married thirteen years, and have half a score of children; the eldest of them Czar Paul's Second Wife that is to be, and mother of the now Czars.

¹ See Letters to Marischal, "Leipzig, 9th March 1761," "Breslau, 14th May 1762:" in Œuvres de Frédéric xx. 282, 287.

² April 2d, 1768 " (a month before this Letter to Madam), there is "riot at Neufchâtel; and Avocat Gardot" (heterodox Parson's Advocate) "killed in it" (Rödenbeck, ii. 308).

³ "Succeeded," on his Brother Karl's death, "20th May 1795; died, 23d December 1797, age 75."

December 17th, 1765. * * "I have had 12,360 houses and barns to rebuild, and am nearly through with that. But how many other wounds remain yet to be healed!"

July 22d, 1765. * * "Wedding festivities of Prince of Prussia. Duchess of Kingston tipsy on the occasion!"—But we must not be tempted farther.¹

Next Year, there is a Second Interview; Friedrich making a Return-Visit during the Kaiser's Moravian Reviews (Camp of Mährisch-Neustadt, 3d-7th September 1770).

The Russian-Turk War, especially in this Second Campaign of it,—“Liberation of Greece,” or, failing that, total destruction of the Turk Fleet in Greek waters; conquest of Wallachia, as of Moldavia; in a word, imminency of total ruin to the Turk by land and sea,—all this is blazing aloft at such a pitch, in Summer 1770, that a new Interview upon it may well, to neighbours so much interested, seem more desirable than ever. Interview accordingly there is to be: 3d September, and for four days following.

Kaunitz himself attends, this time; something of real business privately probable to Kaunitz. Prince Henri is not there; Prince Henri is gone to Sweden; on visit to his Sister, whom he has not seen since boyhood: of which visit there will be farther mention. Present with the King were: ‘the Prince of Prussia (luckier somewhat in his second wedlock, little red-coloured Son and Heir born to him just a month ago);’ Prince Ferdinand; two Brunswick Nephews, Erbprinz whom we used to hear of, and Leopold a junior, of whom we shall once or so. No Seidlitz this time. Except Lentulus, no General to name. But better for us than all Generals, in the Kaiser’s suite, besides Kaunitz, was Prince de Ligne,—who holds a pen, as will appear.

“Liberation of the Greeks” had kindled many people, Voltaire among the number, who is still intermittently in correspondence with Friedrich: “A magnificent Czarina about to revivify that true Temple of Mankind, or at least to sweep the blockhead Turks out of it; what a prospect!" Friedrich is quite cool on Greece; not too hot on any part of this subject, though intensely concerned about it. Besides his ingenious Count-Lynar Project, and many other businesses, Friedrich has just been confuting Baron d'Holbach's Système de la Nature; '—writing to Voltaire, Potsdam, 18th August 1770, on this subject among others, he adds: "I am going for Silesia, on the Reviews. I am to see the Kaiser, who has invited me to his Camp in Mähren. That is an amiable and meritorious Prince; he values your Works, reads them as diligently as he can; is anything but superstitious: in brief, a Kaiser such as Germany has not for a great while had. Neither he nor I have any love for the blockhead and barbaric sort; but that is no reason for extirpating them: if it were, your Turks" (oppressors of Greece) "would not be the only victims!"

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiv. 90-155.

² Bödenbeck, iii. 21.

³ Friedrich Wilhelm III., “born 3d August 1770.”

In a lengthy Letter, written by request, To Stanislaus, King of Poland, in 1785, or at a distance of fifteen years from this Interview at Neustadt, Prince de Ligne, who was present there, has left us some record or loose lively reminiscence of it; '—sputtering, effervescing, epigrammatic creature, had he confined himself to a faithful description, and burnt off for us, not like a pretty firework, but like an innocent candle, or thing for seeing by! But we must take what we have, and endeavour to be thankful. By great luck, the one topic he insists on is Friedrich and his aspect and behaviour on the occasion; which is what, of all else in it, we are most concerned with.

"You have ordered me, Sire," (this was written for him in 1785), "to speak to you of one of the greatest men of this Age. You admire him, though his neighbourhood has done you mischief enough; and, placing yourself at the impartial distance of History, feel a noble curiosity on all that belongs to this extraordinary genius. I will, therefore, give you an exact account of the smallest words that I myself heard the great Friedrich speak. * * The I (le je) is odious to me ; but nothing is indifferent when"—Well, your account, then your account, without farther preambling, and in a more exact way than you are wont!—

¹ "Examen Critique du Système de la Nature" (in Œuvres de Frédéric, ix. 153 et seq.). "finished, July 1770."

² Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiii. 165, 166.

³ Prince de Ligne, Mémoires et Mélanges Historiques (Par. 1827), i. 3-21.

"By a singular chance, in 1770" (3d-7th September, if you would but date), "the Kaiser was" (for the second time) "enabled to deliver himself to the personal admiration which he had conceived for the King of Prussia ; and these Two great Sovereigns were so well together, that they could pay visits. The Kaiser permitted me to accompany ; and introduced me to the King : it was at Neustadt in Moravia" (Mährisch-Neustadt, short way from Austerlitz, which is since become a celebrated place). "I can't recollect if I had, or had assumed, an air of embarrassment ; but what I do well remember is, that the Kaiser, who noticed my look, said to the King, 'He has a timid expression, which I never observed in him before ; he will recover presently.' This he said in a graceful merry way ; and the two went out, to go, I believe, to the Play. On the way thither, the King for an instant quitting his Imperial Friend, asked me if my Letter to Jean Jacques" (now an entirely forgotten Piece) "which had been printed in the Papers, was really by me ? I answered, 'Sire, I am not famous enough to have my name forged' (as a certain Other name has been, on this same unproductive topic). He felt what I meant. It is known that Horace Walpole took the King's name to write his famous Lettre à Jean Jacques" (impossible to attend to the like of it at present), "which contributed the most to drive mad this eloquent and unreasonable man of genius.

"Coming out of the Play, the Kaiser said to the King of Prussia : 'There is Noverre, the famous Composer of Ballets ; he has been in Berlin, I believe.' Noverre made thereupon a beautiful dancing-master bow. 'Ah, I know him,' said the King : 'we saw him at Berlin ; he was very droll ; mimicked all the world, especially our chief Dancing Women, to make you split with laughing.' Noverre, ill content with this way of remembering him, made another beautiful third-position bow ; and hoped possibly the King would say something farther, and offer him the opportunity of a small revenge. 'Your Ballets are beautiful,' said the King to him ; 'your Dancing Girls have grace ; but it is grace in a squattish form (de la grace engoncée). I think you make them raise their shoulders and their arms too much. For, Monsieur Noverre, if you remember, our principal Dancing Girl at Berlin wasn't so.' 'That is why she was at Berlin, Sire,' replied Noverre" (satirically, all he could).

"I was every day asked to sup with the King; too often the conversation addressed itself to me. In spite of my attachment to the Kaiser, whose General I like to be, but not whose D'Argens or Algarotti, I had not beyond reason abandoned myself to that feeling. When urged by the King's often speaking to me, I had to answer, and go on talking. Besides the Kaiser took a main share in the conversation; and was perhaps more at his ease with the King than the King with him. One day, they got talking of what one would wish to be in this world; and they asked my opinion. I said, I should like to be 'a Pretty Woman till thirty; then, till sixty, a fortunate and skilful General;—and not knowing what more to say, but for the sake of adding something, whatever it might be, 'a Cardinal till eighty.' The King, who likes to banter the Sacred College, made himself merry on this; and the Kaiser gave him a cheap bargain of Rome and its upholders (suppôts). That supper was one of the gayest and pleasantest I have ever seen. The Two Sovereigns were without pretension and without reserve; what did not always happen on other days; and the amiability of two men so superior, and often so astonished to see themselves together, was the agreeablest thing you can imagine. The King bade me come and see him the first time he and I should have three or four hours to ourselves.

"A storm such as there never was, a deluge compared with which that of Deucalion was a summer shower, covered our Hills with water" (cannot say which day of the four), "and almost drowned our Army while attempting to manœuvre. The morrow was a rest-day for that reason. At nine in the morning, I went to the King, and stayed till one. He spoke to me of our Generals; I let him say, of his own accord, the things I think of Marshals Lacy and Loudon; and I hinted that, as to the others, it was better to speak of the dead than of the living; and that one never can well judge of a General who has not in his lifetime actually played high parts in War. He spoke to me of Feldmarschall Daun: I said, 'that against the French I believed he might have proved a great man; but that against him' (you), 'he had never quite been all he was; seeing always his opponent as a Jupiter, thunderbolt in hand, ready to pulverise his Army.' That appeared to give the King pleasure: he signified to me a feeling of esteem for Daun; he spoke favourably of General Brentano" (one of the Maxen gentlemen). "I asked his reason for the praises I knew he had given to General Beck. 'Why (mais), I thought him a man of merit,' said the King. 'I do not think so, Sire; he didn't do you much mischief.' 'He sometimes took Magazines from me.' 'And sometimes let your Generals escape' (Bevern at Reichenbach, for instance, do you reckon that his blame?).—'I have never beaten him,' said the King. 'He never came near enough for that: and I always thought your Majesty was only appearing to respect him, in order that we might have more confidence in him, and that you might give him the better slap some day, with interest for all arrears.'

King. "'Do you know who taught me the little I know? It was your old Marshal Traun: that was a man, that one.—You spoke of the French: do they make progress?'

Ego. "'They are capable of everything in time of war, Sire: but in Peace,—their chiefs want them to be what they are not, what they are not capable of being.'

King. "'How, then; disciplined? They were so in the time of M. du Turenne.'

Ego. "'Oh, it isn't that. They were not so in the time of M. de Vendôme, and they went on gaining battles. But it is now wished that they become your Apes and ours; and that doesn't suit them.'

King. "'Perhaps so: I have said of their busy people (faiseurs, St. Germain's and Army-reformers), 'that they would fain sing without knowing music.'

Ego. "'Oh, that is true! But leave them their natural notes; profit by their bravery, their alertness (légèreté), by their very faults,—I believe their confusion might confuse their enemies sometimes.'

King. "'Well, yes, doubtless, if you have something to support them with.'

Ego. "'Just so, Sire,—some Swiss and Germans.'

King. "'Tis a brave and amiable nation, the French; one can't help loving them: but, mon Dieu, what have they made of their Men of Letters; and what a tone has now come up among them! Voltaire, for example, had an excellent tone. D'Alembert, whom I esteem in many respects, is too noisy, and insists too much on producing effect in society:—was it the Men of Letters that gave the Court of Louis XIV. its grace, or did they themselves acquire it from the many amiable persons they found there? He was the Patriarch of Kings, that one' (in a certain sense, your Majesty!). 'In his lifetime a little too much good was said of him ; but a great deal too much ill after his death.'

Ego. "'A King of France, Sire, is always the Patriarch of Clever People (Patriarche des gens d'esprit : ' You do not much mean this, Monsieur ? You merely grin it from the teeth outward ?).

King. "'That is the bad number to draw : they aren't worth a doit (ne valent pas le diable, these gens d'esprit) at Governing. Better be Patriarch of the Greek Church, like my sister the Empress of Russia ! That brings her, and will bring, advantages. There's a religion for you ; comprehending many Countries and different Nations ! As to our poor Lutherans, they are so few, it is not worth while being their Patriarch.'

Ego. "'Nevertheless, Sire, if one join to them the Calvinists, and all the little bastard sects, it would not be so bad a post.' (The King appeared to kindle at this ; his eyes were full of animation. But it did not last when I said) : 'If the Kaiser were Patriarch of the Catholics, that too wouldn't be a bad place.'

King. "'There, there : Europe divided into three Patriarchates. I was wrong to begin ; you see where that leads us : Messieurs, our dreams are not those of the just, as M. le Regent used to say. If Louis XIV. were alive, he would thank us.'

"All these patriarchal ideas, possible and impossible to realise, made him, for an instant, look thoughtful, almost moody.

King. "'Louis XIV., possessing more judgment than cleverness (esprit), looked out more for the former quality than for the latter. It was men of genius that he wanted, and found. It could not be said that Corneille, Bossuet, Racine, and Condé were people of the clever sort (des hommes d'esprit).'

Ego. "'On the whole, there is that in the Country which really deserves to be happy. It is asserted that your Majesty has said, If one would have a fine dream, one must—'

King. "'Yes, it is true,—be King of France.'

Ego. "'If Francis I. and Henri IV. had come into the world after your Majesty, they would have said, "be King of Prussia."'

King. "'Tell me, pray, is there no citeable writer left in France ?'

"This made me laugh ; the King asked the reason. I told him, He reminded me of the Russe à Paris, that charming little piece of verse of M. de Voltaire's ; and we remembered charming things out of it, which made us both laugh. He said, King. " 'I have sometimes heard the Prince de Conti spoken of : what sort of man is he ? ' "

Ego. " 'He is a man composed of twenty or thirty men. He is proud, he is affable,'—he is fiddle, he is diddle (in the see-saw epigrammatic way, for a page or more) ; and is not worth pen and ink from us, since the time old Marshal Traun got us rid of him,—home across the Rhine, full speed, with Croats sticking on his skirts.' "

"This portrait seemed to amuse the King. One had to captivate him by some piquant detail ; without that, he would escape you, give you no time to speak. The success generally began by the first words, no matter how vague, of any conversation ; these he found means to make interesting ; and what, generally, is mere talk about the weather, became at once sublime ; and one never heard anything vulgar from him. He ennobled everything ; and the examples of Greeks and Romans, or of modern Generals, soon dissipated everything of what, with others, would have remained trivial and commonplace.

" 'Have you ever,' said he, 'seen such a rain as yesterday's ? Your orthodox Catholics will say, "That comes of having a man without religion among us : what are we to do with this cursed (maudit) King ; a Protestant at lowest ? ' " For I really think I brought you bad luck. Your soldiers would be saying, "Peace we have ; and still is this devil of a man to trouble us ! ' "

Ego. " 'Certainly, if your Majesty was the cause, it is very bad. Such a thing is only permitted to Jupiter, who has always good reasons for everything ; and it would have been in his fashion, after destroying the one set by fire, to set about destroying the others by water. However, the fire is at an end ; and I did not expect to revert to it.' "

King. " 'I ask your pardon for having plagued you so often with that ; I regret it for the sake of all mankind. But what a fine Apprenticeship of War ! I have committed errors enough to teach you young people, all of you, to do better. Mon Dieu, how I love your grenadiers ! How well they defiled in my presence ! If the god Mars were raising a body-guard for himself, I should advise him to take them hand over head. Do you know I was well pleased (bien content) with the Kaiser last night at supper? Did you hear what he said to me about Liberty of the Press, and the Troubling of Consciences (la gêne des consciences)? There will be bits of difference between his worthy Ancestors and him, on some points!’

Ego. “‘I am persuaded, he will entertain no prejudices on anything; and that your Majesty will be a great Book of Instruction to him.’”

King. “‘How adroitly he disapproved, without appearing to mean anything, the ridiculous Vienna Censorship; and the too great fondness of his Mother (without naming her) for certain things which only make hypocrites. By the bye, she must detest you, that High Lady?’”

Ego. “‘Well, then, not at all. She has sometimes lectured me about my strays, but very maternally: she is sorry for me, and quite sure that I shall return to the right path. She said to me, some time ago, “I don’t know how you do, you are the intimate friend of Father Griffet; the Bishop of Neustadt has always spoken well of you; likewise the Archbishop of Malines; and the Cardinal” (name not known to me, dignity and red hat sufficiently visible) “loves you much.”’”

“Why cannot I remember the hundred luminous things which escaped the king in this conversation! It lasted till the trumpet at Head-quarters announced dinner. The King went to take his place; and I think it was on this occasion that, some one having asked why M. de Loudon had not come yet, he said, ‘That is not his custom: formerly he often arrived before me. Please let him take this place next me; I would rather have him at my side than opposite.’”

That is very pretty. And a better authority gives it, The King said to Loudon himself, on Loudon’s entering, “Mettez-vous auprès de moi, M. de Loudon; j’aime mieux vous avoir à côté de moi que vis-à-vis.” He was very kind to Loudon; “constantly called him ‘M. le Feldmaréchal’” (delicate hint of what should have been, but was not for seven years yet); “and, in parting, gave him” (as he did to Lacy also) “two superb horses, magnificently equipped.”¹

“Another day,” continues Prince de Ligne, “the Manœuvres being over in good time, there was a Concert at the Kaiser’s. Notwithstanding the King’s taste for music, he was pleased to give me the preference ; and came where I was, to enchant me with the magic of his conversation, and the brilliant traits, gay and bold, which characterise him. He asked me to name the general and particular Officers who were present, and to tell him those who had served under Marshal Traun : ' For, enfin,' he said, ' as I think I have told you already, he is my Master ; ' he corrected me in the Schooling I was at.'

¹ Pezsl, Vie de Loudon, ii. 29.

Ego. " ' Your Majesty was very ungrateful, then ; you never paid him his lessons. If it was as your Majesty says, you should, at least, have allowed him to beat you ; and I do not remember that you ever did.'

King. " ' I did not get beaten, because I did not fight.'

Ego. " ' It is in this manner that the greatest Generals have often conducted their wars against each other. One has only to look at the two Campaigns of M. de Montecuculi and M. de Turenne, in the Valley of the Rensch (Strasburg Country, 1674 and 1675, two celebrated Campaigns, Turenne killed by a cannon-shot in the last).

King. " ' Between Traun and the former there is not much difference ; but what a difference, bon Dieu, between the latter and me !'

" I named to him the Count d'Althan, who had been Adjutant-General, and the Count de Pellegrini. He asked me twice which was which, from the distance we were at ; and said, He was so short-sighted I must excuse him.

Ego. " ' Nevertheless, Sire, in the War your sight was good enough ; and, if I remember right, it reached very far !'

King. " ' It was not I ; it was my glass.'

Ego. " ' Ha, I should have liked to find that glass :—but I fear it would have suited my eyes as little as Scanderberg's sword my arm.'

" I forget how the conversation changed ; but I know it grew so free that, seeing somebody coming to join in it, the King warned him to take care ; that it wasn't safe to converse with a man doomed by the theologians to Everlasting Fire. I felt as if he somewhat overdid this of his ' being doomed,' and that he boasted too much of it. Not to hint at the dishonesty of these free-thinking gentlemen (messieurs les esprits forts), who very often are thoroughly afraid of the Devil, it is, at least, bad taste to make display of such things : and it was with the people of bad taste whom he has had about him, such as a Jordan, a D'Argens, Maupertuis, La Beaumelle, La Mettrie, Abbé de Prades, and some dull sceptics of his own Academy, that he had acquired the habit of mocking at Religion ; and of talking (de parler) Dogma, Spinozism, Court of Rome, and the like. In the end, I didn't always answer when he touched upon it. I now seized a moment's interval, while he was using his handkerchief, to speak to him about some business, in connexion with the Circle of Westphalia, and a little Comté Immédiat" (County holding direct of the Reich) "which I have there. The King answered me : 'I, for my part, will do anything you wish ; but what thinks the other Director, my comrade, the Elector of Cologne, about it ?'

Ego. " 'I was not aware, Sire, that you were an Ecclesiastical Elector.'

King. " 'I am so ; at least on my Protestant account.'

Ego. " 'That is not to our account's advantage ! Those good people of mine believe your Majesty to be their protector.'

" He continued asking me the names of persons he saw. I was telling him those of a number of young Princes who had lately entered the Service, and some of whom gave hopes. 'That may be,' said he ; 'but I think the breed of the governing races ought to be crossed. I like the children of love : look at the Maréchal de Saxe, and my own Anhalt (severe Adjutant von Anhalt, a bastard of Prinz Gustav, the Old-Des-sauer's Heir-Apparent, who begot a good many bastards, but died before inheriting : bastards were brought up, all of them to soldiering, by their Uncles,—this one by Uncle Moritz ; was thrown from his horse eight years hence, to the great joy of many) ; 'though I am afraid that since' (mark this since, alas !) 'his fall on his head, that latter is not so good as formerly. I should be grieved at it,' both for his sake and for mine ; he is a man full of talents.'

"I am glad to remember this ; for I have heard it said by silly slanderous people (sots dénigrants), who accuse the King of Prussia of insensibility, that he was not touched by the accident which happened to the man he seemed to love most. Too happy if one had only said that of him ! He was supposed to be jealous of the merit of Schwerin and of Keith, and delighted to have got them killed. It is thus that mediocre people seek to lower great men, to diminish the immense space that lies between themselves and such.

¹ Not for eight years yet, mon Prince, I am sorry to say ! Adjutant von Anhalt did, in reality, get this fall, and damaging hurt on the head, in the "Bavarian War" (nick-named Kartoffel-Krieg, "Potato-War"), 177-89. Militair-Lexikon, i. 69 : see Preuss, ii. 356, iv. 578 ; &c.

"Out of politeness, the King, and his Suite as well, had put on white" (Austrian) "Uniforms, not to bring back on us that blue which we had so often seen in war. He looked as though he belonged to our Army and to the Kaiser's suite. There was, in this Visit, I believe, on both sides, a little personality, some distrust, and perhaps a beginning of bitterness ;—as always happens, says Philippe de Comines, when Sovereigns meet. The King took Spanish snuff, and brushing it off with his hand from his coat as well as he could, he said, 'I am not clean enough for you, Messieurs ; I am not worthy to wear your colours.' The air with which he said this, made me think he would yet soil them with powder, if the opportunity arose.

"I forgot a little Incident which gave me an opportunity of setting off (faire valoir) the two Monarchs to each other,"—(Incident, about the King's high opinion of the Kaiser's drill-sergeantry in this day's manoeuvres, and how I was the happy cause of the Kaiser's hearing it himself : Incident omissible ; as the whole Sequel is, except a sentence or two).—

* * "On this Neustadt occasion, the King was sometimes too ceremonious ; which annoyed the Kaiser. For instance,—I know not whether meaning to show himself a disciplined Elector of the Reich, but so it was,—whenever the Kaiser put his foot in stirrup, the King was sure to take his Majesty's horse by the bridle, stand respectfully waiting the Kaiser's right foot, and fit it into its stirrup : and so with every thing else. The Kaiser had the more sincere appearance, in testifying his great respect ; like that of a young Prince to an aged King, and of a young Soldier to the greatest of Captains." * *

"Sometimes there were appearances of cordiality between the two Sovereigns. One saw that Friedrich II. loved Joseph II., but that the preponderance of the Empire, and the contact of Bohemia and Silesia, a good deal barred the sentiments of King and Kaiser. You remember, Sire" (Ex-Sire of Poland), "their Letters" (readers shall see them, in 1778,—or rather refuse to see them !) "on the subject of Bavaria ; their compliments, the explanations they had with regard to their intentions ; all carried on with such politeness ; and that from politeness to politeness, the King ended by invading Bohemia."

Well, here is legible record, with something really of portraiture in it, valuable so far as it goes ; record unique on this subject ;—and substantially true, though inexact enough in details. Thus, even in regard to that of Anhalt's head, which is so impossible in this First Dialogue, Friedrich did most probably say something of the kind, in a Second which there is, of date 1780 : of which latter De Ligne is here giving account as well,—though we have to postpone it till its time come.

At this Neustadt Interview there did something of Political occur ; and readers ought to be shown exactly what. Kaunitz had come with the Kaiser : and this something was intended as the real business among the gaieties and galas at Neustadt. Poland, or its Farce-Tragedy now playing, was not once mentioned that I hear of ; though perhaps, as a fleBILE ludibrium, it might turn up for moments in dinner-conversation or the like : but the astonishing Russian-Turk War, which has sprung out of Poland, and has already filled Stamboul and its Divans and Muftis with mere horror and amazement ; and, in fact, has brought the Grand Turk to the giddy rim of the Abyss ; nothing but ruin and destruction visible to him : this, beyond all other things whatever, is occupying these high heads at present ;—and indeed the two latest bits of Russian-Turk news have been of such a blazing character as to occupy all the world more or less. Readers, some glances into the Turk War, I grieve to say, are become inevitable to us !

Russian-Turk War, First Two Campaigns.

“ October 6th, 1768, Turks declare War ; Russian Ambassador thrown into the Seven Towers as a preliminary, where he sat till Peace came to be needed. March 23d, 1769, Display their Banner of Mahomet, all in paroxysm of Fanaticism risen to the burning-point : ‘ Under pain of death, No Giaour of you appear on the streets, nor even look out of window, this day ! ’—Austrian Ambassador’s Wife, a beautiful gossamer creature, venturing to transgress on that point, was torn from her carriage by the Populace, and with difficulty saved from destruction : Brother of the Sun and Moon, apologising afterwards down to the very shoe-tie, is forgiven.

First Campaign ; 1769. “ April 26th–30th, Galitzin versus Choczim ; can’t, having no provender or powder. Falls back over Dniester again,—overhears that extraordinary Drean, as above recited, betokening great rumour in Russian Society tale, made for Turkey, for Constantinople itself. 'Into the very Dardanelles' they say they will go; an Englishman among them,—Captain Elphinstone, a dashing seaman, if perhaps rather noisy, whom Rulhière is not blind to,—has been heard to declare, at least in his cups: 'Dardanelles impossible? Pshaw, I will do it, as easily as drink this glass of wine!' Alexei Orlof is a Sham-Admiral; but under him are real Sea-Officers, one or two.

"In the Turkish Fleet, it seems, there is an Ex-Algerine, Hassan-Bey, of some capacity in sea-matters; but he is not in chief command, only in second; and can accomplish nothing. The Turkish Fleet, numerous but rotten, retires daily,—through the famed Cyclades, and Isles of Greece, Paros, Naxos, apocalyptic Patmos, on to Scio (old Chios of the wines); and on July 5th, takes refuge behind Scio, between Scio and the Coast of Smyrna, in Tchesme Bay. 'Safe here!' thinks the chief Turk Admiral. 'Very far from safe!' remonstrates Hassan; though to no purpose. And privately puts the question to himself, 'Have these Giaours a real Admiral among them, or, like us, a sham one?'

Tchesme Bay, 7th July 1770. "Nothing can be more imaginary than Alexei Orlof as an Admiral: but he has a Captain Elphinstone, a Captain Gregg, a Lieutenant Dugdale; and these determine to burn poor Hassan and his whole Fleet in Tchesme here:—and do it totally, night of July 7th; with one single fireship; Dugdale steering it; Gregg behind him, to support with broadsides; Elphinstone ruling and contriving, still farther to rear; helpless Turk Fleet able to make no debate whatever. Such a blaze of conflagration on the helpless Turks as shone over all the world—one of Rulhière's finest fireworks, with little shot;—the light of which was still dazzling mankind while the Interview at Neustadt took place. Turk Fleet, fifteen ships, nine frigates, and above 8,000 men, gone to gases and to black cinders,—Hassan hardly escaping with I forget how many score of wounds and bruises.'

"Now for the Dardanelles," said Elphinstone: "bombard Constantinople, starve it,—to death, or to what terms you will!" "Cannot be done; too dangerous; impossible!" answered the sham Admiral, quite in a tremor, they say;—which at length filled the measure of Elphinstone's disgusts with such a Fleet and Admiral. Indignant Elphinstone withdrew to his own ship, "Adieu, Sham-Admiral!"—sailed with his own ship, through the impossible Dardanelles (Turk batteries flying one huge block of granite at him, which missed ; then needing about forty minutes to load again) ; feat as easy to Elphinstone as this glass of wine. In sight of Constantinople, Elphinstone, furthermore, called for his tea ; took his tea on deck, under flourishing of all his drums and all his trumpets : tea done, sailed out again scathless ; instantly threw up his command,—and at Petersburg, soon after, in taking leave of the Czarina, signified to her, in language perhaps too plain, or perhaps only too painfully true, some Naval facts which were not welcome in that high quarter." ' This remarkable Elphinstone I take to be some junior or irregular Balmerino scion ; but could never much hear of him except in Rulhière, where, on vague, somewhat theatrical terms, he figures as above.

¹ Hermann, v. 623.

" August 1st, Romanzow has a ' Battle of Kaghul,' so they call it ; though it is a ' Slaughtery' or Schlachtereï, rather than a ' Slaughter' or Schlacht, say my German friends. Kaghul is not a specific place, but a longish river, a branch of the Pruth ; under screen of which the Grand Turk Army, 100,000 strong, with 100,000 Tartars as second line, has finally taken position, and fortified itself with earthworks and abundant cannon. August 1st, 1770, Romanzow, after study and advising, feels prepared for this Grand Army and its earthworks : with a select 20,000, under select captains, Romanzow, after night-fall, bursts in upon it, simultaneously on three different points ; and gains, gratis or nearly so, such a victory as was never heard of before. The Turks, on their earthworks, had 140 cannons ; these the Turk gunners fired off two times, and fled, leaving them for Romanzow's uses. The Turk cavalry then tried if they could not make some attempt at charging ; found they could not ; whirled back upon their infantry ; set it also whirling : and in a word, the whole 200,000 whirled, without blow struck ; and it was a universal panic route, and delirious stampede of flight, which never paused (the very garrisons emptying themselves, and joining in it) till it got across the Donau again, and drew breath there, not to rally or stand, but to run rather slower. And had left Wallachia, Bessarabia, Dniester river, Donau river, swept clear of Turks ; all Romanzow's henceforth. To such astonishment of an invincible Grand Turk, and of his Moslem Populations, fallen on such a set of Giaours,—(' Allah Kerim, And cannot we abolish them, then ?' Not we them, it would appear !),—as every reader can imagine." Which shall suffice every reader here, in regard to the Turk War, and what concern he has in the extremely brutish phenomenon.

¹ Rulhière, iii. 476-509.

Tchesme fell out, July 7th; Elphinstone has hardly done his tea in the Dardanelles, when (August 1st) this of Kaghul follows: both would be fresh news blazing in every head, while the Dialogues between Friedrich and Kaunitz were going on. For they "had many dialogues," Friedrich says; "and one of the days" (probably September 6th) was mainly devoted to Politics, to deep private Colloquy with Kaunitz. Of which, and of the great things that followed out of it, I will now give, from Friedrich's own hand, the one entirely credible account I have anywhere met with in writing.

Friedrich's account of Kaunitz himself is altogether life-like: A solemn, arrogant, mouthing, brow-beating kind of man,—embarrassed at present by the necessity not to brow-beat, and by the consciousness that "King Friedrich is the only man who refuses to acknowledge my claims to distinction:"¹—a Kaunitz whose arrogances, qualities and claims, this King is not here to notice, except as they concern business on hand. He says, "Kaunitz had a clear intellect, greatly twisted by perversities of temper (un sens droit, l'esprit rempli de travers), especially by a self-conceit and arrogance which were boundless. He did not talk, but preach. At the smallest interruption, he would stop short in indignant surprise: it has happened that, at the Council-Board in Schönbrunn, when Imperial Majesty herself asked some explanation of a word or thing not understood by her, Kaunitz made his bow (lui tira sa révérence), and quitted the room." Good to know the nature of the beast. Listen to him, then, on those terms, since it is necessary. The Kaunitz Sermon was of great length, imbedded in circumlocutions, innuendos and diplomatic cautions; but the gist of it we gather to have been (abridged into dialogue form) essentially as follows:

Kaunitz. "Dangerous to the repose of Europe, those Russian encroachments on the Turk. Never will Imperial Majesty consent that Russia possess Moldavia or Wallachia ; War sooner,—all things sooner ! These views of Russia are infinitely dangerous to everybody. To your Majesty as well, if I may say so, and no remedy conceivable against them,—to me none conceivable,—but this only. That Prussia and Austria join frankly in protest and absolute prohibition of them.”

¹ Rulhière (somewhere) has heard this, as an utterance of Kaunitz's in some plaintive moment.

Friedrich. “I have nothing more at heart than to stand well with Austria ; and always to be her ally, never her enemy. But the Prince sees how I am situated : bound by express Treaty with Czarish Majesty ; must go with Russia in any War ! What can I do ? I can, and will with all industry, labour to conciliate Czarish Majesty and Imperial ; to produce, at Petersburg, such a Peace with the Turks as may meet the wishes of Vienna. Let us hope it can be done. By faithful endeavoring, on my part and on yours, I persuade myself it can. Meanwhile, steadfastly together, we two ! All our little rubs, customhouse squabbles on the Frontier, and such-like, why not settle them here, and now ?” (and does so with his Highness.) That there be nothing but amity, helpfulness and mutual effort towards an object so momentous to us both, and to all mankind.”

Kaunitz. “Good so far. And may a not intolerable Turk-Russian Peace prove possible, without our fighting for it ! Meanwhile, Imperial Majesty” (as she has been visibly doing for some time) “must continue massing troops and requisites on the Hungarian Frontier, lest the contrary happen !”

This was the result arrived at. Of which Friedrich “judged it but polite to inform the young Kaiser ; who appeared to be grateful for this mark of attention, being much held down by Kaunitz in his present state of tutelage.”¹

And by a singular chance, on the very morrow there arrived from the Divan (dated August 12th) an Express to Friedrich : “Mediate a Peace for us, with Russia ; not you alone, as we have often asked, but Austria and you !” For the Kaghul Slaughtery has come on us ; Giaour Elphinstone has taken tea in the Dardanelles ; and we know not to what hand to turn !

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvi. 30.

—"The young Kaiser did not hide his joy at this Overture, as Kaunitz did his, which was perhaps still greater:" the Kaiser warmly expressed his thanks to Friedrich as the Author of it; Kaunitz, with a lofty indifference (morgue), and nose in air as over a small matter, "merely signified his approval of this step which the Turks had taken."

"Never was mediation undertaken with greater pleasure," adds the King. And both did proceed upon it with all zeal; but only the King as real "mediator," or middle-man; Kaunitz from the first planting himself immovably upon the Turk side of things, which is likewise the Austrian; and playing in secret (as Friedrich probably expected he would) the strangest tricks with his assumed function.

So that Friedrich had to take the burden of mediating altogether on himself; and month after month, year after year, it is evident he prosecutes the same with all the industry and faculty there are in him,—in intense desire, and in hope often nearly desperate, to keep his two neighbors' houses, and his own and the whole world along with them, from taking fire. Apart from their conflicting interests, the two Emperresses have privately a rooted aversion to one another. What with Russian exorbitancy (a Czarina naturally uplifted with her Tchesmes and Kaghuls); what with Austrian cupidity, pride, mulishness, and private trickery of Kaunitz; the adroit and heartily zealous Friedrich never had such a bit of diplomacy to do. For many months hence, in spite of his intensest efforts and cunningest appliances, no way of egress visible: "The imbroglio must catch fire?" At last a way opens, "Ha, at last a way!"—then, for above a twelvemonth longer, such a guiding of the purblind quadrupeds and obstinate Austrian mules into said way: and for years more such an urging of them, in pig-driver fashion, along the same, till Peace did come!—

And here, without knowing it, we have insensibly got to the topmost summit of our Polish Business; one small step more, and we shall be on the brow of the precipitous inclined-plane, down which Poland and its business go careering thenceforth, down, down,—and will need but few more words from us. Actual discovery of "a way out" stands for next Section.

First, however, we will notice, as prefatory, a curious occurrence in the Country of Zips, contiguous to the Hungarian Frontier. Zips, a pretty enough District, of no great extent, had from time immemorial belonged to Hungary; till, above 300 years ago, it was,—by Sigismund super Grammaticam, a man always in want of money (whom we last saw, in flaming colour, investing Friedrich's Ancestor with Brandenburg instead of payment for a debt of money),—pledged to the Crown of Poland for a round sum to help in Sigismund's pressing occasions. Redemption by payment never followed; attempt at redemption there had never been, by Sigismund or any of his successors. Nay, one successor, in a Treaty still extant,¹ expressly gave up the right of redeeming: Pledge forfeited; a Zips belonging to Polish Crown and Republic by every law.

Well; Imperial Majesty, as we have transiently seen, is assembling troops on the Hungarian Frontier, for a special purpose. Poor Poland is, by this time (1770), as we also saw, sunk in Pestilence,—pigs and dogs devouring the dead bodies; not a loaf to be had for a hundred ducats, and the rage of Pestilence itself a mild thing to that of Hunger, not to mention other rages. So that both Austria and Prussia, in order to keep out Pestilence at least, if they cannot the other rages, have had to draw cordons, or lines of troops, along the Frontiers. “The Prussian cordon,” I am informed, “goes from Crossen, by Frankfurt northward, to the Weichsel River and border of Warsaw Country;” and “is under command of General Belling,” our famous Anti-Swede Hussar of former years. The Austrian cordon looks over upon Zips and other Starosties, on the Hungarian Border; where, independently of Pestilence, an alarmed and indignant Empress-Queen has been and is assembling masses of troops, with what object we know. Looking over into Zips in these circumstances, indignant Kaunitz and Imperial Majesty, especially his Imperial Majesty, a youth always passionate for territory, say to themselves, “Zip was ours, and in a sense is!”—and (precise date refused us, but after Neustadt, and before Winter has quite come) push troops across into Zips Starosty ; seize the whole Thirteen Townships of Zips, and not only these, but by degrees tract after tract of the adjacencies : " Must have a Frontier to our mind in those parts ; indefensible otherwise ! " And quietly set up boundary pillars, with the Austrian double-eagle stamped on them, and intimation to Zips and neighbourhood, That it is now become Austrian, and shall have no part farther in these Polish Confederatings, Pestilences, rages of men, and pigs devouring dead bodies, but shall live quiet under the double-eagle as others do. Which to Zips, for the moment, might be a blessed change, welcome or otherwise ; but which awoke considerable amazement in the outer world,—very considerable in King Stanislaus (to whom, on applying, Kaunitz would give no explanation the least articulate) ;—and awoke, in the Russian Court especially, a rather intense surprise and provocation.

¹ Preuss, iv. 32 (date 1589; pawning had been, 1412).

Prince Henri has been to Sweden ; is seen at Petersburg in Masquerade (on or about Newyear's Day 1771) ; and does get Home, with Results that are important.

Prince Henri, as we noticed, was not of this Second King-and-Kaiser Interview ; Henri had gone in the opposite direction,—to Sweden, on a visit to his Sister Ulrique,—off for West and North, just in the same days while the King was leaving Potsdam for Silesia and his other errand in the South-east parts. Henri got to Drottingholm, his Sister's country Palace near Stockholm, by the " end of August ; " and was there with Queen Ulrique and Husband during these Neustadt manœuvres. A changed Queen Ulrique, since he last saw her " beautiful as Love," whirling off in the dead of night for those remote Countries and destinies.¹ She is now fifty, or on the edge of it, her old man sixty,—old man dies within few months. They have had many chagrins, especially she, as the prouder, has had, from their contumacious People,—contumacious Senators at least (strong always both in pocket-money French or Russian, and in tendency to insolence and folly),—who once, I remember, demanded sight and count of the Crown-Jewels from Queen Ulrique : " There, voilà, there are they ! " said the proud Queen ; " view them, count them, —lock them up : never more will I wear one of them ! " But she has pretty sons grown to manhood, one pretty Daughter, a patient good old Husband ; and Time, in Sweden too, brings its roses ; and life is life, in spite of contumacious bribed Senators and doggeries that do rather abound. Henri stayed with her six or seven weeks ; leaves Sweden, middle of October 1770,—not by the straight course homewards : " No, verily, and well knew why ! " shrieks the indignant Polish world on us ever since.

¹ Suprà, iv. 433.

It is not true that Friedrich had schemed to send Henri round by Petersburg. On the contrary, it was the Czarina, on the ground of old acquaintanceship, who invited him, and asked his Brother's leave to do it. And if Poland got its fate from the circumstance, it was by accident, and by the fact that Poland's fate was drop-ripe, ready to fall by a touch.—Before going farther, here is ocular view of the shrill-minded, serious and ingenious Henri, little conscious of being so fateful a man :

Prince Henri in white Domino. " Prince Henri of Prussia," says Richardson, the useful Eye-witness cited already, " is one of the most celebrated Generals of the present age. So great are his military talents, that his Brother, who is not apt to pay compliments, says of him,—that, in commanding an army, he was never known to commit a fault. This, however, is but a negative kind of praise. He " (the King) " reserves to himself the glory of superior genius, which, though capable of brilliant achievements, is yet liable to unwary mistakes ; and allows him no other than the praise of correctness.

" To judge of Prince Henri by his appearance, I should form no high estimate of his abilities. But the Scythian Ambassadors judged in the same manner of Alexander the Great. He is under the middle size ; very thin ; he walks firmly enough, or rather struts, as if he wanted to walk firmly ; and has little dignity in his air or gesture. He is dark-complexioned ; and he wears his hair, which is remarkably thick, clubbed, and dressed with a high toupee. His forehead is high ; his eyes large and blue, with a little squint ; and when he smiles, his upper lip is drawn up a little in the middle. His look expresses sagacity and observation, but nothing very amiable ; and his manner is grave and stiff rather than affable. He was dressed, when I first saw him, in a light blue frock, with silver frogs ; and wore a red waistcoat and blue breeches. He is not very popular among the Russians, and accordingly their wits are disposed to amuse themselves with his appearance, and particularly with his toupee. They say he resembles Samson ; that all his strength lies in his hair ; and that, conscious of this, and recollecting the fate of the son of Manoah, he suffers not the nigh approaches of any deceitful Delilah. They say he is like the Comet, which, about fifteen months ago, appeared so formidable in the Russian hemisphere ; and which, exhibiting a small watery body, but a most enormous train, dismayed the Northern and Eastern Potentates with 'fear of change.'

"I saw him a few nights ago" (on or about Newyear's Day 1771 ; come back to us from his Tour to Moscow, three weeks before, and nothing but galas ever since) "at a Masquerade in the Palace, said to be the most magnificent thing of the kind ever seen at the Russian Court. Fourteen large rooms and galleries were opened for the accommodation of the masks ; and I was informed that there were present several thousand people. A great part of the company wore dominos, or capuchin dresses ; though, besides these, some fanciful appearances afforded a good deal of amusement. A very tall Cossack appeared completely arrayed in the 'hauberk's twisted mail.' He was indeed very grim and martial. Persons in emblematical dresses, representing Apollo and the Seasons, addressed the Empress in speeches suited to their characters. The Empress herself, at the time I saw her Majesty, wore a Grecian habit ; though I was afterwards told that she varied her dress two or three times during the masquerade. Prince Henri of Prussia wore a white domino. Several persons appeared in the dresses of different nations,—Chinese, Turks, Persians, and Armenians. The most humorous and fantastical figure was a Frenchman, who, with wonderful nimbleness and dexterity, represented an overgrown but very beautiful Parrot. He chattered with a great deal of spirit ; and his shoulders, covered with green feathers, performed admirably the part of wings. He drew the attention of the Empress ; a ring was formed ; he was quite happy ; fluttered his plumage ; made fine speeches in Russ, French, and tolerable English ; the ladies were exceedingly diverted ; everybody laughed except Prince Henri, who stood beside the Empress, and was so grave and so solemn, that he would have performed his part most admirably in the shape of an owl. The Parrot observed him ; was determined to have revenge ; and having said as many good things as he could to her Majesty, he was hopping away ; but just as he was going out of the circle, seeming to recollect himself, he stopped, looked over his shoulder at the formal Prince, and quite in the parrot tone and French accent, he addressed him most emphatically with 'Henri ! Henri ! Henri !' and then diving into the crowd, disappeared. His Royal Highness was disconcerted ; he was forced to smile in his own defence, and the company were not a little amused.

"At midnight, a spacious hall, of a circular form, capable of containing a vast number of people, and illuminated in the most magnificent manner, was suddenly opened. Twelve tables were placed in alcoves around the sides of the room, where the Empress, Prince Henri, and a hundred and fifty of the chief nobility and foreign ministers sat down to supper. The rest of the company went up, by stairs on the outside of the room, into the lofty galleries placed all around on the inside. Such a row of masked visages, many of them with grotesque features and bushy beards, nodding from the side of the wall, appeared very ludicrous to those below. The entertainment was enlivened with a concert of music ; and at different intervals persons in various habits entered the hall, and exhibited Cossack, Chinese, Polish, Swedish, and Tartar dances. The whole was so gorgeous, and at the same time so fantastic, that I could not help thinking myself present at some of the magnificent festivals described in the old-fashioned romances :

" 'The marshal'd feast

Served up in hall with sewers and seneschals.'

The rest of the company, on returning to the rooms adjoining, found prepared for them also a sumptuous banquet. The masquerade began at 6 in the evening, and continued till 5 next morning.

"Besides the masquerade, and other festivities, in honour of, and to divert Prince Henri, we had lately a most magnificent show of fireworks. They were exhibited in a wide space before the Winter Palace ; and, in truth, 'beggared description.' They displayed, by a variety of emblematical figures, the reduction of Moldavia, Wallachia, Bessarabia, and the various conquests and victories achieved since the commencement of the present War. The various colours, the bright green, and the snowy white, exhibited in these fireworks, were truly astonishing. For the space of twenty minutes, a tree, adorned with the loveliest and most verdant foliage, seemed to be waving as with a gentle breeze. It was entirely of fire; and during the whole of this stupendous scene, an arch of fire, by the continued throwing of rockets and fireballs in one direction, formed as it were a suitable canopy.

"On this occasion a prodigious multitude of people was assembled; and the Empress, it was surmised, seemed uneasy. She was afraid, it was apprehended, lest any accident, like what happened at Paris at the marriage of the Dauphin, should befall her beloved people. I hope I have amused you; and ever am"—¹

The masquerades and galas in honour of Prince Henri, from a grandiose Hostess, who had played with him in childhood, were many; but it is not with these that we have to do. One day, the Czarina, talking to him of the Austrian procedures at Zips, said with pique, "It seems, in Poland you have only to stoop, and pick up what you like of it. If the Court of Vienna have the notion to dismember that Kingdom, its neighbours will have right to do as much." This is supposed, in all Books, to be the punctum saliens, or first mention, of the astonishing Partition, which was settled, agreed upon, within about a year hence, and has made so much noise ever since. And in effect it was so; the idea rising practically in that high head was the real beginning. But this was not the first head it had been in; far from that. Above a year ago, as Friedrich himself informed us, it had been in Friedrich's own head,—though at the time it went for absolutely nothing, nobody even bestowing a sneer on it (as Friedrich intimates), and disappeared through the Horn-Gate of Dreams.

¹ W. Richardson, Anecdotes of the Russian Empire, pp. 325-331: "Petersburg, 4th January 1771."

² Rulhière, iv. 210; Trois Démembrements, i. 142; above all, Henri himself, in Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvi. 345, "Petersburg, 8th January 1771."

Friedrich himself appears to have quite forgotten the Count-Lynar idea ; and, on Henri's report from Russia, was totally incredulous ; and even suspected that there might be trickery and danger in this Russian Proposal. Not till Henri's return (February 18th, 1771) could he entirely believe that the Czarina was serious ;—and then, sure enough, he did, with his whole heart, go into it : the Eureka out of all these difficulties, which had so long seemed insuperable. Prince Henri “had an Interview with the Austrian Minister next day” (February 19th), who immediately communicated with his Kaunitz,—and got discouraging response from Kaunitz ; discouraging, or almost negatory ; which did not discourage Friedrich. “A way out,” thinks Friedrich : “the one way to save my Prussia and the world from incalculable conflagration.” And entered on it without loss of a moment. And laboured at it with such continual industry, rapidity, and faculty for guiding and pushing, as all readers have known in him, on dangerous emergencies ; at no moment lifting his hand from it till it was complete.

His difficulties were enormous : what a team to drive ; and on such a road, untrodden before by hoof or wheel ! Two Empresses that cordially hate one another, and that disagree on this very subject. Kaunitz and his Empress are extremely skittish in the matter, and as if quite refuse it at first : “Zips will be better,” thinks Kaunitz to himself ; “Cannot we have, all to ourselves, a beautiful little cutting out of Poland in that part ; and then perhaps, in league with the Turk, who has money, beat the Russians home altogether, and rule Poland in their stead, or ‘share it with the Sultan,’ as Reis-Effendi suggests ?” And the dismal truth is, though it was not known for years afterward, Kaunitz does about this time, in profoundest secret, actually make Treaty of Alliance with the Turk (“so many million Piastres to us, ready money, year by year, and you shall, if not by our mediating, then by our fighting, be a contented Turk”) ; and all along at the different Russian-Turk “Peace-Congresses,” Kaunitz, while pretending to sit and mediate along with Prussia, sat on that far other basis, privately thwarting everything ; and span out the Turk pacification in a wretched manner for years coming.¹ A dangerous, hard-mouthed, high-stalking, ill-given old coach-horse of a Kaunitz : fancy what the driving of him might be, on a road he did not like ! But he had a driver too, who in delicate adroitness, in patience, and in sharpness of whip, was consummate : "You shall know it is your one road, my ill-given friend !" (I ostentatiously increase my Cavalry by 8,000 ; meaning, "A New Seven-Years War, if you force me, and Russia by my side this time !") So that Kaunitz had to quit his Turk courses (never paid the Piastres back), and go into what really was the one way out.

But Friedrich's difficulties on this course are not the thing that can interest readers ; and all readers know his faculty for overcoming difficulties. Readers ask rather : "And had Friedrich no feeling about Poland itself, then, and this atrocious Partitioning of the poor Country ?" Apparently none whatever ;—unless it might be, that Deliverance from Anarchy, Pestilence, Famine, and Pigs eating your dead bodies, would be a manifest advantage for Poland, while it was the one way of saving Europe from War. Nobody seems more contented in conscience, or radiant with heartfelt satisfaction, and certainty of thanks from all wise and impartial men, than the King of Prussia, now and afterwards, in regard to this Polish atrocity ! A psychological fact, which readers can notice. Scrupulous regard to Polish considerations, magnanimity to Poland, or the least respect or pity for her as a dying Anarchy, is what nobody will claim for him ; consummate talent in executing the Partition of Poland (inevitable some day, as he may have thought, but is nowhere at the pains to say),—great talent, great patience too, and meritorious self-denial and endurance, in executing that Partition, and in saving it from catching fire instead of being the means to quench fire, no well-informed person will deny him. Of his difficulties in the operation (which truly are unspeakable) I will say nothing more ; readers are prepared to believe that he, beyond others, should conquer difficulties when the object is vital to him. I will mark only the successive dates of his progress, and have done with this wearisome subject :

¹ "Peace of Kainardschi," not till "21st July 1774,"—after four or five abortive attempts, two of them "Congresses," Kaunitz so industrious (Hermann, v. 664 et antea).

June 14th, 1771. Within four months of the arrival of Prince Henri and that first certainty from Russia, diligent Friedrich, upon whom the whole burden had been laid of drawing up a Plan, and bringing Austria to consent, is able to report to Petersburg, That Austria has dubieties, reluctancies, which it is to be foreseen she will gradually get over; and that here meanwhile (June 14th, 1771) is my Plan of Partition,—the simplest conceivable: “That each choose (subject to future adjustments) what will best suit him; I, for my own part, will say, West-Prussen;—what Province will Czarish Majesty please to say?” Czarish Majesty, in answer, is exorbitantly liberal to herself; claims, not a Province, but four or five; will have Friedrich, if the Austrians attack her in consequence, to assist by declaring War on Austria; Czarish Majesty, in the reciprocal case, not to assist Friedrich at all, till her Turk War is done! “Impossible,” thinks Friedrich; “surprisingly so, high Madam! But, to the delicate bridle-hand, you are a manageable entity.”

It was with Kaunitz that Friedrich's real difficulties lay. Privately, in the course of this Summer, Kaunitz, by way of preparation for “mediating a Turk-Russian Peace,” had concluded his “Subsidy Treaty” with the Turk,¹—Treaty never ratified, but the Piastres duly paid;—Treaty rendering Peace impossible, so long as Kaunitz had to do with mediating it. And indeed Kaunitz's tricks in that function of mediator, and also after it, were of the kind which Friedrich has some reason to call “infamous.” “Your Majesty, as co-mediator, will join us, should the Russians make War?” said Kaunitz's Ambassador, one day, to Friedrich. “For certain, no!” answered Friedrich; and, on the contrary, remounted his Cavalry, to signify, “I will fight the other way, if needed!” which did at once bring Kaunitz to give up his mysterious Turk projects, and come into the Polish. After which his exorbitant greed of territory there; his attempts to get Russia into a partitioning of Turkey as well,—(“A slice of Turkey too, your Czarish Majesty and we?” hints he more than once),—gave Friedrich no end of trouble; and are singular to look at by the light there now is. Not for about a twelvemonth did Friedrich get his hard-mouthed Kaunitz brought into step at all ; and to the last, perpetual vigilance and, by whip and bit, the adroitest charioteering was needed on him.

¹ “6th July 1771” (Preuss, iv. 31; Hermann; &c. &c.)

February 17th, 1772, Russia and Prussia, for their own part,—Friedrich, in the circumstances, submitting to many things from his Czarina,—get their particular “Convention” (Bargain in regard to Poland) completed in all parts, “will take possession, 4th June instant:” sign said Convention (February 17th) ;—and invite Austria to join, and state her claims. Which, in three weeks after, March 4th, Austria does ;—exorbitant abundantly ; and not to be got very much reduced, though we try, for a series of months. Till at last :

August 5th, 1772, Final Agreement between the Three Partitioning Powers : “These are our respective shares ; we take possession on the 1st of September instant:”—and actual possession for Friedrich’s share did, on the 13th of that month, ensue. A right glad Friedrich, as everybody, friend or enemy, may imagine him ! Glad to have done with such a business,—had there been no other profit in it ; which was far from being the case. One’s clear belief, on studying these Books, is of two things : First, that, as everybody admits, Friedrich had no real hand in starting the notion of Partitioning Poland ;—but that he grasped at it with eagerness, as the one way of saving Europe from War : Second, what has been much less noticed, that, under any other hand, it would have led Europe to War ;—and that to Friedrich is due the fact that it got effected without such accompaniment. Friedrich’s share of Territory is counted to be in all, 9,465 English square miles ; Austria’s, 62,500 ; Russia’s, 87,500,¹ between nine and ten times the amount of Friedrich’s,—which latter, however, as an anciently Teutonic Country, and as filling up the always dangerous gap between his Ost-Preussen and him, has, under Prussian administration, proved much the most valuable of the Three ; and, next to Silesia, is Friedrich’s most important acquisition. September 13th, 1772, it was at last entered upon,—through such waste-weltering confusions, and on terms never yet unquestionable.

Consent of Polish Diet was not had for a year more ; but that is worth little record. Diet, for that object, got together, 19th April 1773 ; recalcitrant enough, had not Russia understood the methods : “a common fund was raised” (on se cotisa, says Friedrich), “for bribing ;” the Three Powers had each a representative General in Warsaw (Lentulus the Prussian personage), all three with forces to rear: Diet came down by degrees, and, in the course of five months (September 18th, 1773), acquiesced in everything.

¹ Preuss, iv. 45.

And so the matter is ended; and various men will long have various opinions upon it. I add only this one small Document from Maria Theresa's hand, which all hearts, and I suppose even Friedrich's had he ever read it, will pronounce to be very beautiful; homely, faithful, wholesome, well-becoming in a high and true Sovereign Woman.

"The Empress-Queen to Prince Kaunitz" (Undated: date must be Vienna, February 1772).

"When all my lands were invaded, and I knew not where in the world I should find a place to be brought to bed in, I relied on my good right and the help of God. But in this thing, where not only public law cries to Heaven against us, but also all natural justice and sound reason, I must confess never in my life to have been in such trouble, and am ashamed to show my face. Let the Prince" (Kaunitz) "consider what an example we are giving to all the world, if, for a miserable piece of Poland, or of Moldavia or Wallachia, we throw our honour and reputation to the winds. I see well that I am alone, and no more in vigour; therefore I must, though to my very great sorrow, let things take their course."¹

And some days afterwards, here is her Majesty's Official Assent: "Placet, since so many great and learned men will have it so: but long after I am dead, it will be known what this violating of all that was hitherto held sacred and just will give rise to."¹ (Hear her Majesty !)

¹ "Als alle meine l nder angefochten wurden und gar nit mehr wusste wo ruhig niederkommen sollte, steiffete ich mich auf mein gutes Recht und den Beystand Gottes. Aber in dieser Sach, wo nit allein das offenkundige Recht himmelschreyent wider Uns, sondern auch alle Billigkeit und die gesunde Vernunft wider Uns ist, muss bekennen dass zeit lebens nit so be ngtigt mich befunden und mich sehen zu lassen sch me. Bedenkh der F rst, was wir aller Welt f r ein Exempel geben, wenn wir um ein ellendes st ck von Pohlen oder von der Moldau und Wallachey unser ehr und reputation in die schanz schlagen. Ich merkh wohl dass ich allein bin und nit mehr en vigeur, darum lause ich die suchen, jedoch nit ohne meinen gr esten Gram, ihren Weg gehen." (From "Hormayr, Taschenbuch, 1831, S. 66:" cited in Preuss, iv. 38.)

Friedrich has none of these compunctious visitings ; but his account too, when he does happen to speak on the subject, is worth hearing, and credible every word. Writing to Voltaire, a good while after (Potsdam, 9th October 1773), this, in the swift-flowing, miscellaneous Letter, is one passage : * * "To return to your King of Poland. I am aware that Europe pretty generally believes the late Partition made (qu'on a fait) of Poland to be a result of the Political trickeries (manigances) which are attributed to me ; nevertheless, nothing is more untrue. After in vain proposing different arrangements and expedients, there was no alternative left but either that same Partition, or else Europe kindled into a general War. Appearances are deceitful ; and the Public judges only by these. What I tell you is as true as the Forty-seventh of Euclid." *

What Friedrich did with his new Acquisition.

Considerable obloquy still rests on Friedrich, in many liberal circles, for the Partition of Poland. Two things, however, seem by this time tolerable clear, though not yet known in liberal circles : first, that the Partition of Poland was an event inevitable in Polish History ; an operation of Almighty Providence and of the Eternal Laws of Nature, as well as of the poor earthly Sovereigns concerned there : and secondly, that Friedrich had nothing special to do with it, and, in the way of originating or causing it, nothing whatever.

It is certain the demands of Eternal Justice must be fulfilled : in earthly instruments, concerned with fulfilling them, there may be all degrees of demerit and also of merit,—from that of a world-ruffian Attila the Scourge of God, conscious of his own ferocities and cupidities alone, to that of a heroic Cromwell, sacredly aware that he is, at his soul's peril, doing God's Judgments on the enemies of God, in Tredah and other severe scenes. If the Laws and Judgments are verily those of God, there can be no clearer merit than that of pushing them forward, regardless of the barkings of Gazetteers and wayside dogs, and getting them, at the earliest term possible, made valid among recalcitrant mortals! Friedrich, in regard to Poland, I cannot find to have had anything considerable either of merit or of demerit, in the moral point of view; but simply to have accepted, and put in his pocket without criticism, what Providence sent. He himself evidently views it in that light; and is at no pains to conceal his great sense of the value of West-Prussen to him. We praised his Narrative as eminently true, and the only one completely intelligible in every point: in his Preface to it, written some years later, he is still more candid. Speaking there in the first person, this once and never before or after,—he says:

¹ From "Zeitgenossen" (a Biographical Periodical), "lxxi. 29:" cited in Preuss. iv. 89.

² Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiii. 257.

“These new pretensions” (of the Czarina, to assuage the religious putrid-fever of the Poles, by word of command) “raised all Poland” (Confederation of Bar, and War of the Confederates, sung by Friedrich); “the Grandees of the Kingdom implored the assistance of the Turks: straightway War flamed out; in which the Russian Armies had only to show themselves to beat the Turks in every rencounter.” His Majesty continues: “This War changed the whole Political System of Europe” (general Diplomatic Dance of Europe, suddenly brought to a whirl by such changes of the music); “a new arena (carrière) came to open itself,—and one must have been either without address, or else buried in stupid somnolence (engourdissement), not to profit by an opportunity so advantageous. I had read Bojardo’s fine Allegory;¹ I

¹ Signifies only, “seize opportunity;” but here is the passage itself:

“ Quante volte le disse: ‘O bella	Che l’avuto piacer mai non si perde.
dama,	Questa età giovenil, ch’è sì gioiosa,
Conosci l’ora de la tua ventura,	Tutto in diletto consumar si deve,
Dapoi che un tal Baron più che	Perchè quasi in un punto ci è na-
sè l’ama,	scosu:
Che non ha il Ciel più vaga crea-	Come dissolte l’è sol la bianca neve,
tura.	Come in un giorno la vermiglia
Forse anco attrai di questo tempo	rosa
brama,	Perde il vago color in tempo breve,
Che l’ felice destin sempre non	Così fugge l’età com’ un baleno,
dura;	E non si può tener, chè non ha
Prendi diletto, mentre sei su l’	freno.”
verde,

(Bojardo, Orlando Innamorato, lib. i. cant. 2.)

seized by the forelock this unexpected opportunity ; and, by dint of negotiating and intriguing " (candid King), " I succeeded in indemnifying our Monarchy for its past losses, by incorporating Polish Prussia with my Old Provinces." ¹

Here is a Historian King who uses no rouge-pot in his Narratives,—whose word, which is all we shall say of it at present, you find to be perfectly trustworthy, and a representation of the fact as it stood before himself ! What follows, needs no vouching for : " This acquisition was one of the most important we could make, because it joined Pommern to East Prussia " (ours for ages past), " and because, rendering us masters of the Weichsel River, we gained the double advantage of being able to defend that Kingdom " (Ost-Preussen), " and to draw considerable tolls from the Weichsel, as all the trade of Poland goes by that River."

Yes truly ! Our interests are very visible : and the interests and wishes and claims of Poland,—are they nowhere worthy of one word from you, O King ? Nowhere that I have noticed ; not any mention of them, or allusion to them ; though the world is still so convinced that perhaps they were something, and not nothing ! Which is very curious. In the whole course of my reading I have met with no Autobiographer more careless to defend himself upon points in dispute among his Audience, and marked as criminal against him by many of them. Shadow of Apology on such points you search for in vain. In rapid bare summary he sets down the sequel of facts, as if assured beforehand of your favourable judgment, or with the profoundest indifference to how you shall judge them ; drops his actions, as an Ostrich does its young, to shift for themselves in the wilderness, and hurries on his way. This style of his, noticeable of old in regard to Silesia too, has considerably hurt him with the common kind of readers ; who, in their preconceived suspicions of the man, are all the more disgusted at tracing in him not the least anxiety to stand well with any reader, more than to stand ill, as ill as any reader likes !

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric (Preface to Mémoires depuis 1763 jusqu'à 1774), vi. 6, 7 : "Mémoires" (Chapter First, including all the Polish part) "were finished in 1775 ; Preface is of 1779."

Third parties, it would seem, have small temptation to become his advocates ; he himself being so totally unprovided with thanks for you ! But, on another score, and for the sake of a better kind of readers, there is one third party bound to remark : 1°. That hardly any Sovereign known to us did, in his general practice, if you will examine it, more perfectly respect the boundaries of his neighbours ; and go on the road that was his own, anxious to tread on no man's toes if he could avoid it : a Sovereign who, at all times, strictly and beneficently confined himself to what belonged to his real business and him. 2°. That apparently, therefore, he must have considered Poland to be an exceptional case, unique in his experience : case of a moribund Anarchy, fallen down as carrion on the common highways of the world ; belonging to nobody in particular ; liable to be cut into (nay, for sanitary reasons requiring it, if one were a Rhadamanthus Errant, which one is not !)—liable to be cut into, on a great and critically stringent occasion ; no question to be asked of it ; your only question the consent of bystanders, and the moderate certainty that nobody got a glaringly disproportionate share ! That must have been, on the part of an equitable Friedrich, or even of a Friedrich accurate in Book-keeping by Double Entry, the notion silently formed about Poland.

Whether his notion was scientifically right, and conformable to actual fact, is a question I have no thought of entering on ; still less, whether Friedrich was morally right, or whether there was not a higher rectitude, granting even the fact, in putting it in practice. These are questions on which an Editor may have his opinion, partly complete for a long time past, partly not complete, or, in human language, completable or pronounceable at all ; and may carefully forbear to obtrude it on his readers ; and only advise them to look with their own best eyesight, to be deaf to the multiplex noises which are evidently blind, and to think what they find thinkablest on such a subject. Were it never so just, proper, and needful, this is by nature a case of Lynch Law ; upon which, in the way of approval or apology, no spoken word is permissible. Lynch being so dangerous a Lawgiver, even when an indispensable one !—

For, granting that the Nation of Poland was for centuries past an Anarchy doomed by the Eternal Laws of Heaven to die, and then of course to get gradually buried, or eaten by neighbours, were it only for sanitary reasons,—it will by no means suit, to declare openly on behalf of terrestrial neighbours who have taken up such an idea (granting it were even a just one, and a true reading of the silent but inexorably certain purposes of Heaven), That they, those volunteer terrestrial neighbours, are justified in breaking in upon the poor dying or dead carcass, and flaying and burying it, with amicable sharing of skin and shoes ! If it even were certain that the wretched Polish Nation, for the last forty years hastening with especial speed towards death, did in present circumstances, with such a howling canaille of Turk Janissaries and vultures of creation busy round it, actually require prompt surgery, in the usual method by neighbours,—the neighbours shall and must do that function at their own risk. If Heaven did appoint them to it, Heaven, for certain, will at last justify them ; and in the mean while, for a generation or two, the same Heaven (I can believe) has appointed that Earth shall pretty unanimously condemn them. The shrieks, the foam-lipped curses of mistaken mankind, in such case, are mankind's one security against over-promptitude (which is so dreadfully possible) on the part of surgical neighbours.

Alas, yes, my articulate-speaking friends ; here, as so often elsewhere, the solution of the riddle is not Logic, but Silence. When a dark human Individual has filled the measure of his wicked blockheadisms, sins and brutal nuisancings, there are Gibbets provided, there are Laws provided ; and you can, in an articulate regular manuer, hang him and finish him, to general satisfaction. Nations too, you may depend on it as certain, do require the same process, and do infallibly get it withal ; Heaven's Justice, with written Laws or without, being the most indispensable and the inevitable thing I know of in this Universe. No doing without it ; and it is sure to come :—and the Judges and Executioners, we observe, are not, in that latter case, escorted in and out by the Sheriffs of Counties and general ringing of bells ; not so, in that latter case, but far otherwise !—

And now, leaving that vexed question, we will throw one glance—only one is permitted—into the far more profitable question, which probably will one day be the sole one on this matter, What became of poor West-Preussen under Friedrich ? Had it to sit weeping unconsolably, or not ? Herr Dr. Freytag, a man of good repute in Literature, has, in one of his late Books of Popular History, gone into this subject, in a serious way, and certainly with opportunities far beyond mine for informing himself upon it :—from him these Passages have been excerpted, labelled, and translated by a good hand :

Acquisition of Polish Prussia. “During several Centuries, the much-divided Germans had habitually been pressed upon, and straitened and injured, by greedy conquering neighbours ; Friedrich was the first Conqueror who once more pushed forward the German Frontier towards the East ; reminding the Germans again, that it was their task to carry Law, Culture, Liberty and Industry, into the East of Europe. All Friedrich’s Lands, with the exception only of some Old-Saxon territory had, by force and colonisation, been painfully gained from the Slave. At no time since the migrations of the Middle Ages, had this struggle for possession of the wide Plains to the east of Oder ceased. When arms were at rest, politicians carried on the struggle.”

Persecution of German Protestants in Poland. “In the very ‘Century of Enlightenment’ the persecution of the Germans became fanatical in those Countries ; one Protestant Church after the other got confiscated ; pulled down ; if built of wood, set on fire : its Church once burnt, the Village had lost the privilege of having one. Ministers and schoolmasters were driven away, cruelly maltreated. ‘Vexa Lutheranum, dabit Thalerum (wring the Lutheran, if he has money in him),’ became the current Proverb of the Poles in regard to Germans.

¹ G. Freytag, Neue Bilder aus dem Leben des deutschen Volkes (Leipzig, 1862).

A Protestant Starost of Gnesen, a Herr von Unruh of the House of Birnbaum, one of the largest proprietors of the country, was condemned to die, and first to have his tongue pulled out and his hands cut off,—for the crime of having copied into his Notebook some strong passages against the Jesuits, extracted from German Books. Patriotic ‘Confederates of Bar,’ joined by all the plunderous vagabonds around, went roaming and ravaging through the country, falling upon small towns and German villages. The Polish Nobleman, Roskowski” (a celebrated “symbolical” Nobleman, this), “put on one red boot and one black, symbolising fire and death; and in this guise rode about, murdering and burning, from place to place; finally, at Jastrow, he cut off the hands, feet, and lastly the head of the Protestant Pastor, Willich by name, and threw the limbs into a swamp. This happened in 1768.”

In what State Friedrich found the Polish Provinces. “Some few only of the larger German Towns, which were secured by walls, and some protected Districts inhabited exclusively by Germans,—as the Niederung near Dantzic, the Villages under the mild rule of the Cistercians of Oliva, and the opulent German towns of the Catholic Ermeland,—were in tolerable circumstances. The other Towns lay in ruins; so also most of the Hamlets (Höfe) of the open Country. Bromberg, the city of German Colonists, the Prussians found in heaps and ruins: to this hour it has not been possible to ascertain clearly how the Town came into this condition.’ No historian, no document, tells of the destruction and slaughter that had been going on, in the whole district of the Netze there, during the last ten years before the arrival of the Prussians. The Town of Culm had preserved its strong old walls and stately churches; but in the streets, the necks of the cellars stood out above the rotten timber and brick heaps of the tumbled houses: whole streets consisted merely of such cellars, in which wretched people were still trying to live. Of the forty houses in the large Market-place of Culm, twenty-eight had no doors, no roofs, no windows, and no owners. Other towns were in similar condition.”

“The Country people hardly knew such a thing as bread; many had never in their life tasted such a delicacy; few Villages possessed an oven. A weaving-loom was rare, the spinning-wheel unknown. The main article of furniture, in this bare scene of squalor, was the Crucifix and vessel of Holy

¹ “Neue Preussische Provinzialblätter, Year 1854, No. 4, p. 259.”

Water under it,"—(and "Polack! Catholik!" if a drop of gin be added).—"The Peasant-Noble" (unvoting, inferior kind) "was hardly different from the common Peasant; he himself guided his Hook-Plough (Hacken-pflug), and clattered with his wooden slippers upon the plankless floor of his hut." * * "It was a desolate land, without discipline, without law, without a master. On 9,000 English square miles lived 500,000 souls: not 55 to the square mile."

Sets to Work. "The very rottenness of the Country became an attraction for Friedrich; and henceforth West-Prussen was, what hitherto Silesia had been, his favourite child; which, with infinite care, like that of an anxious loving mother, he washed, brushed, new-dressed, and forced to go to school and into orderly habits, and kept ever in his eye. The diplomatic squabbles about this 'acquisition' were still going on, when he had already sent" (so early as June 4th, 1772, and still more on September 13th of that Year¹) "a body of his best Official People into this waste-howling scene, to set about organising it. The Landschaften (Counties) were divided into small Circles; in a minimum of time, the land was valued, and an equal tax put upon it; every Circle received its Land-rath, Law-court, Post-office, and Sanitary Police. New Parishes, each with its Church and Parson, were called into existence as by miracle; a company of 187 Schoolmasters,—partly selected and trained by the excellent Semler" (famous over Germany, in Halle University and Seminarium, not yet in England),—"were sent into the Country; multitudes of German mechanics too, from brick-makers to machine-builders. Everywhere there began a digging, a hammering, a building; Cities were peopled anew; street after street rose out of the heaps of ruins; new Villages of Colonists were laid out, new modes of agriculture ordered. In the first Year after taking possession, the great Canal" (of Bromberg) "was dug; which, in a length of fifteen miles, connects, by the Netze River, the Weichsel with the Oder and the Elbe: within one year after giving the order, the King saw loaded vessels from the Oder, 120 feet in length of keel," and of forty tons burden, "enter the Weichsel. The vast breadths of land, gained from the state of swamp by drainage into this Canal, were immediately peopled by German Colonists."

¹ See his new Dialogue with Roden, our Wesel acquaintance, who was a principal Captain in this business (in Preuss, iv. 57, 58: date of the Dialogue is "11th May 1772;"—Roden was on the ground, 4th June next; but, owing to Austrian delays, did not begin till September 13th).

"As his Seven-Years Struggle of War may be called super-human, so was there also in his present Labour of Peace something enormous ; which appeared to his contemporaries" (unless my fancy mislead me) "almost preternatural, at times inhuman. It was grand, but also terrible, that the success of the whole was to him, at all moments, the one thing to be striven after ; the comfort of the individual of no concern at all. When, in the Marshland of the Netze, he counted more the strokes of the 10,000 spades, than the sufferings of the workers, sick with the marsh-fever in the hospitals which he had built for them ;¹ when, restless, his demands outran the quickest performance,—there united itself to the deepest reverence and devotedness, in his People, a feeling of awe, as for one whose limbs are not moved by earthly life" (fanciful, considerably !). * * "And when Goethe, himself become an old man, finished his last Drama" (Second Part of Faust), "the figure of the old King again arose on him, and stepped into his Poem ; and his Faust got transformed into an unresting, creating, pitilessly exacting Master, forcing-on his salutiferous drains and fruitful canals through the morasses of the Weichsel." *

These statements and pencillings of Freytag, apart from here and there a flourish of poetic sentiment, I believe my readers can accept as essentially true, and a correct portrait of the fact. And therewith, con la bocca dolce, we will rise from this Supper of Horrors. That Friedrich fortified the Country, that he built an impregnable Graudentz, and two other Fortresses, rendering the Country, and himself on that Eastern side, impregnable henceforth, all readers can believe. Friedrich has been building various Fortresses in this interim, though we have taken no notice of them ; building and repairing many things ;—trimming up his Military quite to the old pitch, as the most particular thing of all. He has his new Silesian Fortress of Silberberg,—big Fortress, looking into certain dangerous Bohemian Doors (in Tobias Stusche's Country, if readers recollect an old adventure now mythical) ;—his new Silesian Silberberg, his newer Polish Graudentz, and many others, and flatters himself he is not now pregnable on any side.

¹ Compare Preuss, iv. 60–71.

² G. Freytag, Neue Bilder aus dem Leben des deutschen Volkes (Leipzig, 1862), pp. 397–408.

A Friedrich working, all along, in Poland especially, amid what circumambient deluges of maledictory outcries, and mendacious shriekeries from an ill-informed Public, is not now worth mentioning. Mere distracted rumours, of the Pamphleteer and Newspaper kind ; which, after hunting them a long time, through dense and rare, end mostly in zero, and angry darkness of some poor human brain,—or even testify in favour of this Head-Worker, and of the sense he shows, especially of the patience. For example : that of the “ Polish Towns and Villages, ordered ” by this Tyrant “ to deliver, each of them, so many marriageable girls ; each girl to bring with her as dowry, furnished by her parents, 1 feather-bed, 4 pillows, 1 cow, 3 swine, and 3 ducats,”—in which desirable condition this tyrannous King “ sent her into the Brandenburg States to be wedded and promote population.”¹ Feather-beds, swine and ducats, had their value in Brandenburg ; but were girls such a scarcity there ? Most extraordinary new Rape of the Sabines ; for which Herr Preuss can find no basis or source,—nor can I ; except in the brain of Reverend Lindsey and his loud Letters on Poland above mentioned.

Dantzig too, and the Harbour-dues, what a case ! Dantzig Harbour, that is to say, Netze River, belongs mainly to Friedrich, Dantzig City not,—such the Czarina’s lofty whim, in the late Partition Treatyings ; not good to contradict, in the then circumstances ; still less afterwards, though it brought chicanings more than enough. “ And she was not ill pleased to keep this thorn in the King’s foot for her own conveniences,” thinks the King ; though, mainly, he perceives that it is the English acting on her grandiose mind : English, who were apprehensive for their Baltic trade under this new Proprietor, and who egged on an ambitious Czarina to protect Human Liberty, and an inflated Dantzig Bürgermeister to stand up for ditto ; and made a dismal shriekery in the Newspapers, and got into dreadful ill-humour with said Proprietor of Dantzig Harbour, and has never quite recovered from it to this day. Lindsey's Polish Letters are very loud again on this occasion, aided by his Seven Dialogues on Poland; concerning which, partly for extinct Lindsey's sake, let us cite one small passage, and so wind up:

¹ Lindsey, Letters on Poland (Letter 2d), p. 61 ; Peyssonnel (in some French Book of his, “ solemnly presented to Louis XVI. and the Constituent Assembly : ” cited in Preuss, iv. 85) ; &c. &c.

March 2d, 1775, in answer to Voltaire, Friedrich writes: * * "The Polish Dialogues you speak of are not known to me. I think of such Satires, with Epictetus: 'If they tell any truth of thee, correct thyself; if they are lies, laugh at them.' I have learned, with years, to become a steady coach-horse; I do my stage, like a diligent roadster, and pay no heed to the little dogs that will bark by the way." And then, three weeks after:

"I have at length got the Seven Dialogues on Poland; and the whole history of them as well. The Author is an Englishman named Lindsey, Parson by profession, and Tutor to the young Prince Poniatowski, the King of Poland's Nephew,"—Nephew Joseph, Andreas's Son, not the undistinguished Nephew: so we will believe for poor loud Lindsey's sake! "It was at the instigation of the Czartoryskis, Uncles of the King, that Lindsey composed this Satire,—in English first of all. Satire ready, they perceived that nobody in Poland would understand it, unless it were translated into French; which accordingly was done. But as their translator was unskilful, they sent the Dialogues to a certain Gérard at Dantzig, who at that time was French Consul there, and who is at present a Clerk in your Foreign Office under M. de Vergennes. This Gérard, who does not want for wit, but who does me the honour to hate me cordially, retouched these Dialogues, and put them into the condition they were published in. I have laughed a good deal at them: here and there occur coarse things (grossièretés), and platitudes of the insipid kind; but there are traits of good pleasantry. I shall not go fencing with goosequills against this sycophant. As Mazarin said, 'Let the French keep singing, provided they let us keep doing.'"¹

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiii. 319-321: "Potsdam, 2d March 1775," and "25th March" following See Preuss, iii. 275, iv. 85.

CHAPTER V.

A CHAPTER OF MISCELLANIES.

AFTER Neustadt, Kaiser Joseph and the King had no more Interviews. Kaunitz's procedures in the subsequent Pacification and Partition business had completely estranged the two Sovereigns: to friendly visiting, a very different state of mutual feeling had succeeded; which went on, such "the immeasurable ambition" visible in some of us, deepening and worsening itself, instead of improving or abating. Friedrich had Joseph's Portrait hung in conspicuous position in the rooms where he lived; somebody noticing the fact, Friedrich answered: "Ah, yes, I am obliged to keep that young Gentleman in my eye." And, in effect, the rest of Friedrich's Political Activity, from this time onwards, may be defined as an ever-vigilant defence of himself, and of the German Reich, against Austrian Encroachment: which, to him, in the years then running, was the grand impending peril; and which to us in the new times has become so inexpressibly uninteresting, and will bear no narrative. Austrian Encroachment did not prove to be the death-peril that had overhung the world in Friedrich's last years!—

These, accordingly, are years in which the Historical interest goes on diminishing; and only the Biographical, were anything of Biography attainable, is left. Friedrich's industrial, economic and other Royal activities are as beautiful as ever; but cannot to our readers, in our limits, be described with advantage. Events of world interest, after the Partition of Poland, do not fall out, or Friedrich is not concerned in them. It is a dim element; its significance chiefly German or Prussian, not European. What of humanly interesting is discoverable in it,—at least, while the Austrian Grudge continues in a chronic state, and has no acute fit,—I will here present in the shape of detached Fragments, suitably arranged and rendered legible, in hopes these may still have some lucency for readers, and render more conceivable the surrounding masses that have to be left dark. Our first Piece is of Winter, or late Autumn, 1771,—while the solution of the Polish Business is still in its inchoative stages ; perfectly complete in the Artist's own mind ; Russia too adhering ; but Kaunitz so refractory and contradictory.

Herr Doctor Zimmermann, the famous Author of the Book "On Solitude," walks reverentially before Friedrich's Door in the Dusk of an October Evening ; and has a Royal Interview next Day.

Friday Evening, 25th October 1771, is the date of Zimmermann's walk of contemplation,—among the pale Statues and deciduous Gardenings of Sans-Souci Cottage (better than any Rialto, at its best), the eternal stars coming out overhead, and the transitory candle-light of a King Friedrich close by.

"At Sans-Souci," says he, in his famed Book, "where that old God of War (Kriegsgott) forges his thunder-bolts, and writes Works of Intellect for Posterity ; where he governs his People as the best father would his house ; where, during one half of the day, he accepts and reads the petitions and complaints of the meanest citizen or peasant ; comes to help of his Countries on all sides with astonishing sums of money, expecting no payment, nor seeking anything but the Common Weal ; and where, during the other half, he is a Poet and Philosopher ;—at Sans-Souci, I say, there reigns all round a silence, in which you can hear the faintest breath of every soft wind. I mounted this Hill for the first time in Winter" (late Autumn, 25th October 1771, edge of Winter), "in the dusk. When I beheld the small Dwelling-House of this Convulser of the World close by me, and was near his very chamber, I saw indeed a light inside, but no sentry or watchman at the Hero's door ; no soul to ask me, Who I was, or what I wanted. I saw nothing ; and walked about as I pleased before this small and silent House." ¹

Yes, Doctor, this is your Kriegsgott ; throned in a free and easy fashion. In regard to that of Sentries, I believe these do come up from Potsdam nightly, a corporal and six rank-and-file ; but perhaps it is at a later hour ; perhaps they sit within doors, silent, not to make noises. Another gentleman, of sauntering nocturnal habits, testifies to having, one night, seen the King actually asleep in bed, the doors being left ajar.¹—As Zimmermann had a Dialogue next day with his Majesty, which we propose to give ; still more, as he made such noise in the world by other Dialogues with Friedrich, and by a strange Book about them, which are still ahead,—readers may desire to know a little who or what the Zimmermann is, and be willing for a rough brief Note upon him, which certainly is not readier than it is rough :

¹ Preuss, i. 387 ("from Einsamkeit," Zimmermann's Solitude, "i. 110 ; Edition of Leipzig, 1784").

Johann George Zimmermann ; born 1728, at Brugg, in the Canton of Bern, where his father seems to have had some little property and no employment, “a Rathsherr (Town-Councillor), who was much respected.” Of brothers or sisters, no mention. The Mother being from the French part of the Canton, he learned to speak both languages. Went to Bern for his Latin and high-schooling ; then to Göttingen, where he studied medicine, under the once great Haller and other now dimmed celebrities. Haller, himself from Bern, had taken Zimmermann to board, and became much attached to him : Haller, in 1752, came on a summer visit to native Bern ; Zimmermann, who had in the mean time been “for a few months” in France, in Italy and England, now returned and joined him there ; but the great man feeling very poorly and very old, decided that he would like to stay in Bern, and not move any more ;—Zimmermann, accordingly, was sent to Göttingen to bring Mrs. Haller, with her Daughters, band-boxes and effects, home to Bern. Which he did ;—and not only them, but a soft ingenious, ingenuous, and rather pretty young Göttingen Lady along with them, as his own wife withal. With her he settled as Stadtphysicus (Town-Doctor) in native Brugg ; where his beloved Hallers were within reach ; and practice in abundance, and honours, all that the place yielded, were in readiness for him.

Here he continued some sixteen years ; very busy, very successful in medicine and literature ; but “tormented with hypochondria ;"—having indeed an immense conceit of himself, and generally too thin a skin for this world. Here he first wrote his Book on Solitude, a Book famed over all the world in my young days (and perhaps still famed) ; he wrote it a second time, much enlarged, about thirty years after :¹ I read it (in the curtailed English-Mercier form, no Scene in it like the above), in early boyhood,—and thank it for nothing, or nearly so. Zimmermann lived much alone, at Brugg, and elsewhere ; all his days, "Hypochondria" was the main company he had :—and it was natural, but unprofitable that he should say, to himself and others, the best he could for that bad arrangement : poor soul ! He wrote also on Medical Experience, a famed Book in its day ;² also on National Pride ; and became famed through the Universe, and was Member of infinite Learned Societies.

¹ Preuss, i. 388.

All which rendered dull dead Brugg still duller and more dead ; unfit utterly for a man of such sublime accomplishments. Plenty of Counts Stadion, Kings of Poland even, offered him engagements ; eager to possess such a man, and deliver him from dull dead Brugg ; but he had hypochondria, and always feared their deliverance might be into something duller. At length,—in his fortieth year, 1768,—the place of Court-Physician (Hofmedicus), at Hanover, was offered him by George the Third of pious memory, and this he resolved to accept ; and did lift anchor, and accept and occupy accordingly.

Alas, at the Gate of Hanover, "his carriage overset ;" broke his poor old Mother-in-law's leg (who had been rejoicing doubtless to get home into her own Country), and was the end of her,—poor old soul ;—and the beginning of misfortunes continual and too tedious to mention. Spleen, envy, malice and calumny, from the Hanover Medical world ; treatment, "by the old buckram Hofdames who had drunk coffee with George II.," "which was fitter for a laquais-de-place" than for a medical gentleman of eminence : unworthy treatment, in fact, in many or most quarters ;—followed by ¹ Betrachtungen über die Einsamkeit, von Doctor J. G. Zimmermann, Stadtphysicus in Brugg (Zürich, 1756),—as yet only "1 vol. 8vo, price 6d." (5 groschen) ; but it grew with years ; and (Leipzig, 1784) came out remodelled into 4 voll. ;—was translated into French, "with many omissions," by Mercier (Paris, 1790) ; into English from Mercier (London, 1791).

² "Zürich 1763-4 ;" by and by, one "Dobson did it into English."

hypochondria, by dreadful bodily disorder (kind not given or discoverable), "so that I suffered the pains of Hell," sat weeping, sat gnashing my teeth, and couldn't write a Note after dinner; followed finally by the sickness, and then by the death, of my poor Wife, "after five months of torment." Upon which, in 1771, Zimmermann's friends,—for he had many friends, being, in fact, a person of fine graceful intellect, high proud feelings and tender sensibilities, gone all to this sad state,—rallied themselves; set his Hanover house in order for him (governess for his children, what not); and sent him off to Berlin, there to be dealt with by one Meckel, an incomparable Surgeon, and he healed of his dreadful disorder ("Leibesschade, of which the first traces had appeared in Brugg"),—though to most people it seemed rather he would die; "and one Medical Eminency in Hanover said to myself" (Zimmermann) "one day: 'Dr. So-and-so is to have your Pension, I am told; now, by all right, it should belong to me, don't you think so?'" What "I" thought of the matter, seeing the greedy gentleman thus "parting my skin," may be conjectured!—

The famed Meckel received his famed patient with a nobleness worthy of the heroic ages. Lodged him in his own house, in softest beds and appliances; spoke comfort to him, hope to him,—the gallant Meckel;—rallied, in fact, the due medical staff one morning; came up to Zimmermann, who "stripped," with the heart of a lamb and lion conjoined, and trusting in God, "flung himself on his bed" (on his face, or on his back, we never know), and there, by the hands of Meckel and staff, "received above 2,000 (two thousand) cuts, in the space of an hour and half, without uttering one word or sound." A frightful operation, gallantly endured, and skilfully done; whereby the "bodily disorder" (Leibesschade), whatever it might be, was effectually and forever sent about its business by the noble Meckel.

Hospitalities and soft hushed kindness and soothing ministrations, by Meckel and by everybody, were now doubled and trebled: wise kind Madam Meckel, young kind Mamsell Meckel, and the Son (who "now, in 1788, lectures in Göttingen"); not these only, nor Schmucker Head Army-Surgeon, and the ever-memorable Herr Generalchirurgus Madan, who had both been in the operation; not these only, but by degrees all that was distinguished in the Berlin world, Ramler, Büsching, Sulzer, Prime Minister Hertzberg, Queen's and King's Equerries, and honourable men and women,—bore him "on angel-wings," towards complete recovery. Talked to him, sang and danced to him (at least the "Muses" and the female Meckels danced and sang), and all lapped him against eating cares, till, after twelve weeks, he was fairly on his feet again, and able to make jaunts in the neighbourhood with his "life's saviour," and enjoy the pleasant Autumn weather to his farther profit.—All this, though described in ridiculous superlative by Zimmermann, is really touching, beautiful and human: perhaps never in his life was he so happy, or a thousandth part so helped by man, as while under the roof of this thrice-useful Meckel,—more power to Meckel!

Head Army-Surgeon Schmucker had gone through all the Seven-Years War; Zimmermann, an ardent Hero-worshipper, was never weary questioning him, listening to him in full career of narrative, on this great subject,—only eight years old at that time. Among their country drives, Meckel took him to Potsdam, twenty English miles off; in the end of October, there to stay a night. This was the ever-memorable Friday, when we first ascended the Hill of Sans-Souci, and had our evening walk of contemplation; to be followed by a morrow which was ten times more memorable; as readers shall now see.¹

Next day, Zimmermann has a Dialogue. Schmucker had his apartments in "Little Sans-Souci," where the King now lived (Big Sans-Souci, or "Sans-Souci" by itself, means in those days, not in ours at all, "New Palace, Neue Palais," now in all its splendour of fresh finish). De Catt, Friedrich's Reader, whom we know well, was a Genevese, and knew Zimmermann from of old. Schmucker and De Catt were privately twitching up Friedrich's curiosity,—to whom also Zimmermann's name, and perhaps his late surgical operation might be known: "Can he speak French?"—"Native to him, your Majesty." Friedrich had some notion to see Zimmermann; and judicious De Catt, on this fortunate Saturday, "26th October 1771," morrow after Zimmermann's arrival at Potsdam, "came to our inn about 1 p.m." (King's dinner just done); "and asked me to come and look at the beauties of Sans-Souci" (Big Sans-Souci) "for a little." Zimmermann willingly went: Catt left him in good hands to see the beauties: slept off, for his own part, to "Little Sans-Souci;" came back, took Zimmermann thither; left him with Schmucker, all trembling, thinking perhaps the King might call him. "I trembled sometimes, then again I felt exceeding happiness:" I was in Schmucker's room, sitting by the fire, mostly alone for a good while, "the room that had once been Marquis d'Argens's" (who is now dead, and buried far away, good old soul);—when, at last, about half-past 4, Catt came jumping in, breathless with joy; snatched me up: "His Majesty wants to speak with you this very moment!" Zimmermann's self shall say the rest.

¹ Jördens, Lexikon (§ Zimmermann), v. 632-658 (exact and even eloquent account, as these of Jördens, unexpectedly, often are); Zimmermann himself, Unterredungen mit Friedrich dem Grossen (ubi infra); Tissot, Vie de M. Zimmermann (Lausanne, 1797); &c. &c.

"I hurried, hand-in-hand with Catt, along a row of Chambers. 'Here,' said Catt, 'we are now at the King's room!'—My heart thumped, like to spring out of my body. Catt went in; but next moment the door again opened, and Catt bade me enter.

"In the middle of the room stood an iron camp-bed without curtains. There, on a worn mattress, lay King Friedrich, the terror of Europe, without coverlet, in an old blue roque-laure. He had a big cocked-hat, with a white feather" (hat aged, worn soft as duffel, equal to most caps; "feather" is not perpendicular, but horizontal, round the inside of the brim)," on his head.

"The King took off his hat very graciously, when I was perhaps ten steps from him; and said in French (our whole Dialogue proceeded in French): 'Come nearer, M. Zimmermann.'

"I advanced to within two steps of the King; he said in the meanwhile to Catt: 'Call Schmucker in, too.' Herr Schmucker came; placed himself behind the King, his back to the wall; and Catt stood behind him. Now the Colloquy began.

King. "'I hear you have found your health again in Berlin; I wish you joy of that.' Ego. "'I have found my life again in Berlin; but at this moment, Sire, I find here a still greater happiness!' (Ach!)

King. "'You have stood a cruel operation: you must have suffered horribly?' Ego. "'Sire, it was well worth while.'

King. "'Did you let them bind you before the operation?'

Ego. "'No: I resolved to keep my freedom.'

King (laughing in a very kind manner). "'Oh, you behaved like a brave Switzer! But you are quite recovered, though?'

Ego. "'Sire, I have seen all the wonders of your creation in Sans-Souci, and feel well in looking at them.'

King. “‘I am glad of that. But you must have a care, and especially not get on horseback.’ Ego. “‘It will be pleasant and easy for me to follow the counsels of your Majesty.’

King. “‘From what Town in the Canton of Bern are you originally?’ Ego. “‘From Brugg.’

King. “‘I don’t know that Town.’ (‘No wonder, thought I!’)

King. “‘Where did you study?’ Ego. “‘At Göttingen: Haller was my teacher.’

King. “‘What is M. Haller doing now?’ Ego. “‘He is concluding his literary career with a romance.’ (‘Usony had just come out;’—no mortal now reads a word of it; and the great Haller is dreadfully forgotten already!)

King. “‘Ah, that is pretty!—On what system do you treat your patients?’ Ego. “‘Not on any system.’

King. “‘But there are some Physicians whose methods you prefer to those of others?’ Ego. “‘I especially like Tissot’s methods, who is a familiar friend of mine.’

King. “‘I know M. Tissot. I have read his writings, and value them very much. On the whole, I love the Art of Medicine. My father wished me to get some knowledge in it. He often sent me into the Hospitals; and even into those for venereal patients, with a view of warning by example.’ Ego. “‘And by terrible example!—Sire, Medicine is a very difficult Art. But your Majesty is used to bring all Arts under subjection to the force of your genius, and to conquer all that is difficult.’

King. “‘Alas, no: I cannot conquer all that is difficult!’ (Hard-mouthed Kaunitz, for example; stockstill, with his right ear turned on Turkey: how get Kaunitz into step!)—“Here the King became reflective; was silent for a little moment, and then asked me, with a most bright smile: ‘How many Churchyards have you filled?’ (A common question of his to Members of the Faculty). Ego. “‘Perhaps, in my youth, I have done a little that way! But now it goes better; for I am timid rather than bold.’

King. “‘Very good, very good.’

“Our Dialogue now became extremely brisk. The King quickened into extraordinary vivacity; and examined me now in the character of Doctor, with such a stringency as, in the year 1751, at Göttingen, when I stood for my Degree, the learned Professors Haller, Richter, Segner, and Brendel (for which Heaven recompense them!) never dreamed of! All in-inflammatory fevers, and the most important of the slow diseases, the King mustered with me, in their order. He asked me, How and whereby I recognised each of these diseases; how and whereby distinguished them from the approximate maladies; what my procedure was in simple and in complicated cases; and how I cured all those disorders? On the varieties, the accidents, the mode of treatment, of small-pox especially, the King inquired with peculiar strictness;—and spoke, with much emotion, of that young Prince of his House who was carried off, some years ago, by that disorder”—(suddenly arrested by it, while on march with his regiment, “near Ruppín, 26th May 1767.” This is the Prince Henri, junior Brother of the subsequent King, Friedrich Wilhelm II., who, among other fooleries, invaded France, in 1792, with such success. Both Henri and he, as boys, used to be familiar to us in the final winters of the late War. Poor Henri had died at the age of nineteen,—as yet all brightness, amiability, and nothing else: Friedrich sent an Éloge of him to his Académie,¹ which is touchingly and strangely filled with authentic sorrow for this young Nephew of his, but otherwise empty,—a mere bottle of sighs and tears). “Then he came upon Inoculation; went along over an incredible multitude of other medical subjects. Into all he threw masterly glances; spoke of all with the soundest” (all in the superlative) “knowledge of the matter, and with no less penetration than liveliness and sense.

“With heartfelt satisfaction, and with the freest soul, I made my answers to his Majesty. It is true, he potently supported and encouraged me. Ever and anon his Majesty was saying to me: ‘That is very good;—that is excellently thought and expressed—your mode of proceeding, altogether, pleases me very well;—I rejoice to see how much our ways of thinking correspond.’ Often, too, he had the graciousness to add: ‘But I weary you with my many questions!’ His scientific questions I answered with simplicity, clearness and brevity; and could not forbear sometimes expressing my astonishment at the deep and conclusive (tiefen und frappanten) medical insights and judgments of the King.

“His Majesty came now upon the history of his own maladies. He told me them over, in their series; and asked my opinion and advice about each. On the Hæmorrhoids, which he greatly complained of, I said something that struck him. Instantly he started up in his bed; turned his head round towards the wall, and said : 'Schmucker, write me that down !' I started in fright at this word ; and not without reason ! Then our Colloquy proceeded :

¹ In Œuvres de Frédéric, vii. 37 et seq.

King. "'The Gout likes to take up his quarters with me ; he knows I am a Prince, and thinks I shall feed him well. But I feed him ill ; I live very meagrely.'

Ego. "'May Gout thereby get disgusted, and forbear ever calling on your Majesty !'

King. "'I am grown old. Diseases will no longer have pity on me.'

Ego. "'Europe feels that your Majesty is not old ; and your Majesty's look (physiognomie) shows that you have still the same force as in your thirtieth year.'

King (laughing, and shaking his head). "'Well, well, well !'

"In this way, for an hour and quarter, with uninterrupted vivacity, the Dialogue went on. At last the King gave me the sign to go ; lifting his hat very kindly, and saying : 'Adieu, my dear M. Zimmermann ; I am very glad to have seen you.' " Toward 6 p.m. now, and Friedrich must sign his Despatches ; have his Concert, have his reading ; then to supper (as spectator only), with Quintus Icilius and old Lord Marischal, to-night, or whom ?'

"Herr von Catt accompanied me into the anteroom, and Schmucker followed. I could not stir from the spot ; could not speak, was so charmed and so touched, that I broke into a stream of tears " (being very weak of nerves at the time !). "Herr von Catt said : 'I am now going back to the King ; go you into the room where I took you up ; about eight, I will conduct you home.' I pressed my excellent countryman's hand, I"—"Schmucker said, I had stood too near his Majesty ; I had spoken too frankly, with too much vivacity ; nay, what was unheard of in the world, I had 'gesticulated' before his Majesty ! 'In presence of a King,' said Herr Schmucker, 'one must stand stiff, and not stir.' De Catt came back to us at eight ; and, in Schmucker's presence " (let him chew the cud of that !), "reported the following little Dialogue with the King :

King. "'What says Zimmermann ?' De Catt. "'Zimmermann, at the door of your Majesty's room, burst into a stream of tears.' King. "'I love those tender affectionate hearts ; I love right well those brave Swiss people !'

¹ Of Icilius, and a quarrel and estrangement there had lately been, now happily reconciled, see Nicolai, Anekdoten, vi. 140-142.

"Next morning the King was heard to say : 'I have found Zimmermann quite what you described him.'—Catt assured me furthermore, 'Since the Seven-Years War there had thousands of strangers, persons of rank, come to Potsdam, wishing to speak with the King, and had not attained that favour ; and of those who had, there could not one individual boast that his Majesty had talked with him an hour and quarter at once.'" (Fourteen years hence, he dismissed Mirabeau in half an hour ; which was itself a good allowance.)

"Sunday 27th, I left Potsdam, with my kind Meckels, in an enthusiasm of admiration, astonishment, love and gratitude ; wrote to the King from Berlin, sent him a Tissot's Book (marked on the margins for Majesty's use), which he acknowledged by some word to Catt ; whereupon I"—in short, I got home to Hanover, in a more or less seraphic condition,—“with indescribable, unspeakable,” what not,—early in November : and, as a healed man, never more troubled with that disorder, though still troubled with many and many, endeavoured to get a little work out of myself again.'

"Zimmermann was tall, handsome of shape ; his exterior was distinguished and imposing," says Jördens.' "He had a firm and light step ; stood gracefully ; presented himself well. He had a fine head ; his voice was agreeable ; and intellect sparkled in his eyes :"—had it not been for those dreadful hypochondrias, and confused disasters, a very pretty man. At the time of this first visit to Friedrich he is 43 years of age, and Friedrich is on the borders of sixty. Zimmermann, with still more famous Dialogues, will reappear on us from Hanover, on a sad occasion ! Meanwhile, few weeks after him, here is a Visit of far more joyful kind.

Sister Ulrique, Queen-Dowager of Sweden, revisits her native Pluce (December 1771—August 1772).

Prince Henri was hardly home from Petersburg and the Swedish Visit, when poor Adolf Friedrich, King of Sweden, died.' A very great and sad event to his Queen, who had loved her old man ; and is now left solitary, eclipsed, in circumstances greatly altered on the sudden. In regard to settlements, Accession of the new Prince, dowager revenues and the like, all went right enough ; which was some alleviation, though an inconsiderable, to the sorrowing Widow. Her two Princes were absent, touring over Europe, when their Father died, and the elder of them, Karl Gustav, suddenly saw himself King. They were in no breathless haste to return ; visited their Uncle, their Prussian kindred, on the way, and had an interesting week at Potsdam and Berlin ;¹ Karl Gustav flying diligently about, still incognito, as “Graf von Gothland,”—a spirited young fellow, perhaps too spirited ;—and did not reach home till May-day was come, and the outburst of the Swedish Summer at hand.

¹ Zimmermann, Meine Unterredungen (Dialogues) with Friedrich the Great (8vo, Leipzig, 1788), pp. 305–326.

² Ubi suprà.

³ 12th February 1771.

Some think the young King had already something dangerous and serious in view, and wished his Mother out of the way for a time. Certain it is she decided on a visit to her native Country in December following : arrived accordingly, December 2d, 1771 ; and till the middle of August next was a shining phenomenon in the Royal House and upper ranks of Berlin Society, and a touching and interesting one to the busy Friedrich himself, as may be supposed. She had her own Apartments and Household at Berlin, in the Palace there, I think ; but went much visiting about, and receiving many visits,—fond especially of literary people.

Friedrich's notices of her are frequent in his Letters of the time, all affectionate, natural and reasonable. Here are the first two I met with : To the Electress of Saxony (three weeks after Ulrique's arrival) : “A thousand excuses, Madam, for not answering sooner ! What will plead for me with a Princess who so well knows the duties of friendship, is, that I have been occupied with the reception of a Sister, who has come to seek consolation in the bosom of her kindred for the loss of a loved Husband, the remembrance of whom saddens and afflicts her.” And again, two months later : * * “Your Royal Highness deigns to take so obliging an interest in the visit I have had ” (and still have) “from the Queen of Sweden.

¹ April 22d-29th : Rodenbeck, iii. 45.

I beheld her as if raised from the dead to me ; for an absence of eight-and-twenty years, in the short space of our duration, is almost equivalent to death. She arrived among us, still in great affliction for the loss she had had of the King ; and I tried to distract her sad thoughts by all the dissipations possible. It is only by dint of such that one compels the mind to shift away from the fatal idea where grief has fixed it : this is not the work of a day, but of time, which in the end succeeds in everything. I congratulate your Royal Highness on your Journey to Bavaria" (on a somewhat similar errand, we may politely say) ; "where you will find yourself in the bosom of a Family that adores you : " after which, and the sight of old scenes, how pleasant to go on to Italy, as you propose.¹

Queen Ulrique,—a solid and ingenuous character (in childhood a favourite of her Father's, so rational, truthful, and of silent staid ways), appears to have been popular in the Berlin circles ; pleasant and pleased, during these eight months. Formey, especially Thiébault, are copious on this Visit of hers ; and give a number of insipid Anecdotes : How there was solemn Session of the Academy made for her, a Paper of the King's to be read there,²—reading beautifully done by me, Thiébault (one of my main functions, this of reading the King's Academy Papers, and my dates of them always correct) ; how Thiébault was invited to dinner in consequence, and again invited : how Formey dined with her Majesty "twenty-five times ;" and "preached to her in the Palace, August 19th" (should be August 9th) ; insipid wholly, vapid and stupid ; descriptive of nothing, except of the vapidities and vanities of certain persons. Leaving these, we will take an Excerpt, ¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiv. 230, 235. "24th December 1771," "February 1772." See also "Épître à la Reine Douairière de Suède" (Poem on the Troubles she has had: Œuvres de Frédéric, xiii. 74, "written in December 1770"), and "Vers à la Reine de Suède," "January 1771" (ibid. 79).

² "Discours de l'Utilité des Sciences et des Arts dans un État" (in Œuvres de Frédéric, ix. 169 et seq.): read "27th January 1772." Formey, ii. 16, &c. &c.

probably our last, from authentic Büsching, which is at least to be depended on for perfect accuracy, and has a feature or two of portraiture.

Büsching, for the last five or six years, is home from Russia; comfortably established here as Consistorialrath, much concerned with School-Superintendence; still more with Geography, with copious rugged Literature of the undigested kind: a man well seen in society; has "six families of rank which invite him to dinner;" all the dining he is equal to, with so much undigested writing on his hands. Büsching, in his final Section, headed Berlin Life, Section more incondite even than its foregoers, has this passage:

"On the Queen-Dowager of Sweden, Louise Ulrique's, coming to Berlin, I felt not a little embarrassed. The case was this: Most part of the Sixth Volume of my Magazine" (meritorious curious Book, sometimes quoted by us here, not yet known in English Libraries) "was printed; and in it, in the printed part, were various things that concerned the deceased Sovereign, King Adolph Friedrich, and his Spouse" (now come to visit us),—"and among these were Articles which the then ruling party in Sweden could certainly not like. And now I was afraid these people would come upon the false notion, that it was from the Queen-Dowager I had got the Articles in question;—notion altogether false, as they had been furnished me by Baron Korf" (well known to Hordt and others of us, at Petersburg, in the Czar-Peter time), "now Russian Minister at Copenhagen. However, when Duke Friedrich of Brunswick" (one of the juniors, soldiering here with his Uncle, as they almost all are) "wrote to me, one day, That his Lady Aunt the Queen of Sweden invited me to dine with her tomorrow, and that he, the Duke, would introduce me,—I at once decided to lay my embarrassment before the Queen herself.

"Next day, when I was presented to her Majesty, she took me by the hand, and led me to a window" (as was her custom with guests whom she judged to be worth questioning and talking to), "and so placed herself in a corner there that I came to stand close before her; when she did me the honour to ask a great many questions about Russia, the Imperial Court especially, and most of all the Grand-Duke" (Czar Paul that is to be)—a kind of kinsman he, his poor Father was my late Husband's Cousin-german, as perhaps you know. "A great deal of time was spent in this way ; so that the Princes and Princesses, punctual to invitation, had to wait above half an hour long ; and the Queen was more than once informed that dinner was on the table and getting cold. I could get nothing of my own mentioned here ; all I could do was to draw back, in a polite way, so soon as the Queen would permit : and afterwards, at table, to explain with brevity my concern about what was printed in the Magazine ; and request the Queen to permit me to send it her to read for herself. She had it, accordingly, that same afternoon.

"A few days after, she invited me again ; again spoke with me a long while in the window embrasure, in a low tone of voice ; confirmed to me all that she had read,—and, in particular, minutely explained that Letter of the King" (one of my Pieces) "in which he relates what passed between him and Count Tessin" (Son's Tutor) "in the Queen's Apartment. At table, she very soon took occasion to say : 'I cannot imagine to myself how the Herr Consistorialrath'" (Büsching, to wit) "'has come upon that Letter of my deceased Lord the King of Sweden's ; which his Majesty did write, and which is now printed in your Magazine. For certain, the King showed it to nobody.'" Whereupon Büsching : "Certainly ; nor is that to be imagined, your Majesty. But the person it was addressed to must have shown it ; and so a copy of it has come to my hands." Queen still expresses her wonder ; whereupon again Büsching, with a courageous candour : "'Your Majesty, most graciously permit me to say, that hitherto all Swedish secrets of Court or State have been procurable for money and good words !' The Queen, to whom I sat directly opposite, cast down her eyes at these words, and smiled ;—and the Reichsrath Graf von Schwerin" (a Swedish Gentleman of hers), "who sat at my left, seized me by the hand, and said : 'Alas, that is true !'"—Here is a difficulty got over ; Magazine Number can come out when it will. As it did, "next Easter-Fair," with proper indications and tacit proofs that the Swedish part of it lay printed several months before the Queen's arrival in our neighbourhood.

Büsching dined with her Majesty several times,—“eating nothing,” he is careful to mention, and was careful to show her Majesty, “except, very gradually, a small bit of bread soaked in a glass of wine !”—meaning thereby, “Note, ye great ones, it is not for your dainties ; in fact, it is out of loyal politeness mainly !” the gloomily humble man.

"One time, the Queen asked me, in presence of various Princes and Princesses of the Royal House: 'Do you think it advisable to enlighten the Lower Classes by education?' To which I answered: 'Considering only under what heavy loads a man of the Lower Classes, especially of the Peasant sort, has to struggle through his life, one would think it was better neither to increase his knowledge nor refine his sensibility. But when one reflects that he, as well as those of the Higher Classes, is to last through Eternity; and withal that good instruction may' (or might, if it be not bad) 'increase his practical intelligence, and help him to methods of alleviating himself in this world, it must be thought advisable to give him useful enlightenment.'" The Queen accorded with this view of the matter.

"Twice I dined with her Majesty at her Sister, Princess Amelia, the Abbess of Quedlinburg's:—and the second time" (must have been Summer 1772), "Professor Sulzer, who was also a guest, caught his death there. When I entered the reception-room, Sulzer was standing in the middle of a thorough-draught, which they had managed to have there, on account of the great heat; and he had just arrived, all in a perspiration, from the Thiergarten: I called him out of the draught, but it was too late."¹ Ach, mein lieber Sulzer,—Alas, dear Sulzer; seriously this time!

Büsching has a great deal to say about Schools, about the "School-Commission 1765," the subjects taught, the methods of teaching devised by Büsching and others, and the King's continual exertions, under deficient funds, in this province of his affairs. Büsching had unheard-of difficulty to rebuild the old Gymnasium at Berlin into a new. Tried everybody; tried the King thrice over, but nobody would. "One of the persons I applied to was Lieutenant-General von Ramin, Governor of Berlin" (surliest of mankind, of whose truculent incivility there go many anecdotes); "to Ramin I wrote, entreating that he would take a good opportunity and suggest a new Town School-house to his Majesty: 'Excellenz, it will render you immortal in the annals of Berlin!' To which Ramin made answer: 'That is an immortality I must renounce the hope of, and leave to the Town-Syndics and yourself. I for my own part, will by no means risk such a proposal to his Majesty; which he would, in all likelihood, answer in the negative, and receive ill at anybody's hands.'" By subscriptions, by bequests, donations, and the private piety of individuals, Büsching aiding and stirring, the thing was at last got done. Here is another glance into School-life ; not from Büsching :

¹ Büsching, Dejträge, vi. 578-582.

² Ibid. vi. 568.

June 9th, 1771. "This Year the Stände of the Kurmark find they have an overplus of 100,000 thalers (15,000*l.*) ; which sum they do themselves the pleasure of presenting to the King for his Majesty's uses. King cannot accept it for his own uses. 'This money,' answers he (9th June), 'comes from the Province, wherefore I feel bound to lay it out again for advantage of the Province. Could it not become a means of getting English Husbandry' (turnips in particular, whether short-horns or not, I do not know) 'introduced among us ? In the Towns that follow Farming chiefly, or in Villages belonging to unmoneyed Nobles, we will lend out this 15,000*l.*, at 4 per cent., in convenient sums for that object : hereby will turnip-culture and rotation be vouchsafed us ; interest at 4 per cent. brings us in 600*l.* annually ; and this we will lay out in establishing new Schoolmasters in the Kurmark, and having the youth better educated.'" What a pretty idea ; neat and beautiful, killing two important birds with one most small stone ! I have known enormous cannonballs and granite blocks, torrent after torrent, shot out under other kinds of Finance-gunnery, that were not only less respectable, but that were abominable to me in comparison.

Unluckily, no Nobles were found inclined ; English Husbandry (" Turnipse," and the rest of it) had to wait their time. The King again writes : "No Nobles to be found, say you ? Well ; put the 15,000*l.* to interest in the common way,—that the Schoolmasters at least may have solacement : I will add 120 thalers (18*l.*) apiece, that we may have a chance of getting better Schoolmasters ;—send me List of the Places where the worst are." List was sent ; is still extant ; and on the margin of it, in Royal Autograph, this remark :

"The Places are well selected. The bad Schoolmasters are mostly Tailors ; and you must see whether they cannot be got removed to little Towns, and set to tailoring again, or otherwise disposed of, that our Schools might the sooner rise into good condition, which is an interesting thing." "Eager always our Master is to have the Schooling of his People improved and everywhere diffused," writes, some years afterwards, the excellent Zedlitz, officially "Minister of Public Justice," but much and meritoriously concerned with School-matters as well. The King's ideas were of the best, and Zedlitz sometimes had fine hopes ; but the want of funds was always great.

"In 1779," says Preuss, "there came a sad blow to Zedlitz's hopes ; Minister von Brenkenhof" (deep in West-Preussen canal-diggings and expenditures) "having suggested, That instead of getting Pensions, the Old Soldiers should be put to keeping School." Do but fancy it ; poor old fellows, little versed in scholastics hitherto ! "Friedrich, in his pinch, grasped at the small help ; wrote to the War-Department : 'Send me a List of Invalids who are fit' (or at least fittest) 'to be Schoolmasters.' And got thereupon a List of 74, and afterwards 5 more" (79 Invalids in all) ; "War-Department adding, That besides these scholastic sort, there were 741 serving as Büdner" (Turnpike-keepers, in a sort), "as Forest-watchers, and the like ; and 3,443 unversorgt" (shifting for themselves, no provision made for them at all),—such the check, by cold arithmetic and inexorable finance, upon the genial current of the soul !—

The Turnips, I believe, got gradually in ; and Brandenburg, in our day, is a more and more beautifully farmed Country. Nor were the Schoolmasters unsuccessful at all points ; though I cannot report a complete educational triumph on those extremely limited terms.¹

Queen Ulrique left, I think, on the 9th of August 1772 ; there is sad farewell in Friedrich's Letter next day to Princess Sophie Albertine, the Queen's Daughter, subsequently Abbess of Quedlinburg : he is just setting out on his Silesian Reviews ; "shall, too likely, never see your good Mamma again."² Poor King ; Berlin City is sound asleep, while he rushes through it, on this errand,—“past the Princess Amelia's window,” in the dead of night ; and takes to humming tender strophes to her too ; which gain a new meaning by their date.³

Ten days afterwards (19th August 1772), Queen Ulrique not yet home,—her Son, the spirited King Gustav III., at Stockholm, had made, what in our day is called a “stroke of state,”

¹ Preuss, lii. 115, 113, &c.

² “Potsdam, 10th August 1772 :” Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. ii. 93.

³ “A ma Sœur Amélie, en passant, la nuit, sous sa fenêtre, pour aller en Silésie (Août 1772).” Œuvres de Frédéric, xiii. 77.

—put a thorn in the snout of his monster of a Senate, namely : “Less of palaver, venality and insolence, from you, Sirs ; we ‘restore the Constitution of 1680,’ and are something of a King again !” Done with considerable dexterity and spirit ; not one person killed or hurt. And surely it was the muzzling-up of a great deal of folly on their side,—provided only there came wisdom enough from Gustav himself instead. But, alas, there did not, there hardly could. His uncle was alarmed, and not a little angry for the moment : “You had two parties to reconcile ; a work of time, of patient endeavour, continual and quiet ; no good possible till then. And instead of that—!” Gustav, a shining kind of man, showed no want of spirit, now or afterwards : but he leant too much on France and broken reeds ;—and, in the end, got shot in the back by one of those beautiful “Nobles” of his, and came to a bad conclusion, they and he.¹ Scandinavian Politics, thank Heaven, are none of our business.

Queen Ulrique was spared all these catastrophes. She had alarmed her Brother by a dangerous illness, sudden and dangerous, in 1775 ; who writes with great anxiety about it, to Another still more anxious : ‘of this she got well again ; but it did not last very long. July 16th, 1782, she died ;—and the sad Friedrich had to say, Adieu. Alas, “must the eldest of us mourn, then, by the grave of those younger !”

Wilhelmina's Daughter, Elizabeth Frederike Sophie, Duchess of Württemberg, appears at Ferney (September 1773).

Of our dear Wilhelmina's high and unfortunate Daughter there should be some biography ; and there will, surely, if a man of sympathy and faculty pass that way ; but there is not hitherto. Nothing hitherto but a few bare dates ; bare and sternly significant, as on a Tombstone ; indicating that she had a History, and that it was a tragic one. Welcome to all of us, in this state of matters, is the following one clear emergence of her into the light of day, and in company so interesting too! Seven years before her death, she had gone to Lausanne (July 1773) to consult Tissot, a renowned Physician of those days. From Lausanne, after two months, she visited Voltaire at Ferney. Read this Letter of Voltaire's:

¹ “16th–20th March 1792,” death of Gustav III. by that assassination ; “18th March 1809 ;” his Son Gustav IV. has to go on his travels ; “Karl XIII.,” a childless Uncle, succeeds for a few years ; after whom &c.

² See “Correspondence with Gustav III.” (in Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. ii. 84, &c.).

To Elizabeth Frederike Sophie, Duchess of Würtemberg (at Lausanne):

" Ferney, 10th July 1773.

"Madame,—I am informed that your most Serene Highness has deigned to remember that I was in the world. It is very sad to be there, without paying you my court. I never felt so cruelly the sad state to which old age and maladies have reduced me.

"I never saw you except as a child" (1743, her age then 10): "but you were certainly the beautifullest child in Europe. May you be the happiest Princess" (alas!), "as you deserve to be! I was attached to Madame the Margravine" (your dear Mother) "with equal devotedness and respect; and I had the honour to be pretty deep in her confidence, for some time before this world, which was not worthy of her, had lost that adorable Princess. You resemble her;—but don't resemble her in feebleness of health! You are in the flower of your age" (coming forty, I should fear): "let such bright flower lose nothing of its splendour; may your happiness be able to equal (puisse égaler) your beauty; may all your days be serene, and the sweets of friendship add a new charm to them! These are my wishes; they are as lively as my regrets at not being at your feet. What a consolation it would be for me to speak of your loving Mother, and of all your august relatives! Why must Destiny send you to Lausanne" (consulting Dr. Tissot there), "and hinder me from flying thither!—Let your most Serene Highness deign to accept the profound respect of the old moribund Philosopher of Ferney.—V."

The answer of the Princess, or farther Correspondence on the matter, is not given; evident only that by and by, as Voltaire himself will inform us, she did appear at Ferney;—and a certain Swedish tourist, one Björnsthäl, who met her there, enables us even to give the date. He reports this anecdote:

¹ Œuvres de Voltaire, xcii. 331.

"At supper, on the evening of 7th September 1773, the Princess sat next to Voltaire, who always addressed her, 'Votre Altesse.' At last, the Duchess said to him, 'Tu es mon papa, je suis ta fille, et je veux être appelée ta fille.' Voltaire took a pencil from his pocket, asked for a card, and wrote upon it:

" '*Ah, le beau titre que voilà !
Vous me donnez la première des places ;
Quelle famille j'aurais des là !
Je serais le père des Grâces.*' "

He gave the card to the Princess, who embraced and kissed him for it."¹

Voltaire to Friedrich (a fortnight after).

"Ferneŷ, 22d September 1773.

"I must tell you that I have felt, in these late days, in spite of all my past caprices, how much I am attached to your Majesty and to your House. Madame the Duchess of Würtemberg having had, like so many others, the weakness to believe that health is to be found at Lausanne, and that Dr. Tissot gives it if one pay him, has, as you know, made the journey to Lausanne ; and I, who am more veritably ill than she, and than all the Princesses who have taken Tissot for an Æsculapius, had not the strength to leave my home. Madame of Würtemberg, apprised of all the feelings that still live in me for the memory of Madame the Margravine of Baireuth her Mother, has deigned to visit my hermitage, and pass two days with us. I should have recognised her, even without warning ; she has the turn of her Mother's face with your eyes.

"You Hero-people who govern the world don't allow yourselves to be subdued by feelings ; you have them all the same as we, but you maintain your decorum. We other petty mortals yield to all our impressions : I set myself to cry, in speaking to her of you and of Madame the Princess her Mother ; and she too, though she is Niece of the first Captain in Europe, could not restrain her tears. It appears to me that she has the talent (esprit) and the graces of your House ; and that especially she is more attached to you than to her Husband " (I should think so !). "She returns, I believe, to Baireuth,"—

¹ Œuvres de Voltaire, xviii. 342.

² Vehse, Geschichte der Deutschen, Höfe (Hamburg, 1853), xxv. 252, 253.

—(No Mother, no Father, there now : foolish Uncle of Anspach died long ago, "3d August 1757 ;" Aunt Dowager of Anspach gone to Erlangen, I hope, to Feuchtwang, Schwabach or Schwaningen, or some Widow's-Mansion (Wittwensitz) of her own ;¹ reigning Son, with his French-Actress equipments, being of questionable figure),— —"returns, I believe, to Baireuth ; where she will find another Princess of a different sort ; I mean Mademoiselle Clairon, who cultivates Natural History, and is Lady Philosopher to Monseigneur the Margraf,"—high-rouged Tragedy-Queen, rather tyrannous upon him, they say ; a young man destined to adorn Hammersmith by and by, and not go a good road.

* * "I renounce my beautiful hopes of seeing the Mahometans driven out of Europe, and Athens become again the Seat of the Muses. Neither you nor the Kaiser are"—are inclined in the Crusading way at all. * * "The old sick man of Ferney is always at the feet of your Majesty ; he feels very sorry that he cannot talk of you farther with Madame the Duchess of Würtemberg, who adores you.—Le Vieux Malade."²

To which Friedrich makes answer : "If it is forevermore forbidden me to see you again, I am not the less glad that the Duchess of Würtemberg has seen you. I should certainly have mixed my tears with yours, had I been present at that touching scene ! Be it weakness, be it excess of regard, I have built for her lost Mother, what Cicero projected for his Tullia, a TEMPLE OF FRIENDSHIP : her Statue occupies the background, and on each pillar stands a mask (mascaron) containing the Bust of some Hero in Friendship : I send you the drawing of it."³ Which again sets Voltaire weeping, and will the Duchess when she sees it.⁴

We said there hitherto was nearly nothing anywhere discoverable as History of this high Lady but the dates only ; these we now give. She was "born, 30th August 1732,"—her Mother's and Father's one Child ;—four years older than her Anspach Cousin, who inherited Baireuth too, and finished

¹ Lived, finally, at Schwaningen, in sight of such vicissitudes and follies round her, till "4th February 1784" (Rüdenbeck, iii. 304).

² Œuvres de Voltaire, xcii. 390.

³ "Potsdam, 24th October 1773 : " Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiii. 259 :—

"Temple" was built in 1768 (Ibid. p. 259 n.).

⁴ Voltaire's next Letter : Œuvres de Voltaire, xcii. 434.

off that genealogy. She was "wedded, 26th September 1748;" her age then about 16; her gloomy Duke of Würtemberg, age 20, all sunshine and goodness to her then: she was "divorced, in 1757:" "died, 6th April 1780,"—Tradition says, "in great poverty" (great for her rank, I suppose, proud as she might be, and above complaining),—"at Neustadt-on-the-Aisch" (in the Nurnberg region), whither she had retired, I know not how long after her Papa's death and Cousin's accession. She is bound for her Cousin's Court, we observe, just now; and, considering her Cousin's ways and her own turn of mind, it is easy to fancy she had not a pleasant time there.

Tradition tells us, credibly enough, "She was very like her Mother: beautiful, much the lady (von feinem Ton), and of energetic character;" and adds, probably on slight foundation, "but very cold and proud towards the People." Many Books will inform you how, "On first entering Stuttgart, when the reigning Duke and she were met by a party of congratulatory Peasant Women, dressed in their national costume, she said to her Duke," being then only sixteen, poor young soul, and on her marriage-journey, "Was will das Geschmeis (Why does that rabble bore us)!" This is probably the main foundation. That "her Ladies, on approaching her, had always to kiss the hem of her gown," lay in the nature of the case, being then the rule to people of her rank. Beautiful Unfortunate, adieu;—and be Voltaire thanked, too!—

It is long since we have seen Voltaire before:—a prosperous Lord at Ferney these dozen years ("the only man in France that lives like a grand Seigneur," says Cardinal Bernis to him once¹); doing great things for the Pays de Gex, and for France, and for Europe; delivering the Calases, the Sirvens, and the Oppressed of various kinds; especially ardent upon the Infâme, as the real business Heaven has assigned him in his Day, the sunset of which, and Night wherein no man can work, he feels to be hastening on. "Couldn't we, the few Faithful, go to Cleve in a body?" thinks he at one time: "To Cleve; and there, as from a safe place, under the Philosopher King, shoot out our fiery artilleries with effect?" The Philosopher King is perfectly willing, "provided you don't involve me in Wars with my neighbours." Willing enough he; but they the Faithful—alas, the Patriarch finds that they have none of his own heroic ardour, and that the thing cannot be done. Upon which, struck with sorrow, he writes nothing to Friedrich for two years.¹

¹ Vehse, xxv. 251.

² Their Correspondence, really pretty of its kind, used to circulate as a separate Volume, in the years then subsequent.

The truth is, he is growing very old; and though a piercing radiance, as of stars, bursts occasionally from the central part of him, the outworks are getting decayed and dim; obstruction more and more accumulating, and the immeasurable Night drawing nigh. Well does Voltaire himself, at all moments, know this; and his bearing under it, one must say, is rather beautiful. There is a tenderness, a sadness, in these his later Letters to Friedrich; instead of emphasis or strength, a beautiful shrill melody, as of a woman, as of a child; he grieves unappeasably to have lost Friedrich; never will forgive Maupertuis:—poor old man! Friedrich answers in a much livelier, more robust tone: friendly, encouraging, communicative on small matters;—full of praises,—in fact, sincerely glad to have such a transcendent genius still alive with him in this world. Praises to the most liberal pitch everything of Voltaire's,—except only the Article on War, which occasionally (as below) he quizzes a little, to the Patriarch or his Disciple.

As we have room for nothing of all this, and perhaps shall not see Voltaire again,—there are Two actual Interviews with him, which, being withal by Englishmen, though otherwise not good for much, we intend for readers here. In these last twenty years, D'Alembert is Friedrich's chief Correspondent. Of D'Alembert to the King, it may be or may not, some opportunity will rise for a specimen; meanwhile here is a short

¹ "Nov. 1769," recommences (Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiii. 140, 139).

Letter of the King's to D'Alembert, through which there pass so many threads of contemporaneous flying events (swift shuttles on the loud-sounding Loom of Time), that we are tempted to give this, before the two Interviews in question.

Date of the Letter is two months after that apparition of the Duchess of Würtemberg at Ferney. Of "Crillon," an ingenious enough young Soldier, rushing ardently about the world in his holiday time, we have nothing to say, except that he is Son of that Rossbach Crillon, who always fancies to himself that once he perhaps spared Friedrich's life (by a glass of wine judiciously given) long since, while the Bridge of Weissenfels was on fire, and Rossbach close ahead.¹ Colonel "Guibert" is another Soldier, still young, but of much superior type; greatly an admirer of Friedrich, and subsequently a Writer upon him.²

In regard to the "Landgravine of Darmstadt," notice these points. First, that her eldest Daughter is Wife, second Wife, to the dissolute Crown Prince of Prussia: and then, that she has Three other Daughters,—one of whom has just been disposed of in an important way; wedded to the Czarowitch Paul of Russia, namely. By Friedrich's means and management, as Friedrich informs us.³ The Czarina, he says, had sent out a confidential Gentleman, one Asseburg, who was Prussian by birth, to seek a fit Wife for her Son: Friedrich, hearing of this, suggested to Asseburg, "The Landgravine of Darmstadt, the most distinguished and accomplished of German Princesses, has three marriageable Daughters; her eldest, married to our Crown Prince, will be Queen of Prussia in time coming;—suppose now, one of the others were to be Czarina of Russia withal? Think, might it not be useful both to your native Country and to your adopted?" Asseburg took the hint; reported at Petersburg, That of all marriageable Princesses in Germany, the Three of Darmstadt, one or the other of them, would, in his humble opinion, be the eligiblest. "Could not we persuade you to come to Petersburg, Madam Landgravine?" wrote the Czarina thereupon: "Do us the honour of a visit, your three Princesses and you!" The Landgravine and Daughters, with decent

¹ Suprà, v. 154.

² Of Guibert's visit to Friedrich (June 1773), see Preuss, iv. 214; Rödénbeck, iii. 80.

³ Œuvres de Frédéric (Mémoires de 1763 jusqu'à 1775), vi. 57.

celerity, got under way ;¹ Czarowitch Paul took interesting survey, on their arrival ; and about two months ago wedded the middle one of the three ;—and here is the victorious Landgravine bringing home the other two. Czarowitch's fair one did not live long, nor behave well : died of her first child ; and Czarowitch, in 1776, had to apply to us again for a Wife, whom, this time, we fitted better. Happily, the poor victorious Landgravine was gone before anything of this ; died suddenly five months hence ;² nothing doubting of her Russian Adventure. She was an admired Princess of her time, die grosse Landgräfin, as Goethe somewhere calls her ; much in Friedrich's esteem,—femina sexu ingenio vir, as the Monument he raised to her at Darmstadt still bears.

Friedrich to D'Alembert.

“Potsdam, 16th December 1773.

“M. de Crillon delivered me your Crillonade” (lengthy Letter of introduction) ; “which has completed me in the History of all the Crillons of the County of Avignon. He doesn't stop here ; he is soon to be off for Russia ; so that I will take him on your word, and believe him the wisest of all the Crillons : assuring myself that you have measured and computed all his curves and angles of incidence. He will find Diderot and Grimm in Russia” (famous visit of Diderot), “all occupied with the Czarina's beautiful reception of them, and with the many things worthy of admiration which they have seen there. Some say Grimm will possibly fix himself in that Country” (chose better),—“which will be the asylum at once of your fanatic Chaumeixes and of the Encyclopédistes, whom he used to denounce.” (This poor Chaumeix did, after such feats, “die peaceably at Moscow, as a Schoolmaster.”)

“M. de Guibert has gone by Ferney ; where it is said Voltaire has converted him, that is, has made him renounce the errors of ambition, abjure the frightful trade of hired man-slayer, with intent to become either Capuchin or Philosophe ; so that I suppose by this time he will have published a ‘Declaration’ like Gresset, informing the public that, having had the misfortune to write a Work on Tactics, he repented it from the bottom of his soul, and hereby assured mankind that never more in his life would he give rules for butcheries, assassinations, feints, stratagems, or the like abominations. As to me, my conversion not being yet in an advanced stage, I pray you to give me details about Guibert's, to soften my heart and penetrate my bowels.

¹ Passed through Berlin, 16th–19th May 1773 : Rödenbeck, iii. 78.

² 30th March 1774.

³ Œuvres de Frédéric, xx. 183 n. His Correspondence with her is Ibid. xxvii. ii. 135–153 ; and goes from 1757 to 1774.

"We have the Landgravine of Darmstadt here : ' no end to the Landgravine's praises of a magnificent Czarina, and of all the beautiful and grand things she has founded in that Country. As to us, who live like mice in their holes, news come to us only from mouth to mouth, and the sense of hearing is nothing like that of sight. I cherish my wishes, in the meanwhile, for the sage Anaxagoras " (my D'Alembert himself) ; " and I say to Urania, ' It is for thee to sustain thy foremost Apostle, to maintain one light, without which a great Kingdom ' (France) ' would sink into darkness ; ' and I say to the Supreme Demiurgus : ' Have always the good D'Alembert in thy holy and worthy keeping. '—F." "

The Boston Tea (same day). Curious to remark, while Friedrich is writing this Letter, "Thursday, December 16th, 1773," what a commotion is going on, far over seas, at Boston, New England,—in the " Old South Meetinghouse " there ; in regard to three English Tea-Ships that are lying embargoed in Griffin's Wharf, for above a fortnight past. The case is well known, and still memorable to mankind. British Parliament, after nine years of the saddest haggling and baffling to and fro, under Constitutional stress of weather, and such east-winds and west-winds of Parliamentary eloquence as seldom were, has made up its mind, That America shall pay duty on these Teas before infusing them : and America, Boston more especially, is tacitly determined that it will not ; and that to avoid mistakes, these Teas shall never be landed at all. Such is Boston's private intention, more or less fixed ;—to say nothing of the Philadelphias, Charlestons, New Yorks, who are watching Boston, and will follow suite of it.

" Sunday, November 26th,—that is, nineteen days ago,—the first of these Tea-Ships, the Dartmouth, Captain Hall, moored itself in Griffin's Wharf : Owner and Consignee is a broad-brimmed Boston gentleman called Rotch, more attentive to profits of trade than to the groans of Boston :—but already on that Sunday, much more on the Monday following, there had a meeting of Citizens run together,—(on Monday, Faneuil Hall won't hold them, and they adjourn to the Old

¹ Rödénbeck, iii. 89, 90.

² Œuvres de Frédéric, xxiv. 614.

South Meetinghouse),—who make it apparent to Rotch that it will much behove him, for the sake both of tea and skin, not to 'enter' (or officially announce) this Ship Dartmouth at the Customhouse in any wise; but to pledge his broad-brimmed word, equivalent to his oath, that she shall lie dormant there in Griffin's Wharf, till we see. Which, accordingly, she has been doing ever since; she and two others that arrived some days later: dormant all three of them, side by side, three crews totally idle; a 'Committee of Ten' supervising Rotch's procedures; and the Boston world much expectant. Thursday, December 16th: this is the 20th day since Rotch's Dartmouth arrived here; if not 'entered' at Customhouse in the course of this day, Customhouse cannot give her a 'clearance' either (a leave to depart),—she becomes a smuggler, an outlaw, and her fate is mysterious to Rotch and us.

"This Thursday, accordingly, by 10 in the morning, in the Old South Meetinghouse, Boston is assembled, and country-people to the number of 2,000;—and Rotch never was in such a company of human Friends before. They are not uncivil to him (cautious people, heedful of the verge of the Law); but they are peremptory, to the extent of—Rotch may shudder to think what. 'I went to the Customhouse yesterday,' said Rotch, 'your Committee of Ten can bear me witness; and demanded clearance and leave to depart; but they would not; were forbidden, they said!' 'Go, then, sir; get you to the Governor himself; a clearance, and out of harbour, this day: hadn't you better?' Rotch is well aware that he had; hastens off to the Governor (who has vanished to his Country-house, on purpose); Old South Meetinghouse adjourning till 3 P.M., for Rotch's return with clearance.

"At 3 no Rotch, nor at 4, nor at 5; miscellaneous plangent intermittent speech instead, mostly plangent, in tone sorrowful rather than indignant:—at a quarter to 6, here at length is Rotch; sun is long since set,—has Rotch a clearance or not? Rotch reports at large, willing to be questioned and cross-questioned: 'Governor absolutely would not! My Christian friends, what could I or can I do?' There are by this time about 7,000 people in Old South Meetinghouse, very few tall-lights in comparison,—almost no lights for the mind either,—and it is difficult to answer. Rotch's report done, the Chairman" (one Adams, "American Cato," subsequently so-called) "dissolves the sorrowful 7,000, with these words: 'This Meeting declares that it can do nothing more to save the Country.' Will merely go home, then, and weep. Hark, however : almost on the instant, in front of Old South Meetinghouse, 'a terrific War-whoop ; and about fifty Mohawk Indians,'—with whom Adams seems to be acquainted ; and speaks without Interpreter : Aha !—

"And, sure enough, before the stroke of 7, these fifty painted Mohawks are forward, without noise, to Griffin's Wharf ; have put sentries all round there ; and, in a great silence of the neighbourhood, are busy, in three gangs, upon the dormant Tea-ships ; opening their chests, and punctually shaking them out into the sea. 'Listening from the distance, you could hear distinctly the ripping open of the chests, and no other sound.' About 10 P.M. all was finished ; 342 chests of tea flung out to infuse in the Atlantic ; the fifty Mohawks gone like a dream ; and Boston sleeping more silently even than usual."

"Seven in the evening : " this, I calculate, allowing for the Earth's rotation, will be about the time when Friedrich, well tired with the day's business, is getting to bed ; by 10 on the Boston clocks, when the process finishes there, Friedrich will have had the best of his sleep over. Here is Montcalm's Prophecy coming to fulfilment ;—and a curious intersection of a flying Event through one's poor Letter to D'Alembert. We will now give the two English Interviews with Voltaire ; one of which is of three years past, another of three years ahead.

No. 1. Doctor Burney has Sight of Voltaire (July 1770).

In the years 1770–71, Burney, then a famous Doctor of Music, made his Tour through France and Italy, on Musical errands and researches ;¹ with these we have no concern, but only with one most small exceptional offshoot or episode which grew out of these. Enough for us to know that Burney, a comfortable, well-disposed, rather dull Doctor, age near 45, had left London for Paris "in June 1770 ;" that he was on ¹ "Summary of the Advices from America" (in Gentleman's Magazine for 1774, pp. 26, 27) ; Bancroft, iii. 536 et seq.

² Charles Burney's Present State of Music in France and Italy, being the Journal of a Tour through those Countries to collect Materials for a General History of Music (London, 1773). The History of Music followed duly, in Four 4tos (London, 1776–1789).

to Geneva, intending for Turin, "early in July;" and that his "M. Fritz," mentioned below, is a veteran Brother in Music, settled at Geneva for the last thirty years, who has been helpful and agreeable to Burney while here. Our Excerpt therefore dates itself, "one of the early days of July 1770,"—Burney hovering between two plans (as we shall dimly perceive), and not exactly executing either:

* * "My going to M. Fritz broke" (was about breaking, but did not quite) "into a plan which I had formed of visiting M. de Voltaire, at the same hour, along with some other strangers, who were then going to Ferney. But, to say the truth, besides the visit to M. Fritz being more my business, I did not much like going with these people, who had only a Geneva Bookseller to introduce them; and I had heard that some English had lately met with a rebuff from M. de Voltaire, by going without any letter of recommendation, or anything to recommend themselves. He asked them What they wanted? Upon their replying That they wished only to see so extraordinary a man, he said: 'Well, gentlemen, you now see me: did you take me for a wild-beast or monster, that was fit only to be stared at as a show?' This story very much frightened me; for, not having, when I left London, or even Paris, any intention of going to Geneva, I was quite unprovided with a recommendation. However, I was determined to see the place of his residence, which I took to be" (Les Dôlices).

" Cette maison d'Aristippe, ces jardins d'Epicure, to which he retired in 1755; but was mistaken" (not the Dôlices now at all, but Ferney, for nine or ten years back).

"I drove to Ferney alone, after I had left M. Fritz. This house is three or four miles from Geneva, but near the Lake. I approached it with reverence, and a curiosity of the most minute kind. I inquired when I first trod on his domain; I had an intelligent and talkative postillion, who answered all my questions very satisfactorily. M. de Voltaire's estate is very large here, and he is building pretty farmhouses upon it. He has erected on the Geneva side a quadrangular Justice, or Gallows, to show that he is the Seigneur. One of his farms, or rather manufacturing houses,—for he is establishing a manufacture upon his estate,—was so handsome that I thought it was his château.

"We drove to Ferney, through a charming country, covered with corn and vines, in view of the Lake, and Mountains of Gex, Switzerland, and Savoy. On the left hand, approaching the House, is a neat Chapel, with this inscription :

“ ‘DEO EREXIT VOLTAIRE MDCCCLXI.’ ”

I sent to inquire, Whether a stranger might be allowed to see the House and Gardens ; and was answered in the affirmative. A servant soon came, and conducted me into the cabinet or closet where his Master had just been writing : this is never shown when he is at home ; but having walked out, I was allowed that privilege. From thence I passed to the Library, which is not a very large one, but well filled. Here I found a whole-length Figure in marble of himself, recumbent, in one of the windows ; and many curiosities in another room ; a Bust of himself, made not two years since ; his Mother's picture ; that of his Niece, Madam Denis ; his Brother, M. Dupuis ; the Calais Family ; and others. It is a very neat and elegant House ; not large, nor affectedly decorated.

“I should first have remarked, that close to the Chapel, between that and the house, is the Theatre, which he built some years ago ; where he treated his friends with some of his own Tragedies : it is now only used as a receptacle for wood and lumber, there having been no play acted in it these four years. The servant told me his Master was 78 ” (76 gone), “but very well. ‘Il travaille,’ said he, ‘pendant dix heures chaque jour,’ He studies ten hours every day ; writes constantly without spectacles, and walks out with only a domestic, often a mile or two—Et le voilà, là bas, And see, yonder he is ! ”

“He was going to his workmen. My heart leaped at the sight of so extraordinary a man. He had just then quitted his Garden, and was crossing the court before his House. Seeing my chaise, and me on the point of mounting it, he made a sign to his servant who had been my cicerone, to go to him ; in order, I suppose, to inquire who I was. After they had exchanged a few words together, he,” M. de Voltaire, “approached the place where I was standing motionless, in order to contemplate his person as much as I could while his eyes were turned from me ; but on seeing him move towards me, I found myself drawn by some irresistible power towards him ; and, without knowing what I did, I insensibly met him half-way.

“It is not easy to conceive it possible for life to subsist in a form so nearly composed of mere skin and bone as that of M. de Voltaire.” Extremely lean old Gentleman ! “He complained of decrepitude, and said, He supposed I was anxious to form an idea of the figure of one walking after death. However, his eyes and whole countenance are still full of fire; and though so emaciated, a more lively expression cannot be imagined.

"He inquired after English news; and observed that Poetical squabbles had given way to Political ones; but seemed to think the spirit of opposition as necessary in poetry as in politics. 'Les querelles d'auteurs sont pour le bien de la littérature, comme dans un gouvernement libre les querelles des grands, et les clameurs des petits, sont nécessaires à la liberté.' And added, 'When critics are silent, it does not so much prove the Age to be correct, as dull.' He inquired what Poets we had now; I told him we had Mason and Gray. 'They write but little,' said he: 'and you seem to have no one who lords it over the rest, like Dryden, Pope, and Swift.' I told him that it was one of the inconveniences of Periodical Journals, however well executed, that they often silenced modest men of genius, while impudent blockheads were impenetrable, and unable to feel the critic's scourge: that Mr. Gray and Mr. Mason had both been illiberally treated by mechanical critics, even in newspapers; and added, that modesty and love of quiet seemed in these gentlemen to have got the better even of their love of fame.

"During this conversation, we approached the buildings that he was constructing near the road to his Château. 'These,' said he, pointing to them, 'are the most innocent, and perhaps the most useful, of all my works.' I observed that he had other works, which were of far more extensive use, and would be much more durable, than those. He was so obliging as to show me several farmhouses that he had built, and the plans of others: after which I took my leave."

No. 2. A Reverend Mr. Sherlock sees Voltaire, and even dines with him (April 1776).

Sherlock's Book of Travels, though he wrote it in two languages, and it once had its vogue, is now little other than a Dance of Will-o'-wisp to us. A Book tawdry, incoherent, indistinct, at once flashy and opaque, full of idle excrescences and exuberances;—as is the poor man himself. He was "Chaplain to the Earl of Bristol, Bishop of Derry;" gyrating about as ecclesiastical Moon to that famed Solar Luminary, what could you expect !' Poor Sherlock is nowhere intentionally fabulous ; nor 'intrinsically altogether so foolish as he seems : let that suffice us. In his Dance of Will-o'-wispas, which in this point happily is dated,—26th–27th April 1776,—he had come to Ferney, with proper introduction to Voltaire : and here, after severe excision of the flabby parts, but without other change, is credible account of what he saw and heard. In Three Scenes ; with this Prologue—as to Costume, which is worth reading twice :

Voltaire's Dress. "On the two days I saw him, he wore white cloth shoes, white woollen stockings, red breeches, with a nightgown and waistcoat of blue linen, flowered, and lined with yellow. He had on a grizzle wig with three ties, and over it a silk nightcap embroidered with gold and silver."

SCENE I. The Entrance-Hall of Ferney (Friday, 26th April 1776) ; exuberant Sherlock entering, Letter of Introduction having preceded.

"He met me in the hall ; his Nephew M. d'Hornoi" (Grand-nephew ; Abbé Mignot, famous for burying Voltaire and Madame Denis, whom we know, were his Uncle and Aunt)—Grand-nephew, "Counsellor in the Parlement of Paris, held him by the arm. He said to me, with a very weak voice : 'You see a very old man, who makes a great effort to have the honor of seeing you. Will you take a walk in my Garden ? It will please you, for it is in the English taste :—it was I who introduced that taste into France, and it is become universal. But the French parody your Gardens ; they put your thirty acres into three.'

"From his Gardens you see the Alps, the Lake, the City of Geneva and its environs, which are very pleasant. He said :

Voltaire. "'It is a beautiful prospect.' He pronounced these words tolerably well. Sherlock. "'How long is it since you were in England ?'

Voltaire. "'Fifty years, at least.' (Not quite ; in 1728

¹ Title of his Book is, Letters from an English Traveller ; translated from the French Original (London, 1780). Ditto, Letters from an English Traveller ; written originally in French : by the Rev. Martin Sherlock, A. M., Chaplain to the Earl of Bristol, &c. (a new Edition, 2 voll., London, 1802).

left ; in 1726 had come).¹ D'Hornoi. " 'It was at the time when you printed the First Edition of your Henriade.' "

"We then talked of Literature ; and from that moment he forgot his age and infirmities, and spoke with the warmth of a man of thirty. He said some shocking things against Moses and against Shakspeare." (Like enough !) * * "We then talked of Spain.

Voltaire. " 'It is a Country of which we know no more than of the most savage parts of Africa ; and it is not worth the trouble of being known. If a man would travel there, he must carry his bed, &c. On arriving in a Town, he must go into one street to buy a bottle of wine ; a piece of a mule' (by way of beef) 'in another ; he finds a table in a third,—and he sups. A French Nobleman was passing through Pampeluna : he sent out for a spit : there was only one in the Town, and that was lent away for a wedding.' "

D'Hornoi. " 'There, Monsieur, is a Village which M. de Voltaire has built !' "Voltaire. " 'Yes, we have our freedoms here. Cut off a little corner, and we are out of France. I asked some privileges for my Children here, and the King has granted me all that I asked, and has declared this Pays de Gex exempt from all Taxes of the Farmers-General ; so that salt, which formerly sold for ten sous a pound, now sells for four. I have nothing more to ask, except to live.'—We went into the Library" (had made the round of the Gardens, I suppose).

SCENE II. In the Library.

Voltaire. " 'There you find several of your countrymen' (he had Shakspeare, Milton, Congreve, Rochester, Shaftesbury, Bolingbroke, Robertson, Hume, and others). 'Robertson is your Livy ; his Charles Fifth is written with truth. Hume wrote his History to be applauded, Rapin to instruct ; and both obtained their ends.' "Sherlock. " 'Lord Bolingbroke and you agreed that we have not one good Tragedy.' "

Voltaire. " 'We did think so. Cato is incomparably well written : Addison had a great deal of taste ;—but the abyss between taste and genius is immense ! Shakspeare had an amazing genius, but no taste : he has spoiled the taste of the Nation. He has been their taste for two hundred years ; and what is the taste of a Nation for two hundred years will be so for two thousand. This kind of taste becomes a religion ; there are, in your Country, a great many Fanatics for Shakspeare.' Sherlock. "' Were you personally acquainted with Lord Bolingbroke ?'

¹ Suprà, iii. 140.

Voltaire. "' Yes. His face was imposing, and so was his voice ; in his Works, there are many leaves, and little fruit ; distorted expressions, and periods intolerably long.' (Taking down a Book.) "' There, you see the Koran, which is well read, at least.' (' It was marked throughout with bits of paper.')

' There are Historic Doubts, by Horace Walpole' (' which had also several marks') ; ' here is the Portrait of Richard III. ; you see he was a handsome youth.' Sherlock (making an abrupt transition). "' You have built a Church ?'

Voltaire. "' True ; and it is the only one in the Universe in honour of God' (Deo erexit Voltaire, as we read above) : ' you have plenty of Churches built to St. Paul, to St. Geneviève, but not one to God.' Exit Sherlock (to his Inn ; makes jotting as above ;—is to dine at Ferney to-morrow).

SCENE III. Dinner-Table of Voltaire.

" The next day, as we sat down to Dinner," our Host in the above shining Costume, " he said, in English tolerably pronounced :

Voltaire. "' We are here for liberty and property !' (parody of some old Speech in Parliament, let us guess,—liberty and property, my Lords !) ' This Gentleman,—whom let me present to Monsieur Sherlock,—is a Jesuit' (old Père Adam, whom I keep for playing Chess, in his old, unsheltered days) ; ' he wears his hat : I am a poor invalid,—I wear my night-cap.' * *

" I do not now recollect why he quoted these verses, also in English, by Rochester, on Charles Second :

"' Here lies the mutton-eating King,
Whose promise none relies on ;
Who never said a foolish thing,
Nor ever did a wise one.'

But speaking of Racine, he quoted this Couplet (of Roscommon's Essay on Translated Verse) :

"' The weighty bullion of one sterling line
Drawn to French wire would through whole pages shine.'

Sherlock. " 'The English prefer Corneille to Racine.'

Voltaire. " 'That is because the English are not sufficiently acquainted with the French tongue to feel the beauties of Racine's style, or the harmony of his versification. Corneille ought to please them more because he is more striking ; but Racine pleases the French because he has more softness and tenderness.'

Sherlock. " 'How did you find' (like) 'the English fare (la chère Anglaise?—which Voltaire mischievously takes for "the dear English-woman").

Voltaire. " 'I found her very fresh and white,'—truly ! ("It should be remembered, that when he made this pun upon Women, he was in his eighty-third year)."

Sherlock. " 'Their language ?' Voltaire. " 'Energetic, precise and barbarous ; they are the only Nation that pronounce their a as e.' * * (And some time afterwards) 'Though I cannot perfectly pronounce English, my ear is sensible of the harmony of your language and of your versification. Pope and Dryden have the most harmony in Poetry ; Addison in Prose.' (Takes now the interrogating side.)

Voltaire. " 'How have you found (avez-vous trouvé) the French ?' Sherlock. " 'Amiable and witty. I only find one fault with them : they imitate the English too much.'

Voltaire. " 'How ! Do you think us worthy to be originals ourselves ?' Sherlock. " 'Yes, Sir.'

Voltaire. " 'So do I too :—but it is of your Government that we are envious.'

Sherlock. " 'I have found the French freer than I expected.'

Voltaire. " 'Yes, as to walking, or eating whatever he pleases, or lolling in his elbow-chair, a Frenchman is free enough ; but as to taxes—Ah, Monsieur, you are a lucky Nation ; you can do what you like ; poor we are born in slavery : we cannot even die as we will ; we must have a Priest' (can't get buried otherwise ; am often thinking of that !). * * 'Well, if the English do sell themselves, it is a proof that they are worth something : we French don't sell ourselves, probably because we are worth nothing.'

Sherlock. " 'What is your opinion of the Eloïse' (Rousseau's immortal Work) ? Voltaire. " 'That it will not be read twenty years hence.'

Sherlock. " 'Mademoiselle de l'Enclos wrote some good Lettres?' Voltaire. " 'She never wrote one ; they were by the wretched Crébillon' (my beggarly old "Rival" in the Pompadour epoch) ! * *

Voltaire. “‘The Italians are a Nation of brokers. Italy is an Old-Clothes shop ; in which there are many Old Dresses of exquisite taste. * * But we are still to know, Whether the subjects of the Pope or of the Grand Turk are the more object.’ (We have now gone to the Drawing-room, I think, though it is not jotted.)

“He talked of England and of Shakspeare ; and explained to Madam Denis part of a Scene in Henry Fifth, where the King makes love to Queen Catherine in bad French ; and of another in which that Queen takes a lesson in English from her Waiting-woman, and where there are several very gross double-entendres”—but, I hope, did not long dwell on these. * *

Voltaire. “‘When I see an Englishman subtle and fond of law-suits, I say, “There is a Norman, who came in with William the Conqueror.” When I see a man good-natured and polite, “That is one who came with the Plantagenets ;” a brutal character, “That is a Dane :”—for your Nation, Monsieur, as well as your Language, is a medley of many others.’

“After dinner, passing through a little Parlour where there was a head of Locke, another of the Countess of Coventry, and several more, he took me by the arm and stopped me ; ‘Do you know this Bust’ (bust of Sir Isaac Newton) ? ‘It is the greatest genius that ever existed : if all the geniuses of the Universe were assembled, he should lead the band.’

“It was of Newton, and of his own Works, that M. de Voltaire always spoke with the greatest warmth.”¹ (Exit Sherlock, to jot down the above, and thence into Infinite Space.)

General or Fieldmarshal Conway, direct from the London Circles, attends one of Friedrich’s Reviews (August—September 1774.

Now that Friedrich’s Military Department is got completely into trim again, which he reckons to have been about 1770, his annual Reviews are becoming very famous over Europe ; and intelligent Officers of all Countries are eager to be present, and instruct themselves there. The Review is beautiful as a Spectacle ; but that is in no sort the intention of it. Rigorous business, as in the strictest of Universities examining for Degrees, would be nearer the definition. Sometimes, when a new manœuvre or tactical invention of importance is to be tried by experiment, you will find for many miles the environs of Potsdam, which is usually the scene of such experiments, carefully shut in ; sentries on every road, no unfriendly eye admitted ; the thing done as with closed doors. Nor at any time can you attend without leave asked ; though to Foreign Officers, and persons that have really business there, there appears to be liberality enough in granting it. The concourse of military strangers seem to keep increasing every year, till Friedrich's death.¹ French, more and more in quantity, present themselves ; multifarious German names ; generally a few English too,—Burgoyne (of Saratoga finally), Cornwallis, Duke of York, Marshal Conway,—of which last we have something farther to say at present.

¹ Sherlock, Letters (London, 1802), i. 98–106.

In Summer 1774, Conway, the Marshal Conway, of whom Walpole is continually talking as of a considerable Soldier and Politician, though he was not in either character considerable, but was Walpole's friend, and an honest modest man,—had made up his mind, perhaps partly on domestic grounds (for I have noticed glimpses of a "Lady C." much out of humour), to make a Tour in Germany, and see the Reviews, both Austrian and Prussian, Prussian especially. Two immense Letters of his on that subject have come into my hands,² and elsewhere incidentally there is printed record of the Tour ;³ unimportant as possible, both Tour and Letters, but capable, if squeezed into compass, of still being read without disadvantage here.

Sir Robert Murray Keith,—that is, the younger Excellency Keith, now minister at Dresden, whom we have sometimes heard of,—accompanies Conway on this Tour, or flies alongside of him, with frequent intersections at the principal points ; and there is printed record by Sir Robert, but still less interesting than this of Conway, and perfectly conformable to it :—so that, except for some words about Lord Marischal, which shall be given, Keith must remain silent, while the diffuse Conway strives to become intelligible. Indeed, neither Conway nor Keith tell us the least thing that is not abundantly, and even wearisomely known from German sources ; but to readers here, a pair of English eyes looking on the matter (put straight in places by the help there is), may give it a certain freshness of meaning. Here are Conway's Two Letters, with the nine-parts of water charitably squeezed out of them, by a skilful friend of mine and his.

¹ Bödenbeck, iii. in locis.

² Kindly presented me by Charles Knight, Esq., the well-known Author and Publisher (who possesses a Collection by the same hand) : these Two run to fourteen large pages in my Copy !

³ In Keith (Sir Robert Murray), Memoirs and Correspondence, II. 21 et seq.

Conway to his Brother, Marquis of Hertford (in London).

“Berlin, July 17th, 1774.

“Dear Brother,—In the hurry I live in”— . . . “Leaving Brunswick, where, in absence of most of the Court, who are visiting at Potsdam, my old Commander,” Duke Ferdinand, now estranged from Potsdam,¹ and living here among works of Art, and speculations on Free Masonry, “was very kind to me, I went to Celle, in Hanover, to pay my respects to the Queen of Denmark” (unfortunate divorced Matilda, saved by my friend Keith,—innocent, I will hope!) . . . “She is grown extremely fat.” . . . “At Magdeburg, the Prussian Frontier on this side, one is not allowed, without a permit, even to walk on the ramparts,—such the strictness of Prussian rule.” . . . “Driving through Potsdam, on my way to Berlin, I was stopped by a servant of the good old Lord Marischal, who had spied me as I passed under his window. He came out in his nightgown, and insisted upon our staying to dine with him” —(worthy old man ; a word of him, were this Letter done). “We ended, on consultation about times and movements of the King, by staying three days at Potsdam, mostly with this excellent old Lord.

“On the third day” (yesterday evening, in fact), “I went, by appointment, to the New Palace, to wait upon the King of Prussia. There was some delay : his Majesty had gone, in the interim, to a private Concert, which he was giving to the ¹Had a kind of quarrel with Friedrich in 1776 (rough treatment by Adjutant von Anhalt, not tolerable to a Captain now become so eminent), and quietly withdrew,—still on speaking terms with the King, but never his Officer more.

Princesses" (Duchess of Brunswick and other high guests); "but the moment he was told I was there, he came out from his company, and gave me a most flattering gracious audience of more than half an hour; talking on a great variety of things, with an ease and freedom the very reverse of what I had been made to expect." . . . "I asked, and received permission, to visit the Silesian Camps next month, his Majesty most graciously telling me the particular days they would begin and end" (27th August—3d September, Schmelwitz near Breslau, are time and place). "This considerably deranges my Austrian movements, and will hurry my return out of those parts: but who could resist such a temptation!—I saw the Foot-Guards exercise, especially the splendid 'First Battalion;' I could have conceived nothing so perfect and so exact as all I saw:—so well dressed, such men, and so punctual in all they did.

"The New Palace at Potsdam is extremely noble. Not so perfect, perhaps, in point of taste, but better than I had been led to expect. The King dislikes living there; never does, except when there is high Company about him; for seven or eight months in the year, he prefers Little Sans-Souci, and freedom among his intimates and some of his Generals." . . . "His music still takes up a great share of the King's time. On a table in his Cabinet there, I saw, I believe, twenty boxes with a German flute in each; in his Bed-chamber, twice as many boxes of Spanish snuff; and, alike in Cabinet and in Bed-chamber, three arm-chairs in a row for three favourite dogs, each with a little stool by way of step, that the getting up might be easy." . . .

"The Town of Potsdam is a most extraordinary and, in its appearance, beautiful Town; all the streets perfectly straight, all at right angles to each other; and all the houses built with handsome, generally elegant fronts." . . . "He builds for everybody who has a bad or a small house,—even the lowest mechanic. He has done the same at Berlin." Altogether, his Majesty's building operations are astonishing. And "from whence does this money come, after a long expensive War? It is all fairy-land and enchantment,"—Magnum vectigal parsimonia, in fact! . . . "At Berlin here, I saw the Porcelain Manufacture to-day, which is greatly improved. I leave presently. Adieu, dear Brother; excuse my endless Letter" (since you cannot squeeze the water out of it, as some will!)—"Yours most sincerely,

"HENRY SEYMOUR CONWAY."

¹ Rödénbeck (in die), iii. 98.

² Ibid. iii. 101.

Keith is now Minister at Dresden for some years back ; and has, among other topics, much to say of our brilliant friend the Electress there : but his grand Diplomatic feat was at Copenhagen, on a sudden sally out thither (in 1771) :¹ the saving of Queen Matilda, youngest Sister of George Third, from a hard doom. Unfortunate Queen Matilda ; one never knows how guilty, or whether guilty at all, but she was very unfortunate, poor young Lady ! What with a mad Husband collapsed by debaucheries into stupor of insanity ; with a Doctor, gradually a Prime Minister, Struensee, wretched scarecrow to look upon, but wiser than most Danes about ; and finally, with a lynx-eyed Step-sister, whose Son, should Matilda mistake, will inherit,—unfortunate Matilda had fallen into the awfulest troubles ; got divorced, imprisoned, would have lost her head along with scarecrow Struensee, had not her Brother George III. emphatically intervened,—Excellency Keith, with Seventy-fours in the distance, coming out very strong on the occasion,—and got her loose. Loose from Danish axe and jail, at any rate ; delivered into safety and solitude at Celle in Hanover, where she now is,—and soon after suddenly dies of fever, so closing a very sad short history.

Excellency Keith, famed in the Diplomatic circles ever since, is at present ahead of Conway on their joint road to the Austrian Reviews. Before giving Conway's Second Letter, let us hear Keith a little on his kinsman the Old Marischal, whom he saw at Berlin years ago, and still occasionally corresponds with, and mentions in his Correspondence. Keith loquitur ; date is Dresden, February 1770 :

Has visited the Old Marischal at Potsdam lately. * * "My stay of three days with Lord Marischal" "He is the most innocent of God's creatures ; and his heart is much warmer than his head. The place of his abode," I must say, "is the very Temple of Dulness ; and his Female Companion" (a poor Turk foundling, a perishing infant flung into his late Brother's hands at the fall of Oczakow,²—whom the Marischal has carefully brought up, and who refuses to marry away from him,—rather stupid, not very pretty by the Portraits ; must now be two-and-thirty gone) "is perfectly calculated to be the Priestess of it ! Yet he dawdles away his day in a manner not unpleasant to him ; and I really am persuaded he has a conscience that would gild the inside of a dungeon. The feats of our bare-legged warriors in the late War (Berg-Schotten, among whom I was a Colonel), "accompanied by a pibroch" (elegiac bagpipe droning more suo) "in his outer room, have an effect on the old Don, which would delight you."¹

¹ In Keith, i. 152, &c., nothing of intelligible Narrative given, hardly the date discoverable.

² Suprà, iii. 171.

And then seen him in Berlin, on the same occasion. * * "Lord Marischal came to meet me at Sir Andrew's (Mitchel's, in Berlin, the last year of the brave Mitchel's life), "where we passed five days together. My visit to his country residence," as you already know, "was of three days; and I had reason to be convinced that it gave the old Don great pleasure. He talked to me with the greatest openness and confidence of all the material incidents of his life; and hinted often that the honour of the Clan was now to be supported by our family, for all of whom he had the greatest esteem. His tastes, his ideas, and his manner of living, are a mixture of Aberdeenshire and the Kingdom of Valencia; and as he seeks to make no new friends, he seems to retain a strong, though silent, attachment for his old ones. As to his political principles, I believe him the most sincere of converts" to Whiggery and Orthodoxy. * * "Since I began this, I have had a most inimitable Letter from Lord Marischal. I had mentioned Dr. Baillies to him" (noted English Doctor at Dresden, bent on inoculating and the like), "and begged he would send me a state of his case and infirmities, that the Doctor might prescribe for him. This is a part of his answer:

"I thank you for your advice of consulting the English Doctor to repair my old carcass. I have lately done so by my old coach, and it is now almost as good as new. Please, therefore, to tell the Doctor, that from him I expect a good repair, and shall state the case. First, he must know that the machine is the worse for wear, being nearly eighty years old. The reparation I propose he shall begin with is: One pair of new eyes, one pair of new ears, some improvement on the memory. When this is done, we shall ask new legs, and some change in the stomach. For the present, this first reparation will be sufficient; and we must not trouble the Doctor too much at once.—You see by this, how easy his Lordship's infirmities sit upon him; and it is really so as he says. Your friend Sir Andrew is, I am afraid, less gay; but I have not heard from him these three months."²

¹ Keith, i. 129; "Dresden, 25th February 1770:" to his Sister in Scotland.

² Keith, i. 132, 133; "Dresden, 13th March 1770:" to his Father.

*Conway to Keith, on the late Three Days at Potsdam.*¹ "I stayed three days at Potsdam, with much entertainment, for good part of which I am obliged to your Excellency's old friend Lord Marischal, who showed me all the kindness and civility possible. He stopped me as I passed, and not only made me dine with him that day, but in a manner live with him. He is not at all blind, as you imagined; so much otherwise that I saw him read, without spectacles, a difficult hand I could not easily decipher." . . . "Stayed but a day at Berlin;" am rushing after you:—Here is my Second Letter:

Conway's Second Letter (to his Brother, as before).

"Schmelwitz" (near Breslau) "Headquarters,
"August 31st, 1774.

"Dear Brother" . . . "I left that camp" (Austrian Camp, and Reviews, in Hungary, where the Kaiser and everybody had been very gracious to me) "with much regret." "Parted regretfully with Keith;—had played, at Presburg, in sight of him and fourteen other Englishmen, a game with the Chess Automaton" (brand-new miracle, just out);—"came on through Vienna hitherward, as fast as post-horses could carry us; travelling night and day, without stopping, being rather behind time." "Arrived at Breslau near dark, last night; where I learnt that the Camp was twenty miles off; that the King was gone there, and that the Manœuvres would begin at four or five this morning. I therefore ordered my chaise at twelve at night, and set out, in darkness and rain, to be presented to the King of Prussia next morning at five, at the head of his troops." . . . "When I arrived, before five, at the place called 'Headquarters,' I found myself in the middle of a miserable Village" (this Schmelwitz here); "no creature alive or stirring, nor a sentinel, or any Military object to be seen." . . . "As soon as anything alive was to be found, we asked, If the King was lodged in that Village? 'Yes,' they said, 'in that House' (pointing to a clay Hovel). But General Lentulus soon appeared; and—"

"His Majesty has been very gracious; asked me many questions about my Tour to Hungary. I saw all the Troops pass him as they arrived in Camp. They made a very fine appearance really, though it rained hard the whole time we were out; and as his Majesty" (age 62) "did not cloak, we were all heartily wet. And, what was worse, went from the field to Orders" (giving out Parole, and the like) "at his Quarters, there to make our bow;—where we stayed in our wet clothes an hour and half" (towards 10 A.M. by this time). . . "How different at the Emperor's, when his Imperial Majesty and everybody was cloaked!" (Got no hurt by the wet, strange to say.) . . . "These are our news to this day. And now, having sat up five nights out of the last six, and been in rain and dirt almost all day, I wish you sincerely good night.—H. S. C."

¹ Date, "Dresden, 21st July 1774:" in Keith, li. 15.

² Account of it, and of this game, in Keith too (il. 18; "Vienna, 3d September 1774:" Keith to his Father).

"P.S. Breslau, 4th September.— * * My Prussian Campaign is finished, and as much to my satisfaction as possible. The beauty and order of the Troops, their great discipline, their" &c. &c., "almost pass all belief." . . . "Yesterday we were on horseback early, at four o'clock. The movement was conducted with a spirit and order, on both sides, that was astonishing, and struck the more delightful (sic) by the variety, as in the course of the action the Enemy, conducted by General Anhalt" (head all right as yet), "took three different positions before his final retreat.

"The moment it was over" (nine o'clock or so), "his Majesty got a fresh horse, and set out for Potsdam, after receiving the compliments of those present, or rather holding a kind of short Levée in the field. I can't say how much, in my particular, I am obliged to his Majesty for his extraordinary reception, and distinction shown me throughout. Each day after the Manœuvre, and giving the Orders of the day, he held a little Levée at the door, or in the court; at which, I can assure you, it is not an exaggeration of vanity to say, that he not only talked to me, but literally to nobody else at all. It was a good deal each time, and as soon as finished, he made his bow, and retired, though all, or most, of the other Foreigners were standing by, as well as his own Generals. He also called me up, and spoke to me several times on horseback, when we were out, which he seldom did to anybody.

"The Prince Royal also showed me much civility. The second day, he asked me to come and drink a dish of tea with him after dinner, and kept me an hour and half. He told me, among other things, that the King of Prussia had a high opinion of me, and that it came chiefly from the favourable manner in which Duke Ferdinand and the Hereditary Prince" (of Brunswick) "had spoken of me." . . . "Pray let Horace Walpole know my address, that I may have all the chance I can of hearing from him. But, if he comes to Paris, I forgive him.—H. S. C.”

Friedrich's Reviews, though fine to look upon, or indeed the finest in the world, were by no means of spectacular nature ; but of altogether serious and practical, almost of solemn and terrible, to the parties interested. Like the strictest College Examination for Degrees, as we said ; like a Royal Assize or Doomsday of the Year ; to Military people, and over the upper classes of Berlin Society, nothing could be more serious. Major Kaltenborn, an Ex-Prussian Officer, presumably of over-talkative habits, who sounds on us like a very messroom of the time all gathered under one hat, describes in an almost awful manner the kind of terror with which all people awaited these Annual Assizes for trial of military merit.

“What a sight,” says he, “and awakening what thoughts, that of a body of from 18,000 to 20,000 soldiers, in solemn silence and in deepest reverence, awaiting their fate from one man ! A Review, in Friedrich's time, was an important moment for almost the whole Country. The fortune of whole families often depended on it : from wives, mothers, children and friends, during those terrible three days, there arose fervent wishes to Heaven, that misfortune might not, as was too frequently the case, befall their husbands, fathers, sons and friends, in the course of them. Here the King, as it were, weighed the merits of his Officers, and distributed, according as he found them light or heavy, praise or blame, rebukes or favours ; and often, too often, punishments, to be felt through life. One single unhappy moment ” (especially, if it were the last of a long series of such !) “often deprived the bravest Officer of his bread, painfully earned in peace and war, and of his reputation and honour, at least in the eyes of most men, who judge of everything only by its issue. The higher you had risen, the easier and deeper your fall might be, at an unlucky Review. The Heads and Commanders of regiments were always in danger of being sent about their business (weggejagt).”

The fact is, I Kaltenborn quitted the Prussian Service, and took Hessian,—being (presumably) of exaggerative, over-talkative nature, and strongly gravitating Opposition way !—Kaltenborn admits that the King delighted in nothing so much as to see people's faces cheerful about him ; provided the price for it were not too high. Here is another passage from him :

"At latest by 9 in the morning, the day's Manœuvre had finished, and everything was already in its place again. Straight from the ground all Heads of regiments, the Majors-de-jour, all Aides-de-Camp, and from every battalion one Officer, proceed to Headquarters. It was impossible to speak more beautifully, or instructively, than the King did on such occasions, if he were not in bad humour. It was then a very delight to hear him deliver a Military Lecture, as it were. He knew exactly who had failed, what caused the fault, and how it might and should have been retrieved. His voice was soft and persuasive (hinreissend); he looked kindly, and appeared rather bent upon giving good advice than commands.

"Thus, for instance, he once said to General von Lossow, Head of the Black Hussars: 'Your (seine) Attack would have gone very well, had not your own squadron pressed forward too much (vorgeprellt). The brave fellows wanted to show me how they can ride. But don't I know that well enough;—and also that you' (covetous Lossow) 'always choose the best horses from the whole remount for your own squadron! There was, therefore, no need at all for that. Tell your people not to do so to-morrow, and you will see it will go much better; all will remain closer in their places, and the left wing be able to keep better in line, in coming on.'—Another time, having observed, in a certain Foot-regiment, that the soldiers were too long in getting out their cartridges, he said to the Commandant: 'Do you know the cause of this, my dear Colonel? Look, the cartouche, in the cartridge-box, has 32 holes; into these the fellow sticks his eight cartridges, without caring how: and so the poor devil fumbles and gropes about, and cannot get hold of any. But now, if the Officers would look to it that he placed them all well together in the middle of the cartouche, he would never make a false grasp, and the loading would go as quick again. Only tell your Officers that I had made this observation, and I am sure they will gladly attend to it.'"¹

Of humane consolatory Anecdotes, in this kind, our Opposition Kaltenborn gives several; of the rhadamanthine desolating or destructive kind, though such also could not be wanting, if your Assize is to be good for anything, he gives us none. And so far as I can learn, the effective punishments, dismissals and the like, were of the due rarity and propriety ; though the flashes of unjust rebuke, fulminant severity, lightnings from the gloom of one's own sorrows and ill-humour, were much more frequent, but were seldom,—I do not know if ever,—persisted in to the length of practical result. This is a Rhadamanthus much interested not to be unjust, and to discriminate good from bad ! Of Ziethen there are two famous Review Anecdotes, omitted and omissible by Kaltenborn, so well known are they : one of each kind. At a certain Review, year not ascertainable,—long since, prior to the Seven-Years War,—the King's humour was of the grimmest, nothing but faults all round ; to Ziethen himself, and the Ziethen Hussars, he said various hard things, and at length this hardest : “ Out of my sight with you ! ”¹ Upon which Ziethen,—a stratum of red-hot kindling in Ziethen too, as was easily possible,—turns to his Hussars, “ Right about, Rechts um : march ! ” and on the instant did as bidden. Disappeared, double-quick ; and at the same high pace, in a high frame of mind, rattled on to Berlin, home to his quarters, and there first drew bridle. “ Turn ; for Heaven's sake, bethink you ! ” said more than one friend whom he met on the road : but it was of no use. Everybody said, “ Ziethen is ruined ; ” but Ziethen never heard of the thing more.

¹ Anonymous (Kaltenborn), Briefe eines alten Preussischen Officers (Hohenzollern, 1790), ii. 24–26.

Anecdote Second is not properly of a Review, but of an incidental Parade of the Guard, at Berlin (25th. December 1784), by the King in person : Parade, or rather giving out of the Parole after it, in the King's Apartments ; which is always a kind of Military Levée as well ;—and which, in this instance, was long famous among the Berlin people. King is just arrived for Carnival season ; old Ziethen will not fail to pay his duty, though climbing of the stairs is heavy to a man of 85 gone. This is Madame Blumenthal's Narrative (corrected, as it needs, in certain points) :

“ Saturday, 25th. December 1784, Ziethen, in spite of the burden of eighty-six years, went to the Palace, at the end of the Parade, to pay his Sovereign this last tribute of respect, and to have the pleasure of seeing him after six months absence. The Parole was given out, the orders imparted to the Generals, and the King had turned towards the Princes of the Blood,—when he perceived Ziethen on the other side of the Hall, between his Son and his two Aides-de-camp. Surprised in a very agreeable manner at this unexpected sight, he broke out into an exclamation of joy ; and directly making up to him,—‘What, my good old Ziethen, are you there !’ said his Majesty : ‘How sorry am I that you have had the trouble of walking up the staircase ! I should have called upon you myself. How have you been of late ?’ ‘Sire,’ answered Ziethen, ‘my health is not amiss, my appetite is good ; but my strength ! my strength !’ ‘This account,’ replied the King, ‘makes me happy by halves only : but you must be tired ;—I shall have a chair for you.’” (Thing unexampled in the annals of Royalty !) “A chair,” on order to Ziethen’s Aides-de-Camp, “was quickly brought. Ziethen, however, declared that he was not at all fatigued : the King maintained that he was. ‘Sit down, good Father (Mein lieber alter Papa Ziethen, setze Er sich doch) !’ continued his Majesty : ‘I will have it so ; otherwise I must instantly leave the room ; for I cannot allow you to be incommoded under my own roof.’ The old General obeyed, and Friedrich the Great remained standing before him, in the midst of a brilliant circle that had thronged round them. After asking him many questions respecting his hearing, his memory, and the general state of his health, he at length took leave of him in these words : ‘Adieu, my dear Ziethen’ (it was his last adieu !)—‘take care not to catch cold ; nurse yourself well, and live as long as you can, that I may often have the pleasure of seeing you.’ After having said this, the King, instead of speaking to the other Generals, and walking through the saloons, as usual, retired abruptly, and shut himself up in his closet.”¹

¹ Madame de Blumenthal, Life of Ziethen, i. 285.

Following in date these small Conway Phenomena, if these, so extraneous and insignificant, can have any glimmer of memorability to readers, are two other occurrences, especially one other, which come in at this part of the series, and greatly more require to be disengaged from the dust-heaps, and presented for remembrance.

In 1775, the King had a fit of illness ; which long occupied certain Gazetteers and others. That is the first occurrence of the two, and far the more important. He himself says of it, in his History, all that is essential to us here :

¹ Blumenthal, ii. 341 ; Militair-Lexikon, iv. 318. Chodowiecki has made an Engraving of this Scene ; useful to look at for its military Portraits, if of little esteem otherwise. Strangely enough, both in Blumenthal and in Chodowiecki’s Engraving, the year is given as 1785 (plainly impossible) ; Militair-Lexikon misprints the month ; and, one way or other, only R.denbeck (iii. 316) is right in both day and year.

“Towards the end of 1775, the King was attacked by several strong consecutive fits of gout. Van Swieten, a famous Doctor’s Son and Minister of the Imperial Court at Berlin, took it into his head that this gout was a declared dropsy ; and, glad to announce to his Court the approaching death of an enemy that had been dangerous to it, boldly informed his Kaiser that the King was drawing to his end, and would not last out the year. At this news the soul of Joseph flames into enthusiasm ; all the Austrian troops are got on march, their Rendezvous marked in Bohemia ; and the Kaiser waits, full of impatience, at Vienna, till the expected event arrive ; ready then to penetrate at once into Saxony, and thence to the Frontiers of Brandenburg, and there propose to the King’s Successor the alternative of either surrendering Silesia straightway to the House of Austria, or seeing himself overwhelmed by Austrian troops before he could get his own assembled. All these things, which were openly done, got noised abroad everywhere ; and did not, as is easy to believe, cement the friendship of the Two Courts. To the Public, this scene appeared the more ridiculous, as the King of Prussia, having only had a common gout in larger dose than common, was already well of it again, before the Austrian Army had got to their Rendezvous. The Kaiser made all these troops return to their old quarters ; and the Court of Vienna had nothing but mockery for its imprudent conduct.”¹

The first of these gout-attacks seems to have come in the end of September, and to have lasted about a month ; after which the illness abated, and everybody thought it was gone. The Kaiser-Joseph evolution must have been in October, and have got its mockery in the next months. Friedrich, writing to Voltaire, October 22d, has these words : * * “A pair of charming Letters from Ferney ; to which, had they been from the great Demiurgus himself, I could not have dictated Answer. Gout held me tied and garrotted for four weeks ;—gout in both feet and in both hands ; and, such its extreme liberality, in both elbows too : at present the pains and the fever have abated, and I feel only a very great exhaustion.”² “Four consecutive attacks ; hope they are now all over :” but we read, within the Spring following, that there have been in all twelve of them ; and in May 1776, the Newspapers count eighteen quasi-consecutive. So that in reality the King's strength was sadly reduced ; and his health, which did not recover its old average till about 1780, continued, for several years after this bad fit, to be a constant theme of curiosity to the Gazetteer species, and a matter of solicitude to his friends and to his enemies.

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, vi. 124.

² Ibid. xxv. 44.

Of the Kaiser's immense ambition there can be no question. He is stretching himself out on every side ; "seriously wishing," thinks Friedrich, "that he could 'revivify the German Reich,'"—new Barbarossa in improved fixed form ; how noble ! Certainly, to King Friedrich's sad conviction, "the Austrian Court is aiming to swallow all manner of dominions that may fall within its grasp." Wants Bosnia and Servia in the East ; longs to seize certain Venetian Territories, which would unite Trieste and the Milanese to the Tyrol. Is throwing out hooks on Modena, on the Ferrarese, on this and on that. Looking with eager eyes on Bavaria,—the situation of which is peculiar ; the present Kur-Baiern being elderly, childless ; and his Heirs the like, who withal is already Kur-Pfalz, and will unite the Two Electorates under one head ; a thing which Austria regards with marked dislike.¹ These are anxious considerations to a King in Friedrich's sick state. In his private circle, too, there are sorrows : death of Fouquet, death of Quintus Icilius, of Seidlitz, Quantz (good old Quantz, with his fine Flutings these fifty years, and the still finer memories he awoke !"),—latterly an unusual number of deaths. The ruggedly intelligent Quintus, a daily companion, and guest at the supper-table, died few months before this fit of gout ; and must have been greatly missed by Friedrich. Fouquet, at Brandenburg, died last year : his benefactor in the early Cüstrin distresses, his "Bayard," and chosen friend ever since ; how conspicuously dear to Friedrich to the last is still evident. A Friedrich getting lonely enough, and the lights of his life going out around him ;—has but one sure consolation, which comes to him as compulsion withal, and is not neglected, that of standing stedfast to his work, whatever the mood and posture be.

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, vi. 123.

² Friedrich's Teacher of the Flute ; procured for him by his Mother (Suprà, ii. 189).

The Event of 1776 is Czarowitch Paul's arrival in Berlin, and betrothal to a second Wife there ; his first having died in child-birth lately. The first had been of Friedrich's choosing, but had behaved ill,—seduced by Spanish-French Diplomacies, by this and that, poor young creature :—the second also was of Friedrich's choosing, and a still nearer connexion : figure what a triumphant event ! Event now fallen dead to every one of us ; and hardly admitting the smallest Note,—except for chronology's sake, which it is always satisfactory to keep clear :

“Czarowitch Paul's first Wife, the Hessen-Darmstadt Princess of Three, died of her first child, April 26th, 1776 : everybody whispered, ‘It is none of Paul's!’—who, nevertheless, was inconsolable, the wild heart of him like to break on the occurrence. By good luck, Prince Henri had set out, by invitation, on a second visit to Petersburg ; and arrived there, also on April 26th,—the very day of the fatality. Prince Henri soothed, consoled the poor Czarowitch ; gradually brought him round ; agreed with his Czarina Mother that he must have a new Wife ; and dextrously fixed her choice on a ‘Niece of the King's and Henri's.’ Eldest Daughter of Eugen of Würtemberg, of whom, as an excellent General, though also as a surly Husband, readers have some memory ; now living withdrawn at Mumpelgard, the Würtemberg Apanage” (Montbeillard, as the French call it), “in these piping times of Peace :—she is the Princess. To King Friedrich's great surprise and joy. The Mumpelgard Principalities, and fortunate Princess, are summoned to Berlin. Czarowitch Paul, under Henri's escort, and under gala and festivities from the Frontier onward, arrived in Berlin, 21st July 1776 ; was betrothed to his Würtemberg Princess straightway ; and after about a fortnight of festivities still more transcendent, went home with her to Petersburg ; and was there wedded, 18th October following ;—Czar and Czarina, she and he, twenty years after, and their posterity reigning ever since.” *

“At Vienna,” says the King, “everybody was persuaded the Czarowitch would never come to Berlin. Prince Kaunitz had been,”—been at his old tricks again, playing his sharpest, in the Court of Petersburg again : what tricks (about Poland and otherwise), let us not report, for it is now interesting to nobody. Of the Czarowitch Visit itself, I will remark only,—what seems to be its one chance of dating itself in any of our memories,—that it fell out shortly after the Sherlock dinner with Voltaire (in 1776, April 27th the one event, July 21st the other);—and that here is, by pure accident, the exuberant erratic Sherlock, once more, and once only, emerging on us for a few moments!—

* Bödenbeck, iii. 139-146.

* Œuvres de Frédéric, vi. 120-122.

Exuberant Sherlock and Eleven other English are presented to Friedrich, on a Court Occasion (8th October 1777); and Two of them get spoken to, and speak each a Word. Excellency Hugh Elliot is their Introducer.

Harris, afterwards Earl of Malmesbury, succeeded Mitchell at Berlin: "Polish troubles" (heartily indifferent to England), "Dantzic squabbles" (miraculously important there),—nothing worth the least mention now. Excellency Harris quitted Berlin in Autumn 1776; gave place to an Excellency Hugh Elliot (one of the Minto Elliots, Brother of the first Earl of Minto, and himself considerably noted in the world), of whom we have a few words to say.

Elliot has been here since April 1777; stays some five years in this post;—with not much Diplomatic employment, I should think, but with a style of general bearing and social physiognomy, which, with some procedures partly incidental as well, are still remembered in Berlin. Something of spying, too, doubtless there was; bribing of menials, opening of Letters: I believe a great deal of that went on; impossible to prevent under the carefulest of Kings.¹ Hitherto, with one exception to be mentioned presently, his main business seems to have been that of introducing, on different Court-Days, a great number of Travelling English, who want to see the King, and whom the King little wants, but quietly submits to. Incoherent Sherlock, whom we discover to have been of the number, has, in his tawdry, disjointed Book, this Passage :

¹ An ingenious young Friend of mine, connected with Legationary Business, found lately, at the Hague, a consecutive Series, complete for four or five years (I think from 1780 onwards), of Friedrich's Letters to his Minister in London,—Copies punctually filched as they went through the Post-office there:—specimens of which I saw; and the whole of which I might have seen, had it been worth the effort necessary. But Friedrich's London Minister, in this case, was a person of no significance or intimacy; and the King's Letters, though strangely exact, clear, and even elucidative on English Court-Politics and vicissitudes, seemed to be nearly barren as to Prussian.

“The last time of my seeing him” (this Hero-King of my heart) “was at Berlin” (not a hint of the time when). “He came thither to receive the adieus of the Baron de Swieten, Minister from their Imperial Majesties” (thank you ; that means 8th October 1777¹), “and to give audience to the new Minister, the Count Cobenzl. The Foreign Ministers, the persons who were to be presented” (we, for instance), “and the Military, were all that were at Court. We were ten English” (thirteen by tale) : “the King spoke to the first and the last ; not on account of their situation, but because their names struck him. The first was Major Dalrymple. To him the King said : ‘You have been presented to me before?’ ‘I ask your Majesty’s pardon ; it was my Uncle’ (Lord Dalrymple, of whom presently). Mr. Pitt” (unknown to me which Pitt, subsequent Lord Camelford or another) “was the last. The King : ‘Are you a relation of Lord Chatham’s?’ ‘Yes, Sire.’—‘He is a man whom I highly esteem’ (read “esteemed”).

“He then went to the Foreign Ministers ; and talked more to Prince Dolgorucki, the Russian Ambassador, than to any other. In the midst of his conversation with this Prince, he turned abruptly to Mr. Elliot, the English Minister, and asked : ‘What is the Duchess of Kingston’s family name?’ This transition was less Pindaric than it appears ; he had just been speaking of the Court of Petersburg, and that Lady was then there.”² Whereupon Sherlock hops his ways again ; leaving us considerably uncertain. But, by a curious accident, here, at first hand, is confirmation of the flighty creature ; a Letter from Excellency Elliot himself having come our way :

To William Eden, Esquire (of the Foreign Office, London ; Elliot’s Brother-in-law ; afterwards Lord Auckland).

“Berlin, 12th October 1777.

“My dear Eden,—If you are waiting upon the pinnacle of all impatience to give me news from the Howes” (unknown to us, of no interest to us), "I am waiting with no less impatience to receive it, and think every other subject too little interesting to be mentioned. I must, however, tell you the King has been here ;' to the astonishment of all croakers, hearty and in high spirits. He was very civil to all of us. I was attended by one dozen English, which nearly completes my half hundred this season. Pitt made one of the twelve, and was particularly distinguished. KING : 'Monsieur est-il parent de Mylord Chatham ?' PITT : 'Oui, Sire.' KING : 'C'est un homme que j'ai beaucoup estimé.'

¹ Rödenbeck, iii. 172.

² Sherlock, ii. 27.

"You have no idea of the joy the people expressed to see the King on Horseback,—all the Grub-street nonsense of 'a Country groaning under the weight of its burdens,' of 'a Nation governed with a rod of iron,' vanished before the sincere acclamations of all ranks, who joined in testifying their enthusiasm for their great Monarch. I long for Harris and Company" (Excellency Harris ; making for Russia, I believe) ; "they are to pig together in my house ; so that I flatter myself with having a near view, if not a taste, of connubial joys. My love to E and e" (your big Eleanor and your little, a baby in arms, who are my Sister and Niece ;—pretty, this !).

"Your most affectionate, H. E."

"P.S. I quite forgot to tell you, I sent out a servant some time ago to England to bring a couple of Horses. He will deliver some Packets to you ; which I beg you will send, with Lord Marischal's compliments, to their respective addresses. There is also a china cup for Mr. Macnamara, Lawyer, in the Temple or Lincoln's Inn, from the same person" (lively old gentleman, age 91 gone ; did die next year). "What does Eleanor mean about my Congratulatory Letter to Lord Suffolk" (our Foreign Secretary, on his marriage lately) ? "I wished his Lordship, most sincerely, every happiness in his new state, as soon as I knew of it. I beg, however, Eleanor will do the like ;—and although it is not my system to 'congratulate' anybody upon marriage, yet I never fail to wish them what, I think, it is always two to one they do not obtain."¹

¹ "Came to Berlin, 8th October," on the Van-Swieten errand ; saw Princess Amelia twice ; and on the 9th, returned to Potsdam" (Rödenbeck, iii. 172).

² Eden-House Correspondence (part of which, not this, has been published, in late years).

As to the Dalrymple of Sherlock, read this (Friedrich to D'Alambert, two years before¹): * * "A Mylord of wonderful name" (Lord Dalrymple, if I could remember it), "of amiable genius (au nom baroque, à l'esprit aimable), gave me a Letter on your part. 'Ah, how goes the Prince of Philosophers, then? Is he gay; is he busy; did you see him often?' To which the Mylord: 'I? No; I am straight from London!'"—"Quoi donc?" In short, knowing my Anaxagoras, this Mylord preferred to be introduced by him; and was right: "One of the amiablest Englishmen I have seen;—I except only the name, which I shall never remember" (but do, on this new occasion): "Why doesn't he get himself unchristened of it, and take that of Stair, which equally belongs to him?" (Earl of Stair by and by; Nephew or Grand-Nephew, of the great Earl of Stair, once so well known to some of us. Becomes English Minister here in 1785, if we much cared.)

That word of reminiscence about Pitt is worth more attention. Not spoken lightly, but with meaning and sincerity; something almost pathetic in it, after the sixteen-years separation: "A man whom I much esteemed,"—and had good reason to do so! Pitt's subsequent sad and bright fortunes, from the end of the Seven-Years War and triumphant summing-up of the Jenkins's-Ear Question, are known to readers. His Burton-Pynsent meed of honour (Estate of 3,000*l.* a-year bequeathed him by an aged Patriot, "Let this bit of England go a noble road!"); his lofty silences, in the World Political; his vehement attempts in it, when again asked to attempt, all futile,—with great pain to him, and great disdain from him:—his passionate impatiences on minor matters, "labourers" (ornamenting Burton-Pynsent Park, in Somersetshire) "planting trees by torchlight;" "kitchen people" (at Hayes in North Kent, House still to be seen) "roasting a series of chickens, chicken after chicken, all day, that at any hour, within ten minutes, my Lord may dine!"—these things dwell in the memory of every worthy reader. Here, saved from my poor friend Smelfungus (nobody knows how much of him I suppress), is a brief jotting, in the form of rough memoranda, if it be permissible :

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xxv. 21: 5th August 1775.

"Pitt four years King ; lost in quicksands, after that ; off to Bath, from gout, from semi-insanity ; 'India should pay, but how ?' Lost in General-Warrants, in Wilkes Controversies, American Revolts,—generally, in shallow quicksands ;—dies at his post, but his post had become a delirious one.

"A delicate, proud, noble man ; pure as refined gold. Something sensitive, almost feminine in him ; yet with an edge, a fire, a steadiness ; liker Friedrich, in some fine principal points, than any of his Contemporaries. The one King England has had, this King of Four Years, since the Constitutional system set in. Oliver Cromwell, yes indeed,—but he died, and there was nothing for it but to hang his body on the gallows. Dutch William, too, might have been considerable,—but he was Dutch, and to us proved to be nothing. Then again, so long as Sarah Jennings held the Queen's Majesty in bondage, some gleams of Kinghood for us under Marlborough :—after whom Noodleism and Somnambulism, zero on the back of zero, and all our Affairs, temporal, spiritual and eternal, jumbling at random, which we call the Career of Freedom, till Pitt stretched out his hand upon them. For four years ; never again, he ; never again one resembling him,—nor indeed can ever be.

"Never, I should think. Pitts are not born often ; this Pitt's ideas could occur in the History of Mankind once only. Stranger theory of society, completely believed in by a clear, sharp and altogether human head, incapable of falsity, was seldom heard of in the world. For King : open your mouth, let the first gentleman that falls into it (a mass of Hanover stolidity, stupidity, foreign to you, heedless of you) be King : Supreme Majesty he, with hypothetical decorations, dignities, solemn appliances, high as the stars (the whole, except the money, a mendacity, and sin against Heaven) : him you declare Sent-of-God, Supreme Captain of your England ; and having done so,—tie him up (according to Pitt) with Constitutional straps, so that he cannot stir hand or foot, for fear of accidents : in which state he is fully cooked ; throw me at his Majesty's feet, and let me bless Heaven for such a Pillar of Cloud by day.

"Pitt, closely as I could scrutinise, seems never to have doubted in his noble heart but he had some reverence for George II. 'Reverenced his Office,' says a simple reader ?

Alas no, my friend, man does not 'reverence Office,' but only sham-reverences it. I defy him to reverence anything but a Man filling an Office (with or without salary) nobly. Filling a noble office ignobly; doing a celestial task in a quietly infernal manner? It were kinder perhaps to run your sword through him (or through yourself) than to take to revering him! If inconvenient to slay him or to slay yourself (as is oftenest likely), keep well to windward of him; be not, without necessity, partaker of his adventures in this extremely earnest Universe!" * *

"No; Nature does not produce many Pitts:—nor will any Pitt ever again apply in Parliament for a career. 'Your voices, your most sweet voices; ye melodious torrents of Gadarenes Swine, galloping rapidly down steep places,—I, for one, know whither!'" * *—Enough.

About four months before this time, Elliot had done a feat, not in the Diplomatic line at all, or by his own choice at all, which had considerably astonished the Diplomatic world at Berlin, and was doubtless well in the King's thoughts during this introduction of the Dozen. The American War is raging and blundering along,—a delectable Lord George Sackville (alias Germaine) managing as War-Minister, others equally skilful presiding at the Parliamentary helm; all becoming worse and worse off, as the matter proceeds. The revolted Colonies have their Franklins, Lees, busy in European Courts: "Help us in our noble struggle, ye European Courts; now is your chance on tyrannous England!" To which France at least does appear to be lending ear. Lee, turned out from Vienna, is at work in Berlin, this while past; making what progress is uncertain to some people.

I know not whether it was by my Lord Suffolk's instigation, or what had put the Britannic Cabinet on such an idea,—perhaps the stolen Letters of Friedrich, which show so exact a knowledge of the current of events in America as well as England ("knows every step of it, as if he were there himself, the Arch-Enemy of honest neighbours in a time of stress!")—but it does appear they had got it into their sagacious heads that the bad neighbour at Berlin was, in effect, the Arch-Enemy, probably mainspring of the whole matter; and that it would be in the highest degree interesting to see clearly what Lee and he had on hand. Order thereupon to Elliot: "Do it, at any price;" and finally, as mere price will not answer, "Do it by any method,—steal Lee's Despatch-Box for us!"

Perhaps few Excellencies living had less appetite for such a job than Elliot; but his Orders were peremptory, "Lee is a rebel, quasi-outlaw; and you must!" Elliot thereupon took accurate survey of the matter; and rapidly enough, and with perfect skill, though still a novice in Berlin affairs, managed to do it. Privily hired, or made his servant hire, the chief House-breaker or Pickpocket in the City; "Lee lodges in such and such a Hostelry; bring us his Red-Box for a thirty hours; it shall be well worth your while!" And in brief space the Red-Box arrives, accordingly; a score or two of ready-writers waiting for it, who copy all day, all night, at the top of their speed, till they have enough: which done, the Lee Red-Box is left on the stairs of the Lee Tavern; Box locked again, and complete; only the Friedrich-Lee Secrets completely pumped out of it, and now rushing day and night towards England, to illuminate the Supreme Council-Board there.

This astonishing mass of papers is still extant in England;¹ —the outside of them I have seen, by no means the inside, had I wished it; but am able to say from other sources, which are open to all the world, that seldom had a Supreme Council-Board procured for itself, by improper or proper ways, a Discovery of less value! Discovery that Lee has indeed been urgent at Berlin; and has raised in Friedrich the question, "Have you got to such a condition that I can, with safety and advantage, make a Treaty of Commerce with you!"—That his Minister Schulenburg has, by Order, been investigating Lee on that head; and has reported, "No, your Majesty, Lee and People are not in such a condition;" that his Majesty has replied, "Well, let him wait till they are;" and that Lee is waiting accordingly. In general, That his Majesty is not less concerned in guidance or encouragement of the American War than he is in ditto of the Atlantic Tides or of the East-Wind (though he does keep barometers and meteorological apparatus by him) ; and that we of the Council-Board are a—what shall I say ! Not since the case of poor Dr. Cameron, in 1753, when Friedrich was to have joined the Highlanders with 15,000 chosen Prussians for Jacobite purposes,—and the Cham of Tartary to have taken part in the Bangorian Controversy,—was there a more perfect platitude, or a deeper depth of ignorance as to adjacent objects on the part of Governing Men. For shame, my friends !—

¹ In the Eden-House Archives; where a natural delicacy (unaware that the questionable Legationary Fact stands in print for so many years past) is properly averse to any promulgation of them.

This surprising bit of Burglary, so far as I can gather from the Prussian Books, must have been done on Wednesday, June 25th, 1777 ; Box (with essence pumped out) restored to staircase, night of Thursday,—Police already busy, Governor Ramin and Justice-President Philippi already apprised, and suspicion falling on the English Minister,—whose Servant (“Arrest him we cannot without a King’s Warrant, only procurable at Potsdam !”) vanishes bodily. Friday 27th, Ramin and Philippi make report ; King answers, “greatly astonished :” a “garstige Sache (ugly Business), which will do the English no honour :” “Servant fled, say you ? Trace it to the bottom ; swift !” Excellency Elliot, seeing how matters lay, owned honestly to the Official People, That it was his Servant (Servant safe gone, Chief Pickpocket not mentioned at all) ; Sunday Evening 29th, King orders thereupon, “Let the matter drop.” These Official Pieces, signed by the King, by Hertzberg, Ramin and others, we do not give : here is Friedrich’s own notice of it to his Brother Henri :

“Potsdam, 29th June 1777. * * There has just occurred a strange thing at Berlin. Three days ago, in absence of the Sieur Lee, Envoy of the American Colonies, the Envoy of England went” (sent !) “to the Inn where Lee lodged, and carried off his Portfolio ; it seems he was in fear, however, and threw it down, without opening it, on the stairs” (alas, no, your Majesty, not till after pumping the essence out). “All Berlin is talking of it. If one were to act with rigour, it would be necessary to forbid this man the Court, since he has committed a public theft ; but, not to make a noise, I suppressed the thing. Shan't fail, however, to write to England about it, and indicate that there was another way of dealing with such a matter, for they are impertinent" (say ignorant, blind as moles, your Majesty ; that is the charitable reading !).¹

This was not Excellency Elliot's Burglary, as readers see, — among all the Excellencies going, I know not that there is one with less natural appetite for such a job ; but sometimes what can a necessitous Excellency do ? Elliot is still remembered in Berlin society, not for this only, but for emphatic things of a better complexion which he did ; a man more justly estimated there, than generally here in our time. Here his chief fame rests on a witty Anecdote, evidently apocryphal, and manufactured in the London Clubs : " Who is this Hyder-Ali ? " said the old King to him, one day (according to the London Clubs). " Hm," answered Elliot, with exquisite promptitude, politeness and solidity of information, "C'est un vieux voleur qui commence radoter (An old robber, now falling into his dotage)," — let his dotard Majesty take that.

Alas, my friends! — Ignorance by herself is an awkward lumpish wench ; not yet fallen into vicious courses, nor to be uncharitably treated : but Ignorance and Insolence, — these are, for certain, an unlovely Mother and Bastard ! Yes ; — and they may depend upon it, the grim Parish-beadles of this Universe are out on the track of them, and oakum and the correction-house are infallible sooner or later ! The clever Elliot, who knew a hawk from a hernshaw, never floundered into that platitude. This, however, is a joke of his, better or worse (I think, on his quitting Berlin in 1782, without visible resource or outlook) : " I am far from having a Sans-Souci," writes he to the Edens ; " and I think I am coming to be sans sur-sous." — Here still are two small Fractions ; which I must insert ; and then rigorously close. Kaiser Joseph, in these months, is travelling through France to instruct his ¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvi. 394. In Preuss, v. (he calls it "iv." or "Urkundenbuch to vol. iv.," but it is really and practically vol. v.) 278, 279, are the various Official Reports.

Imperial mind. The following is five weeks anterior to that of Lee's Red-Box :

1. A Bit of Dialogue at Paris (Saturday, 17th May 1777). After solemn Session of the Académie Française, held in honour of an illustrious Comte de Falkenstein (privately, Kaiser Joseph II.), who has come to look at France, — Comte de Falkenstein was graciously pleased to step up to D'Alembert, who is perpetual Secretary here ; and this little Dialogue ensued :

Falkenstein. "I have heard you are for Germany this season ; some say you intend to become German altogether?"

D'Alembert, "I did promise myself the high honour of a visit to his Prussian Majesty, who has deigned to invite me, with all the kindness possible ; but, alas for such hopes ! the bad state of my health—" Falkenstein. "It seems to me you have already been to see the King of Prussia?"

D'Alembert. "Two times ; once in 1756" (1755, 17th–19th June, if you will be exact), "at Wesel, when I remained only a few days ; and again in 1763, when I had the honour to pass three or four months with him. Since that time I have always longed to have the honour of seeing his Majesty again ; but circumstances hindered me. I, above all, regretted not to have been able to pay my court to him that year he saw the Emperor at Neisse,—but at this moment there is nothing more to be wished on that head" (Don't bow : the Gentleman is Incognito).

Falkenstein. "It was very natural that the Emperor, young, and desiring to instruct himself, should wish to see such a Prince as the King of Prussia ; so great a Captain, a Monarch of such reputation, and who has played so great a part. It was a Scholar going to see his Master" (these are his very words, your Majesty). D'Alembert. "I wish M. le Comte de Falkenstein could see the Letters which the King of Prussia did me the honour to write after that Interview : it would then appear how this Prince judged of the Emperor, as all the world has since done."

King to D'Alembert (three months after. Kaiser is home ; passed Ferney, early in August ; and did not call on Voltaire, ¹ Minute and rather entertaining Account of his precedures there, and especially of his two Visits to the Academy (first was May 10th), in Mayer, Reisen Josephs II. (Leipzig, 1778), pp. 112–132, 147 et seq.

² "D'Alembert to Friedrich" (in Œuvres de Frédéric, xxv. 75), "23d May 1777." Ibid. xxv. 82 ; "13th August 1777."

as is well known). * * "I hear the Comte de Falkenstein has been seeing harbours, arsenals, ships, manufactures, and hasn't seen Voltaire. Had I been in the Emperor's place, I would not have passed Ferney without a glance at the old Patriarch, were it only to say that I had seen and heard him. Arsenals, ships, manufactures, these you can see anywhere; but it requires ages to produce a Voltaire. By the rumors I hear, it will have been a certain great Lady Theresa, very Orthodox and little Philosophical, who forbade her Son to visit the Apostle of Tolerance." D'Alembert (in answer): "No doubt your Majesty's guess is right. It must have been the Lady Mother. Nobody here believes that the advice came from his Sister" (Queen Marie Antoinette), "who, they say, is full of esteem for the Patriarch, and has more than once let him know it by third parties."¹

According to Friedrich, Joseph's reflections in France were very gloomy: "This is all one Country; strenuously kneaded into perfect union and incorporation by the Old Kings: my discordant Romish Reich is of many Countries,—and should be of one, if Sovereigns were wise and strenuous!"²

2. A Cabinet-Order and actual (facsimile) Signature of Friedrich's.—After unknown travels over the world, this poor brown Bit of Paper, with a Signature of Friedrich's to it, has wandered hither; and I have had it copied, worthy or not. A Royal Cabinet-Order on the smallest of subjects; but perhaps all the more significant on that account; and a Signature which readers may like to see.

Fordan, or Fordon, is in the Bromberg Department in West-Prussen,—Bromberg no longer a heap of ruins; but a lively, new-built, paved, canalled, and industrious trading Town. At Fordan is a Grain-Magazine: Bein ("leg," der Bein, as they slightly call him) is Proviant-Master there; and must consider his ways,—the King's eye being on him. Readers can now look and understand:

"An den Ober-Proviantmeister Bein, zu Fordan.

"Potsdam, den 9ten April 1777.

"Seiner Königlich Majestät von Preussen, Unser allergnädigster Herr, lassen dem Ober-Proviantmeister Bein hiehey die Getraide-Preistabelle des Brombergischen De-

"His Royal Majesty of Preussen, Our most all-gracious Lord, lets herewith, to the Head Proviant-master Bein, the Grain-Prices Table of the Bromberg Department be partments zufertigen ; Wo r a u s derselbe ersiehet wie niedrig solche an einigen Orthen sind, und dass zu Inowracław und Strezelnow der Scheffel Roggen um 12 Groschen kostet : da solches nun hier so wohlfeil ist, so muss ja der Preis in Pohlen noch wohl geringer, und ist daher nicht abzusehen warum die Pohlen auf so hohe Preise bestehen ; der Bein muss sich daher nun rechte Mühe geben, und den Einkauf so wohlfeil als nur immer möglich zu machen suchen."

despatched ; Wherefrom Bein perceives how low in some places these are, and that at Inowracław and Strezelnow the Bushel of Rye costs about 14 Pence : now, as it is so cheap there, the price in Poland must be still smaller ; and therefore it is not to be conceived why the Poles demand such high prices," as the said Bein reports : "Bein therefore is charged to take especial pains, and try not to make the purchase dearer than is indispensable."

lauf, fuß marfan führen,

* Original kindly furnished me by Mr. W.H. Doeg, Barlow Moor, Manchester ; whose it now is,—purchased in London, A.D. 1863. The Führ of German cursiv-schrift (current hand), which the woodcutter has appended, shut off by a square, will show English readers what the King means: an "Führ" done as by a flourish of one's stick, in the most compendious and really ingenious manner,—suitable for an economic King, who has to repeat it scores of times every day of his life!

CHAPTER VI

THE BAVARIAN WAR.

At the very beginning of 1778, the chronic quarrel with Austria passed, by an accident just fallen out, into the acute state ; rose gradually, and, in spite of negotiating, issued in a thing called Bavarian-Succession War, which did not end till Spring of the following year. The accident was this. At München, December 30th, 1777, Max Joseph, Kurfürst of Baiern, only Brother of our lively friend the Electress-Dowager of Saxony, died ; suddenly, of small-pox unskilfully treated. He was in his fifty-second year ; childless, the last of that Bavarian branch. His Heir is Karl Theodor, Kur-Pfalz (Elector-Palatine), who is now to unite the Two Electorates,—unless Austria can bargain with him otherwise. Austria's desire to get hold of Baiern is of very old standing ; and we have heard lately how much it was an object with Kaunitz and his young Kaiser. With Karl Theodor they did bargain,—in fact, had beforehand as good as bargained,—and were greatly astonished, when King Friedrich, alone of all Teutschland or the world, mildly, but peremptorily, interfered, and said No,—with effect, as is well known.

Something, not much, must be said of this Bavarian-Succession War ; which occupied, at a pitch of tension and anxiety foreign to him for a long time, fifteen months of Friedrich's old age (January 1778—March 1779) ; and filled all Europe round him and it, in an extraordinary manner. Something ; by no means much, now that we have seen the issue of such mountains all in travail. Nobody could then say but it bade fair to become a Fourth Austrian-Prussian War, as sanguinary as the Seven-Years had been ; for in effect there stood once more the Two Nations ranked against each other, as if for mortal duel, near half a million men in whole ; parleying indeed, but brandishing their swords, and ever and anon giving mutual clash of fence, as if the work had begun, though there always intervened new parleying first.

And now everybody sees that the work never did begin ; that parleying, enforced by brandishing, turned out to be all the work there was : and everybody has forgotten it, and, except for specific purposes, demands not to be put in mind of it. Mountains in labour were not so frequent then as now, when the Penny Newspaper has got charge of them ; though then as now to practical people they were a nuisance. Mountains all in terrific travail-throes, threatening to upset the solar system, have always a charm, especially for the more foolish classes : but when once the birth has taken place, and the wretched mouse ducks past you, or even nothing at all can be seen to duck past, who is there but impatiently turns on his heel ?

These Territories, which adjoin on its own dominions, would have been extremely commodious to Austria ;—as Austria itself has long known ; and by repeatedly attempting them on any chance given (as in 1741–45, to go no farther back), has shown how well it knows. Indeed, the whole of Bavaria fairly incorporated and made Austrian, what an infinite convenience would it be !

“Do but look on the Map” (this Note is not by Büsching, but by somebody of Austrian tendencies) : “you would say, Austria without Bavaria is like a Human Figure with its belly belonging to somebody else. Bavaria is the trunk or belly of the Austrian Dominions, shutting off all the limbs of them each from the other ; making for central part a huge chasm.

“Ober-Pfalz,—which used to be Kur-Pfalz’s, which is Bavaria’s since we took it from the Winter-King and bestowed it in that way,—Ober-Pfalz, the Country of Amberg, where Maillebois once pleased to make invasion of us ;—does not it adjoin on the Bohemian Forest ? The ribs there, Bohemian all, up to the shoulder, are ours : but the shoulder-blade and left arm, whose are they ! Austria Proper and Hungary, these may be taken as sitting-part and lower limbs, ample and fleshy ; but see, just above the pelvis, on the south side, how Bavaria and its Tyrol sticks itself in upon Austria, who fancied she also had a Tyrol, and far the more important one. Our Tyrol, our Styria, Carniola, Carinthia,—Bavaria blocks these in. Then the Swabian Austria,—Breisach, and those Upper-Rhine Countries, from which we invade France,—we cannot reach them except through Bavarian ground. Swabian Austria should be our right arm, fingers of it reaching into Switzerland; Ober-Pfalz our left:—and as to the broad breast between these two; left arm and broad breast are Bavaria's, not ours. Of the Netherlands, which might be called geographically the head of Austria, alas, the long neck, Lorraine, was once ours; but whose is it? Irrecoverable for the present,—perhaps may not always be so!"

These are Kaunitz's ideas; and the young Kaiser has eagerly adopted them as the loadstar of his life. "Make the Reich a reality again," thinks the Kaiser (good, if only possible, think we too); "make Austria great; Austria is the Reich, how else can the Reich be real?"

In practical politics these are rather wild ideas; but they are really Kaunitz's and his Kaiser's; and were persisted in long after this Bavarian matter got its check: and as a whole, they got repeated checks; being impossible all, and far from the meaning of a Time big with French Revolution, and with quite other things than world-greatness to Austria, and rejuvenescence on such or on any terms to the poor old Holy Roman Reich, which has been a wiggery so long. Nobody could guess of what it was that France or the world might be with child: nobody, till the birth in 1789, and even for a generation afterwards. France is weakly and unwieldy, has strange enough longings for chalky, inky, visionary, foolish substances, and may be in the family-way for aught we know.

To Kaunitz it is pretty clear that France will not stand in his path in this fine little Bavarian business; which is all he cares for at present. England in war with its Colonies; Russia attentive to its Turk; foreign Nations, what can they do but talk; remonstrate more or less, as they did in the case of Poland; and permit the thing with protest? Only from one Sovereign Person, and from him I should guess not much, does Kaunitz expect serious opposition: from Friedrich of Prussia; to whom no enlargement of Austria can be matter of indifference. "But cannot we perhaps make it worth his while?" thinks Kaunitz: "Tush, he is old and broken; thought to be dying; has an absolute horror of war. He too will sit quiet; or we must make it worth his while." In this calculation Kaunitz deceived himself ; we are now shortly to see how.

Kaunitz's Case, when he brings it before the Reich, and general Public of mankind and its Gazetteers, will by no means prove to be a strong one. His law "title" is this :

"Archduke Albert V. of Austria, subsequently Kaiser Albert II., had married Elizabeth, only Daughter of Kaiser Sigismund Super-Grammaticam : Albert is he who got three crowns in one year, Hungary, Bohemia, Romish Reich ; and 'we hope a fourth,' say the Old Historians, 'which was a heavenly and eternal one,'—died, in short (1439, age forty). From him come the now Kaisers.

"In 1426, thirteen years before this event of the Crowns, Sigismund Grammaticam had infeoffed him in a thing still of shadowy nature,—the Expectancy of a Straubingen Principdom ; pleasant extensive District, only not yet fallen, or like falling vacant : 'You shall inherit, you and yours (who are also my own), so soon as this present line of Wittelsbachers die !' said Kaiser Sigismund, solemnly, in two solemn sheepskins. 'Not a whit of it,' would the Wittelsbachers have answered, had they known of the affair. 'When we die out, there is another Line of Wittelsbachers, plenty of other lines ; and House-treaties many and old, settling all that, without help of you and Albert of the Three Crowns !' And accordingly there had never come the least fruit, or attempt at fruit, from these two Sigismund Sheepskins ; which were still lying in the Vienna Archives, where they had lain since the creation of them, known to an Antiquary or two, but not even by them thought worthy of mention in this busy world. This was literally all the claim that Austria had ; and every bystander admitted it to be, in itself, not worth a rush."

"In itself perhaps not," thought Kaunitz ; "but the free consent of Karl Theodor the Heir, will not that be a Title in full ? One would hope so ; in the present state of Europe : France, England, Russia, every Nation weltering overhead in its own troubles and affairs, little at leisure for ours !" And it is with Karl Theodor, to make out a full Title for himself there, that Kaunitz has been secretly busy this long time back, especially in the late critical days of poor Kurfürst Max.

Karl Theodor of the Pfalz, now fallen Heir to Baiern, is a poor idle creature, of purely egoistic, ornamental, dilettante nature ; sunk in theatricals, bastard children, and the like ; much praised by Voltaire, who sometimes used to visit him ; and by Collini, to whom he is a kind master. Karl Theodor cares little for the integrity of Baiern, much for that of his own skin. Very long ago, in 1742, in poor Kaiser Karl's Coronation time, we saw him wedded, him and another, to two fair Sister Sulzbach Princesses,¹ Granddaughters of old Karl Philip, the then Kur-Pfalz, whom he has inherited. It was the last act of that never-resting old Karl Philip, of whom we used to hear so much ; "Karl Theodor to have one of my inestimable Granddaughters ; Duke Clement, younger Brother of our blessed new Kaiser, to have another ; thereby we unite the kindred branches of the Pfalz-Baiern Families, and make the assurance of the Heritages doubly sure !" said old Karl Philip ; and died happy, or the happiest he could.

Readers no doubt have forgotten this circumstance ; and, in their total lack of interest in Karl Theodor and his paltry affairs, may as well be reminded of it ;—and, furthermore, that these brilliant young Wives, "Duchess Clement" especially, called on Wilhelmina during the Frankfurt Gaieties, and were a charm to Kaiser Karl Albert, striving to look forward across clouds into a glittering future for his House. Theodor's Princess brought him no children ; she and her Sister are both still living ; a lone woman the latter (Duke Clement dead these seven years),—a still more lone the former, with such a Husband yet living ! Lone women both, well forward in the fifties ; active souls, I should guess, at least to judge by Duchess Clement, who being a Dowager, and mistress of her movements, is emphatic in denouncing such disaster and disgrace ; and plays a great part, at München, in the agitating scenes now on hand. Comes out "like a noble Amazon," say the admiring bystanders, on this occasion ; stirs whatever faculty she has, especially her tongue ; and goes on urging, pushing and contriving, all she can, regardless of risks in such an imminency.

Karl Theodor finds his Heritages indisputable ; but he has no Legitimate Son to leave them to ; and has many Illegitimate, whom Austria can provide for,—and richly will. His Heir is a Nephew, Karl August Christian, of Zweibrück ; whom perhaps it would not be painful to him to disappoint a little of his high expectations. On the whole, Peace ; plentiful provision, titular and other, for his Illegimates ; and a comfortable sum of ready-money over, to enliven the Theatricals, Düsseldorf Picture-Galleries and Dilettante operations and Collections,—how much welcomer to Theodor than a Baiern never so religiously saved entire at the expense of quarrel, which cannot but be tedious, troublesome and dangerous ! Honour, indeed,—but what, to an old stager in the dilettante line, is honour ? Old stagers there are who will own to you, like Balzac's Englishman in a case of conflagration, when honour called on all men to take their buckets, “ Mais je n'ai point d'honneur ! ” To whom, unluckily, you cannot answer as in that case, “ C'est égal, 'Tis all one ; do as if you had some ! ” Karl Theodor scandalously left Baiern to its fate.

¹ Suprà iv. 254.

Karl Theodor's Heir, poor August Christian of Zweibrück, had of course his own gloomy thoughts on this parcelling of his Barbarian reversion ; but what power has he ? None, he thinks, but to take the inevitable patiently. Nor generally in the Princess of the Reich, though one would have thought them personally concerned, were it only for danger of a like mistreatment, was there any emotion publicly expressed, or the least hope of help. “ Perhaps Prussia will quarrel about it ? ” think they : “ Austria, Prussia, in any of their quarrels we get only crushed ; better to keep out of it. We well out of it, the more they quarrel and fight, the better for us ! ” England, in the shape of Hanover, would perhaps have made some effort to interfere, provided France did : on either side, I incline to think,—that is to say, on the side opposite to France. But poor England is engaged with its melancholy American War ; France on the point of breaking out into Alliance with the Insurrection there. Neither France nor England did interfere. France is sinking into bankruptcy ; intent to have a Navy before most things ; to assist the cause of Human Liberty over seas withal, and become a sublime spectacle, and a ruin to England,—not as in the Pitt-Choiseul time, but by that improved method. Russia, again involved in Turk business, looks on, with now and then a big word thrown out on the one side and the other.—München, in the interval, we can fancy what an agitated City! One Note says:

“Kurfürst Max Joseph being dead (30th December 1777), Privy Councillor Johann Euchar von Obermayr, favourite and factotum Minister of the Deceased, opened the Chatouille” (Princely Safe, or Case of Preciosities); “took from it the Act, which already lay prepared, for Homaging and solemn Instalment of Karl Theodor Kur-Pfalz, as Heir of Baiern; with immediate intent to execute the same. Euchar orders strict closure of the Town-gates; the Soldiery to draw out, and beset all streets,—especially that street where Imperial Majesty’s Ambassador lives: ‘Rank close with your backs to that House,’ orders Euchar; ‘and the instant anybody stirs to come out, sound your drums, and, at the same instant, let the rearmost rank of you, without looking round’ (for one would not give offence, unless imperative) ‘smite the butts of their muskets to the ground’ (ready for firing, if imperative). Nobody, I think, stirred out from that Austrian Excellency’s House; in any case, Obermayr completed his Act without the least protest or trouble from anybody; and Karl Theodor, almost to his terror” (for he meant to sell, and satisfy Austria, by no means to resist or fight, the paltry old creature, careful of self and skin only), “saw himself solemnly secured by all forms of law in all the Lands of the Deceased.”

“Kaiser Joseph, in a fume at this, shot off an express to Bohemia; ‘Such and such regiments, ten or twelve of you, with your artillery and tools, march instantly into Straubingen, and occupy that Town and District.’ At Vienna, to the Karl Theodor Ambassador, the Kaunitz Officials were altogether loud-voiced, minatory: ‘What is this, Herr Excellenz? Bargain already made; lying ready for mere signature; and at München such doings. Sign this Bargain, or there cross your frontier 60,000 Austrian men, and seize both Baiern and the Ober-Pfalz: bethink you, Herr?’ The poor Herr bethought him, what could he do? signed the Bargain, Karl Theodor sanctioning, 3d January 1778,—the fourth day after Obermayr’s Homaging feat;—and completes the first act of this bad business. The Bargain, on Theodor’s side, was of the most liberal kind ; All and sundry the Lands and Circles of Duke Johann of Straubingen, Lordship of Mindelheim " (Marlborough's old Place) "superadded, and I know not what else ; Sovereignty of the Fiefs in Ober-Pfalz to lapse to the Crown of Böhmen on my decease." Half Bavaria, or better ; some reckon it as good as two-thirds.

¹ Fisher, Geschichte Friedrichs des Zweiten (Halle, 1787), ii. 356.

The figure of Duchess Clement, Amazon in hair-powder, driving incessantly about among the officialities and aristocratic circles ; this and the order of, "Rattle your muskets on the ground ;" let these two features represent to us the München of those months. München, Regensburg, Vienna are loud with pleading, protocolling ; but it is not there that the crisis of the game will be found to lie.

Friedrich has, for some time back, especially since the late Kur-Baiern's illness, understood that Austria, always eager for a clutch at Baiern, had something of that kind in view ; but his first positive news of it was a Letter from Duchess Clement (date, January 3d), which, by the detail of facts, unveiled to his quick eye the true outline, extent and nature of this Enterprise of Austria's ; Enterprise which, he could not but agree with Duchess Clement, was one of great concernment not to Baiern alone. "Must be withstood ; prevented, at whatever risk," thought Friedrich on the instant : "The new Elector, Karl Theodor, he probably is dead to the matter ; but one ought to ask him. If he answer, Dead ; then ask his Heir, Have you no life to it ?" Heir is a gallant enough young gentleman, of endless pedigree, but small possessions, "Karl August Christian" (Karl II. in Official style), "Duke of Zweibrück-Birkenfeld," Karl Theodor's eldest Nephew ; Friedrich judges that he probably will have haggled to sign any Austrian convention for dismemberment of Baiern, and that he will start into life upon it so soon as he sees hope.

"A messenger to him, to Karl Theodor and him," thinks Friedrich : "a messenger instantly ; and who ?" For that clearly is the first thing. And a delicate thing it is ; requiring to be done in profoundest secrecy, by hint and innuendo rather than speech,—by somebody in a cloak of darkness, who is of adroit quality, and was never heard of in diplomatic circles before, not to be suspected of having business of mine on hand, Friedrich bethinks him that in a late visit to Weimar, he had noticed, for his fine qualities, a young gentleman named Görtz ; Eustace von Görtz, ' late Tutor to the young Duke (Karl August, whom readers know as Goethe's friend) : a wise, firm, adroit-looking young gentleman ; who was farther interesting as Brother to Lieutenant-General von Görtz, a respectable soldier of Friedrich's. Ex-Tutor at Weimar, we say, and idle for the moment ; hanging about Court there, till he should find a new function.

Of this Ex-Tutor Friedrich bethinks him ; and in the course of that same day,—for there is no delay,—Friedrich, who is at Berlin, beckons General Görtz to come over to him from Potsdam instantly. “ Hither this evening, and in all privacy meet me in the Palace at such an hour ” (hour of midnight or thereby) ; which of course Görtz, duly invisible to mankind, does. Friedrich explains : An errand to München ; perfectly secret, for the moment, and requiring great delicacy and address ; perhaps not without risk, a timorous man might say : will your Brother go for me, think you ? Görtz thinks he will. “ Here is his Instruction, if so,” adds the King, handing him an Autograph of the necessary outline of procedure,—not signed, nor with any credential, or even specific address, lest accident happen. “ Adieu, then, Herr General-Lieutenant ; rule is, shoes of swiftness, cloak of darkness : adieu ! ” And Görtz Senior is off on the instant, careering towards Weimar, where he finds Görtz Junior, and makes known his errand. Görtz Junior stares in the natural astonishment ; but, after some intense brief deliberation, becomes affirmative, and in a minimum of time is ready and on the road.

Görtz Junior proved to have been an excellent choice on the King's part ; and came to good promotion afterwards by his conduct in this affair. Görtz Junior started for München on the instant, masked utterly, or his business masked, from profane eyes ; saw this person, saw that, and glided swiftly about, swiftly and with sure aim ; and speedily kindled the matter, and had smoke rising in various points. And before

¹ Preuss, iv. 92 n., &c.

January was out, saw the Reichs-Diet at Regensburg, much more the general Gazetteerage everywhere, seized of this affair, and thrown into paroxysms at the size and complexion of it: saw, in fact, a world getting into flame,—kindled by whom or what nobody could guess, for a long time to come. Görtz had great running about in his cloak of darkness, and showed abundant talent of the kind needed. A pushing, clear-eyed, stout-hearted man; much cleverness and sureness in what he did and forbore to do. His adventures were manifold; he had much travelling about: was at Regensburg, at Mannheim; saw many persons whom he had to judge of on the instant, and speak frankly to, or speak darkly, or speak nothing; and he made no mistake. One of his best counsellors, I gather, was Duchess Clement: of course it was not long till Duchess Clement heard some inkling of him; till, in some of his goings and comings, he saw Duchess Clement, who hailed him as an angel of light. In one journey more mysterious than ever, “he was three days invisible in Duchess Clement’s Garden-house.” “Ah, Madame, que n’étiez-vous Electeur, Why were not you Elector!” writes Friedrich to her once: “We should not have seen those shameful events, which every good German must blush for, to the bottom of his heart (dont tout bon Allemand doit rougir jusqu’au fond du cœur)!”¹

We cannot afford the least narrative of Görtz and his courses: imagination, from a few traits, will sufficiently conceive them. He had gone first to Karl Theodor’s Minister: “Dead to it, I fear; has already signed?” Alas, yes. Upon which to Zweibrück the Heir’s Minister; whom his Master had distinctly ordered to sign, but who, at his own peril, gallant man, delayed, remonstrated, had not yet done it; and was able to answer: “Alive to it, he? Yes, with a witness, were there hope in the world!”—which threw Görtz upon instant gallop towards Zweibrück Schloss, in search of said Heir, the young Duke August Christian; who, however, had left in the interim (summoned by his Uncle, on Austrian urgency, to consent along with him); but whom Görtz, by dexterity and intuition of symptoms, caught up by the road, with what a mutual joy! As had been expected, August Christian, on sight of Görtz, with an armed Friedrich looming in the distance, took at once into new courses and activities. From him, no consent now; far other: Treaty with Friedrich; flat refusal ever to consent: application to the Reich, application even to France, and whatever a gallant young fellow could do.

¹ Preuss, iv. 94.

It was by Friedrich's order that he applied to France; his younger Brother, Max Joseph, was a soldier there, and strove to back him in Official and other circles,—who were all friendly, even zealous for him; and gave good words, but had nothing more. This French department of the business was long a delay to Friedrich's operations: and in result, poor Max's industry there, do what he could, proved rather a minus quantity than otherwise. A good young man, they say; but not the man to kindle into action horses that are dead,—of which he had experience more than once in time coming. He is the same that, 30 years after, having survived his childless elder Brother, became King Max, first King of Baiern; begot Ludwig, second King,—who, for his part, has begotten Otho King of Greece, and done other feats still less worth mentioning. August Christian's behaviour is praised as excellent,—passively firm and polite; the grand requisite, persistence on your ground of “No:”—but his luck, to find such a Friedrich, and also to find such a Görtz, was the saving clause for him.

Friedrich was in very weak health in these months; still considered by the Gazetteers to be dying. But it appears he is not yet too weak for taking, on the instant necessary, a world-important resolution; and of being on the road with it, to this issue or to that, at full speed before the day closed. “Desist, good neighbour, I beseech you. You must desist, and even you shall:” this resolution was entirely his own; as were the equally prompt arrangements he contrived for executing it, should hard come to hard, and Austria prefer war to doing justice. “Excellent methods,” say the most unfriendly judges, “which must at once have throttled Austria into compliance, had he been as prompt in executing them ;—which he by no means was. And there lies his error and failure ; very lamentable, excusable only by decrepitude of body producing weakness and decay of mind." This is emphatically and wearisomely Schmettau's opinion,¹ who looks at it only as a military Adjutant, intent on honour and rapid feats of war,—with how much reason, readers not Prussian or military shall judge as we go on.

Saxony, we ought to mention, was also aggrieved. The Dowager-Electress Maria Antoinette, our sprightly friend, had, as sole surviving Sister of the late Kurfürst Max, the undoubted heirship of Kurfürst Max's "allodial properties and territories : " territories, I think, mainly in the Ober-Pfalz (which are not Bavaria Proper, but were acquired in the Thirty-Years War), which are important in value, and which Austria, regardless of our lively friend, has laid hold of as lapsed fiefs of Bohemia. Clearly Bohemian, says Austria ; and keeps hold. Our lively friend hereupon makes over all her rights in that matter to her Son, the reigning Elector ; with the counsel, if counsel were needed, " Ask protection of King Friedrich ; go wholly with King Friedrich." Mecklenburg too has an interest. Among the lapsed fiefs is one to a Duchy called of Leuchtenberg ;—in regard to which, says Mecklenburg, as loud as it can, " That Duchy is not lapsed at all ; that is now mine, witness this Document " (of a valid testamentary nature) ! Other claims were put in ; but these three : Zweibrück endlessly important ; Saxony important too, though not in such degree ; Mecklenburg unimportant, but just,—were alone recognised in impartial quarters as authentic and worthy of notice.

¹ F. W. O. Graf von Schmettau (this is the Elder Schmettau's Son, not the Dresdener's whom we used to quote), Feldzug der Preussischen Armee in Böhmen im Jahre 1778 (Berlin, 1789,—simultaneously in French too, with Plans) : with which,—as the complete Account by an eager Witness and Participant,—compare always Friedrich's own Mémoires de la Guerre de 1778), in Œuvres de Frédéric, vi. 135–208. Schöning (vol. iv.), besides his own loose Narrative, or Summary, has given all the Correspondence between Henri and the King :—sufficient to quench the sharpest appetite on this subject.

Of the pleadings and procedures in the Reich's Diet no reader would permit me to speak, were I inclined. Enough to understand they went on in the usual voluminous dull-droning way, crescendo always ; and deserve, what at present they are sure of, oblivion from all creatures. The important thing was, not those pleadings in the Reich's Diet, nor the Austrian proposals there or elsewhere ; but the brandishing of arms in emitting and also in successively answering the same. Answer always No by Friedrich, and some new flash of handled arms,—the physiognomy of which was the one significant point. Austria, which is far from ready with arms, though at each fresh pleading or proposal it tries to give a kind of brandish, says mainly three things, in essence somewhat thus. Austria : "Cannot two States of the Reich come to a mutual understanding, as Austria and Bavaria have done? And what have third parties to say to it?" Friedrich : "Much! Parties of the Reich have much to say to it!" (This several times with variations.) Austria : "Our rights seem to us valid : Zweibrück, Saxony, Mecklenburg, if aggrieved, can try in the Reichs Law-Courts." Friedrich : "Law-Courts!" with a new brandish ; that is, sets more regiments on march, from Pommern to Wesel all on march, to Berlin, to Silesia, towards the Bohemian Frontier. Austria, by the voice of Kaunitz : "We will not give up our rights without sentence of Law. We cannot recognise the King of Prussia as Law-Judge in this matter." Friedrich : "The King of Prussia is of the Jury!"

Pulse after pulse, this is something like the course things had, crescendo till, in about three months, they got to a height which was evidently serious. Nay, in the course of the pleadings it became manifest that on the Austrian grounds of claim, not Maria Theresa could be heir to Straubingen, but Friedrich himself : "I descend from Three-Crown Albert's Daughter," said Maria Theresa. "And I from an elder Daughter of his, and do not claim!" Friedrich could have answered, but did not ; treating such claim all along as merely colorable and chimerical, not worth attention in serious affairs of fact. Till, at length, after about three months, there comes a really serious brandish.

Sunday, April 5th, 1778, at Berlin, Friedrich holds review of his Army, all assembled, equipped and in readiness ; and (in that Upper Parole-Room of the Schloss) makes this Speech, which, not without extraneous intention, was printed in the Newspapers :

Friedrich's Speech to his Generals. "Gentlemen, I have assembled you here for a public object. Most of you, like myself, have often been in arms along with one another, and are grown gray in the service of our Country : to all of us is well known in what dangers, toils, and renown we have been fellow-sharers. I doubt not in the least that all of you, as myself, have a horror of bloodshed : but the danger which now threatens our Countries, not only renders it a duty, but puts us in the absolute necessity, to adopt the quickest and most effectual means for dissipating at the right time the storm which threatens to break out on us.

"I depend with complete confidence on your soldierly and patriotic zeal, which is already well and gloriously known to me, and which, while I live, I will acknowledge with the heartiest satisfaction. Before all things, I recommend to you, and prescribe as your most sacred duty, That, in every situation, you exercise humanity on unarmed enemies ; and be continually attentive that, in this respect too, there be the strictest discipline (Mannszucht) kept among those under you.

"To travel with the pomp of a King is not among my wishes ; and all of you are aware that I have no pleasure in rich field-furniture : but my increasing age, and the weakness it brings, render me incapable of riding as I did in my youth. I shall, therefore, be obliged to make use of a postchaise in times of marching ; and all of you have liberty to do the same. But on the day of battle you shall see me on horseback ; and there, also, I hope my Generals will follow that example."

Voltaire smothered under Roses. King's Speech was on Sunday, April 5th. Evening of last Monday (March 30th), at the Théâtre Français in Paris, poor Voltaire had that world-famous apotheosis of his ; and got "smothered under roses," as he termed it. He had left Ferney (such the urgency of Niece Denis and her unappeasable desire for a sight of Paris again), February 5th ; arrived in Paris, February 10th ; ventured out to see his poor last Tragedy, not till the sixth night of it, March 30th ; was beshouted, crowned, raised to the immortal gods by a repentant Paris world : "Greatest of men, —You were not a miscreant and malefactor, then : on the contrary, you were a spiritual Hercules, a heroic Son of Light ; Slayer of the Nightmare Monsters, and foul Dragons and Devils that were preying on us : to you shall not we now say, Long life, with all our throats and all our hearts,"—and so quench you at last ! Which they managed to do, poor repentant souls. The tottering wayworn Voltaire, over-agitated in this way, took to bed ; never rose again ; and on that day two-months was dead.¹ His light all done ; to King Friedrich, or to any of us, no flash of radiancy from him any more forever.

April 6th, Friedrich gets on march,—perhaps about 100,000 strong,—for Schönwalde, in the Neisse-Schweidnitz neighbourhood ; and there, in the course of the week, has cantoned himself, and sits completing his magazines and appliances for actual work of war. This is a considerable brandish ; and a good deal astonishes Kaunitz and the Vienna people, who have not 10,000 at present on those Frontiers, and nothing whatever in a state of readiness. "Dangerous really !" Kaunitz admits ; and sets new regiments on march from Hungary, from the Netherlands, from all ends of the Earth where they are. Tempers his own insolent talk, too ; but strives to persuade himself that it is "Menace merely. He won't ; he abhors war." Kaunitz had hardly exaggerated Friedrich's abhorrence of war ; though it turned out there were things which Friedrich abhorred still more.

Schönwalde, headquarter of this alarming Prussian cantonment, is close on the new Fortress of Silberberg, a beautiful new impregnability, looking into those Valleys of the Warta, of the young Neisse, which are the road to Bohemia or from it,—where the Pandour torrents used to issue into the first Silesian Wars ; where Friedrich himself was once to have been snapped up, but was not quite,—and only sang Mass as Extempore Abbot, with Tobias Stusche, in the Monastery of Camenz, according to the myth which readers may remember.

¹ In Duvernoi, and still better in Longchamp et Wagnière, ample account of these interesting occurrences.

No more can Pandours issue that way; only Prussians can enter in. Friedrich's windows in the Schloss of Schönwalde, —which are on the left hand, if you be touring in those parts, —look out direct upon Silberberg, and have its battlements between them and the 3-o'clock Sun.¹ In the Town of Silberberg, Friedrich has withal a modest little lodging,—lodging still known,—where he can alight for an hour or a night, in the multifarious businesses that lead him to and fro. “A beautiful place,” says Schöning; “where the King stayed twelve weeks” or more: waiting till the Bavarian-Austrian case should ripen better. At Schönwalde, what was important in his private circle, he heard of Lord Marischal's death, then of Voltaire's; not to mention that of English Pitt, and perhaps others interesting to him.”

“Now was the time,” cry Schmettau and the unfavourable, “when he might have walked across into Eastern Bohemia, into Mähren, whither you like; to Vienna itself, and taken Austria by the throat at discretion: ‘Do justice, then, will you! Let go Bavaria, or—!’ In his young years, would not he have done so? His Plan, long since laid down, was grand: To march into Mähren, leaving Silesia guarded; nay leaving Bohemia to be invaded,—for Prince Henri, and the Saxons, who are a willing handful, and will complete Henri likewise to 100,000, were to do that feat the while;—march into Mähren, on to Vienna if he chose; laying all flat. Infallible,” say the Schmettau people. “He had the fire of head to contrive it at all; but worn down and grown old, he could not execute his great thoughts.” Which is obviously absurd, Friedrich's object not being to lay Austria flat, or drive animosities to the sanguinary point, and kindle all Europe into war; but merely to extract, with the minimum of violence, something like justice from Austria on this Bavarian matter. For which end he may justly consider slow pressure preferable to the cutting method. His problem is most ticklish, not allowed for by Schmettau.

¹ Schöning, iv. (Introductory Part).

² Voltaire died, May 30th; Marischal, May 25th; Pitt, May 11th;—and “May 4th, in the Cantonment here, died General von Rentzel, the same who, as Lieutenant Rentzel, sixty years ago, had taught the little Crown-Prince his drill” (Bödenbeck, iii. 187).

The encampment round Schönwalde, especially as there was nothing ready thereabouts on the Austrian side, produced a visible and great effect on the negotiations ; and notably altered the high Kaunitz tone towards Friedrich. "Must two great Courts quarrel, then, for the sake of a small one?" murmured Kaunitz, plaintively now, to himself and to the King, —to the King not in a very distinct manner, though to himself the principle is long since clear as an axiom in Politics : "Great Courts should understand one another ; then the small would be less troublesome." For a quarter of a century, this has been the Kaunitz faith. In 1753, when he miraculously screwed round the French into union with the Austrians to put down an upstart Prussia, this was his grand fulcrum, the immovable rock in which the great Engineer fixed down his political capstans, and levered and screwed. He did triumphantly wind matters round,—though whether they much profited him when round, may be a question.

But the same grand principle, in the later instance of partitioning Poland, has it not proved eminently triumphant, successful in all points? And, doubtless, this King of Prussia recognises it, if made worth his while, thinks Kaunitz. In a word, Kaunitz's next utterance is wonderfully changed. The great Engineer speaks almost like a Bishop on this new text. "Let the two Courts," says he, "put themselves each in the other's place ; each think what it would want ;" and in fact each, in a Christian manner, try to do as it would be done by ! How touching in the mouth of a Kaunitz, with something of pathos, of plaintiveness, almost of unction in it ! "There is no other method of agreeing," urges he : "War is a terrible method, disliked by both of us. Austria wishes this of Bavaria ; but his Prussian Majesty's turn will come, perhaps now is (let him say and determine) ; we will make it worth his while." This is of April 24th ; notable change since the cantoning round Schönwalde.

Germany at large, though it lay so silent, in its bed-ridden condition, was in great anxiety. Never had the Holy Romish Reich such a shock before : " Meaning to partition us like Poland ? " thought the Reich, with a shudder. " They can, by degrees, if they think good ; these Two Great Sovereigns ! " Courage, your Durchlauchs : one of the Two great ones has not that in his thoughts ; has, and will have, the reverse of that ; which will be your anchorage in the storms of fate for a long time to come ! Nor was it,—as will shortly appear to readers,—Kaunitz's immediate intention at all : enough if poor we can begin it, set it fairly under way ; let some unborn happier Kaunitz, the last of a series, complete such blessed consummation ; in a happier time, far over the practical horizon at present. This we do gather to have been Kaunitz's real view ; and it throws a light on the vexed Partition-of-Poland question, and gives weight to Dohm's assertion, That Kaunitz was the actual beginner there.

Weeks before Friedrich heard of this remarkable Memorial, and ten days before it was brought to paper, there came to Friedrich another unexpected remarkable Document : a Letter from Kaiser Joseph himself, who is personally running about in these parts, over in Bohemia, endeavouring to bring Army matters to a footing ; and is no doubt shocked to find them still in such backwardness, with a Friedrich at hand. The Kaiser's Letter, we perceive, is pilot-balloon to the Kaunitz episcopal Document, and to an actual meeting of Prussian and Austrian Ministers on the Bavarian point ; and had been seen to be a salutary measure by an Austria in alarm. It asks, as the Kaunitz Memorial will, though in another style, " Must there be war then ? Is there no possibility left in negotiation and mutual concession ? I am your Majesty's friend and admirer ; let us try." This was an unexpected and doubtless a welcome thing to Friedrich ; who answers eagerly, and in a noble style both of courtesy and of business sense : upon which there followed two other Imperial Letters with their two Royal answers ; and directly afterwards the small Austrian-Prussian Congress we spoke of, Finckenstein and Hertzberg on the Prussian part, Cobenzl on the Austrian (Congress sitting at Berlin), which tried to agree, but could not; and to which Kaunitz's Memorial of April 24th was meant as some helpful sprinkling of presidential quasi-episcopal oil.

¹ In Œuvres de Frédéric (vi. 183-193), Three successive Letters from the Kaiser (of dates, "Olmütz," "Litau," "Königsgrätz," 18-19th April 1778), with King's Answers ("Schönwalde," all of them, and 14th-20th April),—totally without interest to the general reader.

Oil merely: for it turned out Kaunitz had no thought at present of partitioning the German Reich with Friedrich; but intended merely to keep his own seized portion of Baiern, and in return for Friedrich's assent, intended to recompense Friedrich with—in fact, with Austria's consent, That if Anspach and Baireuth lapsed home to Prussia (as it was possible they might, the present Margraf, Friedrich's Nephew, the Lady-Craven Margraf, having a childless Wife), Prussia should freely open the door to them! A thing which Friedrich naturally maintained to be in need of nobody's consent, and to lie totally apart from this question; but which Austria always considered a very generous thing, and always returned to, with new touches of improvement, as their grand recipe in this matter. So that, unhappily, the Hertzberg-Cobenzl treatyings, Kaiser's Letters, and Kaunitz's episcopal oil, were without effect,—except to gain for the Austrians, who infinitely needed it, delay of above two months. The Letters are without general interest: but for Friedrich's sake, perhaps readers will consent to a specimen? Here are parts of his First Letter: people meaning to be Kings (which I doubt none of my readers are) could not do better than read it, and again read it, and acquire that style, first of knowing thoroughly the object in hand, and then of speaking on it and of being silent on it, in a true and noble manner:

Friedrich to his Imperial Majesty (at Olmütz).

“Schönwalde, 14th April 1778.

“Sire my Brother,—I have received, with all the satisfaction possible, the Letter which your Imperial Majesty has had the goodness to write to me. I have neither Minister nor Clerk (scribe) about me; therefore your Imperial Majesty will be pleased to put up with such Answer as an Old Soldier can give, who writes to you with probity and frankness, on one of the most important subjects which have risen in Politics for a long time.

"Nobody wishes more than I to maintain peace and harmony between the Powers of Europe : but there are limits to everything : and cases so intricate (épineux) arise that good-will alone will not suffice to maintain things in repose and tranquillity. Permit me, Sire, to state distinctly what the question seems to me to be. It is to determine if an Emperor can dispose at his will of the Fiefs of the Empire. Answer in the affirmative, and all these Fiefs become Timars" (in the Turk way), "which are for life only ; and which the Sultan disposes of again, on the possessor's death. Now, this is contrary to the Laws, to the Customs and Constitutions of the German Empire."—"I, as member of the Empire, and as having, by the Treaty of Hubertsburg, re-sanctioned the Peace of Westphalia, find myself formally engaged to support the immunities, the liberties and rights of the Germanic Body.

"This, Sire, is the veritable state of things. Personal interest I have none : but I am persuaded your Majesty's self would regard me as a paltry man, unworthy of your esteem, should I basely sacrifice the rights, immunities and privileges, which the Electors and I have received from our Ancestors.

"I continue to speak to your Majesty with the same frankness. I love and honour your person. It will certainly be hard for me to fight against a Prince gifted with excellent qualities, and whom I personally esteem. But"——"And is there no remedy? Anspach and Baireuth stand in no need of sanction. I consent to the Congress proposed:—being with the &c. &c.—F."¹

The sittings of this little Congress at Berlin lasted all through May and June ; to the disgust of Schmettau and the ardent Prussian mess-rooms, "lying ready here, and forbidden to act." For the Austrians all the while were at their busiest, improving the moments, marching continually hitherward from Hungary, from Limburg, from all the ends of the earth. Both negotiating parties had shown a manifest wish to terminate without war ; and both made various attempts or proposals that way ; Friedrich offering, in the name of European peace, to yield the Austrians some small rim or paring of Bavaria from the edge adjoining them ; the Austrians offering Anspach-Baireuth with some improvements ;—always offering Friedrich his own Baireuth-Anspach with some new sauce (as that he might exchange those Territories with Saxony for a fine equivalent in the Lausitz, contiguous to him, which was a real improvement and increase) :—but as neither party would in the least give up in essentials or quit the ground it had taken, the result was nothing. Week after week ; so many weeks are being lost to Friedrich ; gained to Austria : Schmettau getting more and more disgusted.

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, vi. 187.

Friedrich still waited ; not in all points quite ready yet, he said, nor the futile diplomacies quite complete ;—evidently in the highest degree unwilling to come to the cutting point, and begin a war which nobody could see the end of. Many things he tried ; Peace so precious to him, try and try again. All through June too, this went on ; the result always zero,—obviously certain to be so. As even Friedrich had at last to own to himself ; and likewise that the Campaign season was ebbing away ; and that if his grand Moravian scheme was to be tried on Austria, there was not a moment to lose.

Friedrich's ultimate proposal, new modification of what all his proposals had been, "To you some thin rim of Baiern ; to Saxony and Mecklenburg some etcetera of indemnity, money chiefly" (money always to be paid by Karl Theodor, who has left Baiern open to the spoiler in this scandalous manner), was of June 13th ; Austrians for ten days meditating on it, and especially getting forward their Army matters, answer, June 24th, "No, we won't." Upon which Friedrich,—to the joy of Schmettau and every Prussian,—actually rises. Emits his War-Manifesto (July 3d) : "Declaration to our Brethren (Mitstände) of the Reich," that Austria will listen to nothing but War ; ' and, on and from that day, goes flowing forward in perfect columns and arrangements, 100,000 strong ; through the picturesque Glatz Country, straight towards the Bohemian Border, hour by hour. Flows over the Bohemian Border, by Nachod Town ; his vanguard bursting into field-music and flourishes of trumpeting at that grand moment (July 5th) ;

Fischer, ii. 388 ; Dohm, Denkwürdigkeiten, i. 110 ; Œuvres de Frédéric, vi 145.

flowed bodily over ; and encamped that night on Bohemian ground, with Nachod to rear ; thence towards Kwalkowitz, and on the second day to Jaromirtz (" Camp of Jaromirtz "), a little Town which we have heard of before, but which became more famous than ever during the next ten weeks.

Jaromirtz, Kwalkowitz, Königsgrätz : this is the old hill-and-dale labyrinth of an Upper-Elbe Country ; only too well known to his Majesty and us, for almost forty years past : here again are the Austrians waiting the King ; watching diligently this new invasion of his out of Glatz and the East ! In the same days Prince Henri, who is also near 100,000, starts from Dresden to invade them from the West. Loudon, facing westward, is in watch of Henri ; Lacy, or indeed the Kaiser himself, back-to-back of Loudon, stands in this Königsgrätz-Jaromirtz part ; said to be embattled in a very elaborate manner, to a length of fifty miles on this fine ground, and in number somewhat superior to the King ;—the Austrians in all counting about 250,000 ; of whom Lacy has considerably the larger share. The terror at Vienna, nevertheless, is very great : " A day of terror," says one who was there ; " I will not trust myself to describe the sensation which this news, ' Friedrich in Bohemia again ! ' produced among all ranks of people." Maria Theresa, with her fine motherly heart, in alarm for her Country, and trembling " for my two Sons " (Joseph and Leopold) " and dear Son-in-law " (of Sachsen-Techsen) " who are in the Army," overcomes all scruples of pride ; instantly despatches an Autograph to the King (" Bearer of this, Baron von Thugut, with Full Powers ") ; and on her own strength starts a new Negotiation,—which, as will be seen, ended no better than the others.¹

Schmettau says, " Friedrich, cheated of his Mähren schemes, was still in time ; the Austrian position being indeed strong, but not being even yet quite ready." Friedrich himself, however, on reconnoitering, thought differently. A position such as one never saw before, thinks he ; contrived by Lacy ; masterly use of the ground, of the rivers, of the rocks, woods, swamps; Elbe and his branches, and the intricate shoulders of the Giant Mountains: no man could have done it better than Lacy here, who, they say, is the contriver and practical hand.' From Königsgrätz, northward, by Königshof, by Arnau, up to Hohenelbe, all heights are crowned, all passes bristling with cannon. Rivers Aupa, Elbe beset with redoubts; with dams, in favourable places, and are become inundations, difficult to tap. There are "ditches 8 feet deep by 16 broad." Behind or on the right bank of Elbe, it is mere entrenchment for five-and-twenty miles. With bogs, with thickets full of Croats; and such an amount of artillery,—I believe they have in battery no fewer than 1,500 cannon. A position very considerable indeed:—must have taken time to deliberate, delve and invest; but it is done. Near fifty miles of it: here, clear to your glass, has the head of Lacy visibly emerged on us, as if for survey of phenomena:—head of Lacy sure enough (body of him lying invisible in the heights, passes and points of vantage); and its neck of fifty miles, like the neck of a war-horse clothed with thunder. On which (thinks Schmettau privately) you may, too late, make your reflections!

¹ Cogniazzo, iv. 316, 320, 321 ; Preuss, iv. 101, &c.

² Her Letters, four in all, with their Appendixes, and the King's Answers : in Œuvres de Frédéric, vi. 196-200.

Schmettau asserts that the position, though strong, was nothing like so infinitely strong; and that Friedrich in his younger days would very soon have assaulted it, and turned Lacy inside out: but Friedrich, we know, had his reasons against hurry. He reconnoitered diligently; rode out reconnoitering "fifteen miles the first day" (July 6th), ditto the second and following; and was nearly shot by Croats,—by one specific Croat, says Prussian Mythology, supported by Engraving. An old Engraving, which I have never seen, represents Friedrich reconnoitering those five-and-twenty miles of Elbe, which have so many redoubts on their side of it, and swarm with Croat parties on both sides: this is all the truth that is in the Engraving.¹ Fact says: Friedrich ("on the 8th," if that were all the variation) "was a mark for the Austrian sharpshooters for half-an-hour." Myth says, and engraves it, with the date of "July 7th:" Friedrich, skirting some thicket, suddenly came upon a single Croat with musket levelled at him, wild creature's finger just on the trigger ;—and quietly admonishing, Friedrich lifts his finger with a “Du, Du (Ah you !);” upon which, such the divinity that hedges one, the wild creature instantly flings down his murder-weapon, and, kneeling, embraces the King's boot,—with kisses, for anything I know. It is certain, Friedrich, about six times over in this paltry War or Qunsi No-War, set his attendants on the tremble ; was namely, from Croateries and Artilleries, in imminent peril of life ; so careless was he, and dangerous to speak to in his sour humour. Humour very sour, they say, for most part ; being in reality altogether backward and loth for grand enterprise ; and yet striving to think he was not ; ashamed that any War of his should be a No-War. Schmettau says :

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, vi. 147.

² Bödenbeck, p. 188.

“On the day of getting into Jaromirtz” (July 8th), “the King, tired of riding about while the Columns were slowly getting in, lay down on the ground with his Adjutants about him. A young Officer came riding past ; whom the King beckoned to him ;—wrote something with pencil (an Order, not of the least importance), and said : ‘Here ; that Order to General Lossow, and tell him he is not to take it ill that I trouble him, as I have none in my Suite that can do anything.’” Let the Suite take it as they can ! A most pungent, severe old King ; quite perverse at times, thinks Schmettau. Thus again, more than once :

“On arriving with his Column where the Officer, a perfectly skilful man, had marked out the Camp, the King would lift his spyglass ; gaze to right and left, riding round the place at perhaps a hundred yards distance ; and begin : ‘Sieht er, Herr, But look, Herr, what a botching you have made of it again (was er da wieder für dumm Zeug gemacht hat) !’ and grumbling and blaming would alter the Camp, till it was all out of rule ; and then say, ‘See there, that is the way to mark out Campa.’”¹

In a week's time, July 13th, came another fine excuse for inaction : Plenipotentiary Thugut, namely, and the Kaiserinn's Letter, which we spoke of. Autograph from Maria Theresa herself, inspired by the terror of Vienna and of her beautiful motherly heart. Negotiation to be private utterly: "My Son, the Kaiser, knows nothing of it; I beg the most absolute secrecy;" which was accordingly kept, while Thugut, with Finckenstein and Hertzberg again, held "Congress of Braunau" in those neighbourhoods,—with as little effect as ever. Thugut's Name, it seems, was originally Tunicotto (Tyrolese-Italian); which the ignorant Vienna people changed into "Thu-nicht-gut (Do-no-good)," till Maria Theresa, in very charity, struck out the negative, and made him "Do-good." Do-good and his Congress held Friedrich till August 10th: five more weeks gone; and nothing but reconnoitering,—with of course foraging, and diligently eating the Country, which is a daily employment, and produces fencing and skirmishing enough.

¹ Schmettau, xxv. 30, 24.

Henri, in the interim, has invaded from the West; seen Leitmeritz, Lobositz;—Prag Nobility all running, and I suppose Prayers to St. Vitus going again,—and Loudon in alarm. Loudon, however, saved Prag "by two masterly positions" (not mentionable here); upon which Henri took camp at Niemes; Loudon, the weaker in this part, seizing the Iser as a bulwark, and ranking himself behind it, back-to-back of Lacy. Here for about five weeks sat Henri, nothing on hand but to eat the Country. Over the heads of Loudon and Lacy, as the crow flies, Henri's Camp may be about 70 miles from Jaromirtz, where the King is. Hussar Belling, our old Anti-Swede friend, a brilliant cutting-man, broke over the Iser once, perhaps twice; and there was pretty fencing by him and the like of him: "but Prince Henri did nothing," says the King,—was, in fact, helping the King to do nothing. By the 10th of September, as Henri has computed, this Country will be eaten; "Forage, I find, will be quite done here on September 10th," writes Henri, after a week or two's experience.

There was always talk of Henri and the King, who are 100,000 each, joining hands by the post of Arnau, or some peak point of Lacy's well north of Königsgrätz; thus of cutting off the meal-carts of that back-to-back copartnery, and so of tumbling it off the ground (which was perfectly possible, says Schmettau) ; and small detachments and expeditions were pushed out, General Dalwig, General Anhalt, partly for that object : but not the least of it ever took effect. "Futile, lost by loitering, as all else was," groans Schmettau. Prince Henri was averse to attempt, intimates the King,—as indeed (though refusing to own it) was I. "September 10th, my forage will be out, your Majesty," says Henri, always a punctual calculating man.

The Austrians, on their side, were equally stagnant ; and, except the continual skirmishing with the Prussian foragers, undertook nothing. "Shamefully ill-done our foraging, too," exclaims Schmettau again and again : "Had we done it with neatness, with regularity, the Country would have lasted us twice as long. Doing it headlong, wastefully, and by the rule-of-thumb, the Country was a desert, all its inhabitants fled, all its edibles consumed, before six weeks were over. Friedrich is not now himself at all ; in great things or in little ; what a changed Friedrich !" exclaims Schmettau, with wearisome iteration.

From about August 6th, or especially August 10th, when the Maria-Theresa Correspondence, or "Congress of Braunau," ended likewise in zero, Friedrich became impatient for actual junction with Prince Henri, actual push of business ; and began to hint of an excellent plan he had : "Burst through on their left flank ; blow up their post of Hohenelbe yonder : thence is but one march to Iser river ; junction with Prince Henri there ; and a Lacy and a Loudon tumbled to the winds." "A plan perfectly feasible," says Schmettau ; "which solaced the King's humour, but which he never really intended to execute." Possibly not ; otherwise, according to old wont, he would have forborne to speak of it beforehand. At all events, August 15th, in the feeling that one ought really to do something, the rather as forage hereabouts was almost or altogether running out, he actually set about this grand scheme.

Got on march to leftward, namely, up the Aupa river, through the gloomy chasms of Kingdom-Wood, memorable in old days : had his bakery shifted to Trautenau ; his heavy cannon getting tugged through the mire and the rains, which by this time were abundant, towards Hohenelbe, for the great enterprise : and sat encamped on and about the Battleground of Sohr for a week or so, waiting till all were forward ; eating Sohr Country, which was painfully easy to do. The Austrians did next to nothing on him ; but the rains, the mud, and scarcity were doing much. Getting on to Hohenelbe region, after a week's wet waiting, he, on ocular survey of the ground about, was heard to say, "This cannot be done, then !" "Had never meant to do it," sneers Schmettau, "and only wanted some excuse." Which is very likely. Schmettau gives an Anecdote of him here : In regard to a certain Hill, the Key of the Austrian position, which the King was continually reconnoitering, and lamenting the enormous height of, "Impossible, so high !" One of the Adjutants took his theodolite, ascertained the height, and, by way of comforting his Majesty, reported the exact number of feet above their present level. "How do you know, Herr ?" said the King angrily. "Measured it by Trigonometry, your Majesty."—"Trigonometry ! Scher' er such zum Teufel (Off with you, Sir, to the Devil, your Trigonometry and you !)"—no believer in mathematics, this King.

He was loth to go ; and laid the blame on many things. "Were Prince Henri now but across the Iser. Had that stupid Anhalt, when he was upon it" (galloping about, to the ruin of his head), only seized Arnau, Arnau and its Elbe-Bridge ; and had it in hand for junction with Prince Henri !" In fine, just as the last batch of heavy cannon,—twenty or thirty hungered horses to a gun, at the rate of five miles a day in roads unspeakable,—were getting in, he ordered them all to be dragged back, back to the Trautenau road ; whither we must now all go. And, September 8th, in perfect order, for the Austrians little molested him, and got a bad bargain when they did, the great Friedrich with his whole Army got on march homeward, after such a Campaign as we see. Climbed the Trautenau-Landshut Pass, with nothing of effective loss except from the rainy elements, the steep miry ways, and the starved horses ; draught-horses especially starved,—whom, poor creatures, “you would see spring at the ropes” (draught-harness), “thirty of them to a gun, when started and gee-ho’d to ; tug violently with no effect, and fall down in whole rows.”

Prince Henri, forage done, started punctually September 10th, two days after his Brother ; and, with little or no pursuit from the Austrians, and with horses unstarved, got home in comparatively tolerable circumstances. Cantonned himself in Dresden neighbourhood, and sat waiting : he had never approved this War ; and now, I suppose, would not want for reflexions. Friedrich’s cantonments were round Landshut, and spread out to right and to left, from Glatz Country and the Upper Silesian Hills, to Silberberg and Schweidnitz ;—his own quarter is the same region, where he lay so long in Summer 1759, talking on learned subjects with the late Quintus Icilius, if readers remember, and wearily waiting till Cunctator Daun (likewise now deceased) took his stand, or his seat, at Marklissa, and the King could follow him to Schmötseifen. Friedrich himself on this present occasion stayed at Schatzlar as rearguard, to see whether the Austrians would not perhaps try to make some Winter Campaign of it, and if so, whether they would attempt on Prince Henri or on him. The Austrians did not attempt on either ; showed no such intention,—though mischievous enough in other small ways. Friedrich wrote the Éloge of Voltaire¹ while he waited here at Schatzlar, among the rainy Mountains. Later on, as prospects altered, he was much at Breslau, or running about on civic errands with Breslau as centre : at Breslau he had many Dialogues with Professor Garve,—in whose good, but oppressively solemn, little Book, more a dull-droning Preachment than a Narrative, no reader need look for them or for him.

As to the Eulogy of Voltaire, we may say that it is generous, ingenious, succinct ; and of dialect now obsolete to us. There was (and is, though suppressed) another Eulogy, brand-new, by a Contemporary of our own,—from which I know not if readers will permit me a sentence or two, in this pause among the rainy Mountains ?

¹ In Œuvres de Frédéric, vii. 50 et seq. (“finished, Nov. 26th, 1778”).

* * "A wonderful talent lay in this man"—(in Voltaire, to wit; "such an intellect, the sharpest, swiftest of the world," thinks our Contemporary; "fathoming you the deepest subject, to a depth far beyond most men's soundings, and coming up with victory and something wise and logically speakable to say on it, sooner than any other man,—never doubting but he has been at the bottom, which is from three to ten miles lower!")—"Wonderful talent; but observe always, if you look closely, it was in essence a mere talent for Speech; which talent Bavius and Mævius and the Jew Apella may admire without looking behind it, but this Eulogist by no means will. Speech, my friend? If your sublime talent of speech consists only in making ignorance appear to be knowledge, and little wisdom appear to be much, I will thank you to walk on with it, and apply at some other shop. The quantity of shops where you can apply with thrice-golden advantage, from the Morning Newspapers to the National Senate, is tremendous at this epoch of the poor world's history;—go, I request you! And while his foot is on the stairs descending from my garret, I think: Oh unfortunate fellow-creature in an unfortunate world, why is not there a Friedrich Wilhelm to 'elect' you, as he did Gundling, to his Tobacco Parliament, and there set Fassmann upon you with the pans of burning peat? It were better even for yourself; wholesomely didactic to your poor self, I cannot doubt; and for the poor multitudes to whom you are now to be sacred vates; speaking and singing your dismal Gundlingiana as if inspired by Heaven, how infinitely better!—Courage, courage! I discern, across these hideous jargons, the reign of greater silence approaching upon repentant men; reign of greater silence, I say; or else that of annihilation, which will be the most silent of all. * *

"Voltaire, if not a great man, is a remarkably peculiar one; and did such a work in these Ages as will render him long memorable, more or less. He kindled the infinite dry dungheap of things; set it blazing heaven-high;—and we all thought, in the French Revolution time, it would burn out rapidly into ashes, and then there would a clear Upper Firmament, if over a blackened Earth, be once more vouchsafed us. The flame is now done, as I once said; and only the dull dungheap, smokily burning, but not now blazing, remains,—for it was very damp, except on the surface, and is by nature slow of combustion:—who knows but it may have to burn for centuries yet, poisoning by its villanous mal-odours the life-atmosphere of all men? Eternal Author of this Universe, whose throne is Truth, to whom all the True are Sons, wilt thou not look down upon us, then!—Till this sad process is complete, Voltaire is like to be very memorable." * *

To Friedrich the Winter was in general tranquil; a Friedrich busy preparing all things for his grand Mähren Enterprise, and for "real work next year." By and by, there came to be real Peace-prospects instead. Meanwhile, the Austrians do try a little, in the small Pandour way, to dislodge him from the Upper-Silesian or Teschen regions, where the Erbprinz of Brunswick is in command; a man not to be pricked into gratis by Pandours. Erbprinz, accordingly, provoked by their Pandourings, broke out at last; and about Zuckmantel instantly scourged them home, and had peace after. Foiled here, they next tried upon Glatz; "Get into his Glatz Country, then;—a snatch of that will balance the account" (which was one of Newspaper glory only): and a certain Würmser of theirs, expert in such things, did burn the Town of Habelschwert one morning;¹ and tried farther, not wisely this time, a surprisal of Galtz Fortress itself; but got smitten home by our old friend General Wunsch, without profit there. This was the same Würmser who came to bad issues in the Napoleon time afterwards; a rising man then; not a dim Old-Newspaper ghost as now.

Most shameful this burning of Habelschwert by way of mere bravura, thinks Friedrich, in a time of actual Treaty for Peace, when our Congress of Teschen was just struggling to get together! It was the chief stroke done by the Austrians in this War; glorious or shameful, we will not think of inquiring. Nor in fact of adding one word more on such a War,—except, what everybody longs for, That, November 27th, 1778, Czarina Catharine, by her Prince Galitzin at Vienna, intervened in the matter, in a lofty way; and ended it. Czarina Catharine,—small thanks to her, it seems, for it was Friedrich that by his industries and world-diplomacies, French and other, had got her Turks, who had been giving trouble again, compesced into peace for her ; and indeed, to Friedrich or his interests, though bound by Treaty, she had small regard in taking this step, but wished merely to appear in German Politics as a She-Jove, —Czarina Catharine signified, in high and peremptory though polite Diplomatic terms, at Vienna, “Imperial Madam, how long is such a War to last ? Be at Peace, both of you ; or—! —I shall, however, mediate, if you like, being the hearty friend of both.”¹

¹ "18th January 1779" (Rodenbeck, iii. 195; Schmettau, &c.).

“Do,” answers Maria Theresa, whose finance is quite out, whose motherly heart is almost broken, though a young Kaiser still prances violently, and kicks against the pricks : “Do, your noble Czarish Majesty ; France, too, is interfering : France and you will decide what is just, and we will end.” “Congress of Teschen” met accordingly, March 10th, 1779 : Teschen, in Austrian Silesia, where we have been ;—Repnin as Russian, Breteuil the Frenchman, Cobenzl and Hertzberg as Austrian and Prussian ;—and, May 13th (in two months time, not in two weeks, as had been expected, for there rose unexpected haggles), did close everything, firm as Diplomacy could do it, into equitable, or approximately equitable finis : “Go home, you Austria ; quit your stolen Bavaria (all but a rim or paring, Circle of Burghausen, since you must have something !) : Saxony, Mecklenburg, these must be satisfied to moderate length ; and therewith general As-you-were.”

Russia and France were agreed on the case ; and Friedrich, bitterly longing to have done with it, had said to himself, “In two weeks or so :” but it proved far otherwise. Never were such haggles, provocations, and unreasonable confusions as now rose. The burning of Habelschwert was but a type of them. Haggles on the part of worthless Karl Theodor, kindled by Joseph and his Kaunitz, kicking against the pricks. Haggles on Saxony’s part : “I claimed 7,000,000*l.* sterling, and you allow me 600,000*l.*” “Better that than nothing,” answered Friedrich. Haggles with Mecklenburg : “Instead of my Leuchtenberg, I get an improvement in my Law-Courts, right of Judging without Appeal ; what is that !” Haggles with the once grateful Duke of Zweibrück : "Can't part with my Burghausen." "Suppose you had had to part with your Bavaria altogether?" In short, Friedrich, who had gained nothing for himself, but such infinity of outlay in all kinds, never saw such a coil of human follies and cupidities before ; and had to exhaust his utmost patience, submit to new losses of his own, and try all his dexterities in pig-driving : overjoyed, at last, to get out of it on any terms. Outlay of Friedrich is about Two Millions sterling, and above 10,000 men's lives (his own narrowly not included), with censures, criticisms, provocations and botherations without end. In return for which, he has, truly, put a spoke in Austria's proud wheel for this time, and managed to see fair play in the Reich ; which had seemed to him, and seems, a considerable thing. By way of codicil, Austria agrees not to chicane him in regard to Anspach-Baireuth,—how generous of Austria, after this experience!—

¹ Copy of Galitzin’s “Declaration,” in Fischer, ii. 406-411.

In reality, the War was an Imaginary War ; deserving on its own score little record anywhere ; to readers here, requiring almost less than it has got. Schmettau, Schöning and others, have been abundantly minute upon it ; but even to soldiers there is little either of interest or instruction ; to us, all it yields is certain Anecdotes of Friedrich's temper and ways in that difficult predicament ; which, as coming at first-hand, gathered for us by punctual authentic Schmettau, who was constantly about him, with eyes open and note-book ready, have a kind of worth in the Biographic point of view.

The Prussian Soldiery, of whom we see a type in Schmettau, were disgusted with this War, and called it, in allusion to the foraging, A scramble for potatoes, "Der Kartoffel-Krieg, The Potato War ;" which is its common designation to this day. The Austrians, in a like humour, called it "Zwetschken-Rummel" (say, "Three-button Loo") ; a game not worth playing ; especially not at such cost. Combined cost counted to have been in sum total 4,350,000*l.* and 20,000 men.' "The Prussian Army was full of ardour, never abler for fight" (insists Schmettau), which indeed seems to have been the fact on every small occasion ;—" but fatally forbidden to try." Not so fatally, perhaps, had Schmettau looked beyond his epaulettes: was not the thing, by that slow method, got done? By the swifter method, awakening a new Seven-Years business, how infinitely costlier might it have been!

¹ Preuss, iv. 115.

Schmettau's Narrative, deducting the endless lamentings, especially the extensive didactic digressions, is very clear, ocular, exact; and, in contrast with Friedrich's own, is really amusing to read. A Schmettau giving us, in his haggard light and oblique point of vision, the naked truth, naked and all in a shiver; a Friedrich striving to drape it a little, and make it comfortable to himself. Those bits of Anecdotes in Schmettau, clear, credible, as if we had seen them, are so many crevices through which it is curiously worth while to look.

CHAPTER VII.

MILLER ARNOLD'S LAWSUIT.

ABOUT the Second Law-Reform, after reading and again reading much dreary detail, I can say next to nothing, except that it is dated as beginning in 1776, near thirty years after Cocceji's;¹ that evidently, by what causes is not stated, but may be readily enough conjectured (in the absence of Cocceji by death, and of a Friedrich by affairs of War), the abuses of Law had again become more or less unendurable to this King; that said abuses did again get some reform (again temporary, such the law of Nature, which bids you sweep vigorously your kitchen, though it will next moment recommence the gathering of dirt upon it); and that, in fine, after some reluctance in the Law circles, and debating pro and contra, oral some of it, and done in the King's presence, who is so intent to be convinced and see his practical way in it,'—there was, as supplement to the mere Project or Theory of a Codex Fredericianus in Cocceji's time, an actual Prussian Code set about ; Von Carmer, the Silesian Chancellor, the chief agent : and a First Folio, or a First and partly a Second of it, were brought out in Friedrich's lifetime, the remainder following in that of his successor ; which Code is ever since the Law of the Prussian Nation to this day.* Of its worth as a Code I have heard favourable opinions, comparatively favourable ; but can myself say nothing : famed Savigny finds it superior in intelligence and law-knowledge to the Code Napoléon,—upon which indeed, and upon all Codes possible to poor hagridden and wig-ridden generations like ours, Savigny feels rather desperate. Unfortunate mortals do want to have their bits of lawsuits settled, nevertheless ; and have, on trial, found even the ignorant Code Napoléon a mighty benefit in comparison to none !—

¹ "In 1748" Cocceji's was completed; "in 1774-75," on occasion of the Silesian Reviews, Von Carmer, Chancellor of Silesia, knowing of the King's impatience at the state of Law, presented successively Two Memorials on the subject; the Second of which began, "4th January 1776," to have visible 1 uit.

Readers all see how this Second Prussian Law-Reform was a thing important to Prussia, of liveliest interest to the then King of Prussia ; and were my knowledge of it greater than it is, this is all I could hope to say of it that would be suitable or profitable at present. Let well-disposed readers take it up in their imaginations, as a fact and mass of facts, very serious there and then ; and colour with it in some degree those five or six last years of this King's life.

Connected with this Second Law-Reform, and indeed partially a source of it, or provocation to go on with it, mending your speed, there is one little Lawsuit, called the Miller Arnold

* At Potsdam, "4th January 1776," Debate, by solemn appointment, in the King's Presence (King very unwell), between Silesian-Chancellor von Carmer and Grand-Chancellor von Fürst, as to the feasibility of Carmer's ideas ; old Fürst strong in the negative ;—King, after reflection, determining to go on nevertheless. (Rödenbeck, iii. 131, 133.)

† Not finished and promulgated till "5th February 1794 ;" First Volume (containing Prozess Ordnung, Form of Procedure, in all its important details) had come out, "26th April 1784" (Preuss, iii. 418-422).

Case, which made an immense noise in the world, and is still known by rumour to many persons, who would probably be thankful, as certainly I myself should, for some intelligible word on it. In regard to which, and to which alone, in this place, we will permit ourselves a little more detail.

In the sandy moors towards the Silesian border of the Neumark, south-west of Züllichau,—where we once were, with Dictator Wedell, fighting the Russians in a tragic way,—there is, as was casually then indicated, on one of the poor Brooks trickling into Oder, a Mill called Krebsmühle (Crabmill); Millers of which are a line of dusty Arnolds, laboriously for long generations grinding into meal the ryes, pulses, barleys of that dim region; who, and whose Crabmill, in the year 1779–80, burst into a notoriety they little dreamt of, and became famous in the fashionable circles of this Universe, where an indistinct rumour of them lives to this day. We indicated Arnold and his Mill in Wedell's time; Wedell's scene being so remote and empty to readers: in fact, nobody knows on what paltriest of moors a memorable thing will not happen;—here, for instance, is withal the Birthplace of that Rhyming miracle, Frau Karsch (Karschinn, Karschess as they call her), the Berlin literary Prodigy, to whom Friedrich was not so flush of help as had been expected. The child of utterly poor Peasants there; whose poverty, shining out as thrift, unweariable industry and stoical valour, is beautiful to me, still more their poor little girl's bits of fortunes, “tending three cows” in the solitudes there, and gazing wistfully into Earth and Heaven with her ingenuous little soul,—desiring mainly one thing, that she could get Books, any Book whatever; having half-accidentally picked up the art of reading, and finding hereabouts absolutely nothing to read. Frau Karsch, I have no doubt, knows the Crabmill right well; and can, to all permissible lengths, inform the Berlin Circles on this point.¹

¹ See Jördens (§ Karschin), ii. 607–640. An excellent Silesian Nobleman lifted her miraculously from the sloughs of misery, landed her from his travelling-carriage in the upper world of Berlin, “January 1761” (age then thirty-nine, husband Karsch a wretched drunken Tailor at Glogau, who thereupon enlisted, and happily got shot or finished): Ber-

Crabmill is in Pommerzig Township, not far from Kay :—Züllichau, Kay, Palzig, Crossen, all come to speech again, in this Narrative ; fancy how they turned up in Berlin dinner circles, to Dictator Wedell, gray old gentleman, who is now these many years War-Minister, peaceable, and well accepted, but remembers the flamy youth he had. Landlord of these Arnolds and their Mill is Major Graf von Schmettau (no connexion of our Schmettaus), to what insignificantly small amount of rent, I could not learn on searching ; 10*l.* annually is a too liberal guess. Innumerable things, of no pertinency to us, are wearisomely told, and ever again told, while the pertinent are often missed out, in that dreary cart-load of Arnold Law-Papers, barely readable, barely intelligible, to the most patient intellect ; with despatch let us fish up the small cardinal particles of it, and arrange in some chronological or human order, that readers may form to themselves an outline of the thing. In 1759, we mentioned that this Mill was going ; Miller of it an old Arnold, Miller's Lad a young. Here is the subsequent succession of occurrences that concern us :

In 1762, Young Arnold, as I dimly gather, had got married, apparently a Wife with portion ; bought the Mill from his Father, he and Wife co-possessors thenceforth ;—"Rosine his Spouse" figuring jointly in all these Law-papers ; and the Spouse especially as a most shifty litigant. There they continue totally silent to mankind for about eight years. Happy the Nation, much more may we say the Household, "whose Public History is blank." But in the eighth year,

In 1770, Freyherr Baron von Gersdorf in Kay, who lies farther up the stream, bethinks him of Fish-husbandry ; makes a Fish-pond to himself, and for part supply thereof, lays some lin's enthusiasm was, and continued to be, considerable ;—Karschin's head, I fear, proved weakish, though her rhyming faculty was great. Friedrich saw her once, October 1763, spoke kindly to her (Dialogue reported by herself, with a Chodowiecki Engraving to help, in the Musen-Almanachs ensuing) ; and gave her a 10*l.*, but never much more :—"somebody has done me ill with him," thinks the Karschin (not thinking, "Or perhaps nobody but my poor self, and my weakness of head"). She continued rhyming and living,—certain Principalities and High People still standing true,—till "12th October 1791."

beam or weir across the poor Brook, and deducts a part of Arnold's water.

In 1773, the Arnolds fall into arrear of rent: "Want of water; Fish-pond spoils our water," plead they to Major Graf von Schmettau. "Prosecute von Gersdorf, then," says Schmettau: "I must have my rent! You shall have time, lengthened terms; but pay then, or else—!" For four years the Arnolds tried more or less to pay, but never could, or never did completely: during which period Major von Schmettau had them up in his Court of Pommerzig,—manorial or feudal kind of Court; I think it is more or less his, though he does not sit there; and an Advocate, not of his appointing, though probably of his accepting, dispenses justice there. Schlecker is the Advocate's name; acquitted by all Official people of doing anything wrong. No appearance that the Herr Graf von Schmettau put hand to the balances of justice in this Court; with his eye, however, who knows but he might act on them more or less! And, at any rate, be suspected by distressed Arnolds, especially by a distressed Frau Arnold, of doing so. The Frau Arnold had a strong suspicion that way; and seems to have risen occasionally upon Schlecker, who did once order the poor woman to be locked up for contempt of Court: "Only two hours!" asseverates Schlecker afterwards; after which she came out cool and respectful to Court.

Not the least account survives of those procedures in Schlecker's Court; but by accident, after many readings, you light upon a little fact which does shed a transient ray over them. Namely, that already in 1775, four years before the Case became audible in Official circles, much more in general society, Frau Arnold had seized an opportunity, Majesty being at Crossen in those neighbourhoods, and presented a Petition: "Oh, just King, appoint a Military Commission to investigate our business; impartial Officers will speedily find out the facts, and decide what is just!"¹ Which denotes an irritating experience in Schlecker's Court. Certain it is, Schlecker's Court did, in this tedious harassing way, decide against Frau Arnold in every point. "Pay Herr Graf von Schmettau, or else disappear; prosecute von Gersdorf, if you like!" And, in fine, as the Arnolds could not pay up, nor see any daylight through prosecuting Baron von Gersdorf, the big gentleman in Kay,—Schlecker, after some five years of this, decreed Sale of the Mill :—and sold it was. In Züllichau, September 7th, 1778, there is Auction of the Mill ; Herr Landeinnnehmer (Cess-Collector) Kuppisch bought it ; knocked down to him for the moderate sum of 600 thalers, or 90*l.* sterling, and the Arnolds are an ousted family. “September 7th,”—Potato-War just closing its sad Campaign ; to-morrow, march for Trautenau, thirty horses to a gun.—

¹ Preuss, iii. 382.

The Arnolds did make various attempts and appeals to the Neumark Regierung (College of Judges) ; but it was without the least result. “Schlecker right in every point ; Gersdorf right,” answered the College : “go, will you !” A Mill forfeited by every Law, and fallen to the highest bidder. Cess-Collector Kuppisch, it was soon known, had sold his purchase to Von Gersdorf : “Hah !” said the rural public, smelling something bad. Certain it is, Von Gersdorf is become proprietor both of Pond and Mill ; and it is not to the ruined Arnolds that Schlecker law can seem an admirable sample.

And truly, reading over those barrow-loads of pleadings and relations, one has to admit that, taken as a reason for seeing oneself ruined, and one's Mill become the big gentleman's who fancies carp, they do seem considerably insufficient. The Law-Pleadings are duly voluminous. Barrow-loads of them, dreariest reading in Creation, remain ; going into all manner of questions, proving, from Grotius and others, that landlords have rights upon private rivers, and another sort upon public ditto ; that Von Gersdorf, by Law of 1566, had verily the right to put down his Fishpond,—whether Schmettau the duty to indemnify Arnold for the same ? that is not touched upon : nor, singular to say, is it anywhere made out, or attempted to be made out, How much of water Arnold lost by the Pond, much less what degree of real impediment, by loss of his own time, by loss of his customers (tired of such waiting on a mill), Arnold suffered by the Pond. This, which you would have thought the soul of the matter, is absolutely left out ; altogether unsettled,—after, I think four, or at least three, express Commissions had sat on it, at successive times, with the most esteemed hydraulic sages opining and examining ;—and remains, like the part of Hamlet, omitted by particular desire. No wonder Frau Arnold begged for a Military Commission ; that is to say, a decision from rational human creatures, instead of juridical wigs proceeding at this rate.

It was some time in 1775 that Rosine (what we reckoned a very elucidative point !) had given-in her Petition to the King at Crossen, showing how ill Schlecker was using them. She now, “about May-day 1779,” in a new Petition, referred to that, and again begged a Commission of Soldier-people to settle it. May 4th, 1779,—King not yet home, but coming,¹—King’s Cabinet, on Order, “sends this to Justice-Department :” nothing said on it, the existence of the Petition sufficiently saying. Justice-Department thereupon demands the Law-Records, documentary Narrative of res Arnold, from Cüstrin ; finds all right : “Peace, ye Arnolds ; what would you have ?”²

Same year 1779 (no express date), Grand-Chancellor von Fürst, being at Cüstrin, officially examining the condition of Law-matters, Frau Arnold failed not to try there also with a Petition : “See, great Law-gentleman come to reform abuses, can that possibly be Law ; or if so, is it not Injustice as well ?” “Tush !” answered Fürst ;—for I believe Law-people, ever since this new stringency of Royal vigilance upon them, are plagued with such complaints from Dorfships and dark greedy Peasant people ; “Tush !” and flung it promptly into his waste-basket.

Is there no hope at all, then ? Arnold remembers that a Brother of his is a Prussian soldier ; and that he has for Colonel, Prince Leopold of Brunswick, a Prince always kind to the poor. The Leopold Regiment lies at Frankfurt : try Prince Leopold by that channel. Prince Leopold listened ;—the Soldier Arnold probably known to him as rational and respectable. Prince Leopold now likewise applies to Fürst : “A defect, not of Law, Herr Kanzler, but of Equity, there does seem. Schmettau had a right to his rent ; Von Geradorf, by Deed of 1566, to his Pond : but the Arnolds had not water and have lost their Mill. Could not there," suggests Leopold, "be appointed, without noise of any kind, a Commission of neutral people, strangers to the Neumark, to search this matter to the actual root of it, and let Equity ensue?" To whom also Fürst answers, though in a politer shape, "Tush, Durchlaucht ! Every man to his trade ! "

¹ “Arrived at Berlin, May 27th” (Rüdenbeck, iii. 201).

² Preuss, iii. 382.

So that Prince Leopold himself, the King's own Nephew, proves futile ? Some think Leopold did, this very Autumn, casually, or as if casually, mention the matter to the King,—whose mind is uneasily awake to all such cases, knowing what a buckram set his Lawyers are. "At the Reviews," as these people say, Leopold could not have done it ; there being, this Year, no Reviews, merely return of King and Army from the Bavarian War. But during August, and on into September this Year, it is very evident, there was a Visit of the Brunswick Family at Potsdam ;¹ Leopold's Mamma and certain of his Brothers,—of which, Colonel Prince Leopold, though not expressly mentioned in the Books, may very possibly have been permitted, for a day or two, to form part, for Mamma's behoof and his own ; and may have made his casual observation, at some well-chosen moment, with the effect intended. In which case, Leopold was by no means futile, but proved, after all, to be the saving clause for the Arnolds.

Gallant young fellow, one loves to believe it of him ; and to add it to the one other fact now known of him, which was also beautiful, though tragic. Six years after, Spring 1785, Oder River, swollen by rains, was in wild deluge ; houses in the suburbs like to be washed away. Leopold, looking on it from the Bridge or shore, perhaps partly with an Official eye, saw the inhabitants of some houses like to be drowned ; looked wildly for assistance, but found none ; and did, himself, in uncontrollable pity, dash off in a little boat, through the wild-eddying surges ; and got his own death there, himself drowned in struggling to save others. Which occasioned loud lamentation in the world ; in his poor Mother's heart what unnamable voiceless lamentation !¹ He had founded a Garrison School at Frankfurt ; spared no expenditure of pains or of money. A man adored in Frankfurt. "His Brother Friedrich, in memory of him, presented, next year, the Uniform in which Leopold was drowned, to the Freemason Lodge of Berlin, of which he had been member."² Sunt lacrymæ rerum.

¹ Rüdénbeck, iii. 206. et seq.

But to return to the Arnolds, and have done with them : for we are now, by Leopold's help or otherwise, got to the last act of that tedious business.

August 21st, 1779 (these high Brunswickers still at Potsdam, if that had any influence), the Arnolds again make Petition to the King : "Alas, no justice yet, your Majesty !" "Shall we never see the end of this, then ?" thinks the King : "some Soldier, with human eyes, let him, attended by one of their Law-wigs, go upon the ground ; and search it !" And, next day, having taken Protocol of the Arnold Complaint, issues Cabinet Order, or King's Message to the Cüstrin Law-wigs : "Colonel Heucking" (whose regiment lies in Züllichau district, a punctual enough man), "he shall be the Soldier ; to whom do you adjoin what member of your Court you think the fittest : and let, at last, justice be done. And swift, if you please !"

The Cüstrin Regierung, without delay, name Regierungsrath Neumann ; who is swiftly ready, as is Colonel Heucking swiftly,—and they two set out together up the Pommerzig Brook, over that moor Country ; investigating, pondering, hearing witnesses, and no doubt consulting, and diligently endeavouring to get to the bottom of this poor Arnold question. For how many September days, I know not : everybody knows, however, that they could not agree ; in other words, that they saw two bottoms to it,—the Law-gentleman one bottom, the Soldier another. "True bottom is already there," argued the Law-gentleman ; "confirm Decision of

¹ Friedrich's Letter to her: Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. l. 351 ("12th May 1785").

² Militär-Lexikon, l. 247.

Court in every point." "No; Arnold has lost water, has suffered wrong," thinks Heucking; "that is the true bottom." And so they part, each with his own opinion. Neumann affirmed afterwards, that the Colonel came with a predetermination that way, and even that he said, once or oftener, in his eagerness to persuade: "His Majesty has got it into his thought; there will be nothing but trouble if you persist in that notion." To which virtuous Neumann was deaf. Neumann also says, The Colonel, acquainted with Austrian enemies, but not with Law, had brought with him his Regiment's-Auditor, one Bech, formerly a Law-practitioner in Crossen (readers know Crossen, and Ex-Dictator Wedell does),—Law-practitioner in Crossen; who had been in strife with the Cüstrin Regierung, under rebuke from them (too importunate for some of his pauper clients, belike); was a cunning fellow too, and had the said Regierung in ill-will. An adroit fellow Bech might be, or must have been; but his now office of Regiment's-Auditor is certificate of honesty,—good, at least, against Neumann.

Neumann's Court was silent about these Neumann surmises; but said afterwards, "Heucking had not gone to the bottom of the thing." This was in a subsequent report, some five or six weeks subsequent. Their present report they redacted to the effect, "All correct as it stood," without once mentioning Heucking. Gave it in, 27th September; by which time Heucking's also was in, and had made a strong impression on his Majesty. Presumably an honest, intelligible report; though, by ill-luck for the curious, it is now lost; among the barrow-loads of vague wigged stuff, this one Piece, probably human, is not to be discovered.

Friedrich's indignation at the Cüstrin report, "Perfectly correct as it stood," and no mention of Heucking or his dissent was considerable: already, 27th September,—that is, on the very day while these Cüstrin people were signing their provoking report,—Friedrich, confident in Heucking, had transmitted to his Supreme Board of Justice (Kammergericht) the impartial Heucking's account of the affair, with order, "See there, an impartial human account, clear and circumstantial (deutliches und ganz umständliches), going down to the true roots of the business : swift, get me justice for these Arnolds !”¹ Scarcely was this gone, when, September 29th, the Cüstrin impertinence, “Perfectly right as it stood,” came to hand ; kindling the King into hot provocation ; “extreme displeasure, äusserstes Misfallen,” as his answer bore : “Rectify me all that straightway, and relieve these Arnolds of their injuries !” You Pettifogging Pedant Knaves, bring that Arnold matter to order, will you ; you had better !—

The Cüstrin Knaves, with what feelings I know not, proceed accordingly ; appoint a new Commission, one or more Lawyers in it, and at least one Hydraulic Gentleman in it, Schade the name of him ; who are to go upon the ground, hear witnesses, and the like. Who went accordingly ; and managed, not too fast, Hydraulic Schade rather disagreeing from the Legal Gentlemen, to produce a Report, reported upon by the Cüstrin Court, 28th October : “That there is one error found : 6*l*. 12*s*. as value of corn left, clearly Arnold’s that, when his Mill was sold ; that, with this improvement, all is now correct to the uttermost ; and that Heucking had not investigated things to the bottom.” By some accident, this Report did not come at once to Friedrich, or had escaped his attention ; so that—

November 21st, matters hanging fire in this way, Frau Arnold applies again, by Petition to his Majesty ; upon which is new Royal Order,² far more patient than might have been expected : “In God’s name, rectify me that Arnold matter, and let us at last see the end of it !” To which the Cüstriners answer : “All is rectified, your Majesty. Frau Arnold, in her Petition, has not mentioned that she gained 6*l*. 12*s*. ;”—important item, that ; 6*l*. 12*s*. for corn left (clearly Arnold’s that, when his Mill was sold) ! “Our sentence we cannot alter ; a Court’s sentence is only alterable by appeal ; your Majesty decides where the appeal is to lie !” Friedrich’s patience is now wearing out ; but he does not yet give way : “Berlin Kammergericht be your Appeal Court,” decides he, 28th November : and will admit of no delay on the Kammergericht’s part either. "Papers all at Cüstrin, say you? Send for them by express; they will come in one day: be swift, I say!"

¹ Preuss, iii. 489.

² Ibid. iii. 490.

Chancellor Fürst is not a willing horse in this case; but he is obliged to go. December 7th, Kammergericht sits on the Arnold Appeal; Kammergericht's view is: "Cüstrin Papers all here, not the least delay permitted; you, Judge Rannleben, take these Papers to you; down upon them: let us, if humanly possible, have a Report by tomorrow." Rannleben takes the Papers in hand, December 7th; works upon them all day, and all night following, at a rate of energy memorable among Legal gentlemen; and December 8th, attends with lucid Report upon them, or couple of Reports; one on Arnold versus Schmettau, in six folios; one on Arnold versus Gersdorf, in two ditto; draws these two Documents from his pocket, December 8th; reads them in assembled Court (six of the Judges present¹),—which, with marked thankfulness to the swift Rannleben, at once adopts his Report and pronounces upon Cüstrin Rath's, "Right in every particular." Witness our hands: every one affixing his signature, as to a matter happily got done with.

It was Friday 10th December 1779, before Friedrich got this fine bit of news; Saturday 11th, before he authentically saw their Sentence. He is lying miserably ill of gout in the Schloss of Berlin; and I suppose, since his Father, of blessed memory, took cudgel to certain Judges and knocked out teeth from them, and broke the judicial crowns, nobody in that Schloss has been in such humour against men of Law. "Attend me here at 2 P.M. with the Three Rath's who signed in Arnold's Case:" Saturday, about 11 A.M., Chancellor Fürst receives this command; gets Rannleben, and two others, Friedel, Graun,—and there occurred such a scene—But it will be better to let Rannleben himself tell the story, who has left an Autobiography, punctually correct, to all appearance, but except this alone notable passage of it, still unpublished, and like to continue so:

¹ Preuss. iii. 496.

"Berlin, Tuesday, 7th December 1779," says Rannleben (let him tell it again in his own words), "the Acta, which had arrived from Cüstrin in re Miller Arnold and his Wife versus Landrath von Gersdorf, as also those, in the same matter, versus Count von Schmettau, were assigned to me to be reported on quàm primùm;—our President von Rebeur;" President of the Supreme Kammergericht (King's-Chamber Tribunal, say Exchequer High Court, or Collegium), whereof I have the honour to be one of the Seven Judges, or Raths,—"our President von Rebeur enjoining me to make such utmost despatch that my Report on both these sets of Papers might be read to the assembled Court next day; whereby said Court might then and there be enabled to pronounce judgment on the same. I at once set to work; went on with it all night; and on the morrow brought both my Reports (Relationes)"—one referring to the Gersdorf, the other to the Schmettau part of the suit,—“one of six sheets, the other of two sheets, to the Kammergericht; where both Relationes were read. There were present, besides me, the following six members of the Collegium: President von Rebeur, Raths Uhl, Friedel, Kircheisen, Graun, Gässler.

"Appellant," as we all know, "was Miller Arnold; and along with the Acta were various severe Cabinet-Orders, in which the King, who had taken quite particular notice of the Case, positively enjoined, That Miller Arnold should have justice done him. The King had not, however, given formally any authoritative Decision of his own (keinen eigentlichen Machtspruch gethan)," which might have given us pause, though not full-stop by any means: "but, in his Order to the Kammergericht, had merely said, we were to decide with the utmost despatch, and then at once inform his Majesty how." With the speed of light or of thought, Rannleben hardly done reading, this Kammergericht decided,—it is well known how: "In the King's name; Right in every particular, you Cüstrin Gentlemen;—which be so good as publish to parties concerned!"

Report of Kammergericht's Judgment to this effect, for behoof of Cüstrin, was at once got under way; and Kammergericht, in regard to his Majesty, agreed merely to announce the fact in that quarter: "Judgment arrived at, please your Majesty:—Judgment already under way for Cüstrin:—"—you, Rannleben, without saying what the Judgment is, you again write for us. And Rannleben does so; writes the above little Message to his Majesty, "which got to the King's hand, Friday, December 10th. And the same day," continues Rannleben, "the King despatched a very severe Cabinet-Order to Minister von Dörnberg,"—head of the Department to which the Kammergericht belongs,—“demanding a Copy of the Judgment. Which order was at once obeyed.

"Hereupon, on Saturday, about 11 A. M., there came to Grand-Chancellor von Fürst," sublime head of us and of all Lawyers, a Cabinet-Order, 'Appear before me here, this day, at 2 o'clock; and bring with you your Three Kammergericht Rathes who drew up (minutirt) the Judgment in the Arnold Case.' " Message bodeful to Fürst and the Three Rathes.

"Nota," says Rannleben here, "the King is under the impression that, in judging a Case, Three Rathes are always employed, and therefore demands Three of us. But, properly, all the above-named Six Membra Collegii, besides myself, ought to have gone to the Palace, or else I alone." On some points, an ill-informed King. Rannleben continues:

"President von Rebeur came to me in his carriage, at a quarter to 12: told me of the King's Order; and said, as the King demanded only Three Rathes, there was nothing for it but to name me and Rathes Friedel and Kircheisen, my usual partners in Judgment business. Finding, however, on looking into the Sentence itself, that Kircheisen was not amongst the signers of it, he" (Rebeur) "named, instead of him, Rath Graun, who was. For the Herr President apprehended the King might demand to see our Sentence in Originali, and would then be angry that a person had been sent to him who had not signed the same. President von Rebeur instructed me farther, That I, as Reporter in the Case, was to be spokesman at the Palace; and should explain to his Majesty the reasons which had weighed with the Kammergericht in coming to such decision.

"To my dear Wife I," as beeseemed a good husband, "said nothing of all this; confiding it only to my Father-in-law, who tried to cheer me. Nor, indeed, did I feel any fear within me, being persuaded in my conscience that, in this decision of the Arnold Case, I had proceeded according to the best of my knowledge and conviction.

"At 1 o'clock I drove to the Grand-Chancellor's, where I found the Rathes Friedel and Graun already arrived. The Chancellor," old Fürst, "instructed us as to what we had to do when we came before the King. And then, towards 2 o'clock, he took us in his carriage to the Palace. We entered the room immediately at the end of the Great Hall. Here we found a heyduc" (tall porter), "by whom the Chancellor announced to the King that we were here. Heyduc soon came back to inquire, Whether the Cabinets-Rath Stellter," a Secretary or Short-hand writer of his Majesty's, "had arrived yet; and whether we" (we, what a doubt!) "were Privy Councillors. We were then shortly after shown in to the King. We passed through three rooms, the second of which was that in which stands the Confidenz Tafel" (Table that goes by pulleys through the floor, and comes up refurnished, when you wish to be specially private with your friends). "In the fourth, a small room with one window, was the King. The Chancellor walked first; I followed him close; behind me came the Rath Friedel, and then Graun. Some way within, opposite the door, stood a screen; with our backs to this," the King-ward side of this, "we ranged ourselves,"—in respectful row of Four, Fürst at the inward end of us (right or left is no matter). "The King sat in the middle of the room, so that he could look point-blank at us: he sat with his back to the chimney, in which there was a fire burning. He had on a worn hat, of the clerical shape" (old-military in fact, not a shovel at all); "cassaquin," short dressing-gown, "of red-brown (mordoré) velvet; black breeches, and boots which came quite up over the knee. His hair was not dressed. Three little benchlets or stools, covered with green cloth, stood before him, on which he had his feet lying" (terribly ill of gout). "In his lap he had a sort of muff, with one of his hands in it, which seemed to be giving him great pain. In the other hand he held our Sentence on the Arnold Case. He lay reclining (lag) in an easy-chair: at his left stood a table, with various papers on it,—and two gold snuff-boxes, richly set with brilliants, from which he kept taking snuff now and then.

"Besides us, there was present in the room the Cabinets-Rath Stellter" (of the short-hand), "who stood at a desk, and was getting ready for writing. The King looked at us, saying, 'Come nearer!' Whereupon we advanced another step, and were now within less than two steps of him. He addressed himself to us three Raths, taking no notice at all of the Grand-Chancellor:

King. "Is it you who drew up the judgment in the Arnold 'case?'"

We (especially I, with a bow). "Yea."

"The King then turned to the Rath Friedel" (to Friedel, as the central figure of the Three, perhaps as the portliest, though poor Friedel, except signing, had little cognizance of the thing, in which not he but Rannleben was to have been spokesman), "and addressed to Friedel those questions, of which, with their answers, there is Protocol published, under Royal authority, in the Berlin newspapers of December 14th, 1779;"¹ Short-hand Stellter taking down what was said,—quite accurately, testifies Rannleben. From Stellter (that is to say from the "Protocol" just mentioned), or from Stellter and Rannleben together, we continue the Dialogue:

"King to Friedel" (in the tone of a Rhadamanthus suffering from gout). "To give sentence against a Peasant from whom you have taken wagon, plough, and everything that enables him to get his living, and to pay his rent and taxes: is that a thing that can be done?"

Friedel (and the two Mutes, bowing). "No."

King. "May a Miller who has no water, and consequently cannot grind, and, therefore, not earn anything, have his mill taken from him, on account of his not having paid his rent: is that just?"

Friedel (and Mutes as aforesaid). "No."

King. "But here now is a Nobleman, wishing to make a Fish-pond: to get more water for his Pond, he has a ditch dug, to draw into it the water from a small stream which drives a water-mill. Thereby the Miller loses his water, and cannot grind; or, at most, can only grind in the spring for the space of a fortnight, and late in the autumn, perhaps another fortnight. Yet, in spite of all this, it is pretended that the Miller shall pay his rent quite the same as at the time when he had full water for his mill. Of course, he cannot pay his rent; his incomings are gone! And what does the Cüstrin Court of Justice do? It orders the mill to be sold, that the Nobleman may have his rent. And the Berlin Tribunal"—(Chancellor Fürst, standing painfully mute, unspoken to, unnoticed hitherto, more like a broomstick than a Chancellor, ventures to strike in with a syllable of emendation, a small correction, of these words "Berlin Tribunal"—

Fürst (suggestively): "Kammergericht" (mildly suggestive, and perhaps with something in his tone which means, "I am not a broomstick!"): "Kammergericht!"

King (to short-hand Stellter). "Kammergerichts-Tribunal:”—(then to Fürst) “Go you, Sir, about your business, on the instant! Your Successor is appointed; with you I have nothing more to do. Disappear!”—“Ordered,” says Official Rannleben, “ordered the Grand-Chancellor, in very severe terms, To be gone! telling him that his Successor was already appointed. Which order Herr von Fürst, without saying a word, hastily obeyed, passing in front of us three, with the utmost speed.” In front,—screen, I suppose, not having room behind it,—and altogether vanishes from Friedrich’s History; all but some ghost of him (so we may term it), which reappears for an instant once, as will be noticed.

¹ Von seiner Königlichen Majestät Höchstselbst angehaltenes Protocoll: "Protocol" (Minute of Proceedings) "held by Royal Majesty's High-est-self, on the 11th December 1779, concerning the three Kammergerichts-Raths, Friedel, Graun, and Rannleben:" in Preuss. iii. 495.

King (continues to Friedel, not in a lower tone probably): —“the Kammergerichts-Tribunal confirms the same. That is highly unjust; and such Sentence is altogether contrary to his Majesty’s landsfatherly intentions:—my name” (you give it, “In the King’s Name,” forsooth) “cruelly abused!”

So far is set forth in the “Royal Protocol printed next Tuesday,” as well as in Rannleben. But from this point, the Dialogue,—if it can be called Dialogue, being merely a rebuke and exhortation of Royal wrath against Friedel and his Two, who are all mute, so far as I can learn, and stand like criminals in the dock, feeling themselves unjustly condemned,—gets more and more into conflagration, and cannot be distinctly reported. “My name to such a thing! When was I found to oppress a poor man for love of a rich? To follow wiggeries and forms with solemn attention, careless what became of the internal fact? Act of 1566, allowing Gersdorf to make his Pond? Like enough;—and Arnold’s loss of water, that is not worth the ascertaining; you know not yet what it was, some of you even say it was nothing; care not whether it was anything. Could Arnold grind, or not, as formerly? What is Act of 1566, or any or all Acts, in comparison? Wretched mortals, had you wigs a fathom long, and Law-books on your back, and Acts of 1566, by the hundredweight, what could it help, if the right of a poor man were left by you trampled under foot? What is the meaning of your sitting there as Judges? Dispensers of Right in God’s Name and mine? I will make an example of you which shall be remembered!—Out of my sight!” Whereupon exeunt in haste, all Three,—though not far, not home, as will be seen.

Only the essential sense of all this, not the exact terms, could (or should) any Stellter take in short-hand; and in the Protocol it is decorously omitted altogether. Rannleben merely says: “The King farther made use of very strong expressions against us,"—too strong to be repeated,—“and, at last, dismissed us without saying what he intended to do with us. We had hardly left the room, when he followed us, ordering us to wait. The King, during the interview with us, held the Sentence, of my composition, in his hand; and seemed particularly irritated about the circumstance of the judgment being pronounced in his name, as is the usual form. He struck the paper again and again with his other hand,”—heat of indignation quite extinguishing gout, for the moment,—“exclaiming at the same time repeatedly, ‘Cruelly abused my name (meinen Namen cruel missbraucht)!’” —We will now give the remaining part of the Protocol (what directly follows the above catechetical or Dialogue part before that caught fire),—as taken down by Stellter, and read in all the Newspapers next Tuesday :

“Protocol” (of December 11th, Title already given ; Docketing adds), “which is to be printed.”

* * (Catechetics as above,—and then) : “The King’s desire always is and was, That everybody, be he high or low, rich or poor, get prompt justice ; and that, without regard of person or rank, no subject of his fail at any time of impartial right and protection from his Courts of Law.

“Wherefore, with respect to this most unjust Sentence against the Miller Arnold of the Pommerzig Crabmill, pronounced in the Neumark, and confirmed here in Berlin, his Majesty will establish an emphatic example (ein nachdrückliches Exempel statuiren) ; to the end that all Courts of Justice, in all the King’s Provinces, may take warning thereby, and not commit the like glaring unjust acts. For, let them bear in mind, That the least peasant, yea, what is still more, that even a beggar, is, no less than his Majesty, a human being, and one to whom due justice must be meted out. All men being equal before the Law, if it is a prince complaining against a peasant, or vice versâ, the prince is the same as the peasant before the Law ; and, on such occasions, pure justice must have its course, without regard of person : Let the Law-Courts, in all the Provinces, take this for their rule. And whenever they do not carry out justice in a straightforward manner, without any regard of person and rank, but put aside natural fairness,—then they shall have to answer his Majesty for it (sollen sie es mit Seiner Königlichen Majestät zu thun kriegen).

For a Court of Law doing injustice is more dangerous and pernicious than a band of thieves : against these one can protect oneself ; but against rogues who make use of the cloak of justice to accomplish their evil passions, against such no man can guard himself. These are worse than the greatest knaves the world contains, and deserve double punishment.

"For the rest, be it also known to the various Courts of Justice, That his Majesty has appointed a new Grand-Chancellor." Fürst dismissed. "Yet his Majesty will not the less look sharply with his own eyes after the Law-proceedings in all the Provinces ; and he commands you"—that is, all the Law-Courts—"urgently herewith : Firstly,"—which is also lastly—"To proceed to deal equally with all people seeking justice, be it prince or peasant ; for, there, all must be alike. However, if his Majesty, at any time hereafter, comes upon a fault committed in this regard, the guilty Courts can now imagine beforehand how they will be punished with rigour, President as well as Raths, who shall have delivered a judgment so wicked and openly opposed to justice. Which all Colleges of Justice in all his Majesty's Provinces are particularly to take notice of."

"Mem. By his Majesty's special command, measures are taken that this Protocol be inserted in all the Berlin Journals."

The remainder of Rannleben's Narrative is beautifully brief and significant.—"We had hardly left the room," said he suprà, "when the King followed us," lame as he was, with a fulminant: "'Wait there!'" Rannleben continues: "Shortly after came an Aide-de-Camp, who took us in a carriage to the common Town-prison, the Kalandshof ; here two Corporals and two Privates were set to guard us. On the 13th December 1779," third day of our arrest, "a Cabinet Order was published to us, by which the King had appointed a Commission of Inquiry ; but had, at the same time, commanded beforehand that the Sentence should not be less than a year's confinement in a fortress, dismissal from office, and payment of compensation to the Arnold people for the losses they had sustained." Which certainly was a bad outlook for us.

Precisely the same has befallen our Brethren of Cüstrin ; all suddenly packed into Prison, just while reading our Approval of them ;—there they sit, their Sentence to be like ours. "Our arrest in the Kalandshof lasted from 11th December 1779 till 5th January 1780," three weeks and three days,—when (with Two Exceptions, to be noted presently) we were all, Kammergerichters and Cüstriners alike, transferred to Spandau.

¹ In Berlin'sche Nachrichten von Staats und Gelehrten Sachen, No. 149, "Tuesday, 14th December 1779." Preuss, iii. 494.

I spoke of what might be called a ghost of Kanzler Fürst once revisiting the glimpses of the Moon, or Sun if there were any in the dismal December days. This is it, witness one who saw it : "On the morning of December 12th, the day after the Grand-Chancellor's dismissal, the Street in which he lived was thronged with the carriages of callers, who came to testify their sympathy, and to offer their condolence to the fallen Chancellor. The crowd of carriages could be seen from the windows of the King's Palace." The same young Legal Gentleman, by and by a very old one, who, himself one of the callers at the Ex-Chancellor's house that day, saw this, and related it in his old age to Herr Preuss,¹ remembers and relates also this other significant fact :

"During the days that followed" the above event and Publication of the Royal Protocol, "I often crossed, in the forenoon, the Esplanade in front of the Palace (Schlossplatz), at that side where the King's apartments were ; the same which his Royal Highness the Crown Prince now" (1833) "occupies. I remember that here, on that part of the Esplanade which was directly under Friedrich's windows, there stood constantly numbers of Peasants, not ten or twelve, but as many as a hundred at a time ; all with Petitions in their hands, which they were holding up towards the window ; shouting, 'Please his Majesty to look at these ; we have been still worse treated than the Arnolds !' And indeed, I have understood the Law-Courts, for some time after, found great difficulty to assert their authority : the parties against whom judgment went, taking refuge in the Arnold precedent, and appealing direct to the King."

Far graver than this Spectre of Fürst, Minister Zedlitz hesitates, finally refuses, to pronounce such a Sentence as the King orders on these men of Law ! Estimable, able, conscientious Zedlitz ; zealous on Education matters, too ;—whom I always like for contriving to attend a Course of Kant's Lectures, while 500 miles away from him (actual Course in Königsberg University, by the illustrious Kant; every Lecture punctually taken in short-hand, and transmitted to Berlin, post after post, for the busy man).¹ Here is now some painful Correspondence between the King and him,—painful, yet pleasant:

¹ Preuss, lil. 499, 500.

King to Minister Von Zedlitz, who has alarming Doubts (Berlin, 28th December 1779).—"Your Report of the 20th instant in regard to Judgment on the arrested Rath's has been received. But do you think I don't understand your Advocate fellows and their quirks; or how they can polish up a bad cause, and by their hyperboles exaggerate or extenuate as they find fit? The Goose-quill class (Federzeug) can't look at facts. When Soldiers set to investigate anything, on an order given, they go the straight way to the kernel of the matter; upon which, plenty of objections from the Goose-quill people!—But you may assure yourself I give more belief to an honest Officer, who has honour in the heart of him, than to all your Advocates and sentences. I perceive well they are themselves afraid, and don't want to see any of their fellows punished.

"If, therefore, you will not obey my Order, I shall take another in your place who will; for depart from it I will not. You may tell them that. And know, for your part, that such miserable jargon (miserabel Styl) makes not the smallest impression on me. Hereby, then, you are to guide yourself; and merely say whether you will follow My Order or not; for I will in no wise fall away from it. I am your well-affectioned King,—FRIEDRICH.

Marginale (in Autograph).—"My Gentleman" (you, Herr von Zedlitz, with your dubitatings), "won't make me believe black is white. I know the Advocate sleight-of-hand, and won't be taken in. An example has become necessary here,—those Scoundrels (Canailles) having so enormously misused my name, to practise arbitrary and unheard-of injustices. A Judge that goes upon chicaning is to be punished more severely than a highway Robber. For you have trusted to the one; you are on your guard against the other."

Zedlitz to the King (Berlin, 31st December 1779).—"I have at all times had your Royal Majesty's favour before my eyes as the supreme happiness of my life, and have most zealously endeavored to merit the same: but I should recognise myself unworthy of it, were I capable of an undertaking contrary to my conviction. From the reasons indicated by myself, as well as by the Criminal-Senate" (Paper of reasons fortunately lost), "your Majesty will deign to consider that I am unable to draw up a condemnatory Sentence against your Majesty's Servants-of-Justice, now under arrest on account of the Arnold Affair. Your Majesty's till death,—VON ZEDLITZ."

¹ Kuno Fischer, Kant's Leben (Mannheim, 1860), pp. 34, 35.

King to Zedlitz (Berlin, 1st January 1780).—"My dear State's-Minister Freiherr von Zedlitz,—It much surprises me to see, from your Note of yesterday, that you refuse to pronounce a judgment on those Servants-of-Justice arrested for their conduct in the Arnold Case, according to my Order. If you, therefore, will not, I will, and do it as follows:

"1°. The Cüstrin Regierungs-Rath Scheibler, who, it appears in evidence, was of an opposite opinion to his Colleagues, and voted That the man up-stream had not a right to cut off the water from the man down-stream; and that the point, as to Arnold's wanting water, should be more closely and strictly inquired into,—he, Scheibler, shall be set free from his arrest, and go back to his post at Cüstrin. And in like manner, Kammergerichts-Rath Rannleben,—who has evidently given himself faithful trouble about the cause, and has brought forward with a quite visible impartiality all the considerations and dubieties, especially about the condition of the water and the alleged hurtfulness of the Pond,—is absolved from arrest.

"2°. As for the other arrested Servants-of-Justice, they are one and all dismissed from office (cassirt), and condemned to one year's Fortress-Arrest. Furthermore, they shall pay to Arnold the value of his Mill, and make good to him, out of their own pocket, all the loss and damage he has suffered in this business, the Neumark Kammer (Revenue-Board) to tax and estimate the same." (Damage came to 1,358 thalers, 11 groschen, 1 pfennig,—that is, 203*l.* 14*s.* and some pence and farthings; the last farthing of which was punctually paid to Arnold, within the next eight months);—"so that

"3°. The Miller Arnold shall be completely put as he was (in integrum restituit).

"And in such way must the matter, in all branches of it, be immediately proceeded with, got ready, and handed in for my Completion (Vollziehung) by signature. Which you, therefore, will take charge of, without delay. For the rest, I will tell you farther, that I am not ill pleased to know you on the side you show on this occasion" (as a man that will not go against his conscience), "and shall see, by and by, what I can farther do with you." (Left him where he was, as the best thing.) "Whereafter you are accordingly to guide yourself. And I remain otherwise your well-affectioned King, —FRIEDRICH."¹

This, then, is an impartial account of the celebrated passage between Friedrich and the Lawyers, known by the name of "the Miller-Arnold Case;" which attracted the notice of all Europe,—just while the decennium of the French Revolution was beginning. In Russia, the Czarina Catharine, the friend of Philosophers, sent to her Senate a copy of Friedrich's Protocol of December 11th, as a noteworthy instance of Royal supreme judicature. In France, Prints in celebration of it,—“one Print by Vangelisti, entitled Balance de Frédéric,”—were exhibited in shopwindows, expounded in newspapers, and discoursed of in drawing-rooms. The Case brought into talk again an old Miller Case of Friedrich's, which had been famous above thirty years ago, when Sans-Souci was getting built. Readers know it: Potsdam Miller, and his obstinate Windmill, which still grinds on its knoll in those localities, and would not, at any price, become part of the King's Gardens. “Not at any price?” said the King's agent: “Cannot the King take it from you for nothing if he chose?” “Haven't we the Kammergericht at Berlin!” answered the Miller. To Friedrich's great delight, as appears;—which might render the Windmill itself a kind of ornament to his Gardens thenceforth. The French admiration over these two Miller Cases continued to be very great.²

As to Miller Arnold and his Cause, the united voice of Prussian Society condemned Friedrich's procedure: Such harshness to Grand-Chancellor Fürst and respectable old Official Gentlemen, amounting to the barbarous and the tyrannous, according to Prussian Society. To support which feeling, and testify it openly, they drove in crowds to Fürst's

¹ Preuss, iii. 519, 520: see ib. 405 n.

² Dieulafoi, Le Meunier de Sans-Souci (Comedy or Farce, of I know not what year); Andrieux, Le Moulin de Sans-Souci (“Poem,” at Institut-National, 15 Germinal, An 5), &c. &c.: Preuss, iii. 412, 413.

(some have told me to the Prison-doors too, but that seems hypothetic) ; and left cards for old Fürst and Company. In sight of Friedrich, who inquired, "What is this stir on the streets, then?"—and, on learning, made not the least audible remark ; but continued his salutary cashierment of the wigged Gentlemen, and imprisonment till their full term ran.

My impression has been that, in Berlin Society there was more sympathy for mere respectability of wig than in Friedrich. To Friedrich respectability of wig that issues in solemnly failing to do justice, is a mere enormity, greater than the most wigless condition could be. Wigless, the thing were to be endured, a thing one is born to, more or less : but in wig,—out upon it ! And the wig which screens, and would strive to disguise and even to embellish such a thing : To the gutters with such wig !

In support of their feeling for Fürst and Company, Berlin Society was farther obliged to pronounce the claim of Miller Arnold a nullity, and that no injustice whatever had been done him. Mere pretences on his part, subterfuges for his idle conduct, for his inability to pay due rent, said Berlin Society. And that impartial Soldier-person, whom Friedrich sent to examine by the light of nature, and report ? "Corrupted, he !" answer they : "had intrigues with—" I forget whom ; somebody of the womankind (perhaps Arnold's old hard-featured Wife, if you are driven into a corner !)—"and was not to be depended on at all !" In which condemned state, Berlin Society almost wholly disapproving it, the Arnold Process was found at Friedrich's death (restoration of honours to old Fürst and Company, one of the first acts of the New Reign, sure of immediate popularity) ; and, I think, pretty much continues so still, few or none in Berlin Society admitting Miller Arnold's claim to redress, much less defending that onslaught on Fürst and the wigs.¹

¹ Herr Preuss himself inclines that way, rather condemnatory of Friedrich ; but his Account, as usual, is exact and authentic,—though distressingly confused, and scattered about into different corners (Preuss, iii. 381–413 ; then again ibid. 520 &c.). On the other hand, there is one Segebusch, too, a learned Doctor, of Altona, who takes the King's side,—

Who, from the remote distance, would venture to contradict? Once more, my own poor impression was, which I keep silent except to friends, that Berlin Society was wrong; that Miller Arnold had of a truth lost portions of his dam-water, and was entitled to abatement; and that in such case, Friedrich's horror at the Fürst-and-Company Phenomenon (horror aggravated by gout) had its highly respectable side withal.

When, after Friedrich's death, on Von Gersdorf's urgent reclamations, the case was reopened, and allowed to be carried "into the Secret Tribunal, as the competent Court of Appeal in third instance," the said Tribunal found, That the law-maxim depended upon by the Lower Courts, as to "the absolute right of owners of private streams," did not apply in the present case; but that the Deed of 1566 did; and also that "the facts as to pretended damage" (pretence merely) "from loss of water, were satisfactorily proved against Arnold:" Gersdorf, therefore, may have his Pond; and Arnold must refund the money paid to him for "damages" by the condemned Judges; and also the purchase-money of his Mill, if he means to keep the latter. All which moneys, however, his Majesty Friedrich Wilhelm II., Friedrich's Successor, to have done with the matter, handsomely paid out of his own pocket: the handsome way of ending it.

In his last journey to West-Preussen, June 1784, Friedrich said to the new Regierungs-President (Chief Judge) there: "I am Head Commissary of Justice; and have a heavy responsibility lying on me,"—as will you in this new Office. Friedrich at no moment neglected this part of his functions; and his procedure in it throughout, one cannot but admit to have been faithful, beautiful, human. Very impatient indeed when he comes upon Imbecility and Pedantry threatening to extinguish Essence and Fact, among his Law People! This is one marginale of his, among many such, some of them still more stinging, which are comfortable to every reader. The and really is rather stupid, argumentative merely, and unilluminative, if you read him: Segebusch, Historisch-rechtliche Würdigung der Einmischung Friedrich's des Grossen in die bekannte Rechtssache des Müllers Arnold, auch für Nicht-Juristen (Altona, 1829).

Case is that of a murderer,—murder indisputable ; “but may not insanity be suspected, your Majesty, such the absence of motive, such the—?” Majesty answers : “That is nothing but inanity and stupid pleading against right. The fellow put a child to death ; if he were a soldier, you would execute him without priest ; and because this canaille is a citizen, you make him ‘melancholic’ to get him off. Beautiful justice !” ‘—

Friedrich has to sign all Death-Sentences ; and he does it, wherever I have noticed, rigorously well. For the rest, his Criminal Calendar seems to be lighter than any other of his time ; “in a population of 5,200,000,” says he once, “14 to 15 are annually condemned to death.”

CHAPTER VIII.

THE FÜRSTENBUND : FRIEDRICH'S LAST YEARS.

At Vienna, on November 29th, 1780, the noble Kaiserinn Maria Theresa, after a short illness, died. Her end was beautiful and exemplary, as her course had been. The disease, which seemed at first only a bad cold, proved to have been induration of the lungs ; the chief symptom throughout, a more and more suffocating difficulty to breathe. On the edge of death, the Kaiserinn, sitting in a chair (bed impossible in such struggle for breath), leant her head back as if inclined to sleep. One of her women arranged the cushions, asked in a whisper, “Will your Majesty sleep, then?” “No,” answered the dying Kaiserinn ; “I could sleep, but I must not ; Death is too near. He must not steal upon me. These fifteen years I have been making ready for him ; I will meet him awake.” Fifteen years ago her beloved Franz was snatched from her, in such sudden manner : and ever since, she has gone in Widow's dress ; and has looked upon herself as one who had done with the world. The 18th of every month has been for her a day of solitary prayer ; 18th of every August (Franz's death-day) she has gone down punctually to the vaults in the Stephans-Kirche, and sat by his coffin there ;—last August, something broke in the apparatus as she descended ; and it has ever since been an omen to her.¹ Omen now fulfilled.

¹ Preuss, iii. 375.

On her death, Joseph and Kaunitz, now become supreme, launched abroad in their ambitious adventures with loose rein. Schemes of all kinds ; including Bavaria still, in spite of the late check ; for which latter, and for vast prospects in Turkey as well, the young Kaiser is now upon a cunning method, full of promise to him,—that of ingratiating himself with the Czarina, and cutting out Friedrich in that quarter. Summer 1780, while the Kaiserinn still lived, Joseph made his famous First Visit to the Czarina (May—August 1780),²—not yet for some years his thrice-famous Second Visit (thrice-famous Cleopatra-Voyage with her down the Dnieper ; dramaturgic cities and populations keeping pace with them on the banks, such the scenic faculty of Russian Officials, with Potemkin as stage-manager):—in the course of which First Visit, still more in the Second, it is well known the Czarina and Joseph came to an understanding. Little articulated of it as yet ; but the meaning already clear to both. “A frank partnership, high Madam ; to you, full scope in your glorious notion of a Greek Capital and Empire, Turk quite trampled away, Constantinople a Christian metropolis once more ” (and your next Grandson a Constantine,—to be in readiness) : “why not, if I may share too, in the Donau Countries, that lie handy ? To you, I say, an Eastern Empire ; to me, a Western : Revival of the poor old Romish Reich, so far as may be ; and in no hindrance upon Bavaria, next time. Have not we had enough of that old Friedrich, who stands perpetually upon status quo, and to both of us is a mere stoppage of the way ? ”

Czarina Catharine took the hint ; christened her next

¹ Hormayr, Oesterreichischer Plutarch, iv. (2tes) 94 ; Keith, ii. 114.

² Hermann, vi. 132–135.

Grandson "Constantine" (to be in readiness);¹ and from that time stiffly refused renewing her Treaty with Friedrich;—to Friedrich's great grief, seeing her, on the contrary, industrious to forward every German scheme of Joseph's, Bavarian or other, and foreshadowing to himself dismal issues for Prussia when this present term of Treaty should expire. As to Joseph, he was busy night and day,—really perilous to Friedrich and the independence of the German Reich. His young Brother, Maximilian, he contrives, Czarina helping, to get elected Coadjutor of Köln; Successor of our Lanky Friend there, to be Kur-Köln in due season, and make the Electorate of Köln a bit of Austria henceforth.² Then there come "Panis-Briefe,"³—who knows what?—usurpations, graspings and pretensions without end:—finally, an open pretension to incorporate Bavaria, after all Bavaria, not in part now, but in whole: "You, Karl Theodor, injured man, cannot we give you Territory in the Netherlands; a King there you shall be, and have your vote as Kur-Pfalz still; only think! In return for which, Bavaria ours in fee-simple, and so finish that?" Karl Theodor is perfectly willing,—only perhaps some others are not.

Then and there, these threatening complexities, now gone like a dream of the night, were really life-perils for the Kingdom of Prussia; never to be lost sight of by a veteran Shepherd of the People. They kept a vigilant King Friedrich continually on the stretch, and were a standing life-problem to him in those final Years. Problem nearly insoluble to human contrivance; the Russian card having palpably gone into the other hand. Problem solved, nevertheless ; it is still remembered how.

¹ This is the Constantine who renounced, in favour of the late Czar Nicholas; and proved a failure in regard to "New Greek Empire," and otherwise.

² Lengthy and minute account of that Transaction, in all the steps of it, in Dohm, i. 295-379.

³ Panis (Bread) Brief is a Letter with which, in ancient centuries, the Kaiser used to furnish an old worn-out Servant, addressed to some Monastery, some Abbot or Prior in easy circumstances: "Be so good as provide this old Gentleman with Panis (Bread, or Board and Lodging) while he lives." Very pretty in Barbarossa's time;—but now—!

On the development of that pretty Bavarian Project, the thing became pressing ; and it is well known by what a stroke of genius Friedrich checkmated it ; and produced instead a "Fürstenbund," or general "Confederation of German Princes," Prussia atop, to forbid peremptorily that the Laws of the Reich be infringed. Fürstenbund : this is the victorious summit of Friedrich's Public History, towards which all his efforts tended, during these five years : Friedrich's last feat in the world. Feat, how obsolete now,—fallen silent everywhere, except in German Parish-History, and to the students of Friedrich's character in old age ! Had no result whatever in European History ; so unexpected was the turn things took. A Fürstenbund which was swallowed bodily within a few years, in that World-Explosion of Democracy, and War of the Giants ; and,—unless Napoleon's "Confederation of the Rhine" were perhaps some transitory ghost of it?—left not even a ghost behind. A Fürstenbund of which we must say something, when its Year comes ; but obviously not much.

Nor are the Domesticities, as set forth by our Prussian authorities, an opulent topic for us. Friedrich's Old Age is not unamiable ; on the contrary, I think it would have made a pretty Picture, had there been a Limner to take it, with the least felicity or physiognomic coherency ;—as there was not. His Letters, and all the symptoms we have, denote a sound-hearted brave old man ; continually subduing to himself many ugly troubles ; and, like the stars, always steady at his work. To sit grieving or desponding is, at all times, far from him : "Why despond ? Won't it be all done presently ; is it of much moment while it lasts ?" A fine, unaffectedly vigorous, simple and manful old age ;—rather serene than otherwise ; in spite of electric outbursts and cloudy weather that could not be wanting.

Of all which there is not, in this place, much more to be said. Friedrich's element is itself wearing dim, sombre of hue ; and the records of it, too, seem to grow dimmer, more and more intermittent. Old friends, of the intellectual kind, are almost all dead ; the new are of little moment to us,—not worth naming in comparison. The chief, perhaps, is a certain young Marchese Lucchesini, who comes about this time,¹ and continues in more and more favour both with Friedrich and his successor,—employed even in Diplomats by the latter. An accomplished young Gentleman, from Lucca ; of fine intelligence, and, what was no less essential to him here, a perfect propriety in breeding and carriage. One makes no acquaintance with him in these straggling records, nor desires to make any. It was he that brought the inane, ever-scribbling Denina hither, if that can be reckoned a merit. Inane Denina came as Academician, October 1782 ; saw Friedrich,² at least once (“Academician, Pension ; yes, yes !”)—and I know not whether any second time.

Friedrich, on loss of friends, does not take refuge in solitude ; he tries always for something of substitute ; sees his man once or twice,—in several instances once only, and leaves him to his pension in sinecure thenceforth. Cornelius De Pauw, the rich Canon of Xanten (Uncle of Anacharsis Klostz, the afterwards renowned), came on those principles ; hung on for six months, not liked, not liking ; and was then permitted to go home for good, his pension with him. Another, a Frenchman, whose name I forget, sat gloomily in Potsdam, after his rejection ; silent (not knowing German), unclipt, unkempt, rough as Nebuchadnezzar, till he died. Le Catt is still a resource ; steady till almost the end, when somebody's tongue, it is thought, did him ill with the King.

Alone, or almost alone, of the ancient set is Bastiani ; a tall, black-browed man, with uncommonly bright eyes, now himself old, and a comfortable Abbot in Silesia ; who comes from time to time, awakening the King into his pristine topics and altitudes. Bastiani's history is something curious : as a tall Venitian Monk (son of a tailor in Venice), he had been crimped by Friedrich Wilhelm's people ; Friedrich found him serving as a Potsdam Giant, but discerned far other faculties in the bright-looking man, far other knowledges; and gradually made him what we see. Banterers him sometimes that he will rise to be Pope one day, so cunning and clever is he: "What will you say to me, a Heretic, when you get to be Pope; tell me now; out with it, I insist!" Bastiani parried, pleaded, but unable to get off, made what some call his one piece of wit: "I will say: O Royal Eagle, screen me with thy wings, but spare me with thy sharp beak!" This is Bastiani's one recorded piece of wit; for he was tacit rather, and practically watchful, and did not waste his fine intellect in that way.

¹ “Chamberlain” (titular, with Pension, &c.), “9th May 1780, age then 28” (Preuss. iv. 211) ;—arrived, when or how is not said.

² Rödenbeck, iii. 285, 286.

Foreign Visitors there are in plenty; now and then something brilliant going. But the old Generals seem to be mainly what the King has for company. Dinner always his bright hour; from ten to seven guests daily. Seidlitz, never of intelligence on any point but Soldiering, is long since dead; Ziethen comes rarely, and falls asleep when he does; General Görtz (brother of the Weimar-München Görtz); Buddenbrock (the King's comrade in youth, in the Reinsberg times), who has good faculty; Prittwitz (who saved him at Kunersdorf, and is lively, though stupid); General and Head-Equerry Schwerin, of headlong tongue, not witty, but the cause of wit; Major Graf von Pinto, a magniloquent Ex-Austrian ditto ditto; these are among his chief dinner-guests. If fine speculation do not suit, old pranks of youth, old tales of war, become the staple conversation; always plenty of banter on the old King's part;—who sits very snuffy (says the privately ill-humoured Büsching), and does not sufficiently abhor grease on his fingers, or keep his nails quite clean. Occasionally laughs at the Clergy, too; and has little of the reverence seemly in an old King. The truth is, Doctor, he has had his sufferings from Human Stupidity; and was always fond of hitting objects on the raw. For the rest, as you may see, heartily an old Stoic, and takes matters in the rough; avoiding useless despondency above all; and intent to have a cheerful hour at dinner if he can.

Visits from his Kindred are still pretty frequent; never except on invitation. For the rest, completely an old Bachelor, an old Military Abbot ; with business for every hour. Princess Amelia takes care of his linen, not very well, the dear old Lady, who is herself a cripple, suffering, and voiceless, speaking only in hoarse whisper. I think I have heard there were but twelve shirts, not in first-rate order, when the King died. A King supremely indifferent to small concerns ; especially to that of shirts and tailorages not essential. Holds to Literature, almost more than ever ; occasionally still writes ;¹ has his daily Readings, Concerts, Correspondences as usual :—readers can conceive the dim Household Picture, dimly reported withal. The following Anecdotes may be added as completion of it, or at least of all I have to say on it :

You go on Wednesday, then ?—"Loss of time was one of the losses Friedrich could least stand. In visits even from his Brothers and Sisters, which were always by his own express invitation, he would say some morning (call it Tuesday morning) : 'You are going on Wednesday, I am sorry to hear' (what you never heard before) !—'Alas, your Majesty, we must !' 'Well, I am sorry : but I will lay no constraint on you. Pleasant moments cannot last forever !' And sometimes, after this had been agreed to, he would say : 'But cannot you stay till Thursday, then ? Come, one other day of it !'—'Well, since your Majesty does graciously press !' And on Thursday, not Wednesday, on those curious terms, the visit would terminate. This trait is in the Anecdote-Books : but its authenticity does not rest on that uncertain basis ; singularly enough, it comes to me, individually, by two clear stages, from Friedrich's Sister the Duchess of Brunswick, who, if anybody, would know it well."²

Dinner with the Queen.—The Queen, a prudent, simple-minded, worthy person, of perfect behaviour in a difficult position, seems to have been much respected in Berlin Society and the Court Circles. Nor was the King wanting in the same feeling towards her; of which there are still many proofs: but as to personal intercourse,—what a figure has that gradually taken! Preuss says, citing those who saw: “When the King, after the Seven-Years War, now and then, in Carnival season, dined with the Queen in her Apartments, he usually said not a word to her. He merely, on entering, on sitting down at table and leaving it, made the customary bows; and sat opposite to her. Once, in the Seventies” (years 1770, years now past), “the Queen was ill of gout; table was in her Apartments; but she herself was not there, she sat in an easy-chair in the drawing-room. On this occasion the King stepped up to the Queen, and inquired about her health. The circumstance occasioned, among the company present, and all over Town as the news spread, great wonder and sympathy (Verwunderung und Theilnahme). This is probably the last time he ever spoke to her.”¹

¹ For one instance : The famous Pamphlet, De la Littérature Allemande (containing his onslaught on Shakespeare, and his first salutation, with the reverse of welcome, to Goethe's Götz von Berlichingen) ;—printed, under stupid Thiébault's care, Berlin, 1780. Stands now in Œuvres de Frédéric, vii. 89–122. The last Pieces of all are chiefly Military Instructions of a practical or official nature.

² My informant is Sir George Sinclair, Baronet, of Thurso ; his was the distinguished Countess of Finlater, still remembered for her graces of mind and person, who had been Maid-of-Honour to the Duchess.

The Two Grand-Nephews.—“The King was fond of children; liked to have his Grand-Nephews about him. One day, while the King sat at work in his Cabinet, the younger of the two, a boy of eight or nine” (who died soon after twenty), “was playing ball about the room; and knocked it once and again into the King’s writing operation; who twice or oftener flung it back to him, but next time put it in his pocket, and went on. ‘Please your Majesty, give it me back!’ begged the Boy; and again begged: Majesty took no notice; continued writing. Till at length came, in the tone of indignation, ‘Will your Majesty give me my ball, then?’ The King looked up; found the little Hohenzollern planted firm, hands on haunches, and wearing quite a peremptory air. ‘Thou art a brave little fellow; they won’t get Silesia out of thee?’ cried he laughing, and flinging him his ball.”²

Of the elder Prince, afterwards Friedrich Wilhelm III. (Father of the now King), there is a much more interesting Anecdote, and of his own reporting too, though the precise terms are irrecoverable: “How the King, questioning him about his bits of French studies, brought down a La Fontaine from the shelves, and said, ‘Translate me this Fable;’ which the Boy did, with such readiness and correctness as obtained the King’s praises: praises to an extent that was embarrassing, and made the honest little creature confess, ‘I did it with my Tutor, a few days since !' To the King's much greater delight ; who led him out to walk in the Gardens, and, in a mood of deeper and deeper seriousness, discoursed and exhorted him on the supreme law of truth and probity that lies on all men, and on all Kings still more ; one of his expressions being, ' Look at this high thing ' (the Obelisk they were passing in the Gardens), ' its uprightness is its strength (sa droiture fait sa force) ;' and his final words, ' Remember this evening, my good Fritz ; perhaps thou wilt think of it, long after, when I am gone.' As the good Friedrich Wilhelm III. declares piously he often did, in the storms, of fate that overtook him." ¹

¹ Preuss, iv. 187.

² Fischer, ii. 445 (“year 1780”).

Industrial matters, that of Colonies especially, of drainages, embankments, and reclaiming of waste lands, are a large item in the King's business,—readers would not guess how large, or how incessant. Under this head there is on record, and even lies at my hand translated into English, what might be called a Colonial Day with Friedrich (Day of July 23d, 1779 ; which Friedrich, just come home from the Bavarian War, spent wholly, from 5 in the morning onward, in driving about, in earnest survey of his Colonies and Land-Improvements in the Potsdam-Ruppin Country) ; curious enough Record, by a certain Bailiff or Overseer, who rode at his chariot-side, of all the questions, criticisms and remarks of Friedrich on persons and objects, till he landed at Ruppin for the night. Taken down, with forensic, almost with religious exactitude, by the Bailiff in question ; a Son-in-law of the Poet Gleim,—by whom it was published, the year after Friedrich's death ; ² and by many others since. It is curiously authentic, characteristic in parts, though in its bald forensic style rather heavy reading. Luckier, for most readers, that inexorable want of room has excluded it, on the present occasion !

¹ R. F. Eylert, Charakterzüge und historische Fragmente aus dem Leben des Königs von Preussen, Friedrich Wilhelm III. (Magdeburg, 1843), i. 450–456. This is a "King's Chaplain and Bishop Eylert : " undoubtedly he heard this Anecdote from his Master, and was heard repeating it ; but the dialect his Editors have put it into is altogether tawdry, modern, and impossible to take for that of Friedrich, or even, I suppose, of Friedrich Wilhelm III.

² Is in Anekdoten und Charakterzüge, No. 8 (Berlin, 1787), pp. 15–79.

No reader adequately fancies, or could by any single Document be made to do so, the continual assiduity of Friedrich in regard to these interests of his. The strictest Husbandman is not busier with his Farm than Friedrich with his Kingdom throughout;—which is indeed a Farm, leased him by the Heavens; in which not a gate-bar can be broken, nor a stone or sod roll into the smallest ditch, but it is to his the Husbandman's damage, and must be instantly looked after. There are Meetings with the Silesian manufacturers (in Review time), Dialogues ensuing, several of which have been preserved; strange to read, however dull. There are many scattered evidences;—and only slowly does, not the thing indeed, but the degree of the thing, become fully credible. Not communicable, on the terms prescribed us at present; and must be left to the languid fancy, like so much else.

Here is an Ocular View, here are several such, which we yet happily have, of the actual Friedrich as he looked and lived. These, at a cheap rate, throw transiently some flare of illumination over his Affairs and him: these let me now give; and these shall be all.

Prince de Ligne, after Ten Years, sees Friedrich a Second Time; and reports what was said.

In Summer 1780, as we mentioned, Kaiser Joseph was on his first Visit to the Czarina. They met at Mohilow on the Dnieper, towards the end of May; have been roving about, as if in mere galas and amusements (though with a great deal of business incidentally thrown in), for above a month since, when Prince de Ligne is summoned to join them at Petersburg. He goes by Berlin, stays at Potsdam with Friedrich for about a week; and reports to Polish Majesty these new Dialogues of 1780, the year after sending him those of Mährisch-Neustadt of 1770, which we read above. Those were written down from memory, in 1785; these in 1786,—and “towards the end of it,” as is internally evident. Let these also be welcome to us on such terms as there are:

“Since your Majesty” (Quasi-Majesty, of Poland) “is willing to lose another quarter of an hour of that time, which you employ so well in gaining the love of all to whom you deign to make yourself known, here in my Second Interview. It can be of interest only to you, Sire, who have known the King, and who discover traits of character in what to another are but simple words. One finds in few others that confidence, or at least that kindness (bonhomie), which characterises your Majesty. With you, one can indulge in rest; but with the King of Prussia, one had always to be under arms, prepared to parry and to thrust, and to keep the due middle between a small attack and a grand defence. I proceed to the matter in hand, and shall speak to you of him for the last time.

"He had made me promise to come to Berlin. I hastened thither directly after that little War" (Potato-War), "which he called 'an action where he had come as bailiff to perform an execution.' The result for him, as is known, was a great expense of men, of horses and money; some appearance of good faith and disinterestedness; little honour in the War; a little honesty in Policy, and much bitterness against us Austrians. The King began, without knowing why, to prohibit Austrian Officers from entering his territories without an express order, signed by his own hand. Similar prohibition, on the part of our Court, against Prussian Officers; and mutual constraint, without profit or reason. I, for my own part, am of confident humour; I thought I should need no permission, and I think still I could have done without one. But the desire of having a Letter from the great Friedrich, rather than the fear of being ill received, made me write to him. My Letter was all on fire with my enthusiasm, my admiration, and the fervour of my sentiment for that sublime and extraordinary being; and it brought me three charming Answers from him. He gave me, in detail, almost what I had given him in the gross; and what he could not return me in admiration,—for I do not remember to have gained a battle,—he accorded me in friendship. For fear of missing, he had written to me from Potsdam, to Vienna, to Dresden, and to Berlin." (In fine, at Potsdam I was, Saturday 9th July 1780, waiting ready;—stayed there about a week).¹

"While waiting for the hour of 12, with my Son Charles and M. de Lille (Abbé de Lille, prose writer of something now forgotten; by no means lyrical De Lisle, of Les Jardins), "to be presented to the King, I went to look at the Parade;—and, on its breaking up, was surrounded, and escorted to the Palace, by Austrian deserters, and particularly from my own regiment, who almost caressed me, and asked my pardon for having left me.

¹ "9th (or 10th) July 1780" (Rodenbeck, iii. 233): "Stayed till 16th."

"The hour of presentation struck. The King received me with an unspeakable charm. The military coldness of a General's Headquarters changed into a soft and kindly welcome. He said to me, 'He did not think I had so big a Son.'

Ego. "'He is even married, Sire; has been so these twelve months.'

King. "'May I (oserais-je) ask you to whom?' He often used this expression, 'oserais-je;' and also this: 'If you permit me to have the honour to tell you, Si vous me permettez d'avoir l'honneur de vous dire.'

Ego. "'To a Polish Lady, a Massalska.'

King (to my Son). "'What, a Massalska? Do you know what her Grandmother did?' "'No, Sire,' said Charles.

King. "'She put the match to the cannon at the Siege of Dantzic with her own hand; she fired, and made others fire, and defended herself, when her party, who had lost head, thought only of surrendering.'

Ego. "'Women are indeed undefinable; strong and weak by turns, indiscreet, dissembling, they are capable of anything.' 'Without doubt,' said M. de Lille, distressed that nothing had yet been said to him, and with a familiarity which was not likely to succeed; 'Without doubt. Look—' said he. The King interrupted him. I cited some traits in support of my opinion,—as that of the woman Hachette at the Siege of Beauvais.' The King made a little excursion to Rome and to Sparta: he liked to promenade there. After half a second of silence, to please De Lille, I told the King that M. de Voltaire died in De Lille's arms. That caused the King to address some questions to him; he answered in rather too long-drawn a manner, and went away. Charles and I stayed dinner." This is day first in Potsdam.

"Here, for five hours daily, the King's encyclopedical conversation enchanted me completely. Fine arts, war, medicine, literature and religion, philosophy, ethics, history and legislation, in turns passed in review. The fine centuries of Augustus and of Louis XIV.; good society among the Romans, among the Greeks, among the French ; the chivalry of François I. ; the frankness and valour of Henry IV. ; the new-birth (renaissance) of Letters and their revolution since Leo X. ; anecdotes about the clever men of other times, and the trouble they give ; M. de Voltaire's slips ; susceptibilities of M. de Maupertuis ; Algarotti's agreeable ways ; fine wit of Jordan ; d'Argens's hypochondria, whom the King would send to bed for four-and-twenty hours by simply telling him that he looked ill ;—and, in fine, what not ? Everything, the most varied and piquant that could be said, came from him,—in a most soft tone of voice ; rather low than otherwise, and no less agreeable than were the movements of his lips, which had an inexpressible grace.

¹ February 1734, in poor Stanislaus Leczinski's second fit of Royalty: Supra, i. 54, 71.

² A.D. 1472; Burgundians storming the wall, had their flag planted; flag and flag-bearer are hurled into the ditch by Hachette and other inspired women, —with the finest results.

“ It was this, I believe, which prevented one's observing that he was, in fact, like Homer's heroes, somewhat of a talker (un peu babillard), though a sublime one. It is to their voices, their noise and gestures, that talkers often owe their reputation as such ; for certainly one could not find a greater talker than the King ; but one was delighted at his being so. Accustomed to talk to Marquis Lucchesini, in the presence of only four or five Generals who did not understand French, he compensated in this way for his hours of labour, of study, of meditation and solitude. At least, said I to myself, I must get in a word. He had just mentioned Virgil. I said :

Ego. “ ‘ What a great Poet, Sire ; but what a bad gardener ! ’

King. “ ‘ Ah, to whom do you tell that ! Have not I tried to plant, sow, till, dig, with the Georgics in my hand ? ‘ But, Monsieur,” said my man, “ You are a fool (bête), and your Book no less ; it is not in that way one goes to work.” Ah, mon Dieu, what a climate ! Would you believe it, Heaven, or the Sun, refuse me everything ? Look at my poor orange-trees, my olive-trees, lemon-trees : they are all starving.’

Ego. “ ‘ It would appear, then, nothing but laurels flourish with you, Sire.’ (The King gave me a charming look ; and to cover an inane observation by an absurd one, I added quickly) ; ‘ Besides, Sire, there are too many grénadiers’ (means, in French pomegranates as well as grenadiers,—peg of one's little joke !) ‘ in this Country ; they eat up everything ! ’ The King burst out laughing ; for it is only absurdities that cause laughter.

“ One day I had turned a plate to see of what porcelain it was. ‘ Where do you think it comes from ? ’ asked the King. Ego. “ ‘ I thought it was Saxon ; but instead of two swords’

(the Saxon mark), 'I see only one, which is well worth both of them.' King. " 'It is a sceptre.' Ego. " 'I beg your Majesty's pardon ; but it is so much like a sword that one could easily mistake it for one.' And such was really the case. This, it is known, is the mark of the Berlin china. As the King sometimes played King, and thought himself, sometimes, extremely magnificent while taking up a walking-stick or snuff-box with a few wretched little diamonds running after one another on it, I don't quite know whether he was infinitely pleased with my little allegory.

"One day, as I entered his room, he came towards me, saying, 'I tremble to announce bad news to you. I have just heard that Prince Karl of Lorraine is dying.' He looked at me to see the effect this would have ; and observing some tears escaping from my eyes, he, by gentlest transitions, changed the conversation ; talked of war, and of the Maréchal de Lacy. He asked me news about Lacy ; and said, 'That is a man of the greatest merit. In former time, Count Mercy among yourselves' (killed, while commanding in chief, at the Battle of Parma in 1733,) 'Puysegur among the French, had some notions of marches and encampments ; one sees from Hyginus's Book' (ancient Book) 'on Castramentation, that the Greeks also were much occupied with the subject : but your Maréchal surpasses the Ancients, the Moderns, and all the most famous men who have meddled with it. Thus, whenever he was your Quartermaster-General, if you will permit me to make the remark to you, I did not gain the least advantage. Recollect the two Campaigns of 1758 and 1759 ; you succeeded in everything. I often said to myself, "Shall I never get rid of that man, then ?" You yourselves got me rid of him ; and "'—(some liberal or even profuse eulogy of Lacy, who is De Ligne's friend ; which we can omit).

"Next day, the King, as soon as he saw me, came up ; saying with the most penetrated air : 'If you are to learn the loss of a man who loved you, and who did honour to mankind, it will be better that it be from some one who feels it as deeply as I do. Poor Prince Karl is no more. Others, perhaps, are made to replace him in your heart ; but few Princes will replace him with regard to the beauty of his soul and to all his virtues.' In saying this, his emotion became extreme. I said : 'Your Majesty's regrets are a consolation ; and you did not wait for his death to speak well of him. There are fine verses with reference to him in the Poem, Sur l'Art de la Guerre.¹ My emotion troubled me against my will; however, I repeated them to him.' The Man of Letters seemed to appreciate my knowing them by heart.

'Is already dead, "at Brussels, July 4th ;" Duke of Sachsen-Teschen and Wife Christine succeeded him as Joint-Governors in those parts.

King: 'His passage of the Rhine was a very fine thing;—but the poor Prince depended upon so many people! I never depended upon anybody but myself; sometimes too much so for my luck. He was badly served, not too well obeyed: neither the one nor the other ever was the case with me.—Your General Nadasti appeared to me a great General of Cavalry?' Not sharing the King's opinion on this point, I contented myself with saying, that Nadasti was very brilliant, very fine at musketry, and that he could have led his hussars to the world's end and farther (dans l'enfer), so well did he know how to animate them.

King. "'What has become of a brave Colonel who played the devil at Rossbach? Ah, it was the Marquis de Voghera, I think?—Yes, that's it; for I asked his name after the Battle.'
Ego. "'He is General of Cavalry.'

King. "'Perdi! It needed a considerable stomach for fight, to charge like your Two Regiments of Cuirassiers there, and, I believe, your Hussars also: for the Battle was lost before it began.'

Ego. "'Apropos of M. de Voghera, is your Majesty aware of a little thing he did before charging? He is a boiling, restless, ever-eager kind of man; and has something of the good old Chivalry style. Seeing that his Regiment would not arrive quick enough, he galloped ahead of it; and coming up to the Commander of the Prussian Regiment of Cavalry which he meant to attack, he saluted him as on parade; the other returned the salute; and then, Have at each other like madmen.'

King. "'A very good style it is! I should like to know that man; I would thank him for it.—Your General von Ried, then, had got the devil in him, that time at Eilenburg' (spurt of fight there, in the Meissen regions, I think in Year 1758, when the D'Ahremberg Dragoons got so cut up), 'to let those brave Dragoons, who so long bore your Name with glory, ad-

¹ "*Soutien de mes rivaux, digne appui de la reine,
Charles, d'un ennemi sourd aux cris de la haine Reçois l'éloge*" (for crossing the Rhine in 1744):

ten rather noble lines, still worth reading; as indeed the whole Poem well is, especially to soldier-students (L'Art de la Guerre, Chant vi.: Œuvres de Frédéric, x. 273).

vance between Three of my Columns?'—He had asked me the same question at the Camp of Neustadt ten years since; and in vain had I told him that it was not M. de Ried; that Ried did not command them at all; and that the fault was Maréchal Daun's, who ought not to have sent them into that Wood of Eilenburg, still less ordered them to halt there without even sending a patrol forward. The King could not bear our General von Ried, who had much displeased him as Minister at Berlin; and it was his way to put down everything to the account of people he disliked.

King. "When I think of those devils of Saxon Camps' (Summer 1760),—'they were unattackable citadels! If, at Torgau, M. de Lacy had still been Quartermaster-General, I should not have attempted to attack him. But there I saw at once the Camp was ill chosen.'

Ego. "The superior reputation of Camps sometimes causes a desire to attempt them. For instance, I ask your Majesty's pardon, but I have always thought you would at last have attempted that of Plauen, had the War continued.'

King. "Oh, no, indeed! There was no way of taking that one.'

Ego. "Doesn't your Majesty think: With a good battery on the heights of Dolschen, which commanded us; with some battalions, ranked behind each other in the Ravine, attacking a quarter of an hour before daybreak' (and so forth, at some length,—excellent for soldier-readers who know the Plauen Chasm), 'you could have flung us out of that almost impregnable Place of Refuge?'

King. "And your battery on the Windberg, which would have scourged my poor battalions, all the while, in your Ravine?'

Ego. "But, Sire, the night?'

King. "Oh, you could not miss us even by grope. That big hollow that goes from Burg, and even from Potschappel,—it would have poured like a water-spout' (or fire-spout) 'over us. You see, I am not so brave as you think.'

"The Kaiser had set out for his Interview" (First Interview, and indeed it is now more than half done, a good six weeks of it gone) "with the Czarina of Russia. That Interview the King did not like" (no wonder):—"and, to undo the good it had done us, he directly, and very unskilfully, sent the Prince Royal to Petersburg" (who had not the least success there, loutish fellow, and was openly snubbed by a Czarina gone into new courses). "His Majesty already doubted that the Court of Russia was about to escape him:—and I was dying of fear lest, in the middle of all his kindnesses, he should remember that I was an Austrian. 'What,' said I to myself, 'not a single epigram on us, or on our Master? What a change!'

"One day, at dinner, babbling Pinto said to the person sitting next him, 'This Kaiser is a great traveller; there never was one who went so far.' 'I ask your pardon, Monsieur,' said the King; 'Charles Fifth went to Africa; he gained the battle of Oran.' And, turning towards me,—who couldn't guess whether it was banter or only history,—'This time,' said he, 'the Kaiser is more fortunate than Charles Twelfth; like Charles, he entered Russia by Mohilow; but it appears to me he will arrive at Moscow.'

"The same Pinto, one day, understanding the King was at a loss whom to send as Foreign Minister somewhither, said to him: 'Why does not your Majesty think of sending Lucchesini, who is a man of much brilliancy (homme d'esprit)?' 'It is for that very reason,' answered the King, 'that I want to keep him. I had rather send you than him, or a dull fellow like Monsieur—' I forget whom, but believe it is one whom he did appoint Minister somewhere.

"M. de Lucchesini, by the charm of his conversation, brought out that of the King's. He knew what topics were agreeable to the King; and then, he knew how to listen; which is not so easy as one thinks, and which no stupid man was ever capable of. He was as agreeable to everybody as to his Majesty, by his seductive manners and by the graces of his mind. Pinto, who had nothing to risk, permitted himself everything. Says he: 'Ask the Austrian General, Sire, all he saw me do when in the service of the Kaiser.'

Ego. "'A firework at my Wedding, wasn't that it, my dear Pinto?' King (interrupting). "'Do me the honour to say whether it was successful?'

Ego. "'No, Sire; it even alarmed all my relations, who thought it a bad omen. Monsieur the Major here had struck out the idea of joining Two flaming Hearts, a very novel image of a married couple. But the groove they were to slide on, and meet, gave way: my Wife's heart went, and mine remained.'

King. "'You see, Pinto, you were not good for much to those people, any more than to me.'

Ego. "'Oh, Sire, your Majesty, since then, owes him some compensation for the sabre-cuts he had on his head.'

King. "'He gets but too much compensation. Pinto, didn't I send you yesterday some of my good Preussen honey?'

Pinto. "'Oh, surely; it was to make it known. If your Majesty could bring that into vogue, and sell it all, you would be the greatest King on earth. For your Kingdom produces only that ; but of that there is plenty.'

" 'Do you know,' said the King, one day, to me—'Do you know that the first soldiering I did was for the House of Austria ! Mon Dieu, how the time passes !'—He had a way of slowly bringing his hands together, in ejaculating these Mon-Dieus, which gave him quite a good-natured and extremely mild air. —'Do you know that I saw the glittering of the last rays of Prince Eugen's genius ?'

Ego. "' Perhaps it was at these rays that your Majesty's genius lit itself.' King. "' Eh, mon Dieu ! who could equal the Prince Eugen ?' Ego.

" 'He who excels him ;—for instance, he who could win Twelve Battles !'—He put on his modest air. I have always said, it is easy to be modest, if you are in funds. He seemed as though he had not understood me, and said :

King. "' When the cabal which, during forty years, the Prince had always had to struggle with in his Army, were plotting mischief on him, they used to take advantage of the evening time, when his spirits, brisk enough in the morning, were jaded by the fatigues of the day. It was thus they persuaded him to undertake his bad March on Mainz' (March not known to me).

Ego. "' Regarding yourself, Sire, and the Rhine Campaign, you teach me nothing. I know everything your Majesty did, and even what you said. I could relate to you your Journeys to Strasburg, to Holland, and what passed in a certain Boat. Apropos of this Rhine Campaign, one of our old Generals, whom I often set talking, as one reads an old Manuscript, has told me how astonished he was to see a young Prussian Officer, whom he did not know, answering a General of the late King, who had given out the order, Not to go a-foraging : " And I, Sir, I order you to go ; our Army needs it ; in short, I will have it so (je le veux) !—"

King. "' You look at me too much from the favourable side ! Ask these Gentlemen about my humours and my caprices ; they will tell you fine things of me.'

" We got talking of some Anecdotes which are consigned to, or concealed in, certain obscure Books. 'I have been much amused,' said I to the King, 'with the big cargo of Books, true or false, written by French Refugees, which perhaps are unknown in France itself.' (Discourses a little on this subject, though without telling us.)

King. "' Where did you pick up all these fine old Pieces !

These would amuse me on an evening ; better than the conversation of my Doctor of the Sorbonne' (one Peyrau, a wandering creature, not otherwise of the least interest to us),¹ 'whom I have here, and whom I am trying to convert.' Ego. " 'I found them all in a Bohemian Library, where I sat diverting myself for two Winters.'

King. " 'How, then ? Two Winters in Bohemia ? What the devil were you doing there ! Is it long since ?' Ego. " 'No, Sire ; only a year or two' (Potato-War time) ! 'I had retired thither to read at my ease.'—He smiled and seemed to appreciate my not mentioning the little War of 1778, and saving him any speech about it. He saw well enough that my Winter-quarters had been in Bohemia on that occasion ; and was satisfied with my reticence. Being an old sorcerer, who guessed everything, and whose tact was the finest ever known, he discovered that I did not wish to tell him I found Berlin changed since I had last been there. I took care not to remind him that I was at the capturing of it in 1760, under M. de Lacy's orders" (M. de Lacy's indeed !)—"It was for having spoken of the first capture of Berlin, by Marshal Haddick" (highly temporary as it was, and followed by Rossbach), "that the King had taken a dislike to M. de Ried.

"Apropos of the Doctor of the Sorbonne" (uninteresting Peyrau) "with whom he daily disputed, the King said to me once, 'Get me a Bishopric for him.' 'I don't think,' said I, 'that my recommendation, or that of your Majesty, could be useful to him with us.' 'Ah, truly no !' said the King : 'Well, I will write to the Czarina of Russia for this poor devil ; he does begin to bore me. He holds out as Jansenist, forsooth. Mon Dieu, what blockheads the present Jansenists are ! But France should not have extinguished that nursery (foyer) of their genius, that Port Royal, extravagant as it was. Indeed, one ought to destroy nothing ! Why have they destroyed, too, the Depositaries of the graces of Rome and of Athens, those excellent Professors of the Humanities, and perhaps of Humanity, the Ex-Jesuit Fathers ? Education will be the loser by it. But as my Brothers the Kings, most Catholic, most Christian, most Faithful and Apostolic, have tumbled them out, I, most Heretical, pick up as many as I can ; and perhaps, one day, I shall be courted for the sake of them by those who want some. I preserve the breed : I said, counting my stock the other day, "A Rector like you, my Father, I could easily sell for 300 thalers; you, Reverend Father Provincial, for 600; and so the rest, in proportion." When one is not rich, one makes speculations.'

¹ Nicolai, Anekdoten, ii. 183 n.

"From want of memory, and of opportunities to see oftener and longer the Greatest Man that ever existed" (Oh, mon Prince!), "I am obliged to stop. There is not a word in all this but was his own; and those who have seen him will recognise his manner. All I want is, to make him known to those who have not had the happiness to see him. His eyes are too hard in the Portraits: by work in the Cabinet, and the hardships of War, they had become intense, and of piercing quality; but they softened finely in hearing, or telling, some trait of nobleness or sensibility. Till his death, and but quite shortly before it,—notwithstanding many levities which he knew I had allowed myself, both in speaking and writing, and which he surely attributed only to my duty as opposed to my interest,—he deigned to honour me with marks of his remembrance; and has often commissioned his Ministers, at Paris and at Vienna, to assure me of his good will.

"I no longer believe in earthquakes and eclipses at Caesar's death, since there has been nothing of such at that of Friedrich the Great. I know not, Sire, whether great phenomena of Nature will announce the day when you shall cease to reign" (great phenomena must be very idle if they do, your Highness!)—"but it is a phenomenon in the world, that of a King who rules a Republic by making himself obeyed and respected for his own sake, as much as by his rights" (Hear, hear).¹

Prince de Ligne thereupon hurries off for Petersburg, and the final Section of his Kaiser's Visit. An errand of his own, too, the Prince had,—about his new Daughter-in-law Massalska, and claims of extensive Polish Properties belonging to her. He was the charm of Petersburg and the Czarina; but of the Massalska Properties could retrieve nothing whatever. The munificent Czarina gave him "a beautiful Territory in the Crim," instead; and invited him to come and see it with her, on his Kaiser's next Visit (1787, the aquatic Visit and the highly scenic). Which it is well known the Prince did; and has put on record, in his pleasant, not untrue, though vague, high-coloured and fantastic way,—if it or he at all concerned us farther.

¹ Prince de Ligne, Mémoires et Mélanges, i. 22-40.

How General von der Marwitz, in early Boyhood, saw Friedrich the Great Three Times (1782–5).

General von der Marwitz, who died not many years ago, is of the old Marwitz kindred, several of whom we have known for their rugged honesties, genialities, and peculiar ways. This General, it appears, had left a kind of Autobiography; which friends of his thought might be useful to the Prussian Public, after those Radical distractions which burst out in 1848 and onwards; and a first Volume of the Marwitz Posthumous Papers was printed accordingly,¹—whether any more I have not heard; though I found this first Volume an excellent substantial bit of reading; and the Author a fine old Prussian Gentleman, very analogous in his structure to the fine old English ditto; who showed me the per contra side of this and the other much-celebrated modern Prussian person and thing, Prince Hardenberg, Johannes von Müller, and the like;—and yielded more especially the following Three Reminiscences of Friedrich, beautiful little Pictures, bathed in morning light, and evidently true to the life:

1°. June 1782 or 1783. “The first time I saw him was in 1782 (or it might be 1783, in my sixth year),” middle of June, whichever year, “as he was returning from his Annual Review in Preussen.” (West-Preussen, never revisits the Königsberg region), “and stopped to change horses at Dolgelin.” Dolgelin is in Mülrose Country, westward of Frankfurt-on-Oder; our Marwitz Schloss not far from it. “I had been sent with Mamsell Bénézet,” my French Governess; “and, along with the Clergyman of Dolgelin, we waited for the King.

“The King, on his journeys, generally preferred, whether at midday or for the night, to halt in some Country place, and at the Parsonages most of all; probably because he was quieter there than in the Towns. To the Clergyman this was always a piece of luck ; not only because, if he pleased the King, he might chance to get promoted ; but because he was sure of profitable payment, at any rate ; the King always ordering 50 thalers " (say 10 guineas) " for his noon-halt, and for his night's-lodging 100. The little that the King ate was paid for over and above. It is true, his Suite expected to be well treated ; but this consisted only of one or two individuals. Now, the King had been wont almost always, on these journeys homewards, to pass the last night of his expedition with the Clergyman of Dolgelin ; and had done so last year, with this present one who was then just installed ; with him, as with his predecessor, the King had talked kindly, and the 100 thalers were duly remembered. Our good Parson flattered himself, therefore, that this time too the same would happen ; and he had made all preparations accordingly.

¹ Nachlass des General von der Marwitz (Berlin, 1852), 1 vol. 8vo.

" So we waited there, and a crowd of people with us. The team of horses stood all ready (peasants' horses, poor little cats of things, but the best that could be picked, for there were then no post-horses that could run fast) ;—the country-fellows that were to ride postillion all decked, and ten head of horses for the King's coach : wheelers, four, which the coachman drove from his box ; then two successive pairs before, on each pair a postillion-peasant ; and upon the third pair, foremost of all, the King's outriders were to go.

" And now, at last, came the Feldjäger " (Chacer, Hunting-groom), " with his big whip, on a peasant's horse, a peasant with him as attendant. All blazing with heat, he dismounted ; said, The King would be here in five minutes ; looked at the relays, and the fellows with the water-buckets, who were to splash the wheels ; gulped down a quart of beer ; and so, his saddle in the interim having been fixed on another horse, sprang up again, and off at a gallop. The King, then, was not to stay in Dolgelin ! Soon came the Page, mounted in like style ; a youth of 17 or 18 ; utterly exhausted ; had to be lifted down from his horse, and again helped upon the fresh one, being scarcely able to stand ;—and close on the rear of him arrived the King. He was sitting alone in an old-fashioned glass-coach, what they call a vis-à-vis (a narrow carriage, two seats fore and aft, and on each of them room for only one person). The coach was very long, like all the old carriages of that time ; between the driver's box and the body of the coach was a space of at least four feet ; the body itself was of pear-shape, peaked below and bellied-out above ; hung on straps, with rolled knuckles " (winden), " did not rest on springs; two beams, connecting fore-wheels and hind, ran not under the body of the coach, but along the sides of it, the hind-wheels following with a goodly interval.

"The carriage drew up; and the King said to his coachman" (the far-famed Pfund): "'Is this Dolgelin?' 'Yes, your Majesty!'—'I stay here.' 'No,' said Pfund; 'the sun is not down yet. We can get on very well to Müncheberg to-night' (ten miles ahead, and a Town too, perfidious Pfund!)—'and then to-morrow we are much earlier in Potsdam.' 'Na, Hm,—well, if it must be so!'

"And therewith they set to changing horses. The peasants who were standing far off, quite silent, with reverently bared heads, came softly nearer, and looked eagerly at the King. An old Gingerbread-woman (Semmelfrau) of Lebbenichen" (always knew her afterwards) "took me in her arm, and held me aloft close to the coach-window. I was now at farthest an ell from the King; and I felt as if I were looking in the face of God Almighty (es war mir als ob ich den lieben Gott ansähe). He was gazing steadily out before him, into the glowing West, through the front window. He had on an old three-cornered regimental hat, and had put the hindward straight flap of it foremost, undoing the loop, so that this flap hung down in front, and screened him from the sun. The hat-strings (Hut-cordons," trimmings of silver or gold cord) "had got torn loose, and were fluttering about on this down-hanging front flap; the white feather in the hat was tattered and dirty; the plain blue uniform, with red cuffs, red collar, and gold shoulder-bands" (epaulettes without bush at the end), "was old and dusty, the yellow waistcoat covered with snuff; for the rest, he had black-velvet breeches" (and, of course, the perpetual boots, of which he would allow no polishing or blacking, still less any change for new ones while they would hang together). "I thought always he would speak to me. The old woman could not long hold me up; and so she set me down again. Then the King looked at the Clergyman, beckoned him near, and asked, Whose child it was? 'Herr von Marwitz of Friedersdorf's.'—'Is that the General?' 'No, the Chamberlain.' The King made no answer: he could not bear Chamberlains, whom he considered as idle fellows. The new horses were yoked; away they went. All day the peasants had been talking of the King, how he would bring this and that into order, and pull everybody over the coals who was not agreeable to them.

"Afterwards it turned out that all Clergymen were in the habit of giving 10 thalers to the coachman Pfund, when the King lodged with them : the former Clergyman of Dolgelin had regularly done it ; but the new one, knowing nothing of the custom, had omitted it last year ; and that was the reason why the fellow had so pushed along all day that he could pass Dolgelin before sunset, and get his ten thalers in Müncheberg from the Bürgermeister there.

2°. January 1785. "The second time I saw the King was at the Carnival of Berlin in 1785. I had gone with my Tutor to a Cousin of mine who was a Hofdame (Dame de Cour) to the Princess Henri, and lived accordingly in the Prince-Henri Palace,—which is now, in our days, become the University ;—her apartments were in the third story, and looked out into the garden. As we were ascending the great stairs, there came dashing past us a little old man with staring eyes, jumping down three steps at a time. My Tutor said, in astonishment, 'That is Prince Henri !' We now stept into a window of the first story, and looked out to see what the little man had meant by those swift boundings of his. And lo, there came the King in his carriage to visit him.

"Friedrich the Second never drove in Potsdam, except when on journeys, but constantly rode. He seemed to think it a disgrace and unworthy of a Soldier, to go in a carriage : thus, when in the last Autumn of his life (this very 1785) he was so unwell in the windy Sans-Souci (where there were no stoves, but only hearth-fires), that it became necessary to remove to the Schloss in Potsdam, he could not determine to drive thither, but kept hopping from day to day for so much improvement as might allow him to ride. As no improvement came, and the weather grew ever colder, he at length decided to go over under cloud of darkness, in a sedan-chair, that nobody might notice him. So likewise during the Reviews at Berlin or Charlottenburg he appeared always on horseback : but during the Carnival in Berlin, where he usually stayed four weeks, he drove, and this always in Royal pomp,—thus :

"Ahead went eight runners with their staves, plumed caps and runner-aprons" (Läufer-schürze, whatever these are), "in two rows. As these runners were never used for anything except this show, the office was a kind of post for Invalids of the Lifeguard. A consequence of which was, that the King always had to go at a slow pace. His courses, however, were no other than from the Schloss to the Opera twice a week ; and during his whole residence, one or two times to Prince Henri and the Princess Amelia" (once always, too, to dine with his Wife, to whom he did not speak one word, but merely bowed at beginning and ending!) "After this the runners rested again for a year. Behind them came the Royal Carriage, with a team of eight; eight windows round it; the horses with old-fashioned harness, and plumes on their heads. Coachman and outriders all in the then Royal livery,—blue; the collar, cuffs, pockets, and all seams, trimmed with a stripe of red cloth, and this bound on both sides with small gold-cord; the general effect of which was very good. In the four boots (Nebentrillen) of the coach stood four Pages, red with gold, in silk stockings, feather-hats (crown all covered with feathers), but not having plumes;—the valet's boot behind, empty; and to the rear of it, down below, where one mounts to the valet's boot" (Bedienten-tritt, what is now become foot-board), "stood a groom (Stallknecht). Thus came the King, moving slowly along; and entered through the portal of the Palace. We looked down from the window in the stairs. Prince Henri stood at the carriage-door; the pages opened it, the King stepped out, saluted his Brother, took him by the hand, walked upstairs with him, and thus the two passed near us (we retiring upstairs to the second story), and went into the Apartment, where now Students run leaping about.

3°. May 23d, 1785. "The third time I saw him was that same year, at Berlin still, as he returned home from the Review.¹ My Tutor had gone with me for that end to the Halle Gate, for we already knew that on that day he always visited his Sister, Princess Amelia. He came riding on a big white horse,—no doubt old Condé, who, twenty years after this, still got his free-board in the Ecole Vétérinaire; for since the Bavarian War (1778), Friedrich hardly ever rode any other horse. His dress was the same as formerly at Dolgelin, on the journey; only that the hat was in a little better condition, properly looped up, and with the peak (but not with the long peak, as is now the fashion, set in front, in due military style. Behind him were a guard of Generals, then the Adjutants, and finally the grooms of the party. The whole 'Rondeel' (now Belle-Alliance Platz) and the Wilhelms-Strasse were crammed full of people; all windows crowded, all heads bare, everywhere the deepest silence; and on all countenances an expression of reverence and confidence, as towards the just steersman of all our destinies. The King rode quite alone in front, and saluted people, continually taking off his hat. In doing which he observed a very marked gradation, according as the onlookers bowing to him from the windows seemed to deserve. At one time he lifted the hat a very little; at another he took it from his head, and held it an instant beside the same; at another he sunk it as far as the elbow. But these motions lasted continually; and no sooner had he put on his hat, than he saw other people, and again took it off. From the Halle Gate to the Koch-Strasse he certainly took off his hat 200 times.

¹ "May 21st-23d" (Rödenbeck, iii. 327).

"Through this reverent silence there sounded only the trampling of the horses, and the shouting of the Berlin street-boys, who went jumping before him, capering with joy, and flung up their hats into the air, or skipped along close by him, wiping the dust from his boots. I and my Tutor had gained so much room that we could run alongside of him, hat in hand, among the boys.—You see the difference between then and now. Who was it that then made the noise? Who maintained a dignified demeanour?—Who is it that bawls and bellows now?" (Nobilities ought to be noble, thinks this old Marwitz, in their reverence to Nobleness. If Nobilities themselves become Washed Populaces in a manner, what are we to say?) "And what value can you put on such bellowing?"

"Arrived at the Princess Amelia's Palace (which, lying in the Wilhelms-Strasse, fronts also into the Koch-Strasse), the crowd grew still denser, for they expected him there: the fore-court was jammed full; yet in the middle, without the presence of any police, there was open space left for him and his attendants. He turned into the Court; the gate-leaves went back; and the aged lame Princess, leaning on two Ladies, the Oberhofmeisterinn (Chief Lady) behind her, came hitching down the flat steps to meet him. So soon as he perceived her, he put his horse to the gallop, pulled up, sprang rapidly down, took off his hat (which he now, however, held quite low at the full length of his arm), embraced her, gave her his arm, and again led her up the steps. The gate-leaves went to; all had vanished, and the multitude still stood, with bared head, in silence, all eyes turned to the spot where he had disappeared; and so it lasted awhile, till each gathered himself and peacefully went his way.

"And yet there had nothing happened! No pomp, no fireworks, no cannon-shot, no drumming and fife, no music, no event that had occurred. No, nothing but an old man of 73, ill-dressed, all dusty, was returning from his day's work. But everybody knew that this old man was toiling also for him ; that he had set his whole life on that labour, and for five-and-forty years had not given it the slip one day ! Everyone saw, moreover, the fruits of this old man's labour, near and far, and everywhere around ; and to look on the old man himself awakened reverence, admiration, pride, confidence,—in short, all the nobler feelings of man.”¹

This was May 21st, 1785 ; I think, the last time Berlin saw its King in that public manner, riding through the streets. The Fürstenbund Affair is now, secretly, in a very lively state, at Berlin and over Germany at large ; and comes to completion in a couple of months hence,—as shall be noticed farther on.

General Bouillé, home from his West-Indian Exploits, visits Friedrich (August 5–11th, 1784).

In these last years of his life, Friedrich had many French of distinction visiting him. In 1782, the Abbé Raynal (whom, except for his power of face, he admired little) ;² in 1786, Mirabeau (whose personal qualities seem to have pleased him) ;—but chiefly, in the interval between these two, various Military Frenchmen, now home with their laurels from the American War, coming about his Reviews : eager to see the Great Man, and be seen by him. Lafayette, Ségur, and many others came ; of whom the one interesting to us is Marquis de Bouillé : already known for his swift sharp operation on the English Leeward Islands ; and memorable afterwards to all the world for his presidency in the Flight to Varennes of poor Louis XVI. and his Queen, in 1791 ; which was by no means so successful. “The brave Bouillé,” as we called him long since, when writing of that latter operation, elsewhere Bouillé left Mémoires of his own ; which speak of Friedrich : in the Vie de Bouillé, published recently by friendly hands,³ there is Summary given of all that his Papers say on Friedrich; this, in still briefer shape, but unchanged otherwise, readers shall now see.

¹ Nachlass des General von der Marwitz, i. 15–20.

² Rödenbeck, iii. 277 n.

³ René de Bouillé, Essai sur la Vie du Marquis de Bouillé (Paris, 1853).

"In July 1784, Marquis de Bouillé (lately returned from a visit to England), desirous to see the Prussian Army, and to approach the great Friedrich while it was yet time, travelled by way of Holland to Berlin, through Potsdam" (no date; got to Berlin "August 6th;"¹ so that we can guess "August 5th" for his Potsdam day). "Saw, at Sans-Souci, in the vestibule, a bronze bust of Charles XII.; in the dining-room, among other pictures, a Portrait of the Châteauroux, Louis XV.'s first Mistress. In the King's bedroom, simple camp-bed, coverlet of crimson taffetas,—rather dirty, as well as the other furniture, on account of the dogs. Many books lying about: Cicero, Tacitus, Titus Livius" (in French Translations). "On a chair, Portrait of Kaiser Joseph II.; same in King's Apartments in Berlin Schloss, also in the Potsdam new Palace: 'C'est un jeune homme que je ne dois pas perdre de vue.'"

"King entering, took off his hat, saluting the Marquis, whom a Chamberlain called Goertz presented" (no Chamberlain; a Lieutenant-General, and much about the King; his Brother, the Weimar Goertz, is gone as Prussian Minister to Petersburg some time ago). "King talked about the War des Isles" (my West-India War), "and about England. 'They' (the English) 'are like sick people who have had a fever; and don't know how ill they have been, till the fit is over.' Fox he treated as a noisy fellow (de brouillon); but expressed admiration of young Pitt. 'The coolness with which he can stand being not only contradicted, but ridiculed and insulted, cela parait au-dessus de la patience humaine.' King closed the conversation by saying he would be glad to see me in Silesia, whither he was just about to go for Reviews" (will go in ten days, August 15th).

"Friedrich was 72," last January 24th. "His physiognomy, dress, appearance, are much what the numerous well-known Portraits represent him. At Court, and on great Ceremonies, he appears sometimes in black-coloured stockings rolled over the knee, and rose-coloured or sky-blue coat (bleu céleste). He is fond of these colours, as his furniture too shows. The Marquis dined with the Prince of Prussia, without previous presentation; so simple are the manners of this Soldier Court. The Heir Presumptive lodges at a brewer's house, and in a very mean way; is not allowed to sleep from home without permission from the King."

¹ Rödénbeck, iii. 809.

Bouillé set out for Silesia, 11th August; was at Neisse in good time. "Went, at 5 a.m." (date is August 19th, Review lasts till 24th),¹ "to see the King mount. All the Generals, Prince of Prussia among them, waited in the street; outside of a very simple House, where the King lodged. After waiting half an hour, his Majesty appeared; saluted very graciously, without uttering a word. This was one of his special Reviews" (that was it!). "He rode (marchait) generally alone, in utter silence; it was then that he had his regard terrible, and his features took the impress of severity, to say no more." (Is displeased with the Review, I doubt, though Bouillé saw nothing amiss;—and merely tells us farther): "At the Reviews the King inspects strictly one regiment after another: it is he that selects the very Corporals and Sergeants, much more the Upper Officers; nominating for vacancies what Cadets are to fill them,—all of whom are Nobles." Yes, with rare exceptions, all. Friedrich, democratic as his temper was, is very strict on this point; "because," says he repeatedly, "Nobles have honour; a Noble that misbehaves, or flinches in the moment of crisis, can find no refuge in his own class; whereas a man of lower birth always can in his." Bouillé continues:

"After Review, dined with his Majesty. Just before dinner he gave to the assembled Generals the 'Order' for tomorrow's Manœuvres" (as we saw in Conway's case, ten years ago). "This lasted about a quarter of an hour; King then saluted everybody, taking off très-affectueusement his hat, which he immediately put on again. Had now his affable mien, and was most polite to the strangers present. Conversation turned on the Wars of Louis XIV.; then on English-American War,—King always blaming the English, whom he does not like. Dinner lasted three hours. His Majesty said more than once to me" (in ill-humour, I should almost guess, and wishful to hide it): 'Complete freedom here, as if we were in our Tavern (Ici, toute liberté, Monsieur, comme si nous étions au cabaret)!' On the morrow," August 20th, "dined again. King talked of France; of Cardinal Richelieu, whose principles of administration he praised. Repeated several times, that 'he did not think the French Nation fit for Free

¹ Rôdenbeck, lii. 810.

² Œuvres de Frédéric (more than once).

Government!’ At the Reviews, Friedrich did not himself command; but prescribed, and followed the movements; criticised, reprimanded, and so forth. On horseback six hours together, without seeming fatigued.

“King left for Breslau, 25th August” (24th, if it were of moment). “Bouillé followed thither; dined again. Besides Officers, there were present several Polish Princes, the Bishop of the Diocese, and the Abbot Bastiani. King made pleasantries about religion” (pity, that); “Bastiani not slow with repartees,” of a defensive kind. “King told me, on one occasion, ‘Would you believe it? I have just been putting my poor Jesuits’ finances into order. They understand nothing of such things, ces bons hommes. They are useful to me in forming my Catholic Clergy. I have arranged it with his Holiness the Pope, who is a friend of mine, and behaves very well to me.’ Pointing from the window to the Convent of Capuchins, ‘Those fellows trouble me a little with their bell-ringing. They offered to stop it at night, for my sake: but I declined. One must leave everybody to his trade; theirs is to pray, and I should have been sorry to deprive them of their chimes (carillon).’

“The 20,000 troops, assembled at Breslau, did not gain the King’s approval,”—far from it, alas, as we shall all see! “To some Chiefs of Corps he said, ‘Vous ressemblez plus à des tailleurs qu’à des militaires (You are more like tailors than soldiers)!’ He cashiered several, and even sent one Major-General to prison for six weeks.” That of the tailors, and Major-General Erlach clapt in prison, is too true;—nor is that the saddest part of the affair to us. “Bouillé was bound now on an excursion to Prague, to a Camp of the Kaiser’s there. ‘Mind,’ said the King, alluding to Bouillé’s blue uniform,—‘mind, in the Country you are going to, they don’t like the blue coats; and your Queen has even preserved the family repugnance, for she does not like them either.’”

“September 5th, 1784, Bouillé arrived at Prague. Austrian Manœuvres are very different; troops, though more splendidly dressed, contrast unfavourably with Prussians;—unfavourably, though the strict King was so dissatisfied. Kaiser Joseph, speaking of Friedrich, always admiringly calls him ‘Le Roi.’ Joseph a great questioner, and answers his own questions. His tone brusque et décidé. Dinner lasted one hour.

“Returned to Potsdam to assist at the Autumn Reviews,”

¹ Essai sur la Vie du Marquis de Bouillé, pp. 134–140.

21st-23d September 1784' "Dinner very splendid, magnificently served; twelve handsome Pages, in blue or rose-coloured velvet waited on the Guests,—these being forty old rude Warriors booted and spurred. King spoke of the French approvingly: 'But,' added he, 'the Court spoils everything. Those Court-fellows, with their red heels and delicate nerves, make very bad soldiers. Saxe often told me, In his Flanders Campaigns, the Courtiers gave him more trouble than did Cumberland.' Talked of Maréchal Richelieu; of Louis XIV., whose apology he skilfully made. Blamed, however, the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes. Great attachment of the 'Protestant Refugees' to France and its King. 'Would you believe it?' said he: 'Under Louis XIV. they and their families used to assemble on the day of St. Louis, to celebrate the fête of the King who persecuted them!' Expressed pity for Louis XV., and praised his good-nature.

"Friedrich, in his conversation, showed a modesty which seemed a little affected. 'S'il m'est permis d'avoir une opinion,' a common expression of his;—said 'opinion' on most things, on Medicine among others, being always excellent. Thinks French Literature surpasses that of the Ancients. Small opinion of English Literature: turned Shakspeare into ridicule; and made also bitter fun of German Letters,—their Language barbarous, their Authors without genius." * *

"I asked, and received permission from the King, to bring my Son to be admitted in his Académie des Gentilshommes; an exceptional favour. On parting, the King said to me: 'I hope you will return to me Maréchal de France; it is what I should like; and your Nation couldn't do better, nobody being in a state to render it greater services.'"

Bouillé will reappear for an instant next year. Meanwhile he returns to France, "first days of October 1784," where he finds Prince Henri; who is on Visit there for three months past. A shining event in Prince Henri's Life; and a profitable; poor King Louis,—what was very welcome in Henri's state of finance,—having, in a delicate kingly way, insinuated into him a "Gift of 400,000 francs" (16,000*l.*):—partly by way of retaining-fee for France; "may turn to excellent account," think some, "when a certain Nephew comes to reign yonder, as he soon must."

¹ Rödénbeck, iii. 313.

² "2d July 1784," Prince Henri had gone (Rödénbeck, iii. 309).

³ Anonymous (De la Roche-Aymon), Vie privée, politique et militaire du Prince Henri, Frère de Frédéric II. (a poor, vague and uninformative, though authentic little Book: Paris, 1809), pp. 219-239.

What Bouillé heard about the Silesian Reviews is perfectly true; and only a part of the truth. Here, to the person chiefly responsible, is an indignant Letter of the King's: to a notable degree, full of settled wrath against one who is otherwise a dear old Friend:

Friedrich to Lieutenant-General Tauentzien, Infantry Inspector-General of Silesia.

"Potsdam, 7th September 1784.

"My dear General von Tauentzien,—While in Silesia I mentioned to you, and will now repeat in writing, That my Army in Silesia was at no time so bad as at present. Were I to make Shoemakers or Tailors into Generals, the Regiments could not be worse. Regiment Thadden is not fit to be the most insignificant militia battalion of a Prussian Army; Rothkirch and Schwarz"—bad as possible all of them—"of Erlach, the men are so spoiled by smuggling" (sad industry, instead of drilling), "they have no resemblance to Soldiers; Keller is like a heap of undrilled boors; Hager has a miserable Commander; and your own Regiment is very mediocre. Only with Graf von Anhalt" (in spite of his head), "with Wendessen and Markgraf Heinrich, could I be content. See you, that is the state I found the Regiments in, one after one. I will now speak of their Manœuvring" (in our Mimic Battles on the late occasion):

"Schwartz, at Neisse, made the unpardonable mistake of not sufficiently besetting the Height on the Left Wing; had it been serious, the Battle had been lost. At Breslau, Erlach" (who is a Major-General, forsooth!), "instead of covering the Army by seizing the Heights, marched off with his Division straight as a row of cabbages into that Defile; whereby, had it been earnest, the enemy's Cavalry would have cut down our Infantry, and the Fight was gone.

"It is not my purpose to lose Battles by the base conduct (lâcheté) of my Generals: wherefore I hereby appoint, That you, next year, if I be alive, assemble the Army between Breslau and Ohlau; and for four days before I arrive in your Camp, carefully manœuvre with the ignorant Generals, and teach them what their duty is. Regiment Von Arnim and Garrison-Regiment Von Kanitz are to act the Enemy : and whoever does not then fulfil his duty shall go to Court-Martial,—for I should think it a shame of any Country (jeden Puissance) to keep such people, who trouble themselves so little about their business. Erlach sits four weeks longer in arrest" (to have six weeks of it in full). "And you have to make known this my present Declared Will to your whole Inspection.—F."¹

What a peppering is the excellent old Taubentzien getting ! Here is a case for Kaltenborn, and the sympathies of Opposition people. But, alas, this King knows that Armies are not to be kept at the working point on cheaper terms,—though some have tried it, by grog, by sweet-meats, sweet-speeches, and found it in the end come horribly dearer ! One thing is certain : the Silesian Reviews, next Year, if this King be alive, will be a terrible matter ; and Military Gentlemen had better look to themselves in time ! Kaltenborn's sympathy will help little ; nothing but knowing one's duty, and visibly and indisputably doing it, will the least avail.

Just in the days when Bouillé left him for France, Friedrich ("October 1784") had conceived the notion of some general Confederation, or Combination in the Reich, to resist the continual Encroachments of Austria ; which of late are becoming more rampant than ever. Thus, in the last year, especially within the last six months, a poor Bishop of Passau, quasi-Bavarian, or in theory Sovereign Bishop of the Reich, is getting himself pulled to pieces (Diocese torn asunder, and masses of it forcibly sewed-on to their new "Bishopric of Vienna"), in the most tragic manner, in spite of express Treaties, and of all the outcries the poor man and the Holy Father himself can make against it.² To this of Passau, and to the much of Panis-Briefe and the like which had preceded, Friedrich, though studiously saying almost nothing, had been paying the utmost of attention :—part of Prince Henri's errand to France is thought to have been, to take soundings on those matters (on which France proves altogether willing, if able) ; and now, in the general emotion about Passau, Friedrich jots down in a Note to Hertzberg the above idea ; with order to put it into form a little, and consult about it in the Reich with parties interested. Hertzberg took the thing up with zeal ; instructed the Prussian Envoys to inquire, cautiously, everywhere ; fancied he did find willingness in the Courts of the Reich, in Hanover especially : in a word, got his various irons into the fire ;—and had not proceeded far, when there rose another case of Austrian Encroachment, which eclipsed all the preceding ; and speedily brought Hertzberg's irons to the welding-point. Too brief we cannot be in this matter ; here are the dates, mostly from Dohm :

¹ Rödenbeck, iii. 811.

² Dohm (Denkwürdigkeiten, iii. 48,—Geschichte der letzten Periode Friedrichs des Zweiten) gives ample particulars. Dohm's first 3 volumes call themselves "History of Friedrich's last Period, 1778-1786 ;" and are full of Bavarian War, 3d vol. mostly of Fürstenbund ;—all in a candid, authentic, but watery and rather wearisome way.

Newyears-Day 1785, on or about that day, Romanzow, Son of our old Colberg and Anti-Turk friend, who is Russian "Minister in the Ober-Rheinish Circle," appears at the little Court of Zweibrück, with a most sudden and astounding message to the Duke there :

"Important Bargain agreed upon between your Kaiser and his Highness of the Pfalz and Baiern ; am commanded by my Sovereign Lady, on behalf of her friend the Kaiser, to make it known to you. Baiern all and whole made over to Austria ; in return for which the now Kur-Baiern gets the Austrian Netherlands (Citadels of Limburg and Luxemburg alone excepted) ; and is a King henceforth, "King of Burgundy" to be the Title, he and his fortunate Successors for all time coming. To your fortunate self, in acknowledgment of your immediate consent, Austria offers the free-gift of 100,000*l.*, and to your Brother Max of 50,000*l.* ; Kur-Baiern, for his loyal conduct, is to have 150,000*l.* ; and to all of you, if handsome, Austria will be handsome generally. For the rest, the thing is already settled ; and your refusal will not hinder it from going forward. I request to know, within eight days, what your Highness's determination is !"

His poor Highness, thunderstruck as may be imagined, asks : "But—but—What would your Excellency advise me?" "Haven't the least advice," answers his Excellency : "will wait at Frankfurt-on-Mayn, for eight days, what your Highness's resolution is ; hoping it may be a wise one ;—and have the honour at present to say Good-morning." Sudden, like a thunderbolt in winter, the whole phenomenon. This, or January 3d, when Friedrich, by Express from Zweibrück, first heard of this, may be considered as birthday of a Fürstenbund now no longer hypothetic, but certain to become actual.

Zweibrück naturally shot off expresses : to Petersburg (no answer ever) ; to Berlin (with answer on the instant) ;—and in less than eight days, poor Zweibrück, such the intelligence from Berlin, was in a condition to write to Frankfurt : "Excellency, No ; I do not consent, nor ever will." For King Friedrich is broad-awake again ;—and Hertzberg's smithy-fires, we may conceive how the winds rose upon these, and brought matters to a welding heat !—

The Czarina,—on Friedrich's urgent remonstrance, "What is this, great Madam ? To your old Ally, and from the Guaranty and Author of the Peace of Teschen !"—had speedily answered : "Far from my thoughts to violate the Peace of Teschen ; very far : I fancied this was an advantageous exchange, advantageous to Zweibrück especially ; but since Zweibrück thinks otherwise, of course there is end." "Of course ;"—though my Romanzow did talk differently ; and the forge-fires of a certain person are getting blown at a mighty rate ! Hertzberg's operation was conducted at first with the greatest secrecy ; but his Envoys were busy in all likely places, his Proposal finding singular consideration ; acceptance, here, there,— "A very mild and safe-looking Project, most mild in tone surely !"—and it soon came to Kaunitz's ear ; most unwelcome to the new Kingdom of Burgundy and him !

Thrice over, in the months ensuing (April 13th, May 11th, June 23d), in the shape of a "Circular to all Austrian Ambassadors,"¹ Kaunitz lifted up his voice in severe dehortation, the tone of him waxing more and more indignant, and at last snuffing almost tremulous quite into alt, "against the calumnies and malices of some persons, misinterpreters of a most just Kaiser and his actions." But as the Czarina, meanwhile, declared to the Reich at large, that she held, and would ever hold, the Peace of Teschen a thing sacred, and this or any Kingdom of Burgundy, or change of the Reich's Laws, impossible,—the Kaunitz clangours availed nothing; and Fürstenbund privately, but at a mighty pace, went forward. And, June 29th, 1785, after much labour, secret but effective, on the part of Dohm and others, Three Plenipotentiaries, the Prussian, the Saxon, the Hanoverian ("excellent method to have only the principal Three!") met, still very privately, at Berlin; and labouring their best, had, in about four weeks, a Fürstenbund Covenant complete; signed, July 23d, by these Three,—to whom all others that approved append themselves. As an effective respectable number, Brunswick, Hessen, Mainz and others, did,—had not, indeed, the first Three themselves, especially as Hanover meant England withal, been themselves moderately sufficient.—Here, before the date quite pass, are two Clippings which may be worth their room:

¹ Dohm, iii. 64, 68.

Bouillé's Second Visit (Spring 1785). May 10th, 1785,—just while Fürstenbund, so privately, was in the birth-throes,—“Marquis de Bouillé had again come to Berlin, to place his eldest Son in the Académie des Gentilhommes; where the young man stayed two years. Was at Potsdam,” May 13th–16th: “well-received; dined at Sans-Souci. Informed the King of the Duc de Choiseul's death” (Paris, May 8th). “King, shaking his head, ‘Il n'y a pas grand mal.’ Seems piqued at the Queen of France, who had not shown much attention to Prince Henri. Spoke of Peter the Great, ‘whose many high qualities were darkened by singular cruelty.’ When at Berlin, going on foot, as his custom was, unattended, to call on King Friedrich Wilhelm, the people in the streets crowded much about him. ‘Brother,’ said he to the King, ‘your subjects are deficient in respect; order one or two of them to be hanged; it will restrain the others!’ During the same visit, one day, at Charlottenburg, the Czar, after dinner, stepped out on a balcony which looked into the Gardens. Seeing many people assembled below, he gnashed his teeth (grinça des dents), and began giving signs of frenzy. Shifty little Catharine, who was with him, requested that a certain person down among the crowd, who had a yellow wig, should be at once put away, or something bad would happen. This done, the Czar became quiet again. The Czarina added, he was subject to such attacks of frenzy; and that, when she saw it, she would scratch his head, which moderated him. Voilà Monsieur,' concluded the King, addressing me: 'Voilà les grands hommes !'

¹ List of them in Dohm.

² Rüdtenbeck, iii. 325.

"Bouillé spent a fortnight at Rheinsberg, with Prince Henri; who represents his Brother as impatient, restless, envious, suspicious, even timid; of an ill-regulated imagination,"—nothing like so wise as some of us! "Is too apprehensive of war; which may very likely bring it on. On the least alarm, he assembles troops at the frontier; Joseph does the like; and so"—A notably splenetic little Henri; head of an Opposition Party which has had to hold its tongue. Cherishes in the silent depths of him an almost ghastly indignation against his Brother on some points. "Bouillé returned to Paris, June 1785."

Comte de Ségur (on the road to Petersburg as French Minister) has seen Friedrich: January 29th, 1785. Ségur says: "With lively curiosity I gazed at this man; there as he stood, great in genius, small in stature; stooping, and as it were bent down under the weight of his laurels and of his long toils. His blue coat, old and worn like his body; his long boots coming up above the knee; his waistcoat covered with snuff, formed an odd but imposing whole. By the fire of his eyes, you recognised that in essentials he had not grown old. Though bearing himself like an invalid, you felt that he could strike like a young soldier; in his small figure, you discerned a spirit greater than any other man's." * *

"If used at all to intercourse with the great world, and possessed of any elevation of mind, you have no embarrassment in speaking to a King; but to a Great Man you present yourself not without fear. Friedrich, in his private sphere, was of sufficiently unequal humour; wayward, wilful; open to prejudices; indulged in mockery, often enough epigrammatic upon the French;—agreeable in a high degree to strangers whom he pleased to favour; but bitterly piquant for those he was prepossessed against, or who, without knowing it, had ill chosen the hour of approaching him. To me, luck was kind in all these points;" my Interview delightful, but not to be reported farther.¹

¹ Essai sur la Vie de Bouillé (ubi suprà).

Except Mirabeau, about a year after this, Ségur is the last distinguished French visitor. French Correspondence the King has now little or none. October gone a year, his D'Alembert, the last intellectual Frenchman he had a real esteem for, died. Paris and France seem to be sinking into strange depths; less and less worth hearing of. Now and then a straggling Note from Condorcet, Grimm, or the like, are all he gets there.

That of the Fürstenbund put a final check on Joseph's notions of making the Reich a reality; his reforms and ambitions had thenceforth to take other directions, and leave the poor old Reich at peace. A mighty reformer he had been, the greatest of his day. Broke violently in upon quiescent Austrian routine, on every side: monkeries, school-pedantries, trade-monopolies, serfages,—all things, military and civil, spiritual and temporal, he had resolved to make perfect in a minimum of time. Austria gazed on him, its admiration not unmixed with terror. He rushed incessantly about; hardy as a Charles Twelfth; slept on his bear-skin on the floor of any inn or hut;—flew at the throat of every Absurdity, however broad-based or dangerously armed, "Disappear, I say!" Will hurl you an Official of Rank, where need is, into the Pillory; sets him, in one actual instance, to permanent sweeping of the streets in Vienna. A most prompt, severe, and yet beneficent and charitable kind of man. Immensely ambitious, that must be said withal. A great admirer of Friedrich; bent to imitate him with profit. "Very clever indeed," says Friedrich; "but has the fault" (a terribly grave one!) "of generally taking the second step without having taken the first."

A troublesome neighbour he proved to everybody, not by his reforms alone;—and ended, pretty much as here in the Fürstenbund, by having, in all matters, to give in and desist.

¹ "Mémoires par M. le Comte de Ségur (Paris, 1826), ii. 133, 120:" cited in Preuss, iv. 218. For date, see Rödénbeck, iii. 322, 323.

In none of his foreign Ambitions could he succeed ; in none of his domestic Reforms. In regard to these latter, somebody remarks : " No Austrian man or thing articulately contradicted his fine efforts that way ; but, inarticulately, the whole weight of Austrian vis inertiae bore day and night against him ;—whereby, as we now see, he bearing the other way with the force of a steamram, a hundred tons to the square inch, the one result was, To dislocate every joint in the Austrian Edifice, and have it ready for the Napoleonic Earthquakes that ensued." In regard to ambitions abroad it was no better. The Dutch fired upon his Scheld Frigate : " War, if you will, you most aggressive Kaiser ; but this Toll is ours ! " His Netherlands revolted against him, " Can holy religion, and old use-and-wont be tumbled about at this rate ? " His Grand Russian Copartneries and Turk War went to water and disaster. His reforms, one and all, had to be revoked for the present. Poor Joseph, broken-hearted (for his private griefs were many, too), lay down to die. " You may put for epitaph," said he with a tone which is tragical and pathetic to us, " Here lies Joseph," the grandly-attempting Joseph, " who could succeed in nothing." ¹ A man of very high qualities, and much too conscious of them. A man of an ambition without bounds. One of those fatal men, fatal to themselves first of all, who mistake half-genius for whole ; and rush on the second step without having made the first. Cannot trouble the old King or us any more.

CHAPTER IX.

FRIEDRICH'S LAST ILLNESS AND DEATH.

To the present class of readers, Furstenbund is become a Nothing ; to all of us the grand Something now is, strangely enough, that incidental item which directly followed, of Reviewing the Silesian soldieries, who had so angered his Majesty last year. "If I be alive next year!" said the King to Tauentzien. The King kept his promise; and the Fates had appointed that, in doing so, he was to find—But let us not yet pronounce the word.

¹ Died, at Vienna, 20th February 1790, still under fifty ;—born there, 13th March 1741. Hormayr, Oesterreichischer Plutarch, iv. (2tes) 125-223 (and five or six recent Lives of Joseph, none of which, that I have seen, was worth reading, in comparison).

August 16th, 1785, some three weeks after finishing the Fürstenbund, Friedrich set out for Silesia: towards Strehlen, long known to him and us all;—at Gross-Tinz, a Village in that neighbourhood, the Camp and Review are to be. He goes by Crossen, Glogau; in a circling direction: Glogau, Schweidnitz, Silberberg, Glatz, all his Fortresses are to be inspected as well, and there is much miscellaneous business by the road. At Hirschberg, not on the military side, we have sight of him; the account of which is strange to read:

"Thursday, August 18th," says a private Letter from that little Town, "he passed through here: concourse of many thousands, from all the Country about, had been waiting for him several hours. Out-riders came at last; then he himself, the Unique; and, with the liveliest expression of reverence and love, all eyes were directed on one point. I cannot describe to you my feelings, which of course were those of everybody, to see him, the aged King; in his weak hand the hat; in those grand eyes such a fatherly benignity of look over the vast crowd that encircled his Carriage, and rolled tide-like, accompanying it. Looking round when he was past, I saw in various eyes a tear trembling." ("Alas, we shan't have him long!")

"His affability, his kindness, to whoever had the honour of speech with this great King, who shall describe it! After talking a good while with the Merchants-Deputation from the Hill Country, he said, 'Is there anything more, then, from anybody?' Upon which, the President (Kaufmannsälteste," Merchants-Eldest) "Lachmann, from Greiffenberg," which had been burnt lately, and helped by the King to rebuild itself, "stepped forward, and said, 'The burnt-out Inhabitants of Greiffenberg had charged him to express once more their most submissive gratitude for the gracious help in rebuilding; their word of thanks, truly, was of no importance, but they daily prayed God to reward such Royal beneficence.' The

¹ Given in extenso, Rödenbeck, iii. 381-383.

King was visibly affected, and said, 'You don't need to thank me ; when my subjects fall into misfortune, it is my duty to help them up again ; for that reason am I here.' * *

Saturday 20th, he arrived at Tinz ; had a small Cavalry Manœuvre next day ; and on Monday the Review Proper began. Lasted four days,—22d–25th August, Monday to Thursday, both inclusive. "Headquarter was in the Dorf-Schulze's (Village Mayor's) house ; and there were many Strangers of distinction quartered in the Country Mansions round." Gross-Tinz is about 12 miles straight north from Strehlen, and as far straight east from the Zobtenberg : Gross-Tinz, and its Review of August 1785, ought to be long memorable.

How the Review turned out as to proficiency recovered, I have not heard ; and only infer, by symptoms, that it was not unsatisfactory. The sure fact, and the forever memorable, is, That on Wednesday, the third day of it, from 4 in the morning, when the Manœuvres began, till well after 10, when they ended, there was a rain like Noah's ; rain falling as from buckets and waterspouts ; and that Friedrich (and perhaps most others too), so intent upon his business, paid not the least regard to it ; but rode about, intensely inspecting, in lynx-eyed watchfulness of everything, as if no rain had been there. Was not at the pains even to put on his cloak. Six hours of such down-pour ; and a weakly old man of 73 past. Of course he was wetted to the bone. On returning to headquarters, his boots were found full of water ; "when pulled off, it came pouring from them like a pair of pails."

He got into dry clothes ; presided in his usual way at dinner, which soon followed ; had many Generals and guests,—La Fayette, Lord Cornwallis, Duke of York ;—and, as might be expected, felt unusually feverish afterwards. Hot, chill, quite poorly all afternoon ; glad to get to bed :—where he fell into deep sleep, into profuse perspiration, as his wont was ; and awoke, next morning, greatly recovered ; altogether well again, as he supposed. Well enough to finish his Review comfortably ; and start for home. Went,—round by Neisse, inspection not to be omitted there, though it doubles the distance,—to Brieg that day ; a drive of 80 miles, inspection-work included. Thence, at Breslau for three days more : with dinners of state, balls, illuminations, in honour of the Duke of York,—our as yet last Duke of York, then a brisk young fellow of twenty-two ; to whom, by accident, among his other distinctions, may belong this of having (most involuntarily) helped to kill Friedrich the Great !

Back to Potsdam Friedrich pushed on with business ; and complained of nothing. Was at Berlin in about ten days (September 9th), for an Artillery Review ; saw his Sister Amelia ; saw various public works in a state of progress,—but what perhaps is medically significant, went in the afternoon to a kind of Spa Well they have at Berlin ; and slept, not at the Palace, but at this Spa, in the hostelry or lodging-house attached.¹ Next day (September 10th), the Artillery Manœuvre was done ; and the King left Berlin,—little guessing he had seen Berlin for the last time.

The truth is, his health, unknown to him (though that of taking a Night at the Spa Well, probably denotes some guess or feeling of the kind, on his part), must have been in a dangerous or almost ruinous state. Accordingly, soon afterwards, September 18th–19th, in the night-time, he was suddenly aroused by a Fit of Suffocation (what they call Stickfluss) ; and, for some hours, till relief was got, everybody feared he would perish. Next day there came gout ; which perhaps he regarded almost as a friend : but it did not prove such ; it proved the captain of a chaotic company of enemies ; and Friedrich's end, I suppose, was already inexorably near. At the Grand Potsdam Review (22d–23d September) chief Review of all, and with such an affluence of Strangers to it this Autumn, he was quite unable to appear ; prescribed the Manœuvres and Procedures, and sorrowfully kept his room.²

¹ Rôdenbeck, in die.

² This of 23d September 1785 is what Print-Collectors know loosely as "Friedrich's Last Review ;"—one Cunningham, an English Painter (son of a Jacobite ditto, and himself of wandering habitat), and Clemens, a Prussian Engraver, having done a very large and highly-superior Print of it, by way of speculation in Military Portraits (Berlin, 1787) ; in which, among many others, there figures the crediblest Likeness known to me

Friedrich was always something of a Doctor himself: he had little faith in professional Doctors, though he liked to speak with the intelligent sort, and was curious about their science. And it is agreed he really had good notions in regard to it; in particular, that he very well understood his own constitution of body; knew the effects of causes there, at any rate, and the fit regimens and methods:—as an old man of sense will usually do. The complaint is, that he was not always faithful to regimen; that, in his old days, at least, he loved strong soups, hot spicy meats;—finding, I suppose, a kind of stimulant in them, as others do in wine; a sudden renewal of strength, which might be very tempting to him. There has been a great deal of unwise babble on this subject, which I find no reason to believe, except as just said. In the fall of this year, as usual, perhaps rather later than usual,—not till November 8th (for what reason so delaying, Marwitz told us already),—he withdrew from Sans-Souci, his Summer-Cottage; shut himself up in Potsdam Palace (Old Palace) for the winter. It was known he was very ailing; and that he never stirred out,—but this was not quite unusual in late winters; and the rumours about his health were vague and various. Now, as always, he himself, except to his Doctors, was silent on that subject. Various military Doctors, Theden, Frese, and others of eminence, were within reach; but it is not known to me that he consulted any of them.

Not till January 1786, when symptoms worse than ever, of asthma, of dropsy, began to manifest themselves, did he call in Selle, the chief Berlin Doctor, and a man of real sagacity, as is still evident; who from the first concluded the disease to be desperate; but of course began some alleviatory treatment, the skilfullest possible to him.¹ Selle, when questioned, of Friedrich in Old Age, though Friedrich himself was not there. (See Preuss, iv. 242; especially see Rödenbeck, iii. 337 n.)—As Crown-Prince, Friedrich had sat to Pesne; never afterwards to any Artist.

¹ Christian Gottlieb Selle, Krankheitsgeschichte des Höchstseeligen Königs von Preussen Friedrichs des Zweyten Majestät (Berlin, 1786); a very small Pamphlet, now very rare;—giving in the most distinct, intelligent, modest and conclusive way, an Account of everything pertinent, and rigorously of nothing else.

kept his worst fears carefully to himself: but the King noticed Selle's real opinion,—which, probably, was the King's own too;—and finding little actual alleviation, a good deal of trouble, and no possibility of a victorious result by this warfare on the outworks, began to be weary of Selle; and to turn his hopes,—what hopes he yet had,—on the fine weather soon due. He had a continual short small cough, which much troubled him; there was fear of new Suffocation-Fit; the breathing always difficult.

But Spring came, unusually mild; the King sat on the southern balconies in the genial sun and air, looking over the bright sky and earth, and newbirth of things: "Were I at Sans-Souci, amid the Gardens!" thought he. April 17th, he shifted thither: not in a sedan, as Marwitz told us of the former journey; but "in his carriage very early in the morning, making a long round-about through various Villages, with new relays,"—probably with the motive Marwitz assigns. Here are two contemporaneous Excerpts:

1°. Mirabeau at Sans-Souci. "This same day," April 17th, it appears,¹ "the King saw Mirabeau, for the second and last time. Mirabeau had come to Berlin, 19th January last; his errand not very precise, except that he infinitely wanted employment, and that at Paris the Controller-General Calonne, since so famous among mankind, had evidently none to offer him there. He seems to have intended Russia, and employment with the Czarina,—after viewing Berlin a little, with the great flashy eyesight he had. He first saw Friedrich, January 25th. There pass in all, between Friedrich and him, seven Letters or Notes, two of them by the King; and on poor Mirabeau's side, it must be owned, there is a massively respectful, truthful, and manly physiognomy, which probably has mended Friedrich's first opinion of him." This day, April 17th, 1786, he is at Potsdam; so far on the road to France again,—Mirabeau Senior being reported dangerously ill. 'My Dialogue with the King,' say the Mirabeau Papers, 'was very

¹ Preuss: in Cœuvres de Frédéric, xxv. 328 n.

"* * * "Is coming to me to-day; one of those loose-tongued fellows, I suppose, who write for and against all the world." (Friedrich to Prince Henri, "25th January 1786:" Cœuvres de Frédéric, xxvi. 522.

lively ; but the King was in such suffering, and so straitened for breath, I was myself anxious to shorten it : that same evening I travelled on.'

"Mirabeau Senior did not die at this time : and Controller-General Calonne, now again eager to shake off an importunate and far too clear-sighted Mirabeau Junior, said to the latter : 'Back to Berlin, couldn't you? Their King is dying, a new King coming ; highly important to us !'—and poor Mirabeau went. Left Paris again, in May ; with money furnished, but no other outfit, and more in the character of Newspaper Vulture than of Diplomatic Envoy,"¹—as perhaps we may transiently see.

2°. Marie Antoinette at Versailles ; To her Sister Christine at Brussels (Husband and she, Duke and Duchess of Sachsen-Teschen, are Governors of the Netherlands) :

March 20th, 1786. * * "There has been arrested at Geneva one Villette, who played a great part in that abominable affair" (of the Diamond Necklace, now emerging on an astonished Queen and world).² "M. Target," Advocate of the enchanted Cardinal, "is coming out with his Memoir : he does his function ; and God knows what are the lies he will produce upon us. There is a Memoir by that Quack of a Cagliostro, too : these are at this moment the theme of all talk."

April 6th. "The Memoirs, the lies, succeed each other ; and the Business grows darker, not clearer. Such a Cardinal of the Church ! He brazenly maintains his distracted story about the Bosquet" (Interview with me in person, in that Hornbeam Arbour at Versailles ; to me inconceivable, not yet knowing of a Demoiselle D'Oliva from the streets, who had acted my part there), "and my Assent" (to purchase the Necklace for me). "His impudence and his audacity surpass belief. Oh, Sister, I need all my strength to support such cruel assaults." * * "The King of Prussia's condition much engages attention (préoccupe) here, and must do at Vienna too : his death is considered imminent. I am sure you have your eyes open on that side." * *

¹ Rüdtenbeck, iii. 343. Fils Adoptif, Mémoires de Mirabeau (Paris, 1834), iv. 288-292, 296.

² Carlyle's Miscellanies (London, 1857), iv. 1-60, § Diamond Necklace. The wretched Cardinal de Rohan was arrested at Versailles, and put in the Bastille, "August 15th, 1785," the day before Friedrich set out for his Silesian Review ; ever since which, the arrestments and Judicial investigations have continued,—continue till "May 10th, 1786," when Sentence was given.

April 17th (just while the Mirabeau Interview at Potsdam is going on). * * "King of Prussia thought to be dying: I am weary of the political discussions on this subject, as to what effects his death must produce. He is better at this moment, but so weak he cannot resist long. Physique is gone; but his force and energy of soul, they say, have often supported him, and in desperate crises have even seemed to increase. Liking to him I never had: his ostentatious immorality (immoralité affichée," ah, Madame!) "has much hurt public virtue" (public orthodoxy, I mean), "and there have been related to me" (by mendacious or ill-informed persons) "barbarities which excite horror. He has done us all a great deal of ill. He has been a King for his own Country; but a Trouble-feast for those about him;—setting up to be the arbiter of Europe; always undertaking on his neighbours, and making them pay the expense. As Daughters of Maria Theresa, it is impossible we can regret him, nor is it the Court of France that will make his funeral oration."¹

From Sans-Souci the King did appear again on horseback; rode out several times ("Condé," a fine English horse, one of his favourites, carrying him,—the Condé who had many years of sinecure afterwards, and was well known to Touring people: the rides were short; once to the New Palace to look at some new Vinery there, thence to the gate of Potsdam, which he was for entering; but finding masons at work, and the street encumbered, did not, and rode home instead: this, of not above two miles, was his longest ride of all. Selle's attendance, less and less in esteem with the King, and less and less followed by him, did not quite cease till June 4th; that day the King had said to Selle, or to himself, "It is enough." That longest of his rides was in the third week after; June 22d, Midsummer-Day. July 4th, he rode again; and it was for the last time. About two weeks after, Condé was again brought out; but it would not do: Adieu, my Condé; not possible, as things are!—

During all this while, and to the very end, Friedrich's Affairs, great and small, were, in every branch and item, guided on by him, with a perfection not surpassed in his palmiest days : he saw his Ministers, saw all who had business with him, many who had little ; and in the sore coil of bodily miseries, as Hertzberg observed with wonder, never was the King's intellect clearer, or his judgment more just and decisive. Of his disease, except to the Doctors, he spoke no word to anybody. The body of Friedrich is a ruin, but his soul is still here ; and receives his friends and his tasks as formerly. Asthma, dropsy, erysipelas, continual want of sleep ; for many months past he has not been in bed, but sits day and night in an easy-chair, unable to get breath except in that posture. He said one morning, to somebody entering, "If you happened to want a night-watcher, I could suit you well."

¹ Comte de Hunolstein, Correspondance inédite de Marie Antoinette (Paris, 1864), pp. 136, 137, 149.

His multifarious Military businesses come first ; then his three Clerks, with the Civil and Political. These three he latterly, instead of calling about 6 or 7 o'clock, has had to appoint for 4 each morning : "My situation forces me," his message said, "to give them this trouble, which they will not have to suffer long. My life is on the decline ; the time which I still have I must employ. It belongs not to me, but to the State." About 11, business, followed by short surgical details or dressings (sadly insisted on in those Books, and in themselves sufficiently sad), being all done,—his friends or daily company are admitted : five chiefly, or (not counting Minister Hertzberg) four, Lucchesini, Schwerin, Pinto, Görtz ; who sit with him about one hour now, and two hours in the evening again :—dreary company to our minds, perhaps not quite so dreary to the King's ; but they are all he has left. And he talks cheerfully with them "on Literature, History, on the topics of the day, or whatever topic rises, as if there were no sickness here." A man adjusted to his hard circumstances ; and bearing himself manlike and kinglike among them.

He well knew himself to be dying ; but some think, expected that the end might be a little farther off. There is a grand simplicity of stoicism in him ; coming as if by nature, or by long second-nature ; finely unconscious of itself, and finding nothing of peculiar in this new trial laid on it. From of old, Life has been infinitely contemptible to him. In death, I think, he has neither fear nor hope. Atheism, truly, he never could abide : to him, as to all of us, it was flatly inconceivable that intellect, moral emotion, could have been put into him by an Entity that had none of its own. But there, pretty much, his Theism seems to have stopped. Instinctively, too, he believed, no man more firmly, that Right alone has ultimately any strength in this world : ultimately, yes ;—but for him and his poor brief interests, what good was it ? Hope for himself in Divine Justice, in Divine Providence, I think he had not practically any : that the unfathomable Demiurgus should concern himself with such a set of paltry ill-given animalcules as oneself and mankind are, this also, as we have often noticed, is in the main incredible to him.

¹ Preuss. iv. 257 n.

A sad Creed, this of the King's ;—he had to do his duty without fee or reward. Yes, reader ;—and what is well worth your attention, you will have difficulty to find, in the annals of any Creed, a King or man who stood more faithfully to his duty ; and, till the last hour, alone concerned himself with doing that. To poor Friedrich that was all the Law and all the Prophets : and I much recommend you to surpass him, if you, by good luck, have a better Copy of those inestimable Documents !—Inarticulate notions, fancies, transient aspirations, he might have, in the background of his mind. One day, sitting for a while out of doors, gazing into the Sun, he was heard to murmur, “ Perhaps I shall be nearer thee soon : ”—and indeed nobody knows what his thoughts were in these final months. There is traceable only a complete superiority to Fear and Hope ; in parts, too, are half-glimpses of a great motionless interior lake of Sorrow, sadder than any tears or complainings, which are altogether wanting to it.

Friedrich's dismissal of Selle, June 4th, by no means meant that he had given up hope from medicine ; on the contrary, two days after, he had a Letter on the road for Zimmermann at Hanover ; whom he always remembers favourably since that Dialogue we read fifteen years ago. His first note to Zimmermann is of June 6th, “ Would you consent to come for a fortnight, and try upon me?" Zimmermann's overjoyed Answer, "Yes, thrice surely yes," is of June 10th; Friedrich's second is of June 16th, "Come, then!" And Zimmermann came accordingly,—as is still too well known. Arrived, 23d June; stayed till 10th July; had Thirty-three Interviews or Dialogues with him: one visit the last day; two, morning and evening, every preceding day;—and published a Book about them, which made immense noise in the world, and is still read, with little profit or none, by inquirers into Friedrich.¹ Thirty-three Dialogues, throwing no new light on Friedrich, none of them equal in interest to the old specimen known to us.

In fact, the Book turns rather on Zimmermann himself than on his Royal Patient; and might be entitled, as it was by a Satirist, Dialogues of Zimmermann I. and Friedrich II. An unwise Book; abounding in exaggeration; breaking out continually into extraneous sallies and extravagancies,—the source of which is too plainly an immense conceit of oneself. Zimmermann is fifteen years older since we last saw him; a man now verging towards sixty; but has not grown wiser in proportion. In Hanover, though miraculously healed of that Leibesschade, and full of high hopes, he has had his new tribulations, new compensations,—both of an agitating character. "There arose," he says, in reference to some medical Review-article he wrote, "a Weiber-epidemie, a universal shrieking combination of all the Women against me:"—a frightful accident while it lasted! Then his little Daughter died on his hands; his Son had disorders, nervous imbecilities,—did not die, but did worse; went into hopeless idiocy, and so lived for many years. Zimmermann, being dreadfully miserable, hypochondriac, what not, "his friends," he himself passive, it would seem, "managed to get a young Wife for him;" thirty years younger than he,—whose performances, however, in this difficult post, are praised.

¹ Ritter von Zimmermann, Über Friedrich den Grossen und meine Unterredungen mit Ihm kurz vor seinem Tode (1 vol. 8vo: Leipzig, 1788);—followed by Fragmente über Friedrich den Grossen (3 voll. 12mo: Leipzig, 1790); and by &c. &c.

Lastly, not many months ago (Leipzig, 1785), the big final edition of "Solitude" (four volumes) has come out ; to the joy and enthusiasm of all philanthropic-philosophic and other circulating-library creatures :—a Copy of which came, by course of nature, not by Zimmermann's help, into the hands of Catharine of Russia. Sublime imperial Letter thereupon, with "valuable diamond ring ;" invitation to come to Petersburg, with charges borne (declined, on account of health) ; to be imperial Physician (likewise declined) ;—in fine, continued Correspondence with Catharine (trying enough for a vain head), and Knighthood of the Order of St. Wladimir,—so that, at least, Doctor Zimmermann is Ritter Zimmermann henceforth. And now, here has come his new Visit to Friedrich the Great ;—which, with the issues it had, and the tempestuous cloud of tumid speculations and chaotic writings it involved him in, quite upset the poor Ritter Doctor ; so that, hypochondrias deepening to the abysmal, his fine intellect sank altogether,—and only Death, which happily followed soon, could disimprison him. At this moment, there is in Zimmermann a "worse Dropsy" of the spiritual kind, than this of the physical, which he has come in relief of !

Excerpts of those Zimmermann Dialogues lie copiously round me, ready long ago,—nay, I understand there is, or was, an English Translation of the whole of them, better or worse, for behoof of the curious :—but on serious consideration now, I have to decide, That they are but as a Scene of Clowns in the Elder Dramatists ; which, even were it not overdone as it is, cannot be admitted in this place, and is plainly impertinent in the Tragedy that is being acted here. Something of Farce will often enough, in this irreverent world, intrude itself on the most solemn Tragedy ; but, in pity even to the Farce, there ought at least to be closed doors kept between them.

Enough for us to say, That Ritter Zimmermann,—who is a Physician and a Man of literary Genius, and should not have become a Tragic Zany,—did, with unspeakable emotions, terrors, prayers to Heaven, and paroxysms of his own ridiculous kind, prescribe "Syrup of Dandelion" to the King ; talked to him soothingly, musically, successfully ; found the King a most pleasant Talker, but a very wilful perverse kind of Patient ; whose errors in point of diet especially were enormous to a degree. Truth is, the King's appetite for food did still survive :—and this might have been, you would think, the one hopeful basis of Zimmermann's whole treatment, if there were still any hope : but no ; Zimmermann merely, with uncommon emphasis, lyrically recognizes such amazing appetite in an old man overwhelmed by diseases,—trumpets it abroad, for ignorant persons to regard as a crime, or perhaps as a type generally of the man's past life, and makes no other attempt upon it ;—stands by his “ Extract of Dandelion boiled to the consistency of honey ; ” and on the seventeenth day, July 10th, voiceless from emotion, heart just breaking, takes himself away, and ceases. One of our Notes says :

“ Zimmermann went by Dessau and Brunswick ; at Brunswick, if he made speed thither, Zimmermann might perhaps find Mirabeau, who is still there, and just leaving for Berlin to be in at the death :—but if the Doctor and he missed each other, it was luckier, as they had their controversies afterwards. Mirabeau arrived at Berlin, July 21st : ' vastly diligent in picking up news, opinions, judgments of men and events, for his Calonne ;—and amazingly accurate, one finds ; such a flash of insight has he, in whatever element, foul or fair.

“ July 9th, the day before Zimmermann's departure, Hertzberg had come out to Potsdam in permanence. Hertzberg is privately thenceforth in communication with the Successor ; altogether privately, though no doubt Friedrich knew it well enough, and saw it to be right. Of course, all manner of poor creatures are diligent about their own bits of interests ; and saying to themselves, ‘ A New Reign is evidently nigh ! ’ Yes, my friends ;—and a precious Reign it will prove in comparison : sensualities, unctuous religiosities, ostentations, imbecilities ; culminating in Jena twenty years hence.”

Zimmermann haggles to tell us what his report was at Brunswick ; says, he “ set the Duke ” (Erbprinz, who is now Duke these six years past) "sobbing and weeping ;" though towards the Widow Duchess there must have been some hope held out, as we shall now see. The Duchess's Letter or Letters to her Brother are lost ; but this is his Answer :

¹ Mirabeau, Histoire secrète de la Cour de Berlin, Tome iii. of Œuvres de Mirabeau : Paris, 1821, Lettre v. p. 37.

Friedrich to the Duchess-Dowager of Brunswick.

"Sans-Souci, 10th August 1786.

"My adorable Sister,—The Hanover Doctor has wished to make himself important with you, my good Sister ; but the truth is, he has been of no use to me (m'a été inutile). The old must give place to the young, that each generation may find room clear for it : and Life, if we examine strictly what its course is, consists in seeing one's fellow-creatures die and be born. In the mean while, I have felt myself a little easier for the last day or two. My heart remains inviolably attached to you, my good Sister. With the highest consideration,—My adorable Sister,—Your faithful Brother and Servant,

FRIEDRICH." ¹

This is Friedrich's last Letter ;—his last to a friend. There is one to his Queen, which Preuss's Index seems to regard as later, though without apparent likelihood ; there being no date whatever, and only these words : "Madame,—I am much obliged by the wishes you deign to form : but a heavy fever I have taken (grosse fièvre que j'ai prise) hinders me from answering you." ²

On common current matters of business, and even on uncommon, there continue yet for four days to be Letters expressly dictated by Friedrich ; some about military matters (vacancies to be filled, new Free-Corps to be levied). Two or three of them are on so small a subject as the purchase of new Books by his Librarians at Berlin. One, and it has been preceded by examining, is, Order to the Potsdam Magistrates to grant "the Baker Schröder, in terms of his petition, a Free-Pass out of Preussen hither, for 100 bushels of rye and 50 of wheat, though Schröder will not find the prices much cheaper there than here." His last, of August 14th, is to De Launay, Head of the Excise : "Your account of Receipts and Expenditures came to hand yesterday, 13th ; but is too much in small : I require one more detailed,"—and explains, with brief clearness, on what points and how. Neglects nothing, great or small, while life yet is.

¹ Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. l. 352.

² Ibid. xxvi. 62.

Tuesday, August 15th, 1786, Contrary to all wont, the King did not awaken till 11 o'clock. On first looking up, he seemed in a confused state, but soon recovered himself ; called in his Generals and Secretaries, who had been in waiting so long, and gave, with his old precision, the Orders wanted,—one to Rohdich, Commandant of Potsdam, about a Review of the troops there next day ; Order minutely perfect, in knowledge of the ground, in foresight of what and how the evolutions were to be ; which was accordingly performed on the morrow. The Cabinet work he went through with the like possession of himself, giving, on every point, his Three Clerks their directions, in a weak voice, yet with the old power of spirit,—dictated to one of them, among other things, an "Instruction" for some Ambassador just leaving ; "four quarto pages, which," says Hertzberg, "would have done honour to the most experienced Minister ;" and, in the evening, he signed his Mis-sives as usual. This evening still,—but—no evening more. We are now at the last scene of all, which ends this strange eventful History.

Wednesday morning, General-Adjutants, Secretaries, Commandants, were there at their old hours ; but word came out, "Secretaries are to wait : " King is in a kind of sleep, of stertorous ominous character, as if it were the death-sleep ; seems not to recollect himself, when he does at intervals open his eyes. After hours of this,¹ on a ray of consciousness, the King bethought him of Rohdich, the Commandant ; tried to give Rohdich the Parole as usual ; tried twice, perhaps three times ; but found he could not speak ;—and with a glance of sorrow, which seemed to say, "It is impossible, then !" turned his head, and sank back into the corner of his chair. Rohdich burst into tears : the King again lay alumberous ;—the rattle of death beginning soon after, which lasted at intervals all day. Selle, in Berlin, was sent for by express ; he arrived about 3 of the afternoon : King seemed a little more conscious, knew those about him, “ his face red rather than pale, in his eyes still something of their old fire.” Towards evening the feverishness abated (to Selle, I suppose, a fatal symptom) ; the King fell into a soft sleep, with warm perspiration ; but, on awakening, complained of cold, repeatedly of cold, demanding wrappage after wrappage (“ Kissen,” soft quilt of the old fashion) ;—and on examining feet and legs, one of the Doctors made signs that they were in fact cold, up nearly to the knee. “ What said he of the feet ? ” murmured the King some time afterwards, the Doctor having now stepped out of sight. “ Much the same as before,” answered some attendant. The King shook his head, incredulous.

¹ Selle (ut sup.) ; Anonymous (Kletschke), Letzte Stunden und Leichenbegängniss Friedrichs des Zweyten (Potsdam, 1786) : Preuss., iv. 264 et seq. ; Rödenbeck, iii. 363–366.

He drank once, grasping the goblet with both hands, a draught of fennel-water, his customary drink ; and seemed relieved by it ;—his last refection in this world. Towards 9 in the evening, there had come on a continual short cough, and a rattling in the breast, breath more and more difficult. Why continue ? Friedrich is making exit, on the common terms ; you may hear the curtain rustling down. For most part he was unconscious, never more than half-conscious. As the wall-clock above his head struck 11, he asked : “ What o'clock ? ” “ Eleven,” answered they. “ At 4,” murmured he, “ I will rise.” One of his dogs sat on its stool near him ; about midnight he noticed it shivering for cold : “ Throw a quilt over it,” said or beckoned he ; that, I think, was his last completely-conscious utterance. Afterwards, in a severe choking fit, getting at last rid of the phlegm, he said, “ La montagne est passée, nous irons mieux, We are over the hill, we shall go better now.”

Attendants, Hertzberg, Selle and one or two others, were in the outer room ; none in Friedrich's but Strützki, his Kammerhussar, one of Three who are his sole valets and nurses ; a faithful ingenious man, as they all seem to be, and excellently chosen for the object. Strützki, to save the King from hustling down, as he always did, into the corner of his chair, where, with neck and chest bent forward, breathing was impossible,—at last took the King on his knee; kneeling on the ground with his other knee for the purpose,—King's right arm round Strützki's neck, Strützki's left arm round the King's back, and supporting his other shoulder; in which posture the faithful creature, for above two hours, sat motionless, till the end came. Within doors, all is silence, except this breathing; around it the dark earth silent, above it the silent stars. At 20 minutes past 2, the breathing paused,—wavered; ceased. Friedrich's Life-battle is fought out; instead of suffering and sore-labour, here is now rest. Thursday morning, 17th August 1786, at the dark hour just named. On the 31st of May last, this King had reigned 46 years. "He has lived," counts Rödenbeck, "74 years, 6 months and 24 days."

His death seems very stern and lonely;—a man of such affectionate feelings, too; "a man with more sensibility than other men!" But so had his whole life been, stern and lonely; such the severe law laid on him. Nor was it inappropriate that he found his death in that poor Silesian Review; punctually doing, as usual, the work that had come in hand. Nor that he died now, rather than a few years later. In these final days of his, we have transiently noticed Arch-Cardinal de Rohan, Arch-Quack Cagliostro, and a most select Company of Persons and of Actions, like an Elixir of the Nether World, miraculously emerging into daylight; and all Paris, and by degrees all Europe, getting loud with the Diamond-Necklace History. And to eyes of deeper speculation,—World-Poet Goethe's, for instance,—it is becoming evident that Chaos is again big. As has not she proved to be, and is still proving, in the most teeming way! Better for a Royal Hero, fallen old and feeble, to be hidden from such things.

"Yesterday, Wednesday August 16th," says a Note which now strikes us as curious, "Mirabeau, smelling eagerly for news, had ridden out towards Potsdam; met the Page riding furiously for Selle ('one horse already broken down,' say the Peasants about); and with beak, powerful beyond any other vulture's, Mirabeau perceived that here the end now was. And thereupon rushed off, to make arrangements for a courier, for flying pigeons, and the other requisites. And appeared that night at the Queen's Soirée in Schönhausen" (Queen has Apartment that evening, dreaming of nothing), "where," says he, "I eagerly whispered the French Minister, and less eagerly 'mon ami Mylord Dalrymple,' the English one;—neither of whom would believe me. Nor, in short, what Calonne will regret, but nobody else, could the pigeons be let loose, owing to want of funds."—Enough, enough.

Friedrich was not buried at Sans-Souci, in the Tomb which he had built for himself; why not, nobody clearly says. By his own express will, there was no embalming. Two Regiment-surgeons washed the Corpse, decently prepared it for interment: "at 8 that same evening, Friedrich's Body, dressed in the uniform of the First Battalion of Guards, and laid in its coffin, was borne to Potsdam, in a hearse of eight horses, twelve Non-commissioned officers of the Guard escorting. All Potsdam was in the streets; the soldiers, of their own accord, formed rank, and followed the hearse; many a rugged face unable to restrain tears: for the rest, universal silence as of midnight, nothing audible among the people but here and there a sob, and the murmur, 'Ach der gute König!'"

"All next day, the Body lay in state in the Palace; thousands crowding, from Berlin and the other environs, to see that face for the last time. Wasted, worn; but beautiful in death, with the thin gray hair parted into locks, and slightly powdered. And at 8 in the evening" (Friday 18th), "he was borne to the Garrison-Kirche of Potsdam; and laid beside his Father, in the vault behind the Pulpit there,"—where the two Coffins are still to be seen.

I define him to myself as hitherto the Last of the Kings;—when the Next will be, is a very long question! But it seems to me as if Nations, probably all Nations, by and by, in their despair,—blinded, swallowed like Jonah, in such a whale's-

¹ Mirabeau, Histoire secrète, &c. (Lettre xiv.), pp. 58–63.

² Rödénbeck, iii. 365 (Public Funeral was not till September 9th).

belly of things brutish, waste, abominable (for is not Anarchy, or the Rule of what is Baser over what is Nobler, the one life's-misery worth complaining of, and, in fact, the abomination of abominations, springing from and producing all others whatsoever?)—as if the Nations universally, and England too if it hold on, may more and more bethink themselves of such a Man and his Function and Performance, with feelings far other than are possible at present. Meanwhile, all I had to say of him is finished : that too, it seems, was a bit of work appointed to be done. Adieu, good readers ; bad also, adieu.

GENERAL CONTENTS

AND

INDEX TO THE WORK.

(Vol. I. contains Books I.-IV.)

BOOK I. BIRTH AND PARENTAGE. 1712. (p. 1-59.)

I. Proem: Friedrich's History from the distance we are at—II. Friedrich's Birth—III. Father and Mother: the Hanoverian Connexion—IV. Father's Mother—V. King Friedrich I.

BOOK II. OF BRANDENBURG AND THE HOHENZOLLERNS. 923-1417. (p. 60-161.)

I. Brannibor: Henry the Fowler—II. Preussen: Saint Adalbert—III. Margraves of Brandenburg—IV. Albert the Bear—V. Conrad of Hohen-zollern, and Kaiser Barbarossa—VI. The Teutsch Ritters, or Teutonic Order—VII. Margraviate of Culmbach: Baireuth, Anspach—VIII. Ascanian Markgraves in Brandenburg—IX. Burggraf Friedrich IV.—X. Brandenburg lapses to the Kaiser—XI. Bavarian Kurfürsts in Brandenburg—XII. Brandenburg in Kaiser Karl's Time; End of the Bavarian Kurfürsts—XIII. Luxemburg Kurfürsts in Brandenburg—XIV. Burggraf Friedrich VI.

BOOK III. THE HOHENZOLLERNS IN BRANDENBURG. 1412-1713. (p. 162-311.)

I. Kurfürst Friedrich I.—II. Matinées du Roi de Prusse—III. Kurfürst Friedrich II.—IV. Kurfürst Albert Achilles, and his Successor—V. Of the Baireuth-Anspach Branch—VI. Hochmeister Albert, Third notable Son of Friedrich—VII. Albert Aloibiades—VIII. Historical Meaning of the Reformation—IX. Kurfürst Joachim I.—X. Kurfürst Joachim II.—XI. Seventh Kurfürst, Johann George—XII. Of Albert Friedrich, the Second Duke of Preussen—XIII. Ninth Kurfürst, Johann Sigismund—XIV. Symptoms of a Great War coming—XV. Tenth Kurfürst, George Wilhelm—XVI. Thirty-Years' War—XVII. Duchy of Jägerndorf—XVIII. Friedrich Wilhelm, the Great Kurfürst, Eleventh of the Series—XIX. King Friedrich I. again—XX. Death of King Friedrich I.

BOOK IV. FRIEDRICH'S APPRENTICESHIP, FIRST STAGE.
1713-1723. (p. 312-423.)

I. Childhood: Double Educational Element—II. The German Element—III. Friedrich Wilhelm is King—IV. His Majesty's Ways—V. Friedrich Wilhelm's One War—VI. The Little Drummer—VII. Transit of Czar Peter—VIII. The Crown-Prince is put to his Schooling—IX. Wusterhausen—X. The Heidelberg Protestants—XI. Of the Crown-Prince's Progress in his Schooling—XII. Crown-Prince falls into Disfavor with Papa—XIII. Result of the Crown-Prince's Schooling.

(Vol. II. contains Books V.-IX.)

BOOK V. DOUBLE-MARRIAGE PROJECT, AND WHAT ELEMENT IT FELL INTO. 1723-1726. (p. 9-99.)

I. Double-Marriage is decided on—II. A Kaiser hunting Shadows—III. The Seven Crises, or European Travail-threes—IV. Double-Marriage Treaty cannot be signed—V. Crown-Prince goes into the Potsdam Guards—VI. Ordnance-Master Seckendorf crosses the Palace-Esplanade—VII. Tobacco-Parliament—VIII. Seckendorf's Retort to her Majesty.

BOOK VI. DOUBLE-MARRIAGE PROJECT, AND CROWN-PRINCE, GOING ADRIPT UNDER THE STORM-WINDS. 1727-1730. (p. 100-208.)

I. Fifth Crisis in the Kaiser's Spectre-Hunt—II. Death of George I.—III. Visit to Dresden—IV. Double-Marriage Project is not dead—V. Congress of Soissons, Sixth Crisis in the Spectre-Hunt—VI. Imminency of War or Duel between the Britannic and Prussian Majesties—VII. A Marriage; not the Double-Marriage: Crown-Prince deep in Trouble—VIII. Crown-Prince getting beyond his Depth in Trouble—IX. Double-Marriage shall be or shall not be.

BOOK VII. FEARFUL SHIPWRECK OF THE DOUBLE-MARRIAGE PRO-JECT. February—November 1730. (p. 209-336.)

I. England sends the Excellency Hotham to Berlin—II. Language of Birds: Excellency Hotham proves unavailing—III. Camp of Radewitz—IV. Excellency Hotham quits Berlin in Haste—V. Journey to the Reich—VI. Journey homewards from the Reich; Catastrophe on Journey homewards—VII. Catastrophe, and Majesty, arrive in Berlin—VIII. Sequel to Crown-Prince and Friends—IX. Court-Martial on Crown-Prince and Consorts.

BOOK VIII. CROWN-PRINCE RETRIEVED: LIFE AT CÜSTRIN.
November 1730—February 1732. (p. 337-400.)

I. Chaplain Müller waits on the Crown-Prince—II. Crown-Prince to repent and not perish—III. Wilhelmina is to wed the Prince of Baireuth

—IV. Criminal Justice in Prussen and elsewhere—V. Interview of Majesty and Crown-Prince at Cüstrin—VI. Wilhelmina's Wedding.

BOOK IX. LAST STAGE OF FRIEDRICH'S APPRENTICESHIP: LIFE IN RUPPIN. 1732-1736. (p. 401-448.)

I. Princess Elizabeth Christina of Brunswick-Bevern—II. Small Incidents at Ruppín—III. The Salzburgers.

(Vol. III. contains Books IX.-XII.)

Book IX. Cont'd.

(p. 7-118.)

IV. Prussian Majesty visits the Kaiser—V. Ghost of the Double-Marriage rises; to no Purpose—VI. King August meditating Great Things for Poland—VII. Crown-Prince's Marriage—VIII. King August dies, and Poland takes Fire—IX. Kaiser's Shadow-Hunt has caught Fire—X. Crown-Prince goes to the Rhine Campaign—XI. In Papa's Sick-room; Prussian Inspections: End of War.

BOOK X. AT REINSBERG. 1736-1740. (p. 114-230.)

I. Mansion of Reinsberg—II. Of Voltaire and the Literary Correspondences—III. Crown-Prince makes a Morning Call—IV. News of the Day—V. Visit at Loo—VI. Last Year of Reinsberg; Journey to Prussen—VII. Last Year of Reinsberg: Transit of Baltimore and other Persons and Things—VIII. Death of Friedrich Wilhelm.

BOOK XI. FRIEDRICH TAKES THE REINS IN HAND. 1740. (p. 231-365.)

I. Phenomena of Friedrich's Accession—II. The Homagings—III. Friedrich makes an Excursion, not of direct sort, into the Cleve Countries—IV. Voltaire's First Interview with Friedrich—V. Affair of Herstal—VI. Returns by Hanover; does not call on his Royal Uncle there—VII. Withdraws to Reinsberg, hoping a Peaceable Winter—VIII. The Kaiser's Death—IX. Resolution formed at Reinsberg in consequence.

BOOK XII. FIRST SILESIAN WAR, AWAKENING A GENERAL EUROPEAN ONE, BEGINS. 1740-1741. (p. 366-425.)

I. Of Schlesien, or Silesia—II. Friedrich marches on Glogau—III. Problem of Glogau—IV. Breslan under soft Pressure—V. Friedrich pushes forward towards Brieg and Neisse—VI. Neisse is bombarded.

(Vol. IV. contains Books XII.-XIV.)

Book XII. Cont'd.

(p. 9-145.)

VII. At Versailles, the Most Christian Majesty changes his Shirt, and Belleisle is seen with Papers—VIII. Phenomena in Petersburg—IX. Friedrich returns to Silesia—X. Battle of Möllwitz—XI. The Bursting-forth of Bedlams: Belleisle and the Breakers of Pragmatic Sanction—XII. Sorrows of his Britannic Majesty—XIII. Small-War: First Emergence of Ziethen the Hussar-General into Notice.

BOOK XIII. FIRST SILESIAN WAR, LEAVING THE GENERAL EUROPEAN ONE ABLAZE ALL ROUND, GETS ENDED. 1741-1742. (p. 146-306.)

I. Britannic Majesty as Paladin of the Pragmatic—II. Camp of Strehlen—III. Grand Review at Strehlen: Neipperg takes Aim at Breslau, but another hits it—IV. Friedrich takes the Field again, intent on having Neisse—V. Klein Schnellendorf: Friedrich gets Neisse, in a Fashion—VI. New Mayor of Landshut makes an Installation Speech—VII. Friedrich purposes to mend the Klein-Schnellendorf Failure: Fortunes of the Belleisle Armament—VIII. Friedrich starts for Moravia, on a New Scheme he has—IX. Wilhelmina goes to see the Gaieties at Frankfurt—X. Friedrich does his Moravian Expedition, which proves a mere Moravian Foray—XI. Nüssler in Neisse, with the Old Dessauer and Walrave—XII. Prince Karl does come on—XIII. Battle of Chotusitz—XIV. Peace of Breslau.

BOOK XIV. THE SURROUNDING EUROPEAN WAR DOES NOT END. 1742-1744. (p. 307-452.)

I. Friedrich resumes his Peaceable Pursuits—II. Austrian Affairs are on the Mounting Hand—III. Carnival Phenomena in War-time—IV. Austrian Affairs mount to a Dangerous Height—V. Britannic Majesty fights his Battle of Dettingen; and becomes Supreme Jove of Germany, in a Manner—VI. Voltaire visits Friedrich for the Fourth Time—VII. Friedrich makes Treaty with France; and silently gets ready—VIII. Perfect Peace at Berlin, War all round.

(Vol. V. contains Books XV.-XVII.)

BOOK XV. SECOND SILESIAN WAR, IMPORTANT EPISODE IN THE GENERAL EUROPEAN ONE. 1744-1745. (p. 9-206.)

I. Preliminary: How the Moment arrived—II. Friedrich marches upon Prag, captures Prag—III. Friedrich, diligent in his Bohemian Conquests, unexpectedly comes upon Prince Karl, with no French attending him—IV. Friedrich reduced to Straits; cannot maintain his Moldau Conquests against Prince Karl—V. Friedrich, under Difficulties, prepares for a new Campaign—VI. Valori goes on an Electioneering Mission to Dresden—VII. Friedrich in Silesia; unusually busy—VIII. The Martial Boy and his English versus the Laws of Nature—IX. The Austrian-Saxon Army invades Silesia, across the Mountains—X. Battle of Hohenfriedberg—XI. Camp of Chlum: Friedrich cannot achieve Peace—XII. Battle of Sohr—XIII. Saxony and Austria make a surprising Last Attempt—XIV. Battle of Kesselsdorf—XV. Peace of Dresden: Friedrich does march Home.

BOOK XVI. THE TEN YEARS OF PEACE. 1746-1756. (p. 207-435.)

I. Sans-Souci—II. Peep at Voltaire and his divine Emilie (by Candle-light) in the Tide of Events—III. European War falls done: Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle—IV. Cocceji finishes the Law Reform; Friedrich is printing his Poésies—V. Strangers of Note come to Berlin, in 1750—VI. Berlin Carrousel, and Voltaire visible there—VII. M. de Voltaire has a painful Jew-Lawsuit—VIII. Ost-Friesland and the Shipping Interests—IX. Second Act of t^e Voltaire Visit—X. Demon Newswriter, of 1752—XI. Third Act and Catastrophe of the Voltaire Visit—XII. Of the After-piece, which proved still more tragical—XIII. Romish-King Question; English-Privateer Question—XIV. There is like to be another War ahead—XV. Anti-Prussian War-Symptoms: Friedrich visible for a Moment.

BOOK XVII. THE SEVEN-YEARS' WAR: FIRST CAMPAIGN.
1756-1757. (p. 436-462.)

I. What Friedrich had read in the Menzel Documents—II. English Diplomacies abroad, in Prospect of a French War.

(Vol. VI. contains Books XVII. and XVIII.)

Book XVII. Cont'd.

(p 7-81.)

III. French-English War breaks out—IV. Friedrich puts a Question at Vienna, twice over—V. Friedrich blockades the Saxons in Pirna Country—VI. Battle of Lobositz—VII. The Saxons get out of Pirna on Dismal Terms—VIII. Winter in Dresden.

BOOK XVIII. SEVEN-YEARS' WAR RISES TO A HEIGHT. 1757-1759.
(p. 82-414.)

I. The Campaign opens—II. Battle of Prag—III. Prag cannot be got at once—IV. Battle of Kolin—V. Friedrich at Leitmeritz, his World of Enemies coming on—VI. Death of Winterfeld—VII. Friedrich in Thüringen, his World of Enemies all come—VIII. Battle of Rossbach—IX. Friedrich marches for Silesia—X. Battle of Leuthen—XI. Winter in Breslau: Third Campaign opens—XII. Siege of Olmütz—XIII. Battle of Zorndorf—XIV. Battle of Hochkirch.

(Vol. VII. contains Books XIX. and XX.)

BOOK XIX. FRIEDRICH LIKE TO BE OVERWHELMED IN THE SEVEN-YEARS' WAR. 1759-1760. (p. 7-227.)

I. Preliminaries to a Fourth Campaign—II. General Dohna; Dictator Wedell: Battle of Züllichau—III. Friedrich in Person attempts the Russian Problem; not with Success—IV. Battle of Kunersdorf—V. Saxony without Defence: Schmettau surrenders Dresden—VI. Prince Henri makes a March of Fifty Hours; the Russians cannot find Lodging in Silesia—VII. Friedrich reappears on the Field, and in Seven Days after comes the Catastrophe of Maxen—VIII. Miscellanea in Winter-quarters, 1759-60—IX. Preliminaries to a Fifth Campaign.

BOOK XX. FRIEDRICH IS NOT TO BE OVERWHELMED: THE SEVEN-YEARS' WAR GRADUALLY ENDS. 25th April, 1760—15th February 1763. (p. 228-465.)

I. Fifth Campaign opens—II. Friedrich besieges Dresden—III. Battle of Liegnitz—IV. Daun in wrestle with Friedrich in the Silesian Hills—V. Battle of Torgau—VI. Winter-quarters, 1760-61—VII. Sixth Campaign opens: Camp of Bunzelwitz—VIII. London pounces upon Schweidnitz, one Night (last of September 1761)—IX. Traitor Warkotsch—X. Friedrich in Breslau; has news from Petersburg.

(Vol. VIII. contains Books XX. and XXI.)

Book XX. Cont'd.

(p. 7-52.)

XI. Seventh Campaign opens—XII. Siege of Schweidnitz; Seventh Campaign ends—XIII. Peace of Hubertsburg.

BOOK XXI. AFTERNOON AND EVENING OF FRIEDRICH'S LIFE. 1763-1786. (p. 53-361.)

I. Prefatory—II. Repairing of a ruined Prussia—III. Troubles in Poland—IV. Partition of Poland—V. A Chapter of Miscellanies—VI. The Bavarian War—VII. Miller Arnold's Lawsuit—VIII. The Fürstenbund: Friedrich's Last Years—IX. Friedrich's Last Illness and Death.

INDEX.

- ABEL, D. Otto, cited, iii. 21 n.
Abercromby, at Ticonderoga, vi. 409.
Académie des Sciences of Berlin, i. 302, ii. 88.
Achard, M., iii. 129.
Achilles, vi. 285.
Acre, Siege of, i. 94.
Adalbert's, St., attempt to convert Prussien to Christianity, i. 70, 97, iii. 869.
Adams, Johann, Bürgermeister, complains of French rapacity, vi. 273.
Adams, John Quincy, cited on Silesia, iv. 223.
Adams of Boston, "American Cato," viii. 212.
Adelung, cited, iii. 344 n., v. 11 n., vi. 85 n.
Adolf Friedrich, Prince, iv. 429, 430; marries Princess Ulrique, 432; King of Sweden, viii. 161; his death, 195.
Adolf of Nassau, Kais. r., i. 160.
Aganemnon's Sceptre, i. 1.
Aguesseau, Chancellor d', v. 256 n.
Ahlén, Castle of, i. 35, ii. 12, 31, 99; the "Ahlén Heritage," ii. 160, 183.
Ahlén, Die Herzogin von, i. 35 n.
Ahrenberg, Duke d', iv. 364, 440; at Dettingen, 377, v. 10, 61, 89, 99; gone all to hobetude, 151; at Sohr, 167; at Eger, vi. 94, 96; Leuthen, 307; Hochkirch, 387, 397; beaten by Prince Henri at Pretsch, vii. 152.
Aix-la-Chapelle, Charlemagne at, iii. 315; Treaty of, v. 245, 246, 415.
Akaki, Doctor, Voltaire's v. 381; publicly burnt, 385.
Alba, i. 210.
Albert mfl. i. 263.
Albert Achilles, Kurfürst, i. 178, 179; how he managed the Bishop of Bamberg, 181.
Albert Alcibiades of Balreuth, i. 192; a kind of "Failure of a Fritz," 211, 216, 230.
Albert, Archbishop of Mainz, i. 186; memorable Sale of Indulgences, 186; at the Diet of Augsburg, 199.
Albert Friedrich, Second Duke of Prussen, i. 241; his marriage, 242; overclouding of mind, 244; death, 265.
Albert I., Kaiser, harsh and ugly, i. 120, 121; assassinated by his nephew, 122.
Albert Henry, Prince of Brunswick, vi. 155.
Albert, Hochmeister, i. 202; difficulties about homage to Poland, 204; getting deep into Protestantism, 205; Hereditary Duke of Prussen, 208, 231; his second Wife; death, 240.
Albert, Prince of Brunswick, v. 143; killed at Sohr, 166.
Albert, Prince of Saxony, viii. 37.
Albert II., Kaiser, i. 161, 183; viii. 231.
Albert the Bear, the great Markgraf of Brandenburg, i. 79; origin of name, 83; descendants, 129.
Alderfeld, cited, i. 356 n.
Alémbert, D., v. 432; letters from Voltaire to, vii. 208, 209, 210; meets with the King at Geldern, viii. 70; declines the post of Perpetual President; letter to Madame du Deffand, 77; recommends Helvetius to Friedrich, 78; leaves Potsdam, 91; becomes Friedrich's chief correspondent, 203-210; writes to him of his interview with Kaiser Joseph, 245; his death, 324; mentioned also, 76 and n., 77 n., 148.
Alexander, vi. 291, 310.
Alexius, Czarowitz, ii. 405.
Algarotti, iii. 204; one of the first beaux-esprits of his age, iii. 279; with Friedrich at Strasburg, 281; mission to Sardinia, 416; at Breslau, iv. 184; position with Friedrich, v. 339, 435; death, vi. 298; mentioned also, iii. 246, 265, 306, 399, iv. 34.
Almon, cited, vi. 141 n.
Alphonso, King of Castile and sham Kaiser, i. 109, 142.
Alsace, iv. 375.
Altenburg, ii. 272.
Althan, Count d', viii. 152.
Altstadt, Treaty of, iii. 372, 385.
Amber, i. 69.
Ambitious, question for the, iv. 101.
Amelia, Dowager Empress, iv. 222.
Amelia, Princess of England, ii. 11, viii. 344.
Amelia, Princess of Prussia, ii. 21; in pecuniary trouble, iv. 357; Abbess of Quedlinburg, v. 282; at Berlin Carrousel, iv. 435; income small, 369; letter from Friedrich, vi. 125; visits Breslau, 311; gift from Friedrich, viii. 52; mentioned also, 200, 202, 311, 323, 346, 530.
Amelot, M., iv. 404, 415, v. 10.
America, i. 338; Salzburg Emigrants to, ii. 439.
American Colonies in great need of a commander, vi. 143; prediction of their re-

- volt, vii. 153-158; America to be English and not French, 158, viii. 393; a considerable Fact in the History of the World, 58; unconscious Declaration of Anarchy, ending at last in hideous suicide, 54, 55; America refuses to be taxed by a British Parliament; Boston Tea-catastrophe, 211, 212.
- Amherst, General, worth of, discerned by Pitt, vi. 328; captures Louisbourg, 350; Montreal, vii. 160.
- Amiability, iii. 387.
- Ammon, Von, v. 319.
- Amöneburg, cannonade at, viii. 31, 32.
- Anarchies, Millennium of, viii. 54; not permitted in this World, 103.
- André, St., vii. 139.
- Andrie, Excellency, v. 410.
- Andrieux, viii. 302 n.
- Anecdotes of Friedrich, vi. 284, 285, viii. 57.
- Anhalt, Adjutant von, viii. 27, 67, 153, 154, 223 n. 273, 336.
- Anhalt, Graf von, vi. 166; the Anhalt forced contributions to Friedrich's war-expenses, vii. 15.
- Anhalt-Zerbst, i. 80, 180, ii. 249, iv. 430.
- Anne of Cleves, i. 242.
- Anne of Courland, afterwards Czarina, ii. 127, 131 n., 249, 393, iii. 51, 82, 213, 342; death of, 355, iv. 21.
- Anne, Princess of Russia, formerly of Mecklenburg, iv. 22, 24, 44.
- Anson, Commodore, iii. 346, iv. 134; his memorable Voyage, 141.
- Anspach, i. 107, 186, ii. 279. See Culmbach, Frederika Louisa.
- Anspach, Margraf of, vi. 178.
- Anspach, Margraf of (Lady Craven's), with Friedrich at Neisse, viii. 137.
- Anspach, Margravine of. See Frederika Louisa.
- Antoinette, Amelia, of Brunswick, ii. 407.
- Anton, Ulrich, Czar Iwan's Father, iii. 355; iv. 22; exile, 25, 27.
- Anton Ulrich, of Brunswick, ii. 27, 406, 407; his Great-grandson, 403; iii. 184, 215.
- Antwerp, i. 64, 60.
- Apes, Dead-Sea, i. 172.
- Applewomen knitting at their Stalls, i. 333, 341.
- Appunin, Feldmarschall, in Prussen, vi. 175, 218, 231; retires slowly home, 218; indignantly dismissed by the Czarina, 315.
- Aprill, Dr., tries to serve Citation on Plottho, vi. 240, 242.
- Archenholz, cited, v. 444 n.; on the "Oblique Order," vi. 290, 295; on Lord George Backville, vii. 63; Prince Henri's march of fifty hours, 146; Prussian recruiting-system, 217; at battle of Leignitz, vii. 281; wounded at Torgau, 327, 334; at Leipzig, noticing vividly to right and left, 366; Prussian and French exertions, 366, 367; the camp of Bunselwitz, 323; siege of Colberg, 421; the Seven-Years' War, viii. 47; mentioned also, vii. 243, 247, 294.
- Argens, Marquis d', iv. 261, 263, 271, 417; v. 302, 317, 241, 335, 353; the King's friend for nearly thirty years, 339; visits Friedrich at Breslau, vi. 312, 313; letters from Friedrich, 101-103, 310, 373; vii. 172, 173, 188; preface to Œuvres de Poësie, 190; the confidant of Friedrich's miseries, 226; letters from Friedrich to, vii. 260, 296, 308, 333, 334, 446, 447; visits him at Leipzig, 349; viii. 40; surprised to see him amusing himself with his dogs, 350; his death, 93.
- Argenson, Marquis d', letter from Voltaire to, iv. 347; their personal friendship, 404; v. 146, 231; vi. 314.
- Argental, D', v. 283, 287, 319, 334, 251; vi. 226; letters from Voltaire about Friedrich, vii. 304, 305-308.
- Aristocracies, mutinous, tamed down, i. 162, 241, 242, 245. See Pride of place.
- Army, value of a good, i. 335; ii. 51, 52.
- Arnaud, M., Baculard d', v. 284, 296, 317, 319.
- Arnim, Minister of Justice, v. 242.
- Arnim's Major, gallant defence at Frankfurt, vii. 67, 68.
- Arnold Miller, vii. 48; his lawsuit, viii. 380; 305.
- Arouet, M., Senior, iii. 173. See Voltaire.
- Arundel, Earl of, cited, i. 276 n.
- Ascanier, Markgraves, i. 114, 129; resuscitated, 134, 155, 142.
- Aschersleben, i. 79.
- A-siento, Treaty of, iv. 120.
- Assau, D', at Kloster Kampen, vii. 341.
- Asseburg finds a Wife for Czarowitch Paul, viii. 209.
- Astrua, Mamsell, an Italian singer, v. 365.
- Astruc, Dr., v. 340.
- Atours, Dame d', iv. 262.
- Atli, v. 340.
- Attorneys, a fat affair for the, i. 252, 255, 265; extirpation of the attorney species, v. 255.
- Augsburg, Diet of, i. 197; ii. 275, 336.
- August Ferdinand, ii. 24; iii. 235.
- August Theodor, Kur-Pfalz, v. 154.
- August the Strong, i. 55, 347, 399, 405; ii. 343; objects to the Kaiser's Pragmatic Sanction, ii. 33; quarrel with Friedrich Wilhelm, 110; invites him and Friedrich to Dresden, 115; magnificent hospitalities and unspeakable pollutions, 119; his return visit, 123; rumour of a projected marriage with Wilhelmina, 129; Camp of Radewitz, 244; King of Playhouse managers, 254; attained the maximum in several things, 257; meditates partition of Poland, iii. 82; viii. 111; last interview with Grumkow, iii. 38; death and abdication, 47; his hunting-lodge, vi. 65.
- August III. of Poland, iii. 50, 53, 104, 108; suggested for Kaiser, v. 53; his antipathy to Friedrich, 83, 142; how he was benefited by Brühl and Guarini, 87; taken comfortably to Prag to be out of danger, 186; glad to make peace, 197; Hanbury's account of, 283; withdraws to Pirna, and tries negotiation with Friedrich, vi. 27, 28; Headquarters at Struppen, 38, 39; will not agree to Friedrich's terms, 40; snug in the Königstein, 65, 66; goes to Warsaw,

- never to come back, 69; gets no compensation for his Saxon losses; nothing but confusions and contradictions in Poland, viii. 96; difficulties with Czarina Catharine, and death, 99. See Kur-Sachsen.
- Angust Wilhelm, ii. 24; with Friedrich at Strasburg, iii. 291; betrothed, 333; married, iv. 244; at his Sister's wedding, 432; heir-apparent of Prussia, v. 370; opposition views, vi. 14, 15; letter to Valori, 55, 56; lamentations and accusations, vi. 164, 168; put in command at Jung-Buntzau, 171, 175; finds the problem too hard for him, 182; council of war, 186; a disastrous march, 186; cannot save Zittau, 187, 188; reaches Bantzen, happily unchased, 188; stern reception by the King, 190-192; his death, 194, 338; antipathy to Winterfeld, 201; mentioned also, iii. 278, 336, 339, 399; iv. 62, 412.
- Anlaire, Marquis de St., v. 229.
- Ansterlitz, i. 14.
- Australia, i. 338.
- Austria, i. 64, 66; Kaisers of, still riding on the shadow of a saddle, 121; the "Austrian lrp," 183, 219; rejection of Protestantism, 219; an Austrian swindle, 230; iii. 26; Austrian Succession War, iv. 90, 319; conservatism, 96, 172; ponderous pedantry and helplessness, 173, 178; dumb stubborn pride, 308; extraordinary Claim for Damages, 306, 309; no longer the leading nation of Teutschland, v. 210, 211; share in the partitioning of Prussia, v. 83; fixed rage and hatred, 83; does not claim Parma and Piacenza, vii. 214; gets into sore difficulties as to cash, x. 423; anxious to get rid of its pledge to the Reich; truce with Friedrich, vii. 39; peace and general As-you-were, 48; takes forcible possession of Zips, 163, 164; share in the partition of Poland, 171, 172; intrigues and bargains for succession of Bavaria, 248.
- Anteroche, Marquis d', at Fontenoy, v. 110, 111.
- Autograph (facsimile) of Friedrich's Letter of "Secret Instruction &c.," vi. 80 a; Signature, viii. 438.
- Ayscough, cited, ii. 153 n.
- BACHAUMONT and La Chapelle, Voyage de, iii. 293 n.; cited, vii. 194 n.
- Bichmann for three days Russian Commandant of Berlin, vii. 303.
- Bacon, Lord, i. 263.
- Baden-Durlach, Prince of, at Hochkirch, vi. 388, 397.
- Bagien, Dr., v. 386.
- Baiern, Kur, sends embassy to Friedrich, viii. 393; in subsidy of France, 339.
- Bailles, Dr., viii. 226.
- Baillet, cited, i. 71 n.
- Bailli de Fronlay, vii. 108, 202.
- Balreuth, i. 107, 188; genealogy, 309; ii. 442. See Culmbach, Albert Alcibiades, Friedrich of.
- Baireuth, Margraf of, iv. 257, 258, 414; vi. 178; vii. 28. Margravine of, see Wilhelmina.
- Balaclava, ii. 442.
- Balance of Power, ii. 44, 46, 47; v. 11.
- Balbi, Engineer, v. 432; vi. 13, 206, 330; at Siege of Schweidnitz, viii. 139; Olmutz, 35, 36, 337, 339.
- Ballenstadt, i. 73, 84.
- Baltmore, Lord, iii. 205.
- Bamberg, i. 77; ii. 412; Croats driven out of, vii. 28.
- Bamberg, Bishop of, iii. 280; vi. 176.
- Bar, Confederation of, viii. 124, 125.
- Bar, Graf von, ii. 160.
- Barbarossa, Kaiser, i. 78, 80, 84, 88; the greatest of all the Kaisers, 86; German tradition about him, 88; ii. 433; changed times, i. 140; ii. 208, 437; iii. 260; iv. 95.
- Barberina, an Opera-Dancer, iv. 429; engagement at Berlin, 444; hospitality to Collini, v. 278, 282, 283.
- Barbier, cited, i. 170 n.; ii. 20 n.; iii. 239 n.; v. 11 n.; on the French account of their grand invasion scheme, vii. 187.
- Birenklau, General von, iv. 241, 268; at Stockstadt, v. 12; swept from Bavaria, 40; returns with Bathyan, 90.
- Barouay, Major-General, at Rothschloss, iv. 143.
- Bartenstein, Austrian Minister, iii. 240; iv. 173; v. 173.
- Bartholomew, St., night of, i. 220.
- Basel, i. 112.
- Bastian promoted by Friedrich, viii. 309, 314.
- Bathyan summoned to relief of Prag, v. 27; at Beraun, 28; troubles Friedrich's march through Bohemia, 35, 36, 43; in Bavaria, 70, 75, 90; supersedes D'Ahrenberg, 90, 145.
- Baty Khan, iii. 13.
- Bauer, Colonel, at Weesl, viii. 44, 45; in the Russian-Turk War, viii. 156.
- Baumgarten, Skirmish of, iv. 35.
- Bavaria, Kurfürst of, i. 33; ii. 308.
- Bavarian-Succession War, viii. 248, 279.
- Bayle, i. 44, 412.
- Beatson, cited, iv. 47 n.; vii. 425 n.
- Bentson, Colonel, cited, vii. 187 and note.
- Beaufremont, vii. 187.
- Benumarchals, Voltaire papers saved by, iv. 407, 410; cited, viii. 41 n.
- Beaumelle's, M. Angliviel de la, enmity to Voltaire, v. 354, 355, 399; cited, 292 n.; account of Maupertuis, vii. 181, 182, 183.
- Beausobre, M. de, i. 45; ii. 127.
- Beauvais, women fighting at the siege of, viii. 316 n.
- Beauvau, Marquis de, French Ambassador to Berlin, iii. 352; Audience of leave, 362; mentioned also, 366.
- Beauvyre, Captain, vii. 27.
- Beck, General, advanced to relief of Prag, vi. 118; captures Düringshofen's battalion, vii. 30; captures Dierecke and his post at Meissen, 174; attacks General Czetteritz, 220; with London in Silesia, vii. 388; defeated at Reichenbach, viii. 23, 24; mentioned also, vi. 185, 195; vii. 278, 288; viii. 143.
- Becket, Thomas à, i. 84.
- Beckwith, Colonel, at Warberg, vii. 263.
- Weesl, viii. 44, 45.

- Beelzebub not God, i. 17; worshippers of, 169; August's Saxon Court of, ii. 119, 143.
- Bein, Proviant-master, viii. 240.
- Belgard, iii. 203.
- Bell, Herr Hofrath, v. 310.
- Belleisle, Chevalier de, a magnanimous high-flown spirit, iv. 15; his brother's right hand, 119, 302; death at the Pass of Exilles, or Col di Sieta, v. 238; mentioned also, 71, 72, 73.
- Belleisle, Comte de, iv. 14, 15; his German Enterprise, 15, 96; with Friedrich at Brieg, 58; mainly to blame for the Austrian-Succession War, 93; consummate skill, 109, 110; grandiose schemes, 110, 153, 259; successful manipulation, 112; visits Friedrich, 117; proceeds to Dresden and München, 113; takes up his abode in Frankfurt, 118, 170; Treaty with Friedrich, 167; a kind of Dictator, 177; his Army crosses the Rhine, 196, 196; rheumatic fever, 234; partial recovery, 239; visits Wilhelmina, 257; Sahay, 290; interview with Friedrich at Kutenberg, 303; Colloquy with Broglia at Prag, 328; defends Praz, 329; much distinguishes himself, 336; gallant retreat, 351, 354; German enterprise ruined, 387; gives Friedrich bad advice about his Bohemian Campaign, iv. 32; in München, 70-72; on his road to Berlin, 72-73; arrested, and carried to England, 74, 75; in Italy, 221, 230, 238; his grand schemes all bankrupt, 246; War-Minister, vi. 314, 410; vii. 56, 179, 188; loses his only son at Crefeld, vi. 349; astonished at Friedrich's marching power, 409; letters to Contades published by Ferdinand, vii. 63, 189; dies of putrid fever; the last of the grand old Frenchmen, vii. 369, 370; mentioned also, v. 10; vi. 40.
- Belleisle, General, iii. 51, 56, 103.
- Belleisle, Madame de, interview with Wilhelmina, iv. 257.
- Belling, Colonel, in Pommern, vi. 319; looks after the Swedes, vii. 446; in battle of Freyberg, viii. 37; in Bavarian War, 272; mentioned also, 163.
- Benda, the Brothers, iii. 121.
- Beneckendorf, cited, ii. 90 n.
- Bene-chau, Schwerin takes, v. 34.
- Bén-zet, Mamsell, viii. 325.
- Beneckendorf, Lieutenant-Colonel, turns the fortune of battle at Kolin, vi. 161; small recognition of his service, 164, 165.
- Ben-zet, Prussian Secretary, v. 428.
- Bentenrieder, the kidnapped Ambassador, i. 60; ii. 146.
- Benthani, cited, i. 67 n.
- Bentinck, Madame de, vii. 206.
- Beraun, Action of, v. 28.
- Berenhorst, Heinrich von, vi. 158.
- Berenhorst, cited, iii. 188 n.; vi. 107; pique against Friedrich; his "Art of War," vii. 323.
- Berzen, battle of, vii. 25, 26.
- Bergen-op-Zoom, Siege of, v. 239.
- Bergerie, M. de la, i. 41.
- Berghover, Legation-rath, iv. 255.
- Berg-Jülich, iii. 234, iv. 103.
- Berlichingen, General, at Mollwitz, iv. 76, 78; in Silesia, v. 124.
- Berlin, early condition of, i. 115; Palace at, 173, 302; Royal Academy of, ii. 88; St. Peter's Church burnt down, ii. 242; Friedrich Wilhelm's building operations, 309; Homaging at, iii. 208; Treaty of, 204; opening of the Opera-House, 314; Carrousel, vi. 279, 282; entered by Haddick, v. 204, 238; agony of commotion at the news of Künersdorf, vii. 92, 93; seized by Tottleben and Lacy, vii. 300, 305.
- Bernburg, Prince of, at siege of Schweidnitz, viii. 28, 29.
- Bernburg, Regiment, at Siege of Dresden, vii. 252; at Liegnitz, 253, 256.
- Berne, Oligarchy of, v. 373.
- Berneck, iii. 72.
- Bernhard of Weimar, ii. 283.
- Bernis, Cardinal de, v. 459, 460; vii. 9; Letter from Voltaire, vii. 205, 206.
- Bernouilli, Jean, iii. 296.
- Bernouilli of Basel, vii. 181.
- Bertin, Captain, at Weissenfels, v. 247.
- Berwick, Maréchal Duc de, iii. 61; at Philippsburg, 63, 68.
- Besserer, ii. 325.
- Bestuchef, Chancellor, dismissed, vi. 315.
- Bestuchef, Russian Chancellor, v. 456.
- Beutelsbachers, the, ii. 200.
- Beyern, Brunswick, Duke of, vi. 26, 28; in the battle of Lobositz, 53, 54; advances towards Prag, vi. 93; defeats Königseck at Reichenberg, 96, 96, 98; sent after Dann, 127; finds Dann too strong, 148; joined by the King, 149; retreat from Kolin, 162, 163; at Jung-Buntzlau, 183; at Görlitz to guard Silesia, 196, 197; jealous of Winterfeld, 198, 200; retires into Silesia, 202, 275, 277; defeated at Breslau, 202; prisoner; graciously sent home again; ordered to Stettin, 278; vigilant against the Swedes, 319; diligent at Stettin, vii. 403; defeats the Austrians at Reichenbach, viii. 22, 27; great merit, not of dexterity alone, 29; left in charge of Silesia, viii. 30.
- Bias, iv. 157.
- Bible, Hebrew, i. 25.
- Bichfeld, iii. 180, 186, 205, 208; his description of George II., iii. 272, 273; at siege of Netze, iv. 219; Duchess of Würtemberg, 261; Friedrich's victorious return from Silesia, 300; marriage of Princess Ulrique, 433; death, viii. 93; mentioned also, iii. 234, 235, 339, 351, 361; v. 324; cited, ii. 57 n.; v. 359 n.
- Bieren, Duke of Courland, ii. 393; iii. 235; to Siberia, iv. 23; Bieren and Münich refuse to be reconciled, vii. 453; to be again Duke of Courland, viii. 99, 102.
- Bismark, Herr Minister von, v. 311.
- Björn-tahl, M., viii. 204.
- Blair in Athol, Siege of, v. 91.
- Blakeney, Governor, strives to defend Minorca, vi. 10, 11; at Minorca, vi. 203.
- Blas, Don, Governor of Carthage, iv. 133, 136.
- Blenheim, Battle of, i. 323; ii. 235.
- Bligh, General, at Morlaix, vi. 410.

- Blonquet, General Thomas von, vii. 107.
 Blücher, Prince of Wahlstatt, vii. 277.
 Blumenthal, cited, iii. 102 n.; v. 119 n.; 308 n.; Minister von, viii. 74.
 Blumenthal, Frau von, iv. 144 n.; cited, vi. 281 n.
 Boden, Prussian Finance-Minister, iii. 255, 273; v. 101.
 Boerhaave, v. 341.
 Bohemian Papists, v. 38, 48.
 Boleslaus, Duke of Poland, i. 73.
 Bolingbroke, iii. 137, 140.
 Boll, cited, vii. 374 n.
 Bollandus, cited, i. 73 n.
 Boniface VIII., i. 191.
 Bonneville, M. de, Revolutionary spiritualist, i. 170 n.; vi. 193, 194.
 Bonneville, M. de, the Demon Newswriter, stealer and editor of Œuvres du Philosophe de Sans-Souci, and author of Matinées du Roi de Prusse, vii. 191-194; swindling exploit and lodgment in Spandau, 194, 195.
 Borck, Adjutant-General, accompanies the King to Silesia, iii. 373; at Breslau, 407, 408; iv. 39.
 Borck, Finance Manager, vii. 126.
 Borck, General, ii. 166, 172, 195, 200, 203, 263, 349; Major-General, manages the Herstal Affair, iii. 319; at Neisse, 422; mentioned also, 278, 280.
 Borcily, M., vii. 451.
 Boscawen, Admiral, vi. 380; chases and destroys the Toulon fleet, vii. 112, 113.
 Bose, Baron von, vi. 260.
 Boston refuses to admit taxed tea, viii. 211, 212.
 Bosworth, i. 182.
 Botta d'Adorno, Marquis, v. 221.
 Botta, Marchese di, Austrian Envoy to Berlin, iii. 359; to Russia, iv. 24.
 Bougainville, M., vii. 157.
 Bouillé's, Marquis de, recollections of Friedrich, viii. 281-286.
 Bourbon Family Compact, the, viii. 424, 425.
 Bourbonism, iii. 323.
 Bourcet, cited, viii. 392 n.
 Boyer, cited, ii. 70 n.
 Braddock, General, sent to America, v. 423; his death, 423; his field of battle, vi. 410.
 Brandenburg, early condition of, i. 60, 67; early Markgraves, 73, 79; Ascanian Markgraves, 100, 114, 129; how Brandenburg and the Hohenzollern Family came together, 130, 131; Bavarian Kurfürst, 131, 133; a resuscitated Ascanier, 134, 142; Luxemburg Kurfürst, 144; Brandenburg in Pawn, 150; sold to Friedrich of Hohenzollern, 157; Noble refractory Robber-lords, 163; Heavy Peg, 164; beginning of the Prussian Nation, 166; Brandenburg under the Hohenzollerns, 167; lucky enough to adopt the Reformation, 217; Nadir-point of the Brandenburg Hohenzollerns, 274; condition during the Thirty-Years War, 276; again a flourishing country, 280; Swedes driven out, 289.
 Brandes, Colonel, at Prag, v. 56, 57.
 Branicki, viii. 119.
 Breda, Congress of, v. 236.
 Bredow, leads charge at Chotusitz, iv. 291; General, v. 347.
 Breitenbach, General, at Hastenbeck, vi. 190.
 Breder, Herr, iii. 91.
 Brenkendorf, Minister von, viii. 202.
 Brenkenhof, Privy-Councillor von, viii. 364.
 Brentano, enters Saxony, vii. 113; at siege of Dresden, 117, 145; at Maxen, 167, 170; at Reichenbach, viii. 23, 24; mentioned, also, 148.
 Breslau, iii. 369; able to defend itself, 370, 386; bottled emotion, 400; quiet surrender to Friedrich, 407; unsettled condition, iv. 39; attempted deliverance, 116; wholly Friedrich's, 189; Homaging, 220; Treaty of, 304; battle of, vi. 277, 278; surrendered to the Austrians, 279; recovered by Friedrich, 305; defended by Taubentzen, against Loudon, vii. 267, 268.
 Breteuil, at Congress of Teschen, viii. 278.
 Breton, Cape, capture of, v. 116, 417.
 Bribery, Parliamentary, iv. 125.
 Brieg, iii. 412; siege of, iv. 115.
 Britannic Army of observation, vi. 85.
 Britton, cited, vi. 327 n.
 Broglie, Excellency, v. 21, 27; demands admission to the Saxon Camp at Pirna, vi. 39; defends Caswell, vii. 364.
 Broglie, Maréchal, surprised by the Austrians at Seocchia, iii. 80; Commandant in Strasburg, iii. 287; receives Friedrich inognito, 289, 291; General of the French Army, iv. 234, 239, 246; Bivouac of Pisch, 238; general incompetency, 265, 266, 284, 336, 341, 365; Skirmish of Sahay, 379; demands D'Harcourt's reinforcements, 325; hurried retreat before Prince Karl, 328; Colloquy with Belleisle, 329; takes command of the Bavarian Army, 343; relieves Braunau, 355; interview with the Kaiser, 361; writes for Order home, 365; retreats across the Rhine, 366; ordered to his own Estates; death, 387; mentioned also, vii. 261.
 Broglie, Maréchal, at Rossbach, vi. 244, 247, 256, 257; the two extreme points of his career, Rossbach and the fall of the Bawille, 266; at Sangerhausen, 271; fight of Sandershausen, 412 n.; at Frankfurt-on-Mayne, vii. 21; repulses Ferdinand at Bergen, 24, 25; at Minden, 56-63; vehemently manoeuvres against Duke Ferdinand, 261, 264; lays hold of Göttingen, 239; defeated at Langensalza; loses his winter magazines, 361, 363; gets into quarrel with Soult, and is defeated by Ferdinand at Vellinghausen, 301, 392.
 Bromley's Collection of Royal Letters, i. 156 n.
 Browne, General, born German, iii. 382; tries to defend Breslau, 400; a superior soldier, 411, 413, 424; back to Glatz, iv. 34; at Mollwitz, 78; in Bavaria, v. 80; in Italy, 221, 222, n., 238; in Bohemia, vi. 31, 38; enthusiastic help to him, 42; marches to the relief of the Saxons, 42, 43; battle of Lobositz, 46-54; retreats to Budin, 53; will try it another way, 57;

- arrives at Lichtenhain, 58; hears nothing from the Saxons, 62; a right valiant soldier and man, 63, 64; recommends Loudon, 76; securing posts in the Metal Mountains, vi. 92; has to retire suddenly to defend Prag, 92, 95, 98; altercations with Prince Karl, 94, 100; battle of Prag, 106, 110; mortally wounded, 114; his last council, 117; death, 117, 145, 171; mentioned also, iii. 378, 8-0, iv. 51.
- Brühl, Count, ii. 125, iv. 105, 145; no friend to Friedrich, v. 24, 80; regards him with perfect hatred, 83, 85, 142, 146, 175; twelve tailors always sewing for him, 87; great schemes against Friedrich, 149, 172, 173, 175; cannot keep his secret, 175; rage yellower than ever, 186; doom of nations governed by Brühls, 190, 195, vi. 31, 61, 72; Brühl a much-illuminated man, v. 197; afraid of Friedrich, 438, 443; plots to set the Czarina against him, 444-446; Prussian invasion, vi. 20; withdraws with Polish Majesty to Pirna, 27, 38, 39, 65; communicates with Browne, 59; goes to Warsaw, 69; Brühl's property alone respected by the French, vi. 270; enmity to Friedrich, 407; death, viii. 92, 100; his voracity for lands in Poland, 105.
- Brühl, Madame, vi. 75.
- Brummel, Beau, v. 409.
- Brunswick-Bevern, Ferdinand Albert Duke of, ii. 406, iii. 63, 68, 107. See Elizabeth Christina; Karl Duke of; Bevern.
- Brunswick, Hereditary Prince of, dashes out of Fulda on the Reich's folk, vii. 22, 24; drives out the French post at Gohfeld, 54, 62; marches into Saxony to aid Friedrich, 176; drives the Duke of Württemberg out of Fulda, 178, 179; at Korbach; at Embsdorf, vii. 261; Kloster Kampen, 339, 342; surprised by Braglio, 363; generally had command of the English troops, 397; in the Bavarian War, viii. 277; mentioned also, 144, 356.
- Brunswick. See Anton Ulrich; Christian of.
- Buccow, General, killed at Torgau, vii. 330.
- Buch, Johann von, i. 118.
- Buchholz, ii. 445; cited, i. 332 n., 399 n., v. 40 n., viii. 10.
- Buchwald, Frau von, vi. 212, 214.
- Buddaus, cited, i. 223 n..
- Buddaus, Dr. v. 271.
- Buddenbrock, General, ii. 270, 283, 241, 431, iii. 9, 13, 123; at Chotusitz, v. 290, 291, 292; at Sohr, v. 165, 166; mentioned also, viii. 310.
- Bülicher, Camp at, iii. 333.
- Budget, Fixed, value of a, iii. 263.
- Bülow, General, with Friedrich at Liegnitz, vii. 276; at Camp of Bunzelwitz, 337, 405.
- Bülow, Mamsell, ii. 197, 207, 311, 324.
- Bunan, cited, i. 83 n.
- Buonamici, cited, iv. 332 n., v. 221 n.
- Burgoyne, Brigadier, in Portugal, vii. 429, 430.
- Burk, Lieutenant, in Portugal, vii. 430.
- Burke, Edmund, v. 275.
- Burkersdorf Heights, Storming of, viii. 12, 19.
- Burney's, Dr., account of his visit to Voltaire, viii. 218-219.
- Burna, Robert, i. 384.
- Büsching, cited, i. 83 n., 248 n., 290 n., ii. 431 n., iii. 257, 280 n., iv. 10, v. 305, 113 n., v. 15 n.; crude authenticity, ii. 4-2 n.; Russian Mission, iv. 45; at Petersburg, vii. 450; homage to Czar Peter, 453; sees the Czar on horseback, 455; tumult and revolution, 459, 462; Nüssler's Interview with the King, viii. 63, 65; a dull, though solid, accurate kind of man, 427; interviews with Queen Ulrique, 198-200; gets a new Town Schoolhouse for Berlin, 200; mentioned also, 189, 810.
- Bussey, Sieur de, vii. 398, 424; conducts Choiseul's negotiations with Pitt, 425.
- Bute, Lord, vi. 213, vii. 345, 348, 425, 427, 431; his shameful peace, viii. 20, 34, 35, 43.
- Buttnrlin, Feldmarschall, to command the Russian Army in Silesia, vii. 377; will not venture upon Friedrich at Bunzelwitz, 385; altercations with Loudon, 387; returns homewards, accelerated by General Platen, 389, 390; sends reinforcements to Romanzow at Colberg, 403; returns to Poland, 420.
- Byng, Admiral, i. 466, ii. 37, vi. 10, 11; burnt in Effigy, 25.
- CADIZ, blockade of, iv. 739.
- Cæsar, vi. 291, 310, vii. 294.
- Cagliostro, viii. 344, 759.
- Calas, Widow, vii. 210.
- Callenberg, Grafin von, iv. 59, 281.
- Calmet, Dom, v. 403.
- Calonne, Controller-General, viii. 243, 255.
- Calvin, i. 307, 412, ii. 326.
- Camas, Colonel, i. 393; sent to the French Court, iii. 235; to Glatz, 411, 414; death, iv. 87.
- Camas, Madame, Friedrich's great respect for, i. 394, iv. 87; his Letters to, ii. 85, vii. 338, 370, 447; her death, viii. 93.
- Cambral, Congress of, i. 406, ii. 38.
- Cameron, Dr. Archibald, v. 413; executed, 418.
- Cameron of Lochiel, iv. 418.
- Cameron, Dr. viii. 249.
- Campbell, cited, i. 406 n.
- Campbell, John, Duke of Argyll, iv. 521.
- Campitelli, General, marches to join Soltikof, vii. 138.
- Campitelli, viii. 26.
- Canada, English and French in, v. 416.
- Candidatus Theologie, a, and the King of Prussia, i. 342.
- Cannabich, Pastor, v. 256.
- Carlos II. of Spain, i. 55.
- Carlos III. of Spain, ii. 304, iii. 57; King of the Two Sicilies, 58, 103, iv. 323, v. 247 n., 435; a diligent, indignant kind of man, vii. 213; declares war against England, vii. 424, viii. 399; quarrels with Portugal on account of England, 420-430.
- Carlowitz, Captain, at Prag, v. 57.
- Carlyle, cited, viii. 349 n.

- Carmer, Silesian-Chancellor von, viii. 261 n.
 Carmichael, the Scottish, iv. 304.
 Caroline, Queen, i. 159, ii. 10, 158, 200, 212, 230; a beautiful Brandenburg-Anspach Princess, ii. 27; refuses the Catholic Kaiser, ii. 403; Friedrich's Letters to, 134, 197; visit to her foolish Son, iii. 168; modest stoicism and death, 169; mentioned also, iv. 124.
 Carr, cited, i. 83 n.
 Carteret, Lord, i. 364, iv. 49, 322, 367, 374; conferences at Hanau, 390; replies to Pitt's threat of resignation, vii. 426, 427; mentioned also, v. 40, 92, 215, 410, vi. 134.
 Caszig, ii. 366, 374.
 Carthagena, Expedition against, iii. 346, iv. 122, 140.
 Casano, Bridge of, i. 300, 323.
 Casimir IV., King of Poland, i. 122.
 Casimir. See Culmbach; Poland.
 Casimir V. See John Casimir.
 Castéra, cited, viii. 115 n.
 Castries, Marquis de, defends Wesel, vii. 341, 342.
 Catechisms, Theological, i. 412, 413.
 Catharine of Russia, i. 79, 180; ii. 249; v. 452, 456; one of the cleverest of young ladies, 457; her married life; rapid succession of lovers, vii. 442, 114, 115; books about her, 443; becomes Czarina of Russia, 444; shocked at Colonel Hordt's treatment, 452; misgivings about her husband's fate; gracious attentions to Hordt; discerns that either Peter or she must fall, 458; conspires for his destruction, 460, 463; manifesto against Prussia; afterwards withdrawn, 464; treaty of alliance with Friedrich, viii. 94; difficulties with Poland, 100; virtual sovereign of Poland, and intends to keep so, 113; a kind of she-Louis Quatorze; never in the least a Cat or a Devil towards Poland, 114; makes Poniatowski king, 115; gets impatient of the Dissident Question, 120; locks up the refractory Bishops, 123 (see Turk War); enmity to Maria Theresa, 162, 169; sumptuously entertains Prince Henri, 163, 167; proposes dismemberment of Poland, 168; her share in the partition, 171, 172, 181; mediates on the Bavarian Succession question, 277; forms alliance with Kaiser Joseph, and hopes to get Constantinople and a new Greek Empire, 306-307; mentioned also, vii. 412 n., viii. 302, 314; viii. 329.
 Cathcart, Charles Lord, iv. 135.
 Catherine, Wife of Ozer Peter, i. 363; at Berlin, 368, 370; ii. 45.
 Catherine-Alexievna, formerly Sophie-Fredrike of Anhalt-Zerbst, iv. 431.
 Catholic Religion, mournful state of, iii. 229.
 Catva, De, first interview with Friedrich, v. 433; enters his service, 435; at Breslau, vi. 312; Hochkirch, 399; surprise at Friedrich's "Sermon on the Last Judgment," vii. 12; introduces Zimmermann to the King, viii. 190, 195.
 Caulaincourt, vi. 318 n.
 Canmartin, M., iii. 133.
 Cellamare, Ambassador, i. 366.
 Chalmers, cited, vii. 346 n.
 Chapelle, La. See Bachanmont.
 Charlemagne, i. 62; iv. 316.
 Charles XII. of Sweden, i. 153; iii. 48; arrives suddenly at Stralsund, i. 347; his surprising career, 347, 355, 364; desperate defence of Stralsund, 353; assassinated at Frederickshall, 366; last of the Swedish Kings, 366, 367; Treaty of Altranstadt, iii. 372, 385; iv. 29. See Karl XII.
 Charles Amadeus, King of Sardinia, iv. 106.
 Charles Edward, the Young Pretender, iv. 438.
 Charles Emanuel, King of Sardinia, iv. 331, 332; iv. 420.
 Charlotte, Queen, ii. 183, 442; her Father, iii. 162, 164; Ancestress of England, v. 283; Princess of Mecklenburg, vii. 370; letter to the King of Prussia, 373, 374; question of authenticity, 374.
 Charlotte. See Philippina.
 Charlottenburg, i. 43, 49; George I. at, ii. 17.
 Chasot, Lieutenant, fights a duel; is introduced to Friedrich, iii. 91, 122; becomes Prussian Major of Horse, iv. 417; Lieutenant-Colonel, v. 137, 405; affront on his Austrian friend, 363, 264; Voltaire's Hirsch affair, 309, 345; mentioned also, vii. 355.
 Châteauroux, Madame de la, iv. 196, 402, 415, 424; her Ministry, v. 11; with Louis XV. in the Netherlands, ii. damed, 16; death, 19.
 Châtelet, Madame du, iii. 144, 155; not invited by King Friedrich, iii. 274; hope disappointed, 302; her relation to Voltaire not so celestial as it once was, iv. 403, 418; with Voltaire on a visit at Soaux, v. 227-234; intrigue with M. de St. Lambert, 235, 236; death from child-birth, 252, 253; mentioned also, iv. 345, 358; iv. 222.
 Châtelet, Marquis du, in Maillebois's Army, iv. 230; at Dingelfingen, 366, 368; mentioned also, v. 276, 253, 233.
 Chauvelin, M. de, v. 347.
 Chewerfeld, Lord, ii. 212, 225, 315; iv. 452; v. 244, 260, 410; cited, 253 n.
 Chotardis, Marquis de la, iii. 97, 101; iv. 424.
 Chevert, French Brigadier, at Prag, iv. 353, 354, vi. 190; Meer, 411 n.
 Chivalry Orders, Era of, i. 95.
 Chlum, Camp of, v. 141.
 Chlumetz, iii. 15.
 Chodowiecki, i. 363; ii. 272; his Engravings, viii. 232 n., 283 n.
 Choiseul, Duc de, French Minister of Foreign Affairs, vii. 9, 139, 140, 168; implicated in publication of Œuvres de l'Abbé de Saint-Sauveur, vii. 194; tries to make mischief between Pitt and Friedrich, vii. 202, 203; letter from Voltaire, 2 8; vii. 231; issues peace proposals, 368, 369; succeeds Belleisle as War-Minister, 370; spasmodic effort towards Hanover,

- 391, 395: artful negotiations with Pitt, 393, 399, 423; intrigues with Poland and Turkey, 181, 155: his death, 840.
- Chotusitz, Battle of, iv. 228, 235; topography of, 236.
- Christian Ernst of Balreuth, ii. 308.
- Christian Ernst of Saalfeld-Coburg, ii. 274.
- Christian of Anhalt, i. 257, 270.
- Christian of Brunswick, i. 269, 271.
- Christian II. of Denmark, a rash, unwise, explosive man, i. 222, 225.
- Christian IV. of Denmark, i. 270, 280.
- Christian Wilhelm, Archbishop of Magdeburg, i. 271, 280.
- Cldeville, M. de, iii. 309; iv. 346.
- Cimburgia, i. 183.
- Claïrant, the Mathematician, letter from Voltaire to, vii. 209.
- Clamel, Meadow of, ii. 165, 168.
- Clarendon, Earl of, v. 185.
- Clayton, General, iv. 368.
- Clemence, Princess, Wife of Prince Clement, iv. 257.
- Clemens, Engraver, viii. 346 n.
- Clement August. See Köln.
- Clement, the Hungarian Swindler, i. 325, 405.
- Clement, Duke of Balern, iv. 254.
- Clement, Prince, Nephew of Elector of Köln, iv. 257.
- Clement XII., Pope, iii. 342.
- Clement, Duchess, protests against the Austrian attempt on Bavaria, viii. 252, 255; writes to Friedrich, 255; counsels and aids Götz, in the matter, 257.
- Clermont, Prince de, iv. 13; succeeds Richelieu, vi. 264; beaten by Ferdinand at Crefeld; dismissed, 349.
- Cleve, Wilhelm, Duke of, i. 242, 249; his Heritage Settlement, 249; death; his Son's tragic career, 250.
- Cleve, Duchy of, i. 247; a naturally opulent Country, 245; disputed Heritage, 251, 254, 265, 283; ii. 294; occupied by Spanish and Dutch troops, i. 261, 264; Friedrich Wilhelm's interest in, 297; ii. 42, 70, 159, 295; iii. 23, 173.
- Cleve, Friedrich at, receiving Homage, iii. 269.
- Cleveland, Duchess of, i. 139.
- Clogenson, Commentator on Voltaire Letters, cited, iv. 405 n.; mentioned also, vii. 204.
- Clubs, i. 95.
- Clue, De la, Admiral of the Toulon fleet, vii. 112.
- Cobenzl, Count, at Berlin, viii. 237, 266; at Congress of Tetschen, 273.
- Coblenz, ii. 206.
- Coccej, jun., marries Barberina, iv. 447; with Collini at Berlin, v. 278; at Hochkirch, vi. 395 n.
- Coccej, Samuel von, iv. 447, 449; Chief Prussian Law-Minister, v. 213, 214, 241; finishes his Law Reform, 254, 255; Voltaire's Law-suit, 311; washes his hands of the sorry business, 314.
- Cochina, iii. 223, 225.
- Cochorn's Masterpiece, v. 239.
- Cognazo, cited, v. 152 n.; vi. 171 n.: on the Camp of Bunzelwitz, vii. 284; mentioned also, 289 n.
- Coiny, Maréchal de, iv. 287, 299, 437; at Stock-tadt, v. 12; guarding Briegau, 69, 72.
- Colberg, Russian siege of, vi. 375; again besieged by Russia, vii. 297; siege raised, 297; third and toughest siege of all, 399, 404; garrison fairly starved out, vii. 419, 420.
- Colbert, iv. 15; v. 220.
- Colignon, Colonel, and his recruiting practices, vii. 218.
- Collenbach, Plenipotentiary von, viii. 46.
- Collini, Como Alessandro, iv. 447; v. 278; his first sight of Voltaire, 282, 283; becomes his secretary, 296 n., 347, 265, 287, 289; at Frankfurt, 395-401; cited, 279 n.; vi. 179 n.
- Cöln on the Spree, i. 116.
- Cologne. See Köln.
- Columbus and the Atlantic, iii. 232.
- Comines, Philippe de, viii. 154.
- Condé, Prince de, viii. 31.
- Confana, Admiral, vii. 113; his fleet utterly ruined by Hawke, 184-187.
- Conrad of Hohenzollern, i. 84; becomes Burggraf of Nürnberg, 88; ii. 278.
- Conrad of Thüringen, i. 102; "whip my Abbot?" i. 13; plunders Fritlar; repentance and Teutsch-Ritter vows, 104.
- Conradin, Boy, last of the Hohenstauffens, i. 109, 110.
- Conservatism, iv. 95.
- Constantine of Russia, viii. 206.
- Constitutional Government, iv. 134.
- Contades supersedes Clermont, vi. 349; against Ferdinand in the Rhine Provinces, 410-413; defeated at Minden, 56-63.
- Conti, Prince de, joins the Army for relief of Prag, iv. 338; with Broglio at Wolzach, 362; driven from Deggendorf, 364; Army for Italy, 437; in the Middle-Rhine countries, v. 69, 89, 99; retreats across the Rhine, 144, 145; to be a General-in-chief of the grand Invasion-of-England Army, vii. 187; De Ligne's opinion of him, viii. 150.
- Conway, Field-marshal, at Langensalza, vii. 365; account of King Friedrich at Potsdam, and at his Silesian Reviews, viii. 221, 223; kindly entertained by Lord Marischal, 223, 224, 226, 227.
- Cook, Captain, at Quebec, vii. 157.
- Cookery, spiritual, i. 22.
- Cope, General, iv. 365, 440.
- Copenhagen, ii. 332.
- Cöper, Secretary, vii. 91; viii. 71.
- Coram, Captain, v. 418.
- Corne, La, in America, v. 419, 420.
- Cornwallia, Colonel Edward, v. 418, 419.
- Cornwallis, Lord, viii. 345.
- Cornack brutality, vi. 354; vii. 69, 93; viii. 397.
- Cotthenina, Dr., v. 321, 346, 353, 367.
- Council, Church, i. 45, 46; Council of Constance, 156, 157.
- Courage, ii. 409.

- Courland, Duke of, ii. 393. See Anne of.
 Courten, Chevalier de, at Berlin, v. 82.
 Cox, cited, ii. 19 n.; ii. 364 n.; v. 77 n.
 Cramer, cited, ii. 129 n.
 Craven, Lady, i. 195; ii. 186; viii. 188, 266.
 Crébillon, v. 227.
 Crécy, Battle of, i. 141; vi. 259.
 Grefeld, Battle of, i. 849.
 Crantz the Finance-Minister, i. 367; ii. 422.
 Crillon, Duc de, at Weissenfels, vi. 246.
 Crillon, jun., viii. 209, 210.
 Crinolone, fashion of, viii. 49.
 Crochanière, M. de la, at Strasburg, iii. 291.
 Crochet, iii. 9.
 Cromwell, what a German might have done, i. 216; Cromwell, and his Puritans, 219, 268, 269; his time, iv. 128, his soldiers, v. 251; his worth to England, vi. 136, 136; his Ironsides, 305; Cromwell and Attila, viii. 174.
 Cronström, Commandant of Bergen-op-Zoom, v. 239.
 Crozen, iii. 33.
 Croze, La, iii. 127.
 Culloden, Victory of, v. 114.
 Culmbach, Margraf of, i. 186; Friedrich founder of the Elder Line, 190; Casimir, a severe, rather truculent Herr, 191; Margraf George, and his connection with the King of Hungary, 192; gets the Duchy of Jägerndorf, 194; noble conduct in the Reformation, 196; at the Diet of Angsburg, 197; few truer specimens of the Honest Man; his Son and Brothers, 200; troubles with Albert Alcibiades, 210, 211; Diagram of the Elder and Younger Culmbach Lines, 310, 311. See Friedrich George of.
 Cumberland, Duke of, iv. 321; at Dettingen, 375, 384; in the Netherlands, v. 104, 242, 243; at Fontenoy, 106; at Culloden, 115; disagreements with the Duke of Newcastle, vi. 8, 11; takes command of Britannie Army, vi. 86; to little purpose, 182, 179; aiming to oust the Duke of Newcastle, 183; opposition to Pitt, 139, 141; defeated at Hastenbeck, 189; Convention of Kloster-Zeven, 207, 208; returns home, and resigns his military offices, 209; mentioned also, v. 10, 88, 269.
 Cunningham's Friedrich's Last Review, viii. 346 n.
 Catharin, i. 237, 274, 275; Friedrich a prisoner at, ii. 322, 329; Katte's execution, 335; Friedrich's life at, 365; a rugged little town, with strong castle, vi. 356; town burnt by the Russians, 353, 357.
 Czarina. See Elizabeth; Catharine.
 Czartoryskia, the Polish, viii. 118, 121.
 Czernichef, General, prisoner at Zorn-dorf, vi. 376; with Soltikof in Silesia, vii. 275, 276; marches on Berlin, 299, 306, 307; with Loudon in Silesia, 308, 406, 411; ordered home by Czar Peter; to join himself with Friedrich, 446; with less advantage than he expected, 448; joins with him at Liess, viii. 9; recalled home, 14; generously stays three days, 15, 16.
 Czetteritz, General, taken prisoner with his copy of Military Instructions, vii. 290.
 DALRYMPLE, Major, at Berlin, viii. 237, 239, 360.
 Dalwig, Lieutenant-Colonel, vii. 332, 406; viii. 273.
 Damiens, vi. 85.
 Danes, the, seize Schleswig-Holstein, vii. 441.
 Dankelmann, i. 52.
 Dante, l. 110, 122, 125.
 Dantzig, not to belong to Friedrich, viii. 181; siege of, iii. 54, 71, 106.
 Dans, Dr., v. 271, 272.
 D'Arget, iv. 274; saves Valori from Pandours, v. 157; despatched to Friedrich at Dresden, 198; letter to Valori describing his interview with the King, 198-202; taken into Friedrich's service, 202, 212, 287, 297, 348.
 Darlington, Countess of, ii. 14, 108, 392.
 Darmstadt, Landgravine of, visits the Czarina with her daughters, vii. 209. See Ernst Ludwig of.
 Dashkof, Princess, vii. 459.
 Daun, Leopold Graf von, iv. 263; under Bärenklau at Stockstadt, v. 12; advances to relief of Prag, vi. 118; retreats on hearing of the Prussian victory, 127; order from Vienna to proceed, 148; battle of Kolin, 148; orders retreat; order disobeyed, 160; victory, 161; makes no chase of the Prussians, 162, 170; the first chief of the Order of Maria Theresa, 164; with Prince Karl, following the Prince of Prussia, 183; following Bevern, 275; at Breslau, 286; Lenthen, 294, 307; supersedes Prince Karl, 308; guarding the Bohemian Frontier, 331; on march to assist Olmütz, 332; at Lentomühl, 334; sits on his magazine, clear not to fight, 335; Bos against Leo, 336; vii. 175; encamps at Gewitach, watching Friedrich, 336; gets cautiously on foot again; gets reinforcement into Olmütz, 338; aware of Friedrich's convoys, 340, 341; attack on Mosel, 341; siege of Olmütz ended, 346; cautiously follows Friedrich to Königgrätz, 347; to recapture Saxony, while Friedrich is engaged with the Russians, 376; at Zittau, 377; near Meissen, hears of Friedrich's approach, 380; a note sent to Fermor unexpectedly answered, 380, 381; retreats to Stolpen, 381, 382; encamps ahead of Friedrich, at Kittlitz, 383; surprise of Friedrich in his camp at Hochkirch, 389; consecrated hat and sword from the Pope for his victory, 400; vii. 33; cannot prevent Friedrich reaching Silesia, vi. 404; tries to get Dresden, 406; wheels homeward, unsuccessful, 409; puzzled at having to take the offensive, vii. 31; encamps near Mark-Lissa, 32, 36, 37; content to play jackal to the Russian lion, 38; expects always to succeed by help of others, 37, 38; cannot persuade Soltikof to do all his fighting for him, 104-106; determines on siege of Dresden, 118; informs Soltikof of success, 129; reason to be proud of

- his cunctatory method, 181; casting endless provisions for self and Soltikof, 181; almost captures Zietzen at Soran, 184; sits on his magazine at Bantzen; dare not attack Prince Henri, 187; concessions to Soltikof, 187, 188; will attack Prince Henri to-morrow, 148; finds only an empty camp; Prince Henri vanished in unknown space, 144; Prince Henri out-manœuvres him in Saxony, 153; but is compelled to retreat on Dresden, 158; going at his slowest step, 161; hears uncomfortably that Finck is at Maxen, but decides to attack, 165; three simultaneous assaults, 169, 170; captures Finck and his whole army, 171; also another outpost of Friedrich's at Meissen, 174; dare not attack Friedrich; contents himself with holding Dresden, 175; Vienna nightcaps, in token of his talent for sleep, 176; vii.
177; in winter-quarters, viii. 24; again to have chief command in the new campaign, 319; continues near Dresden, vii.
229, 238; entrenched and palisaded to the teeth, 236, 240; intercepts Friedrich's march for Silesia, 241, 244; arrives to relief of Dresden, 250; safe on his Northern side, 251; attends Friedrich's march into Silesia, 271, 274; battle of Liegnitz, 277;
his beautiful plan all gone to distraction, 284, 285; indolently allows Friedrich to get clear away, 287, 288; and has a troublesome time with him in consequence, 293, 296; sends Lacy to join the Russians in seizing Berlin, 299; ordered to maintain Saxony, 311; inexpugnably encamped at Torgau, 313; moves to Eilenberg; returns to Torgau, 314; attacked by Friedrich, 324; furious slaughter on both sides, 326, 332; thinks the victory his, 338; defeat and swift retreat, 333,
334; at Plauen; his return to Vienna,
335; takes charge of Saxony, 373, 379;
attacks Prince Henri's outposts, 421; takes command in Silesia against Friedrich, vii. 8, 9; skillfully defends himself, 11; attacked and defeated by Friedrich at Burkersdorf, 12, 19; attempts to break in upon Friedrich's siege of Schweidnitz, 21, 24; defeated at Reichenbach, and gives up the enterprise, 24; his fighting all over; dies some three years afterwards, 30; mentioned also, 147.
- Dauphiness, the, intercedes for Polish Maj-esties, vi. 40.
- David's Psalms, iii. 193; vi. 220.
- Deblin, Cordwainer, works against Browne at Glogau, iv. 401; vi. 307.
- Debt, National, sublime invention of, vii. 13.
- D'And, Madame du, v. 229; letter from D'Alembert to, viii. 8.
- Degenfeld, ii. 238; iii. 178.
- Deggendorf, iv. 364.
- Demikof, General (Thémokond), with Fer-mor invading Prussia, vi. 355; Zorndorf, 370, 371.
- Demon Newswriter, v. 342, 359; his eavesdropping account of Friedrich and his Court, 361-370; identification of, vi. 181, 198.
- Denina comes to Berlin, viii. 309.
- Denis, Madame, iv. 79; keeps house for Voltaire, v. 283, 320; an expensive gay lady, 321; joins Voltaire in his Frankfurt troubles, 395, 396, 400; mentioned also, viii. 221, 261.
- Denmark. See Christian II. and IV. of;
Friedrich IV. of; Dancs.
- Derschau, ii. 83, 365, 390; iii. 110, 221;
continued in office, iii. 248.
- Deschamps, M., iii. 124.
- Desfontaines, iii. 143; iv. 245; v. 223.
- Dessau, i. 322, 323. See Leopold of.
- Dettingen, ii. 305; Battle of, iv. 91, 375, 385.
- Devil, principal function of a, v. 359.
- Deville, to try what he can do on Silesia, vi.
377, 378, 382; hurries homewards, 405;
makes an unsuccessful dash at Leob-schütz, vii. 29; at Landsbut, 132; cashiered by Daun, 136.
- Dickens, Sir Guy, ii. 230, 253, 269, 279, 320, 323, 352, 398; iii. 270, 269; v. 246; cited,
iii. 231 n., 364 n.
- Diderot, visita Prusela, viii. 210.
- Dierecke, Colonel, at Zittau, vi. 168; captured at Meissen, vii. 174.
- Dieskan, Artillery-General, at siege of Schweidnitz, viii. 24.
- Dieskan, Camp of, v. 100, 148, 149.
- Dietrich, Prince, of Anhalt-Dessau, iv. 967, 274; able, soldier-like conduct, 275; at Ollahan, 276; at Plomnitz, v. 67; sent to reinforce his father, 148; mentioned also, 195 n.; vi. 13.
- Dietrichstein, Graf von, viii. 188.
- Dietman, the Thüringian Landgraf, i. 122.
- Dieulafoy, viii. 302 n.
- Digby, Captain, in the attack on Confians's fleet, vii. 186.
- Dilworth, Life &c. of Frederick, iv. 43 n.
- Dingelfingen, burned by Daun, iv. 363.
- Diplomatists, Devil-, ii. 143; an undiplo-matic reflection, 169, 269; Smeifungus on Modern Diplomacy, 258; heavy-footed diplomacy, iii. 176; imbroglio of diplo-macies, iv. 158, 212, 217; v. 79, 459.
- Discipline, value of, iv. 152.
- Ditmarsh-Stade Markgraves, i. 75.
- D'O, Colonel, helplessly loses Glatz, vii.
255; court-martial, 256.
- Dobryn, Knights of, i. 101.
- Dockum, General, ii. 367, 368.
- Doeg, W. H., viii. 247.
- Dohn, cited, i. 332 n.; on Friedrich's Excise-system, viii. 83; mentioned also, 840.
- Dohna, i. 351.
- Dohna, General, succeeds Lehwald in Pomern, vi. 320, 333, 343, 349; defends Frankfurt bridge against Fermor, 356; at Gör-gast, 358; sudden panic in his troops at Zorndorf, 369, 370; pursues Fermor, 375; marches for Saxony, 396; sent against the Russians, vii. 57, 58; can do nothing on Soltikof, 41; superseded by Wedell, 42, 44.
- Dohna, Graf von, at Vienna, v. 18.
- Doigorucki, Prince, Russian Ambassador at Berlin, viii. 237.

- Dollar, origin of the word, v. 44.
 Dollar, the, v. 322, 323.
 Dombåle, General, with Zweibrück marching to Saxony, vi. 377, 378.
 Domstädt, Pass of, vi. 343.
 Donauwörth under ban, i. 254.
 Donhof, ii. 342, 358.
 Donnel, O', with Daun at Torgau, vii. 320, 333.
 Dorn, Freytag's clerk, v. 399, 401.
 Dornberg, Minister von, viii. 293.
 Dorothea, Electress, i. 51, 52, 203, 296.
 Double-Marriage, the famous, of Prussia and England, ii. 1, 24; Treaty cannot be signed, 47; grown plainly hopeless, 97; yet far from dead, ii. 133; re-merge in an official shape, 137; drawing to an end, 193; England favourable, 211, 228; effulgent flaming-point, 210; as good as extinct, 236; ended, 268; revived, but to no purpose, iii. 26.
 Douglas, Scotch Peerage, cited, iv. 321 n., vi. 328 n.
 Draper, Brigadier-General, vii. 431 n.
 Dresden, Friedrich's Visit to, ii. 115; fortified against the Prussians, v. 20, 23; opens its gates to Friedrich, 196; Treaty of, 202, 203, 244, 438; Friedrich again enters, and takes possession, vi. 28; besieged and partially burnt by the Austrians, vi. 408; surrendered by Schmettau, vii. 114, 122; capitulation scandalously ill kept, 125, 127; furiously besieged by Friedrich, 31, 247, 254.
 Driesen, at Leuthen, vi. 300, 301.
 Drummer, the Little, i. 361.
 Drums Germanicus, i. 61.
 Dryadust, the Prussian, i. 18, ii. 220, 234; doing History, i. 25, 99, 168, 312, vi. 285.
 Dubois, Cardinal, ii. 20; ugliest of created souls, 82; iii. 135.
 Dubois killed at Kloster Kampen, vii. 341 n.
 Dubourgay, ii. 108, 124, 167, 184, 207; Correspondence about the Double-Marriage, 137, 173, 191; proves Grumkow's treachery, 199; arrival of Hothain, 213; conversation with the King of Prussia, 213.
 Dugdale, Lieutenant, viii. 158.
 Duhan de Jandun, i. 360, 375, 400, 413, ii. 525; King Friedrich's thoughtfulness for, iii. 246, v. 206.
 Dulaure, cited, v. 11 n.
 Dumb, busy generations, i. 319, 325, 336, 357.
 Dumoulin, Colonel, sent after Keith, ii. 310, 314.
 Dumoulin in Silesia, v. 122, 125, 127; Hohenfriedberg, 129, 180; follows the Austrians into Bohemia, 139.
 Dumouriez, at Billitz, viii. 131.
 Dunkirk, iv. 330; Louis XV. at, v. 15.
 Duquesne, M., v. 419, 423.
 Duquesne, Fort, vi. 410.
 Duren, Van, Printer, of Anti Macchiavel, iii. 274; with Voltaire at Frankfurt, v. 397.
 Düringshofen, Colonel Battalion captured at Griefenberg, vii. 30.
 Düsseldorf, i. 251, ii. 309; a Dinner-scene at, i. 258.
 Dutch Revolt, the world-famous, i. 233, 261, 264; Dutch Traders and Karl VI., ii. 35; the Dutch disinclined to join in the Austrian-Succession War, iv. 99; torpid response to his Britannic Majesty's enthusiasm, 149, 320, 350; Carteret, strongly pulling, succeeds in raising them, 367; end of the Dutch Republic, v. 346.
 Duvernet, Biographer of Voltaire, v. 202, 287, 297; cited, iv. 136 n., iii. 360 n., v. 287 n., viii. 262 n.
 EBERT, cited, vii. 353 n.
 Eckart, Prussian Finance Minister, dismissed, iii. 275.
 Economics, National, i. 370, 338. See Thrift.
 Edelsheim, Herr von, vii. 198, 203, viii. 230.
 Eden-House Correspondence, viii. 242 n., 238.
 Editor's interest in Friedrich, i. 19, 21; difficulties, iii. 260, v. 209; early recollections, iv. 321.
 Education, i. 337; Friedrich Wilhelm's notion of, 378, 408, 416, 422, ii. 51; influences of Nature, 391; teaching Religion, 412; Mother-wit squandered away for long-earned erudition, ii. 56.
 Edward I. of England, i. 119.
 Edward II., i. 128.
 Edward III., 123.
 Eginhart and Emma, iv. 378.
 Ehrenbreitstein, ii. 306.
 Eichel, Prussian Secretary of State, iii. 257, 340, iv. 62, 442, v. 101; captured by Nassi, 167; at Dresden, 198; at Potsdam, 363, 364; sends keys to Dresden, 429; Prince Henry writes to, complaining of the King, vii. 425-437; Eichel consults with Nüssler about his ruined district, 66.
 Eichstedt, Franz von, i. 177.
 Eighteenth Century, the fraudulent, and its suicidal end, i. 15; heroism in the, iii. 266.
 Einsiedel, General, has charge of Prag, v. 33, 52; to quit Prag for Silesia, 54; his perilous retreat, 56; Hochwald, the hardest brush of all, 57; passes through Saxon territory; his last march, 59.
 Elbe River, rise of the, v. 157, 159; passes through Saxon Switzerland, vi. 31.
 Elbingerode, Belleisle arrested at, v. 74.
 Elcheset, Sieur d., vi. 206.
 Electors. See Kurfürsts.
 Elizabeth Christina, Empress, ii. 27; iii. 17, 340, 403.
 Elizabeth Christina of Brunswick-Bevern (afterwards Queen Regnant of Prussia), ii. 401, 408; chosen for Friedrich, 410; what he thought of her, 414, 417, 418, 424, iii. 24, 38; her Betrothal, ii. 422; Wedding, iii. 40; grand entrance into Berlin; Wilhelmina's Portrait of her, 43; her honest, guileless heart, 44; happy days at Reinsberg, 115, 119, 210; Friedrich's gradual estrangement, iii. 255, iv. 318; Demon Newswriter's account of, v. 357; visited by Friedrich, viii. 52, 811; mentioned also, 196, 199.

- Elizabeth, Czarina, ii. 181, iv. 22, 27; chooses a successor to the Swedish King, 429, on good terms with Friedrich, 429, 432; takes offence at Friedrich, 25; stirred up against him, v. 80; takes part with Saxony. 186; increasing ill-will to Friedrich, 243 n., 258, 320, 453; in secret treaty with Austria, 439, 444; worked upon with cunningly-devised fabrications, 414-446; will not be reconciled to Friedrich, 455; Hanbury Williams's account of her, 456, 457; takes possession of East Prussia, vi. 315, 316; fixed enmity to Friedrich, 348, 349; signs peace-proposals, which end in nothing, vii. 368; her death, 433; makes her nephew Peter heir, 440; Catherine's respect for her, 442; lying in state, 455; funeral, 456.
- Elizabeth Farnese, Queen of Spain, i. 406; her quarrel with Karl VI., ii. 30, 36, 41, 144; the little Spanish Infanta sent back from France, i. 41; Siege of Gibraltar, ii. 100, 153 n.; league with France, iii. 571; West-Indian procedures, 190.
- Elizabeth Frederike Sophie marries the Duke of Württemberg, v. 253; finds it impossible to live with him, 254; visits Voltaire at Ferney, viii. 204, 205; beautiful and unfortunate, 206.
- Elizabeth, first wife of Crown-Prince of Prussia, chastises a custom-house officer, viii. 84; her marriage and divorce, 84, 87.
- Elizabeth, Queen of England, i. 210.
- Elizabeth, Saint, i. 102, 104.
- Elizabeth, Wife of Joachim I., i. 222; Protestantism, and escape to Lichtenberg, 224; visits Luther, 225.
- Elizabeth. See Termagant of Spain.
- Eller, Dr., iii. 222, iv. 417, vi. 125.
- Elliott, at Emadorf, vii. 262.
- Elliott, Excoeliency Hugh, at Berlin, vii. 226; letter about Friedrich, 227; commits a surprising piece of burglary, 242, 243; few men with less appetite for such a job, 244.
- Elphinstone, Captain, in the Russian-Turk War, viii. 158; takes his tea in the Dardanelles, and throws up his command, 159.
- Elsner's preaching, v. 102.
- Elton, Mr., builds ships for Nadir Shah, v. 276.
- Ely Cathedral, i. 67, 68.
- Emanuel, Prince of Portugal, iii. 50.
- Emilie. See Madame du Châtelet.
- Emadorf, Fight of, vii. 261.
- Endorf, Johann von, i. 138.
- English Volunteers at the Siege of Jülich, i. 256; English treatment of the great Marlborough, 303; ii. 26; how England got drilled into human order, 337; England and George I., ii. 12, 13, 106; first triumph of the "Constitutional Principle," ii. 15, 107; English self-complacence, i. 131; Parliaments, ii. 79, 81, 227; an English change of Ministry, 212; English influence on Voltaire, iii. 137; English thick-skin penetrated, 191, 213; merits of the English-Spanish War, iii. 330, iv. 46, 69, 93, 141; English Army and English Navy, 381; English share in the Austrian Succession War, iv. 91, 154; English Parliament under Walpole, 124; real cause of the War with Spain, 128; English toughness, 133, 380, 385; tragic stupidity, 140; what became of the Spanish War, 140, 151, 154; a disciplined England, 152; England with a George II. for Chief Captain, 174, 421; "Perfidious Albion," 333, 392; English indignation against Friedrich, v. 21, 413; their dull fire of delirium, 41; their mad method of fighting, 113; quarrel with Spain, 246; Privateer controversy with Friedrich, 322, 410-413; freedom of the Ocean Highway, 415; no preparation for war, 451, vi. 8, 9; Prussian-English Neutrality Convention, 454, 455; relation to Hanover, 458, 459; French-English War, vi. 7; English treaties with Prussia, vi. 86, 87; Government imbecility, 133; hour of tide for England, 135; joy at news of Rosbach and Leuthen, 265, 309-311; four subsidies, 321-322; enthusiasm about Friedrich, 322, 323; troops to join Ferdinand, 411; National Debt, vii. 13; French invasion preparing, 48; damaged by Rodney at Havre, 49; by Boscawen, off Cadix, vii. 112, 113; capture of Quebec, 153, 155; America to be English and not French, 157; Enzland lucky to have a King, though a temporary, in Pitt, 158; victory in India, 160; Confians's fleet and the French Invasion scheme utterly spoiled by Hawke, 183-188; English soldiers under Duke Ferdinand, vii. 396; love for their horses, 396; war with Spain, and its results, 427-431, viii. 8; liberty of the seas: English America, universal uproar of "Unexampled Prosperities," 50; the Constitutional system, 240.
- Epaminondas, vi. 291.
- Ephraim the Berlin Jew, v. 303, 304, 306; coins base money for Friedrich, vii. 17, 18, 305, 347.
- Epic Poema, i. 16, 24.
- Erasmus Reinhold, i. 210.
- Erfurt, i. 103; entered by General Oldenburg, vi. 132.
- Erfurt, Menzel's brother-in-law, v. 423, 429.
- Erlach, Major-General, viii. 334, 336.
- Erlangen, i. 93, ii. 442.
- Erman, cited, i. 87 n., 49 n., 187 n., v. 332 n.
- Ernest, Professor, vii. 351.
- Ernst August. See Bishop of Osnabrück.
- Ernst, Elector, i. 53, 55, 62.
- Ernst Ludwig of Darmstadt, ii. 303; addicted to "Ivory-turning," 304.
- Ernst the Pious, vi. 213.
- Erthorn, Van, of Embden, vi. 324; complaint to Friedrich against him, 325.
- Espagnac, Biographer of Comte de Saxe, etc., cited, ii. 129 n., iv. 198 n., v. 16 n.
- Essex, General Von, viii. 131.
- Essex, Karl of, v. 261 n.
- Esterhazy, Prince, at Presburg, iv. 167; in Berlin, vii. 304.
- Estoc L', returns from Siberia, vii. 453.

- Estrées, d', Maréchal, invades Prussia, vi.
85; something of a soldier, 183, 179; battle of Hastenbeck, 189, 190; superseded by Richelieu, 196, 207; prodigate condition of his army, 207; with Soubise in his final Campaign, viii. 19; Cannonade of Amöneburg, 31, 32.
- Ettingen, Lines of, li. 68.
- Eugene, Prince, l. 31, 300, 322, iii. 27, 80;
a bright little soul, growing very old and anuffy, ii. 33, 34; his crowning feat, ii. 302 n.; receives Friedrich Wilhelm, iii. 16, 18; his Rhine Campaign, 62, 69, 83, 91; Friedrich's respect for him, viii. 322.
- Euler, iii. 252; Curator of the Berlin Academy, v. 377.
- Evangelical Union, i. 253, 257, 267, 270; ii. 432.
- Eversmann, li. 348.
- Exilles, Chevalier Belleisle perishes at, v. 238.
- Eylert, cited, viii. 313 n.
- FABRICE, ii. 106, 109, 111, 140.
- Fact, inexorable nature of, l. 21, 419; ii. 330; the one a-beos which survives all fire, l. 21; iii. 30. See Reality.
- Falsehood, living under, l. 218.
- Fasch, Musician, with the King at Leipzig, vii. 344.
- Fassmann, ii. 54, 93; ii. 126 n., 141, 154, 165, 212, 372, 440; cited, i. 343 n.; ii. 126 n.; iii. 282.
- Favart, M., Saxe's Theatre-Director; and his Wife, v. 249, 250.
- Fawcener, Sir Edward, iii. 139.
- Feder, cited, ii. 161 n.
- Fehrbellin, Battle of, i. 268.
- Fénlon, iv. 149, 198.
- Ferbers, Hofrath, v. 428.
- Ferdinand, Duke, Prince of Brunswick, li. 409; iii. 164; iv. 318, 412, 579; at Nahorzau, v. 143; Sohr, 166; collecting his troops at Halle; letters from the King, vi. 21, 22; at Leipzig, 26; Cotta, 28; on the Bohemian frontier, 37, 41; mentioned also, v. 135, 177, 322; at Prag, vi. 115, 116, 168; in retreat, vi. 14, 65; with the King, vi. 169, 172, 191; march to Erfurt, 204; to Magdeburg, 217; to be General of Britannic Army, 243; Rossbach, 243, 248; gets his Britannic Commission, 253; vigorous appeal upon the French, 264, 265; every feather of them over the Rhine, 327; congratulations from Friedrich, 328, 329; across the Rhine, after the French, 338; beats Clermont at Orefeld, 349; re-crosses the Rhine, 471; sends a detachment to clear Erfurt, vii. 21; battle of Bergen; cannot get Frankfurt, 24-26; recommends Gulchard to Friedrich, 26; battle of Minden, and defeat of Contades, 56-64; sends the Hereditary Prince with 12,000 to aid Friedrich, 176; very busy on the French, 177; has a difficult Campaign against Broglio's superior forces, vii. 261, 264; Korbach, 261; Warburg, 262; Kloster Kampen, 339, 343; successfully defend Hanover, 343; determines to have a sudden stroke at Broglio, 361; Langen-
- salza, Cassel, 363; defeats Broglio at Vellinghausen, 391, 395; difficulties with his English troops, 393, 397; beats Soubise at Wilhelmsthal, viii. 19, 20; drives the French from their strongholds, 31; Cannonade at Amöneburg, and end of the war, 31, 32; visits Westphalia with Friedrich, 67, 68; estranged from Potadam, 223.
- Ferdinand I., Kaiser, Settlement by, iv. 101.
- Ferdinand II., Kaiser, i. 255 n., 268; high-handed proceedings against the Protestants, 270; all Europe to be converted to Orthodoxy, 272; his Restitution-Edict, 275; seizes Jägerndorf, 279.
- Ferdinand III., Kaiser, i. 255 n.
- Ferdinand VI., of Spain, v. 246, 247; vii. 213.
- Ferdinand, King of the Romans, i. 233.
- Ferdinand, Prince, of Prussia, iv. 433; v. 253, 260; vi. 145; at Leuthen, 300; Breslau, 311; iii. at Berlin, vii. 139, 140, 141, 142; at Berlin, vii. 260; mentioned also, viii. 86.
- Fermor succeeds Apraxin, and takes possession of East Prussia, vi. 315; wending towards Brandenburg, 338; at Konitz, 348; Posen, 350; red-hot savagery on Cüstrin, 353, 354; cannot get Cüstrin Castle, 358; prepares hastily for Prussian attack, 362; battle of Zorndorf, 363-374; retires toward Königsberg, 375; again invades Prussia, under Soltikof, vii. 40; succeeds Soltikof, and marches on Berlin, 299; with Romanzow at Culberg, 404.
- Ferrand, cited, vii. 46.
- Festitz and his Tolpatches, iv. 341, 351, 352.
- Fiction akin to Lying, i. 25, 419.
- Pienne, Madame de, of Strasbourg, iii. 268.
- Filibusters, iv. 128.
- Finch, Minister at Petersburg, iv. 161.
- Finck, General, vi. 194; left in charge of Saxony, 234, 403, 407; attacking the Austrian Magazines, vii. 26, 27; with Prince Henri at Bantzen, 50; vanguard at Kunersdorf, 72-74, 79-81, 84; the King hands over command of the Army to him, 90; resumes it, 95; sent into Saxony, 111; indignation at the loss of Dresden, 129; ordered by the King to plant himself in Maxen, 164; expostulates in vain, 164; sees his enemies gathering round him, 166; such a sphinx-riddle as soldier seldom had, 167; determines to remain, hoping Friedrich may do something, 168; arranges himself with his utmost skill, 169; total defeat, and absolute surrender, 171; tried by court-martial, 174.
- Finckenstein, Colonel, iii. 251, 339; his death, iv. 73.
- Finckenstein, Count Finck von, Friedrich's Head-Tutor, i. 390, 376; message to the Queen, ii. 195, 200; his Wife, i. 215.
- Finckenstein, Minister, Friedrich's Secret Instructions to, vi. 79, 87; letters from Friedrich to, vii. 55, 56, 66, 90, 447; in the Bavarian Succession, viii. 266, 272.
- Finlater, Countess of, viii. 311.
- Firman, Count, and the Salzburg Protestants, ii. 435.

- Firmin, Archbishop, v. 77.
 Fischer cited, i. 108 n.; viii. 254 n.
 Fischer, Hussar, at Sangerhausen, vi. 270.
 Fischer, Johann David, of Landshut, iv. 221, 227.
 Fischhausen, ii. 357.
 Fitz-James, Cardinal Grand-Almoner, iv. 439.
 Flemming, Countess, v. 304.
 Flemming, Field-marshal, ii. 114, 116.
 Fleury, Cardinal, ii. 42, 44, 102, 141, 152, 368, 416; vi. 51, 56, 107; thinks Voltaire might find out Friedrich's secret, iii. 352, iv. 345; obliged to yield to Belleisle's weaknesses, 19, 166; bad faith with King Friedrich, 360; sends Maillevoix to relief of Prag, 336; letter from Voltaire, 348, 349.
 Fontenoy, Battle of, iv. 91; v. 104, 115.
 Forbes, General, at Pittsburg, vi. 410.
 Forcade, General, at Zorndorf, vi. 370, 371; takes the place of Prince Henri in Silesia, vii. 293.
 Formey, iii. 124, 127, 244; iv. 428; account of Voltaire, v. 289, 310, 318; of Maupeou's quarrel with König, 290; his own share in it, 374, 376-378; letter from Voltaire to, vii. 207, 13 n.; letters from Lefebvre to, viii. 137, 140; honored by Queen Ulrique, 197; cited, iii. 137 n.; v. 289 n.; viii. 139 n.
 Förster, cited, i. 28 n.; iii. 110 n.; 263 n.
 Fürsch, Dr. v. 211.
 Fos, Mameill, of Dessau, i. 320.
 Fouquet, Intendant, Belleisle's Grandfather, iv. 15, 277 n.
 Fouquet with Friedrich at Cüstrin, ii. 331; at Reinsberg, iii. 155; his march from Pnnek, iv. 276, 277 n.; at Glatz, v. 143, 148; at battle of Prag, vi. 121; with the Prince of Prussia, 184; Glatz, 331; Olmütz, 334; Leutomischl, 346; extremely strict, almost pedantic man, 346; with Margraf Karl guarding Silesia, 352, 373; Friedrich's kindly thought of him, vii. 13, 149; at Loboschütz, 27, 29; at Landshut, 38, 132; truce with London, 151; fortifies himself firmly about Landshut, 222, 224; with Prince Henri, defends Silesia against the Russians, vii. 229, 232; out-maneuvred by London; deeply hurt by Friedrich's reproach; speech to his Generals, 232; catastrophe at Landshut, 237, 238; his death, viii. 234.
 Fourth Estate, iv. 125.
 Fowler, John, Esq., cited, vi. 326.
 Fox, Right Hon. Henry, v. 261; vi. 134, 141.
 France. See French.
 François I., iv., 95; v. 55.
 Franke, Archidiaconus, ii. 444.
 Franke, August Herman, founder of the "Pietists," ii. 113.
 Frankfurt-on-Mayn, ii. 305; union of, iv. 425; v. 18, 69, 78; what Friedrich got by it, 41, 61; seized by the French, vii. 20, 21.
 Frankfurt-on-Oder, in possession of the Russians, vii. 67-70, 79; the environs, 74-76.
 Franklin, Benjamin, v. 424; viii. 246.
 Frasniqui tries to capture Valori, v. 156, 158.
 Franz, Grand Duke, his prospects of Kaisership, iv. 107, 114; a good-tempered, well-conditioned Duke, 175, 385; Hungarian Diet, 269; joins Neipperg at Frating, 233; marches toward Prag, 237, 238; joins the main Army at König-saal, 329; with Traun in the Rhine countries, v. 145; elected Kaiser, 153; opposes the Austrian-French alliance; deals largely in stores, 459; forging Reich thunder against Friedrich, vi. 73; a solid, pacific gentleman, vi. 37; official violence against Friedrich, 88, 90, 99; advises Prince Karl's dismissal, 308; his sudden death, viii. 94; mentioned also, iii. 341, 243; iv. 16, 85, 92.
 Franz Josias of Coburg, ii. 274.
 Franz of Brunswick killed at Hochkirch, vi. 193.
 Franz of Dornau, vi. 157, 158.
 Frederick, Prince of England, ii. 11, 12, 48; iii. 81; intended visit to Berlin, 124; arrival in England, 153; letters from, 216; Queen of Prussia's opinion of, 353; strange treatment of his young Wife, iii. 167; his death, v. 321; his epitaph, 322; mentioned also, vi. 140.
 Frederika Louisa of Anspach, iii. 250.
 Frederika Louisa of Prussia, ii. 23; demanded in marriage, ii. 155; married to the Margraf of Anspach, 184; visited by her Father and Brother, 279; visits Wilhelmmina, iii. 25, 26, 280.
 Frederika Louisa of Hessen-Darmstadt married Prince of Prussia, viii. 87.
 Frederickshall, Charles XII. killed at, i. 356.
 Fredersdorf, M., iii. 210, 279, 329; iv. 62, 83; v. 385; his share in the Voltaire arrest, 392, 397.
 Free Corps, Prussian, vi. 181.
 Freedom of the Press, iii. 245.
 Freemasonry, iii. 160.
 Free-Trade, v. 327; Litany, viii. 62.
 Free World, a, iv. 346.
 French:—Revolution, i. 13; grand universal Suicide of a despicable Century, 16; what is to follow it, 23; French Protestantism, 240; French Cooks, 340; Fashions, 341, 342; French Protestants of Klänge n, ii. 442; War with Karl VI., iii. 56; Camp at Philipsburg, 90; France, the top of the Universe, iv. 18; urges Sweden to War, 29, 196; originates the Austrian-Succession War, 92; many wars kindled on poor Teutschland, 96; evasion of Pragmatic Sanction, 97; ushering in a French Revolution, 98; French Ambition versus the stingy Fact, 111, 153, 196, 229, 354; ruin of German Enterprises, 387; French Army in the Netherlands, v. 9, 220; at Stockstadt, 12; imminent peril of; Friedrich decides to intervene, 17; little grateful for their deliverance, 37; magnanimous promises ending in nothing, 43, 68, 70, 76; not even money payment, 147; pique against him, 187; invade Holland, 236; First Nation of the Universe, 247, 248; an Army of extreme dissoluteness and levity, 250, 251; of two Frenchmen in a Foreign Court, one must die, 332; French claims to North America, 416-421, 426;

- French-English War, vi. 7; France joins Austria and the Reich, 74; France intrigues with Sweden against Friedrich, 82; share of the expected plunder, 83; the first in the field, 85; "L'Armée de la Dauphine," 178, 203; intent to deliver Saxony, 202, 204; at Gotha, 212; ventures forward on hearing of the Haddick Invasion, 242; retreats at round of Friedrich, 244; puffed up with vanity, 244; Rossbach, 248; exultant spirits, 252; never was army better beaten, 256, 259; rapacity and profligate insubordination, 267, 274; France will not have peace, 314; incredible pains with the Swedes, 318; financial difficulties, 413; getting weary of the war, vii. 9; joy over the battle of Bergen, 26; invasion of England, 49; flat-bottomed fleet destroyed at Havre, 49; Toulon fleet chased and ruined, 112, 113; Contarins's fleet and the grand Invasion-scheme entirely wrecked, 183-188; temporary bankruptcy, and melting of the national spoons, 188, 189; French exactions on Germany, 367; preparation for the General Overturn, 370; anxious for peace, 423; viii. 43, 45; results of the war, 50, 51; the French Revolution, Part Third of World-History, 53, 54; Kaiser Joseph's visit, and opinion of French society, 246.
- Fréron, iii. 143, v. 288, 317, 319.
- Freyburg, Battle of, viii. 35.
- Freyburg, Siege of, v. 38, 68.
- Freytag, Baron, and the Silesian question, i. 277; arrest of Voltaire, v. 392-399.
- Freytag's, Dr., account of West Prussia, viii. 179, 182.
- Friedel, Kammergericht Rath, viii. 291, 292.
- Friedland, Friedrich at, iv. 60.
- Friedrich August, of Saxony, left under the guardianship of his Mother, viii. 100; lived to see strange things in the world, 102.
- Friedrich Christian, Kurprinz of Saxony, in Dresden, during siege of, vii. 116; negotiates peace, viii. 45; King Friedrich dines with him at Moritzburg, 51; death, 91, 100; Elector for little more than two months, 100.
- Friedrich Eugen of Württemberg. See Württemberg.
- Friedrich I., King, and his Grandchildren, i. 28; rather "an expensive Herr," 48; the first King of Prussia, 50; his back injured in infancy, 51, 500; quarrels with his stepmother, 51, 52; how he came by his "Kingship," 54; his sublime Coronation, 57; his Father's death, 295; how Austria swindled him out of Schwiebus, 298; his true Hohenzollern character, 299; closing days, 302; his third marriage, 305; death, 306, 326.
- Friedrich IV. of Denmark, i. 347.
- Friedrich IV., Duke of Holstein-Gottorp and Schleswig, v. 1. 441.
- Friedrich, King of Bohemia, Winterkönig, i. 153, 262, 264, 266; ex-King, 267, 268.
- Friedrich, Landgraf of Hessen, iv. 256.
- Friedrich, Madame, of Seidlitz, viii. 46.
- Friedrich, Margraf of Schwedt, iv. 74.
- Friedrich of Baireuth, 203, 277, 347; arrives at Berlin, 351; introduced to Wilhelmina, 352; an honourable and eligible young Prince; betrothal, 353; a narrow escape, 389; marries Wilhelmina, 592; full of honest sunshine towards her, iii. 37, 74; at the Rhine Campaign, 88.
- Friedrich of Meissen, Hochmeister, i. 203.
- Friedrich, Prince, and his Hessians, v. 40; at Vil-hofen, 90; Edinburgh, 91.
- Friedrich the Fair, Duke of Austria, i. 126.
- Friedrich II., Kaiser, i. 103, 105.
- Friedrich III., Kaiser, i. 252.
- Friedrich II., Hohenzollern Kurfürst, recovers Neumark from the Teutsch Ritters, i. 173, 176; his Pomeranian war, 172, 177.
- Friedrich III., Burggraf of Nürnberg, i. 107; troubles with the Nürnberger, 108; Burggraviate made hereditary, 109; Kaiser Rudolph's friend and helper, 111, 114.
- Friedrich IV., i. 124, 131; aids Kaiser Ludwig, 126.
- Friedrich V., i. 146; his daughter, 149.
- Friedrich VI., i. 131, 146, 147, 149; helps Sigismund, 155; buys Brandenburg, 157, 158; Noble robber-lords brought to reason, 163; Heavy Peg, 164; taproot of the Prussian Nation, 165.
- Friedrichsfelde, ii. 396. See Carzig.
- Friedrich II., sauntering on the terraces of Sans-Souci, i. 9; physiognomic traits, 10; human interest in what he did, 11; the Last of the Kings, 13, 24; English prepossessions about him, 19; by no means a perfect demigod, yet a true man and King, 21, 28. Joy at his birth, 27; his christening, 29; his ancestors, 169, 274, 295. Not a skillful gambler and worshipping of Beelzebub, 169; recovery of Jägerndorf, 279; interest in Julia, 283; opening the Great Kurfürst's coffin, 295.
- Infancy, 304, 313; French educational element, 513; ii. 102; one of the prettiest, vividest little boys, i. 314; his affectionate disposition, 315, 316, 375, 383, 409; bad spelling, 317, 469, 420; German element, 318; his Father's Spartan discipline, 323, 422; ii. 51, 102; one of his first impressions of war, i. 346; his Tutors, 360, 375, 409; Portraits of him, 361; the commonly-received Portrait, 364; his education, 378, 405, 419; ii. 102; his Father's notions about it, i. 378; miniature Soldiering, 381; his Cousins, 382; love for his Sister Wilhelmina, 383; at the Roncoules Soirée, 393; troubles preparing from afar, 406; ii. 49; his contraband Latin lessons, 410; French fashions; his bright locks to be ruthlessly shorn away, 412; his theological drill sergeants, 412; division, fearfully widening, between Father and Son, 416; ii. 125; George I. pleased with him, ii. 18; goes into the Potsdam Guards, 50; surrounded by intrigues and treachery, 52; unwillingly at the Tobacco-Parliament, ii. 83, 103.
- Friedrich II., vol. II., his life heavy at Potsdam, 103; his books, 103; visit to King Au-

- Fischer cited, i. 108 n.; viii. 254 n.
 Fischer, Huesar, at Sangerhausen, vi. 270.
 Fischer, Johann David, of Landshut, iv. 224, 227.
 Fischhausen, ii. 387.
 Fitz-James, Cardinal Grand-Almoner, iv. 439.
 Flemming, Countess, v. 304.
 Flemming, Field-marshal, ii. 114, 116.
 Fleury, Cardinal, ii. 43, 44, 102, 144, 162, 393, 416; iii. 51, 56, 107; thinks Voltaire might find out Friedrich's secret, iii. 352, iv. 345; obliged to yield to Belleisle's war-schemes, 19, 166; bad faith with King Friedrich, 380; sends Maillevois to relief of Prag, 336; letter from Voltaire, 348, 349.
 Fontenoy, Battle of, iv. 91; v. 104, 115.
 Forbes, General, at Pittsburg, vi. 410.
 Forcade, General, at Zornsdorf, vi. 370, 371; takes the place of Prince Henri in Silesia, vii. 293.
 Former, iii. 194, 127, 244; iv. 428; account of Voltaire, v. 289, 310, 318; of Maupertuis's quarrel with König, 390; his own share in it, 374, 376-378; letter from Voltaire to, vii. 207, 13 n.; letters from Lefebvre to, viii. 137, 140; honored by Queen Ulrique, 197; cited, ii. 127 n.; v. 289 n.; viii. 139 n.
 Förster, cited, i. 26 n.; iii. 110 n.; 263 n.
 Fortsch, Dr v. 211.
 Fox, Mamsell, of Dessau, i. 320.
 Fouquet, Intendant, Belleisle's Grandfather, iv. 15, 277 n.
 Fouquet with Friedrich at Cüstrin, ii. 331; at Reinsberg, iii. 155; his march from Fu'nek, iv. 276, 277 n.; at Glatz, v. 143, 148; at battle of Prag, vi. 121; with the Prince of Prussia, 184; Glatz, 331; Olmütz, 334; Leutomicchi, 346; extremely strict, almost pedantic man, 346; with Margraf Karl guarding Silesia, 359, 378; Friedrich's kindly thought of him, vii. 13, 149; at Loboschütz, 27, 29; at Landshut, 38, 122; truce with London, 151; fortifies himself firmly about Landshut, 222, 224; with Prince Henri, defends Silesia against the Russians, vii. 229, 232; out-manoeuvred by London; deeply hurt by Friedrich's reproach; speech to his Generals, 232; catastrophe at Landshut, 237, 238; his death, viii. 234.
 Fourth Estate, iv. 126.
 Fowler, John, Esq., cited, vi. 326.
 Fox, Right Hon. Henry, v. 261; vi. 134, 141.
 France. See French.
 François I. iv., 95; v. 55.
 Franke, Archidiaconus, ii. 444.
 Franko, August Herman, founder of the "Pietists," ii. 113.
 Frankfurt-on-Mayn, ii. 305; union of, iv. 425; v. 18, 69, 78; what Friedrich got by it, 41, 61; seized by the French, vii. 20, 21.
 Frankfurt-on-Oder, in possession of the Russians, vii. 67-70, 79; the environs, 74-76.
 Franklin, Benjamin, v. 434; viii. 246.
 Franzini tries to capture Valori, v. 186, 188.
 ship, iv. 107, 114; a scut-timpered, well-conditioned Duke, 175, 366; Hungarian Diet, 209; joins Neipperg at Frating, 233; marches toward Prag, 257, 258; joins the main Army at Königsaal, 329; with Traun in the Rhine countries, v. 143; elected Kaiser, 153; opposes the Austrian-French alliance; deals largely in stores, 459; forging Reich thunder against Friedrich, vi. 73; a solid, pacific gentleman, vi. 87; official violence against Friedrich, 88, 90, 99; advises Prince Karl's diamant, 308; his sudden death, viii. 244. mentioned also, iii. 341, 243; iv. 16, 85, 99.
 Franz Josias of Coburg, ii. 274.
 Franz of Brunswick killed at Hochkirch, vi. 193.
 Franz of Dorsan, vi. 157, 163.
 Frederick, Prince of England, ii. 11, 12, 48; iii. 81; intended visit to Berlin, 124; arrival in England, 153; letters from, 216; Queen of Prussia's opinion of, 353; strange treatment of his young Wife, iii. 167; his death, v. 321; his epitaph, 322; mentioned also, vi. 140.
 Frederika Louisa of Anspach, iii. 290.
 Frederika Louisa of Prussia, ii. 23; demanded in marriage, ii. 155; married to the Margraf of Anspach, 184; visited by her Father and Brother, 279; visits Wilhelmmina, iii. 26, 26, 280.
 Frederika Louisa of Hessen-Darmstadt marries Prince of Prussia, viii. 87.
 Frederickshall, Charles XII. killed at, i. 356.
 Fredersdorf, M., iii. 210, 279, 339; iv. 62, 83; v. 385; his share in the Voltaire arrest, 392, 397.
 Free Corps, Prussian, vi. 131.
 Freedom of the Press, iii. 245.
 Freemasonry, iii. 180.
 Free-Trade, v. 327; Litany, viii. 62.
 Free World, a, iv. 346.
 French:—Revolution, i. 13; grand universal Suicide of a despicable Century, 16; what is to follow it, 23; French Protestantism, 220; French Cooks, 240; Fashions, 341, 342; French Protestants of Erlangen, ii. 443; War with Karl VI., iii. 56; Camp at Philippsburg, 60; France, the top of the Universe, iv. 18; urges Sweden to War, 29, 106; originates the Austrian-Succession War, 93; many were kindled on poor Teutschland, 96; evasion of Pragmatic Sanction, 97; ushering in a French Revolution, 98; French Ambition versus the stingy Fact, 111, 153, 196, 229, 354; ruin of German Enterprise, 367; French Army in the Netherlands, v. 9, 220; at Stockstadt, 19; imminent peril of; Friedrich decides to intervene, 17; little grateful for their deliverance, 37; magnanimous promises ending in nothing, 49, 68, 70, 76; not even money payment, 147; pique against him, 187; invade Holland, 239; First Nation of the Universe, 247, 248; an Army of extreme dissoluteness and levity, 250, 251; of two Frenchmen in a Foreign Court, one must die, 332; French claims to North America, 416-421, 426;

count of him, 335; not amiable to everybody, 336; news of the Kaiser's death, 338; momentous resolution formed in consequence, 347; to seize Silesia, 348; mysterious preparations, 350; Voltaire tries to discover his secret, 352; he knows his own mind clearly, 355; candour of confession, 357; plumed with the Old Dessauer, 358; audiences at Berlin; the secret out, 359; Address to his Generals, 363; away, Frankfurt-ward, 364, 373; crossing the Rubicon; at Crossen, 375; steps into Silesia, 376; Grünberg, 377; Glogau Church, 381; Schloss of Weichau, 384; industriously conciliatory, 385; Milikau; two Messengers from Breslau, 389; a wet march; Herrendorf, 390; before Glogau, 391; Proposals at Vienna, 393; refusal with mockery, 394; "la Gloire," 395, 399; iv. 32, 185, 309; to Breslau; gains possession, 402; festivities, 406; at Ottmchau, 414; high moods, 415; bombardment of Neisse, 420; home to Berlin; a life of labour cut out for himself, 425; quizzing the Czarina, iv. 25; returns to Silesia, 31; tries to make terms with Austria, 32; at Schweidnitz, 33; narrow escape at Baumgarten, 35; hears of project for partitioning Prussia, 44; his Life element, 46; insists that Glogau be taken, 47; his high satisfaction, 52; takes the field, in Jägerndorf country, 53, 62; Battle of Mollwitz, 63; slow exactitude, 69, 81; seeming ruin, and flight to Oppeln, 75, 82; back to Mollwitz, 84; Austrians totally beaten, 86; takes Brieg, 88; Excellencies, from the four winds, take wing towards Friedrich, 90; his business in the Austrian-Succession War, 92; his account with Pragmatic Sanction, 93; visited by Belleisle, 113; seizes Brieg, 115; rests on his oars, 142; recognises Ziethen's worth, 141; improves his Cavalry, 145; Camp of Strehlen, 155; diplomatic veracity and skill, 158; audience with Hyndford, 160; "mendacity," 162; Treaty with France, 165; Valori's diplomatic note; will renounce the Berg-Jülich Controversy, 167; misunderstands the English, 171; vividly characteristic interview with Robinson and Hyndford, 178; practical insight and singular human faculty, 186, 213; cavalry review at Strehlen, 188; takes the field again, 191; encamps at Gross-Neuendorf, 192; refuses to treat with Austria, 200; secret negotiations, 203; urges Carl Albert, 205; questionable diplomacies, 211, 217; meeting at Klein-Schnellendorf, 214; secret treaty with Austria, 215; sham siege of Neisse, 218; homaged at Breslau, 220; home to Berlin, 223; secret treaty divulged, 222, 226; prompt action thereupon, 242, 244; boundary stones of Silesia, 245; visits Dresden, 244; urges attack on Vienna; off for Prague, 245; determined to have Glatz, 246; gives a new dress to the Virgin, 247; at Olmütz, 248; disappointed with his Moravian Expedition, 254; urges the taking of Iglau, 256; cannot get

Brünn, 259; gossip Letters, 271; trouble with the Saxons, 271; their partnership ended, 272; resentment; getting instructed by the stripes of experience; in full march out of Moravia, 274; at Chrudin, 275; Schwerin piqued at preference shown to the Old Dessauer, 277; Synopsis of the Moravian Failure, 277; Winter Campaigns, 278; reins up the Old Dessauer, 279; humours Walrave, 283; preparations for meeting Prince Karl, 284; on march from Chrudin, 285; takes a baking of bread from the Austrians, 287; Battle of Chotowitz, 288, 290; sympathy for General Pallandt, 300; Interview with Belleisle; Treaty of peace with Austria, 302; triumphant return homewards, 306; hopes for a general peace, 307; veracity of intellect, 308; life at Reinsberg, 310; begins writing his Memoirs, 310; could recognise the uses of Religion, 312; opens his Opera, 314, 356, 417; takes the waters at Aachen, 315; a King thoroughly practical, 317; assurances of friendship to the new Kaiser, 318; watching the omens, 320, 355; receives Voltaire at Aachen, 346, 449; exertions to bring about peace, 371, 374; his patience exhausted, 386, 399; Austria to take back Silesia; receives Voltaire's fourth visit, 402; sees what he has come about, 403; characteristic "Marginalia," 407, 410; visits Baireuth, 410; gets notice of the Treaty of Worms, 422; preparations for War, 422, 427; skilful diplomacies, 424; Union of Frankfurt, 424; French Treaty, 427; arts and business of Peace; grants right of appeal to himself in person, 428; suggests a Wife for the Heir of Russia, 450; on good terms with the Czarina, 431, 435; his Sister's marriage, 432; preparations for a Campaign, 436; Parting letter to the Duke of Württemberg, 441; writes a quizzing Testimonial to Pillnitz, 442; engages the Barberina for his Opera, 444; takes possession of Ost-Friesland, 448.

Friedrich II., vol. v., how he was forsaken by the French, 2; his praise of Prince Karl's Rhine Campaign, 14; decides to invade Bohemia 17; marches upon Prag, 20, 26; his Manifesto; English theory of him, 21; secret article of treaty with the French, 22; anxious to keep well with Saxony, 24; interview with the Duke of Weissenfels; puts military problems to himself in all manner of scenery, 26; in haste to get hold of Prag, 28; indifference to personal danger, 27; captures Prag, 29; admits that he did not understand War at this period, 30; dreads public opinion in France too much; marches amid difficulties, towards Austria, 33; shut out from all news by Pandour swarms, 36; hears that the French have left him to his fate, and that Prince Karl is close upon him; tries to have battle with Prince Karl, 43; out-manœuvred by Trann, who schools him in the art of War, 48, 50, 59; loses three garrisons; encamped at Konopischt, 47; has to retire northward, 48; a heavygust at Dresden, 115; dissolute seductions, 117, 125; poor Fritz fallen into the wake of Beelzebub, 120, 379; miserable health, 121, 125; his soul tragically dimmed for the remainder of life, 121; pleased with Maréchal de Saxe, 127; writes to Queen Caroline unknown to his Father, 134, 197; letter to his Father, and angry reply, 135; his Father's ill-treatment, 138, 139, 147, 154, 169; thoughts of flight, 173, 192, 207, 210; his regiment on the march, 177; his Father surprises him at unlawful amusements, 188; publicly beaten by his Father, 191, 251, 268; makes a companion of Katte, 192, 266; his debts, 207; iii. 44; off to Dresden, ii. 209; Father will not agree to his marriage, 218; Hotham's testimony of him, 230; letter to Hotham, 239; at King August's Camp of Radewitz, 244, 247, 251, 254; attempted flight, 251; rumour of marriage with Maria Theresa, 253; England will not sanction flight, 259; letter to Hotham, 265; will fly, in spite of all, 266, 269, 280; Journey to the Reich, 269; arrangements for flight, 282, 292, 293; more ill-usage, 282, 285; flight prevented, 293; paternal taunt, 304; a detected prisoner, 305, 307; chastised like a dog, 306; confesses nothing, and narrowly escapes his Father's sword, 314; an arrested Deserter, 314, 316; a prisoner at Mittenwalde; interrogated and threatened by Grumkow, 316; rigorous confinement at Cüstrin, 322, 329; his notion of Predestination, 326, 371; to be tried by Court-Martial, 329; a lucid human judgment in him, 330; sees poor Katte led to execution, 335; crushed down by sorrow and despair, 337; Chaplain Müller's favourable testimony, 338, 342; condemned to death; he is to repent, and not perish, 342; takes an oath of repentance and prostrate submission, 343; letter to his Father; begins gradually a new career, 344; corresponds with Grumkow, 344, 410, 417, 418, 419; iii. 8; among the Domain Sciences at Cüstrin, 365; efforts to regain favour, 367; polite cloak-of-darkness; visited by his Father, 368; loyalty to fact, 372; his life at Cüstrin, as reported by Schulenburg, 376; the beautiful Madame de Wreese, 383, 384; glimpses of Friedrich's habits, 383, 388; returns to Berlin at his Sister's Wedding; a much-changed Crown-Prince, 397; solitude of soul, 398; Colonel of the Goltz Regiment, 400, 425, 426; whom shall he marry? 401; all romance too sorrowfully swept out of him, 402; what he thought of his destined Wife, 409, 417, 418, 422, 424; iv. 24, 39; continued love for Wilhelmina, 415, 423, 424; iii. 41, 73; his betrothal, 422; Life at Ruppin, 425; anxiety to learn what seemed worth learning; military studies, 427; love for his rugged Father, 428; iii. 201, 230; spirit of frolic, ii. 429; iii. 68; letter to Captain Hacke, 10; to Beckendorf, 11; what he thought of the Kaiser, 22; his Marriage, 37; back to Ruppin, 43; at Philipshagen; his first experience of arms, 62, 78; interest in the war, 68, 71; a difficult meeting with Wilhelmina, 72; what he thought of the Rhine Campaign, 85; news of his Father's illness, 80, 93; visits the French Camp, 96; visits Wilhelmina at Baireuth, and talks of his future plans, 94; in his Father's sick-room, 96; sent to Preussen, 103, 104; his Father's growing satisfaction with him, 105, 148; his Apprenticeship completed, 113; life at Reinsberg, an actual snatch of something like the Idyllic, 114, 155, 191, 204, 208; love of music, 121; choice of associates, 211; religious doubts, 214; literary correspondence, 129; writes to Voltaire, 131; ardent admiration, 147, 148, 194; their correspondence, 147, 179; correspondence with Sulm; with Mantensfel, 157; Dr. Zimmermann's puddle of calumnies, 158; a visit to the Prince of Mirow, 159; return visits, 162; quality of his letters to his Father, 167; visits Loo with his Father, 177; his Anti-Macchiavel, 179, 194; becomes a Freemason, 180, 185; his literary achievements, 192; journey to Preussen with his Father, 199; visit of Lord Baldmore and others, 204; his poor Father's last illness, 218, 222; long private dialogues with him, 225; his Father's death, 227, 228; Friedrich is King, 230. Friedrich II., vol. iii., his Accession, 231; editorial prophecies about, 232; old veracity shining through the giddy new element, 233; wishes to keep well with France and Hanover, 234; a cask of wine to Voltaire; surrounded by adventurers; a new knighthood; fine, free, expressive face, 236; would make men happy, 236; opens the public granaries; finds employment for a thousand poor old women, 238; abolishes the use of torture, 238; will build up the Academy of Sciences; invites Wolf, 240; and Maupertuis, 241; enjoins toleration for all Religions; tries Free Press, 243; his activity wonderful; writes many letters, 246; increases his Army; conduct to old companions; every inch a King, 247; loves men of merit, 252; affection for his Mother, 252; filial piety; lessening intimacy with his own Queen, 254; minimum of change in his Father's methods on men, 255; what he will grow to, 258; his Biographers, 261; he considers it unnecessary to be crowned, 262; accepts Homages, personally, in three places, 265; interview with Dickens, 270; best to be frank with him, 271; difficult for a Diplomatist to deal with, 273; invitations to Voltaire, 275; visits Wilhelmina at Baireuth, 278; two days inognito at Strasburg, 281; arrives at Wesel, 284; ague, 286, 334, 338; light-contempt for the Cleave Monks and their Masses, 299; Berg-Jülich preparations, 300, 331; first meeting with Voltaire, 301; takes Herstal in hand, 317; a long account to settle with Karl VI., 324; returns home without seeing George II., 326; means to do his work like a King, 326; Wilhelmina's account of him, 335; not amiable to everybody, 336; news of the Kaiser's death, 338; momentous resolution formed in consequence, 347; to seize Silesia, 348; mysterious preparations, 350; Voltaire tries to discover his secret, 352; he knows his own mind clearly, 355; candour of confession, 357; pliqued with the Old Dessauer, 358; audiences at Berlin; the secret out, 359; Address to his Generals, 363; away, Frankfurt-ward, 364, 373; crossing the Rubicon; at Crossen, 375; steps into Silesia, 376; Grünberg, 377; Glogau Church, 381; Schloss of Weichau, 384; industriously conciliatory, 385; Milkau; two Messengers from Breslau, 389; a wet march; Herrendorf, 390; before Glogau, 391; Proposals at Vienna, 393; refusal with mockery, 394; "la Gloire," 398, 399; iv. 32, 185, 309; to Breslau; gains possession, 402; festivities, 406; at Ottmachau, 414; high moods, 415; bombardment of Neisse, 420; home to Berlin; a life of labour cut out for himself, 425; quizzing the Czarina, iv. 25; returns to Silesia, 31; tries to make terms with Austria, 32; at Schwelldnitz, 33; narrow escape at Baumgarten, 35; hears of project for partitioning Prussia, 44; his Life-element, 46; insists that Glogau be taken, 47; his high satisfaction, 52; takes the field, in Jägerndorf country, 53, 62; Battle of Mollwitz, 63; slow exactitude, 69, 81; seeming ruin, and flight to Oppeln, 74, 82; back to Mollwitz, 84; Austrians totally beaten, 86; takes Brieg, 88; Excellencies, from the four winds, take wing towards Friedrich, 90; his business in the Austrian-Succession War, 92; his account with Pragmatic Sanction, 93; visited by Belleisle, 113; seizes Brieg, 115; rests on his oars, 142; recognises Ziethen's worth, 141; improves his Cavalry, 145; Camp of Strehlen, 155; diplomatic veracity and skill, 158; audience with Hyndford, 160; "mendacity," 162; Treaty with France, 165; Valori's diplomatic note; will renounce the Berg-Jülich Controversy, 167; misunderstands the English, 171; vividly characteristic interview with Robinson and Hyndford, 178; practical insight and singular human faculty, 186, 213; cavalry review at Strehlen, 188; takes the field again, 191; encamps at Gross-Neuendorf, 192; refuses to treat with Austria, 200; secret negotiations, 202; urges Carl Albert, 205; questionable diplomacies, 211, 217; meeting at Klein-Schnellendorf, 214; secret treaty with Austria, 215; sham siege of Neisse, 218; homaged at Breslau, 220; home to Berlin, 223; secret treaty divulged, 222, 226; prompt action thereupon, 242, 244; boundary stones of Silesia, 243; visits Dresden, 244; urges attack on Vienna; off for Prague, 245; determined to have Glatz, 246; gives a new dress to the Virgin, 247; at Olmütz, 248; disappointed with his Moravian Expedition, 264; urges the taking of Iglau, 266; cannot get

Brünn, 269; gossip Letters, 271; trouble with the Saxons, 271; their partnership ended, 273; resentment; getting instructed by the stripes of experience; in full march out of Moravia, 274; at Chrudim, 275; Schwan pliqued at preference shown to the Old Dessauer, 277; Synopsis of the Moravian Failure, 277; Winter Campaign, 278; reins up the Old Dessauer, 279; humours Walrave, 283; preparations for meeting Prince Karl, 284; on march from Chrudim, 285; takes a baking of bread from the Austrians, 287; Battle of Chotowitz, 288, 290; sympathy for General Pallandt, 300; Interview with Belleisle; Treaty of peace with Austria, 302; triumphant return homewards, 306; hopes for a general peace, 307; veracity of intellect, 308; life at Reimsberg, 310; begins writing his Memoirs, 310; could recognise the uses of Religion, 312; opens his Opera, 314, 366, 417; takes the waters at Aachen, 315; a King thoroughly practical, 317; assurances of friendship to the new Kaiser, 318; watching the omens, 320, 395; receives Voltaire at Aachen, 348, 449; exertions to bring about peace, 371, 374; his patience exhausted, 398, 399; Austria to take back Silesia; receives Voltaire's fourth visit, 402; sees what he has come about, 406; characteristic "Marginalia," 407, 410; visits Balreuth, 410; gets notice of the Treaty of Worms, 422; preparations for War, 422, 427; skilful diplomacies, 424; Union of Frankfurt, 424; French Treaty, 427; arts and business of Peace; grants right of appeal to himself in person, 428; suggests a Wife for the Heir of Russia, 450; on good terms with the Czarina, 451, 452; his Sister's marriage, 452; preparations for a Campaign, 456; Parting letter to the Duke of Württemberg, 441; writes a quizzing Testimonial to Pöllnitz, 442; engages the Barberina for his Opera, 444; takes possession of Ost-Friesland, 448.

Friedrich II., vol. v., how he was forsaken by the French, 2; his praise of Prince Karl's Rhine Campaign, 14; decides to invade Bohemia 17; marches upon Prag, 20, 26; his Manifesto; English theory of him, 21; secret article of treaty with the French, 22; anxious to keep well with Saxony, 24; Interview with the Duke of Weissenfels; puts military problems to himself in all manner of scenery, 26; in haste to get hold of Prag, 28; indifference to personal danger, 27; captures Prag, 29; admits that he did not understand War at this period, 30; dreads public opinion in France too much; marches, amid difficulties, towards Austria, 33; shut out from all news by Pandour swarms, 36; hears that the French have left him to his fate, and that Prince Karl is close upon him; tries to have battle with Prince Karl, 43; out-manceuvred by Traun, who schools him in the art of War, 46, 50, 59; loses three garrisons; encamped at Konopischt, 47; has to retire northward, 48; a heavy-laden, sorely exasperated man, 49; gathers himself at Kolin, 50; pos s himself on the north shore of the Elbe, 51; retreats to Silesia, 54; foiled on every point; his veracity of mind, 59; general impression that he had ruined himself, 61; private inexpressibility of mind; delivers Silesian Army to Old Dessauer, and hastens to Berlin, 63; spurt of impatience, 63, 65; his feelings towards the French, 68, 70; informed of Belleisle's capture, 75; proposes Peace, 79; thinks to make friends with Saxony, 79; financial difficulties, and dexterity of management; changed for the better by his reverses, 81; King of Poland for Kaiser, 82; Saxon antipathies, 83, 88, 131, 141, 142; anger at Seckendorf; army preparations in Silesia, 93; letters unusually frank, 94, 100; Austrian invasion, to recover Silesia, 96; studies to be ready for Prince Karl, 97, 99; indignation against Saxony; establishes Camp of Observation, 100, 101; will play his part among the crowned heads of Europe, 102; Headquarters at Camenz, 103; surprises Valori, in not defending his mountain passes, 118; full of silent finesse; very dangerous to play with at games of skill, 118; much satisfied with his Cousin Margraf Karl, 120; decoys Prince Karl on, 121; moment approaching, 123, 125; Hohenfriedberg, 132-138; God has helped me very wonderfully this day, 139; receives Protestant deputation at Landslut, 139; Camp of Chlum, 141; hopes for peace; Convention of Hanover, 142, 169; snubbed by Brühl, 146; writes to France for help in money, but to no purpose, 146; voluntary subsidy from Brandenburg; indignant Manifesto against Saxony, 148; does not yet strike, 149; no peace with Austria and Saxony, 151; no braver little figure on the earth at that epoch, 153, 154; admires Maria Theresa after a sort, 153; still in Bohemia, watching Prince Karl's movements, 155; at Jaromitz; moves northward, 159; at Staudenz, hears of Prince Karl's advance, 162; rapidly forms his plans, 163, 164; battle of Sohr, 165, 168; returns to Berlin, 169; new hope of peace, 172; combined Austrian-Saxon scheme of attack on Brandenburg, 174, 175; instant preparations to meet it, 176; hard words to the Old Dessauer, 176; takes command of Silesian Army, 177, 180; hoodwinks Prince Karl, 181; crosses the Queiss at Naumburg, 181; beats the Saxons at Hengersdorf, 182, 183; cannot catch Prince Karl, who tumbles home double-quick, 183, 184; renews proposals for peace, 185; finds Brühl's rage yellower than ever; runs his risks with the Czarina, 186; again snubbed by France, 187; Old Dessauer conducts him over the field of Kesselsdorf, 196; lodges in Dresden; his enemies compelled at last to come to terms, 196; interview with D'Arget; "would not henceforth attack a cat, except to defend myself," 198, 201; Treaty of Dresden, 202, 203, 206; strange changes since his first visit to Dresden, 204; welcome in Berlin; "long live Friedrich the Great," 205; has climbed the heights, 207; hopes for Peace to the end of his life, 208; the chief memory of him, that of a King and man who fought consummately well, 209; difficulty of narrating his peaceful conquests, 210; he takes the waters at Pyrmont; pays with exactness all losses incurred during the war, 212; goes into Law-Reform, 213, 214, 242, 254, 255, 326; temptations from England to play Conquering Hero; Stadtholder of Holland, 214, 216; Sans Souci, 216, 217; renewal of the Heinsberg Program, 218, 329; attaches the two Keiths to his service, v. 211, 242; something like a stroke of apoplexy, 242; Silesia guaranteed by all the Powers, 246; getting decidedly deep into snuff, 247; visited by Marshal de Saxe, 249, 251; strikes a medal to celebrate his Law-Reforms, 255; literary works; wishes Voltaire were with him, 254, 257, 283; a Land's Husband, not inferior to his Father, 258, 289-330; Army Reviews, 258; audience with Sir Hanbury Williams, 259; pays back an Austrian-Review affront, 263, 264; rights Candidatus Linsensbarth's wrongs, 265, 275; interview in the garden, 270-272; Wilhelmina at Berlin; reception of Voltaire, 275; refuses to know the Pompadour, 276, 278, 449, 450; a present to his old friend Keith, 277; Berlin Carrousel, 279-283; experiences of Voltaire which he does not like, 284; Voltaire's visit much misunderstood to this day, 286; Friedrich's royal provision for him, 286, 287; recognizes his Pope, 288, 289, 290; painfully sensible what a skinless explosive Trismegistus he has got, 295, 296, 321; hears of Voltaire's Sienscheine proceedings, 304; takes the matter silently, but with boundless contempt, 315; two letters to Voltaire; rough common-sense of a German, who speaks what he thinks, 316, 317; anxiety for Wilhelmina's health, 321; visits Ost-Friesland, 322; Shipping Companies and Sea-Enterprises, 324, 325; English Privateer controversy, 325, 410-415; no faith in Free-Trade, 327; grateful for Voltaire's honest literary help, 335, 336; how he regards Maupertuis, D'Argens, Algarotti, 337, 339; a great appetite for conversation and turn for bantering, 339; La Mettrie, 340, 342, 352, 353; esteem for Rothenburg, 342, 343; for Marshal Keith, 343; quits Rothenburg's death-bed in tears, 349; writes to Wilhelmina, 352, 353; his French Colony of Wita a sorry set, 358; "Ach, mein lieber Sulzer," 359; domestic details from Preuss and Demon Newswriter, 361, 365, 367, 370; fantasizing on his flute, 362; diabolic rumours about his private life, 365, 367; defends Maupertuis against Voltaire, 381; peals of laughter at reading Alakia, 381, 382; in a towering passion with Voltaire, 384, 386; outward reconciliation, 387; last interview, 389; determines to have his Book of Poetics back from Voltaire at Frankfurt, 391, 392; no farther correspondence with him; no Muses'-Heaven on Telluric terms, 404; sees indications of approaching War, 405, 427, 431; indifferent to the King of the Romans Question, 407, 408; anxious to establish a Foreign Trade, 410; minds his own affairs, 415; his Third Silesian War, 431, 436; visits Holland; interview with De Catt, 432-435; the Menzel Documents, 438, 442, 447; irritated with the Czarina, 406; a very stormy and dubious future, 450, 453, 454; Neutrality Convention with England, 454, 455; no intention to be Adjunct and Satellite of France, 450, 451; perplexity of his situation, vi. 12, 14; army in the perfection of order, 14; puts a question at Vienna, 17, 19; consults with his principal Generals, 17; marches towards Saxony, 20, 24; letters to Duke Ferdinand; army arrangements, 21, 22; to his Brother and Sister; war inevitable, 23, 24; consultations with Mitchell, 24; 25; enters Saxony, 26; cannot make terms with Polish Majesty, 27, 28, 40; secures the origin of the Menzel Documents, 28-30; blockades the Saxons in Pirna country, 31, 38, 39; joins Keith in Bohemia, 43-45; battle of Lobositz, 46-56; writes to Wilhelmina, 51; compels his Saxon prisoners to enter his army, 67, 70; prepares to winter in Dresden, 72; all Europe against him, 73, 74; no King living has better servants, 75; begins his Prussian Free Corps, 77; his life in Dresden, 75, 77; visit to his Mother, 78; Secret Letter of Instructions to Finckenstein, 79-81; provides himself with poison, in case of the worst, 81; last adieu to his Mother, 81.

Friedrich II., vol. vi., anger of the Great Powers against him, 84; withdraws the Wesel-Cleve garrison, 85; gets little immediate help from England, 86; remonstrates against Austria's unseemly language, 88; for what small sums he got his work well done, 89; his Instructions to Count Finck, 90; four Invasions advancing upon him, 91; suddenly marches on Prag, 91, 93; before the city, 99; junction with Schwerin, 101, 102; got to know his man, after fighting him a month or two, 102; battle of Prag, and defeat of the Austrians, 107-119; over-haste, dispute with Schwerin, 108, 118, 119; exultation and congratulations, 126; Prag not captured, 127, 128; general discouragement of his enemies, 127; Friedrich and Chatham, 138; Ban of the Reich, 143, 240; finds siege of Prag unexpectedly tedious, 143-146; rumours of Daun's approach, 148; sets forth to meet him, 149; battle of Kolin, 148-164; hasty orders to Moritz of Dessau, 158, 159; retreat to Nimburg, 161; tears for his lost soldiers, 167; at Leitmeritz, 169; grief at hearing of his Mother's death, 172-174; predestination; would bribe the Pompadour to obtain peace, 160; his own view of his troubles, 180, 181; indignation at the Prince of

Prussia's disastrous folly, 188; meeting of the Brothers; stern condemnation, 191, 194; well-nigh desperate, 194; vain efforts to get battle with the Austrians, 195, 196; marches to Dresden to look into the French movements, 199, 202; hears of Winterfeldt's death, 201; near Erfurt; on march for Berlin, against Haddick, 204, 204; back towards Erfurt; writes to Richelieu, urging peace, 205; sees hope of help from England and Pitt, 209; enters Erfurt, 210; visits the Duke and Duchess of Sachsen-Gotha, 212; writes to the Duchess; to Wilhelmina, 214; high opinion of Prince Henri, 214, 441; writes to the Duchess, 217; hears bad news from Prussia, 218; a bright-glancing articulate man, not to be struck dumb by the face of Death itself, 219; fighting for existence, and yet going into verse in addition, 219; Lamentation Psalms on strange conditions, 219, 220, 221, 222, 232, 233; again brought into correspondence with Voltaire, 225; letter to Wilhelmina; utterly resolved not to survive defeat, 229-231; will die, if he needs must, in utmost season of battle to the last, 233; interviews with Gottsched at Leipzig, 235, 236; a word of encouragement to Wilhelmina, 238; cheering prospect of work now ahead, 242; Ferdinand of Brunswick to be General of Britannic Army; Pitt again in power, 243; Friedrich marches after Combined-Army, at Weissenfels, 244; Rossbach, 248; watching the enemy, 251; a wager of life, with glorious possibilities, 254; has got the flank of Dauphiness, and means to keep it, 257; never was Army better beaten, 259; his famed Congé de l'Armée, 261; marches for Silesia, the news ominously doubtful, 274, 276; Schweidnitz and Breslau lost, 277, 280; rigorous indignant messages, 280; addresses his Generals at Parchwitz, "We must beat the enemy, or perish all," 281, 282; sketches of Camp Dialogue, 283, 284; hears with joy that the Austrians are advancing on him, 286; captures their bakery, 287; full view of the Austrian Army; his plan of battle soon clear to him, 289; the "Oblique Order," 290, 295; hears, amid his field-music, the sound of Psalms, 291; battle of Leuthen; no finer bit of work for hundreds of years, 291, 301, 309; talks with a landlord at Saara, 302; at Linna comes unexpectedly on a party of Austrian Officers, 304; a homely Te-Deum from his soldiers; a pious people, of right Teutach stuff, 305; recovers Breslau, 305; popular astonishment and enthusiasm, 309; an English Pottery-Apothecary, 310, 311; winter in Breslau, 311, 312; writes pacifically to Maria Theresa, 314; hears with disgust that East-Prussia has become Russian, 316; raises no new taxes, 320; English subsidies, 321, 322; present from Miss Wyndham, 323-327; letter to an English lady, 324, 326; good news of Ferdinand's Rhine Campaign, 329; recaptures Schweidnitz, 329, 330; marches for Olmütz, 331; lays siege, 334; not thought to shine in the sieging line, 335; Daun feels his procedures to be altogether felicitous; impatient of his slow siege, 336; hears of August Wilhelm's death, 338; mistakes Daun's movements for an intention to give him battle, 339; one more convoy indispensable, 339; convoy lost, and Olmütz siege over; masterly retreat to Leutomischl, 346; near Königgrätz, planted impregnable inside the Daun redoubts, 346, 347; marches against Fermor, 350; extremity of grief on account of Wilhelmina, 351; vii. 11, 12; Paper of Directions for Prince Henri, in case of death, 352; straight for Frankfurt, 353, unduly despises Russian soldiery, 353, 354; inspects Dohna's camp at Görgast, 358; joy of the country people on his appearance among them, 360; hastens to attack the Russian Army, 362; neglects to abolish the Russian baggage, 364, 373; battle of Zorndorf, 363-374; praises Seidlitz, 372; marches for Saxony, 376; replies to Daun's cautionary note to Fermor; with Prince Henri in Dresden, 381; cannot draw Daun from his entrenchments, 382; suddenly takes the road for Neisse, 383; piqued at seeing Daun ahead of him, and encamps directly in front of him; obstinate rashness and contempt for Daun, 383; anxious to get out of his bad post, 388; battle of Hochkirch, 388-397; orders retreat, 398; takes his punishment with wonderful cheerfulness, 399; hears of Wilhelmina's death, 400; fixed intention to march to Neisse, 403; sends his wounded to Hoyerwerda; sweeps past Daun and arrives at Görlitz, 404; Silesia brushed clear; back to Dresden; his marches wonderful this year, 409; a sad and silent winter for him, 413; vii. 11; the campaign over; and nothing came of it on either side but frightful loss, 413; mutually vigilant Winter-quarters, vii. 7, 8; vain hopes of peace, 13; must stand on the defensive henceforth, 10, 11, 31; writes considerably in the intervals of business; affectionate consideration for Fouquet, 13; his heavy Finance problem, 13, 14; miraculously meagre War-Budget, and methods of gathering it, 14-18; issue of base money, 16; opening of spring campaign, 19; drives Deville from Leobschütz, 29; at Reich-Hennerdorf, 32; introduces Horse-Artillery, 38; changes Guichard into Quintas Iclius, 34; encamped at Schmützschiffen, 37, 38; watching Daun, 40; sends Wedell against Soltikof, 42, 45, 47; must look to the Russian problem himself, 48; rendezvous at Sagan, 52; tries to intercept London and Haddick, 53; attacks Haddick; marches toward Frankfurt, 55; at Lebus, 66; out reconnoitering, 71; battle of Kunersdorf, 70-95; a peasant brings a draught of water, 74, 77; not so despondent as might be imagined, 77; reckons that the victory is his, 84; three horses shot under him: "I, like the rest, must stand to my duty here!"

86; passionately struggles, commands, entreats, 88; the Prussian Army all in flight; Friedrich among the last to quit the ground, 88; looks after two wounded Lieutenants, 89; taking leave both of Kingship and of life; hands over the Army to Finck's charge, vi. 403; writes to Schmettau in Dresden, authorizing capitulation, vii. 91; despair did not last quite four days, 95; a most lone soul of a man, but continually toiling forward; might have been ruined now, had his enemies been diligent about it, 96; utterances to D'Argens; heavy-laden, nearly desperate, 101-103; second letter to Schmettau; must defend Dresden to the utmost, 102; thanks Wolfersdorf for his defence of Torgan, 111; grief and indignation at loss of Dresden, 121, 127; lays hold of Sagan, and establishes communication with Prince Henri, 138; Voltaire peace expectations; anxieties, private and public, 139, 141; manoeuvring against Soltikof, 142, 147; on the Heights of Zübelwitz; putting tragically scarce of persons to conscript, 148; much risen in hope; ill of gout; for three weeks cannot stir from his room; takes to writing about Charles XII., 150; carried on a litter to Hogen, 151; arrives in Prince Henri's Camp; free of his gout, in joyful spirits and high humour; proceeds against Daun too rapid and rash, 161; a proud Friedrich, got on his feet again, 162; orders Finck to plant himself in Maxen; will not be dissuaded, 164; himself follows; at Wildruf, 165; messages to Finck, 166, 167; whirlwind of grief and indignation at the catastrophe of Maxen, 172; no ray of pity visible for poor Finck, then or afterwards, 174; sets Daun at utter defiance, 176; mutually hostile Winter-quarters, 176; "Protestant Hero," 180; amused at the French resource of borrowing Plate for coining, 188, 189; publishes an expurgated edition of his poems, 190; Voltaire Peace-negotiations, 195; their characteristic correspondence, 199-213; rebukes his persevering ridicule of Maupertuis; trouble not the ashes of the dead, 211, 212; sends Lord Marlborough to Spain on a diplomatic mission, 213; many fallacies of hope, almost pathetic to think of, 215; one hope that did not deceive him, hope in his own best exertion to the very death; his enemies more confident than ever, refuse to exchange prisoners, 216; wholesale recruiting or crimping, 217; is considered to be ruined; gloom or censure among his own people; incredible diligence and persistence, 225; a man drenched in misery, but doing his very utmost in it, with or without success, 227.

Friedrich II., vol. vii., his ill-luck does not yet cease its bad company, 228; his marches exceed all calculation and example, 229; encamped near Meissen, 230, 231; clings to the hope of peace, and of extraneous help, 231; finds the Russian movements full of enigma, 231; re-proaches Fouquet for losing Landshut, 233; tries to get a stroke on Lucy, and to get well into Silesia, 233-235; without success, 236; visible ill-humor; hears of Fouquet's catastrophe, 237; prepares for siege of Dresden, 239; tries to decoy Daun from his entrenchments; marches for Silesia, 240; is himself decoyed by Lacy, 241, 242; hears that Daun is at Bautzen before him, and hastens onward; such a march for heat and difficulty as he never had before, 242; hears that Daun has reached Görlitz, and determines again to turn upon Lacy, 243-246; skirmish of horse, and personal jeopardy, 244; besieges Dresden; one of the rapidest and most furious sieges on record, 247; expects to be master of the town in a few days; hears of Daun's arrival, 251; his soul black and wrathful, worn almost desperate, 251; deals hard measure on Regiment Bernburg, 252; retires from Dresden; hears of the loss of Glatz, 254; beaten on every hand; will make for Silesia without loss of an hour, 256; dissatisfied with Prince Henri's cautious proceedings, 258, 260; more Alcides-like than ever, 265; arranges his march beforehand to the last item, 270, 271; on to Liegnitz, attended all the way by Daun and Lacy, 271-277; Daun, Lacy, and London all agape for him, in scientific postures, 277; provisions all but run out, 278; marches, during night, unobserved through Liegnitz; Austrian-Irish deserter, 279; leaves his camp-fires all carefully burning, 280; arranges himself in order of battle, and tries for a snatch of sleep, 281; suddenly attacked by London; springs to horse, and is rapidly ready to receive him, 281; uncommonly stiff fighting; Regiment Bernburg doing wonders; London sorely beaten, 283, 284; Daun and Lacy can do nothing on him, 284, 285; gathers up his spoil, and marches victorious; one of the snuggest of Kings; takes Regiment Bernburg into favour again, 286; still utterly dark as to the course his enemies will take, 287; secure at last of Breslau, and of junction with Henri, 288; does not deceive himself with these bits of success; letter to D'Argens, 289, 290; finds an unexpected recoil among his enemies, 292; beautifully marches and manoeuvres upon Daun and his chain of army-posts, 293, 294; worn down into utter weariness, sickness, and disgust, 296, 297; hears that Berlin is seized, and hastens to its relief, 301; finding Berlin again free, he marches to Lübben, 307; interview with Gotskowsky; "Merchants' Bills a sacred thing," 309; resolved to dare all things rather than sign a humiliating peace, 312; skilfully manoeuvres upon Daun, 312-314; marches towards Torgau, 315; determines to attack Daun's impregnable position, 319; arrangements and marches, 320; unexpected delays, 322; obliged to attack with but a fraction of his forces, 324; such a problem as human bravery seldom had, 324; a Grandson of the Old Dessauer shot dead, 325; reinforcement and renewed effort; himself wounded, 327; attack upon attack, but without adequate result, 328, 329; night sinks, and nothing more can be made of it, 330; unexpected turn of affairs, and Daun in full retreat, 331-333, 335; the campaign ended; Friedrich takes to his winter-quarters, 337; Leipzig; sees all black, as if at the bottom of a tomb, 338; writes a sadly playful letter to his old friend Madame Camas, 338; his winter in Leipzig cheerfuller than expected; D'Argens and other faithful friends about him, 349; amuses himself with feeding his dogs, 350; always an appetite for a snatch of talk with anybody of sense, 350; interview and dialogue with Gellert 351-356; resolves to retaliate on the Saxon plunderers at Berlin, 358; dialogue with General Saldern, who refuses to act contrary to his honour and oath, 358-361; sends Quintus Ictinus, and banters him about it ever afterwards, 360, 361; sends a small expedition to Langensalz, 361-365; levies contributions on Leipzig, 366; sends Madame Camas a porcelain box, 370, 371; a King risen from the deeps again, more incalculable than ever, 374; his stoical and manful figure of demeanour, 375; marches into Silesia for London and the Russians, 377, 378; swift, skilful manoeuvres, 380, 381; tries to seize Kunsendorf, but finds London too quick for him, 381, 382; digs and entrenches his world-famous Camp of Bunzelwitz, 382-385; beaten here, he is beaten altogether; his last stronghold in the world, 385; constant vigilance, and expectation of attack; like an Arab Sheikh among his tribesmen, 386; finds the Russian Army has given it up, and returned homewards; sends General Platen to quicken their march, 389; stays a fortnight longer at Bunzelwitz, 390; gets very anxious about Colberg, 400, 404; quits Bunzelwitz, and loses Schweidnitz, 404-409; surprising inattention to the state of his Garrisons, 407; falls ill of gout, the inflexible heart of him at last like to break, 409; on march towards Strehlen, 411; lodges with Traitor Warkotach, 412; a night ride, with Kappel for guide, 413; narrowly escapes betrayal to the Austrians, 414-419; loses Colberg, 419, 420; a gloomy winter in Breslau, 422, 423; loses his English subsidy, and puts more alloy into his currency; all gift-moneys in abeyance, 422; succeeds in raising his army to the necessary number, 433; grim letter to D'Argens; becoming wise by stripes, 433, 434; tiff of quarrel with Prince Henri, 434-436; his darkest hour, and dawning of a brighter day, 436; death of the Czarina, 439; finds a warm friend in Czar Peter, 439, 440; liberates all his Russian prisoners, 445; Treaty of Peace with the Czar, 446; the way out from destruction now a thing credible and visible to him, 447; hopeful letters, 447-449; opens his seventh campaign, with Daun, not London, for enemy;

viii. 8; joined by Czernichef with a Russian reinforcement, 9, 10; makes unsuccessful attempts on Daun, 11; dismayed to hear that Czar Peter is murdered, and Czernichef recalled, 14, 15; storms Burkardorf, and drives Daun clear of Schweidnitz, 15-18; his contempt for Lord Bute, 20, 35, 42; besieges Schweidnitz, 21; Battle of Reichenbach, 22-24; Schweidnitz proves unexpectedly difficult, 24; gets it at last, and praises the Commandant for his excellent defence, 29; marches into Saxony, 30; congratulates Prince Henri on his victory of Freyberg, 38; truce with Austria, 39; visits Gotha; dialogue with Professor Putter, 41, 42; terms of peace, 43; Austria tries to get his Rhine Provinces, but cannot, 43, 44; he ruthlessly pays off all superfluous men, 44; treaty for general peace as good as certain, 45, 46; dines with Kurprince of Saxony; home once more at Berlin; supper with the Queen and Court, 51; his part in World-History now played out, 53; reads no sign of the coming French Revolution, 55, 56; his history henceforth interesting to Prussia chiefly; not so peculiar as to authorise much painting of character, 57; sets earnestly to work to repair his ruined Prussia, 61, 62; listens to the distresses of Müsler and company, and helps those who most need it, 63-65; rapidly restores his debased currency; visits Westphalia with Duke Ferdinand, 66; dialogue with Roden, 67-70; picks up D'Alembert at Geldern, 70; second dialogue with Roden; prouder of his victories over his social chaos than of his other victories, 71; has great difficulty in finding fit persons for his different employments, 74; obliges all the rich Abbays to establish manufactures, 75; induces the rich landlords to give up their encroachments on the poor farmers, 76; D'Alembert's report of him, 76, 77; he adopts the French Excise-system, much to the dissatisfaction of Prussia, 78-83; caricatured as a miser grinding coffee; his method with the Curicature Department of things, 82; procurator of the poor, 83; replies to the Domanier at Stettin, 84; account of his nephew's divorce, 86; builds his Neue Palais of Sans-Souci, 87, 88; affection for Lord Marischal, 89-91; shows kindness to Rousseau, 90; footfalls of departing guests, 92, 93; makes treaty of Alliance with Czarina Catharine, 94; corresponds with the Electress of Saxony about the Polish Crown, 102-106; takes little interest in the Polish quarrels; his one rule of policy to keep well with the Czarina, 116, 120; alarmed at the suggestion of Prince Henri for King of Poland, 118; strives to dissuade the Turks from their Polish war with Russia, 132; dreads another European outbreak, 132, 133, 136; receives a friendly visit from Kaiser Joseph, 136-140; suggests at Petersburg a cutting down of Poland, 141; pleasant visit from

Electress Marie-Antoine, 142; fulminates a Royal Bull concerning eternal punishment, 143; makes a return-visit to the Kaiser; Prince de Ligne's account, 145-155; would rather have Lapon at his side than before him, 151; ceremoniously respectful to the Kaiser, 154; interview with Kaunitz on the Russian-Turk war, 161, 161; mediates with the Czarina, 162; she proposes dismemberment of Poland, 168; he gladly undertakes to negotiate the matter, 169-171; has his difficulties with Kaunitz, 169, 170, 171; final agreement between the Partitioning Powers, 172; no alternative left, but either that same Partition, or all Europe kindled into war, 174; at no pains to conceal his great sense of the value of West-Prussia to him, 174-177; how he set to work; and what he made of it, 178-182; keeps an eye on Kaiser Joseph, 185; long dialogue with Zimmermann, 188, 190-196; receives a visit from his sister Ulrique, 196-197; school improvements, 200, 201; sets out for his Silesian Reviews, 202; his later correspondence with Voltaire, 208; his annual Reviews, matters of rigorous business, 221; Conway's account of him and them, 223-226; Major Kaltenborn's, 229, 230; two famous anecdotes of him and Zlethen, 231; suffers from a severe attack of gout; the Kaiser, thinking him dying, marches on Brandenburg, 232; entertains Czarowitch Paul at Berlin, 235; expresses esteem for Pitt, 237, 240; correspondence with D'Alembert on the Kaiser's French tour, 246; Cabinet-Order, with fac-simile of Signature, 246, 247; forbids the Austrian attempt on Bavaria, 248; letter from Duchess Clement on the subject, 253; instantly gets to work, 256, 258; fruitless negotiations with Austria, 261, 261; speech to his Generals, 261, 262; marches to Silesia, 262; Kaunitz's high tone becomes notably altered, 262-264; correspondence with the Kaiser, 256, 266; highly unwilling to begin a war which nobody can see the end of, 268; crosses into Bohemia, 268; regardless of personal risks, 270; humour very sour and severe, 271, 274; letter from Maria Theresa, 271, 272; returns homeward, 274, 275; difficulties mediated by the Czarina, 277; has put a spoke in Austria's proud wheel, and managed to see fair play in the Reich, 279; his second Law-Reform, 280; appoints Hencking to see justice done to Miller Arnold, 283; indignant at the Lawyers, 289; orders the judges to appear before him; and passes judgment on them, 292-302; never neglected this part of his function, 304; still watchful of Austrian encroachments on the Reich, 306; produces a Fürstenbund, or general confederation of German Princes, 306, 307; an unaffectedly vigorous, simple, and manful old age, 308; his old companions dropping off, 310; domestic anecdotes, 311-313; industrial matters a large item in his daily business, 313; the strictest husbandman not busier with his farm than he with his Kingdom, 314; Prince de Ligne reports several pleasant interviews with him, 314-324; Marwitz's recollections, 325-3.1; Marquis de Balthus's, 332-336, 340; severe letter to General Taubentzen on the state of Silesian Army, viii, 3.6; Comte de Bégur's description of his appearance, 341; goes to his last Silesian Review, 343; takes severe cold; returns to Potsdam, 345; increasing illness, 346; interview with Mirabeau, 348; cannot take his usual ride, 350; sends for Zimmermann, hoping to get relief, 352, 373; does faithfully to the end the work that comes to hand, 356; his last day's work over, 357; his life-battle fought out, 359; the Last of the Kings, 360.

Friedrich's Letters—quality of, ii, 363; iii, 129, 130, 147, 163; to Duhau, i, 409; his Father, ii, 1.3, 344, 375; iii, 77, 104, 159, 162, 165, 206; his Mother, ii, 191; v, 189, 170; vi, 125; Wilhelmina, ii, 422, 424; iii, 41, 73, 75, 77; iv, 86; v, 252; vi, 54, 179, 180, 214, 228, 231-238, 239, 262, 261; Hoham, ii, 339, 241, 265; Grumkow, 414, 417, 418; iii, 8; Hacke, 10; Seckendorf, 11; Margraf Heinrich, 66; Madame Camas, 85; vii, 333, 370, 447, 448; Gröben, iii, 86; Karl of Brunswick, iii, 106; Voltaire, 149, 193, 199; 275, 302, 398; iv, 410, 411; v, 229, 231, 348, 354, 386, 387; vi, 225, 232; vii, 140, 172, 200, 210-212; viii, 144, 145, 174, 184, 206; Maupeituis, ii, 241; Jordan, 311, 353, 397, 402, 415; iv, 62, 277; the Bishop of Liège, 317, 318; Algarotti, 353, 416; Old Dessauer, 158; iv, 52; v, 63; Young Dessauer, vi, 48; August Wilhelm, iv, 62; vi, 193; Duke Ferdinand, 21, 23; Podewils, v, 93, 100, 103; Fouquet, v, 143; Prince of Prussia and Princess Amelia, vi, 23, 24; Princess Amelia, 123; Schwerin, vi, 52; Finckenstein, 73, 81; vii, 55, 56, 66, 90, 447; Duchesse of Sachsen-Gotha, vi, 214, 215, 217; vii, 140, 197, 198; viii, 42; Duke de Richelieu, vi, 206; D'Argens, vi, 310, 313; vii, 71, 101, 103, 172, 173, 188, 190, 191, 226; vii, 289, 296, 308, 311, 337, 433, 434, 441, 448; to an English lady, vi, 325, 326; Prince Henri, vi, 351; vii, 32, 258, 260, 256, 297, 434, 437; viii, 26, 38, 46, 243; Daun (as if from Fermor), vi, 381; Lord Marischal, 413; viii, 89, 90; Finck, vii, 90, 91, 167; Schmettau, 91, 120, 128; Wunsch, vii, 93; Prince Ferdinand, 139, 140; Zastrow, 410, 411; De Launay, viii, 53; Douanier at Stettin, 84; Electress Marie-Antoinette, 102-107, 142, 144, 196; D'Alembert, 311, 245; Kaiser Joseph, 265; Taubentzen, 336; Duchesse-Dowager of Brunswick, 236; Note on Toleration, iii, 242; the Straburg Adventure, 283; Silesian Project, 356; Marginalia for Voltaire, iv, 407-409; quizzing Testimonial to Pöllnitz, 443; his opinion of Traun, v, 59; of an Austrian Battalion, 137; of D'Ahrenberg, 154; account of straw sentry, 144; Le Palladon, 157; Speech to his Generals before Lentzen, vi, 231-233; closing paragraph of his "History of the Seven Years'

War," 358; on the ruined condition of Prussia at the close of the War, vii, 72; account of the Prince of Prussia's divorce, 86; newspaper article, 123, 121; on Russian and Turk tactics, 131; suggestion for cutting down Poland, 141; Speech to his Generals on occasion of the Bavarian War, 261, 262.

Friedrich's Mother. See Sophie Dorothee, Friedrich's Wife. See Elizabeth Christina, Friedrich Wilhelm, Eleventh or Great Kurfürst, i, 50, 51, 53, 279; his wariness and dexterity, 280; gets Hinter-Pommern, 282; marches into Jülich, 283; his Polish-Swedish War, 284; essentially an industrial man, 287; character and portrait, 288; Battle of Fehrbellin, 288; beats the Swedes out of Preussen, 290; conquers Swedish Pommern, but cannot keep it, 291; his true Wife, Louisa of Nassau-Orange, 290, 293; his second Wife, Dorothea; mutinies quenched out, 294; death, 295; how Austria settled his Silesian claims, 296; mentioned also, v, 120, 329, 382, viii, 72, 73, 108.

Friedrich Wilhelm, King; as Crown Prince, i, 30, 39; taken to Hanover in childhood, 39; a rough, unruly boy from the first, 36, 40, 57, 326; an abrupt peremptory young King, 318; his Spartan habits, 326; his Father's death, 338; the new King's house swept clear of mendacity and idle hypocrisy, 327; his strange wild ways, 329; love of justice, 320; ii, 76; the first years of his laborious reign, i, 331; a "man of genius," fated to work in National Husbandry, 333, 352; ii, 51, 56, 61; iii, 29; his tall Potsdam Regiment, i, 3.5, 374; ii, 50, 429; iii, 229; the great Drills-ergeant of the Prussian Nation, i, 336; his faculty of minding his own business, 333, 403; ii, 258; Portraits of him, i, 3.23; ii, 120, 445; personal habits, i, 240; no love for the French or their fashions, 341; Broddignagian waggeries, 343; ii, 56; an original North-German Spartan, i, 344, 389; charge of avarice, 345; ii, 139; his siege of Stralsund, i, 346, 353; regard for Charles XII., 351, 356; an original farewell Letter of Instructions, 351; makes his Will in favour of the Queen, 352, 394, ii, 62; returns victorious, i, 257, 364; visited by Czar Peter, 365; Tutors selected for Fritz, 375; his notions about education, 378; fond of hunting, 382; ii, 140; habits at Wusterhausen, i, 3.89; his Tobacco-Parliament, 391; ii, 76 (see Tobacco-Parliament); alarming attack of "nephritic colic," 394; interest in Cleve-Jülich, the Palz-Neuburg Heritage, 397; ii, 43, 71, 294; iii, 173; interferences for the Heidelberg Protestants, i, 398; a King who stayed well at home, 408; ii, 258; loses favour with the Kaiser, i, 404; disappointed with his son Fritz, 415; assists at the birth of Princess Amelia, ii, 21; list of his Ten Children, 22; signs Treaty of Hanover, 43; gets annoyed with the Double-Marriage Treaty, 49, 138 (see Double-Marriage); his recruiting difficulties, and predatory encroachments, 56, 110; George I. fires-up, 60; surrounded by intrigues, 62; snared for the Kaiser by Grumkow and Seckendorf, 65 (see Grumkow); Treaty of Wusterhausen, 70, 96; "possessed" as by two devils, 74, 148, 169, 201, 268; horse-play with Gundling, 86; his irreverence for the Sciences and Fine Arts; summary treatment of Wolf, 89; how Queen Sophie might have managed him, 97; his sorrow at the death of George I.; unsuspected tears in the rugged man, ii. 108; hypochondriacal fits, 109; talks of abdicating, 112; visits King August at Dresden, 116, 209; dissolute entertainments, 117; singular mutual liking of the two, 120; Friedrich Wilhelm receives a return-visit at Berlin, 123; increased dislike for his Son, 184, 188; contemptuous Letter to him, 186; a grand slaughter of wild swine, and what his Majesty did with the pork, 141; a bad attack of the gout, 141, 154; ill treatment of his family, 147, 156, 169, 188, 191, 263; quarrels with George II., 157, 166; troubles of Mecklenburg, &c., 164; resolves to challenge George II. to single combat, 171; imminency of War between them, 173, 177; arbitration, 180; publicly canes the Crown-Prince, 191, 252, 268; will end the Double-Marriage speculation, 193; Wilhelmina to have Friedrich of Beireuth, 203; a conversation with Dubourray, 213; jealous of the Crown-Prince, 214, 218; joyful reception of Hotham; will not consent to Friedrich's marriage, 219; looks sour on Hotham, 231; apprised of Grumkow's treachery, but refuses to believe it, 234, 238; will agree to Single Marriage, not Double, 237; King August's Can.p of Radewitz, 244; extraordinary conduct to Hotham, 259; passionate veneration with himself and others, 268; Journey to the Reich, 269; no taste for salutations in the market-place, 272; a Bridal-procession, 286; visits the Duke of Württemberg, 287; gives him good advice, 291; visits Karl Philipp, 293, 301; a simple dinner, 297; discovers Friedrich's attempt at flight; suppressed rage, 302; visits Ernst Ludwig, 303; can suppress no longer, 306; summary orders, 307; visits Clement August, 308; letter home, announcing arrest; draws his sword upon his Son, 314; "let him take the doom the Laws have appointed," 314; arrives at Berlin, 317; almost mad at the turn things have taken; receives a packet of scottish Letters; assaults Wilhelmina in a frenzy of rage and disappointment, 318; no more negotiations with England, 322; cannot get to the bottom of the conspiracy, 324; wholesale punishments, 324; anxiety to save Friedrich's soul, 326; something of the nature of real prayer, 327, 371; his conduct, looked at from without and from within, 327, 339; distracted wanderings, 338; will have Katte and Crown-Prince tried by court-martial, 329, 332; Katte must die, 333; the King's troubled thoughts, 340; spares his Son's life, 341; and even hopes to save his soul, 334; resolves on Wilh. Imn.'s marriage, 347; preparations for her betrothal, 350; never neglects public business, 354; the Salzburg Protestants, 354, 432; hangs Schlubhut for theft, 355; elk-hunting at Pillau, 357; cudgels his Criminal-Collegium, 358; excessively severe on defalcations, 360; reconciled to his Son, 369, 374; a narrow escape from a bullet, 389; his Majesty's building operations, and infringements of Free-Trade, 389, iii. 110; his store of silver, ii. 394; takes Friedrich into favour, 397, 426; repentant love for Wilhelmina, 399; decides on a Bride for Friedrich, 409; his Letters, 411; receives the Salzburg Protestants at Berlin, 445; a man skilful in investments, 448; his Majesty visits the Kaiser, iii. 7, 11; contempt for their ceremonialia, 11, 16; dines at Prag with Prince Eugena, 18; meetings with the Kaiser, 21, 22; returns home, with new experiences of his high friends, 22; visits Wilhelmina, 25; passes Leipzig, 25; total change of mind towards the Kaiser, 28, 40, 111; a strange Session of the Tobacco-Parliament, 28; a ride with Seckendorf, 31, 100; passionate remorse, 31; interest in West-Preussen, 35; rough banter with Wilhelmina, 37; provision for Friedrich on his marriage, 44, 114; small interest in the Polish election, 50; connection with the Rhine Campaign, 62, 63; grants asylum to Stanislaus, 71; Friedrich still finds him difficult to please, 73; at Philippsburg, 79; steadily refuses to give up Stanislaus, 82, 101; falls acrimoniously ill, 89; pleased with Friedrich's success in Prussia, 105; continued illness, 110, 191; fallen-out with the Kaiser, 112, 174; a visit to Loo, 177, 181; growing favour for Friedrich, 178, 201; renewed anxiety about his Heterodoxies, 185; Friedrich's testimony to his noble kingly qualities, 199; a new fit of illness, 202; the final shadows closing in upon him, 212, 216; his last Tobacco-Parliament, 218; how he shall stand justified before Almighty God, 220, 224; much affected at seeing his Son; Instructions for his Funeral, 223; abdicates in favour of Friedrich, 224, 226; death, 226; his Spartan Funeral, 229; his dealings with the old Nünde, iii. 262; his troubles about Heratol, 314, 315; though dead, still fights, iv. 81; his Law-Reform, v. 214; mentioned also, viii. 277.

Friedrich Wilhelm of Schwedt, Cousin of Friedrich, i. 392, 393 n.; ii. 132, iii. 66, 88, 92.

Friedrich Wilhelm III.'s monument to Schwerin, vi. 123; his parentage, viii. 87; boyish recollection of the Great Friedrich, 812.

Friedrich Wilhelm, Prince (afterwards King), with Friedrich at Leipzig, vi. 349; at siege of Schweidnitz, viii. 27, 28; Westphalia, 67, 68; married to Elizabeth of Brunswick, 84; headlong, and dreadfully

- dissolute, 85, 86; divorce, and second marriage, 86; his curious death-bed, 92; at Friedrich's Silesian Reviews, 51, 53; viii. 250, 251, 333; mentioned also, 349 n., 136, 137, 157, 229, 304, 330.
- Friesack demolished, i. 164, 165, 339.
- Friesland, i. 269.
- Fritsch, Baron von, negotiates peace, viii. 43, 46.
- Fritz, M., viii. 214.
- Fritzlär plundered and burnt, i. 104.
- Fuchs, Dr., monument at Mollwitz, iv. 65.
- Fuggers, the, of Augsburg, i. 135, 197; ii. 266.
- Fuglemen, iv. 32.
- Funccius of Nürnberg, i. 210.
- Funck, Sieur de, v. 444, 445.
- Furnes, v. 11.
- Fürst, Grand-Chancellor von, vii. 281 n., 291, 297, 291; dismissed by the King, 296; crowd of carriages offering sympathy, 299.
- Füssen, Peace of, v. 92, 93.
- GAGE, Senor de, v. 221.
- Galeson, Count, at siege of Prag, iv. 234.
- Gallizin, Prince, commands the Russian Army against the Turks, viii. 133, 134, 151, 155, 156; at Vienna, 277.
- Gallas, Austrian, i. 280.
- Gallioconnière, La, v. 419, vi. 7; sails for Minorca, 9, 10.
- Gardot, Avocat, viii. 143 n.
- Garve, Professor, viii. 275; cited, vi. 175 n.
- Gaudi, Adjutant, at Rossbach, vi. 253; Hochkirch, 336 n.
- Gauß, Engineer, vi. 13.
- Gebhartus of Milan, i. 87.
- Geldern, i. 243; ii. 311; iii. 177.
- Gellert, Professor, a kind of oracle in his day, viii. 350, 353; his interview with King Friedrich, 353-355; his peaceful death, 356.
- Genius, i. 29, 331, 333; ii. 103.
- George I. of England, i. 34, 251, 353, 365; the Pretender coming, 366; his Majesty visits Berlin, 382, ii. 9; assists the Heidelberg Protestants, 401; English troubles, ii. 12; first triumph of the "Constitutional Principle," 15; ii. 107; consents to the Double Marriage scheme, ii. 16; Treaty of Hanover, 43; does not sign the Double-Marriage Treaty, 47; fires-up at Friedrich Wilhelm's predatory recruitings, 58; his smoking room, 78; not inclined for War, ii. 102; death by apoplexy, on the road to Osnabrück, 104.
- George II. of England, i. 19, 132; as Prince of Wales, ii. 12, 48; gives no help to the Double-Marriage scheme, ii. 133; quarrels with Friedrich Wilhelm, 157, 166; his dapper, self-satisfied character, 158; coerces the Duke of Mecklenburg, 169; discovers Grumkow's treachery, 200, 261; helps the Salzburg Protestants, 447; his quarrel with the Prince of Wales, 167; his Wife's Death, 168; in a conciliatory humour towards Friedrich, ii. 234; perplexed about his Spanish War, 270; described by Biebfeld, 272; thick-coming difficulties, 337; news of the Kaiser's death, 346, 350; against Friedrich, 33; assists Austria, 42; iv. 99; distracted procedures, 120, 124, 146; a strange Curator of England, 140; Austrian Subsidy, 148; difficulty of moving the Dutch, 149, 350; of saving Hanover from War, 150; sees that Friedrich must be bargained with, 155, 171, 196; consequences of having a George II. for Chief Captain, 174, 420; can do no more for Austria, 199, 210, 229; tries a second time to draw his sword, 320; but to no purpose, 350; sword actually drawn, 367; at Dettingen, 375, 384; Conferences at Hanau, 383; receives Prince Karl, 393; projected invasion of Alsace, 399; Austria to take back Silesia, 402; Treaty of Worms, 420; French Treaty, 426; threatened with invasion, 438; litigation with Friedrich about Ost-Friesland, 449; rather a dear morsel for England, v. 42; difficulties in Highlands and the Netherlands, 104, 116, 151; agreement with Friedrich, 142, 149, 151, 169; the Young Pretender in Edinburgh, 170; helps the Dutch, 257; hires Russian troops, 240, 242, 452; Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, 245; King of the Romans Question, 405-408; Privateer Difficulties with Friedrich, 413; deaf ear to Cameron's Wife, 413; feels that war with France is inevitable, 451; refuses the French a passage through Hanover, vi. 83; finds no help in Kur-Mainz, 87; anger at the Duke of Cumberland, 209; disgraces Lord George Sackville, 343; his sudden death, vii. 64; Smelfungus on, viii. 241; mentioned also, v. 18; vii. 337, 342.
- George III. of England, ii. 183; vi. 213; becomes King of England, vii. 344; his future Wife, 371; saves Queen Matilda of Denmark, 325.
- George, Duke, of Saxony, i. 231.
- George Friedrich of Culmbach, i. 200, 215, 222, 236; goes to Prussia to administer, 245.
- George Ludwig, Bishop of Liege, iii. 315; See Affair of Herstal.
- George, Prince, of Hesse-Cassel, iv. 256, 369.
- George the Pious, of Liegnitz, 412. See Culmbach.
- George Wilhelm, Tenth Kurfürst, helpless amid the hot ashes of the Thirty-Years' War, i. 266, 273.
- Gera Bond, the, an excellent piece of Hohenzollern thrift, i. 187, 246, 295, 298; ii. 273; the Salzburg Protestants at Gera, 443; Friedrich delayed at, iii. 72.
- Gerard, translator of "Dialogues on Poland," viii. 184.
- Gerber, ii. 321, 333.
- Gerhard, Engineer-Lieutenant, viii. 29.
- Gerlach, Reverend Herr, assists Kappel in saving Friedrich from betrayal, viii. 416, 417, 418.
- Germain, St., at Rossbach, vi. 252, 253, 254, 259, 263; rapacity and insubordination of the French army, 274.
- German language, the, i. 318; Names, v. 124, 183; Nation, the, vi. 290.

- Gerhardt, Baron von, takes the water from Arnold's Mill, viii. 284; the King's Judgment, 286; Judgment reversed, 304.
- Gessler, General, at Hohenfriedberg, v. 135, 137; sent to reinforce the Old Dessauer, 145, 163; mentioned also, vii. 385.
- Geusan, Anton von, at Versailles, iv. 10, 19.
- Geyler, I. 287 n.
- Gibbon's only instructions in Ancient War, vii. 36.
- Glbraltar, Spanish siege of, ii. 100, 104, 145.
- Gibson, cited, v. 117 n.
- Giesebrecht, cited, vii. 371 n.
- Gilge, I. 291.
- Ginkel, General, ii. 328, 373; iii. 13, 89; Dutch Ambassador to King Friedrich, iv. 164, 168.
- Glours, Comte de, killed at Crefeld, vi. 349.
- Glaserapp, Grenadiers of, iv. 50.
- Glatz, iii. 14; iv. 346; captured by General Loudon, vii. 251, 256.
- Gleim, Bailiff, viii. 513.
- Glenbuck, Laird of, v. 413.
- Glenfinlas, v. 151.
- Glinde, Albrecht, I. 177.
- Glogau, iii. 381, 391, 401; capture of, iv. 47.
- Gluue, iii. 122.
- Göbel, ii. 444.
- Goethe, I. 23, 312; ii. 305; his Hermann und Dorothea, 448; iv. 17; vi. 360; a boy at Frankfurt, vii. 21; his and his father's interest in the battle of Bergen, 26; his recollection of Gellert, vii. 357; mentioned also, viii. 356 n., 183, 210, 256, 359; cited, vii. 357 n.
- Göldlein, General, iv. 70, 73, 76.
- Goltz, Colonel von, accompanies the King to Silesia, iii. 373; despatched to Prince Leopold at Glogau, iv. 43; scalade of Glogau, 49, 51; secret Treaty of Klein-Schnellendorf, 201, 203, 215; shot at Prag, vi. 123.
- Goltz, General, under Prince of Prussia, vi. 184; not condemned with him, 191; defends Landshut, vii. 133, 151; chief post at Neustadt; retires towards Neisse, 222; summoned by Loudon to surrender, 224; stubbornly repels every attack, and reaches his destination, 225; in Silesia, vii. 293; reinforced to look after Loudon, 312, 335; flings himself upon his task in a way pleasant to look at, 377; taken with sudden fever and dies, 380.
- Goltz, Kammerherr von, goes to Petersburg, vii. 445.
- Gompert, I. 352.
- Görtz, I. 365.
- Görtz, Eustace von, employed by Friedrich in the Bavarian business, viii. 250-253; Minister to Petersburg, 332.
- Görtz, General von, viii. 256.
- Gotha, Sachsen-, Duke and Duchess of, visited by Friedrich, vi. 212; brief account of them, 213; letters from Friedrich to the Duchess, 214, 217; vii. 140, 197-198; timber cut down by Reichs Army, 21; Duchess of, visited by Friedrich, viii. 40; her death, 63; letter from Friedrich, 42.
- Götter, Count, iii. 154, 387; Proposals to
- Austria, 387; iv. 63; at Breslau, as Prince's Ulrique's Wedding, 433.
- Gottfried, cited, ii. 106 n.
- Gottsched's, Professor, interviews with Friedrich, vi. 225, 236; his wife a fine, graceful, loyal creature, 236; the King amused at his conceit, viii. 41; mentioned also, vii. 351, 356.
- Götting, Camp of, iv. 53, 150, 181.
- Götze, Kriegsrath von, v. 428.
- Göttinger, Wilhelm Lebrecht, vi. 65 n.
- Gotskowsky, the good genius of Berlin, vii. 302-307; interview with Friedrich about payment of ransom, 309; at Leipzig, 366, 368.
- Gough, cited, I. 110 n.
- Grahame, Colonel, vii. 374.
- Graffigny, Madame de, iii. 145 n.; cited, v. 234 n.
- Gramm, Duke of, iv. 379; killed at Fontenoy, v. 107, 113.
- Granaries, Public, iii. 237.
- Granby, Lord, at Minden, vii. 62; leads an attack at Warburg, vii. 264; his portrait by Reynolds, 264; at Vellinghausen, 291, 394; character of his English troops, 396, 397; at Wilhelmsthal, viii. 19; Am neburg, 32, 33.
- Grand, Le. See Grant.
- Grant, Lieutenant Colonel, at Kolln, vi. 162; at Leobschütz, vii. 223.
- Granville, Earl. See Carteret.
- Grata, Fortress of, iii. 189.
- Graun, the Brothers, iii. 121, 338.
- Graun, the Composer, iii. 333.
- Graun, Kammergericht Rath, viii. 293.
- Grävenitz, Countess, and the Duke of Württemberg, ii. 238; becoming much of a hypocrite, 290; stowed away, 292, 378.
- Gray's Elegy, quoted by Wolfe on the night preceding Quebec, vii. 163.
- Great Elector, the. See Friedrich Wilhelm.
- Gregg, Captain, viii. 158.
- Gregory, St., of Nazianzen, I. 46.
- Gribenauval, M., Engineer in defence of Schweidnitz, viii. 21, 25-29.
- Griffet, Father, viii. 151.
- Grimm, visits Russia, viii. 210.
- Griunitz, Schloss of, I. 231.
- Gröben, Lieutenant, ii. 43, 86.
- Gröben, President von der, viii. 66.
- Grosz, Russian Excellency, v. 317, 320, 444, 445.
- Grotkan, in Silesia, iv. 61, 62, 168.
- Grumkow, Baron, I. 319, 325; ii. 118; a cunning, greedy-hearted, long-headed fellow, I. 319; sets a spy on Creutz, 358; challenged by the Old Dessauer, and humbly apologises, ii. 63; introduces Seckendorf to Friedrich Wilhelm, 66; bribed by the Kaiser, 64, 67; he and Seckendorf Black Artists of the first quality, 68; how they "performed" Friedrich Wilhelm, ii. 74, 148, 160, 269; skilful manoeuvres in the Tobacco-Parliament, ii. 79, 112, 138, 161, 214, 218; deputation to the Queen, 195, 200; Cipher-Correspondence with Reichenbach, 199, 240, 281; their treachery brought home to them, and denied, 285; an intercepted Letter, 261; Grumkow in-

- interrogates Friedrich at Mittenwalde, 321; becoming almost too victorious, 323, 329, 341; if the King should suddenly die on us, 330, 341; Grumkow visits Friedrich at Custrin, 330, 342; is one of the Court-Martial to try him, 333; correspondence with Friedrich, 346, 410, 415, 417, 419; deputation to Wilhelmina, 349; his account of the King's interview with Friedrich at Custrin, 368; receives a private report of Friedrich from Schulenburg, 375; introduces Friedrich to Wilhelmina, 396; with the King at his visit to the Kaiser, iii. 15, 17, 20; visits Wilhelmina, 25; will have nothing to do with Kaiser's Double-Marriage project, 27; last interviews with the King of Poland, 33, 46.
- Grünberg, Bürgermeister of, iii. 877.
- Grüne, General, v. 172; on march for Brandenburg, 173, 174; joins Rutowski in Saxony, 187; at Kesseldorf, 191, 194.
- Guarini, Jesuit, and the King of Poland, v. 187; vi. 30, 77.
- Guasco, General, at Siege of Dresden, vii. 119; skillfully defends Schweidnitz, viii. 21, 22; obliged to surrender at last, and dies a prisoner, 30.
- Guastalla, Monsignore di, iv. 106.
- Gudowitch, Adjutant, vi. 445.
- Guhrauer, cited, ii. 14 n.
- Guilbert, Colonel, viii. 209, 210.
- Gulichard. See Quintus Icilus.
- Gumbrecht, i. 201.
- Gundling, Jakob Paul, and his sublime long-eared crutition, ii. 84; Friedrich Wilhelm's rough sport with him, 86; quarrels with Fassmann, 94; strange burial, 95; mentioned also, viii. 276.
- Gustaf Adolf, the great, i. 153, 206, 267, 273, 275, v. 251, vi. 250.
- Gustav III. See Karl Gustav.
- Gustav IV., viii. 203 n.
- Gutzmar, Mayor of Breslau, iii. 404, 406, iv. 187, 190.
- Guyon, Captain, viii. 29.
- HABELSCHWERT, Action of, v. 66.
- Hacke's wedding, ii. 421; his advancement, iii. 9, 13, 20, 226; letter from Friedrich, 10; Friedrich's regard for him, iv. 62; at Beraun, v. 23; in attendance on Friedrich, 362.
- Haddick, General, in Berlin, vi. 294, 294, 233; defends Torzan, 405; in the Lansitz, vii. 39; to join with Soltikof, 42; attacked by Friedrich, 54; by Finck, 130; dismissed from service, 143.
- Haddock, Admiral, iv. 332, 333.
- Hagen, Minister von, viii. 74.
- Hagne, Friedrich's letters at the, viii. 296 n.
- Halifax, Lord, v. 418.
- Hail, Captain of the ship "Dartmouth," viii. 211.
- Halle, University of, i. 302; controversy with Wolf, 89; the Salzburg Protestants at, ii. 443.
- Haller, Dr., viii. 187, 188.
- Hamann, Customhouse-clerk, viii. 78.
- Hameln, i. 271.
- Hamersleben, i. 401.
- Hanan, Conferences at, iv. 368; Belleisle at, v. 72.
- Hanover, Electorate of, i. 33; Linden Avenue at, 44; Treaty of, ii. 43, 70; our Hanover Series of Kings, ii. 107; King George's Hanoverian difficulties, iv. 149, 210, 350; Convention of, v. 142, 149, 150, 169, 197; little profit from her English honors, 457, 458.
- Hanway, Sir John, v. 276, 277, 324; cited, 277 n., iii. 219 n.
- Hapsburg Kaisers. See Rudolf.
- Harcourt, Duc d', iv. 235; 24.
- Hardenberg, Prince, viii. 325.
- Hardwicke, Lord, vi. 141, vii. 345, 248.
- Haren, Van, iv. 347.
- Harrach, Count, v. 197, 303, 438.
- Harrington, Lord, ii. 145, 253; iii. 271, 300; iv. 146; tries to negotiate peace, v. 149.
- Harria, Excellency, viii. 230.
- Harsch, General, defends Prag, v. 25, 27; obliged to surrender, 10; to remain near Silesia, vi. 377, 379, 382; hurries homewards, 4 5; attacks Landshut, vii. 133; with Loudon at capture of Glatz, vii. 255.
- Hartmann, Herr von, iv. 103.
- Hartoff, Herr von, ii. 174.
- Haslang, v. 92.
- Hassan-Bey, in the Turkish fleet, viii. 158.
- Hastenbeck, Battle of, vi. 189, 190.
- Haude, Bookseller, and the Mercury newspaper, iii. 243.
- Hautcharmol, General, v. 97, 98, 132, 144.
- Havelberg, i. 367, ii. 445.
- Havre-de-Grace attacked by Rodney, vii. 49.
- Hawke, with a Channel Fleet, watches Vannes, vii. 49, 112, 113; utterly ruins Condans's fleet, 184, 187.
- Hawley, General, iv. 383.
- Haxthausen, Count, Danish Ambassador at Petersburg, vii. 462.
- Hay, Lord Charles, at Fontenoy, v. 109, 110; quizzes Lord London, vi. 143.
- Heavy Peg, i. 164, 337.
- Hecht, Prussian Secretary, v. 427.
- Hedwig, Grandmother of Peter III., vii. 441.
- Heffner, Kapellmeister, viii. 82.
- Heidelberg Protestants, i. 394.
- Heiden, Colonel, defends Colberg, vi. 375.
- Hellbronn, ii. 293, v. 11.
- Heilsbronn, i. 91, 267, ii. 279.
- Heinrich Friedrich of Schwedt, Cousin of Friedrich, i. 392, 593 n.; iii. 66, 87, 163, 164, 247.
- Heiden-Genicksche*, cited, ii. 244 n.; vi. 85 n.; vii. 238 n.
- Heldorf, Kreis-Commissariat, vi. 269, 272.
- Helvetius arranges an Exclac-system for Prussia, viii. 77, 78.
- Hénault, President, v. 229.
- Henderson, cited, iv. 400 n.; v. 91 n.
- Hensen, Count, at Berlin; supper with the Queen Mother, iii. 253.
- Hennersdorf, Fight of, v. 181-183.
- Hennert, cited, iii. 116 n.
- Henri II., iv. 96.
- Henri, Prince, iii. 117; with the King at Aachen, iv. 318; marches upon Prag, v.

- 80; at Tabor, 45; at battle of Hohenfriedberg, 136; at Pyrmont, 212; Demon Newswriter's account of, 370; at battle of Prag, vi. 115, 116, 119, 122; in retreat, 169, 172; with the King, 191; a grudge of peculiar intensity, 194; enters Erfurt, 211; at Gotha, 212; Friedrich's high opinion of him, 214, 441; mightily wounded, 263; to guard Saxony, 276, 333, 377; visits Wilhelmina, 338; at Tschopau, 348; letter from Friedrich, grieving for Wilhelmina, 351; secret Paper of Directions, 352; at Gross Selditz, 378, 379; suddenly posts himself on the heights of Gahmrig, 379; with Friedrich in Dresden, 381; on march for Nessel, 403; despatches Knobloch to clear Erfurt, vii. 21; swift work on the Austrian Magazine, 27, 28; congratulated by Friedrich, 32; called away from Saxony, 38; at Bautzen, looking after Loudon and Haddick, 50; at Schmötzen, 51; hears of the Kunersdorf disaster, 99; at Sagan, looking after Daun, 132, 134; makes extraordinary exertions; moves southward after the Austrian Magazine, 135; march of fifty hours, from the Landekron to Hoyerswerda, 143-147; captures Hoyerswerda, 145; "the only one who never committed a mistake," 147; beautifully outmanoeuvres Daun, 151, 152; defeats D'Ahrenberg at Pretsch, 152; judiciously pricks into Daun; meeting with Friedrich, 162; advises the slow and sure method, 164; threatening to resign, 225; to look after the Russians and Silesia, 229; cannot see his way to attack, 231, 256; correspondence with Friedrich; mutual dissatisfaction, 258-260; makes one of his winged marches, and saves Breslau, 269; crosses Oder, to watch Soltikof, 275; out of health; nurses himself in Breslau and Glogau, 283; letters from Friedrich; longing for his return, 286, 297; presents his horse to Gellert, 357, 437; takes charge of Saxony against Daun, 379, 390; driven into straighter quarters, 421; tiff of quarrel with Friedrich, 434-437; writes to Eichol, 436, 437; brilliant successes in Saxony, 437; letters from Friedrich, viii. 27; attacked by Stolberg and driven from Freyberg, 30; defeats Stolberg in battle of Freyberg; letter to Friedrich, 36; from Friedrich, 38; goes home to recruit his health, 48; letter from Friedrich, 48; Friedrich forbids him the offer of the Polish Crown, 117; with Friedrich at the visit of Kaiser Joseph, 136, 137; visits his sister the Queen of Sweden, 144, 164; visits the Czarina; sumptuous entertainments at Petersburg, 165-168; Czarina proposes the dismemberment of Poland, 168; again at Petersburg, 235; in the Bavarian War, 269; visits Paris, 335; mentioned also, v. 253, 450, vi. 78; vii. 349; viii. 86, 323, 340.
- Henri, Prince, the King's Nephew, with him at Leipzig, vii. 349; Friedrich's good opinion of him, 86; viii. 193.
- Henry II. of England, i. 90.
- Henry II. of France, i. 213.
- Henry IV., i. 253, 256.
- Henry IV., Kaiser, i. 77.
- Henry VII., Luxembourg Kaiser, i. 123, 160; poisoned in sacramental wine, 124; his descendants, 135.
- Henry VIII. i. 242.
- Henry the Fowler, beginning of German Kings, i. 63; his six Markgraviates, 64; a valiant Son of Cosmos, 65; iv. 96.
- Henry the Lion, i. 81, 89.
- Henzi, Conspirator, of Berne, v. 373.
- Hermann, cited, vii. 443 n.
- Hero-worship, a thrice-lamentable, v. 16, 19.
- Herrnhansen, i. 41; ii. 16.
- Herrnhuth, founded by Count Zinzendorf, v. 178, 184.
- Herrnstein burnt by Soltikof, vii. 150.
- Herstal, iii. 174; the affair of, 301, 307, 312.
- Hertsberg, at Congress of Hubertsburg, viii. 46; with Friedrich in his last illness, 351, 355, 358; mentioned also, 189, 243, 266, 272, 278, 333.
- Hervey, Lord, ii. 171; cited, 171 n.
- Herzen, cited, vii. 443 n.
- Hesse, poor old, ii. 360.
- Hessen-Darmstadt, Prince of, joins the Reichs Army, vi. 177.
- Hessian troops in Scotland, v. 90; in England, vi. 8, 9.
- Heucking, Colonel, viii. 288.
- Heyde defends Colberg, vii. 291, 297; thanks from the King, 298; third siege, 399-404; utterly starved out, and honorably surrenders, 421.
- Heywood, General, at Brusela, iv. 368.
- Hierusalem, Rev. M., cited, vii. 395 n.
- Hildburghausen, Prince of, iii. 171; takes command of Reichs Army, vi. 177; Rossbach, 244, 245, 246, 257, 258; retreat by Naumburg; flings down his truncheon, and goes home, 259.
- Hildburghausen, Duke of, vi. 177.
- Hildebrand, Pope, i. 77.
- Hildebrandt, cited, iii. 299 n.
- Hille, ii. 365, 367.
- Himmelstädt, ii. 366.
- Hirsch, the Voltaire-Lawuit, v. 297, 316.
- History, all, an imprisoned Epic, Psalm and Prophecy, i. 24; fleeting rumours of, 76; use of, ii. 427.
- History of the Seven-Years' War by the Royal Staff Officers, cited, vi. 107 n.
- Hoare, cited, vi. 227 n.
- Hoarly, Bishop, v. 414.
- Hochkirch and its environs, vi. 335; battle, 338-400; Hochkirch Church, 401.
- Hochstädt, i. 800.
- Hocke, Baron von; deputation from Crüenberg, iii. 375.
- Hof, i. 131; iii. 72.
- Hoffman, Colonel, killed at Dresden, vii. 121.
- Hoffmannswaldau, Silesian poet, iii. 372.
- Hufmann, Brunswick Envoy, v. 364.
- Hohenfriedberg, v. 125, 126; battle of, 132, 133.
- Hohenlohe, Reich-Fürst von, vi. 129.
- Hohenstauffen Dynasty, i. 78; tragic end of the, 108, 110.

- Hohenzollern, the, i. 85; Burggraves of Nürnberg, 90; ii. 278; a thrifty, steadfast, clear-sighted line of men, i. 92, 107; how they obtained Baireuth and Anspach, 108; Burggraviate made hereditary, 109; further acquisitions, 128; become connected with Brandenburg, 131, 145; become Kurfürste, 163; contrast between guidance and no-guidance, 167; not worshippers of Beelzebub, 169; not speckled paragons of all the virtues, 172; practical notions of Fairplay, 287; the Twelve Hohenzollern Electors, 307; National Drill-sergeants, 377; fine talent for annihilating rubbish, ii. 273; Prussia's debt to her Hohenzollern Kings, viii. 59. See Brandenburg; Prussia.
- Holbach, Baron d', viii. 145.
- Holberg, cited, i. 223 n.
- Holderness, Lord, making for Venice, v. 45; mentioned also, vi. 126.
- Holland, a Stadtholder chosen for, v. 236, 277. See Dutch.
- Holle, cited, i. 106 n.; v. 403 n.
- Holstein, i. 349, 357; Holstein Beck, Prince of, ii. 248; accompanies King Friedrich into Silesia, iii. 374; at Frankenstein, iv. 54, 58.
- Holstein-Plön, Duke of, vii. 247.
- Holstein, Prince George of, vii. 457.
- Holstein, Prince von, at siege of Dresden, vii. 248, 251; in Battle of Torgau, 320, 324, 329.
- Homer's Iliad, i. 25.
- Hompesch, Baron von, ii. 59.
- Hope sometimes a godlike thing, vi. 281; very beautiful, sometimes even fallacious hope, vii. 216.
- Hopfgarten, General, and his complimentary balderdash, ii. 271.
- Hoppe, cited, ii. 161 n.
- Horst, Colonel of the Prussian Free-Corps, vi. 131; sharp on the Cossacks, 348, charge of baggage during battle of Zorndorf, 360; taken prisoner to Petersburg, vii. 134; at Petersburg, vii. 445, 450, 451; hears in his prison of the accession of Peter III., 451; presented at Court, 454; sees the deceased Czarina lying in State; sups with the Czar, 456; with the Czarina, 457; paid off, at close of the war, 45.
- Hormayr, cited, i. 123 n.; ii. 403 n.; iv. 102 n.; v. 15 n.; vi. 106 n.; viii. 80 n.
- Horn, cited, i. 53 n.
- Hornol, M. d', viii. 217.
- Horse Artillery, first introduced by Friedrich, vii. 23.
- Horst, Minister von der, viii. 74.
- Hotham, Sir Charles, English Envoy to Prussia, ii. 213; welcomed at Berlin; dinner with the King Friedrich Wilhelm, 215; his Despatches, 228; Double-Marriage scheme as good as ended, 236, 239; amazing interview with the King, 260; no choice but to return home, 263.
- Howe, Lord, in the attack on Conflans's fleet, vii. 186.
- Hoym, Graf von, ii. 252.
- Hubertsburg, sacking of, vii. 359-361; viii. 46; Congress for peace held at, 46, 47.
- Hübner, cited, i. 66 n.; iii. 48 n.; vi. 197 n.
- Hülse, at Kolin, vi. 154, 161, 162, 163; with Prince Henri in Bohemia, vii. 26; with Dohna, against the Russians, 40; at Züllichau, 47; marches into Saxony, 151, 152; with Friedrich in Saxony, vii. 235, 276; assists at siege of Dresden, 248; defeats the Reichsfolk on the Dürrenberg, 250; hastens to the assistance of Berlin, 301; returns to Saxony, 310; with Friedrich, 313; despatched to Leipzig, to clear out the Reichs Army, 314; battle of Torgau, 321, 323, 326; getting into bivouac, 330; hears renewed firing, and hastens to it, through the darkness of night, 331, 332; his respect for Gellert, 352; sends reinforcements to Prince Henry, vii. 33.
- Hungary becomes part of Austria, i. 194.
- Hungarian Diet, iv. 207.
- Hungarian enthusiasm for Maria Theresa, v. 24.
- Hunger, war waged by, i. 276.
- Hunolstein, cited, viii. 250 n.
- Huss, John, i. 156, 159; iv. 298.
- Hussites, v. 52.
- Hyndford, Lord, at Breslau, iv. 157, 160, 164; audience with King Friedrich, 160, 163; again, with Robinson, 178; at Gross-Neundorf, 194, 200; two notes, 201; interview with Goltz, 203; meeting at Klein-Schnellendorf, 211; at Berlin, 222; Order of the Thistle, and Silver Dinner-Service, 304; mentioned also, 45, 154, 276, 301, 260.
- Hypocrites, Sincere, i. 377.
- ICH DREN, i. 141, 142.
- Ignon, St., General, at Torgau, vii. 321.
- Ilgel, i. 351; ii. 137; iii. 273.
- Imhof defends the bridge at Rees, vi. 411 n.
- India, England victorious in, vii. 161.
- Indigence made human, iii. 238.
- Infâme, L', chief monster of chaos, viii. 55, 56; may again need to be tied up, 57.
- Ingoldsby, Brigadier, at Fontenoy, v. 109.
- Intellects, female, i. 49; the best symptom of Intellect, 420; uttered and unuttered Intellect, ii. 409; Intellect and Vulpinism, iii. 30; love of intellect, 127.
- Ipres, v. 11.
- Italian Liberty, i. 125; Italy extinguishing its Protestantism, 220; Italian War, iv. 330.
- Itzig of Berlin, vii. 305.
- Iwan, Czar, i. 370; ii. 408; childhood of, iii. 355; death, iv. 27.
- Iwanowna. See Anne of Courland.
- JACOBÆA of Baden, i. 250.
- Jägerndorf, Duchy of, i. 194, 216, 236, 245, 277, 292; iii. 14; country, 371; iv. 56.
- Jahnus, Colonel, death of, v. 45.
- James I. of England, i. 262, 269, 270.
- James Sobieski of Poland, i. 390.
- Jandun, Duhan de. See Duhan.
- Jaromierz, Friedrich Wilhelm at, iii. 15; D'Arget saves Valori from the Pandours at, v. 137.

- Jarriges, M., a Prussian Judge, v. 208, 510, 332.
- Jauernik, iv. 261.
- Jean Paul, i. 93.
- Jeetz, General, at Breslau, iii. 408; cannot take Namslau, 410, 412; succeeds at last, 414; siege of Brieg, 415; iv. 115.
- Jeffery, Bookseller, v. 261 n.
- Jena University, v. 271, 272.
- Jenkins, Captain Robert, scandalous treatment of, by the Spaniards, ii. 302; his "Ear" re-appears, and produces effects, iii. 190, 214, 327, 330; iv. 29, 93, 131; v. 245, 247, 418; Jenkins-Ear Controversy at last settled, v. 245.
- Jennings, Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough, viii. 240.
- Jericho, one's, apt to fall, iv. 300.
- Jerome's, St., method of scripture commentary, i. 46.
- Jenita, i. 220, 256, 262, 268, 272, 393; ii. 58; iii. 141; busy actions, vii. 254; fanaticism in Poland, 316.
- J. F. S., Author of a Life of Brown, cited, iii. 382 n.; vi. 176 n.
- Joachim Ernst, Markgraf, i. 269.
- Joachim Friedrich, Eighth Kurfürst, i. 230, 239; fairly gets hold of Preussen, 245; death, 247.
- Joachim I., Kur-Brandenburg, i. 185, 186, 204; his character, 221; his Protestant Wife, 222; death-bed, 226.
- Joachim II., Sixth Kurfürst, i. 226; abhorrence of chicanery, 229; accident to his poor Wife in the Schloss of Grimnitz, 231; gets Co-infelment in Preussen, 231; Heritiage-Brotherhood with the Duke of Liegnitz, 232; stiff debates with King Ferdinand, 235; staunch to the great cause of Protestantism, 236; on good terms with Karl V., 237.
- Joachimstahl, vi. 44.
- Joachimstahl Gymnasium, i. 231, 240.
- Jobst of Mähren, i. 139, 147, 150, 152, 154.
- Johann II. Burggraf of Nurnberg, i. 132, 146.
- Johann Friedrich the Magnanimous taken captive by Karl V., i. 237, 239, 238; ii. 245; vi. 213; his Wife, i. 242.
- Johann George, Elector of Saxony, i. 275.
- Johann George of Jägerndorf, i. 246, 277; iii. 371.
- Johann George, Seventh Kurfürst, i. 187, 241, 244; Gera Bond, 188; with Karl V. at the siege of Wittenberg, 237; a prudent, thrifty, just-minded Herr, 239.
- Johann, King of Bohemia, i. 134, 137; death on the field of Crecy, 141; iii. 371.
- Johann of Cüstrin, i. 237.
- Johann of Nepomuk, i. 148; iii. 20.
- Johann Sigismund, Ninth Kurfürst, i. 246, 248; interest in the Cleve-Heritage, 248; his claims disputed, 250; slaps young Pfalz-Neuburg's face, 260; gets possession of Prussia, 265.
- Johann the Alchemist, i. 178.
- Johanna Elizabeth, Wife of Duke of Württemberg, ii. 237; steadily refuses an iniquitous divorce, 269.
- Johannes Cicero, Fourth Kurfürst, i. 183.
- Johannes of Valencia, i. 301.
- Johannes Parricida, i. 123.
- John Casimir, King of Poland, gives up the Homage of Preussen, i. 2-4; abdicates, 288; iii. 34; viii. 106; his valedictory speech, 108, 109.
- John, St., Hospitalers of, i. 97; ii. 372.
- John the Steadfast, Kur-Sachsen, i. 198, 199.
- Johnson, cited, ii. 154 n.
- Johnson, Samuel, i. 13, 49, 171, 324, 384; ii. 183.
- Jomini, cited, vii. 352.
- Jordan, Charles Etienne, iii. 122, 124, 219; gossip Letters to Friedrich, iii. 338; iv. 62, 270; vii. 51; mentioned also, iii. 292, 244, 251, 359, 399; iv. 61, 184, 263, 417.
- Jordens, cited, vii. 53.
- Jore, Bookseller, v. 318.
- Joseph I., Kaiser, iii. 372, 385.
- Joseph II., Kaiser; birth, iii. 345; a thriving child, 357; shown to the Hungarian Diet, 209; King of the Romans, v. 416, 403; viii. 94; becomes Kaiser, 94; does honour to Schwerin's memory, vi. 123; pays Friedrich a friendly visit at Neisse, vii. 136, 140; receives return-visit at Neustadt; Prince de Ligne's account, 146, viii. 155; informed that Friedrich is dying, and marches on Brandenburg, 223; visits Paris, and converses with D'Alembert, 245, 246; thinks France a beautifully united country, 246; tries to get Bavaria, 248, 249; bullies Karl Theodor, 253; writes to King Friedrich, 254; at the head of his troops, 268; ingratiates himself with the Czarina, and hopes to have a clear stage for his ambition, 266, 267; a grandly-attempting man, who could succeed in nothing, 243; mentioned also, 185, 227, 233; vii. 334.
- Jülich, i. 243, 248, 253; siege of, 255; a carpenter of, kidnapped, ii. 59. See Cleve.
- Jülich and Berg. See Berg-Jülich.
- Junius, vii. 481 n.
- Justice, love of, i. 330; ii. 76, 304; persistence in, i. 332, 408; ii. 409.
- KARLBUTZ, Colonel, at Tettschen, v. 27.
- Kainardachi, Peace of, viii. 170 n.
- Kaisers, the early, i. 62, 77; three fittle Kaisers, 106; a new Kaiser, 111; a contested Election, 126; seven Non-Hapsburg Kaisers, 160.
- Kaiserwahl, iv. 108.
- Kalkreuth, Adjutant, vii. 147; in battle of Freyberg, vii. 37.
- Kalkstein, Baron von, kidnapped at Warsaw, i. 294, 295, 304.
- Kalkstein, Lieut.-Colonel, i. 351, 355, 376.
- Kalkstein, General, iv. 53, 56, 58, 115.
- Kaltenborn's, Major, account of King Friedrich's Reviews, viii. 229, 230.
- Kamecke, Frau von, i. 318; letter from the King, ii. 313; defends Wilhelmina from her Father's violence, 318, 319.
- Kamens, Abbey of, iv. 35.
- Kamken. See Kamecke.
- Kaunegiesner, ii. 161, 172, 182.

Kaiser von Ludwig, III. 396; Silesian Manifesto, iv. 122.

Kant, viii. 300.

Kapp, cited, i. 215 n.

Kappel saves Friedrich from betrayal to the Austrians, vii. 411-418.

Karl Albert, Kur-Bairern, III. 345; iv. 16, 97; protests against Pragmatic Sanction, 100; treaty with Belleisle for Kaisership, 110; elected, 113, 118, 249; Onert's urgent appeal, 117; public declaration, 176; enters Linz, 205; dreams of sovereignty, 210, 231, 239; accedes to Mannheim, 241; at the topgallant of his hopes, 250; his strangely-chequered career, 250, 253; Kaiser Karl VII., 254; coronation and illness, 255; series of disasters, 268; Terror on Friedrich making peace for himself, 318; D'Harcourt's futile reinforcements, 324; "Kaiser and nothing," 339; returns to München, 344, 361; takes Broglio in hand, and flings down his Patent, 361; hurries back to Frankfurt, 366; Conferences at Hanau, 368; become tragical to think of, 395; "Kaiser as you call him," 396; gets back to München, v. 42, 71; death, 76, 77; mentioned also, viii. 99.

Karl Alexander, Duke of Württemberg, iv. 260.

Karl August Christian of Zweibrück. Heir of Bavaria, viii. 253, 254; glad to resist the Austrian encroachments, 267, 283, 289.

Karl, Duke of Brunswick, II. 407; III. 106, 184.

Karl, Duke of Courland, viii. 99.

Karl Edward, of Ost-Friesland, iv. 448.

Karl Eugen, Prince of Württemberg. See Württemberg.

Karl, Grand-Master of the Knights of St. John, II. 372.

Karl Gustaf of Sweden, I. 154; war with Poland, 284; dream of a new Goth Empire; death, 285.

Karl Gustav III. becomes King of Sweden, viii. 196; tries to muzzle his monster of a Senate; and gets killed, 203.

Karl IV., Kaiser, I. 133, 133, 140, 160, 370; iv. 95; buys Brandenburg, I. 144, 145.

Karl V., Kaiser, I. 193, 197, 209, 212, 216, 234, 243; II. 275; at the siege of Metz, I. 213; iv. 448; his Sister married to Christian II. of Denmark, I. 222; triumph at Mühlberg, 227; II. 241; his haughty ways, 325; reverses and abdication, 327; at the siege of Wittenberg, 334.

Karl VI., Kaiser, I. 29, 303; II. 25, 36; III. 16, 365; his feebly-violent quarrel with the Queen of Spain, I. 406; a fearful affair, though a ludicrous one, 406; II. 28, 35, 49, 141; converts and marries a Protestant Princess, 27, 404; his Pragmatic Sanction in favour of Maria Theresa, 31, 145, 303; his Ostend East-India Company, 34; Congress of Cambray, 39. Treaty of Vienna, 42, 362; sends Seckendorf to Berlin to snare Friedrich Wilhelm, 63, 146; bribes Grumkow, 67; high-smiling contempt for Friedrich Wilhelm, 69; a treacherous bargain, 70-160;

Congress of Soissons, 143; suspends the Duke of Mecklenburg, 162; a visit from Friedrich Wilhelm, III. 11; dreadful doubts about the ceremonial, 12, 15; unceremonial meetings, 21; what Friedrich thought of his Father's visit, 22; attempt to resuscitate the Double-Marriage, 26, 39; interferes in the Polish Election, 49; attacked by the French, 56; applies to the Reich for help, 62; high demands on Friedrich Wilhelm, 102; second Rhine-Campaign, 103; the damages he had to pay, 108; fall-in-out with Friedrich Wilhelm, 111; declares war against the Turks, 171; disastrous results, 187; shameful Peace; a Kaiser much beggaried and disgraced, 219; his orthodoxy, 245; tries to settle the Herstal affair, 323; will not declare for England against France, 330; news of his death reaches Berlin; particulars of his last illness, 340; angry controversy with Karl Albert, iv. 252.

Karl VII., Kaiser, I. 132, 161. See Karl Albert.

Karl, Margraf, at roudade of Hohan, iv. 50; wounded at Mollwitz, 74; v. 23; in Silesia, 90, 117; a brilliant passage of arms, 119; refuses Broglio admission to the Raxen Camp, vi. 38; to guard Silesia, 153; at Grussau, 377, 378; marching towards Daun, 380; meets the King at Gröbenhayn, 381; in battle of Hochkirch, 393, 395.

Karl Peter Ulrich, afterwards Czar Peter III., iv. 439.

Karl Philip, Kur-Pfalz, I. 395; II. 168; viii. 252; runs-off with James Sobieski's Bride, I. 398; becomes Pfalz-Neuburg, 397; tribulations of the Heidelberg Protestants, 398; Friedrich Wilhelm's visit, II. 293, 301; his Mistress, 378.

Karl, Prince, iv. 237; takes command of the Austrian Army, 240, 272, 276; advances towards Chrudim, 284; at Chotusitz, 288, 294; chases Broglio, 327; be-leges Prag, 330, 334; off to meet Maillebois, 341; at Brannau, 355, 362; Deggendorf, 364; visits George II. at Hanau, 393; projected invasion of Alsace, 400; marriage, 401; his Rhine campaign, v. 11; the acme of his life, 15, 17; distracted books about him, 13 n.; hastens to relief of Prag, 50; recrosses the Rhine, 37; follows Friedrich into Bohemia, 43; having pushed his enemy over the Elbe, wishes to close the campaign, 51; his Wife's sad death, 64; marches against Friedrich in Silesia, 99, 117, 121; very capable of certainty, and also of doubt, the wrong way, 121; Hoh-nfriedberg, 131, 134, 136; will have to go, 137; beats retreat, 138; skill in choosing camps and positions, at Königgrätz, 140; urged to try another battle, 154; advances towards Friedrich, 172; battle of Sohr, 163, 165; tumultuous retreat, 166; falls back to Königgrätz, 169; on march to Brandenburg, 173, 174; quite unaware that Friedrich has got ready for him, 177, 180; after Hennerdorf, tumbles home double-quick, 184, 185; hastens to join

- Rutowaki, 184; arrives at Dresden, but does nothing, 194; vanishes into Bohemia, 195; takes command in defence of Prag, vi. 95, 98, 99, 106; attack of spasms, 114; frantic efforts to prevent defeat, 117; will not surrender, 146; not very broad awake, 170, 171; follows the Prince of Prussia, 183; burns Zittau to ashes, 187; sends Nadasti to attack Winterfeld, 199, 200; follows Bevern into Silesia, 275; battle of Breslau, 277; Breslau capitulates, 279; Council of War: will go out to meet Friedrich; and finish him, 286; puffed-up with high thoughts, 287; battle of Leuthen; Prince Karl and Austria fall from their high hopes in one day, 288-301, 307, 308; relieved from his military employments; withdraws to his government of the Netherlands, 308; his death, viii. 318.
- Karl, Theodor, bargains with Austria to give up his succession to Bavaria, viii. 248; a poor, idle, egotistic creature, 251, 252, 253; legally installed; signs the Austrian bargain, 254; and remains dead to the matter, 255, 257, 307, 338.
- Karl XII. of Sweden, vii. 149, 150; how he first took arms, vii. 441. See Charles XII.
- Karl XIII., viii. 303 n.
- Karoly, General, v. 97.
- Karsch, Frau, the Berlin literary prodigy, viii. 283 and n.
- Käsebler, a celebrated Prussian thief, vi. 147.
- Katholische Kirche, v. 343.
- Katsbach, the, iii. 13.
- Katsch, ii. 111.
- Katte, Lieutenant, ii. 121, 187; a dangerous companion for Friedrich, 192, 252, 266; Wilhelm's miniature, 267; Friedrich's projected flight, 268, 290, 295; news of his arrest, 311; sends Writing desk and money to the Queen, 312; arrested, 313; the King's ungovernable rage, 318, 320; Katte and the Crown-Prince to be tried by Court-Martial, 329; Katte's iron doom, 333; piously prepares himself to die, 334; last words with the Prince, and death, 336.
- Katte, Lieutenant-General von, iii. 82, 110, 248, 266; iv. 53.
- Katte, Minister, vii. 55.
- Katte, Rittmeister von, ii. 277, 281, 282.
- Katzenellenbogen, ii. 304.
- Katzler, Colonel, v. 162; at Hennerdorf, 182.
- Kaufbeuern, ii. 440.
- Kaunitz-Rietberg, Count von, v. 244; greatest of Diplomats, 248, 249, 449, 450; arranges Klinggräff's audience with the Empress, vi. 19; despatched to Prince Karl at Zittau, 197; snubs Lord Bute, viii. 20; at the interview of the Kaiser with Friedrich, 144, 155; discusses with Friedrich the Russian-Turk war, 160-162; hard-monthed negotiations on the Polish Question, 169-172; indignant letter from Maria Theresa, 173; intrigues and bargains to get Bavaria, 248, 250, 251, 263; tries to mollify Friedrich, 261, 263; his fine schemes all spoiled, 339; mentioned also, vi. 314; vii. 9, 206; viii. 136, 171, 185, 306.
- Kausler, cited, i. 289 n.; iv. 71 n.; vi. 151 n.; vii. 336 n.
- Kay-erling, Russian Ambassador at Warsaw, viii. 100.
- Kehl, iii. 56.
- Keith, Excellency, entertains Czar Peter, vii. 453; Minister at Dresden, viii. 222; rescues Queen Matilda from a Danish prison, 225; visits Lord Marischal, 225, 226, 227.
- Keith, General, in the Russian Service, at the siege of Oczakow, iii. 170; at Stockholm, iv. 30; takes service with Friedrich, v. 240; much esteemed by him, 343; on march into Saxony, vi. 26; interviews with her Polish Majesty, 28, 29; marches to Aussig, to meet the Austrians, 38, 42; joined by Friedrich, 43; before Prag, vi. 101, 117, 127, 144, 145; skilful retreat, 169; with the King at Bernstadt, 195; march to Erfurt, 205; Rosbach, 244, 245, 247, 248; to march into Bohemia, 276; with Friedrich at siege of Olmütz, 334, 337, 346; retreat to Königgrätz, 346, 347; prompt enough with his stroke, when wanted, 347; Bre-lau, 353; experience of Russian soldiering, 358; joins Ziethen in Saxony, 378; expostulates with Friedrich at Hochkirch, 385; has command of right wing, 386; death, 395; honourable soldier's burial; "a noble legacy;" monuments to his memory, 401, 402; his ancestry, vi. 215.
- Keith, Lieutenant, ii. 121, 252; stationed at Wesel, 192, 252; a party to Friedrich's projected flight, 282; news of its discovery by the King, 307; escapes, 310, 314; safe in England, 316; sentence, 330; returns to Prussia, iii. 249; receives a present from the King, v. 277; in the König-Maupertuis controversy, 376, 377.
- Keith, Page, ii. 283, 285; will get horses for Friedrich, 297; attempted flight at Steinfurth, 300; confesses all to the King, 303; packed into the Fusilier Regiment, 316; mentioned also, iii. 250.
- Keith, Sir Robert Murray, v. 406, 453; vii. 394 n.; cited, vi. 403 n.
- Kelly, O', with Daun at Burkersdorf, viii. 15, 19.
- Kemeter, iii. 114.
- Kendal, Duchesse of, i. 139; ii. 14, 108, 228; 332.
- Kepler, i. 268; iv. 205.
- Keppel, in the attack on Confians's fleet, vii. 186.
- Ker of Kerland, ii. 14 n.
- Kestlitz, Baron von, deputation from Grünberg, iii. 375.
- Kettenbell, Herr, v. 266.
- Kettlers, the, ii. 393.
- Keyserling, iii. 41, 123, 155, 211, 251, 305; iv. 62; v. 206.
- Khan, Thomas Kouli, v. 276.
- Khevenhüller, General, fortifies Vienna, iv. 206, 211; collects an Army, 234; sweeps

- Ségur back, 241; takes Linz, 248; master of nearly all Bavaria, 324; visits King George at Hanau, 303; mentioned also, vi. 43.
- Kielmannsegg, Graf von, iii. 182.
- King, a, without the trappings, i. 9; Sham Kingship, 13; the True King, 329, 333; worth of, 337; an Economist King, 338; a Constitutional King, ii. 15, 107; a Working King, 56; iii. 193; an Absolute King, ii. 76; a Kingly Fight lost to the world, 171; Modern Kings, iii. 227; Kings cannot steer by count of votes, 233; cannot be amiable all round, 306; a George II. for King, iv. 174; unfortunate and guilty Kings, v. 42; a born King, with his kingdom to seek, vi. 139; Kings true and false, viii. 59, 60. See Sovereignities.
- Kingston, Duchess of, viii. 144, 237.
- Kintore, Earldom of, vii. 214.
- Kirkman, James, the Irish Giant, ii. 54, 55; iii. 229.
- Kladrup, iii. 16; v. 52.
- Klaproth, Medicinal-Assessor, v. 275.
- Kleefeld, General, attacks Torgau, vii. 108, 124.
- Klein, cited, v. 298 n.
- Klein-Schnellendorf, secret treaty at, iv. 213.
- Kleist, Colonel, of the Green Hussars, vii. 224, 93; at Aussig, 165; with Hülßen on the Dürrenberg, 291; pounces upon the Duke of Würtemberg, 312; with Friedrich at Torgau, 321, 322, 324; with Prince Henri, 390, 427; tries to relieve Colberg, 419; at Freyberg, viii. 37; attacks the Bohemian magazines, 38, 39; seizes Nürnberg, 50; paid off at close of the war, 45.
- Kleist, General, at Brieg, iii. 410, 412; summoned from Pommern, vii. 95.
- Kleist's, Major, tragic fate at Kunersdorf, vii. 93; death and soldier's funeral at Frankfurt, 93.
- Kleist, von, Engineer-Lieutenant, viii. 29.
- Klinggräf, ii. 391; at Conference of Hanau, iv. 390; vi. 17; audience with the Empress of Austria, 19, 20; farther question from Friedrich, 20, 21.
- Kloots, Anacharsis, viii. 309.
- Klows, cited, i. 74 n.
- Kloster Kampen, Fight of, vii. 379-383.
- Kloster-Zeven, Convention of, vi. 207-209; renounced by England and Hanover, 242.
- Knesbeck, cited, vi. 228 n.; vii. 264 n.
- Knight, Charles, viii. 222 n.
- Knobelsdorf, iii. 75, 122, 209; iii. 338; v. 216.
- Knobloch, General, at Erfurt, vii. 21; attacking the Austrian magazines, 27; drives the Croats out of Bamberg, 28; tries to relieve Colberg, 419.
- Knock, Fort of, v. 11.
- Knut, i. 67.
- Knyphausen, Baron von, ii. 138, 180, 207, 224, 255, 324; v. 449, 460; vi. 321.
- Knyphausen, Madame, v. 277.
- Koch, ii. 391; vi. 87.
- Kühler, cited, i. 62 n., 63 n., 77 n., 106 n., 125, 175 n.; iv. 39 n.; vii. 277 n.
- Köln, Battle of, iii. 18; vi. 148, 164.
- Kolitz, iii. 172.
- Kollas, Captain, at siege of Dresden, vii. 117, 118, 120, 130.
- Köln, Clement August, Kurfürst of, ii. 306, 366; famed old City of, 309.
- Köln, Elector of, and his troops, v. 49.
- König, dispute between Madame du Châtelet and, iii. 295.
- König visits Manpertuis about his "Law of Thrift," and is not handsomely received, v. 291-295; publishes his strictures, 371, 372; correspondence with Manpertuis, 372, 373; summoned by the Berlin Academy, 374, 375; resigns his Membership, appeals to the public, 378; cited, 371 n.
- Königsberg, i. 57, 100, 203, 290; University of, 210; Bürgermeister of, seized in open Hall, 294; Stanislaus at, iii. 162; homage-ing at, iii. 265.
- Königsack, Graf von, iii. 60; with Prince Karl, iv. 272; at Chotusitz, 333; at Dresden, v. 88; in the Netherlands, 104; at Fontenoy, 105; ordered to Prag, vi. 93, 94; defeated at Reichenburg, 96, 97.
- Königsmark, Aurora von, iv. 232.
- Königsmark, tragedy, the, i. 84.
- Konoplich, Camp of, v. 46.
- Köppen, Lieutenant, i. 354.
- Korbach, Fight of, vii. 261.
- Korbitz, Action of, vi. 130.
- Korf, General, introduces Hordt to the Russian Court, vii. 452, 455; great expectations of the new reign, 454.
- Koel, v. 93; cited, 144 n.
- Köslin, Town in Pommern, iii. 265.
- Kreutzer, Colonel, at Liege, iii. 315.
- Kriele, Johann Ludwig, on Kunersdorf, vii. 69, 76, 83, 93; cited, 67 n.
- Kröcher, Colonel, ii. 271.
- Krockow, commander of Prussian vanguard at Domstädtl, vi. 343; recommends the French Excise-System to Friedrich, viii. 77.
- Krusemark, Colonel, vii. 413, 417.
- Kunersdorf, ii. 382; battle of, vii. 72-95; description of the country, 74-76.
- Kunz von Kaufungen, i. 180; ii. 272.
- Kupplisch, Cess-Collector, viii. 255.
- Kurfürst, the young, v. 78, 92, 94.
- Kurfürsts and their function, i. 81; the Twelve Hohenzollern, 307.
- Kur Köln, dances with Wilhelmina at Frankfurt, iv. 257.
- Kur-Mainz, iv. 370, 397.
- Kur-Pfalz, iv. 108. See Philip.
- Kur-Sachsen, protests against Pragmatic Sanction, iv. 104; helps Belleisle, 109; King of Moravia, 117; Copartnership with France and Bavaria, 206, 250, 233, 242; green diamond, 272; resentment against Friedrich, 273; mentioned also, 33, 39, 44, 97. See August III. of Poland.
- Kurt, ii. 324.
- Küster, Army-Chaplain, vii. 359, 360, 413; cited, iii. 250 n.; vii. 360 n.
- Kutzen, cited, vi. 151 n.
- Kyau, General, takes Bevern's command and retires towards Glogau, vi. 279; superseded by Ziethen, 281.

LACRETELLE, cited, ii. 20 n.
 Lacy, Fieldmarshal, iii. 52, 103, 382; commands the Russian Army, iv. 30; at Riga, 45; mentioned also, v. 240.
 Lacy, Junior, iii. 382; at Hochkirch, vi. 389; K-th's chief mourner, 401; message to Soltkof, vii. 104; urges Daun, 166; with Daun in Saxony, vii. 280, 283, 296; follows Friedrich's march for Silesia, 241; vanishes from Lichtenberg at Friedrich's approach, 243; skirmish of horse at Godau, 244, 245; hastily quits Godau, 245; arrives in Dresden, 246; leaves Dresden to its fate, 248; with Daun attends Friedrich's march into Silesia, 271-275; at Battle of Leignitz, 277, 280, 284; joins with the Russians to seize Berlin, 299; flies into open rage at Tottleben's terms of capitulation; for three days the evil genius of Berlin, 304; off, quicker than he came, at Friedrich's approach, 307; with Daun in battle of Torgau, 322, 323, 330, 334; in retreat, 334; defeated at Reichenbach, 363, 370; in the Bavarian War, vi. 1. 23, 24, 147, 151; mentioned also, 136, 138, 318.
 Lafayette, prisoner at Olmütz, vi. 333; mentioned also, viii. 381.
 Lally, Count, at Fontenoy, v. 114; at Madras, vi. 413; nearly the most unfortunate and worst-used "man of genius," vii. 160.
 Lambert, M. de St., v. 235, 253.
 Landshut, iv. 223; Protestants of, v. 139.
 Lange, ii. 90; iii. 396.
 Lange, Major, killed at Hochkirch, vi. 304.
 Langensalza, Fight of, vii. 125, 361.
 Latin, learning, i. 378. See Education.
 Latour, De, v. 128, 130.
 Latour, Father, chief Jesuit, v. 294.
 Lattorf defends Kosel, vi. 405.
 Lauffeld, Battle of, v. 230 n., 236.
 Lannay, De, head of the Excise department, viii. 79, 82, 83, 356.
 Lamsitz, i. 64, 66.
 Lautensack, Prussian Secretary, iii. 356.
 Lauterburg, Lines of, v. 14.
 Laveaux, Editor, v. 433; cited, iii. 244 n.; v. 435 n.; viii. 83 n.
 Law, the Finance Wizard, i. 366; ii. 30.
 Law Reform, iii. 219; v. 213, 214, 254-256; omnipresence of Law, 153.
 Lecouvreur, Adrienne, ii. 127; iii. 142.
 Ledlard, cited, ii. 164 n.
 Lee, from America, at Berlin, viii. 241, 243.
 Lefebvre, M., Mining Engineer at siege of Schweidnitz, viii. 22, 25-29; writes to Furmey of the meeting of Friedrich and Kaiser Joseph, 137; in a fit of excitement destroys himself, 139.
 Jögge, Ex-Exchequer, v. 259; vi. 174.
 Lehmann, Dr., vii. 442 n.
 Lehwald, iv. 291; at Habelschwert, v. 66, 67; at Sohr, 167; joins the Old Dessauer at Meissen, 183; to defend the Baltic parts, vi. 92, 175, 180, 218, 317; resignation, 320; assists in defending Berlin, vi. 67.
 Leibnitz, cited, i. 65 n.
 Leibnitz, i. 35; Leibnitzian "justification of the ways of God," 37; sage Leibnitz, a rather weak but hugely ingenious old gentleman, 44, 45, 48; ii. 13; Letter, quoted by König, v. 372.

 Leipe, hamlet near Grotkau, iv. 61.
 Leipzig, ii. 271; Treaty of, v. 443; under Prussian military contribution, vii. 306.
 Lentulus, General, iv. 34, 55, 58, 59, 214; vii. 405, 422; viii. 144, 173, 227.
 Lentulus, Lieut.-Colonel, vi. 193; vii. 146.
 Lenz, President, of East Friesland, vi. 338.
 Leo X., Pope, i. 185.
 Leon, Herr von, i. 403.
 Leopold, Archduke, at the siege of Jülich, i. 257.
 Leopold, Kaiser, i. 55, 281, 292, 296; ii. 26.
 Leopold, King Richard's, Duke of Austria, a man with some stuff in him, i. 94.
 Leopold of Anhalt-Dessau, i. 31, 79, 120, 300, 319, 354, 392; ii. 82; a rugged practical man of dreadful impetuosity, 320, 325; Fox's Daughter; kills a Cousin of hers, and marries her, 331; inventor of modern military tactics, 322; ii. 352; General Fieldmarshal of the Prussian Armies, i. 223; at Bleinheim; Bridge of Cassano; Lines of Turin, 223; ii. 284; at the Siege of Stralsund, i. 354; challenges Grumkow, ii. 63; leaves him and the Count in disgust, 64; at King August's Camp of Badewitz, ii. 248; takes Müra Castle, 310; favours Friedrich at Custrin, 331, 341, 399; assists in his military studies, 437; sends King Friedrich Wilhelm tall recruits, iii. 9; the Rhine Campaign, 64, 84, 103; visits the French Camp, 89; with the King at Belgard, 103; at his death, 226; first interview with King Friedrich, 230; courtly reproved by him, iii. 353; private consultations, iv. 31; congratulated on his Son's success, 53; takes Camp at Götting, 53; at Brandenburg, 272; meets Friedrich at Chrudim, 273; preferred before Schwerin, 277; neglect of orders, 279; sharp bantering of Walrave, 282; takes charge of the Silesian Army, v. 63; Friedrich's impatience, 63; repels Silesian invasion, 64-67; home with thanks; just lost his Wife, 94; his sick Daughter, 95; takes charge of a Camp of Observation against Saxony, 100, 143, 149; his few days for the Victory of Sohr, 171, 172; home for the Winter, 174; new preparations for Saxony, 176, 177; hard words from the King, 178; enters Saxony, 185; marches against Rutowski, 183-183; Victory at Koeseladorf, 183-194; his battle-prayer, 192; glorious in the last of his fields; conducts the King over the battlefield, 196; death, 195.
 Leopold, the Young Dessauer, iii. 278; with Friedrich at Strasburg, 381; on the road to Silesia, 374; before Glogau, 401; skillful capture, iv. 47; joins the King at Schweidnitz, 52; crosses Sargau Bridge, 60; at Mollwitz, 74, 78, 82; at Breslau, 188; in the Glatz country, 218, 245, 246; at Chrudim, 275, 285; on march, 287; at Chotusitz, 289; on march to Prag, v. 21; towards Austria, 84; quarrels with Schwerin,

- 37; is for keeping hold of Prag, 51; near Kolin, 51; on retreat towards Silesia, 54; in Silesia, worn down with gout, 67; left to command in Silesia, 160; watching Prince Karl, 173; draws out his forces, 177.
- Leopold, Duke of Florence, afterwards Kaiser, viii. 94.
- Leopold, Prince of Brunswick, helps Miller Arnold to justice, viii. 280, 287; gets drowned in struggling to save others, 287, 288.
- Lepel, Major-General, ii. 369.
- Lessing, v. 156; Taubentzien's chief clerk, vii. 17; cited, vii. 269 n.; mentioned also, viii. 45.
- L'Estoc, Surgeon to Elizabeth of Russia, iv. 25.
- Leutwitz, General, surrenders Breslau to the Austrians, vi. 279; with Friedrich at Torgau, vii. 331, 332.
- Leuthen, Battle of, i. 15; vi. 288-305.
- Lewin, iii. 14.
- Lexden Heath, Camp on, iv. 148, 320.
- Liberty, Cause of, iv. 152.
- Ichnowski, Colonel, at Landsbut, vii. 237.
- Lichtenan, Graf von, viii. 85.
- Lichtenberg, i. 225.
- Lichtenstein, Graf von, lodges King Friedrich, iv. 248.
- Lichtenstein, Prince von, iii. 79, 101; iv. 202; v. 106; cited, 106 n.
- Lie, a. i. 17, 22; galvanised, 209; iv. 262. See Fiction, Mendacity.
- Liebstadt, review at, iv. 250.
- Lieberkühn, Dr., v. 278, 346, 353.
- Liedt, Bishop of, iii. 174.
- Liege, iii. 312. See Affair of Herstal.
- Liegnitz, Duke of, i. 191, 200, 205; Heritage-Brotherhood with Joachim, 232; what comes of it, 292; the town of, iii. 13.
- Liegnitz entered by Schwerin, iv. 309; Liegnitz, vii. 277; battle of, 277, 285.
- Ligne, Prince de, i. 169; iv. 368; his account of the Battle of Leuthen, vi. 298, 307; in Berlin, vii. 304; at Burkersdorf, viii. 15, 17; his account of Friedrich's visit to Kaiser Joseph, 144-155; visits Friedrich at Potsdam, 314; hurries off to Petersburg, 324; cited, viii. 145 n.
- Ligonier, iv. 168; v. 220 n., 243.
- Ligonier's Dragoons, iv. 321, 363.
- Lille, Abbé de, viii. 315, 316.
- Lindauer of Sangerhausen, vi. 271.
- Linden, Major, at Kunersdorf, vii. 77, 83.
- Lindsey's, Reverend Mr., Works on Poland, viii. 98 n., 184.
- Linger, ii. 341.
- Linsenbarth's, Candidatus, interview with Friedrich, v. 265, 274, 364.
- Lintz, i. 203.
- Linx, Karl Albert at, iv. 205.
- Lippe-Bückeburg, Freemason, iii. 181, 186.
- Lippe-Bückeburg, Ordinance Master, entertains a select dinner-party in his tent, vii. 364; takes command of the English forces in Portugal, 426, 429.
- Lisbon, Earthquake of, v. 492.
- Literature, romantic appetite for, i. 419; literary fame, ii. 80; iii. 125; Book-writing, of two kinds, ii. 91; iii. 166; something grander than all literatures, 154; Friedrich's literary attainments, 192. See Newspaper, Review-articles.
- Lithuania, ii. 190.
- Lloyd, Major-General, iv. 46, 52 n., 53; cited, iii. 240 n.; vi. 46 n., 253, 107 n.
- Lobkowitz, Prince, joins with Grand-Duke Franz in Bohemia, iv. 237; at Iglaue, 266, 267; at Waidhofen, 270; near Frauenberg, 284, 299; takes Leitmeritz from the French, 352; to watch Belleisle at Prag, 352, 355; with Prince Karl at Königsgrätz, v. 154, 155; Hennerdorf, 150; mentioned also, v. 174; iv. 366.
- Lobositz, Battle of, vi. 46-56.
- Locke, iii. 138.
- Logau, Silesian poet, iii. 372.
- Loigle, Marquis de, at Strassburg, iii. 288.
- Longchamp, Intendant, v. 2-9; cited, 253 n.
- Longchamp et Wagnière, cited, vii. 204 n.; viii. 262 n.
- Loo, Palace of, iii. 177.
- Loper, M., v. 310.
- Lorraine, Leopold Joseph, Duke of, ii. 150; Charles, 151; Franz Stephen, 151, 345, 415; iii. 55, 108; visits Potsdam, ii. 430, 425; at Kollitz, iii. 172; end of Turk War, 212; Karl of, 151; Lorraine taken by the French, 56, 108.
- Losow, General von, viii. 220, 271.
- Lothar, Kaiser, i. 78, 80.
- Lottum, Colonel, viii. 17.
- Lottum, Count, i. 366.
- London, with Fieldmarshal Browne, vi. 76; near Leitmeritz, annoys the Prussian retreat, vi. 170, 171; attacked by Seidlitz in Saxony, 207; "Commission of Major-General" taken by Seidlitz in Gotha, 215, 216; with Daun near Olmütz, 336, 338-340; attacks and ruins Mosel's convoy, 340-344; at Holitz, 347; captures Peltz, 378, 379; with Daun in Saxony, 383; Hochkirch, 386, 389, 404; in the Lausitz, vii. 39; to join with Soltikof, 41-54; arrives at Frankfurt, but without provisions, 69, 70; battle of Kunersdorf, 72, 77, 80, 85; ends the battle, 88, 95; continues with Soltikof, 104, 138, 150; may go where he pleases; dismal march into Moravia, 151; to have a separate command, and army of his own, 219; in Silesia, 219, 222; prepares to attack Goltz, 223; beaten off in every attempt, 225; threatens Silesia, vii. 230, 257; blockades Glatz, 232; ruins Fouquet at Landsbut, 237, 238; captures Glatz, 254, 255; on march for Breslau, 260; difficulties with Soltikof, 267; besieges Breslau, and threatens furiously, 267, 268; moves off at approach of Prince Henri, 268, 269; joins with Daun and Lacy to intercept Friedrich, 273; at battle of Liegnitz, 277; tries to surprise Friedrich, and is himself surprised at the reception he gets; behaves magnificently in his sudden peril, 282; sorely, but not dishonorably beaten, 283; to try for a stroke on Kowel, 311; but without success, 336;

- retires to Bohemia, to prepare for a new campaign, 377; to be joined by the Russians, and reconquer Silesia, 377; skillfully effects junction, 380; gets beforehand with Friedrich at Kunzendorf, 382; astonished at his Camp of Bunzelwitz, 384, 385; earnestly urges Butturlin to join him in attacking, 385; Butturlin positively refuses, and returns homewards, 387; he suddenly pounces upon Schweidnitz, and captures it in one night, 404-408; gets small thanks from Vienna, 409; no longer to command in chief, viii. 7; visits Friedrich with the Kaiser, 136, 137; complimented by Friedrich, 151; in the Bavarian War, 269.
- Loudon, Lord, commander of the forces in America, vi. 142, 143; recalled, 328; Cousin to the Austrian Loudon, 328 n.
- Louisa Amelia of Brunswick, betrothed, iii. 333.
- Louisa, Old Dessauer's eldest daughter, v. 95.
- Louisa of Nassau-Orange, Wife of the Great Kurfürst, i. 290, 293.
- Louisa of Prussia, iii. 164.
- Louisa Ulrique, i. 364; ii. 23. See Ulrique.
- Louisburg, in Cape Breton, captured by Amherst, vi. 349.
- Louis Ferdinand, ii. 24; iii. 225.
- Louis Fort, iii. 68.
- Louis XIV., i. 281, 288, 289, 292, 299, 349, 399; ii. 26; death of, 303; bankrupt condition of, 350; mentioned also, iv. 18, 16; v. 228.
- Louis XV., i. 132; ii. 41, 43; iii. 48; changes his shirt, iv. 9, 18; a poor dandied, 24; lame story for himself to the German Diet, 387; declares War against England and Austria, 436; in the Netherlands, v. 11; falls ill at Metz, 16; dismisses Châteauneux, 16; recovers, 10; besieges Freyburg, 38; not much taken with Voltaire, 38, 223, 226; hastens to Tournay, 104; at Fontenoy, 113, 115; help to Friedrich impossible, 147; evident pique, 147, 187; vi. 85; vii. 181; tired of War, v. 243; determines to aid Austria, vi. 40, 74.
- Louis XVI., viii. 97.
- Löwen, King Friedrich at, iv. 82.
- Löwendahl, Lieutenant, v. 239.
- Lubomirski, Princess, v. 197, 198.
- Luccchesi at Breslau, vii. 280; Lenthen, vi. 294, 298; death, 300.
- Lucchesini, Marchese, viii. 309, 321, 351.
- Lüderitz, General, vi. 55.
- Ludwig Eugen, Prince, of Württemberg, iv. 260, 263.
- Ludwig IV., Bavarian Kaiser, i. 136, 160.
- Ludwig, Bavarian Kurfürst of Brandenburg, i. 132; marries Margaret Mautausche, 136; will not be turned out, 142; retires to Bavaria and the Tyrol, 143.
- Ludwig, Kanzler von, ii. 390.
- Ludwig, King of Bavaria, viii. 258.
- Ludwig, Kurfürst, the Roman, i. 143.
- Ludwig Ohne Haart, the last King of Hungary, i. 194, 231.
- Ludwig Rudolf, Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel, ii. 404.
- Ludwig, Prince, of Brunswick, v. 143; wounded at Sohr, 166; mentioned also, vii. 196.
- Ludwigsburg, ii. 287.
- Luiscius of the One Razor, iii. 175.
- Luise, Princess of Orange, i. 50.
- Lusinsky, General, with Stolberg, at Torgau, vii. 110.
- Luther, i. 105, 182, 192, 224 n.; ii. 271; visited by Markgraf George, i. 197; by Hochmeister Albert, 206; opinion of the Teutach Ritters, 207; visited by Elizabeth of Brandenburg, 225; his Bible, 318; Hymn, 324; at Coburg during the Diet of Augsburg, ii. 275; Luther and Friedrich the Great, in essential agreement, vii. 181; mentioned also, vii. 351.
- Lutternberg, Fight of, vi. 412 n.
- Lützen, ii. 272.
- Lützow, cited, v. 122 n.
- Luxemburg Kaiser, i. 123, 125.
- Lynar, Count, iv. 45; Convention of Kloster-Zeven, vi. 207, 209; mentioned also, viii. 141.
- Lynch Law, viii. 177.
- Lyttelton, George (first Lord), in Lorraine, ii. 148; at Solissons during the Congress, 150; in the Ministry, 153; in Opposition, iii. 81; iv. 452.
- MAASEYK, General Borek occupies, iii. 330.
- Macchiavel, iii. 195.
- Mackenzie, James, iv. 446.
- Mackenzie, Sir George, iv. 446.
- Macmahon, Father, v. 363.
- Macnamara, Mr., viii. 238.
- Madras, Lally's siege of, vii. 160.
- Magdeburg, i. 117, 201, 242, 278, 288, 331, 401. See Christian Wilhelm of.
- Magdeburg, Camp of, v. 100.
- Magnetic Mountains, ii. 15.
- Maguire, at Reichenberg, vi. 95, 96, 185; vii. 176; besieges Pirna, vi. 379; chased by Prince Henri, vii. 27, 28; reenters Saxony, 111; Siege of Dresden, 113; successful negotiations, 118-120; broken pledges, 125; besieged in Dresden by Friedrich, vii. 248-253; at Freyberg, viii. 85.
- Mahomet's Koran, vi. 220.
- Mahlzahn, Prussian Minister, v. 428, 439, 440; vi. 80.
- Mailäth, cited, iii. 346 n.; iv. 209 n.
- Maillebois, Marshal, iii. 58; marches to relief of Prag, iv. 337; small reverence for the Kaiser, 338; in the Middle-Rhine countries, v. 69, 72, 89; sent to Italy, 89, 221; at Secaux, 250, 231; mentioned also, iv. 195, 198, 300, 229, 322, 324, 342; v. 170.
- Mally, Madame de, and her sisters, iv. 19.
- Malin, Duc du, v. 228.
- Maine, Duchesse du, v. 205, 228, 229.
- Maintz, Archbishops of, i. 103, 112, 125. See Albert, Archbishop of.
- Malnz, Kur-, Chairman of the Reichs Diet, vi. 87; admonished by General Oldenburg, 131, 132.
- Malmesbury, Earl of, vi. 336.
- Malosa, M., at Strasburg, iii. 391.

- Melplaquet, Battle of, i. 32; bloodiest of obstinate fights, 300.
- Malton, Lord, v. 276, 277.
- Malzahn, Fräulein von, afterwards Madame Münnich, iv. 23.
- Mann, Sir Horace, vii. 345.
- Maunheim, Karl Philip, removes his Court to, i. 403.
- Mannstein, General, arrests Bieren, iv. 53; in Prussian Service, v. 253; at Potsdam, 250; at battle of Prag, vi. 115, 122; rash mistake at Kolin, 156, 157; death, 170; cited, i. 370 n.; iv. 28 n.
- Mansion-House, the, iv. 213.
- Mantufel and his somewhat impertinent letter to Friedrich, iii. 158.
- Mantenffel, General, in Pommern, vi. 319; battle of Zorndorf, 367; Züllichau, vii. 46.
- Marburg and its Teutsch Ritters, i. 104; Wolf finds shelter at, ii. 90.
- Margaret Mautilke, i. 135.
- Märheineke, cited, i. 198 n.
- Maria Anna, Archduchess, Prince Karl's Wife, v. 15, 19; her death, 61.
- Maria Eleonora, Wife of Albert Friedrich of Prussen, i. 242, 245, 247.
- Maria Theresa, i. 19; ii. 29, 44, 151, 345; rumour of Marriage with Friedrich, 253, 492; to marry the Duke of Lorraine, 416; at her father's death, iii. 340; proclaimed Empress, 315; refuses Friedrich's proposals, 394; gets money from England, iv. 42, 147; indignant protest against Friedrich's seizure of Silesia, 99; against Kur-Sachsen, iv. 109; Coronation, 169; a brave young Queen, 175; driven to despair, 199; at Presburg, 173; "Moriamur," mythical and actual, 206; one stroke more for Silesia, 278; sorrowful surrender, 302; a true Sovereign Ruler, 357; Queen of Bohemia, 367; triumphant demands, 388, 393, 395; clutches Bavaria with uncommon tightness, 394; extraordinary Response to King Louis's Declaration, 395; high conduct towards the Reich, 397; Treaty of Worms, 420; her indignation against Friedrich, and undaunted resolution; again appeals to Hungary, v. 24; will have the Bohemian campaign finished, 51; very high exultation and hope, 61; Silesian Manifesto, 61; a face-to-face glimpse; interview with Robinson, 150, 151; at her Husband's Coronation, 153, 154; will as soon part with her petticoat as Silesia; her opinion of Friedrich; urges Prince Karl to fight Friedrich, 154; a third and fiercer trial this Winter, 173; consents to peace, 202; goes into the Italian war, 221; protests against the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, 245; high opinion of Kaunitz, 409, 449; flattering little Notes to the Pompadour, 410, 449; still hopes to reconquer Silesia, 437; secret Treaty with Russia and Saxony, 441, 443; tries to deny it, 448; refuses to aid in defence of Hannover, 451; joins with France, 458, 459; gives audience to Klinggraf, vi. 19; bent on relieving Saxony, 40, 56; flings open her Imperial Studs, 41; courage in misfortune, vi. 137; new order of Knighthood in honour of Kolin, 164, 165; despatches Kaunitz to urge on Prince Karl, 197; hears of Leuthen, 308; thought to be disposed for peace, 314; substantial reasons for war, vii. 9; anti-Protestantism, 181; urges Russia to attack Silesia, 220; welcomes Daun back to Vienna, vii. 336; signs peace-proposals, 368; piqued at London's secrecy about Schweidnitz, 409; consents to a separate peace between France and England, 424; horror at Czar Peter's peace with Friedrich, 444; prayers and tears, 448; grief at her husband's death; takes her Son Joseph as Coadjutor, viii. 94; enmity to the Czarina, 162, 169; indignant letter to Kaunitz on the Partition of Poland, 173; writes to Friedrich, 272; her beautiful death, 306; mentioned also, v. 18; viii. 151, 160, 246, 278.
- Marie-Antoine, Electress of Saxony, a bright lady, among the busiest in the world, viii. 101; left with the guardianship of her son, 101; correspondence with King Friedrich about the crown of Poland, 102-107; visits him at Berlin, 142; their pleasant correspondence, 142, 143; interest in the Bavarian-Succession question, 259; mentioned also, 225, 246, 248.
- Marie-Antoinetta, writes to her sister, viii. 349.
- Marenburg, i. 99, 133.
- Marischal College, Aberdeen, vii. 215.
- Marischal, Lord, v. 241, 344; sorrow for his brother's death, vi. 401; an excellent cheery old soul; honest as the sunlight, 402; sympathetic letter from Friedrich, 413, 414; visited by Maupertuis, vii. 182; goes to Spain on diplomatic mission, 213-215; calls at London on his way to look after the Earldom of Kintore, 215; important Spanish notices to Pitt, 215; a good deal in England, vii. 399; Cottage-villa near Sans-Souci, viii. 89; later epochs of his life, 89-92; entertains Conway and Keith, 223-229; letter to Keith, 227; mentioned also, 238, 263 n.
- Markgrafs, origin of, i. 65.
- Marlborough, i. 31, 55, 254, 300, 323; his dextrous management, 302; how the English treated him, 303; ii. 26; his last days, 284; mentioned also, iv. 323, 338; v. 188.
- Marlborough, Duchess of, iv. 42, 523; vi. 140.
- Marlborough, Duke of, at Koesfeld, vi. 411 n.
- Marquart, Captain, noticed by Friedrich, viii. 146.
- Marschowitz, Prince Karl's Camp at, v. 43.
- Martin, Commodore, iii. 333; vii. 215.
- Marwitz, Adjutant, at Hochkirch, vi. 334.
- Marwitz's, General, recollections of King Friedrich, viii. 325-331.
- Marwitz, Senior, wounded at Mo'lwitz, iv. 255; at Neisse, 281; his death, v. 65.
- Marwitz, The Demoiselle, iii. 95, 280, 285; v. 65.
- Mary, Princess, iv. 369.
- Massow, Minister von, viii. 74.

- Matilda, Queen of Denmark, rescued by Keith, viii. 225.
- Matinees du Roi de Prusse*, an impudent pamphlet of forgery, i. 168; the author identified, vii. 191-194.
- Matthews, Admiral, iv. 333.
- Mand, Empress, i. 78.
- Mauduit, Discenter, and his pamphlet on the German War, vii. 345-346.
- Maupertuis, M. de, iii. 115, 305, 309; his Portrait, 341; invitation from Friedrich, 241; arrives at Weesl, 294; quarrel with Midame du Châtelet, 295; taken prisoner at Mollwitz, iv. 85; letter from Voltaire, 417; Perpetual President of the Berlin Academy, 428; quarrel with König for questioning his metaphysics, v. 291-295; cannot help Voltaire "in a bad business," 298, 310; jealous of his favour with the King, 338; Voltaire's opinion of him, 356; flattered by La Beaumelle, 355; indignant correspondence with König, 372, 373; appends to the Berlin Academy, 374-378; mercilessly quizzed by Voltaire; Dr. Akakin, 379-383; threatens him, and gets his reply, 380, 391; his final pilgrimages, sicknesses and death, vii. 181-183; his character defended by Friedrich, 210, 212.
- Maunice, Count, ii. 127.
- Maurepas, iv. 403.
- Mauvillon, Major, on the character of English soldiers, vii. 396, 397; his Prussian statistics, viii. 62; cited, i. 340 n.; iii. 184 n.; v. 143 n.; vi. 191 n., 209; vii. 261 n. M. ximilian I., iv. 251, 252.
- Maximilian, Kurfürst of Baiern, iv. 251, 252.
- Max Joseph, Kurfürst of Baiern, death of, viii. 248.
- Max Joseph, first King of Bavaria, viii. 258.
- Maxwell's Brigade, at Warburg, vii. 264.
- Mayer, Colonel, vi. 77; in Bohemia, vi. 94; his exploits on the Reich, 128-131; death; knighthood from Wilhelmina, 131; with Friedrich in Saxony, 205, 243; Rossbach, 252, 254, 259; with Prince Henri guarding Saxony, 333, 379; Dresden, 407; dies of fever, a man of considerable genius in the sleepless kind, vii. 29.
- Mayer, cited, viii. 245 n.
- Mazia, Du, Engineer, v. 105.
- Meagher, Chevalier, vi. 27, 28.
- Meckel's, Dr., great skill and kindness to Zimmermann, viii. 169, 191.
- Mecklenburg, i. 83, 272, 337; compelled to contribute to Friedrich's war-expenses, vii. 15; unparalleled Duke and Duchess of, i. 370; ii. 249, 380; v. 263; the Duke's misgovernment and suspension, ii. 162, 181; their daughter, iii. 184, 215.
- Mecklenburg-Schwerin, vii. 373 n.
- Mecklenburg-Strelitz, vii. 374 n.
- Meer, Fight of, vi. 411 n.
- Meinecke, General, vi. 263.
- Münzingen, Dowager Duchess of, ii. 392.
- Meissen, Friedrich and Duke of Weissenfels at, v. 26.
- Melanchthon, vii. 351.
- Menckenius, cited, i. 103 n.
- Mendacity, i. 323, 377; iii. 308; iv. 162, 213. See Lie.
- Menin, v. 11.
- Menou, Father, v. 235.
- Mentzel, cited, i. 94 n.
- Mentzel, Colonel, iv. 211, 241, 258, 263, 302, 400; death of, v. 13.
- Menzel and the Saxon state-papers, v. 428-431, 438-441; vi. 20, 30.
- Mephistopheles, ii. 26.
- Meran, i. 106.
- Mercy, Graf von, iii. 59.
- Merit, men of, iii. 353.
- Méropé*, triumphant success of the Play, iv. 359.
- Mosmes, President de, v. 229.
- Mettrie, La, Army Surgeon, v. 115; finds refuge with Friedrich, 340, 341; quizzes Voltaire, 349; his death, 353, 354.
- Metz, Siege of, i. 214; iv. 376; Louis XV. falls ill at, v. 16.
- Messelwitz, ii. 272.
- Meyen, Kammer-Director, viii. 68.
- Michaelis, cited, i. 74 n.; v. 254 n.; vi. 213 n.; vii. 441.
- Michel, Herr, Secretary of Legation, v. 410.
- Mgnot, Abbé, viii. 217.
- Milan, iii. 53.
- Militair-Lexikon*, i. 361 n.; vii. 269 n.
- Military Instructions*, &c., Friedrich's, iv. 273 n.; vii. 221, 222.
- Military tactics, modern, i. 322; military studies, ii. 427.
- Miller Arnold's case, viii. 280-305; the Sans-Souci Miller, 302.
- Minden, i. 401; ii. 439; battle of, vii. 56-64.
- Minnesinger*, Manesse's, i. 111-117.
- Minuzzi, General, takes Passau, iv. 177; mentioned also, 324, 362.
- Mirabeau, i. 10, 13, 18; his Grandfather, 323; Monarchie Prussienne, and advocacy of Free Trade, v. 327; viii. 62, 63, 72; sees Friedrich, 348; carries news of his death, 359; cited, i. 10 n.; iv. 313 n.; viii. 355; mentioned also, 331, 342.
- Mirabeau, M. de, vi. 180, 206.
- Mirepoix, Bishop of, iii. 142.
- Mirepoix, L'Ané de, iv. 403.
- Mirow, Karl Ludwig Friedrich, Prince of, iii. 159, 163.
- Mislin, i. 64, 66.
- Mist, cited, ii. 145 n.
- Mistovol, King of the Wends, i. 74, 75.
- Mittheilung* of Preussen, i. 231.
- Mitchell, Sir Andrew, vi. 16, 75; in consultation with Friedrich, 24, 25; urges Friedrich's cause, vi. 186; personal intimacy and mutual esteem, 172, 173, 243, 296, 227; quizzes Gottsched, 226; at Breslau, vi. 312; subsidy treaty, 321; burning of Dresden suburbs, 408; his account of Friedrich's marches, vii. 234, 235, 236, 240, 272; at siege of Dresden, 248, 249, 250, 251; at Seichau; burns all his papers, 276, 277; battle of Liegnitz, 290, 295; with Friedrich at Leipzig, 349; his respect for Gellert, 353, 353; stroke of apoplexy on hearing of the English defection, viii. 42; his death, 93; cited, vi. 156 n.; vii. 227 n.; mentioned also, viii. 223.

- Mitschepfal, Lieutenant, at Grotkau, iv. 61.
- Mockranowski, proposes Prince Henri as King of Poland, viii. 117; sent to look after Bar, 129.
- Mocen, Rittmeister de, in Sangerhausen, vi. 271.
- Mocznaka, Prince, vi. 23.
- Mohacz, Battle of, i. 194.
- Möllendorf, carries news of the victory of Sohr, v. 170; leads an attack at Leuthen, vi. 299; at Hochkirch, 396, 397; at Liegnitz, vii. 233; turns the tide of battle in Friedrich's favour at Torgau, 331-333; at Burkersdorf, viii. 18-19; cited, vii. 432 n.
- Mollwitz, Battle of, iv. 63, 68; a signal-shot among the Nations, 88, 100.
- Montalembert, urges Sweden and Russia against Friedrich, vi. 355; vii. 47, 48, 106, 137, 143, 150, 219, 266, 273; takes credit to himself for the Lacy vulture-swoop on Berlin, 307, 308, 309; cited, vi. 318 n.; vii. 308 n.
- Montazet at Leuthen, vi. 294; watching and messaging about, vii. 47, 48.
- Montball, Dame de, i. 37, 314.
- Montcalm, Marquis de, Commander of Quebec, vii. 65, 167; defeated by Wolfe, 154; letter to a cousin in France; particulars of his own defeat and death, and the coming revolt of America, 155-157.
- Montecuculi, M. de, vii. 152.
- Montemar, Duke of, iii. 58.
- Montenaro, Duke of, son-in-law of Madame du Châtelet, iv. 359.
- Montespan, Madame de, v. 228 n.
- Montesquieu, M. de, iii. 130; v. 239.
- Montholieu, ii. 325.
- Montholon, cited, vi. 260 n.; viii. 379 n.
- Montjoie, Excellence, iv. 104; his sumptuousness, 187.
- Montmorency, iv. 106.
- Moor, Mr., death of, at Carthagens, iv. 137.
- Moore, Dr., i. 11.
- Moravian Foray, iv. 264-279.
- Moritz of Saxony, i. 212, 215, 227, 230; ii. 216.
- Moritz. See Comte de Saxe.
- Moritz of Dessau, at Kesselsdorf, v. 198, 199; in Saxony, vi. 26, 69; at Eger, on march for Prag, 94; ill-luck at Prag, 117; with the King to meet Daun, 151; scene with the King at battle of Kolin, 157, 158, 159; charge of the retreat, 162, 169; recalled, 171; in the Pirna country, 190, 205; Torgau, 217, 234; Leuthen, 296; Feld-marchall; and thanks from the King, 301; badly wounded at Hochkirch, 396; mentioned also, v. 195 n.; vi. 13.
- Mörz, ii. 309.
- Mortaigna, vi. 318 n.
- Mosel, Colonel, has charge of convoy to Olmütz, vi. 329; cleverest precautions and dispositions, 341; convoy attacked and ruined, 343, 344; made prisoner at Maxen, vii. 171.
- Mosel, General, ii. 314.
- Mosheim, iii. 41; cited, 43 n.
- Moyland, little Schloss of, iii. 303.
- Mühlberg, Camp of, ii. 211, 244.
- Müldorf, Fight of, i. 126.
- Müller, Chaplain and Lieutenant Katta, ii. 334; waits on the Crown-Prince, 337, 342.
- Müller, cited, vi. 245 n.
- Müller, Johannes von, vii. 204; viii. 325.
- Müller, Jungfer, killed in Breslau, vii. 268 n.
- Müller, Lieutenant, cited, vi. 321 n.
- Münchhausen of Hanover, v. 74.
- Münchhausen, Baron, iii. 234.
- München and its poor Kaiser, v. 42.
- Münchow, President, ii. 330, 367.
- Münchows, the, iii. 248, 278, 279; iv. 40.
- Münlich, iii. 55, 83, 83, 106, 169, 188, 356; arrests Duke Bieren, iv. 22; supreme in Russia, 23; withdraws from Court, 25; sent to Siberia, 27; at Oczakow, vi. 356, 363; Münlich and Bieren refuse to be reconciled, vii. 455; would undertake to save Czar Peter, 461; his praises of Catharine, 463.
- Muy, du, Chevalier, at Warburg, vii. 262, 263.
- Mylius, ii. 336; cited, v. 268 n.
- NACHOD, iii. 14.
- Nadasti, in Prince Karl's Rhine Campaign, v. 14, 15; attacks Tabor, 45; with Prince Karl in Silesia, 120, 122; Hohenfriedberg, 128; back into Bohemia, 138, 139; Sohr, 163, 167; on march with Prince Karl to Brandenburg, 175; with Daun at Kolin, vi. 155; following the Prince of Prussia, 185; surprised at Stritz, 190; attacks Winterfeld at Jäkelberg, 199; besieges Schweidnitz, 276; at Leuthen, 295; receives the Prussian attack, 296; in a bad way; skillfully covers the retreat, 297; mentioned also, viii. 319, 320.
- Nadir Shah, iii. 213; v. 276.
- Nahorzan, Camp of, v. 143.
- Namslau, Prussian siege of, iii. 412, 413.
- Nanke, cited, i. 176 n.
- Nantes, Edict of, i. 286, 314, 317.
- Napier, General Sir Charles, vii. 221 n.
- Naples, iii. 58.
- Napoleon, contrast between, and Friedrich, i. 14, 15, 22; Napoleon and Sham-Napoleon, iv. 110; Napoleon's opinion of Rosebach, vi. 260; of Leuthen, 309; of Prince Henri's Saxon Campaign of 1761, vii. 379; Code Napoleon, viii. 281; mentioned also, i. 72, 82, 92, 269, 291; viii. 102, 119, 308.
- Nassau, General, v. 98; on march through Bohemia, 34, 36; seizes Kolin, 48, 50; in retreat towards Silesia, 54; despatched to relief of Einsiedel, 57; with Friedrich in Silesia, 123, 144, 145, 179.
- National dry-rot, i. 328; Economics, 330, 333; Drill-Sergeants, 337; National Baptism, v. 210; a Nation's diseases and fashions, viii. 49.
- Natzmer, Captain, the Prussian Recruiter, ii. 111; Natzmer Junior and the Duke of Lorraine, 345.
- Nauen, iii. 8.

- Needlewomen, distressed, iii, 238.
 Neipperg, iii, 345, 424; hastens to save Neisse, iv, 55, 57, 60; quits Neisse, 61; at Mollwitz, 63; much at his ease, 69; news of the Prussian Army, 70; battle, 76; back to Neisse, 87; glad to be quiescent, 143; marches towards Breslau, 186; then to Schweidnitz, but again retires, 191; vigilant manoeuvring, 192; meeting with Friedrich at Klein-Schnellendorf, 214; withdraws his Army, 217; joins the Grand-Duke, 233; not a Eugene, 238; at Dettingen, 380.
 Neisse, bombardment of, iii, 420; pretended siege of, 421.
 Neitsche, Excise-Inspector, vi, 273.
 Nepomuk. See Johann of.
 Neuchâtel, iii, 313.
 Neumann, Regierungs-Rath, viii, 268.
 Neumark, i, 81, 115, 151, 173, 176.
 Neustadt, Prussian Army at, iv, 57.
 Newcastle, Duke of, iv, 391; v, 325, 401, 411, 414, 420; jealous of the Duke of Cumberland, vi, 8, 11; influence in Parliament, 86; quite insecure, 134; imbecility and futility, 134, 140; Newcastle and the Clack of Tongue, vii, 159; mentioned also, 246.
 New Era, introduction of, iii, 257; iv, 80, 427.
 Newspaper editing, i, 404; newspaper rumour, ii, 448; Russian notion of Newspaper-editors, vii, 306, 307.
 Newton, ii, 13; iii, 138; Voltaire's high opinion of, viii, 221.
 Nicholas, Czar, viii, 307 n.
 Nichols, cited, vii, 346 n.
 Nicolai, ii, 187, 338, 343 n., 366; v, 341; his account of La Mettrie's death, 352, 353; defence of Friedrich, 366; cited, i, 53 n., 115 n.; ii, 189 n., 343 n.; iii, 250 n., 299 n.; v, 217 n.; vi, 235 n.
 Nikolai, Professor, of Frankfurt, vii, 94.
 Nimburs, iii, 18.
 Nimeguen, Peace of, i, 291.
 Ninon de l'Enclos, i, 283.
 Nivernois, Duc de, v, 460, 461.
 Noailles, Maréchal, iii, 60; at the siege of Philipsburg, 69; at Dettingen, iv, 376, 384; prepared for the worst, 389, 399; mentioned also, iv, 361, 365, 368; v, 10, 15, 38, 115.
 Noltenius, i, 412.
 Nördlingen, ii, 440.
 Norris, Admiral, ii, 316; iv, 439.
 Norroy, i, 66.
 Nostitz, General, at Kolin, vi, 161, 168; wounded at Leuthen, 289.
 Nova Scotia, v, 416.
 Noverre, M., Ballet composer, viii, 147.
 Nugent, General, at siege of Dresden, vii, 252.
 Nürnberg, i, 88; ii, 273, 442. See Friedrich, Burggraf of.
 Nüssler, ii, 183, 390; iv, 59, 243; makes survey of Silesia, 280; settles the Silesian Boundaries, 311; successfully appeals to the King on behalf of his ruined neighbours, viii, 63-66; mentioned also, vii, 307 n.
 Obedience, ii, 370.
 Oberg, Baron von, 182, 209.
 Oberg, General, beaten by Soubise, vi, 412.
 Obermayr, Johann Euchar von, manages the instalment of Karl Theodor, viii, 254.
 Oblique Order, the, vi, 290, 295.
 Obscenities, hankering for, v, 367.
 Obstinacy, female, v, 151.
 Oczakow, Siege of, iii, 169.
 O'Donnell, succeeds Deville, vii, 136.
 Oerzen, General, vi, 55.
 Ogilvy, General, defends Prag, iv, 223; v, 25, 27.
 Ogle, Sir Chaloner, in the Carthage Expedition, iv, 134, 136.
 Ohlan, description of, iii, 410.
 Oldenburg, General von, enters Erfurt, vi, 121, 132; cited, 132 n.
 Oliva, Demoiselle d', viii, 249.
 Oliva, Peace of, i, 285.
 Olmütz, an ancient pleasant little city, vi, 332; besieged by Friedrich, 334-346.
 Opitz, Silesian poet, iii, 572.
 Oppeln, i, 195, 236; iv, 82.
 Oppeln, Duke of, beheaded at Neisse, iii, 418.
 Opportunity, miraculous, iii, 263.
 Orange, Princess of, i, 50; Prince of, husband of George II.'s daughter, iii, 60, 82, 177, 180; iv, 256; assists Guichard, vii, 35; Principality of, iii, 313.
 Oranienburg, i, 292.
 Order of Merit, Friedrich's, iii, 235.
 Orlamünde, ii, 274.
 Orleans, Regent d', ii, 20, 40; iii, 134, 138; v, 223 n.
 Orleans, Duchess of, vi, 253; Duke of, vii, 188.
 Orlich, cited, iii, 98 n., 358 n., 423 n.; v, 27 n.; vi, 177 n.
 Orlof, Alexei, vii, 453, 460; in the Russian-Turk War, vii, 157, 158.
 Orlof, Gregory, Czarina's lover, vii, 458, 460; helps in the Murder of Czar Peter, 461, 464.
 Orseln, Werner von, i, 132.
 Orzelska, Countess, ii, 119, 125, 249, 250; v, 204.
 Oslander, Dr., i, 206, 209.
 Osnabrück, Ernst August, Bishop of, i, 42; ii, 105; his death, 161.
 Osteln, Graf von, iv, 370, 385.
 Ostend East-India Company, Karl VI.'s, ii, 34.
 Ostermann, Russian Statesman, iv, 24.
 Ost-Friesland, Friedrich takes possession of, iv, 448.
 O'Sullivan, v, 170.
 Otho, King of Greece, viii, 268.
 Ottmachau, Prussians take, iii, 414.
 Otto, Duke of Meran, slain, i, 106.
 Otto III., Elector of Brandenburg, i, 100.
 Otto III., last of "Saxon Kaisers," i, 69, 73.
 Otto of Stettin, Duke, Burial of, i, 177.
 Otto, last Bavarian Elector of Brandenburg, i, 144.
 Otto with the Arrow, i, 117.
 Ottocar, King of Bohemia, i, 100; scanda-

- ious plight before Rudolf of Hapsburg, 114.
 Oxenstiern, i. 275.
- PALRY, Count, iv. 169, 208; v. 24.
- Pallandt, General, Friedrich's sympathy for, iv. 200.
- Palmbach, General, tries to get Colberg, vi. 375.
- Pandour, iv. 26 n.; 54.
- Panin, Grand Duke Paul's tutor, vii. 458, 463.
- Panis-Briefe, viii. 307 and n.
- Pannewitz, Colonel, ii. 313.
- Penzendorf, i. 412.
- Panzern, Widow, iv. 84.
- Papistry, i. 378, 404; the Catholic Bull taken by the tail and taught manners, 401; a Papist conversion, ii. 27; absolutism, i. 387. See Popea.
- Pardubitz, Pandours try to get into, v. 48.
- Paris, Abbé, iv. 20.
- Park, cited, iii. 208 n.
- Parliament, reduced to its simplest expression, ii. 15, 16; Constitutional Parliaments, 79; English, 81, 227, 391; a Female Parliament, 197; a compact Parliament, iii. 238, 256; Parliamentary sleeping dogs, 263; iv. 124; Mr. Viner in, 120; Ost-Friesland Parliament reformed, 449.
- Pascopol, the, vi. 44.
- Passau, Peace of, i. 213; Karl Albert gets possession of, iv. 178.
- Paul, Czarowitch, iii. 19; v. 456; parentage, vii. 442; night of his father's murder, 462; viii. 76; his second wife, 143, 235; vii. 412 n.; his first wife, viii. 209; visits Berlin, 235.
- Pauli, cited, i. 74 n.; vi. 77 n.; 123 n.
- Paulmy, Marquis de, v. 373.
- Pauw, Cornelius de, vii. 310.
- Pedants, learned, i. 378; ii. 84.
- Peitich, Professor, viii. 356.
- Pelham, v. 244; Pelham's Parliaments, vi. 136, 138.
- Pellegrini, Count de, viii. 152.
- Penalties, i. 218.
- Penthièvre, Duc de, v. 228 n.
- Perry, Alderman, iii. 190.
- Pertz, cited, iii. 337 n.
- Perusa, Karl Albert's Ambassador at Vienna, iv. 100, 101.
- Pesne's Portraits, i. 339, 361, 362; ii. 446; at Reinsberg, iii. 119; his portrait of King Friedrich, iv. 274.
- Pe'er, Czar, i. 345; ii. 16; visits Friedrich Wilhelm at Berlin, i. 365; the strangest mixture of heroic virtue and brutish Samoeidic savagery, 368; at Magdeburg, 369; his physiognomy, 372; mentioned also, vii. 441; viii. 340.
- Peter Federowitz, Grand Duke of Russia, iv. 430, 432; v. 452, 453, 456, 457; becomes Peter III. of Russia, vii. 439, 440; genealogy and tragical career, 441, 444; ardent profession of friendship for Friedrich, 452, 453, 458; tries to reconcile Bieren and Münnich, 453; magnanimous improvements, 454; always in a plunge of hurrica, 456; fetches Colonel Hordt from the Czarina; turning-point in his history, 458; brutally murdered, 462; his funeral, 463.
- Petersburg, Treaty of, v. 443; resolution at, to resign the Honoe of Brandenburg to its former mediocrity, 447, 453; Hanbury Williams's Treaty signed at, 452; Colonel Hordt released from the citadel of, at the accession of Peter III., vii. 451; presented at Court; Bieren and Münnich home from Siberia, 452; Pastor Büsching assists in the Homings to Peter III., 453; Czarina Elizabeth lies in State, 455; her Funeral; Catharine's Evening Parties, 456; plots and riots, ending in murder of the Czar, 460-462; Prince Henri sumptuously entertained by the Czarina, vii. 165, 167.
- Peter's, St., Church at Berlin burnt down, i. 146.
- Peterswalde, v. 26.
- Petitot, cited, iii. 57 n.
- Penbla, Excellency, v. 412, 440.
- Peyrau, Dr., viii. 323.
- Peyssonnel, cited, viii. 181.
- Pezay, Campagnes de Maillebois, cited, iv. 332 n.
- Pezzl, cited, vi. 77 n.; viii. 151 n.
- Pfa z, Kur, in subsidy of France, vi. 267.
- Pfalz-Neuburg, Wolfgang Wilhelm, i. 250, 253; claims the Cleve-Heritage, 251, 258; face slapped, 259; conference with the Great Kurfürst, 282; his Grandson Karl Philip, 397.
- Planner, cited, i. 260 n.
- Plan, General, at Kunsdorf, vii. 93.
- Pfeffel, ii. 35 n.; cited, viii. 41 n.
- Pützner, iv. 249.
- Philip II., King of Spain, iv. 103.
- Philip, Kur-Pfalz, iv. 241, 254, 424.
- Philip's, Don, claim on the Milanese, iv. 330; mentioned also, v. 200, 221, 229, 247 n.; vii. 213.
- Philip of Hessen, i. 105, 106, 199, 227; entrapped by Karl V., 227.
- Philippina Charlotte, ii. 22, 250; iii. 38; welded to Karl of Brunswick, ii. 407; iii. 43; their Son, 184.
- Philips, the English groom, iii. 222.
- Philip Theodor, Kur-Pfalz, iv. 424.
- Philipsburg, Siege of, iii. 62, 67; v. 12.
- Phillimore, cited, ii. 154 n.
- Philips, Captain, in battle of Minden, vii. 61, 62.
- Piacenza, Battle of, v. 221 n.
- Piaat Dukes, the, iii. 370.
- Picard, Voltaire's servant, v. 303, 308.
- Piccolomini, Graf von, defends Brieg, iv. 116; mentioned also, v. 31; vi. 41.
- Pictures, i. 361, 362.
- Pierre, Abbé St., iii. 222.
- Pillau, ii. 357; iii. 202.
- Pine, John, the English Engraver, iii. 194.
- Pinto, Major Graf von, viii. 310, 321, 351.
- Pinin, King, iii. 312.
- Pirch, Page von, at siege of Schweidnitz, viii. 2^d and n.
- Pitra, Bookseller, vii. 451.
- Pitt, William, iii. 214; his Life-element, iv. 151; v. 246; eyes bent on America, 421, 425, 425; anxious to treat with Friedrich,

- 454; the one hope of England, vi. 9; tries to help Friedrich, vi. 86; impatient of the Duke of Newcastle, 184, 140; depth of and conviction about England, 185; his speeches full of genius, 186-188; like Friedrich, a born king, 188, 189; vii. 158; stages of his course, 140, 141; thinks America may be conquered in Germany, 209; assists Friedrich against France, 243, 265; subsidies, 321; descent on Rochefort, 327; better hopes of America, 328, 350; at his zenith in public reputation, vii. 10; sends Wolfe against Quebec, 65, 66; a despotic sovereign, though a temporary one, 97, 158; resources and promptitude, 111; reply to Parliamentary congratulations, 158; America and India both to be his, 161; important Spanish notions from Lord Marischal, 215; increases Ferdinand's army, vii. 261, 343; consequence to him of George II.'s death, 344; his peace-negotiations with Choiseul suddenly explode into war with Spain, 398, 423; his last Cabinet Council, 426; Bute's shameful peace, 43; English America due to Pitt, viii. 50; Friedrich's esteem for, 240; Smellungus's memoranda on, 234, 240.
- Pitt, Mr., at Berlin, viii. 237.
- Pittsburg, v. 425 n.; taken by Forbes, vi. 410.
- Plantagenet Kings, Mother of our, i. 78; their family name, 83; worth to England, 337.
- Plassenburg, Castle of, i. 92, 106, 190, 215.
- Platen, Adjutant von, death of, vi. 122.
- Platen, General von, iii. 203; in Hinter-Pommern, vi. 383, 348; in Poland, vii. 25; despatched after Butzerlin, vii. 389; marches to Colberg, 390, 403, 420.
- Pläta, iii. 8.
- Plauen Canal, iv. 425.
- Playfair, cited, vii. 138 n.
- Plessmann, Prussian Secretary, v. 429, 420.
- Ploechke, Friedrich's Guide at Mollwitz, iv. 67.
- Plötho, Baron von, and his Reich's pleadings, vi. 88, 179; will not be served with Citatio, 240, 241; gathers documents concerning the French invasion, 267-274; offers peace or war to the Reich's Princes, viii. 234.
- Plunket, Thomas, vii. 107.
- Podewils, iii. 256, 273, 348; iv. 160, 166, 179, 221; v. 93, 100, 176, 185; interview with D'Arget at Dresden, 199; cited, iv. 355 n.
- Poet, the highest, the fittest Historian, i. 25.
- Poitiers, vi. 259.
- Poland, edging itself into the territories of Prussia, i. 173, 175; Polish Partition of Prussia, 176, 285; iii. 38; an "Aristocratic Republic," i. 241; iii. 47, 49; Polish Chivalry, i. 286; King August's proposed Partition of; a Polish Election, iii. 49; early troubles in, iii. 369; Polish Republic, anarchic every fibre of it, vii. 24; viii. 54, 107, 108; Partition of, 96; Rulhière's History, 96-98; Nie pomocalem, 109; Right of Confederation, 110; little or no national business transacted; the door-mat of Russia, 111; fecis itself to be in a most halcyon condition; Jesuit fanaticism, 112; the Czarina thinks to do something handsome in regard to Poland, 113, 114; makes Poniatowski King, 118-120; Confederation of Adom, 120-128; of Bar, 124-128; last glimmer of Confederation extinguished; a specimen of each class hung on a tree, 129; the Polish Patriots apply to the Turks, 130; two Campaigns quite finish them off, 133; Austria takes forcible possession of Zips, 162, 164; the Czarina proposes dismemberment, 168; Friedrich's negotiations thereupon, 170-173; final agreement between the Three Partitioning Powers, 173; a case of Lynch Law; upon which no spoken word of approval or apology is permissible, 177, 178; early condition of Polish Prussia, 179-182; Lindsey's Letters on, 183, 184.
- Poland, King of. See August III.
- Poland, Queen of, v. 87; tries to defend the Dresden Archives, vi. 29, 30; civilities and difficulties with Friedrich, 75; death, 76.
- Polastron, Count, iv. 232, 235, 264, 269.
- Pollignac, Cardinal de, iv. 20.
- Political Economy, v. 327.
- Pöllnitz, cited, i. 49 n., 52 n., 55 n., 57 n., 806 n.; ii. 185 n.
- Pöllnitz, ii. 74, 83; iii. 172, 202, 218, 329; iv. 160, 428; receives a Testimonial, iv. 228.
- Pomerania, i. 68, 177, 272, 284; divided by Sweden, 282, 291.
- Pommern Regiment, the, vi. 263; vii. 224, 225, 327.
- Pompadour, i. 139; helps Voltaire to Court, v. 222; becomes indifferent to him, 227; compliments to Friedrich not accepted by him, 276, 449, 450; flatteries from Maria Theresa, 410, 449, 450; in Committee at Babiolo, 460; backs Austria at the French Court, vi. 40; enmity to Friedrich, 55, 178, 265, 314; very fell and feminine, vii. 9; her death, vii. 92.
- Poniatowski, Andreas, viii. 119.
- Poniatowski, Casimir, viii. 119.
- Poniatowski, Joseph, perished fighting for Napoleon, vii. 119; mentioned also, 164.
- Poniatowski, Stanislaus, at Petersburg, v. 452; vii. 443; vii. 104; becomes King of Poland, and is crowned without loss of his hair, 117-120; a good deal of gallantry on his hands, 121; summons Russian troops, 124.
- Ponikau, v. 420.
- Pope, iii. 138.
- Pope, the Avignon, i. 122, 124, 126; the Pope prays for a good quarrel among the Heretics, ii. 178. See Boniface, Hildebrand, Leo X., Papistry.
- Popish Superstition, or creed of Incredibilities, viii. 55, 120.
- Porta, Baptista, i. 263 n.
- Porto-Bello, iii. 327; iv. 132.
- Portugal involved in the Spanish-English War, vii. 423-430.
- Posadowsky, Colonel, iii. 266; at Breslau, 463, 407; at Mollwitz, iv. 77; in the Moravian Forest, 270; on march from Prag towards Austria, v. 31, 35.

Potadam Giants, Friedrich Wilhelm's, ii. 51, 429; their last service, iii. 229.
 Pottery-Apotheosis, English, of Friedrich, vi. 310.
 Pownal, Governor of New England, vii. 159.
 Poynts, Stephen, ii. 145.
 Prader, Abbot, v. 356, 357, 358, 423, 425; vi. 310, 312, 313.
 Prætorius, General, iii. 162; account of Friedrich's new Government, iii. 273.
 Pray, i. 261, 275; iii. 15, 18, 20; French Scalade of, iv. 225; Austrian Siege, 328, 334; Siege raised, 340; Belleisle's retreat from, 351, 352; Austrian preparations for resisting Prussian siege of, v. 24, 25; taken by Friedrich, 30; left under Eustedel, 33, 53; his difficult retreat from, 53; Battle of, vi. 99-124; Siege of, 143-147.
 Pragmatic Sanction, Karl VI.'s, ii. 31, 145, 353, 354; iv. 46, 51, 97; downbreak of, 93, 106.
 Præso, Sieur, v. 445.
 Predestination, ii. 326, 371.
 Presburg, Maria Theresia at, iv. 206; v. 24.
 Pretender, the Young, in Edinburgh, v. 170.
 Pretsch, Action of, vii. 152.
 Prussia, a meritoriously exact man, i. 316 n.; account of Friedrich's domesticities, v. 361, 363; cited in notes, i. 23, 316; ii. 50, 103; iii. 236, 254, 268, 275, 282, 290; v. 119; vi. 84.
 Prussen, East, taken possession of by Russia, vi. 316; keeps quiet, and hopes for better days, 355.
 Prussen. See Prussia.
 Pride of place, the last thing that deserts a sinking house, i. 204.
 Primogeniture, Law of, i. 183, 239; ii. 273.
 Prince, Mr., of Boston, cited, v. 117 n.
 Prinz n. i. 351.
 Prinzenraub, Little Albert of the, i. 262.
 Priort, iii. 31, 100.
 Prittwitz, Captain, saves the King at Kunersdorf, vii. 88; mentioned also, viii. 310.
 Prittwitz, Silesian magnate, iv. 221.
 Promethean conquest, i. 199.
 Prometheus, vii. 227.
 Protestant Refugees, i. 248, 266; Protestant Germany, 267; "enlightened Protestantism," 316, 412; the Heidelberg Protestants, 394; Birth place of Protestantism, ii. 271; the Salzburg Protestants, 354, 423; Protestant sympathy with Friedrich, v. 52, 140, 184; Protestantism, vii. 181. See Reformation.
 Prussia, early condition of, i. 68; a vehemently Heathen Country, 69; attempts at Conversion, 70; brought to terms by the Teutsch Ritter, 97, 132; West-Prussen cut away by the Polish sword, 176; how East-Prussen came into the Hohenzollern family, 203; Mithelehnung, 232; a troublesome Aristocracy, 241; tamed down by George Friedrich, 246; possessions in the Rhine Country, 265, 281; freed from Homage to Poland, 284, 285; invaded by the Swedes, 289; Kingdom of Prussia contrasted with Westphalia, 302 (see Friedrich I.); dawning of a new day for Prussia, 326, 376; Salzburg Potestants in, ii. 437; population and revenue, iii. 258 n.; preparedness for War, v. 9; discipline in -form of battle, 134, 164; vi. 51, 52; devoutness of heart, 184, 251; Prussia during ten years of peace, 203, 226, 328; the Nation of Teutschland, 210; Prussian Free-Corps, vi. 77; Prussia to be divided amongst the Great Powers, vi. 83; resources to meet the general attack; militias, 320, 344; noble conduct of young recruits at Dömstadt, 344; Prussian loyalty towards the King, 344; surrounded by enemies; army becoming exhausted, vii. 10; exchequer ditto, 13; Prussian expenditure of life on the Seven-Years' War, viii. 47; Fire-Baptism, and rank among the Nations, 48; the Prussian Clio, 53; what Prussia owes to its Hohenzollern Kings, 59; ruined condition at close of the war, 61-74; dissatisfaction at Friedrich's Excise-system, 78-83; acquisition of West-Prussen, 171, 172, 180, 181. See Brandenburg.

 Prussia, Prince of. See August Wilhelm.
 Public Opinion, iii. 232.
 Pückler, Reichsgraf, and Colonel Mayer, vi. 129.
 Puffendorf, cited, i. 260 n., 267 n.
 Pulawski, Fort, in Charlestown Harbour, viii. 127, 128.
 Pulawski, the Polish, and their efforts for Freedom, vii. 126; defence of Closter Czenstochow, 128.
 Pütter, cited, i. 403 n.
 Putter, Professor, talks with King Friedrich, viii. 41, 42.
 Puttkammer, General, escorts convoy, vii. 185; killed at Kunersdorf, 87.
 Pythæas, i. 61, 69.
 QUADT, the, iii. 368.
 Quadt, Colonel, assists in losing Glatz, vii. 255, 256.
 Quandt, preaches before King Friedrich, iii. 266.
 Quantz, the Saxon Flute-player, ii. 187; v. 212, 257; his death, vii. 294.
 Quebec, besieged by General Wolfe, vi. 65, 66; captured, 152-155; decision that America is to be English, and not French, 157.
 Quedlinburg, iii. 268.
 Queen Mother. See Sophie Dorothee.
 Queen Regnant. See Elizabeth Christina of Brunswick-Bevern.
 Queen of France, Stanislaus's daughter becomes, iii. 51, 54; iv. 12, 14.
 Queens, the average of, iii. 165.
 Quintus Icilius, otherwise Guichard, vi. 131; with Friedrich at Breslau, 312; how he got his new name, vii. 35, 84; sketch of his career, 84-86; vii. 236; at siege of Dresden, 249; in Leipzig, 314, 349; his respect for Geilert, 353; brings him to the King, 353, 355, 357; undertakes the sacking of Hubertsburg, 361; viii. 45;

- with Prince Henri in Saxony, vii. 457; his troops paid off, at close of the war, viii. 44; his death, 254; mentioned also, 194 and n.
- Quitzwon, Dietrich von, i. 164.
- Quixote, Don, vii. 389.
- RABENAU, Rittmeister, vii. 417, 418.
- Rabener of Berlin, vii. 353.
- Racine's Athalie, Friedrich's high opinion of, viii. 77, 149.
- Racknitz, Countess, v. 204.
- Radowitz, Camp of, ii. 211, 244.
- Radom, Confederation of, viii. 120, 122.
- Radzivil, Prince, at Radom, viii. 121, 122.
- Radzivil, Princess, elopes with Karl Philipp, i. 316.
- Rambonet, employed in the Herstal Affair, iii. 306, 307, 312, 317.
- Ramen, betrays Queen Sophie Dorothee's confidence, ii. 197, 201.
- Rameau, v. 223.
- Ramin, Governor of Berlin, viii. 200, 243.
- Rammels, Iron, invention of, i. 322.
- Ran-ay, Chevalier, iv. 20.
- Ranft, cited, ii. 310 n.
- Ranke, iv. 165, 413; v. 93, 103, 147; cited, i. 252 n.; iv. 424 n., 431 n.; v. 39 n.; vi. 84 n.
- Rann-leben, Judge, and the Miller-Arnold case, vii. 292-302.
- Rasfeld, iii. 307; Prussian Ambassador in Holland, iv. 159, 166.
- Rasomowski, Count, vii. 460.
- Rastadt, i. 303.
- Rathenau, i. 289.
- Rathenau, i. 195, 236.
- Rathenau, cited, iii. 375 n., iv. 177 n. v. 151 n.
- Rauter, General, at Zorndorf, vi. 370, 371.
- Ravaillac, i. 256.
- Raynal, Abbé, viii. 331.
- Reality, worth of, i. 390. See Fact.
- Rebecca, the, boarded by the Spaniards, ii. 261.
- Rebour, President von, viii. 292.
- Reform, Administrative, i. 326.
- Reformation, the, Markgraf George in the great business of, i. 196; the Event of the Sixteenth Century, 217, 253; fatal consequences of rejecting, 219; symptoms of the Thirty-Years' War, 254; George Wilhelm's perplexities, 266.
- Rége, Major de, killed at Ottmachau, iii. 414, 416.
- Regensburg, iv. 29, 373.
- Rehback, Jakob, i. 134.
- Reichartsbrunn, Abbey of, i. 103.
- Reichenbach, ii. 199; his Cipher-Correspondence with Grunzkow, 220, 228, 231; his recall, 217, 238.
- Reichenbach, Battle of, viii. 22-25.
- Reichenberg, Battle of, vi. 96, 97.
- Reichs-Kammergericht, iii. 317, 318; Holy Roman Reich, iv. 93, 108; Reich thunder, vi. 74, 87, 143; Execution Army to be got on foot, 90, 176; Quattro Fucille, 239-242; Army all gone to wreck, 259; placed under command of Zweibrück, 338; in Saxony, 377, 378; tries to capture Leipzig and Torgau, 406; driven from Erfurt, vii. 22; chased by Prince Henri, 27; again enters Saxony, 106, 107, 113, 114; at Maxen, 166; repulsed by Hülse, vii. 230; has temporary possession of Saxony, 309; rapid retreats before Friedrich, 313; driven from Leipzig, 314; makes its exit from the world, viii. 39.
- Reinbeck, Herr, writes to Wolf, iii. 240.
- Reinhart, Count, vii. 189.
- Reinsberg, ii. 400; iii. 45, 116; Friedrich's Mansion at, 114, 118.
- Reklam, Herr, Berlin Jeweller, v. 308.
- Religion, teaching, i. 412. See Education.
- Rembrandt, viii. 41.
- Rentsch, cited, i. 85 n.
- Rentzel, i. 381; viii. 263 n.
- Reppin, Prince, v. 240; at Congress of Teschen, viii. 278.
- Retzow, Colonel, at Parulwitz, iv. 202; on commencement of Seven-Years' War, vi. 17, 18; on battle of Prag, 118; Friedrich's speech before Leuthen, 281, 282; on Zorndorf, 365; Hochkirch, 390, 399; Prussian Army losing its best men, vii. 10, 148; cited also, iv. 27; v. 440 n.; vi. 119 n.; vii. 247.
- Retzow, Major-General, in conference with Friedrich, vi. 17, 18; under Prince of Prussia, 184; Leuthen, 288, 301; at Leutomschl, with Fouquet, 346; at Hochkirch, 383; put under momentary arrest, 3-5; occupies Weissenberg, 387, 388, 397; in battle at Hochkirch, 397, 398; death at Schweidnitz, 405.
- Reusch, Colonel, at Tein Bridge, iv. 44.
- Reuss, Counts von, i. 107.
- Reuss, Graf von, at Versailles, iv. 10, 20.
- Reverence, v. 42.
- Review-articles, i. 102. See Literature.
- Reynolds's Portrait of Lord Granby, vii. 265.
- Rhadamanthus, not so well informed as he might be, ii. 325.
- Rhenitz of Dresden, v. 420.
- Richard Cœur-de-Lion and the Siege of Acre, i. 94, 102.
- Richard of Cornwall, sham Kaiser, i. 110, 112.
- Richardson's account of Prince Henri's visit to Petersburg, viii. 165-168; cited, 134.
- Richelieu, Duc de, v. 114, 226; takes Minorca, vi. 10, 11, 178; supercedes D'Estrees, 196, 203, 207; one of the most magnificent marauders, 203, 217; Letter from Friedrich, 206; Convention of Kloster-Zeven, 207, 208; superseded by Prince de Clermont, 264.
- Riedesel, at Himmelskron, vii. 28.
- Ried, General, at Torgau, vii. 331.
- Riesbeck, cited, i. 88 n.; ii. 433 n.
- Rights, iii. 357; American Rights of Man, viii. 54.
- Ripon, Countess de Grey and, ancestor of the, iv. 124.
- Ripperda, Duke de, ii. 41, 100, 153.
- Ritter, Doris, ii. 325.
- Robinson, Professor, vii. 153 n.
- Robinson, Sir Thomas, ii. 145, 363, 364; iii. 27; difficulties at Vienna, iv. 173, 176, 191,

- 195, 199: audience of King Friedrich, 178; King refuses to see him, 199; letter to Hyndford, 202; interview with Maria Theresa, v. 150, 151; mentioned also, iii. 329, 340; iv. 155, 222, 278, v. 61, 260; vi. 141.
- Roché-Aymon, De la, cited, viii. 335 n.
- Rochow, Lieutenant-Colonel, ii. 271, 281, 286; prevents Friedrich's flight, 500, 316; Commandant of Berlin, vi. 238; vii. 800.
- Rockingham, Marquis of, v. 277.
- Roden, mentioned to the King by Duke Ferdinand, viii. 63; royal dialogue with him, 68-70; second audience, and standing appointment, 71, 181 n.
- Rödenbeck, cited, i. 228 n.; ii. 297 n.; iii. 238 n.; v. 44 n.; vi. 165 n.; viii. 253.
- Rödenskjöld, Swedish Ambassador, iv. 452.
- Röder, General, iii. 65.
- Rodolf II., Kaiser, i. 255, 257.
- Rodney attacks Havre de Grace, vii. 49.
- Rohel, Lieutenant-General, v. 189, 194.
- Rohan, Duc de, and Voltaire, iii. 136; viii. 352.
- Rohdich, Commandant, viii. 357.
- Rohr, Captain, vi. 122.
- Rohwedel, ii. 245.
- Roi, M., v. 224.
- Rollin, iii. 130.
- Roloff, Provost, iii. 218, 220.
- Romanzof sent by Soltkof to Dann, vii. 137, 138.
- Romanzow besieges Colberg, vii. 400, 420, 421; sent against the Turks, viii. 129, 156, 159.
- Romanzow junior, viii. 328.
- Römer, General, at Mollwitz, iv. 70; killed 74.
- Rounefeuille, Admiral, iv. 437, 439.
- Rose, Medicinal-Assessor, v. 275.
- Roskowski, symbolical Polish Nobleman, viii. 180.
- Rosbach, Battle of, i. 15; vi. 243; the country round, 249-252; Napoleon's opinion of, 260.
- Rosold of Sangerhausen, vi. 270.
- Rostock, i. 272.
- Rotch, of Boston, loses his tea, viii. 211, 212.
- Roth, Count von, iii. 879; defends Neisse, 420; Brünn, iv. 219, 270.
- Roth, Lieutenant-General, taken prisoner at Freyberg, viii. 76.
- Rothenburg, Count von, and his French fashions, i. 342; at Mollwitz, iv. 69, 77; at Chotusitz, 291, 295; despatched to Paris, 424; sent with reinforcements to Prag, v. 52; at Hohenfriedberg, 133; at Dresden, 198; much esteemed by Friedrich, 342; his death, 249; mentioned also, ii. 282; iii. 251; iv. 20; v. 10, 58, 177, 212, 241, 345.
- Rothschloss, Affair of, iv. 143.
- Rottembourg, Count de (properly von Rothenburg), iii. 90.
- Rottorfreddo, Battle of, v. 221 n.
- Roucoules, Dame de, i. 37, 314.
- Roucoux, Battle of, v. 220 n., 226.
- Rouill, M. de, v. 460.
- Rousseau, iv. 185; v. 459; finds refuge with Lord Marischal, and writes to Friedrich, viii. 90, 91.
- Rouset, cited, v. 151 n.; viii. 37 n.
- Rovigo, Duc de, vii. 192.
- Rübezahl, Sprite, v. 23; vi. 98.
- Rücker, Dr., of Frankfurt, v. 395, 396.
- Rudenskjöld reveals Brühl's scheme to Friedrich, v. 175; mentioned also, 241.
- Rüdiger von Manesse, cited, i. 117.
- Rudolf of Hapsburg, i. 100, 160; elected Kaiser, 111; humiliation of King Ottocar, 112; unlovely posterity, 121.
- Rüffer, J. C., citizen of Landshut, iv. 224, 227.
- Rügen, Isle of, i. 354.
- Rulhière, M., cited, vii. 449; his book on Poland, viii. 96-98, 112, 113, 114, 115, 124.
- Rupert, Kaiser Kur-Pfalz, i. 152, 161.
- Ruppini, ii. 400, 425; iii. 114.
- Russian project of partition of Prussia, iv. 44, 45; Russians hired by England, v. 240, 243, 452; resolutions against Friedrich, 447, 448, 456; share in the partitioning of Prussia, vi. 63; invasion of Prensau, 175, 181, 218, 219, 231; forcible possession, 315; the regular Army shares the common horror against the Cossacks, 334; Russian soldiery, 359, 374; Russian Army in possession of Frankfurt, vi. 67, 70; the regular Russians civil and orderly, 69; their honourable treatment of Major Klein, 94; joy at Petersburg for the victory of Kunersdorf, 94, 95; Army threatens Silesia, vii. 231, 232, 250; advances towards Neisse, to join London, 380; junction near Liegnitz, 381; Russian Grenadiers at Schweidnitz, 408; Russian obedience and steadfastness, vii. 9, 10, 111; satire on Prince Galitzin, 123, 134; war with Turkey, 144, 145, 155-159; Partition of Poland, 171, 172.
- Rutowski, ii. 119; iv. 232, 235, 266, 268; v. 172, 204; grand scheme against Friedrich, 174; beaten at Kesselsdorf, 191-194; vanishes into Bohemia, 196; disastrous management at Pirna, vi. 58-62, 65-68.
- Ryswick, Peace of, i. 393.
- SAALE RIVER, vi. 245, 246.
- Sachsen-Gotha. See Gotha.
- Sachsen-Meiningen, Duchess of, ii. 392.
- Sack, Baron de, v. 445.
- Sackville, Lord George, v. 115; vi. 411 n.; in charge of Münster country, vii. 24; disgraceful conduct at Minden, 61-64.
- Sahay, Skirmish of, iv. 229.
- Sainte-Beuve, M., vii. 194 n.
- Saldern, General, at Mollwitz, iv. 66; in battle of Liegnitz, vi. 286; of Torgau, 331; dialogue with the King at Leipzig; refuses to act contrary to his honour and oath, 358, 359; in favour with the King, 360.
- Salmon, cited, ii. 101 n.
- Salzburg Protestants, the, Friedrich Wilhelm's interest in, ii. 254; iii. 200; Emigration of, 432; the Salzburg Country, 433; iv. 373; v. 77.

- Salzdahlum, iii. 39.
 Salzwedel, i. 64, 67, 81.
 Samson, Abbot, i. 84.
 Samson, Agonistes, i. 12.
 Sandershausen, Fight of, vi. 412 n.
 Sans-Souci, v. 216, 217; the Neue Palais of, viii. 87, 88, 91.
 Sardinia, iii. 57.
 Satan's Invisible World, i. 358.
 Sauterstein on Ideal History, i. 24; on purity in the Relation of the Sexes, ii. 122; on Friedrich and Voltaire, iii. 131; on Wars not memorable, iv. 91; on Diplomatic Vacacity, 212.
 Saul, Legationsrath von, v. 428.
 Savage, cited, i. 282 n.
 Savage's, Mr., Complete History of Germany, i. 282 n.
 Savoy Passes, iv. 331, 332.
 Saxe, Chevalier de, iv. 232, 248, 266, 272; waylays Einsiedel, v. 57; mentioned also, 208.
 Saxe, Maréchal de, ii. 127, 394; iii. 63; quarrels with Valori, iv. 263; commands under the Young Pretender, 438; made Maréchal, v. 10; in the Netherlands, 15, 70, 220, 236, 239; siege of Tournay, 104; at Fontenoy, 106-115; nearly dead of dropsy, 115; marches upon Maastricht, 244; visits Friedrich at Sans-Souci, 249; diligent service of the Devil, and death, 251, 252; favoured of the Devil, vi. 374; his Reveries, viii. 140; mentioned also, iv. 196, 210, 230, 231, 238, 244, 266, 269, 339, 366; v. 215.
 Saxon Switzerland, iv. 32-35; 64, 65.
 Saxony, Prussian Army marches through, v. 20, 23; Saxony's broken back, 83, 85; antipathy to Friedrich, 83, 88, 131; in secret league with Austria, 83; Saxon army at Striegau, 130, 134, 137, at Hennersdorf, 132, 183; a Nation governed by a Brühl, 190; Steuer-Scheine, 203; invaded by Friedrich, vi. 26; Saxon Army blockaded in Pirna country, 31-38; gets out on dismal terms, 56-70; Capitulation of Struppen, 67, 68; Prussia takes possession, 72; Saxon share in the proposed partitioning of Prussia, vi. 85; resentment against Friedrich, 160, 165; forced contribution to the expenses of the war, vii. 18, 16.
 Saxony, Elector of, claims Cleve, i. 252, 257.
 Saxony, Kur-Prince of. See Friedrich Christian.
 Schaffgotsch, Cardinal, of Breslau, iii. 408; vi. 279, 306.
 Schaffgotsch senior, iii. 404, 408.
 Schaper, cited, vi. 264 n.
 Schellenberg, i. 254; ii. 284.
 Schenkendorf, General, in battle of Liegnitz, vii. 232.
 Schildo, Toll of, v. 203.
 Schilda, and its absurd celebrity, vii. 316.
 Schiller, i. 24, 26; iii. 19; iv. 263.
 Schimmelmänn, Herr, and his false Danish coinage, vi. 347.
 Schlecker, Advocate, viii. 284.
 Schlieffenberg, Count and Countess von, of Breslau, iii. 407, 409.
 Schlesien, iii. 366; Historical Epochs of, 368, 369; provisions for the Prussian Army in, 392; reformations in, under Friedrich, iv. 22; 310, 313; guaranteed to Prussia, 305. See Silesia.
 Schlichting at Camp of Staudenz, v. 168.
 Schlitzer, cited, v. 239 n.
 Schlitzer, cited, iii. 92.
 Schluhbut hung for theft, ii. 376; iii. 220.
 Schmalkaldic War, the, i. 226, 238.
 Schmettau junior, iii. 90, 251; iv. 269, 297; v. 137; vi. 75, 183, 191; vii. 123, 436; on the Bavarian War, viii. 269; cited, vi. 183, 259 n.
 Schmettau senior, in the Austrian service, iii. 90; ordered home to Prussia, 251; sent to urge Karl Albert, iv. 205; at scale of Prag, 235; mission to the French, v. 17; could make nothing of it, 38; urges the Hanoverians, vi. 86, 87; at Prag, 169; with Prince of Prussia, 182, 183, 184, 186; defends Dresden against Dann, 406-407; letter from the King authorising capitulation, vii. 91; outlooks becoming very grim, 114; does not receive the King's second letter, promising relief, 115; summoned to surrender, 116; hot preparation for defence; helpless uncertainty, and Council of War, 117; high toned negotiations, 118; feeble haste, and blindness to symptoms, 119; Dresden disastrously lost, 120; capitulation scandalously ill kept, 126-127; Schmettau's ill-fortune much pitied by all men, 128; his good Wife a constant sunshine to his declining days, 129.
 Schmettau, Major Graf von, Landlord of Miller Arnold, viii. 283, 284.
 Schmidt, Curatus, of Siebenhufen, vi. 415, 416; curious disappearance from the upper world, 418.
 Schmidt, Hofrath, of Frankfurt, v. 394; his Wife's treatment of Voltaire, 398.
 Schmidt, Lieutenant, in Sangerhausen, vi. 271.
 Schmidt, President, in Cleve, vi. 267.
 Schmuecker, present during Zimmermann's interview with the King, viii. 190-194.
 Schöll, cited, i. 399 n.; iv. 163 n.; v. 22 n.; vi. 87 n.
 Schülke. See Ploesche.
 Schönfeld, Herr von, v. 121.
 Schöning, Madam, ii. 377.
 Schöning, cited, vi. 400 n.; vii. 231 n.
 Schönwitz, Christopher, iv. 67.
 Schren, Magister, insulted by the French, vi. 270.
 Schröck, v. 14.
 Schunmacher, Prussian Secretary, iii. 256; iv. 62.
 Schulenburg, Fieldmarshal, ii. 108; Lieutenant-General, 332, 368; iii. 12, 20, 66, 217; his account of Friedrich at Custrin, 375; pockets an affront, 247; in the Silesian Enterprise, 374; his dragoon, iv. 37; at Mollwitz, 71; death, 73; mentioned also, vii. 149, 150; viii. 242.
 Schulenburg, Graf von, vi. 242.
 Schulze, David, Butcher of Niesse, iv. 221.
 Schumacher, Danish Legation Secretary, vii. 462.

- Schnwalof, the, of Russia, v. 456; vii. 455.
 Schwartz, Monk, i. 138.
 Schwartzburg, Princess of, iii. 161, 164.
 Schwartzbergs, the, of Austria, i. 273.
 Schweit, Margraves of, i. 392; ii. 63, 132, 352; the Mother Margravine, 202, 352, 355; Heinrich, 436.
 Schweichelt, Hanoverian Excellency, iv. 194.
 Schweidnitz, besieged by the Austrians, vi. 276; capitulation, 277; recaptured by Friedrich, 329, 330; suddenly captured by General Loudon, vii. 404, 408; retaken by Friedrich, viii. 21-29.
 Schweinfurt, i. 288.
 Schwerin, ii. 163, 181, 324, 341; iii. 348, 374, 407; on march towards Leignitz, 388, 390; sudden entry, 399; takes Ottmachau, 414; bombards Neisse, 421; to command in chief, 424; at Breslau, iv. 39, 42; in Jägerndorf Country, 54, 55; at Mollwitz, 78, 77, 82; manages Breslau, 188, 221; entertains Bielefeld, 219; takes Olmütz, 243; Moravian Foray, 269; home in a huff, 277; on March to Prag, v. 22; takes Ziesaberg battery, 30; on march towards Austria, 33; quarrels with Leopold of Dessau, 37; takes Beneschau, 45; goes home in a huff, 49; lays down his plough again, vi. 13; in conference with Friedrich, 17; through the Glatz Mountains, for Bohemia, 81, 41; retires to Silesia, 71; on march to Prag, vi. 93, 97, 98; junction with the King, 101, 102; battle of Prag, 108; expostulates with the King, 108; attacks the Austrian army; desperate struggle, 111; On, my children! 113; death, 113, 120, 122; monument near Sterbohol, 123; statue in Berlin, 402.
 Schwerin, Reichsrath Graf von, viii. 195.
 Schwiebus, Circle of, i. 297.
 Sciences, the, or Technologies, ii. 437.
 Scotch Highlanders in Hanover, vi. 411; at Ennsdorf, vii. 261.
 Scots-Greys, Royal, iv. 321, 378.
 Secunderism, one of the crowning summits of, i. 124.
 Seochia, surprise of the, iii. 60.
 Séchelles, M. de, iv. 245, 336, 341; v. 70.
 Seckend cf. cited, i. 224 n.; ii. 69 n.
 Seckendorf, i. 335, 352, 361; arrives at Berlin, ii. 50, 65 (see Grumkow); a stiff-backed, petrified, inscrutable old Intriguer, 72, 179; an offence to Queen Sophie, 97, 179; present at Friedrich's attempted Flight, 200, 300, 307, 310; negotiates his Marriage, 411; letter from Friedrich, iii. 10; negotiates Friedrich Wilhelm's visit to the Kaiser, 11; the visit, 26; tries to resuscitate the Double-Marriage, 26, 39; a ride with the King, 81, 69; at the Rhine Campaign, 82, 97, 104; quits Berlin, 97; Commander-in-chief against the Turks, 171; a prisoner in the Fortress of Grätz, 187; Commander of the Bavarian forces, iv. 326, 339, 342, 355, 361, 365; makes terms for himself, 366; Hungarian Majesty refuses to confirm them, 394; he garrisons Philippsburg, v. 13; to sit on Prince Karl's skirts, 38; loudly blamed by the French, 39, 40; reconquers Bavaria, 39; reduced to nothing again, 67, 68, 76, 90; as ill-treated as could be wished, 71; diplomatising, 78, 79; in questionable capacity, at Füssen, 92; mentioned also, iii. 345; iv. 258, 317.
 Seckendorf junior, iii. 97.
 Seehausen, ii. 445.
 Ségur, Comte de, iv. 234, 241, 248, 265; v. 69; at Pfaffenhofen, 92; viii. 331; sees Friedrich, 341.
 Seidlitz at Prag, vi. 102, 118; with Friedrich in Saxony, 205, 206, 207, 212; frightens "La Dauphine" out of Gotha, 215, 216; at Rosbach, 252, 253; plunges down upon "La Dauphine," 256, 258; wounded, 263; at Zorndorf, beyond praise, 267, 269; publicly thanked by the King, 272; Statue in Berlin, 402; Künersdorf, vii. 78, 81, 86; seriously wounded, 86; ill at Berlin, 139; assists in defending Berlin, vii. 300; with Prince Henri in Saxony, 379, 437; greatly distinguishes himself at Freyberg, viii. 35, 36, 37; visits Gotha with the King, 41; his death, 234.
 Selchow, iv. 277 n.
 Seligenstadt, iv. 373.
 Selle, Dr., attends Friedrich in his last illness, viii. 347, 348, 353; cited, 347 n.
 Selwyn, George, v. 360.
 Senning, Major von, i. 381; iii. 122.
 Serbelloni, beaten by Prince Henri, vii. 427.
 Seven-Years War, results of the, viii. 39, 51.
 Seville, Treaty of, ii. 146, 363.
 Seydlitz, Mittemeister, v. 125; at Hohenfriedberg, 133.
 Séyfarth, cited, iii. 76 n., 222 n., 223 n.; 353 n.; iv. 64 n.; v. 21 n.; vi. 20 n.; vii. 228 n.
 Shakspeare, i. 25.
 Shama, hatefulness of, i. 330.
 Sherlock's, Reverend Mr., Account of his visit to Voltaire, viii. 216-221; visits Berlin, 236, 237; cited, 217 n.
 Sibylla, Wife of Johann Friedrich, i. 243, 253.
 Sicilian Vespers, i. 110.
 Sieta, Coidi, Pass of, v. 228.
 Sigismund I. King of Poland, i. 206, 208, 231.
 Sigismund, Kurfürst of Brandenburg and King of Hungary, i. 146, 147, 149, 152, 161; becomes Kaiser, 184; Council of Constance, 156, 159, 183; how he pledged Lips to the Polish Crown, viii. 163; referred to in the Bavarian-Succession War, 251.
 Siuenco, value of, iii. 193; v. 121.
 Silesia, Prussian claims on, i. 278, 292, 297; ii. 43; iii. 314, 347; revenue of, in 1742, iv. 314. See Schlesien.
 Silesian War, Third, sources of the, v. 457.
 Silhouette, M. de, French Controller-General of Finance, vii. 9; suspension of payment, 188; Dictionary Immortality, 189.
 Sincere, with Daun at Maxen, vii. 166, 169.
 Sinclair, Major, iv. 20.
 Sinclair, Sir George, viii. 311.
 Sinsendorf, Cardinal, Bishop of Bamberg, ii. 276.

- Sirzendorf, Hof-Kanzler Count von, iii. 20, 407, 414, 421; iv. 173, 222, 312.
- Sirach, Jean, vi. 257.
- Skepticism, i. 44.
- Slave, etymology of, i. 62.
- Sinifungus on Tobacco-smoking, ii. 79; on Modern Diplomacy, 250; Voltaire's Biographers, iii. 136; on Contemporary Influences, 254, 259; Friedrich's Biographers, iii. 261; on Maréchal de Saxe, v. 249, 252; Voltaire as Friedrich's Supreme of Literature, 288; Editorial Ignorances about him, 331, 332; Voltaire's Speech better than his Silence, 337, 348; La Beaumelle, 354, 355; Abbe de Prades, 356, 357; Voltaire's "Doctor Akakia," 381, 382; the end of his connection with Friedrich, 482; on Kaunitz and his Diplomacies, 408, 409; on Friedrich's Lamentation Psalm, vi. 219; the Prussian Dryadnat's treatment of Friedrich, 284, 285; English Pottery Apotheosis, 310, 311; on old Marshall Münch, vii. 463; Pitt, viii. 240, 241; Voltaire, 275, 276.
- Smollett, Tobias, iv. 134, 234; horrors of the Carthage-na Expedition, 139; cited, 138 n.; v. 451 n.
- Soap-and-Water, Gospel of, iv. 297.
- Sobieski, King, i. 396.
- Sohr, country about, v. 159, 163; Battle of, 163, 169.
- Soissons, Congress of, ii. 144.
- Solitude of Soul, ii. 392; iii. 280, 337.
- Söllt, cited, i. 267 n.
- Solomon's Temple, vi. 285.
- Soltikof, General, prisoner at Zorndorf, vi. 376, 377; placed over Fermor at Posen, vii. 40; advancing towards Brandenburg, 42; battle of Züllichau, 45-47; marches towards Frankfurt, 47; seizes the town, 67-69; not an altogether bad man, 70; battle of Kunersdorf, 72, 77; a dearly-bought victory, 94; doubtful what next to do, 99; will not consent to do all the fighting for Austria, 104, 105, 129; disgusted at Daun's inaction, 137; only terms on which he will continue the war, 137; intercepted by Friedrich, 142, 147; angry at Daun, 150; marches home in sulphurous humour, 156; prepares for a new campaign, 219; with Loudon, threatens Silesia, vii. 257; consents to join Loudon at Breslau, 267; indignant at finding Loudon gone, and Prince Henri there, 269; will not be made a cat's-paw again, 275, 295; retires toward Poland, 298; falls sick, and is succeeded by Fermor, 297.
- Ronsfeld, Madam, ii. 18, 197, 312, 318, 348.
- Sophie Albertina, Princess, viii. 202.
- Sophie Charlotte, Friedrich's Grandmother, i. 33, 304; her love for Friedrich Wilhelm, 40; her death-bed, 41; she and her Mother shrewd, noticing, intelligent women, 43; her philosophical reunions, 45; her symbolic pinch of snuff, 58.
- Sophie Dorothee, Friedrich's Mother, i. 84, 28, 304, 353; her husband's confidence in her, 352, 394; ii. 63, 328; her reception of the Czarina Catherine, i. 369, 371; her love for Fritz, 417; ii. 187; Double-Marriage scheme, i. 417; ii. 10, 16, 49; her English Pension, 14; secret Correspondence with her poor Mother, 21, 99; unexpected birth of Princess Amelia, 21; surrounded by intrigues and treachery, 62; Seckendorf an offence to her, 97; difficulties becoming insuperable, 97; visit of August of Saxony, 125; persistence in the Double-Marriage scheme, 132, 157, 200; a pressing message from the King, 195, 200; her Female Parliament, 196; a bed of sickness the one refuge left, 201, 211; proposes Friedrich of Baireuth for Wilhelmina, 203; not a perfectly wise Mother, 206; Dr. Villa sent express to England, 207; joyful news about the Double-Marriage, 216; grievous disappointment, 242, 266; news of her Son's arrest, 311; receives his Writing-desk from Kette, 312; delivers it to the King, filled with fictitious letters, 318; terror for her Son's life, 341; will not give-up the English Marriage, 347; anger at Wilhelmina, 350, 352, 398, 399, 401, 407; her opinion of the Prince of Wales, 353; interest in the Salzburg Protestants, 446; contempt for her Son's Bride, iii. 38, 41; the King's Death, 217; Friedrich's affection for, 252; entertains Count Henkel, 253; receives Wilhelmina, 325; Demon-News-writer's account of, v. 368; her last visit from Friedrich, vi. 78, 81; letter from Friedrich, 125; death, 172; mentioned also, iv. 315, 318; v. 133, 170, 260, 278; vi. 125.
- Sophie Dorothee Maria, ii. 23; iii. 66, 73.
- Sophie Dorothee of Hanover, i. 33; thirty-years imprisonment, 12, 21, 35, 99; her Will, ii. 160.
- Sophie, Electress, i. 33, 304; ii. 11, 161.
- Sophie Frederike, Princess of Anhalt-Zerbst, iv. 430.
- Sophie Louisa, third Wife of King Friedrich I.; her dreary orthodoxy, i. 305; madness and death, 307.
- Soubise, Prince de, iv. 14; v. 115; reinforces the Reichs Army, vi. 55, 177, 178; pique against D'Estrees, 178; near Erfurt, 196; Merseburg, 244, 247, 248; Rombach, 252, 254, 257; to Nordhausen, 260; tries to assist Clermont against Ferdinand, 266; profligate rapacity of his Army, 268; to assist Contades, 349, 410, 411; seizes Frankfurt-on-Mayn, vii. 30, 21; Invasion of England, 49, 187; to be Co-General with Broglie, vii. 391; quarrel and defeat at Vellinghausen, 392-395; Wilhelmthal, viii. 19; Ambergurg, 31.
- Soul, a lost, iv. 102.
- Sovereignty, empty, iv. 153. See Kings.
- Spain, Lieutenant, ii. 321, 325; iii. 260, 304; viii. 70.
- Spandau, Commandant of, i. 280.
- Spanish "Protestantism," i. 219; Spaniards in Holland, 263; in Cleve, 261, 264; Spanish quarrel with Karl VI., 406 (see Elizabeth Farnese); ill-treatment of Captain Jenkins, ii. 361; iii. 190.
- Spanish-English War, v. 245; vii. 393, 399, 427, 432; viii. 35. See English, Don Blas.

- Spartan, an original North-German, i. 344, 346.
 Speech, and the Thing spoken, vi. 137.
 Spener, T., iv. 224; Installation Speech, 225, 226.
 Speyer, v. 13.
 Spinelli, Conte di, iv. 438.
 Spittler, cited, ii. 291 n.
 Spon, Baron de, v. 256 n.
 Spörken, General, in Münster Country, vii. 24; Langensalza, vii. 367.
 Sprecher, Captain, surrenders Breslau to Friedrich, vi. 305.
 Stahl, Madame de, friend of Madame du Deffand, v. 228.
 Station, Count, viii. 188.
 Stainville, Comte de, vii. 9; at Wilhelmsthal, viii. 19.
 Stair, Lord, iv. 150, 322, 368, 369, 440; at Dettingen, 377, 384.
 Stampach, General, at battle of Kolin, vi. 162.
 Stände, iii. 262, 267.
 Stanislaus Leczinsky, elected King of Poland, iii. 47-55; flight from Dantzic, 71; protected by Friedrich Wilhelm, 82, 83; visited by Crown-Prince Friedrich, 106; to be Titular King for life, 108; quits Königsberg for Dukedom of Lorraine, 110; his idle life and Titular Army, v. 235; vii. 193; death, viii. 92.
 Stanley, Hans, Pitt's envoy to Choiseul, vii. 398.
 Staudantz, Camp of, v. 161, 162.
 Steinau, near Neisse, iv. 58.
 Steinfurth, ii. 299.
 Stellter, Cabinet-Rath, viii. 294, 295.
 Stenzel, cited, i. 162 n.; iii. 253 n.; v. 67 n.; vi. 88; vii. 233.
 Sternberg's, Count von, mansion of Klein-Schnellendorf, iv. 215.
 Sternberg, Graf von, v. 29.
 Sterne's Father, ii. 88, 101.
 Stettin, Duke Otto's burial in the High Church of, i. 177, 271, 289; Friedrich Wilhelm's possession of, 349, 364, 366; ii. 389.
 Steur-Scheine, Saxon, v. 203; Voltaire's attempts to traffic in, 2-7, 294, 317.
 Stieler's Maps, iii. 303 n.
 Sülze, Major von, iii. 123, 278, 280; iv. 248, 284; v. 120, 130, 162; cited, 120 n.
 Stockholm Blutbad, i. 222.
 Stockstadt, French Army at, v. 12.
 Stoffeln, General, with Fermor at Cüstrin, vi. 357; in the Russian-Turk War, viii. 156.
 Stolberg, Prince von, at Torgau, cannot outgeneral Wolfersdorf, vii. 108-111; attacks Prince Henri, viii. 30; defeated at Freyberg, 35, 36; end of the War, 39; mentioned also, vii. 437.
 Stollhofen, Lines of, iii. 68.
 Stone, Mr., of the Newcastle Parliament, vi. 141.
 Stormont, Lord, vi. 30, 38.
 Stralund, i. 272; Friedrich Wilhelm's Siege of, 346, 353.
 Strasburg, i. 277; Friedrich at, iii. 282.
 Straw sentry, a Prussian, i. 144.
 Strehlen, Camp of, iv. 155.
 Strelitz, Karl Ludwig of, ii. 445; iii. 161, 164.
 Strugan, v. 125.
 Struensee, Danish Prime Minister, viii. 325.
 Strutzki, with Friedrich at his death, vii. 353.
 Struve, viii. 41 n.
 Stump-oratory at zero, i. 331; hideous nightmare of, ii. 79.
 Stusche, Tobias, Abbot of Kamenz, iv. 35, 38; v. 103, 117.
 Stutterheim, left in charge of Schmittseifen, vii. 183; in the Lausitz; seizing Austrian magazines, 136.
 Stuttgart, ii. 290.
 Suhm, Baron von, ii. 102, 111, 115; iii. 79, 156; dies on his way home, 246.
 Suikowski, General, prisoner at Zorndorf, vi. 378; declares War against the King of Prussia, vii. 23; extinguished by General Wobersnow, 23; in the Polish troubles, viii. 126.
 Sully, Duc de, iii. 135.
 Sulzer, M., and Friedrich, v. 358; in the König-Maupertuis controversy, 377; at Berlin, on arrival of the news of Kunersdorf, vii. 92; viii. 189; his death, 200.
 Superville, Dr., v. 352.
 Sweden, without a King, i. 256; iv. 28; War with Russia, 29, 196; joins the general combination against Friedrich, vi. 82, 179, 180; Army put to flight by five postillions, 317; commanded by nobody in particular, 318, 321. See Charles XII., Gustaf Adolf, Karl Gustaf.
 Swieten, Van, viii. 233, 237.
 Swindlership, iv. 88.
 Sword-Brothers, Livonian, i. 101.
 Syberg, iii. 29.
 Syburg, General, at Langensalza; his recruiting commission, vii. 345.
 Sydow, Captain, at surrender of Dresden, vii. 120.
 TABOR, v. 33.
 Tacitus, cited, i. 61 n.
 Tallard, v. 75.
 Talleyrand, Marquis de, v. 105.
 Tangermünde, i. 116, 145, 166; famine, 276.
 Tannenberg, Battle of, i. 154, 173, 202, 204.
 Target, Mr., viii. 349.
 Tantenzen defende Nenstadt, v. 155; Army Treasurer, vii. 17; defends Breslau against London's fiery bombardment and threats, 265, 266; a brave man; true to the death, 269; at Siege of Schweidnitz, viii. 21, 28, 29; severe letter from the King on the Silesian Army, 336; mentioned also, 138.
 Tebay's John, account of Keith's death, vi. 395, 401; on sick-list, 404.
 Teinitz, Elbe, passage of, v. 50, 52.
 Tell, i. 122.
 Tempelhof, cited, v. 52 n.; on the battle of Prag, vi. 107, 115; on Kolin, 163; Leuthen, 291; Zorndorf, 369, 371; Hochkirch, 391, 392, 401; Soubise, 412; Kunersdorf, vii. 82, 85; Prince Henri's

- march of Fifty hours, 146, 147; and manœuvring in Saxony, 152; cited, vi. 97 n.; on Friedrich's marches, vii. 235, 265, 272, 292, 294; siege of Dresden, 239; seizure of Berlin, 309, 310; Camp of Bunzelwitz, 333; Reichenbach, viii. 24.
 Templars, Knights, end of the, i. 97.
 Temple, Pitt's brother-in-law, vii. 427.
 Tencin, Cardinal, iv. 438; v. 10, 403; vi. 221; viii. 76 n.
 Tentzel, cited, i. 122 n.
 Termagant of Spain, iv. 103, 330, 333; v. 247 n.
 Terray, Abbé, vii. 189.
 Teschen, Congress of, viii. 377, 339.
 Teschen, Duke of, viii. 136.
 Tessin, Count, vii. 199.
 Tesda, Swedish Ambassador, iv. 433.
 Tetschen, v. 26, 28.
 Tetzel, i. 185.
 Tentschland, not to be cut into four, viii. 50.
 Teutach Ritter, the, i. 94; origin of the Order, 95; removal from Palestine to Venice, 96; conversion and settlement of Prussia, 97; for more than a Century a bright beacon in those Northern Countries, 102; the stuff they were made of, 102; degenerating into idleness and riches; a Grand-Master assassinated, 133; pride tripped into the ditch at Tannenbergh, 154; sinking steadily into final extinction, 173; new false hopes, 202; the end, 207. See Albert, Hochmeister.
 Thackeray, cited, v. 426 n.; vi. 134 n.; vii. 386.
 Thadden, at Colberg, vii. 403, 419.
 Thémoud, See Demikof.
 Theodor of Deux Ponts, iv. 254, 257.
 Thisbaul, always incorrect, and the prey of stupidities, iv. 353, 435; v. 289, 353; viii. 197.
 Thielicke, Mrs., killed at Frankfurt, vii. 67.
 Thirty-Years' War, i. 254, 261, 268; hunger the grand weapon, 276.
 Thormont, Milord, vii. 187.
 Thompson, Captain, boards one of Friedrich's ships, v. 325.
 Thomson, iv. 451.
 Thorn, town of, i. 132; huris out the Teutach Ritter, 174; Jesuit tragedy at, ii. 110.
 Thüring, Feldmarschall, iv. 324; v. 72.
 Thrift, no great empire ever founded without, i. 343; incalculable value of, iii. 117, 119. See Economics.
 Thugut, at Congress of Braunau, viii. 271.
 Thulmeyer, ii. 349; iii. 256, 273.
 Thüringen, ii. 443.
 Ticonderoga, attacked by Abercromby, vi. 409.
 Tielcke, Captain, on the Schweidnitz Sieges, vi. 330; escapes from Prussian bondage; with Fermor at Cüstrin, 353, 357; Zorn-dorf, 383, 370, 371; on the Camp of Bunzelwitz, vii. 384; cited, vi. 330 n.; vii. 384 n.
 Tilbon, George, ii. 199.
 Tindal, cited, ii. 443 n.; iv. 121 n., 134 n.,
 Tinola, Voltaire's clerk, v. 236 n., 319.
 Tissot, Dr., viii. 192, 204.
 Titius, Professor, viii. 123.
 Tobacco, good and bad influences of, ii. 78.
 Tobacco-Parliament, Friedrich Wilhelm's, i. 391; description of, ii. 76; a strange Session, iii. 28; the last, 218.
 Tobago, Island of, v. 400.
 Toland, i. 47; his account of Prussia and Westphalia, 301; cited, 48 n.
 Toleration, iii. 243.
 Tooke, cited, vii. 443 n.
 Torgau, beautifully defended by Wolferdort, vii. 109-111; Torgau and its environs, 315-318; battle of, 318-336.
 Torrington, Lord, vi. 10.
 Torstenson's siege of Brieg, iv. 116.
 Torture, iii. 233.
 Toryism, iv. 173.
 Tottleben, at Kueserdorf, vii. 95; in Pommern, 220; marches with Czernichef, on Berlin, 299; tries bombardment; is reinforced by Lacy, 301; grants favourable capitulation; is himself under obligations to Friedrich and Berlin, 302; will not sanction Lacy's ferocity, 303; marches off at the approach of Friedrich, 304; in eastern Pommern, 373, 379; Colberg, 320; in the anti-Turk war, vii. 156.
 Touche, Ritter De la, v. 334.
 Toul, iv. 378.
 Toulouse, Comte de, v. 223.
 Tour and Taxis, Princess, iii. 302.
 Tournament, the, v. 324.
 Tournay, Siege of, v. 105.
 Townshend, Lord, ii. 167, 180, 220, 231; quarrel with Walpole, 212.
 Trakehnge, the Stud of, iii. 266.
 Traun, Marshal, v. 11, 43, 44; Friedrich's Schoolmaster in the art of War, 47, 50, 67; encamps at Marchowitz, 49; gets Baucschau, 49; follows Friedrich to Silesia, 40, 64-66; retires to Moravia, 66; sent to the Frankfurt countries, 69; drives Prince Conti across the Rhine, 145, 146; death, 172 n.; Friedrich acknowledges his obligations to, viii. 147, 150.
 Trauteman, burnt down, v. 161.
 Trautschke, saves General Fouquet at Landshut, vii. 237.
 Travenol Lawsuit, summary of the, v. 224.
 Trefurt, Pastor, at Petersburg, vii. 454.
 Trenck, Baron, ii. 22; at Berlin Carnival, iv. 358; arrested for breaking orders, v. 142; extensively fabulous blockhead, 143; a convicted liar, 168; vii. 256, 257; cited, iv. 168 n.
 Trenck, Pandour, and his Tolpatches, iv. 340, 390; in Prince Karl's Rhine Campaign, v. 14, 42; gets his head broken at Kolin, 51; Sohr, 162, 167.
 Trekan, Captain, at Siege of Schweidnitz, vi. 320.
 Treckow, General, defends Neisse against the Austrians, vi. 415.
 Trevor, Excellency, iv. 160.
 Trier, Kurfürst of, ii. 104.
 Trigraph, god of the Wenis, i. 75.
 Turenne, M. du, viii. 143, 152.
 Turin, Lines of, i. 300.

- Turks, the, ii. 302 n.; attacked by Russia, and Austria, iii. 169, 187; ruin put off till a better time, 212; Turks begin to take interest in the Polish Russian quarrel, viii. 124-131; declare War against Russia, 130; the Blind against the Purblind, 132-134, 156; getting scattered in panic rout; darkening the fairest part of God's creation, 142; some glances into the extremely brutish phenomenon, 155-159; they solicit Friedrich to mediate a peace for them, 161.
- Turpin, Husar, vi. 205, 215.
- Tweeddale, Marquis of, v. 111 n.
- Tweeddale, cited, vi. 143 n.
- Tyrants, so called, i. 337.
- Tyrasley, Lord, at Portugal, vii. 423.
- Tyroconnell, Excellency, v. 237; at Potsdam, 342, 343, 344, 346, 352, 360.
- UCKERMÜNDE, i. 179.
- Ulm, ii. 443.
- Ulrich von Hatten, cited, i. 184 n.
- Ulrique Eleonora, Queen of Sweden, i. 364.
- Ulrique, Princess Louise, i. 61; ii. 23; iv. 31; Letter to Friedrich, 357; Marriage, 432, 434; becomes Queen of Sweden, v. 320; chagrins and contumacies: Senators demand sight and count of the Crown Jewels, viii. 164; she visits Berlin, 195, 196; Büsching's account of her, 198-199; her death, 202, 203.
- Umminger, J. J., of Landshut, iv. 224, 227.
- Unerl, Baron von, passionately warns Karl Albert against the French alliance, iv. 117, 361.
- Union of Frankfurt, v. 18.
- Unruh, Herr von, killed by the Poles, viii. 180.
- Unruh, Major, at Glatz, vii. 256.
- Ursula, St., ii. 309.
- Utrecht, Treaty of, i. 302, 348; ii. 25; v. 416.
- VACH, affair at, vi. 130.
- Valfons, Marquis de, cited, v. 110 n.; vi. 208 n.
- Valori, drops a diplomatic note, iv. 167; at Gross Neundorf, 193, 214, 217; at siege of Neisse, 218; goes to Belleisle, 233; at Dresden, 244; with the French Army at Trebitz, 266; nettled with Comte Maurice, 267; with Friedrich in his Saxon troubles, 274; with Belleisle at Prag, 323; suspicions of Voltaire, 406; informs Friedrich of Belleisle's capture, v. 74; his mission to Dresden, 66-68; with Friedrich in Silesia, 117; at Hohenfriedberg battle, 128, 130, 132, 134, 135, 138; falls into disgrace with Friedrich, 147; saved from Pandours by D'Arget, 157; quits the army for Breslau, 161; tries to prevent the Peace of Dresden, 198; blames Friedrich in regard to Pompadour, 449; conversation with the Prince of Prussia, vi. 15; quits Berlin, 39; letter from Prince of Prussia, 55, 56; mentioned also, iii. 256, 309; iv. 31, 113, 164, 265, 302; v. 40, 70, 72, 83, 89; cited, 74 n.
- Vandals. See Wends.
- Varnhagen von Ense's account of Voltaire's arrest, v. 394; cited, i. 81 n.; 241 n.; vi. 347 n.; vii. 423 n.
- Vattel, of Droit des Gens, at Berlin, iv. 271.
- Vandreuil, M. de, loses Montreal, vii. 160.
- Vaugrenand, M. de, v. 196, 199.
- Vehse, cited, viii. 205 n.
- Vellinghausen, Battle of, vii. 391-395.
- Verdun, iv. 376.
- Vere, Sir Horace, i. 269.
- Vergennes, M. de, in Turkey, trying to kindle war with Russia, viii. 120, 131, 184.
- Vernon, Admiral, iii. 327, 346; attacks Porto-Bello, iv. 132; Carthage, 132, 135; quarrel with Wentworth, 137; miserable consequences, 139.
- Vesuvius, Eruptions of, viii. 57.
- Victor Amadeus, King of Sardinia, ii. 387.
- Victor Leopold of Anhalt-Bernburg, v. 95.
- Vienna, Congress of, i. 265; Karl VI's Treaty of, ii. 42; iii. 26; what Friedrich thought of the Vienna Court, 22.
- Vigo, descent on, ii. 33.
- Villa, Dr., ii. 207, 211.
- Villars, Duchesse de, immortalises Voltaire with a kiss, iv. 358.
- Villars, Marshal, iii. 58.
- Villebois, General, vii. 460.
- Villiers, Mr., iv. 222.
- Villiers, Sir Thomas, v. 185, 197, 203, 260.
- Vilshofen, v. 90.
- Vioménil makes bad worse in Poland, viii. 131.
- Viner's, Mr., speech in Parliament, iv. 120, 121, 123.
- Virnsperg, i. 93.
- Vitna, St., prayers to, v. 25, 81.
- Vladislaus, King of Hungary and Bohemia, i. 192, 194, 233.
- Voghers, Marquis de, viii. 319.
- Vohburg Family, the, i. 89.
- Voigt, cited, i. 71 n., 104 n.
- Voigtland, Duke of, i. 107, 128.
- Voltaire, and his scandalous Libel or Life of Friedrich, i. 21; ii. 320, 325; his Life of Charles XII., i. 356; ii. 109; iii. 140; his first renown, i. 407; sees the Congress of Cambray, ii. 39; his Henriade, 103; iii. 140; his Name, ii. 109; iii. 137; Friedrich's admiration, 9, 147, 149; their correspondence, 129, 147, 179; Santerteig's estimate; no proper History of Voltaire, 131; his parentage and youth, 132; insulted by the Duc de Rohan, 135; challenges him, and flies to England, 137; English influences and associates, 137; his stereotype Englishman, 139; a shrewd financier, 141; returns triumphant to France, 141; Lions and Dogs in his path, 142; Madame du Châtelet, 144; life at Cirey, 145; his first Letter to Friedrich, 153; his account of Luiscius; differences between a witty satire and a prose fact, 175; edits Friedrich's Anti-Macchiavel, 196; receives a cask of wine from Friedrich, 235; printing the Anti-Macchiavel; Friedrich's pressing invitations, 275; account of the Strasburg Adventure, 282, 283; Voltaire and Maupertuis, 294; first interview with Friedrich, 301; what he

- thought of the Herstal affair, 321; first visit to Berlin, 352; at Lille, iv. 79; quizzes Maupertuis, 85; "Frédéric le Grand," 307; visits Friedrich at Aachen, 318, 346; getting Mahomet on the boards, 345; home to Cirey again, 358; vacancy in the Académie; made immortal by a kiss, 360; fourth visit to Friedrich, 402; differences with Madame du Châtelet, 403, 418; his secret Diplomatic Commission, 401; on slippery ground, 406; hands in a "Memorial" to Friedrich, 407, 410; end of his diplomacy, 415; Three Madrigals, 416. Letters:—to Maupertuis, iii. 207, 308; iv. 417; to Cîteville, iii. 310, 346; D'Argenson, 346; Fleury, 347; Amelot, 413; first seen by Louis XV. at Freyburg, v. 38; celebrates the victory of Fontenoy, 115; a gleam in him from the Eternities, 220; makes way at Court, 222; no favourite with Louis XV., 222, 226; gets into the Academy, 230; Travenol Lawsuit, 224-226; on a visit at Sceaux, 227-234; tremulous anxiety about his manuscripts, 233; his account of Madame du Châtelet's lying-in, 252, 253; singular emotion at her death, 253, 254; grand reception at Berlin, 275; seen by Collini at the Carrousel, 283; not yet sunset with him; coolness towards him at the French Court, 285; every precaution that his Berlin visit should be no loss, 286; his own account of his Berlin festivities, 287; Friedrich's Supreme of Literature, 288; spiteful rumours, 289; really attached to Friedrich, 290; visited by König, 295; gets D'Arnaud dismissed, 296, 297; shameful Jew-Lawsuit, 297, 316; illegal stock-jobbing, 299; clutches Jew Hirsch by the windpipe, 309; calls on Formey, 310; a fraudulent document, 312-314; left languishing in Berlin, 316, 317; cozy little dinners, 319; tries to keep up appearances, 319, 333; strives to forget there ever was a Hirsch, 330; sure enough a strange Trianglist, 331; occasional flights to Paris, 331; ill-health, discontent, misery driven into meanness, 334; his Louis Quatorze goes steadily on, 334, 335; honest literary help to Friedrich, 335, 336; little bits of flattery, 336, 337; can keep patience with Maupertuis no longer, 338, 350; a certain jealous respect for Bothenburg, 343; fractions of Letters to Friedrich, 344; Louis Quatorze published, and pirated; "all this to the rescue," 348, 349; the "orange-skin" and "dirty-linen" rumours, 349; La Mettrie's death, 352; enmity of La Beaumelle, 354; testifies to Friedrich's conversational powers, 358; obscene scandals about Friedrich, 365; takes part in the König-Maupertuis quarrel, 379; letter on the subject, quizzing Maupertuis, 379, 380; Friedrich indignantly replies, 381; Discours Akakiri, 381-383; published, in spite of his promise to the King, 384; sick, and in disgrace, 386; outward reconciliation, 386-389; last interview with Friedrich, 387; goes to Dresden, 389; receives a threatening letter from Maupertuis, and replies to it, 390, 391; at the Court of Sachsen-Gotha, 391; arrested at Frankfurt, 392-402; strikes Van Duren, 397; wanders about for several years, 401; Wilhelmina very kind to him, 403, 404; writes to Friedrich, 423; indifferent Epigram on Kings Friedrich and George, vi. 70; at Gotha, 216; Wilhelmina urges him to help in her peace project, &c., 221, 225-225; renewed correspondence with Friedrich, 221, 225, 226, 232; vii. 140, 172; a good word for Soubise, vi. 412; verses on Wilhelmina, vii. 12 n.; peace expectations, 139, 140, 195; last touch to Maupertuis's life drama, 187, 202, 206, 209; not the publisher of Guerres du Philosophie de Nin-Souci, 191; characteristic correspondence with, and about Friedrich, 199-213; "Lion and Mouse," 201, 202; "Luc," his nickname for Friedrich, 203; cause of Widow Calas, 210; hatred of a fanatic Popedom, viii. 56; has no anticipation of the coming French Revolution, 55-56; interest in the expected liberation of Greece, 157; writes to Friedrich of the visit of Wilhelmina's Daughter, 204-206; longs to do battle on L'Infame, 208; Dr. Burney's account of him at Ferney, 213-217; Mr. Sherlock's, 216-221; his gay costume, 217; his high opinion of Newton, 221; apotheosis at Paris, and death, 261; Snell-fungus on, 275, 276; mentioned also, viii. 233, 241, 246, 260, 338, 338; iv. 42, 204, 207; v. 308; viii. 113, 144, 246, 252, 263 n.; cited, i. 20 n.; ii. 109 n.; iii. 276 n., 282 n.; v. 108 n.; vi. 228 n.; vii. 239 n.
- Von Loen, cited, i. 408 n.; iv. 339 n.
- Vota, the famous Jesuit, i. 45.
- Votes did not carry Columbus to America, iii. 233.
- WACKERBARTZ, Fieldmarshal, ii. 116, 248.
- Wade, General, iv. 385, 438, 440; v. 10, 15, 17; his helplessness, 18, 104.
- Waghmuel, iii. 70.
- Wauram, i. 14, 113.
- Wahlstatt, vii. 277.
- Wakenitz, General, at Zorndorf, vi. 372.
- Walch, v. 271.
- Waldan, Colonel, ii. 270; iii. 12.
- Waldburg, Colonel Truchse von, ii. 162; iii. 234; iv. 277 n.; chases the Pandours, v. 55; his death, 183.
- Waldeck, at Fontenoy, v. 107, 113.
- Wales's, Prince of, Plume, i. 141; ancestors, ii. 276.
- Wallenstein, i. 266, 272, 276, 383; iii. 21.
- Wallis, iii. 345, 378; at Breslau, 379; strengthens Glogau, 381; will resist to the utmost, 390; iv. 47; surrenders, 50; at Habelschwert, v. 66.
- Wallis, Colonel, conspires with traitor Warkotich for the betrayal of Friedrich, vi. 415-417.
- Walpole, Horace, ii. 14, 145; v. 361; on the Fight of Kloster Kampen, vii. 342; on Disaenter Mandint, and the German War, 249-251; "Letter to Jean Jacques," viii. 147; friendship for Conway, 222.

- Walpole's "George the Second," vi. 135, 136; cited, ii. 13 n.; 108 n.; v. 286 n.; vi. 135 n.; vii. 342 n.
- Walpole, Robert, ii. 13, 102; iii. 169, 190, 214; iv. 42; the phenomenon of, in England, 124, 127, 133, 139; Walpole and his talking apparatus, vi. 134, 140.
- Walpot von Basenheim, i. 95.
- Walrave, Engineer, iv. 54, 115, 220, 286; sulky at the Old Dessauer's bantering; a brutish polygamist, 283; prisoner for life, vi. 13.
- Wangenheim, Major von, and her Polish Majesty, vi. 29, 30.
- Wangenheim, General, in battle of Minden, vii. 58, 62.
- War, art of, i. 15; War, not a school of pity, v. 47; omnipotence of luck in matters of, 200, 216; War, an Art, iii. 32; Wars not memorable, iv. 91; needless Wars, 153; War, not an over-fond Mother to her Sons, vii. 243.
- Warkotsch, Baron von, entertains Friedrich at Schönbrunn, vii. 412; traitorously betrays him to the Austrians, but his plot discovered, 414-424; arrested and escapes, 417-419.
- Warnery, vi. 114.
- Warsaw, Battle of, i. 284; Kalkstein kidnapped at, 214; Election at, iii. 52; "Union" and "Treaty" of, v. 83, 85, 438, 442, 443.
- Wartburg, i. 102.
- Wartensleben, Captain, iii. 184, 185; Adjutant-General, 62, 373.
- Washington, George, v. 418; early war-passages with the French, 422; mentioned also, vi. 410.
- Wasner, Austrian Minister at Paris, iv. 222.
- Weber, cited, i. 207 n.; iv. 30 n.
- Wedell, General, at Lenthén, vi. 296, 297; Saxony, 406; sent against Solतिकof, vii. 42; foiled in battle of Züllichau, 45, 48; marches towards Frankfurt, 55; at Siege of Dresden, vii. 252; becomes War-Minister, vii. 74.
- Wedell, Leonidas, at Elbe-Telnitz, v. 53, 54; vii. 44.
- Weführer, cited, i. 51 n.
- Wehla, General, enters Saxony, vii. 113; at Siege of Dresden, 117; captured by Prince Henri at Hoyerswerda, 145.
- Wehlau, ii. 357.
- Weberstreu, ii. 298.
- Weimar, Duke of, iii. 162; vi. 213.
- Weingarten, senior and junior, v. 440.
- Weinheim, iii. 86.
- Weinsberg, Siege of, i. 282 n.; ii. 298.
- Weissenberg, Battle of, i. 268, 278; iii. 21.
- Weissenborn, v. 271, 272.
- Weissenburg, Lines of, v. 14.
- Weissenfels, vi. 246.
- Weissenfels, Johann Adolf, Duke of, ii. 131, 138, 193, 202, 248, 442, 443; iii. 54; v. 20; interview with Friedrich, 26; marches to join the Austrians, 43, 47; sends Saxe to waylay Einsiedel, 57; help to Prince Karl in invading Silesia, 99, 117; in junction with the Austrians, 121, 124, 125; Hohenfriedberg, 127, 130, 133, 137.
- Welfs, the, ii. 409; the Welf Sovereigns, iv. 383.
- Welmia, near Lobositz, vi. 46.
- Wenck, cited, viii. 47 n.
- Wends, the settling in Europe, i. 61, 68; converted to Christianity and Civilisation, 73, 74, 82.
- Wentworth, General, at Carthage, iv. 155, 137, 140.
- Wentzel, the young Bohemian King, i. 122, 135.
- Wenzel, Kaiser, i. 145, 147, 152, 154, 160; killed in Olmütz, vi. 332.
- Werben, ii. 445.
- Werner, General, vi. 131; at Landsht. vii. 133, 151; rescues Colberg, 297; defends Belgard, 379; again at Colberg, 400; taken prisoner and carried to Petersburg, 403; liberated and returns home, 459.
- Werthern, Herr Graf von, v. 266.
- West, Gilbert, iii. 182.
- Westphalen's, Herr, Le'tmeritz Journal, vi. 169, 171; cited, 168 n.
- Westphalia, savage condition of; hams, i. 301; Treaty of, 2-2; ii. 4-5.
- Whitfield, Rev. Mr., vi. 323.
- Wied, General, with Friedrich at Burkersdorf, viii. 11-19; sent with reinforcements into Saxony, 30, 37, 33.
- Wiesenthal, iii. 70.
- Wieskau, Camp of, v. 100.
- Wigs, Friedrich Wilhelm's taxes on, i. 342.
- Wilhelm, Bishop of Riga, i. 200.
- Wilhelm of Hessen, i. 267, 275.
- Wilhelm, Vicegerent of Hessen, iv. 256, 366, 369, 383, 424.
- Wilhelm, Landgraf, and his Hessians, v. 40; with Belleisle at Cassel, 72; consents to be neutral, 89; in Pyrmont, 212; becomes Landgraf in reality, 320; lodges Voltaire, 395.
- Wilhelm the Rich, Markgraf of Meissen, i. 152.
- Wilhelm, Prince Margraf, death of, v. 29.
- Wilhelmina, cited, i. 28 n.
- Wilhelmina, Frederika Sophie, i. 27, 27, 38, 93, 189, 303; ii. 22; her Book, with its shrill exaggerations, yet earnest veracity, i. 312, 320; ii. 75; iii. 95; her Portrait as a child, i. 362; her account of Czar Peter's visit, 367, 371; recollections of Wusterhausen, 389; love for her Brother, 398; proposed marriage with the Prince of Wales ii. 10, 49, 124, 216; interview with George I., 18; her notion of Grumkow and the Old Dessauer, 62; account of Franke the Pietist, 112; her Brother's visit to King August, 118; August's visit to Berlin, 126; Wilhelmina's ineffectual Suitors, 129, 173, 193; illness, 142, 154, 186; her sister Louisa's marriage, 154; her Father's violent ill-usage, 156, 169, 190; anxiety about her Brother, 191; is to be married out of hand, 193; worn down by agitations, 203; Friedrich of Baireuth, 203, 347; troubles with her Mother, 206; iii. 37; Dr. Villa, ii. 207; her Brother talks of flight, 210; prematurely saluted as Princess of Wales, 216; Katto's unwise worship, 286; no marriage with England,

- 267; her Brother's attempted flight and arrest, 311; his letters burnt, and fictitious substitutes written, 312; her Father's furious rage, 318; a close prisoner in the Berlin Palace, 323, 348; her pity for poor Katte, 334; to marry the Prince of Bairenth, 347; her distracted consent; preparations for betrothal, 350; the Prince introduced, 352; a Bride these six months, 388; her magnificent wedding, 392; meeting with her Brother, 396; opens her heart to her Father, 399; a grand problem coming for her, 415; iii. 24; letters from her Brother, ii. 422; iii. 41, 73, 76, 77; helps the Salzburg Protestants, ii. 413; her Father's visit, iii. 24; her inauspicious visit to Berlin, 37, 42; meetings with her Brother and his Bride, 38, 42; difficult meeting with him on his way to Philippsburg, 72; he visits her at Bairenth, strangely altered, 93, 278; disappointed with his manner, 280; return visit to Berlin; trust of magnetic needles, but so sensitive and liable to deflection, 334; Karl Albert's passage through Bairenth, iv. 253; account of his Coronation, 254, 258; receives Madame de Belleisle, 257; meets the new Empress, 259; receives the Duchess of Wurttemberg, 260; visits Friedrich, v. 227; her daughter married, 253; at Berlin Carrousel, queen of the scene, 275; returns home, 302; serious illness, 321; letters from Friedrich, 352, 353; vi. 54; kindness to Voltaire, v. 463, 464; in the neighbourhood of war, 39; v. 130, 177; confers Knighthood on Colonel Mayer, vi. 134; letters from Friedrich, vi. 179, 217, 228, 231, 262; hopes for peace, vi. 207; a noble sisterly affection in her, vehemently trying the impossible, 220; correspondence with Voltaire, 221, 225, 228; Friedrich's Épître à ma sœur, 222, 225; her answer, 231; frantic letter to her Brother, 237; visited by Prince Henri, 238; Friedrich's esteem and love for her, 351; his grief at her death, 400; vii. 11, 12.
- Wilhelmsthal, Battle of, viii. 19, 20.
- Wilke, ii. 60.
- Wille's Engraving of Friedrich, iii. 236 n.
- William Conqueror, i. 337.
- Willm, Count of Holland, "Pope's Kaiser," i. 109.
- William, our Dutch, i. 50, 54, 55, 292, 295, ii. 313; viii. 240.
- William's, Sir Hanbury, first audience with Friedrich, v. 259; bits of acrid testimony, but with fatal proclivity to scandal, 260, 264; knows his Cicero by heart, 288; his opinion of Prussia, 328; wandering continental duties, 406, 407; negotiations and bribings at Petersburz, 452, 453; all his intriguing come to nothing, 455; his account of the Czarina, 456, 457; mentioned also, vi. 174.
- Willich, Pastor, killed by the Poles, viii. 180.
- Wilmanstrand, Siege of, iv. 30.
- Wilmington, Lord, vi. 140.
- Winkelmann, ii. 445.
- Winkler, Professor, vii. 351.
- Winter Campaigns, iv. 277.
- Winterfeld, goes to Russia, iii. 255; iv. 21; how he got his Wife, 26; at Mollwitz, 76; at Rothschloß, iv. 196; on march through Saxony, v. 20; in Silesia, 93; skilfully defends Landshut; brilliant effectuality shining through all he does, 121; with Friedrich as Vanguard, 122, 124; Hohenfriedberg, 128, 132; Heunersdorf, 181, 182, 183; hastens after Prince Karl, 184; does not shine in learned circles, 342; discovers the Saxon intrigues, and gains access to their state-documents, 439, 440; eager to attack, vi. 12; high hopes for Prussia, 13; in conference with Friedrich, 16; takes a tour in Bohemia, 18; interview with Polish Majesty, 40; negotiates terms with the Saxon Army, 67, 68; with Schwerin at Prag, vi. 102, 108, 124; badly wounded, 111; account of the battle, 119, 123; with the Prince of Prussia, 182-185; received with honour by the King, 192; attacks Nadasti by Hirschfeld; with Bevern watching the Austrians, 196; posted at Jäkelsberg, 198; suddenly attacked by Nadasti, 199; vigorous defence and death, 200, 201; except Friedrich, the most shining figure in the Prussian Army, 201; at two in Berlin, 402; mentioned also, v. 241, 362.
- Wit, modern, i. 163, 219, Hanbury's London Wit, v. 230; Friedrich's Colony of French Wits, 358.
- Wittelsbach, Graf von, iv. 251.
- Wittenberg, Siege of, i. 257.
- Wobersnow, General, seizes Sulkowski and his Polacks, vi. 23, 24; with Dohna, against the Russians, vii. 40, 41; his portable field-bakery, 43; urges an attack, 44; at battle of Züllichau, 45; death, 46.
- Wolden, Hofmarschall, ii. 345, 369, 373, 379, 413; iii. 122.
- Wolf, and the Halle University, ii. 89; what Friedrich thought of him, iii. 149, 156; quits Marburg for his old place at Halle, iii. 240, 398; v. 271.
- Wolf, Pater, Kaiser's Confessor, i. 56.
- Wolfe, General, worth of, discerned by Pitt, vi. 328; at capture of Louisburg, 350; unsuccessful attempt on Quebec, 65, 66; descends the St. Lawrence for one more attempt, 153; captures Quebec, and with it Canada; the prettiest soldiering among the English for several generations, 154; excitement in England at the news of his victory and death, 157.
- Wolffersdorf, Colonel von, beautifully defends himself in Torgau, vii. 108, 109; on march for Dresden, 115, 121; captures a party of Austrian horse, 122; with Wunsch before Dresden; they drive Klee-feld from Torgau, 124; made prisoner at at Maxen, 171.
- Wolfgang Wilhelm. See Pfalz-Neuburg.
- Wolfstierna, Swedish Envoy at Dresden, v. 175.
- Work, a Captain of, ii. 56.
- World, the, much of a bedlam, v. 152.
- Worms, Treaty of, iv. 402, 419.
- Woronow, Countess, Czar Peter's Mistress, vii. 446-458.

- Woronzow, Grand-Chancellor of Russia, vii. 104.
- Worth, Human, reverence for, viii. 60.
- Wotton, Sir Henry, i. 258 n., 263, 267.
- Wraxall, cited, ii. 106 n.; viii. 84.
- Wrzech, Colonel, ii. 182, 328; his Wife and Friedrich at Custrin, 377, 382.
- Writing Era, i. 18.
- Wunsch, of the Prussian Free Corps, vi. 131; distinguishes himself under Prince Henri, vii. 29, 30; Kunersdorf, 73, 89; marches into Saxony, 101, 111, 112, 118; hastens to relief of Dresden, 121; hears that Schmiettau has capitulated; delivers Torgau, and is Lord of the Northern regions, 124; seemingly a high career before him, 125; with Finck at Maxen, 164, 166, 169, 170; tries to get the Cavalry away, but is obliged to surrender, 171; defends Glatz, vii. 277.
- Würbitz, Fight of, v. 98.
- Würmser, burns Habelschwert, viii. 277.
- Württemberg, Duchess Dowager of, Wilhelmina's account of her at Frankfurt, iv. 255; and at Baireuth, 260; her reception bedroom at Berlin, 262; quarrels with D'Argens, 271; demands her son of King Friedrich, 414.
- Württemberg, Eberhard Ludwig, Duke of, ii. 287; iii. 63; matrimonial and amatory iniquity, 287; moved to repentance, 291, 351; Karl Alexander, Duke of, 212; iii. 19, 63, 103; Schiller's Duke of, 19.
- Württemberg, Friedrich Eugen, iv. 263; v. 251; raises his arm against Excellency Broglio, vi. 39; at Hochkirch, 397; watching London and Haddick, vii. 51; at Sazan, 52; battle of Kunersdorf, 78, 87; wounded, 87; ill at Berlin, 139; at the Castle of Schwedt, seized by the Cossacks, 220; hastens to the assistance of Berlin, 301; marches into Saxony, 311, 313; despatches Colonel Kriest upon his brother, the reigning Duke, 313; at Roctock, 374 n.; with Heyde defending Colberg, 401-404, 421; gives the poor Wife great trouble; becomes reigning Duke, viii. 141, 235; mentioned also, vi. 312 n.; vii. 374 n., 442 n.
- Württemberg, Karl Eugen, Duke of, boyish gallantries; under the guardianship of Friedrich, iv. 260, 414; Schiller's Duke, 263; parting letter from Friedrich, 434; marries Wilhelmina's Daughter, v. 233; impossible to live with him, 254; viii. 206, 217; at Kolin, vi. 165; his poor Wife, vii. 28; bitter enmity to Friedrich, 178; driven headlong out of Fuldä, 178-180; frightened homeward and out of the wars altogether, 313, 314.
- Würzburg, Bishop of, iv. 413.
- Wusterhausen, description of, i. 388; Treaty of, ii. 70, 90, 159; Tabagie at, iii. 81; Treaty of, iv. 102.
- Wylich, General, iii. 123; vi. 28, 30.
- Wyndham, Henry, vi. 323.
- Wyndham, Miss Barbara, v. 325; subsidy to Friedrich, vi. 322-326.
- XAVIER's, Prince, profane revelling during siege of Prag, vi. 146; at the burning of Zit'au, 187; with Broglio, vii. 262; in Saxony, 436; mentioned also, viii. 106.
- YANKEE Nation, iv. 131.
- Yarmouth, Countess of, i. i. 272.
- York, Duke of, vi. i. 345.
- Youthful dissipation, mud-bath of, ii. 119, 121.
- Ysenburg, Prince von, beaten by Soubise, vi. 412; near Frankfurt on-Mayn, vii. 20; battle of Bergen, 24; death, 25.
- ZAMOISKI, viii. 119.
- Zastrow, Commandant, makes poor defence of Schweinitz, which is captured by London, vii. 407; letter from the King, who leaves him well alone for the future, 409, 410; at Arnshurg, viii. 33, 34.
- Zastrow, General, killed, vi. 94; vii. 410.
- Zedlitz, Minister of Public Justice, viii. 301; cannot pronounce sentence as enjoined by the King, 301.
- Zeiller, Beschreibung von Böhmen, cited, iv. 58 n.
- Zeitz, ii. 413.
- Zelle, i. 402.
- Zelter, cited, vii. 250 n.
- Zentha, Battle of, ii. 302.
- Ziethen, iii. 102; at Rothschild; rises rapidly in favour, iv. 143; in Moravia, 270; at siege of Prag, v. 28; repulses Pandours at Tein Bridge, 45; decidedly a rather likeable man, 44; at Elbe-Teinitz, 53, 54; with the Old Dessauer in Silesia, 15; takes message to Markgraf Karl, at Jägerndorf, 105, 106; at Hohenfriedberg, 135; at Heinersdorf, 181; at Pirna, vi. 61; on march for Prag, 95; in battle, 114, 117; at Kolin, 154, 155, 163; with the Prince of Prussia, 181; with Bevern at battle of Breslau, 278; takes command of the Bevern wreck; joins the King at Parchwitz, 281; Leuthen, 283, 296, 297, 301; chases Prince Karl from Breslau, 308; Troppan, 331, 334; Olmütz, 338; meets Mosel's convoy, 339, 342; no efforts can save it, 341, 344; following Dann into Saxony, 377, 378; at Hochkirch, 391, 392, 397; nearly captured at Sorau, vii. 134; reports the approach of Reichsfolk on Finck, 166; court-martial on Finck, 174; in battle of Liegnitz, 261, 284, 285; has command of half the force at Torgau, 320, 321; takes a wrong road, 323; recovers it only not too late, 331, 332; with Friedrich in Silesia, 380; at Camp of Bunzelwitz, 384; winter in Breslau, 422; once took the King sharply at his word, viii. 251; in his old age the King tenderly compels him to sit down in his presence, 252; mentioned also, 310.
- Zimmermann, Dr., iii. 158; iv. 445 n.; v. 366; at Sans Souci, viii. 186; sketch of his life, 187-190; Dialogue with King Friedrich, 190-195; attends him in his last illness, 352; his unwise book, 353; can do no good, and takes himself away, 355; cited, 167 n.
- Zimmermann, Herr, the poor kidnapped carpenter, ii. 59.

- Zinnow, Finance Manager, vii. 126.
 Zinzendorf, Count, v. 178.
 Zips pledged by Sigismund to the Polish Crown : taken back again by mere force, viii. 163.
 Zisca, risen out of the ashes of murdered Huss, i. 148, 169; iii. 21; iv. 247; birth and burial-place of, 296; Tabor built by, v. 34.
 Zlekowitz, with Daun near Olmütz, vi. 338, 339; Mosel's convoy ruined, 341-343.
 Zittau burnt by the Austrians, vi. 186, 187.
 Zöllner, i. 388; cited, 390 n.; iii. 412 n.; v. 158.
 Zorndorf, ii. 377, 381; environs, vi. 360-363; battle, 263, 374.
 Zuckmantel, Moravian town, iv. 58 n.
 Zweibrück, Reich's General, vi. 338; pushes across the Metal Mountains, 377; in Pirna country, 378, 381; chased by Prince Henri, vii. 27; again enters Saxony, 107; besieges Dresden, 117, 118-120; hurries off for Toplitz, 121; broken faith, 124; with Daun at Bautzen, 137; quits Dresden on the approach of Friedrich, vii. 248.

THE END.

H.C.

22

